DISTRICT COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA
FOURTH DISTRICT
January Term 2008

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Appellant,

v.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Appellee.

No. 4D05-4756

[February 27, 2008]

PER CURIAM.

By order dated January 27, 2006, this appeal was stayed pending the outcome of case No. 4D05-2606, which was Morgan Stanley's appeal of the final judgment awarding damages in favor of Coleman. This instant appeal was taken from the post-verdict cost judgment entered in favor of Coleman.

In the earlier case, this court reversed the award in favor of Coleman and directed that a judgment be entered in favor of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley & Co. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007). Coleman then sought review in the Florida Supreme Court, but the Supreme Court denied review by order dated December 12, 2007. Accordingly, the stay previously entered in this case was lifted by order dated January 16, 2008.

We further ordered appellee Coleman to advise this court whether, in light of the finality of our decision reversing the award of damages, the cost judgment should now be similarly reversed. Appellee has responded that there is no reason not to reverse the cost judgment.

The cost judgment entered by the trial court on November 22, 2005, is therefore reversed.

SHAHOOD, C.J., POLEN and MAY, JJ., concur.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S VERIFIED MOTION TO VACATE THE JUDGMENT AND GRANT A NEW TRIAL ON DAMAGES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Rule 1.540(b) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, respectfully requests that this Court vacate the judgment of dismissal entered in favor of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, enter a total default as to all elements of CPH's claims, order a new trial on damages as more fully described below, and provide such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

CPH asks the Court to vacate the recently entered judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley because Morgan Stanley has now admitted that it committed a massive fraud on the Court. Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court was part of a scheme designed to conceal Morgan Stanley's role as a co-conspirator in the largest securities fraud in Florida history.

Prior to trial, some aspects of Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court — including the destruction and nonproduction of key e-mail evidence — came to light. That led the Court to enter a partial default against Morgan Stanley, but not the total default that CPH had requested. Now, however, it has become clear that the scope of Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court was far broader than previously realized. In a series of cryptic but revealing "Notices" filed with this Court, Morgan Stanley has admitted that, in its efforts to forestall a total default, it repeatedly lied to the Court and CPH about what Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers knew about the e-mails and when they knew it.

Morgan Stanley waited until after the trial had concluded and the jury had announced its verdict before issuing the first of these "Notices." And Morgan Stanley released its most recent Notice only after this Court was divested of jurisdiction over the case and the appeal had been fully briefed and argued before the Fourth District. Even with the admissions contained in these Notices, the full scope of Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court has yet to be revealed. But there is already more than enough evidence to conclude that this case was adjudicated under false pretenses and that Morgan Stanley thereby escaped proper sanctions for its perjurious litigation misconduct. Therefore, the recently entered judgment favoring Morgan Stanley cannot stand.

In 1997 and 1998, Morgan Stanley conspired with Sunbeam Corporation to defraud CPH and others of billions of dollars. CPH sued Morgan Stanley for conspiracy to commit fraud and sought production of relevant documents, including e-mails. Claiming that e-mails from the late 1990s were no longer retrievable, Morgan Stanley offered what turned out to be perjurious testimony from its information-technology (IT) staff. Those lies soon began to unravel. As it became clear that Morgan Stanley had willfully disobeyed this Court's discovery orders and in some instances had destroyed e-mail evidence, Morgan Stanley tried to contain the scandal by scapegoating the IT staff and claiming that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers had been completely unaware of the e-mail fiasco.

Morgan Stanley emphatically and repeatedly drew a sharp distinction between its business and IT people and its in-house lawyers. In the briefing and arguing of the sanctions motions that CPH filed, in evidentiary proffers submitted to the Court, and in hearings about what CPH could argue to the jury with respect to punitive damages, Morgan Stanley was adamant: Its in-house lawyers knew nothing about the misconduct. Morgan Stanley pressed that argument because it correctly surmised that the Court and the jury would mete out a harsh punishment if they knew that the in-house lawyers ostensibly responsible for ensuring Morgan Stanley's compliance with the law actually were assisting Morgan Stanley's business people in subverting the justice system.

We now know that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers did know about the misconduct and were culpable participants in it. Our knowledge of those facts comes from Morgan Stanley's grudging and piecemeal acknowledgements — which were delivered in cryptic “Notices” filed over a nearly two-year period and are as dramatic for what they concede as they are appalling for what they still attempt to conceal. As we explain more fully below, there is now no doubt that Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel knew about the misconduct of which they repeatedly professed ignorance.

But Morgan Stanley's “our lawyers were not in the loop” defense largely succeeded, leading the Court to enter only a partial default against Morgan Stanley, rather than the total default as to all elements that CPH had requested. Because the Court entered only a partial default, CPH retained the burden of proving at trial both the fact of damage and the amount of damages. This lesser sanction turned out to be critically important on appeal, when the Fourth District instructed this Court to enter judgment for Morgan Stanley after rejecting CPH's method for calculating the amount of damages and implicitly holding that CPH had thus failed to prove actual damage, an essential element of CPH's fraud claims against Morgan Stanley. Had this Court been fully apprised of Morgan Stanley's fraud and had it therefore granted CPH's motion for a total default as to all elements, there would have been no question about the adequacy of CPH's proof of actual damage and thus no basis to enter judgment for Morgan Stanley. The prejudice that CPH has suffered as a direct result of Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court could not be clearer: the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars in compensatory damages, as well as interest and punitive damages. Unless this Court grants this motion and imposes the sanction that Morgan Stanley has always deserved, Morgan Stanley will succeed in its fraud against the Court and will not be called to account, either for its complicity in a securities fraud of enormous proportion or for the egregious litigation misconduct with which it sought to conceal that complicity before, during, and after trial.

But there is more at stake here. Left unchecked, the kind of egregious litigation abuses that Morgan Stanley carried out during this litigation are devastating to the integrity of our justice system and public confidence in it. Indeed, the Court expressly recognized that point when, based on its incomplete knowledge of Morgan Stanley's misconduct, the Court entered the partial default prior to trial. For the Court now to allow a final judgment for Morgan Stanley to stand — in the wake of Morgan Stanley's post-verdict and post-judgment "Notices" admitting its fraud upon the Court — would not only injure CPH and grant a windfall to Morgan Stanley, but would send a troubling message to every litigant whose rights are entrusted to this Court and the Florida justice system. CPH therefore respectfully requests relief from the judgment, a judgment that Morgan Stanley obtained not on the merits, but by disobeying, disrespecting, and defrauding this Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

CPH brought suit against Morgan Stanley for aiding and abetting, and conspiring with, Sunbeam Corporation to perpetrate a massive fraud in connection with Sunbeam's purchase of CPH's interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. As part of the consideration for the sale of that interest, CPH received unregistered Sunbeam stock that had an expected value of $680 million but proved to be worthless. Morgan Stanley denied any complicity in the fraud and denied damages. CPH App. 1 (6/23/03 Answer of MS, at 1, 17-19). Accordingly, Morgan Stanley documents relating to both liability and amount of damages was critically important. On the damages issue, for example, Morgan Stanley may well have had documents showing its own valuation of Sunbeam on the closing date of the transaction. CPH App. 19 (3/15/05 Tr. at 3944).

But Morgan Stanley lied to the Court, defied Court orders, concealed and destroyed documents and electronic data, and engaged in other misconduct to defeat the truth-seeking processes of discovery. CPH moved for sanctions against Morgan Stanley, including a total default. CPH's motion was based in part on Morgan Stanley's false certification on June 23, 2004 that it had produced all relevant e-mail messages — a certification Morgan Stanley made with full knowledge that relevant e-mail backup tapes had not even been searched. In response to CPH's remedial motion, Morgan Stanley argued that it should not be severely punished because its in-house counsel were not aware until months later, in October or November 2004, of the existence of potentially relevant e-mail messages on these backup tapes. In March 2005, this Court issued two remedial rulings, ultimately determining that Morgan Stanley's knowledge of the underlying fraud and collusion with Sunbeam should be deemed established.

Although those rulings took account of some portion of Morgan Stanley's misconduct, other misconduct continued during the proceeding itself, after the sanctions were imposed, and even after the conclusion of the jury proceedings on reliance, the fact of damage, and the amount of damages. In December 2006, while its appeal from the judgment was pending in the Fourth District, Morgan Stanley acknowledged that its in-house attorneys were indeed aware “prior to July 2004” of the existence of e-mail on the backup tapes, and that these e-mails dated to the time of the Sunbeam-Coleman merger. Notwithstanding Morgan Stanley's artfulness in using the phrase “prior to July 2004,” the only fair reading of Morgan Stanley’s statements is that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers knew these facts on June 23, 2004, when Morgan Stanley falsely certified that it had produced all relevant e-mail messages. In addition, those statements show that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers clearly knew that numerous statements made to the Court in 2004 and 2005, including those contained in sworn declarations, were false.

A. Misconduct Leading to 2005 Remedial Proceedings.

Morgan Stanley’s disregard for the integrity of the judicial process and for its obligations to the plaintiff continued unabated throughout the period leading up to the 2005 remedial rulings, taking a variety of different — but consistently reprehensible — forms.

First, Morgan Stanley repeatedly lied to the Court. Morgan Stanley has not challenged this Court’s ruling that at least 35 of Morgan Stanley’s statements to the Court — including statements made under oath — were “false” or “misleading.” See CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 8-16 (listing statements)); CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order at 3-10 (same)). Morgan Stanley also submitted false interrogatory answers signed by a corporate representative who had not read them, and falsely represented on numerous occasions that it was unable to retrieve electronic data concerning the authorship and drafting history of important documents. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 15); CPH App. 12 (2/28/05 Order at 2).

Second, Morgan Stanley repeatedly defied Court orders. As the Court found, Morgan Stanley defied at least seven orders entered between December 2003 and March 2005. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 9-16 & n.10). For example, Morgan Stanley withheld documents regarding the discovery and restoration of e-mail backup tapes, thus defying an April 2004 “Agreed Order” as to electronic discovery as well as a February 2005 order requiring Morgan Stanley to produce its documents. Id. Morgan Stanley also defied a March 2005 discovery order because, as this Court expressly found, Morgan Stanley “desperately wanted to hide an active SEC inquiry” into Morgan Stanley’s continued practice of overwriting backup tapes, in violation of an outstanding SEC cease-and-desist order. Id. at 10 & n.10, 12-14, 16. In addition, among other orders that Morgan Stanley violated were the following: (1) a February 2005 order requiring discovery on the authenticity, business-record status, and authorship of certain documents that showed Morgan Stanley’s involvement in misleading aspects of the underlying Sunbeam transaction, (2) a February 2005 order mandating e-mail production from certain backup tapes, and (3) a March 2004 order requiring production of certain performance evaluations of Morgan Stanley personnel involved in the transaction, which production would have revealed serious, repeated internal expressions of concern about the candor and ethics of William Strong, the senior Morgan Stanley banker in charge of the Sunbeam deal. Id. at 11-16. This Court concluded that those violations of court orders were “deliberate[] and contumacious[.]” Id. at 16.

Third, Morgan Stanley “routinely assert[ed] unfounded privilege claims.” Id. For example, Morgan Stanley did not reveal a relevant criminal prosecution against William Strong, and then obstructed discovery by claiming privilege with respect to approximately 700 documents related to that prosecution — many under supposed joint defense agreements that the Court later found did not exist. Id. at 14-16 & n.17. After this Court ordered Morgan Stanley to submit those documents for in camera review, Morgan Stanley withdrew its privilege claim with respect to more than 260 of the documents. Id. Following an in camera review, this Court found that 200 more documents were not privileged. Id.

Fourth, Morgan Stanley engaged in massive fraud with respect to e-mail production. Because the underlying transaction between Sunbeam and CPH was completed in 1998, documents from the 1990s were obviously critical. In response to a motion to compel, Morgan

Stanley told the Court in December 2003 that all of its pre-January 2000 e-mail backup tapes had been erased. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 3-5); CPH App. 2 (12/17/03 Tr. at 20). A corporate representative likewise testified at deposition that Morgan Stanley's recently constructed e-mail archive did not contain e-mail from the 1990s, claiming that the archive captured e-mails only "going forward." CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 4-5 & n.3, 10-11 & n.12). Both of those representations were false. In fact, Morgan Stanley had e-mails from at least 9,000 backup tapes from the 1990s that it had not searched in response to CPH's discovery requests. CPH App. 17 (3/14/05 Tr. at 3462); CPH App. 16 (3/14/05 Hr'g Ex. 1, Tab 87). Moreover, Morgan Stanley was loading these tapes into its e-mail archive for its own internal purposes — and the person leading that effort was the very same corporate representative who committed perjury at the deposition. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 8-10 & nn.7-12, 13). But based on Morgan Stanley's false representations, the Court entered an Agreed Order on April 16, 2004, requiring Morgan Stanley to search only the oldest full backup tape that it had for each of 36 individual employees, and then to certify compliance. Of course, the Agreed Order made no mention of the archive, because Morgan Stanley's corporate representative had falsely testified that the archive contained no pre-2003 e-mails. Id. at 4 n.3, 5 n.12.

Purporting to comply with that Agreed Order, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with a few additional e-mails on May 14, 2004, but did not submit the required certification of compliance until June 23, 2004, following CPH's repeated demands. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 5-6). As CPH discovered in subsequent contempt proceedings, Morgan Stanley's legal staff inappropriately attempted to have this certificate signed by a college student who performed data-entry functions. CPH App. 28 (10/20/05 Affidavit of Arthur Riel, filed Nov. 1, 2005). The certificate, as ultimately signed by Arthur Riel, Morgan Stanley's Executive Director of Technology, stated that Morgan Stanley had produced all the e-mail from the oldest full backup tapes as required, but in fact, as Mr. Riel knew, e-mails from thousands of existing tapes — including more than 1,400 e-mail backup tapes that Morgan Stanley found in a store room in Brooklyn (the “Brooklyn tapes”) and more than 700 8-millimeter e-mail backup tapes (the “8-mm tapes”) — had not been searched or produced. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 9-10).

In November 2004 (after the SEC, unbeknownst to CPH and the Court, had uncovered the truth that Morgan Stanley was loading its archive with e-mails from the late 1990s), Morgan Stanley produced to CPH some additional e-mails, which it said were from “newly discovered” tapes. Id. at 5, 10 & nn.7-12; CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order at 5-6). That representation was false; Morgan Stanley had not “newly discovered” any tapes at that time. But Morgan Stanley continued its efforts to avoid any admission that massive quantities of 1990s e-mails were being uploaded to its archive, where they could be quickly and inexpensively searched. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 10 & n.11). Morgan Stanley made the misrepresentation that the produced e-mails were from newly discovered tapes in five separate letters to CPH, and then in a sworn declaration, in testimony in court, and in at least a dozen separate representations by counsel. E.g., CPH App. 4 (1/31/05 MS Opp. re Adv. Inference at 2-4); CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 5-11); CPH App. 26 (6/17/05 MS Notice at 1-2).

Subsequently, in the weeks preceding the scheduled trial date in early 2005, Morgan Stanley repeatedly made new announcements that it had just discovered hundreds or thousands of backup tapes, each containing massive numbers of potentially responsive e-mails, none of which had been processed or analyzed. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 7-8, 10, 14); CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order at 7-10). As we now know, the existence of those tapes was known to Morgan Stanley long before those announcements were made.

B. The Court's 2005 Pre-Trial Remedial Rulings.

1. The March 1, 2005 Order.

On January 26, 2005, CPH moved for an adverse-inference instruction on the ground that Morgan Stanley had failed to produce responsive e-mails and to comply with this Court's April 2004 Agreed Order. CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order at 6); CPH App. 7 (2/4/05 Order re Add'l Search of E-Mail Tapes); CPH App. 6 (2/3/05 Order Setting Evid. Hr'g). One key issue was when Morgan Stanley's Law Division had learned that Morgan Stanley's June 23, 2004 certificate of compliance with the Agreed Order was false. Morgan Stanley argued that the certification was not false (or at least not knowingly false) because (1) Arthur Riel, the Morgan Stanley Executive Director of Technology who signed the certificate, did not learn until several days after it was filed that the unsearched tapes actually contained e-mails, and (2) Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers did not learn about the existence of e-mail on the tapes until months later, in October 2004.

Morgan Stanley supported its response with a sworn declaration of James F. Doyle, who was a lawyer and an Executive Director in its Law Division. Doyle's declaration averred that "[a]t the end of October 2004, I learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley's May 14, 2004 e-mail production." CPH App. 3 (1/31/05 Declaration of J. Doyle, at 1). The pleading to which this declaration was attached likewise stated: "At the end of October 2004, James F. Doyle, the attorney at Morgan Stanley who directed Morgan Stanley's prior search for e-mail messages, learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to the May 14, 2004 e-mail production." CPH App. 4 (1/31/05 MS Opp'n to CPH's Mot. for Adverse Inference Instruction at 2). Lest there be any doubt about the significance of the Doyle declaration, two days later Morgan Stanley told the Court at a hearing: “The headline is that the first time that anyone — that anyone at Morgan Stanley knew that there was recoverable e-mail data that might fall within the Court’s order was not until late October 2004 consistent with Mr. Doyle’s declaration.” CPH App. 5 (2/2/05 Tr. at 132).

Nine days later, Morgan Stanley filed a supplemental opposition to CPH’s motion, again quoting verbatim from this key passage of the Doyle declaration. See CPH App. 8 (2/11/05 MS Supp. Opp’n to CPH’s Mot. for Adverse Inference Instruction, at 2). Later that month, Morgan Stanley quoted from the Doyle declaration again, this time resorting to bold italics: “Morgan Stanley has consistently contended that no one in its Law Division knew of the existence of additional recoverable e-mail data on the tapes before October 2004.” CPH App. 11 (2/28/05 MS Opp’n to CPH’s Mot. for a Default Judgment, at 6 (emphasis in original)).

At an evidentiary hearing on February 14, 2005, as the Court later found, Morgan Stanley continued “to hide . . . its violations and coach witnesses.” CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 16). For example, one executive’s sworn testimony directly contradicted sworn statements she had given the SEC only three days before. Id. at 12. Despite these evasions and lies, the hearing finally established that the e-mail archive, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s representations, contained large amounts of 1990s e-mails that could be easily searched, but had not been produced. CPH App. 9 (2/14/05 Tr. at 26-130); CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 10 & n.11). CPH then amended its adverse-inference request to seek a default judgment. CPH App. 9 (2/14/05 Tr. at 242-95); CPH App. 14 (3/9/05 CPH Renewed Mot. for Entry of Default Judgment).

On March 1, 2005, this Court ruled on CPH’s motion. The Court concluded that Morgan Stanley had willfully violated court orders and had acted “knowingly, deliberately, and in bad faith” to “thwart discovery” and “conceal[] its role in the Sunbeam transaction.” CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order at 10-11, 14). Calling its chosen sanction the “most conservative available,” this Court shifted the burden of proof on the issues of Morgan Stanley’s knowledge of the fraud and collusion with Sunbeam, but continued to require CPH to prove reliance, the fact of damage, and the amount of damages. Id. at 12-14. When that decision was rendered, this Court had no access to information that would have contradicted Morgan Stanley’s claim that in-house counsel was not aware of the recoverable e-mail until October 2004. This Court’s remedial order was therefore based on an assumption that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers were not participants in Morgan Stanley’s misconduct.

2. The March 23, 2005 Remedial Order.

Despite the March 1 ruling, Morgan Stanley’s misconduct continued unabated, and CPH moved for a total default on liability. CPH App. 14 (3/9/05 CPH Renewed Mot. for Entry of Default Judgment). Morgan Stanley again reiterated its story that in-house counsel lacked knowledge or culpability, once more resorting to bold italics: “When Mr. Riel signed his Certification of Compliance in June 2004, he did not know or suspect that there was any e-mail on the so-called ‘Brooklyn tapes’ Mr. Riel also testified that . . . he learned that some of the Brooklyn tapes contained some e-mail . . . , [but] he does not recall ever communicating that fact to anyone in the Law Division.” CPH App. 15 (3/13/05 MS Opp’n to CPH Mot. for a Default Judgment (Corrected Version), at 11-12 (emphasis in original)). Morgan Stanley made this point repeatedly throughout its opposition, also stating that, “[w]hile it is true that Mr. Riel and other members of the IT Staff knew in early July 2004 (after Mr. Riel signed his certification) that some of those tapes contained some e-mails going back to the late 1990s, neither Mr. Riel nor anyone else in the IT department informed Morgan Stanley’s lawyers of that fact. . . . It was not until late October 2004, when Morgan Stanley’s Law Division was working with Ms. Gorman

(Mr. Riel's successor) on some issues regarding an unrelated regulatory production of e-mails, that the Law Division learned, for the first time, that some of the tapes contained e-mails." Id. at 20. Morgan Stanley insisted that this alleged state of affairs "accounts for Morgan Stanley's representation to this Court that late October 2004 marks the first time that the in-house legal staff was aware of this fact." Id.

In addition, rather than relying solely on Mr. Doyle's word, Morgan Stanley also enlisted James P. Cusick, Morgan Stanley's Co-Head of Litigation, to oppose the sanctions motion. Morgan Stanley argued: "[W]hether the affidavit had come from Mr. Doyle, Mr. Cusick, or any other member of Morgan Stanley's Law Division, the content would have been the same: the Law Division did not learn that some of the newly discovered tapes contained some e-mails until October 2004. While Morgan Stanley did not formally withdraw the May [sic] 2004 Certification of Compliance at that time, it did promptly alert outside counsel, which promptly alerted CPH that new e-mail tapes had been discovered and that they would be searched for responsive documents." Id. at 31.

Three days later, Morgan Stanley told the Court that "[t]he delay between when the Law Division learned [that the found tapes contained e-mail] (late October 2004) and when [Morgan Stanley's counsel] wrote CPH's counsel (November 17, 2004) was minor and did not prejudice CPH." CPH App. 18 (3/15/06 Morgan Stanley's Overnight Response to CPH's Additional Submission in Support of its Motion for Default, at 6).

On March 23, 2005, after a further evidentiary hearing, this Court declined to grant the sanction that CPH requested, but imposed a second, carefully calibrated remedial order, which was not intended to punish Morgan Stanley, but to "level the playing field." CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 17-18). After stating that Morgan Stanley's "discovery abuses and misrepresentations . . . would take a volume to recite,” the Court expressly found that Morgan Stanley, still hoping to conceal evidence, had violated two orders entered since March 1 and had coached witnesses to withhold critical information. Id. at 15-16. The Court identified 23 additional recent instances of misconduct. Id. at 11-14, 16. The Court also found that Morgan Stanley had failed to notify CPH and the Court in a timely manner concerning the falsehood of the June 2004 certificate of compliance, which averred that all relevant e-mails had been produced — even though, among other deficiencies, the “Brooklyn tapes” and the “8-mm tapes” had not even been searched.

While the Court found that in-house counsel knew at the time the June 2004 certificate of compliance was served that it was false because they knew about “additional unsearched backup tapes,” the Court did not find that these lawyers knew that the “additional unsearched backup tapes” contained e-mails. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 5 n.4, 13). At that point, despite the extensive revelations of misconduct committed by Morgan Stanley, the Court did not have evidence that contradicted Morgan Stanley’s repeated assertions and sworn statements that its in-house counsel did not know until October 2004 about the e-mails contained in the unsearched tapes.

Accordingly, the Court declined to enter the total default that CPH had requested. Id. at 16-18. Instead, the Court found that Morgan Stanley’s “acts in depriving CPH of crucial documents and discovery to prove its claims require that certain facts be removed from dispute, in order to level the playing field.” CPH App. 22 (5/16/05 Order). It was necessary, in this Court’s view, to deem “established for all purposes” those elements as to which the Court previously had reversed the burden of proof. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 17). The Court continued, however, to require CPH to prove reliance, as well as the fact and amount of damages. In addition, the Court relieved Morgan Stanley of any further obligation to produce e-mails. Without evidence of Morgan Stanley's lawyers' misconduct, the Court chose to afford relief that was remedial rather than punitive, and designed to "level the playing field," rather than vindicate the authority of the Court.

3. Morgan Stanley's False Statements in Conjunction with the Litigation-Misconduct Statement.

The Court's partial-default order also mandated that a statement describing Morgan Stanley's e-mail misconduct would be read to the jury for its consideration in determining the propriety of punitive damages. CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 17). On May 12, 2005, when the Court was shaping the precise wording of the litigation-misconduct statement, Morgan Stanley filed a 235-page proffer that made a number of additional important misrepresentations to the Court. Morgan Stanley contended that its failure to comply with court orders relating to e-mail production was merely the result of a series of unfortunate "mistakes," not a systematic effort to conceal fraud. And Morgan Stanley again claimed that its in-house counsel did not know that there was e-mail on the Brooklyn tapes and the 8-mm tapes until October 2004. CPH App. 21 (5/12/05 MS Addendum to Opposition to CPH Second Renewed Mot. for Correction). Three high-ranking in-house attorneys for Morgan Stanley — James P. Cusick (Morgan Stanley's co-head of litigation), Soo-Mi Lee (executive director in Morgan Stanley's Law Division), and James F. Doyle (the executive director in the Law Division who had filed the false declaration in January 2005) — submitted offers of proof asserting that they had first learned there was e-mail on the Brooklyn tapes in late October 2004 and on the 8-mm tapes in November 2004. Cusick and Lee both asserted that they knew of no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division who knew this information earlier. CPH App. 21 (Def.'s Offer of Proof re James P. Cusick at ¶¶ 3-4; Def.'s Offer of Proof re Soo-Mi Lee at ¶¶ 3-4 (filed 5/12/05)).

Morgan Stanley continued to press these false contentions at a hearing on May 16, 2005, in the context of an argument about how the Court should instruct the jury with regard to punitive damages. Morgan Stanley asked the Court to tell the jury that “[t]here is no evidence that any lawyer in Morgan Stanley’s Law Division was aware prior to October 2004 that any of the tapes contained any e-mail.” CPH App. 23 (5/16/05 Tr. at 15266). The Court did not accept Morgan Stanley’s proposal verbatim. Id. at 15266, 15267. The Court told the jury that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers knew about the existence of the backup tapes before October 2004. In fact, however, Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers also actually knew, long before October 2004, that the tapes contained e-mails — a fact which also should have been brought to the jury’s attention, as CPH requested. Because the Court accepted Morgan Stanley’s assertions and sworn statements (later shown to be false) that the lawyers knew at that time that there were backup tapes, but not that they contained e-mail, the Court denied CPH’s request. CPH App. 24 (5/17/05 Tr. at 15459).

Two days later, on May 18, in vetting the PowerPoint presentation that CPH planned to use in its closing argument on punitive damages, Morgan Stanley repeated the same false story, again achieving Morgan Stanley’s desired results. Morgan Stanley told the Court that there was evidence “that people in Morgan Stanley’s Law Division” knew in October 2004 of “backup tapes but not that the backup tapes contained e-mail. And it’s undisputed that they learned that these contained e-mail in October 2004.” CPH App. 25 (5/18/05 Tr. at 15607). When the Court responded that “It turned out they did contain e-mail,” Morgan Stanley replied, “They didn’t know it, Your Honor.” Id. at 15607. The Court then turned to CPH’s counsel and asked: “Can you change it [to] ‘... did not know about unsearched backup tapes later found to contain e-mail’ or something?” Id. at 15607. When CPH balked at this suggestion, Morgan Stanley persisted: “Your Honor, it’s undisputed in the record that the lawyers at Morgan Stanley learned that e-mail was on these tapes in October 2004. There’s been no contrary evidence to this. . . . They knew about the tapes in June, but they didn’t know they contained e-mail.” Id. at 15608. The Court required CPH to redo its closing PowerPoint presentation, explaining: “We don’t know if [the Morgan Stanley in-house lawyers] knew [the backup tapes] contained e-mail.” Id. at 15608. Morgan Stanley had succeeded in convincing the Court that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers, while aware of the tapes’ existence, had somehow remained unaware that the tapes contained e-mail until October 2004. Morgan Stanley’s arguments to that end, as we now know, were part of the fraud, but those arguments succeeded in ensuring that the arguments made to the jury were deliberately and improperly skewed in Morgan Stanley’s favor.

The jury nonetheless found Morgan Stanley liable. The jury found that CPH had relied on Sunbeam’s false statements, found that these false statements had damaged CPH, and awarded both compensatory and punitive damages to CPH. The jury found that CPH had suffered $604,334,000 in actual damages, and it awarded CPH $850 million in punitive damages.

C. Post-Trial Revelations of Previously Undisclosed Morgan Stanley Misconduct.

1. The June 17, 2005 Notice.

On June 17, 2005, after the jury had rendered its verdicts, and only days after Morgan Stanley, in post-trial motions, had repeated its false assertions as to when Morgan Stanley’s in-house counsel learned of e-mail on the Brooklyn and 8-mm tapes, Morgan Stanley filed a document which it styled a “Notice.” The Notice expressly retracted 15 statements, including the entirety of the Doyle declaration filed in conjunction with Morgan Stanley’s January 2005 opposition to sanctions and various parts of the May 12, 2005 proffer. Each of the retracted statements had asserted that Morgan Stanley’s “Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.” Without elaboration, the Notice recited that in fact “the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.” CPH App. 26 (6/17/05 MS Notice at 1-2 & n.1).

By acknowledging that the Law Division knew in July 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mail, the June 17, 2005 Notice admitted that Morgan Stanley’s repeated representations to the Court about when its Law Division knew of the existence of unsearched e-mail — which critically affected both the severity of the sanctions imposed and the evidence and argument provided to the jury — were false. The June 17 Notice further claimed, without any sworn basis and without even supplying the pertinent documents, that “Morgan Stanley . . . determined” that its prior statements were false “[a]s a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search.” Id. at 1. The Notice contained no explanation of how “Morgan Stanley” could be said to have previously lacked knowledge of facts that were known to its own in-house counsel, including those high-ranking in-house lawyers who made false statements to the Court. Nor did the Notice purport to explain the circumstances of this “new e-mail search” or when exactly it had occurred. Morgan Stanley chose not to identify what “new” information had come to light, how it came to light, when it came to light, or who within Morgan Stanley was aware of it.

2. The Criminal Contempt Proceedings.

About one month after this Court entered the original final judgment and Morgan Stanley filed its notice of appeal, CPH filed a criminal contempt petition against Morgan Stanley, its general counsel, and three in-house lawyers who had offered false proffers in May 2005 as to when they learned that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mails and when they learned of the existence of the 8-mm tapes. CPH App. 27 (7/27/05 CPH Petition re Criminal Contempt). In defense of the contempt proceedings, each of the three in-house lawyers claimed, in unsworn statements, that they realized the falsity of their proffers only after an e-mail search uncovered e-mails showing the state of their knowledge in July 2004. They did not explain why each of them had forgotten the date in so short a period (between July 2004 and the March 2005 date of Morgan Stanley's assertions about the knowledge of in-house counsel), or why they all believed the same false fact (that they had only learned in October 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mails and only learned in November 2004 that the 8-mm tapes existed). CPH App. 29 (11/3/05 Tr. at 33-36); CPH App. 26 (6/17/05 MS Notice at 1). It was also supposedly coincidental that they all remembered in June 2005, after the remedial decisions and the trial, that they in fact were aware by July 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mails and that the 8-mm tapes existed. There has not yet been any discovery into the circumstances of the e-mail search that purportedly led to the June 17, 2005 Notice, or about what that search showed as to who at Morgan Stanley knew the key facts about the tapes.

After a hearing, but with the foregoing questions still unanswered, this Court issued an order on November 10, 2005 declining to rule on the criminal contempt petition pending disposition of Morgan Stanley's appeal. The Court concluded that the allegedly contumacious conduct was sufficiently intertwined with the matters on appeal, including the propriety of the March 2005 remedial rulings, to divest the Court of jurisdiction.

The Court also noted that, during the hearing on the petition, Morgan Stanley had refused repeated requests to take a clear stand on the meaning of the June 17, 2005 Notice — specifically, whether it should be read to state that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers first became aware in July 2004, or no later than July 2004, that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn tapes and that the 8-mm tapes existed. CPH App. 29 (11/3/05 Tr. at 9-25); CPH

App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at n.4). The distinction was important because Morgan Stanley certified on June 23, 2004, that all relevant e-mails had been produced — even though the Brooklyn and 8-mm tapes had not yet been searched. And Morgan Stanley had previously justified this false certification on the basis that its in-house attorneys were unaware at the time of the certification that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mail or that the 8-mm tapes existed. If Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers were aware of e-mail on any of these various tapes prior to July 2004, this justification would simply evaporate.

3. The December 21, 2006 Notice.

More than a year later, and some six months after the Fourth District had heard oral argument in Morgan Stanley's appeal from the judgment, Morgan Stanley filed a further "Notice" addressing (but not curing) its studied imprecision. The December 21, 2006 Notice stated for the first time that "Morgan Stanley's Law Division was aware of the existence of the referenced e-mail back-up tapes" — by which Morgan Stanley apparently meant both the Brooklyn tapes and the 8-mm tapes — "and the presence of e-mail on some of those tapes prior to July 2004." CPH App. 30 (12/21/06 MS Notice).

In filing this December 21, 2006 Notice, Morgan Stanley effectively demonstrated that the peculiar phrasing of its June 17, 2005 Notice — and all the equivocating that it triggered at the criminal contempt hearing — had been no accident. Before, during, and after trial, and, indeed, even now, Morgan Stanley refused to come clean about when its Law Division first learned that the Brooklyn and 8-mm tapes contained e-mail. Instead, Morgan Stanley's December 21, 2006 Notice — when it finally came (on the eve of a holiday weekend) one year after the criminal contempt hearing — came with no sworn affidavit, no pertinent document, no explanation of any new information that triggered the Notice, and no explanation of how or when that information came to light. Moreover, it “clarified” only one portion of the prior submission, and it did that in a way that raised more questions than answers.

Morgan Stanley’s admission that its in-house counsel knew of unsearched e-mails prior to July 2004 shows the falsity of the claims Morgan Stanley made — in its remediation proceedings briefs, in the Doyle declaration, and in its repeated statements in May and June 2005 (after this Court had issued its remedial orders) — that Morgan Stanley’s in-house counsel were not aware of the falsity of the June 2004 certificate of compliance at, or soon after, the time it was filed. In other words, this Court’s remedial orders were based on only a part of Morgan Stanley’s sanctionable conduct. Morgan Stanley committed additional sanctionable conduct after this Court entered its remedial orders and continues to conceal its misconduct even today.

There may well be much more sanctionable conduct that Morgan Stanley continues to conceal through the obviously intended imprecision of its “Notices.” We do not yet know, for example, how the decision to submit the false June 2004 certificate of compliance came about — something that potentially could be revealed by the e-mails Morgan Stanley now has in its possession but has not disclosed. We do not yet know whether Morgan Stanley was already aware, at the time of the June 2005 Notice and the November 2005 contempt hearing, that in-house counsel knew “prior to July 2004” that the tapes contained e-mails. We do not yet know whether the searches Morgan Stanley conducted revealed that even more people within the company were aware that Morgan Stanley was submitting a false certificate of compliance, presenting false facts to the Court, and arguing that these false facts were sufficient to make sanctions inappropriate. And we do not yet know whether Morgan Stanley is even now being truthful in explaining when it found the e-mails showing the knowledge of its in-house counsel. Morgan Stanley’s latest version of its evolving story states that in-house counsel knew “prior to July 2004.” Does that mean that Morgan Stanley had the e-mails demonstrating this knowledge at the time of the remedial order hearings in February and March 2005?

In any event, the post-trial disclosures that already have been made show that the Court was unaware of egregious misconduct by Morgan Stanley’s in-house legal staff at the time the Court entered its remedial orders, and even at the time of trial. Morgan Stanley’s misconduct was more widespread, more shocking, more needful of remediation, and more deserving of punishment than the Court knew. Further investigation into what Morgan Stanley knew, and when it knew it, will demonstrate even more conclusively the extent to which Morgan Stanley corrupted the judicial process, and, hence, the need for relief under Section 1.540(b).

D. Fourth District Court of Appeal’s Ruling.

On appeal, the Fourth District reversed the trial court’s judgment, on the sole ground that CPH had not adequately established its damages because it had not proven the value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the transaction. The Fourth District did not disturb this Court’s remedial orders and did not address the misconduct by Morgan Stanley that came to light only long after those sanctions were imposed. Tellingly, on appeal, Morgan Stanley never challenged any of this Court’s factual findings about its extensive and egregious litigation misconduct.

ARGUMENT

I. RULE 1.540(b) PROVIDES AN APPROPRIATE AVENUE OF RELIEF FROM MORGAN STANLEY’S FRAUD, AND A RULE 1.540(b) MOTION IS PROPERLY BROUGHT AT THIS TIME.

For business executives to hide or destroy evidence is a serious affront to the administration of justice. But when lawyers — officers of the court — connive, conceal, or cooperate in hiding or destroying evidence, the justice system simply cannot work, and the severest of sanctions must be imposed on those who are caught.

Thus, while the Court was considering appropriate remedial orders for Morgan Stanley's discovery misconduct, Morgan Stanley repeatedly argued for leniency on the specific ground that its in-house lawyers were not involved in the misconduct, and, indeed, were not aware until "late October 2004" that Morgan Stanley's unsearched backup tapes contained emails. Morgan Stanley repeated that story — which was not true — through the end of the trial. After the trial was over, Morgan Stanley acknowledged that its in-house lawyers actually knew about the email "in July 2004." That was not true either — at least insofar as the statement was meant to imply that the in-house lawyers acquired this knowledge in July 2004, which the statement clearly was meant to do. Many months later, Morgan Stanley once more revised its story, telling a bit more of the truth: its in-house lawyers actually knew that the backup tapes contained emails sometime "prior to July 2004."

To this day, Morgan Stanley has not told the Court or CPH exactly when it was — in the days, months, or years "prior to July 2004" — that its in-house lawyers actually learned these facts.¹ But the point is that Morgan Stanley, in an effort to avoid serious sanctions, lied — repeatedly — to the Court about what its in-house lawyers knew and when they knew it. The fraud that Morgan Stanley practiced on the Court and CPH is precisely the kind of fraud that Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.540(b) was meant to address.

Rule 1.540(b)(3), which allows the setting aside of a judgment infected by fraud or other serious misconduct, provides that:

On motion and upon such terms as are just, the court may relieve a party or a party's legal representative from a final judgment, decree, order, or proceeding for the following reasons: . . . (3) fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party The motion shall be made within a reasonable time, and . . . not more than 1 year after the judgment, decree, order, or proceeding was entered or taken . . . This rule does not limit the power of a court . . . to set aside a judgment or decree for fraud upon the court.

The purpose of this part of Rule 1.540(b), like that of Federal Rule 60(b), upon which it is modeled, is to "provid[e] relief for judgments that were unfairly obtained, not those that are factually inaccurate. The rule is an 'escape valve to protect the fairness and integrity of litigation in federal courts.'" 12 J. Moore et al., Moore's Federal Practice, § 60[1][d] (Matthew Bender 3d ed. 2007) (footnotes omitted).² Rule 1.540(b) permits the court to set aside a judgment based on a fraud perpetrated by the prevailing party, whether the fraud is directed against only the adverse party or against the judicial process. Here, the fraud perpetrated by Morgan Stanley was both "a fraud upon the court" and a fraud against CPH, and the judgment should be set aside for each of these reasons.

CPH's motion is properly brought at this time. The fact that a case has been the subject of an appeal does not alter the authority of a trial court to entertain a motion for relief from judgment on remand. See, e.g., Ohio Casualty Group v. Parrish, 350 So. 2d 466, 469 (Fla. 1977) (citing Standard Oil Co. of California v. United States, 429 U.S. 17, 17-18 (1976)); Sellers v. General Motors Corp., 735 F.2d 68, 69 (3d Cir. 1984) ("Our affirmance on [the existing record] did not limit the power of the district court to consider Rule 60(b) relief.")³

² See Molinos Del S.A. v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co., 947 So. 2d 521, 524 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006) (Rule 1.540(b) follows Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and the Florida courts look to federal law in construing it).

Some types of Rule 1.540(b) motions must be brought within a year from the entry of the judgment from which relief is sought.⁴ If that requirement is applicable to this case, it is clearly met. In a case like this one, where an earlier judgment has been reversed on appeal, the one-year period runs from the date of the new judgment entered pursuant to the appellate court's mandate. That is because it is the new judgment, rather than the previous, now-reversed judgment, from which relief is being sought. See Molinos, 947 So. 2d at 524-25 (reversing denial of Rule 1.540(b) motion).

In Molinos, trial court judgments in favor of the plaintiffs had been reversed on appeal. The plaintiffs then filed Rule 1.540(b)(2) motions based on newly discovered evidence of defendants' discovery violations. Molinos, 947 So. 2d at 523-24. (Motions for relief from a judgment based on newly-discovered evidence are among those that must be made within one year of the entry of judgment.) Because the Rule 1.540(b)(2) motions in Molinos were filed more than a year after the original judgments had been entered, the Circuit Court denied the motions as untimely. Id. On appeal, the Fourth District reversed, holding that the Rule 1.540(b)(2) motions were timely because the relevant judgments "were those entered after [the defendant's] successful appeals." Id. at 525; cf. Gegenheimer v. Galan, 920 F.2d 307, 310 (5th Cir. 1991) ("[i]f an appeal results in a substantive change [in the judgment], then the time

Stanley from pursuing any appeal until it had purged itself of its contempt by complying fully with the Court's orders. See, e.g., Davidson v. District Court of Appeal, Fourth Dist., 501 So. 2d 603, 604 (Fla. 1987); Gazil v. Gazil, 343 So. 2d 595, 597 (Fla. 1977); Pasin v. Pasin, 517 So. 2d 742, 742 (Fla. 4th DCA 1987).

⁴ As we show below, motions for relief from a judgment based on fraud against a party must be made within one year of the entry of the judgment to which the motion relates. However, a motion for relief from a judgment based on fraud against the court may be made at any time. While this distinction is immaterial to the facts of the present case, the distinction is important insofar as it figures in some of the cases discussed in the Motion.

[for filing a Rule 60(b)(1) motion] would run from the substantially modified order entered on mandate of the appellate court”) (quoting Transit Cas. Co. v. Security Trust Co., 441 F.2d 788, 791 (5th Cir. 1971)).

As in Molinos, there was no adverse judgment from which CPH could have sought relief until this Court entered the judgment mandated by the Fourth District. Accordingly, this is the appropriate time to address CPH’s motion for relief from the judgment based on Morgan Stanley’s fraud.

II. THE JUDGMENT IN THIS CASE SHOULD BE SET ASIDE UNDER RULE 1.540(b).

The fraud committed by Morgan Stanley was both a fraud upon the Court and a fraud on CPH, and it must be redressed for each of these reasons. First, Morgan Stanley and its attorneys committed a fraud upon the Court, which perverted the course of justice and was an affront to the proper administration of justice and the integrity of the judicial system. Second, the fraud committed by Morgan Stanley and its attorneys also constituted a massive fraud that severely impacted CPH and deprived it of its right to a fair and effective adjudication of its claims against Morgan Stanley. Because this case involves a fraud upon the Court, the law does not require that actual prejudice be established. The very fact of the fraud mandates remedial action. Even if prejudice were relevant, however, the law would assign to Morgan Stanley the burden of proving that CPH was not prejudiced by Morgan Stanley’s fraud. In fact, the prejudice to CPH is manifest.

A. Morgan Stanley Concealed From The Court And CPH The Fact That Its Law Division Knew And Participated In The Concealment And Destruction Of Evidence, Thereby Misrepresenting The True Scope Of Its Wrongdoing.

It is beyond dispute that, on each of the occasions when this Court attempted to “level the playing field,” Morgan Stanley had committed sanctionable conduct that warranted corrective action. On appeal, Morgan Stanley did not challenge any of the Court's findings in that regard; Morgan Stanley challenged only the severity of the final pre-trial sanction order, imposed on March 23, 2005 — which the Fourth District did not disturb. As the Court's unchallenged findings show, Morgan Stanley contumaciously defied numerous Court orders and lied repeatedly to CPH and the Court, even in sworn statements, about the existence and availability of emails and other evidence.

Morgan Stanley committed fraud on the Court in connection with the sanctions motions by repeatedly telling the Court, in pleadings, arguments, offers of proof, and sworn statements, that its in-house lawyers were not aware of the existence of unsearched and unproduced emails (or of the improper destruction of emails) until "late October 2004" — four months after Morgan Stanley's false June 2004 certification that its search and production were complete. After repeatedly using these false representations to support its pleas for leniency, Morgan Stanley admitted, in June 2005 (one month after the return of the jury's verdict), that the Morgan Stanley Law Division was actually aware in July 2004 that the unsearched Brooklyn tapes contained email. But even this "admission" continued Morgan Stanley's deceit that the in-house lawyers did not know — until after the certification was made — that the Brooklyn tapes contained email (or that the 8-mm tapes existed). In December 2006, however, Morgan Stanley finally added the admission that "Morgan Stanley's Law Division was aware of the existence of the [Brooklyn and 8-mm] email backup tapes and the presence of email on some of those tapes prior to July 2004" (emphasis added). The only reasonable inference to be drawn from these tortured "admissions" is that the Law Division knew of unsearched emails, and thus knew that the June 23, 2004, certification was false, at the time the certification was made. Indeed, even with these two additional "Notices," Morgan Stanley has refused to disclose precisely when its Law Division — supposedly charged with ensuring compliance with applicable law — actually learned for the first time about the existence of email on the Brooklyn or 8-mm tapes. It seems plausible that the Law Division was aware of these facts from the very beginning of this litigation and lied from the date of its first, fraudulent response to CPH's Notice to Produce Documents in June 2003.

B. Morgan Stanley's Actions Constitute Fraud Upon The Court And Therefore Require The Setting Aside Of The Judgment Without Any Need To Demonstrate Prejudice To CPH.

Morgan Stanley repeatedly lied about the Law Division's knowledge of the discovery misconduct to ensure that the Court would not impose the more substantial sanctions that would have been imposed for lawyer, rather than simply lay, misconduct. That pattern of lies and concealment as to the Law Division's knowledge constituted a fraud upon the Court warranting relief from the judgment under Rule 1.540(b). In cases of fraud upon the court, the granting of relief does not require proof of prejudice, but such proof is abundant here in any event.

1. The Involvement Of Morgan Stanley's Law Division In Its Unconscionable Scheme To Conceal Documents And Misrepresent Their Existence Resulted In A Fraud Upon The Court Sufficient To Set Aside The Judgment Under Rule 1.540(b).

Under the saving clause of Rule 1.540(b), courts retain the power to "set aside a judgment or decree for fraud upon the court." Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b). Fraud upon the court is a ground for relief that may be raised at any time, including in a Rule 1.540(b) motion. DeClaire v. Yohanan, 453 So. 2d 375 (Fla. 1984), superseded by rule on other grounds as recognized in Cerniglia v. Cerniglia, 679 So. 2d 1160, 1163 n. 3 (Fla. 1996). Fraud upon the court occurs where "a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense."

Andrews v. Palmas De Majorca Condominium, 898 So. 2d 1066, 1069 (Fla. 5th DCA 2005) (citing Aoude v. Mobil Oil Corp., 892 F.2d 1115, 1118 (1st Cir. 1989)). Morgan Stanley's own admissions to the Court — that it misrepresented its in-house attorneys' knowledge of the email back-up tapes — demonstrates that Morgan Stanley sought to influence the Court improperly and to effectuate an unconscionable scheme designed to interfere with the Court's ability to adjudicate the original case fairly, impartially, and with full knowledge of all relevant facts.

Although Florida courts have not previously addressed a situation identical to that presented here, other jurisdictions have set aside judgments because of frauds upon the court nearly identical to that perpetrated by Morgan Stanley. For example, in Chewning v. Ford Motor Co., 579 S.E.2d 605 (S.C. 2003), the South Carolina Supreme Court held that an attorney's subornation of perjury or intentional concealment of documents constituted a fraud upon the court that warranted setting aside a prior judgment under the South Carolina version of Rule 1.540(b). Id. at 610-11. Ford's attorneys and expert witness had devised a secret strategy that involved paying an expert witness substantial sums of money to give favorable testimony for Ford, with Ford's attorneys concealing documents concerning this arrangement as well as other documents damaging to Ford's case. Id. at 611-12.

The Chewning court emphasized that the misconduct was especially egregious because of the involvement of Ford's lawyers: "Attorney fraud calls into question the integrity of the judiciary and erodes public confidence in the fairness of our system of justice. Accordingly, where an attorney embarks on a scheme to either suborn perjury or intentionally conceal documents, . . . a fraud upon the court occurs." Id. at 611. Unlike perjury or document concealment by a party or witness, "where an attorney — an officer of the court — suborns perjury or intentionally conceals documents, he or she effectively precludes the opposing party from having his day in court,” thereby interfering with the court’s ability to adjudicate a case impartially. Id. at 611.

Similarly, in Pumphrey v. K.W. Thompson Tool Co., 62 F.3d 1128, 1131 (9th Cir. 1995), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit vacated a judgment because the defendant, through Edward Bartlett, its in-house general counsel, had worked “an unconscionable scheme” designed to defraud the court through “misleading, inaccurate, and incomplete responses to discovery requests, the presentation of fraudulent evidence, and the failure to correct the false impression created by [the defense expert’s] testimony.” Id. at 1131-32. The Ninth Circuit found that Bartlett, who had “participated significantly” in the original litigation, by “attending the trial on [the defendant’s] behalf, gathering information to respond to discovery requests and framing the answers,” was responsible to the court for his actions during discovery, even though he was not admitted to practice in the state, did not “enter an appearance in [the original litigation], was not admitted pro hac vice, and did not sign any documents filed with the court.” Id. Nonetheless, the court treated his misconduct as that of an “officer of the court” and thus sufficient to warrant relief from the judgment. Id.

As Chewing and Pumphrey demonstrate, the involvement of a party’s in-house lawyers in a deliberate scheme to conceal evidence and misrepresent its existence constitutes fraud upon the court and warrants setting aside a judgment. See also Synanon Foundation, Inc. v. Bernstein, 502 A.2d 1254 (D.C. 1985) (where plaintiff’s in-house attorneys concealed, altered, and destroyed evidence responsive to defendants’ discovery requests and later misrepresented its existence to the trial court, plaintiff and its attorneys perpetrated a fraud upon the court).

Here, there is no question that Morgan Stanley, with substantial involvement from its in-house attorneys, deliberately concealed responsive discovery and lied and misrepresented the existence of responsive discovery to the trial court and CPH. Several high-ranking lawyers in Morgan Stanley's Law Division submitted offers of proof or sworn statements to the trial court, asserting that no one in the Law Division was aware until October 2004 that numerous back-up tapes contained email from relevant time periods. Morgan Stanley itself later admitted that these declarations and offers of proof were false and that Morgan Stanley's in-house attorneys actually knew the back-up tapes contained emails "prior to July 2004." Furthermore, the fraud Morgan Stanley perpetrated on this Court was so pervasive and so well-planned that it fully and completely interfered with both the jury's and the Court's ability to provide a fair and impartial adjudication of the matter. Morgan Stanley's repeated misrepresentations, effectuated through its Law Division's offers of proof and sworn statements, improperly influenced the Court's decisions regarding sanctions and jury instructions. Morgan Stanley's conduct clearly amounted to a fraud upon the trial court and CPH is entitled to relief from the judgment.

2. Because Morgan Stanley And Its In-House Lawyers Perpetrated A Fraud On The Court, CPH Need Not Show That Morgan Stanley's Fraudulent Conduct Caused Prejudice To CPH To Secure Relief From The Judgment.

As numerous courts have held, fraud upon the court is such "an affront to the administration of justice" that "a litigant who has been defrauded need not establish prejudice" to secure relief from the judgment. Chewning, 579 So. 2d at 611 n.7 (citation omitted); see also Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. v. Hartford-Empire Co., 322 U.S. 238, 247 (1944) (litigant who attempts to defraud the court cannot deny effectiveness of fraud after the fact), overruled on other grounds by Standard Oil Co. of California v. United States, 429 U.S. 17 (1976); Aoude v. Mobil Oil Corp., 892 F.2d 1115, 1120 (1st Cir. 1989) (same); In re Intermagnetics America, Inc., 926 F.2d 912 (9th Cir. 1991) (prejudice is not relevant to inquiry regarding whether judgment should be set aside for fraud on the court); Pumphrey, 62 F.3d at 1132-1133 (same); Dixon v. C.I.R., 316 F.3d 1041, 1046 (9th Cir. 2003) (“Prejudice is not an element of fraud on the court.”).

Rather, “the inquiry as to whether a judgment should be set aside for fraud upon the court focuses on . . . whether the alleged fraud harms the integrity of the judicial process.” In re Intermagnetics America, Inc., 926 F.2d at 917. In Pumphrey, for example, the Ninth Circuit held that the defendant’s in-house counsel undermined the judicial process when he failed to disclose responsive discovery materials, mischaracterized test results in response to plaintiff’s discovery requests, and failed to correct false and misleading testimony given by the defense expert witness at trial. Pumphrey, 62 F.3d at 1133. Quoting the district court, the Ninth Circuit emphasized that the lawyer, as a “licensed attorney,” was aware of the “damage failure to abide by [discovery rules] and the rules of professional responsibility can wreck . . . [on] the larger framework of confidence in the adversary trial system.” Id. (citation omitted). It did not matter, the Ninth Circuit emphasized, whether the plaintiff could show that it would have prevailed in the original litigation if the lawyer had not perpetrated a fraud on the court. Id. at 1132. Because of the damage done to the integrity of the judicial process itself, the plaintiff was entitled to relief from the fraudulently procured judgment and a new trial on all issues. Id. at 1133-34.

Like the misconduct of the attorneys in Pumphrey and Chewning, Morgan Stanley’s in-house attorneys engaged in fraudulent conduct that not only severely hampered CPH’s access to responsive discovery materials, but also interfered with the Court’s ability to adjudicate the original action impartially. Morgan Stanley cannot now be heard to claim that its conduct did not have the consequences it intended. CPH is entitled to a fair, impartial trial, and is therefore entitled to relief from the judgment.

C. Morgan Stanley's Fraud Had A Prejudicial Effect on the Outcome of the Litigation And Prevented CPH From Fully and Fairly Presenting Its Case.

As we have shown, the granting of relief from a judgment procured by fraud upon the court does not require a showing of prejudice to the non-prevailing party. The harm to the justice system is enough. Even in those few cases in which courts have found prejudice to be relevant, however, they have held that the existence of prejudice should be presumed, and that the party defending the judgment should be required to prove the absence of prejudice by clear and convincing evidence. See, e.g., Anderson v. Cryovac, Inc. 862 F.2d 910, 925-26 (1st Cir. 1988) (showing of knowing or deliberate misconduct creates presumption of prejudice sufficient to decide the issue unless rebutted by clear and convincing evidence, with any uncertainties “redound[ing] to the movant’s benefit”); Venture Indus. Corp. v. Autoliv ASP, Inc., 457 F.3d 1322, 1332-34 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (same).

In any event, it is clear beyond doubt in the present case that Morgan Stanley’s fraudulent conduct had a prejudicial effect on the outcome of the litigation and prevented CPH from fully and fairly presenting its case. Under any relevant standard, therefore, CPH is entitled to relief.

1. Morgan Stanley's Fraud With Respect To What Its Law Division Knew Was Critical To The Resolution Of The Sanctions Motions, And, Hence, To The Outcome Of The Case.

It was clear, when the Court made its sanctions decisions, that Morgan Stanley had committed serious, sanctionable misconduct. The only question was how substantial the sanction should be. Thus, Morgan Stanley needed to portray itself in as good a light as possible. That is why, in its March 13, 2005 opposition to CPH’s motion for default, Morgan Stanley drew a sharp distinction between what its IT staff knew and what its legal staff (allegedly) knew:

While it is true that Mr. Riel [the IT manager who signed the e-mail certification] and other members of the IT Staff knew in early July 2004 (after Mr. Riel signed his certification) that some of those tapes contained some e-mails going back to the late 1990s, neither Mr. Riel nor anyone else in the IT department informed

Morgan Stanley's lawyers of that fact. . . It was not until late October 2004, when Morgan Stanley's Law Division was working with Ms. Gorman (Mr. Riel's successor) on some issues regarding an unrelated regulatory production of e-mails, that the Law Division learned, for the first time, that some of the tapes contained e-mails. That accounts for Morgan Stanley's representation to this Court that late October 2004 marks the first time that the in-house legal staff was aware of this fact.

CPH App. 15 (3/13/05 MS Opp'n to CPH Mot. for a Default Judgment at 20); see also id. at 20, 31 (“[W]hether the affidavit had come from Mr. Doyle, Mr. Cusick, or any other member of Morgan Stanley's Law Division, the content would have been the same: the Law Division did not learn that some of the newly discovered tapes contained some emails until October 2004.”).

That is also why Morgan Stanley repeated this contention to the Court both during and after the sanctions proceedings. See, e.g., CPH App. 11 (2/28/05 Morgan Stanley's Opp'n to CPH's Mot. for a Default Judgment, at 6) (“Morgan Stanley has consistently contended that no one in its Law Division knew of the existence of additional recoverable email data on the tapes before October 2004.”); CPH App. 21 (5/12/05 MS Addendum to Opposition to CPH Mot. for Correction) (May 12, 2005 proffer stating that in-house counsel did not know that there was email on the Brooklyn tapes until October 2004 and did not know of the existence of 8-mm tapes containing emails until November 2004); CPH App. 23 (5/16/05 Tr. at 15266) (May 16, 2005 Morgan Stanley argument to Court that “[t]here is no evidence that any lawyer in Morgan Stanley's Law Division was aware prior to October 2004 that any of the tapes contained any e-mail”); CPH App. 25 (5/18/05 Tr. at 15607) (May 18, 2005 Morgan Stanley argument that “it's undisputed that [in-house counsel] learned that these [backup tapes] contained e-mail in October 2004”).

Of course, all of these representations were false, as Morgan Stanley's December 21, 2006 Notice eventually made clear. They were all part of a lie. And the lie was critical to Morgan Stanley's defense of the sanctions motions — a defense that was aimed at avoiding the severe sanctions that Morgan Stanley truly deserved. It was bad enough that Morgan Stanley's employees were engaged in misconduct relating to the production of emails. But one of the principal responsibilities of in-house counsel is to see that the company and its employees comply with the law. It would have been devastating to Morgan Stanley's defense if the Court had known that the Law Division not only had failed to ensure compliance with the Court's Orders, but that the Law Division had actually known about the noncompliance even at the very time the Court was being assured that compliance had occurred. The facts would have been particularly devastating because the Law Division lawyers who lied to the Court were not junior, inexperienced lawyers; the in-house lawyers who lied to the Court included at least three of the most senior lawyers in company (and perhaps others whose identities Morgan Stanley continues to conceal). But Morgan Stanley went even further: Morgan Stanley traded on the Court's willingness to presume that in-house counsel would comply with the law (which they did not do) to argue that the Court, as a matter of fairness, should not impose the sanctions that CPH had requested. That ploy worked.

If CPH had known in early 2005 (when it moved for sanctions) that these sworn statements and representations about in-house counsel's knowledge were false — indeed, if CPH had known that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers, portrayed as enablers of the truth, were actually enablers of deceit — CPH would have urged sanctions more severe than those it requested. CPH not only would have asked the Court to enter a total default as to liability (which CPH unsuccessfully urged), but CPH also would have asked for a remedial order with respect to damages. Indeed, at oral argument on the request for sanctions, CPH argued that the withholding of the truth about the email went to every element of the claim, including the fact of damages. CPH App. 19 (3/15/05 Tr. at 3944). If CPH had known at the time of the sanctions hearing that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers had known about the fraud, and had been active participants in it, Morgan Stanley could not have succeeded in its central argument for leniency, which was based on its lawyers' lack of participation in any wrongdoing.

Based on the incomplete and deceptive picture presented by Morgan Stanley, the Court limited the severity of its remedial orders. Based on what it did know, the Court commented that Morgan Stanley's misconduct was so serious that "[t]he judicial system cannot function this way." CPH App. 20 (3/23/05 Order at 16) (emphasis in original). But the Court and CPH were aware of only part of the story. If the Court had known that Morgan Stanley was lying about what the Law Division knew, or that Morgan Stanley's lawyers had deliberately chosen to lie to the Court to secure a less severe remedy for Morgan Stanley's misconduct, the Court undoubtedly would have responded to those facts by imposing the more serious sanctions Morgan Stanley deserved rather than the purely remedial measures the Court actually imposed. See, e.g., Webb v. District of Columbia, 189 F.R.D. 180, 191 (D.D.C. 1999) (party may be penalized for in-house counsel's conduct because party "has an unusually broad influence [over in-house lawyers] because of the power to control litigation policies and the entirety of the lawyer's resources. This consideration, together with the [client's] own unlawful actions, make the imposition of a default judgment in part for the misconduct of counsel an entirely just and appropriate result.").

In the circumstances, it would have been appropriate for the Court to have imposed a total default as to liability and to have altered the burden of proof as to damages. If the Court had imposed the serious sanction that, we now know, Morgan Stanley has always merited, the outcome of this case would have been different, and the granting of relief under Rule 1.540(b) is warranted for that reason.

2. Morgan Stanley's Fraud On The Court Infected The Jury's Deliberations.

There can be no doubt as to the importance of Morgan Stanley's fraud with respect to how the trial was conducted — Morgan Stanley used its misrepresentations to avoid the likelihood of a remedy more severe than the partial default the Court ordered. But Morgan Stanley did more: it used its misrepresentations to secure a change in the arguments presented to the jury.

On May 18, 2005, outside the presence of the jury, the Court heard arguments from the parties concerning the use of demonstrative aids in support of the parties' respective closing arguments in the punitive damages phase of the trial. Morgan Stanley asked the Court to order CPH to change its closing argument and the PowerPoint presentation that supported it. Morgan Stanley told the Court that "it's undisputed in the record that the lawyers at Morgan Stanley learned that email was on these tapes in October 2004. There's been no contrary evidence to this They knew about the tapes in June, but they didn't know they contained e-mail." CPH App. 25 (5/18/05 Tr. at 15608). The Court, unaware of the truth at that time, required CPH to redo its presentation, explaining: "We don't know if [the Morgan Stanley in-house lawyers] knew [the backup tapes] contained e-mail." Id.

In other words, Morgan Stanley persuaded the Court to change what the jury was to hear, and it succeeded in doing so by misrepresenting to the Court that its in-house attorneys had somehow remained ignorant until October 2004 of the fact that the unsearched Brooklyn tapes contained email (and that they remained unaware until November 2004 of even the existence of the 8-mm tapes). That, of course, was false. As Morgan Stanley unequivocally admitted after jurisdiction of the case had been transferred to the Fourth District — and, indeed, the case had been argued and submitted in that court — the in-house lawyers were aware of the existence of email on the unsearched Brooklyn tapes prior to July 2004. In addition, it is now clear that sometime before July 2004 members of the Law Division were aware that the 8-mm tapes existed, and that some of those tapes contained emails.

Where, as here, the misconduct has actually changed what the jury was allowed to hear, there can be no doubt that relief is warranted under Rule 1.540(b).

III. THE COURT SHOULD ORDER DISCOVERY AND BRIEFING ON CPH'S RULE 1.540(b) MOTION, AND SET THE MATTER FOR AN EVIDENTIARY HEARING.

Where a Rule 1.540(b) motion presents a “colorable entitlement to relief,” the Court must conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine whether the motion should be granted. See Schlege v. Stebelsky, 957 So. 2d 71, 73 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007) (evidentiary hearing required unless allegations and accompanying affidavits fail to show colorable entitlement to relief); Robinson v. Weiland, 936 So. 2d 777, 781 (Fla. 5th DCA 2006) (evidentiary hearing required where motion under Rule 1.540(b) “pleads fraud or misrepresentation with particularity, and shows how that fraud or misrepresentation affected the judgment”).

Under Florida law, the presentation of a colorable entitlement to relief also requires that the movant be afforded permissible discovery prior to the hearing. See Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Welden, 483 So. 2d 487, 489 (Fla. 1st DCA 1986) (applying Rule 1.540(b)). Here, the need for discovery is obvious. Morgan Stanley has deceived and misled the Court and CPH since virtually the beginning of the litigation, starting with Morgan Stanley's response to CPH's first request to produce documents. Morgan Stanley affirmatively misrepresented the extent of its misconduct until long after the verdict; and even now, nearly three years after the trial, Morgan Stanley continues to conceal the full magnitude of its misconduct and that of its Law Division.

As shown above, Morgan Stanley argued forcefully that it should escape the most severe consequences of its actions on the ground that its in-house lawyers did not knowingly participate in the discovery misconduct that Morgan Stanley argued was confined to certain personnel in its IT department. See supra pages 10 to 16. Although Morgan Stanley's argument succeeded, it was based upon facts that we now know to be false — facts that Morgan Stanley knew to be false at the time Morgan Stanley made the argument. But we do not yet know the full extent of the Law Division's complicity. Morgan Stanley's June 17, 2005 Notice, its presentation at the November 3, 2005 criminal-contempt hearing, and its December 21, 2006 Notice all reflect a consistent attempt to game the system by creating intentional ambiguities that mask the full extent of its in-house lawyers' misconduct. Justice will not be done in this case until those responsible are required to answer questions under oath and have their testimony subjected to this Court's most rigorous scrutiny. The need for discovery could not be more acute.

Moreover, this Court should not allow Morgan Stanley to stymie discovery once again by improperly invoking the attorney-client privilege. There is now a resounding factual basis for applying the crime/fraud exception to the privilege. Under Florida law, the crime/fraud exception bars any party from claiming as privileged any communications with a lawyer when the lawyer's services "were sought or obtained to enable or aid anyone to commit or plan to commit what the client knew was a crime or fraud." Fla. Stat. § 90.502(4)(a); see also American Tobacco Co. v. State, 697 So. 2d 1249, 1252-56 (Fla. 4th DCA 1997). When a party engages in discovery misconduct and abuses the attorney-client privilege, Florida courts do not hesitate to reject the party's claims of privilege and require disclosure of information that the party otherwise would continue to cloak in the privilege by having its lawyers participate in the wrongful conduct. See, e.g., General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So. 2d 1010, 1032 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002).

Here, CPH asked the Court to pierce the privilege based on the crime/fraud exception on February 21, 2005, when CPH sought to depose Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel about the withholding or destruction of e-mail evidence. CPH App. 10 (2/21/05 CPH Mot. to Compel Further Discovery). In its March 1, 2005 sanctions order the Court denied that request. CPH App. 13 (3/2/05 Order). But at that time, of course, Morgan Stanley had insisted that only its IT personnel and not the members of its Law Division were responsible for the misconduct, and the Court did not yet know about the Law Division's complicity. Had the Court known what we know now, it would have had a clear basis for finding that the privilege was defeated by the crime/fraud exception. Otherwise privileged communications involving Morgan Stanley's Law Division attorneys might well contain important admissions relating to all aspects of the case, including admissions that Morgan Stanley's and Sunbeam's fraudulent statements damaged CPH — an essential element of CPH's claims against Morgan Stanley and an element that Morgan Stanley contends CPH failed to prove at trial.

CPH believes that this Court will decide, after allowing for appropriate discovery and then conducting the evidentiary hearing required to resolve a Rule 1.540(b) motion, that the judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley should be vacated. Accordingly, CPH respectfully asks this Court to set a briefing schedule, with adequate time for discovery, to be followed by an evidentiary hearing.

IV. THE JUDGMENT IN FAVOR OF MORGAN STANLEY SHOULD BE VACATED AND APPROPRIATELY SEVERE SANCTIONS SHOULD BE IMPOSED AGAINST MORGAN STANLEY.

Given the record of litigation abuse and deception in this case, CPH respectfully submits that this Court should vacate the judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley and then go on to impose additional, more severe sanctions against Morgan Stanley. Specifically, CPH respectfully requests that the Court (a) enter a complete default on all elements of liability, including reliance and the fact of damage; (b) shift the burden of proof on damages; (c) order a new trial on compensatory and punitive damages; and (d) provide such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

A. Entering a Complete Default on All Elements of Liability.

The Court should enter a complete default order on all elements of liability (including the fact of damage), rather than only a partial default order on some (but not all) elements of liability.

In opposing both CPH's rehearing petition in the Fourth District and its jurisdictional brief in the Florida Supreme Court, Morgan Stanley repeatedly argued that a retrial on damages was unavailable because the jury's finding as to the fact of damage — not simply the amount — was tainted by the methodology CPH used for proving the amount of compensatory damages. See CPH App. 33 (Resp.'s Notice Respecting Supp. Authority, at 1 (Nov. 20, 2007)); CPH App. 32 (Resp.'s Answer Br. in Opp'n to Jurisdiction, at 1, 5-8 (July 24, 2007)); CPH App. 31 (Resp. to Mot. for Reh'g En Banc, at 11 (May 7, 2007)). Had Morgan Stanley received the sanction it deserved based upon all the information we now know, Morgan Stanley would not have been in a position to urge the grounds for reversal upon which the Fourth District decided the appeal. As even Morgan Stanley surely must concede, an undisturbed finding of liability must be followed by proceedings to determine the proper remedy.

There is no question that this Court has the power to enter a complete default judgment as to all elements of liability. The Florida Rules of Civil Procedure authorize trial courts to issue default judgments against parties that willfully and contumaciously disobey discovery orders. See Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.380(b)(2)(C). And courts throughout the State have long recognized that such a default judgment may extend to all elements of liability, including the fact of damage. See, e.g., Levine v. Del American Properties, Inc., 642 So. 2d 32, 32-34 (Fla. 5th DCA 1994) (default judgment as to all elements of fraud, breach of contract, and conversion); Williams v. Direct Dispensing, Inc., 630 So. 2d 1195, 1196-97 (Fla. 3d DCA 1994) (default judgment as to all elements of negligent misrepresentation, breach of contract, and conspiracy to defraud); Far Out Music, Inc. v. Jordan, 502 So. 2d 523, 523-24 (Fla. 3d DCA 1987) (default judgment as to all elements of fraud and breach of contract). Such a remedy is clearly appropriate where, as here, the party's misconduct is extreme, and the party has used every means possible to conceal that misconduct.

B. Ordering a New Trial on Damages and Shifting the Burden of Proof.

Florida case law makes clear that sanctions for discovery misconduct may extend beyond the liability phase of the proceeding and into the damages phase. For example, the Florida Supreme Court has recognized that, in entering “a default against a defendant for violation of discovery orders in a negligence action,” a trial court must have the discretion to “preclude that defendant from reducing the amount of his liability by proof of the plaintiff's comparative negligence.” Harless v. Kuhn, 403 So. 2d 423, 424 (Fla. 1981) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Florida courts likewise have held that a defendant that commits discovery misconduct not only may be held liable, but also can be barred from introducing any evidence at the trial on damages. In Delta Information Services, Inc. v. Joseph R. Jannach M.D. & Associates, 569 So. 2d 1353 (Fla. 3d DCA 1990), litigation misconduct (including the violation of five discovery orders) led the trial court to find the disobedient party liable and then to prohibit that party from introducing any evidence during the damages trial that should have been disclosed to the other party through court-ordered discovery. Id. at 1354 n.4. The Third District affirmed unanimously. Id. at 1355.

Similarly, in Rose v. Clinton, 575 So. 2d 751 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991), the trial court imposed discovery sanctions that precluded defendants from presenting any evidence whatsoever to controvert plaintiff's proof of damages (though defendants were permitted to cross-examine plaintiff's witnesses and to make objections). See id. at 752. After conducting the damages trial, the court entered a final judgment in plaintiff's favor. Id. Although the Third District reversed that judgment, it did so solely because the trial judge had not entered written findings that defendants had willfully and deliberately disobeyed a court order to comply with discovery; such written findings are required by the Florida Supreme Court's decision in Commonwealth Federal Savings & Loan Association v. Tubero, 569 So. 2d 1271, 1272 (Fla. 1990). See Rose v. Clinton, 575 So. 2d at 752. Importantly, the Third District held that the trial court, on remand, would be free to reinstate both its sanctions order and its final judgment awarding damages so long as it conducted the required hearing and entered the required written finding. Id. Thus, the Third District approved the trial court's decision to bar defendants from presenting their own damages evidence — and the appellate court expressly found that the trial court's "sanctions were commensurate with the [defendants'] discovery violations." Id. at 752 n.3 (citing Delta Info. Servs., supra); see also Joint Committee of the Trial Lawyers Section of the Florida Bar and the Conferences of Circuit and County Judges, Handbook on Discovery Practice 16 & n.64 (2007 ed.) (citing Rose v. Clinton for the proposition that Florida trial courts can allow the award of damages as part of a default sanction for discovery abuse), available at <http://www.flatls.org/Handbook/ Handbook.pdf>.

The Court could also take a more limited step. Rather than barring Morgan Stanley from introducing evidence at a new trial on damages, the Court could require Morgan Stanley to show “negative causation” — that is, make Morgan Stanley bear the burden of proving that something other than fraud caused a decline in the value of CPH’s 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock. See Akerman v. Oryx Communications, Inc., 810 F.2d 336, 340-43 (2d Cir. 1987).⁵ This request comports with the Fourth District’s decision focusing on “the actual, ‘fraud-free’ value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the transaction.” 955 So. 2d at 1131. The negative-causation defense proposed here and the loss-causation burden that the Fourth District imposed on CPH are mirror-image methods of establishing the actual, fraud-free value on the date of the transaction. “[I]n the former [method], the burden of proving negative causation is on the defendant, and in the latter, the burden of proving the existence of loss causation is on the plaintiff.” In re WorldCom, Inc. Sec. Litig., No. 02 Civ. 3288, 2005 WL 375314, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 17, 2005). The new trial on damages will arrive at that fraud-free value. But at the new trial, Morgan Stanley will bear the burden of proving negative causation.

Given Morgan Stanley’s repeated, willful, and contumacious disregard for this Court’s orders and Morgan Stanley’s destruction and nonproduction of evidence — potentially including contemporaneous evidence about the value that Morgan Stanley placed on the Sunbeam stock on the date of the transaction — this Court should place the burden on Morgan Stanley to attempt to prove what, if any, portion of the stock's collapse can be attributed to non-fraud-related causes.

After the parties have presented their evidence under this evidentiary burden, after the jury has calculated the compensatory damages that Morgan Stanley owes CPH, and after the Court has added the appropriate amount of prejudgment interest to compensate CPH in current dollars, the jury then could determine whether punitive damages are warranted and, if so, what amount is to be assessed. In considering whether punitive damages are warranted, the jury should be instructed about Morgan Stanley's efforts to destroy and withhold evidence of its collusion with Sunbeam, including the important role of Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiff CPH respectfully requests that this Court vacate the judgment of dismissal, enter a default judgment as to all elements of liability, order a new trial on damages with Morgan Stanley bearing the burden of proving that something other than the fraud caused part of CPH's loss, and provide such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

2003 CA 005045 AI

Judge Elizabeth T. Maass

ANSWER OF MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") responds to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s ("CPH") Complaint by denying generally that MS & Co. engaged in any fraudulent or negligent misrepresentations, any conspiracy to defraud, that MS & Co. assisted Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam") or any employee, director or agent of Sunbeam in the commission of a fraudulent scheme, or that MS & Co. otherwise defrauded CPH in any manner. Specifically, MS & Co. responds to CPH's allegations as follows:

Nature of the Action

1. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 1.
2. MS & Co. admits that, beginning in mid-1997, MS & Co. served as an investment banker for Sunbeam. MS & Co. admits that it attempted to identify a party interested in purchasing Sunbeam, and that those efforts were ultimately unsuccessful. MS & Co. admits that it recommended that Sunbeam's management consider acquiring other companies instead and suggested, as is common in corporate mergers and acquisitions, that Sunbeam consider, among other options, using Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration for such an acquisition. MS & Co. denies that it had any knowledge as to the accuracy of the value of Sunbeam's stock, or that

MS & Co. knew (or even suspected) that the value of Sunbeam's stock had been "fraudulently inflated." MS & Co. admits that it facilitated communications between Sunbeam and Coleman, but denies that it in any way "persuaded" CPH to sell its interest in Coleman. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 2 and consequently denies them.

3. MS & Co. admits that it agreed to serve as underwriter of a $750 million debenture offering for Sunbeam. MS & Co. admits that, as an advisor to Sunbeam, it had access to certain financial documents, and further states that those same documents were made available to CPH during the acquisition negotiations. Further, in that regard, MS & Co. specifically disclaimed any independent evaluation of Sunbeam's financial records, and expressly stated that it relied solely on documentation and information provided by Sunbeam and Sunbeam's audited financial statements. MS & Co. admits that on March 18, 1998, it learned that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "soft." Sunbeam insisted that its sales would meet expectations, but MS & Co. insisted that Sunbeam issue a press release to warn the market of the softening sales. Additionally, MS & Co. received two "comfort letters" from Sunbeam's auditors, Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. performed all of its obligations as an underwriter of Sunbeam securities. MS & Co. denies that it had any role in the accounting judgments described in the complaint, or any obligations to audit or independently examine Sunbeam's accounting records. MS & Co. denies that it owed any duties to CPH. MS & Co. denies that it had any independent knowledge as to the reasons behind Sunbeam's soft sales, that Sunbeam had a "practice of accelerating sales," or that it "materially misrepresent[ed]" information to CPH. Further, MS & Co. specifically denies that it in any manner assisted Sunbeam in concealing its 1998 first quarter sales numbers in order to close the transaction. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 3 and consequently denies them.

4. MS & Co. admits that CPH has brought this action against MS & Co. alleging fraudulent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting, conspiracy, and negligent misrepresentation, but denies that there is any merit to the suit. MS & Co. specifically denies that it made any fraudulent or negligent representations to CPH, that it in any way aided or abetted a fraudulent scheme against CPH, or that it participated in a conspiracy to defraud CPH. MS & Co. denies that any losses that CPH suffered resulted from fraud or any wrongful conduct on the part of MS & Co. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 4.

5. MS & Co. admits that CPH purports to seek compensatory damages against MS & Co., but denies that such claim is valid, for MS & Co. denies that it was engaged in any wrongful conduct. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 5.

Jurisdiction and Venue

6. MS & Co. admits the allegations contained in Paragraph 6. MS & Co. further admits that it is incorporated in Delaware and has its principal place of business in New York.

7. MS & Co. denies that venue is proper in this district.

Parties and Other Key Participants

8. MS & Co. admits that CPH represented, in negotiations with Sunbeam, that it owned, directly or indirectly, approximately 82% of Coleman prior to March 30, 1998. MS & Co. admits that on March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired CPH's interest in Coleman by paying CPH with 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam common stock and other consideration, including a cash payment by Sunbeam to CPH in the amount of $159,956,756.00. (See Feb. 27, 1998 Merger Agmt. § 3.1(a)(i) (Ex. 1).) MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 8 and consequently denies them.

9. MS & Co. admits that it is an investment banking firm providing financial and securities services. MS & Co. admits that, as part of its business operations, it at times provides advice on mergers and acquisitions, and raises capital in equity and debt markets, depending on the needs of its clients. MS & Co. admits that it served as Sunbeam's investment banker for certain aspects of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, and served as underwriter of certain securities issued by Sunbeam in connection with the acquisition. MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 9.

10. MS & Co. admits that Sunbeam was a publicly-traded company which manufactures and markets household and specialty consumer products, including outdoor cooking products. MS & Co. admits that Sunbeam marketed these products under several brand names, including Sunbeam and Oster. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 10 and consequently denies them.

11. MS & Co. admits that Albert Dunlap had served as the Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 11 and consequently denies them.

12. MS & Co. admits that Russell Kersh had served as the Executive Vice President of Sunbeam. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 12 and consequently denies them.

13. MS & Co. admits that Arthur Andersen LLP served as Sunbeam's auditors and provided independent/outside accounting services to Sunbeam. MS & Co. further admits that, during the performance of its engagement, it received "comfort letters" from Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. never served as auditor for Sunbeam, and never provided Sunbeam with any accounting or accounting-related services. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to know the location of Lawrence Bornstein or to form a belief as to the truth of any allegations pertaining to him, and consequently denies them. MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 13.

Factual Background

14. MS & Co. admits the allegations contained in Paragraph 14.

15. MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 15 pertain to publicly available information, and refers to such information for the truth or falsity of such allegations. To the extent that further response is required, MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 15 and consequently denies them.

16. MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 16 pertain to publicly available information, and refers to such information for the truth or falsity of such allegations. To the extent that further response is required, MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 16 and consequently denies them.

17. MS & Co. admits, on information and belief, that Albert Dunlap was hired as Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer on or about July 18, 1996. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 17 and consequently denies them.

18. MS & Co. admits, on information and belief, that Russell Kersh was hired as Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 18 and consequently denies them.

19. MS & Co. admits, on information and belief, that Albert Dunlap and members of his senior management team entered into employment agreements with Sunbeam. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 19 and consequently denies them.

20. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 20 and consequently denies them.

21. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 21 and consequently denies them.

22. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 22 and consequently denies them.

23. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 23 and consequently denies them.

24. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 24 and consequently denies them.

25. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 25 and consequently denies them.

27. MS & Co. admits, on information and belief, that Sunbeam reported a loss of $18.1 million in the third quarter of 1996, and that it had a $34.5 million gain in the third quarter 1997. MS & Co. further admits, on information and belief, that Sunbeam reported an increase in profits from $6.5 million in 1996 to $67.7 million in 1997. MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 27 regarding stock prices pertain to publicly available information and MS & Co. refers to such information for the truth or falsity of such allegations. To the extent that further response is required, MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 27 and consequently denies them.

28. MS & Co. admits that it was engaged by Sunbeam to explore a possible sale of Sunbeam's core business and/or the initiation of one or more acquisitions. MS & Co. denies that it ever served as Dunlap's "shell." MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 28 and consequently denies them.

29. MS & Co. admits that William Strong and other MS & Co. employees met with Sunbeam in the spring of 1997 to discuss Sunbeam's investment banking requirements. Further, MS & Co. admits that, although it was not engaged in a previous relationship with Sunbeam,

William Strong had worked with Dunlap before, during Strong's previous employment with Salomon Brothers. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 29 and consequently denies them.

30. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 30 and consequently denies them.

31. MS & Co. admits that William Strong and other MS & Co. employees met with Sunbeam in the spring of 1997 to discuss Sunbeam's investment banking requirements. MS & Co. admits that it was engaged by Sunbeam to explore a possible sale of Sunbeam's core business and/or the initiation of one or more acquisitions. MS & Co. admits that it initially sought a buyer for Sunbeam. To the extent this Paragraph alleges that MS & Co. was motivated to participate in a fraud in order to retain a single client and receive a customary fee, that allegation is foreclosed, among other reasons, by the fact that MS & Co.'s own affiliate lent hundreds of millions of dollars to Sunbeam two days after the Coleman acquisition closed. (June 1998 Credit Facilities Mem. (Ex. 2).) MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 31.

32. MS & Co. admits that it searched for a buyer for Sunbeam. MS & Co. further admits that it assembled marketing materials based on financial documentation and audited financial statements provided to MS & Co. by Sunbeam and Arthur Andersen, for use in meetings with potential acquirers. MS & Co. admits that, despite contacting many companies, it was unable to find a buyer for Sunbeam. MS & Co. specifically denies CPH's allegation that MS & Co. knew that it would not be compensated if "it failed to deliver a major transaction," or that "Davis and Chase were standing by . . . to reclaim their position as Dunlap's investment banker of choice." MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 32.

33. MS & Co. denies that it provided the "solution" to any "problem" alleged in Paragraph 33. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 33 and consequently denies them.

34. MS & Co. admits after its unsuccessful attempts to locate a purchaser for Sunbeam, it suggested that Sunbeam acquire one or more other companies instead. MS & Co. admits that it proposed to Sunbeam, among other options, the possibility of paying for any such acquisition in part with Sunbeam's stock. MS & Co. specifically denies any knowledge to the effect that a "failure to find a buyer for Sunbeam could prove fatal to [their] relationship." MS & Co. further denies any involvement in or knowledge of fraudulently inflated Sunbeam stock or concealment of any fraud at Sunbeam. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 34 and consequently denies them.

35. MS & Co. admits that, beginning in mid-1997, MS & Co. served as an investment banker for Sunbeam. MS & Co. admits that it attempted to identify a party interested in purchasing Sunbeam, and that those efforts were ultimately unsuccessful. MS & Co. admits that it recommended that Sunbeam's management consider, among other options, acquiring other companies instead and suggested, as is common in corporate mergers and acquisitions, that Sunbeam consider using Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration for such an acquisition. MS & Co. denies that it developed "acquisition strategies" for Sunbeam or that the services or potential transactions it discussed with Sunbeam's management were deceptive or in any way designed to facilitate fraud. MS & Co. specifically denies that it in any way knew of or knowingly assisted Dunlap to "camouflage Sunbeam's results" thereby making it "difficult to detect any shortfall in Sunbeam's performance," or that it knew of or assisted Dunlap in taking "new massive restructuring charges," which thereby created increased "cookie jar reserves." MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 35.

36. MS & Co. admits that, in its capacity as advisor to Sunbeam, it identified Coleman as a potential acquisition candidate. MS & Co. admits that it communicated with representatives of Coleman to discuss a potential acquisition, but denies that it "persuade[d] CPH to sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam." MS & Co. admits that CPH represented, in negotiations with Sunbeam, that it owned, directly or indirectly, approximately 82% of Coleman prior to March 30, 1998. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 36.

37. MS & Co. admits that it facilitated a meeting between representatives from Sunbeam and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO") in December 1997. MS & Co. admits that it prepared Sunbeam's representatives for that meeting. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 37 and consequently denies them.

38. MS & Co. admits that discussions between Sunbeam, MAFCO and CPH resumed in early 1998. MS & Co. further admits that its Managing Directors James Stynes and Robert Kitts worked on MS & Co.'s engagement for Sunbeam. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 38 and consequently denies them.

39. MS & Co. denies that it "persuade[d]" CPH to sell Coleman in exchange for Sunbeam stock. MS & Co. denies that it "prepared" financial information for CPH. There is, in any event, no factual allegation contained in Paragraph 39 or elsewhere that identifies such alleged information at all, let alone with particularity. MS & Co. further denies that it knowingly "provided" CPH with false financial and business information, or otherwise knowingly relayed false information to CPH which created an appearance that "Sunbeam was prospering and that Sunbeam's stock had great value." Specifically, MS & Co. denies that it knowingly provided CPH with false 1996 and 1997 sales and revenue figures or with false projections. MS & Co. denies that it "falsely assured CPH that Sunbeam's 'early buy' sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues," that "Sunbeam would meet or exceed" first quarter 1998 estimates, that 1998 earnings estimates were accurate, that a plan to earn $2.20/share was attainable or even low, or that it "specifically advised CPH that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were 'tracking fine' and running ahead of analysts' estimates."

In any event CPH could not have relied on such alleged representations in light of (i) the Merger Agreement's representations and warranties (Merger Agmt. §§ 5.1-5.4), none of which refer to any alleged representation contained in this Paragraph, (ii) the representations and warranties in a separate agreement that was executed by Coleman and Sunbeam (Feb. 27, 1998 Company Merger Agmt. § 5.1-5.12 (Ex. 3)), which are expressly incorporated into the Merger Agreement and none of which refer to any alleged representation contained in this Paragraph, and (iii) the Merger Agreement's broad integration clause which forecloses reliance on any alleged representation contained in this Paragraph (Merger Agmt. § 12.5). MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 39 and consequently denies them.

40. MS & Co. admits that CPH agreed to sell its shares in Coleman to Sunbeam, and that CPH agreed to accept Sunbeam stock as partial payment for the sale, but denies that MS & Co. "persuaded" CPH to make the deal. CPH is a sophisticated party and was represented by its own expert advisors and attorneys. (Id. §§ 1.1; 4.11.) CPH and its advisors also enjoyed full access to Sunbeam's "books, records, properties, plants and personnel." (Id. § 6.7.) CPH also expressly disclaimed reliance on statements allegedly made during negotiations. (Id. § 12.5.) MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 40 regarding stock value pertain to publicly available information, and refers to such information for the truth or falsity of such allegations. To the extent that further response is required, MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 40 and consequently denies them.

41. MS & Co. admits that on February 27, 1998, Sunbeam's Board of Directors met at Morgan Stanley's New York offices to discuss Sunbeam's possible purchase of Coleman. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 41.

42. MS & Co. admits it made a presentation during the February 27, 1998 Sunbeam Board of Directors Meeting. MS & Co. further admits that MS & Co. representatives, including William Strong, Robert Kitts, James Stynes and Ruth Porat, were present at this meeting. MS &

Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 42 and consequently denies them.

43. MS & Co. admits that at that February 27, 1998 New York meeting, it provided Sunbeam with a written "fairness opinion" regarding the fair acquisition price of Coleman. This opinion was based on financial information provided to MS & Co. by Sunbeam, Coleman, and Arthur Andersen, and on synergy analyses which MS & Co. received from CPH. The written fairness opinion explicitly stated that MS & Co. "[has] not made any independent valuation or appraisal of the assets or liabilities of [Sunbeam]." (Feb. 27, 1998 Fairness Op. at 3 (Ex. 4).) MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 43.

44. MS & Co. admits that the Sunbeam Board of Directors approved the Coleman acquisition at the February 27, 1998 meeting in New York. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 44 and consequently denies them.

45. MS & Co. admits that it continued to provide investment banking services to Sunbeam after the Coleman acquisition was approved. MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 45.

46. MS & Co. admits that the Coleman acquisition was announced on March 2, 1998. MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 46 regarding stock prices pertain to publicly available information, and refers to such information for the truth or falsity of such allegations. To the extent that further response is required, MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 46 and consequently denies them.

47. MS & Co. admits that it agreed to serve as underwriter for Sunbeam's subordinated debentures. The "cash portion" of the consideration set forth in the Merger Agreement was also financed in part through a $680 million loan made by Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, an affiliate of MS & Co. (See Credit Facilities Mem.) MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 47 and consequently denies them.

48. MS & Co. admits that the money raised from the sale of the debentures was used in part to finance Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman.

49. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 49 and consequently denies them.

50. MS & Co. admits that the convertible debentures were presented to potential investors at a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls. MS & Co. admits that it reviewed and commented on the offering memorandum and other materials used to present the debentures to potential investors. MS & Co. denies that it "misrepresented Sunbeam's financial performance" or "emphasized Dunlap's purported 'turnaround' accomplishments." To the contrary, the offering memorandum expressly stated that MS & Co. assumed no responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of Sunbeam's audited financial information and warned investors not to rely on any projections of future performance. (March 19, 1998 Note Offering Mem. at 2-3, 12-17, 72 (Ex. 5).) MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 50.

51. MS & Co. admits that it launched the debenture offering with a presentation to the Morgan Stanley sales force, but denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 51.

52. MS & Co. admits that the debenture offering was increased from $500 million to $750 million. MS & Co. admits that the debentures were offered to investors nationwide. MS & Co. denies any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 52.

53. MS & Co. admits that its employees traveled on one occasion to Sunbeam's Florida offices. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 53, except to the extent that they constitute legal conclusions to which no response is required.

54. MS & Co. admits that William Strong worked on MS & Co.'s engagement for Sunbeam. MS & Co. also admits that Strong has provided deposition testimony discussing conversations with Sunbeam officials. MS & Co. denies that Strong or any other MS & Co.

employee was accurately apprised of Sunbeam's financial condition because MS & Co. at all times relied on information provided by Sunbeam management and Arthur Andersen, including Sunbeam's audited financial statements. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 54 and consequently denies them.

55. MS & Co. denies CPH's allegation that it was "telling CPH and the investing public . . . that Sunbeam's turnaround was a success, that Sunbeam's sales for the first quarter of 1998 were ahead of expectations of outside analysts, and that Sunbeam was poised for record sales." Furthermore, any information communicated by MS & Co. was based on financial data and information provided to it by Sunbeam and Arthur Andersen — a fact that MS & Co. regularly publicized through disclaimer statements. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 55 and consequently denies them.

56. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 56.

57. MS & Co. admits that it received a facsimile schedule regarding Sunbeam's finances on or about March 18, 1998. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 57 and consequently denies them.

58. MS & Co. admits that on or about March 18, 1998, it received a faxed financial schedule which reflected that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were below those of January and February 1997. MS & Co. denies that it made assertions or otherwise disseminated information to CPH or others that it knew to be false. MS & Co. denies any knowledge of the fact that Sunbeam had not undergone a successful turnaround, or that Sunbeam's financial performance had not improved in the manner presented by Sunbeam's management and audited financial statements. MS & Co. admits that on March 18, 1998, it learned that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "soft." Sunbeam insisted that its sales would meet expectations, but MS & Co. insisted that Sunbeam issue a press release to warn the market of the softening sales.

Additionally, MS & Co. received two "comfort letters" from Sunbeam's auditors, Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. performed all of its obligations as an underwriter of Sunbeam securities. MS & Co. denies that it had any role in the accounting judgments described in the complaint, or any obligations to audit or independently examine Sunbeam's accounting records. MS & Co. denies that it owed any duties to CPH. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 58 and consequently denies them.

59. MS & Co. admits that on March 18, 1998, it learned that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "soft." Sunbeam insisted that its sales would meet expectations, but MS & Co. insisted that Sunbeam issue a press release to warn the market of the softening sales. Additionally, MS & Co. received two "comfort letters" from Sunbeam's auditors, Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. performed all of its obligations as an underwriter of Sunbeam securities. MS & Co. denies that it had any role in the accounting judgments described in the Complaint, or any obligations to audit or independently examine Sunbeam's accounting records. MS & Co. denies that it owed any duties to CPH. MS & Co. denies all remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 59.

60. MS & Co. admits that Sunbeam issued a press release on March 19, 1998 that included language selectively quoted in Paragraph 60. MS & Co. further states that the March 19, 1998 press release contained the following additional statement, omitted in the Complaint:

Cautionary Statements - Statements contained in this press release, including statements relating to the Company's expectations regarding anticipated performance in the future, are "forward looking statements," as such term is defined in the Private Securities Litigation Reform act of 1995. Actual results could differ materially from the Company's statements in this release regarding its expectations, goals or projected results, due to various factors, including those set forth in the Company's Cautionary Statements contains in its Annual Report on Form 10-K for its fiscal year ended December 31, 1997 filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

(March 19, 1998 Press Release (Ex. 6).)

61. MS & Co. admits that Sunbeam issued a press release on March 19, 1998 that included language selectively quoted in Paragraph 61. MS & Co. further states that the March 19, 1998 press release contained the following additional statement, omitted in the Complaint:

Cautionary Statements - Statements contained in this press release, including statements relating to the Company's expectations regarding anticipated performance in the future, are "forward looking statements," as such term is defined in the Private Securities Litigation Reform act of 1995. Actual results could differ materially from the Company's statements in this release regarding its expectations, goals or projected results, due to various factors, including those set forth in the Company's Cautionary Statements contains in its Annual Report on Form 10-K for its fiscal year ended December 31, 1997 filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

(Id.) MS & Co. denies all remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 61.

62. MS & Co. denies the allegation that it knew that the "shortfall from analysts' estimates was . . . caused by Sunbeam's acceleration of 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997." MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 62 and consequently denies them.

63. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 63.

64. MS & Co. specifically denies that it "knew that a full and truthful disclosure . . . would doom the debenture offering," or that it had any knowledge that the press release was untruthful or otherwise misleading. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 64.

65. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 65. To the extent that this Paragraph quotes the Merger Agreement, that document speaks for itself and contradicts the allegations contained in the Complaint.

66. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 66 and consequently denies them.

67. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 67.

68. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 68 and consequently denies them.

69. MS & Co. admits that it continued to serve as Sunbeam's investment banker, and continued to prepare to close the debenture offering and the acquisition of Coleman, but denies any knowledge as to the alleged falsity of the March 19, 1998 press release. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 69.

70. MS & Co. admits that throughout its service to Sunbeam, MS & Co. employees, including Tyree, spoke via telephone with representatives of Sunbeam. MS & Co. denies any knowledge that the press release was untruthful or otherwise misleading. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 70 and consequently denies them.

71. MS & Co. admits that it received "comfort letters" from Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. denies the allegation that it knew that "Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were going to miss Wall Street analysts' earning expectations." MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 71 and consequently denies them.

72. MS & Co. admits that it continued to prepare to close both the debenture offering and the acquisition of Coleman. MS & Co. denies any allegation of its "having directly participated in misleading CPH and other investors." MS & Co. responds that the allegation that MS & Co. "had a duty to disclose the true facts" to CPH is a legal conclusion to which no response is required. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 72.

73. MS & Co. admits that it received compensation for investment banking work performed by MS & Co. for Sunbeam. MS & Co. denies the allegation that it facilitated Sunbeam's fraud. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of any remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 73 and consequently denies them.

74. MS & Co. admits that on March 19, 1998, Sunbeam issued a press release which stated that "net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million." MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 74 and consequently denies them.

75. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 75 and consequently denies them.

76. MS & Co. admits that it advocated issuing a press release to warn the market of the softening sales, but denies that it represented that Sunbeam's sales would exceed analysts' projections. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 76.

77. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 77 and consequently denies them.

Count I – Fraudulent Misrepresentation

78. MS & Co. repeats and realleges its responses to Paragraphs 1 through 77 as if set forth herein.

79. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 79.

80. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 80.

81. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 81.

82. MS & Co. denies the allegation contained in Paragraph 82.

83. MS & Co. denies the allegation contained in Paragraph 83.

Count II – Aiding and Abetting Fraud

84. MS & Co. repeats and realleges its responses to Paragraphs 1 through 77 as if set forth herein.

85. MS & Co. lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in Paragraph 85 and consequently denies them.

86. MS & Co. denies the allegation contained in Paragraph 86.

87. MS & Co. admits that, beginning in mid-1997, MS & Co. served as an investment banker and underwriter for Sunbeam. MS & Co. admits that it attempted to identify a party interested in purchasing Sunbeam, and that those efforts were ultimately unsuccessful. MS & Co. admits that it recommended that Sunbeam's management consider acquiring other companies instead and suggested, as is common in corporate mergers and acquisitions, that Sunbeam consider using Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration for such an acquisition. MS & Co. denies that it had any knowledge as to the accuracy of the value of Sunbeam's stock, or that MS & Co. knew (or even suspected) that the value of Sunbeam's stock had been "fraudulently inflated."

MS & Co. admits that it facilitated communications between Sunbeam and Coleman, but denies that it in any way "persuaded" CPH to sell its interest in Coleman.

MS & Co. admits that on March 18, 1998, it learned that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "soft." Sunbeam insisted that its sales would meet expectations, but MS & Co. insisted that Sunbeam issue a press release to warn the market of the softening sales. Additionally, MS & Co. received two "comfort letters" from Sunbeam's auditors, Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. performed all of its obligations as an underwriter of Sunbeam securities.

MS & Co. admits that the convertible debentures were presented to potential investors at a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls. MS & Co. admits that it reviewed and commented on the offering memorandum and other materials used to present the debentures to potential investors. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 87.

88. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 88.

Count III -- Conspiracy

89. MS & Co. repeats and realleges its responses to Paragraphs 1 through 77 as if set forth herein.

90. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 90.

91. MS & Co. admits that it served as a financial advisor to Sunbeam and an underwriter of Sunbeam securities, but denies that it in any way committed "overt acts in furtherance of a conspiracy." MS & Co. denies that it performed an independent financial analysis of Sunbeam; to the contrary, MS & Co. informed CPH that it was relying solely on financial data and information provided to it by Sunbeam and Arthur Andersen. MS & Co. admits that it underwrote the $750 million convertible debenture offering. MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 91.

92. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 92.

Count IV -- Negligent Misrepresentation

93. MS & Co. repeats and realleges its responses to Paragraphs 1 through 77 as if set forth herein.

94. MS & Co. admits that it served as a financial advisor to Sunbeam and an underwriter of Sunbeam securities. MS & Co. responds that the allegations contained in Paragraph 94 constitute legal conclusions to which no response is required. Alternatively, MS & Co. denies the remaining allegations contained in Paragraph 94.

95. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 95.

96. MS & Co. denies the allegations contained in Paragraph 96.

AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

In addition to the foregoing responses, MS & Co. asserts the following affirmative defenses to the claims stated in CPH's Complaint. MS & Co. does not assume the burden of proof on these defenses where the substantive law provides otherwise.

First Affirmative Defense

CPH's claims must be dismissed on forum non conveniens grounds pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061(a).

Second Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Third Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the doctrine of laches.

Fourth Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the doctrine of estoppel.

Fifth Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the doctrine of waiver.

Sixth Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the doctrine of unclean hands.

Seventh Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, by plaintiff's failure to mitigate its damages.

Eighth Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred because CPH has experienced no damages, and any claimed loss is speculative and/or was avoidable.

Ninth Affirmative Defense

CPH's alleged claims are barred, in whole or in part, because the claimed injuries were not proximately caused by any acts or omissions of MS & Co.

Tenth Affirmative Defense

To the extent CPH's fraud-claim relies on non-disclosure, that claim is barred, in whole or in part, because MS & Co. was under no duty to disclose.

Eleventh Affirmative Defense

CPH's claims are barred, in whole or in part, because of MS & Co.'s repeated disclaimers of reliance.

Twelfth Affirmative Defense

Any future claim by CPH for punitive damages is barred, in whole or in part, because (i) the allegedly tortious conduct is not gross, wanton, willful, or otherwise morally culpable; and (ii) the alleged conduct was not part of a pattern directed at the public generally.

WHEREFORE, MS & Co. denies that CPH is entitled to any relief whatsoever, and to the extent that CPH should recover any damage award, that award should be offset by CPH's failure to take appropriate steps to mitigate its damages. MS & Co. respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment for MS & Co. dismissing the complaint with prejudice, award MS & Co. its attorneys' fees, costs and expenses, and grant such other and further relief as may be just and proper.

DECLARATION OF JAMES F. DOYLE

1. I am James F. Doyle. I am employed as an Executive Director in the Law Division of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"). In that capacity, I have personal knowledge of the matters set forth herein.

2. On information and belief, Morgan Stanley produced restored e-mail documents in the above-captioned matter on May 14, 2004.

3. At the end of October 2004, I learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley's May 14, 2004 e-mail production. Upon learning that information, I directed that the electronic searches described in the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order be conducted for any backup tapes that had been restored and made searchable at that point, and that the process of restoring the remaining backup tapes continue as expeditiously as possible.

UNDER PENALTY OF PERJURY, I HEREBY DECLARE THAT THE FOREGOING

CASE NO: CA 03-5045 AI

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY'S OPPOSITION TO CPH'S MOTION
FOR ADVERSE INFERENCE INSTRUCTION DUE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S DESTRUCTION OF E-MAILS AND MORGAN STANLEY'S
NONCOMPLIANCE WITH THE COURT'S APRIL 16, 2004 AGREED ORDER

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") motion is factually baseless and squarely contrary to settled law. CPH's conclusory allegations that Morgan Stanley destroyed e-mails relating to Sunbeam are not supported by any evidence, and its allegations that Morgan Stanley failed to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order are contradicted by the written record. Morgan Stanley has spent enormous sums to locate, restore, and produce Sunbeam-related e-mails to CPH in this litigation, as evidenced by its production of more than 9,000 pages of e-mail messages responsive to CPH's requests. Moreover, Morgan Stanley did exactly what it was supposed to do when it learned that some backup tapes had not been searched: it promptly notified CPH, began restoring the additional tapes and searching the discovered data, and produced additional responsive e-mails to CPH.

CPH's motion also runs afoul of Florida law. Florida courts have repeatedly held that the instruction sought by CPH improperly "invades the province of the jury" and constitutes reversible error where, as here, the party seeking the instruction (1) has not established the existence of any "missing" evidence; (2) has not established that the missing evidence is “essential” to its prima facie case; and (3) has not established that the evidence is missing due to an intentional or deliberate act of the opposing party. CPH has not (and cannot) establish any one of these requirements, and its motion must therefore be denied.

FACTS

1. This lawsuit arises from Sunbeam’s acquisition of The Coleman Company. The acquisition was negotiated in late 1997 and early 1998 and closed on March 30, 1998. CPH filed this lawsuit against Morgan Stanley in May 2003, more than five years after the relevant events.

2. On April 16, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order governing the search and production of Morgan Stanley e-mail messages restored from e-mail backup tapes. (Apr. 16, 2004 Agreed Order on CPH’s Motion to Compel Concerning E-mails & Other Elec. Docs. (“Agreed Order”).) The Agreed Order was necessary because due to the passage of time and technical limitations, Morgan Stanley only was able to reliably restore electronic documents on backup tapes created after January 2000. Nevertheless, pursuant to the Agreed Order, Morgan Stanley agreed that it would undertake an electronic search of data from the oldest available backup tapes for certain employees’ e-mail accounts, using certain agreed-upon keywords. (Id. ¶ 2.)

3. Morgan Stanley produced e-mails pursuant to the Agreed Order on May 14, 2004. Morgan Stanley’s May 14, 2004 production consisted of more than 1300 pages of responsive e-mails. (May 14, 2004 Letter from K. DeBord to M. Brody (Ex. 1).)

4. At the end of October 2004, James F. Doyle, the attorney at Morgan Stanley who directed Morgan Stanley’s prior search for e-mail messages, learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to the May 14, 2004 e-mail production. (J. Doyle Decl. ¶ 3 (Ex. 2)). Mr. Doyle directed that the electronic searches described in the Agreed Order be conducted for any backup tapes that had been restored and made searchable at that point. (Id.) Mr. Doyle further directed that the process of restoring the remaining backup tapes continue as expeditiously as possible. (Id.)

5. In early November 2004, Morgan Stanley's Information Technology Department conducted electronic searches on all e-mail data that had been restored and made searchable since May 14, 2004. (G. Jonas Decl. ¶ 2 (Ex. 3).) The results of those searches were provided to Morgan Stanley's outside counsel in mid-November. (Id.)

6. On November 15, 2004, Morgan Stanley's outside counsel first determined that the data generated by the new searches included e-mail messages responsive to CPH's discovery requests. (T. Clare Decl. ¶ 2 (Ex. 4).) Two days later, on November 17, 2004, counsel for Morgan Stanley wrote to CPH and informed it that: (1) additional e-mail backup tapes had been discovered; (2) additional responsive e-mails had been identified; and (3) e-mail backup tapes were still being restored. (Nov. 17, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody (Ex. 5).)

7. On November 18, 2004, Morgan Stanley produced all responsive e-mails located on the backup tapes that had been restored and made searchable at that point. (Nov. 18, 2004 Letter from M. Occhuzzo to M. Brody (Ex. 6).) Morgan Stanley's November 18, 2004 production consisted of over 8,000 pages of e-mail messages.

8. Since November 2004, Morgan Stanley has worked continuously and diligently to migrate the data from the remaining backup tapes onto a searchable database. (A. Nachtigal Decl. ¶ 2 (Ex. 7).) The restoration of these tapes is still underway, but Morgan Stanley is proceeding with the restoration of the remaining tapes as quickly and accurately as possible. (Id.)

9. The restoration of the remaining backup tapes has been one of Morgan Stanley's priorities since November 2004. (Id.) However, given the technical limitations and other difficulties associated with restoring e-mail backup tapes, Morgan Stanley's Information Technology staff is unable to estimate with certainty when the data from all of the remaining backup tapes will be restored. (Id. ¶ 3.)

10. To ensure continued compliance with the Agreed Order, Morgan Stanley intends, in parallel with finalizing the restoration of the remaining tapes, to run the electronic searches described in the Agreed Order periodically as the restored data becomes available in searchable form. This process will allow Morgan Stanley to provide the results of those searches to outside counsel on a rolling basis and determine, as expeditiously as possible, whether any additional responsive e-mails exist. (Id. ¶ 4.) Morgan Stanley's technical staff estimates that the results of these searches will begin to be available on or about February 7, 2005. (Id.) Until these searches have been conducted and the resulting data reviewed by counsel, there is no way to determine whether there are any additional materials responsive to the Agreed Order. (Id. ¶ 5.)

ARGUMENT

I. THE LEGAL STANDARD

It is well-established in Florida that, except in "limited" situations not applicable here, an adverse inference instruction "invades the province of the jury" and constitutes reversible error. See Jordan ex rel. Shealey v. Masters, 821 So. 2d 342, 346-47 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (discussing the "limited function of the presumption"). Indeed, virtually every case cited in CPH's motion rejects the propriety of adverse inference instructions and reverses judgments entered in trials where such instructions were given. See Palmas Y. Bambu v. E.I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., 881 So. 2d 565, 580 (Fla. 3d DCA 2004) (adverse inference instruction "invaded the province of the jury and constitute[d] reversible error"); Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 348 (reversing in part on an adverse inference jury instruction which “constituted a comment on the evidence by the trial court and approval for the jury to conclude that all of that evidence would be unfavorable”); Martino v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 835 So. 2d 1251, 1257 n.2 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (conclusion that jury instruction concerning the adverse inference created by Wal-Mart’s failure to produce a shopping cart and security videotape “is not appropriate”).¹ Other Florida cases reach the same conclusion. See, e.g., Southern Pine Co. v. Powell, 37 So. 570 (Fla. 1904) (concluding that a jury instruction on the facts constituted error sufficient to warrant reversal); Bessett v. Hackett, 66 So. 2d 694, 701 (Fla. 1953) (“The rule is that the court’s instructions to the jury must not assume the truth of facts which are controverted, or impose upon either party a duty not shown by the evidence to exist.”).

The only exception to the general rule prohibiting adverse inference instructions was established (and carefully circumscribed) in Public Health Trust of Dade County v. Valcin, 507 So. 2d 596 (Fla. 1987). In Valcin, the Florida Supreme Court approved the adoption of a rebuttable presumption of negligence in a medical malpractice case where the operative notes were either missing or inadequate due to the negligence of the hospital or doctors. Id. at 599-600. The Florida Supreme Court stressed the “limited” function of an adverse inference instruction, and expressly limited such instructions to situations in which the plaintiff establishes

"to the satisfaction of the court that the absence of the records hinders his ability to establish a prima facie case." Id. at 599.

Jordan ex rel. Shelly v. Masters establishes the rigorous showing that must be made by a party seeking an adverse inference instruction in the Fourth District. First, the party seeking an adverse inference instruction must establish that "the allegedly missing evidence should have or did exist." Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 347. Then, the Court must determine whether the missing evidence "hindered the plaintiff's ability to proceed." Id. To satisfy this requirement, the Fourth District held, "Valcin requires that the missing evidence be essential to the opposing party's prima facie case." Id. (emphasis added).² The trial court must make both of these findings before giving an adverse inference instruction. Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 347 (reversing judgment where "the trial court . . . should have determined both issues before giving Jordan's adverse inference instruction, but it determined neither") (emphasis in original).

Similarly, the law is clear that an adverse inference jury instruction is not permitted where the only allegation is a failure to produce evidence. See id. at 346 ("We have found no case approving an instruction for an adverse inference to be drawn from the failure to produce evidence."); Palmas Y. Bambu, 881 So. 2d at 581 ("Like the Fourth District, we have been unable to locate any Florida decision approving an instruction for an adverse inference to be drawn from the failure to produce nonessential evidence.").

Finally, it is improper — and risks reversible error — to allow one party to argue to the jury an inference of misconduct, where that party has not (and cannot) show that the opposing party engaged in a pattern of discovery misconduct, committed fraud on the Court, or willfully defied a court order. Indeed, one of the primary cases cited by CPH recognizes that “[e]vidence related to the history of pretrial discovery conduct should normally not be a matter submitted for the jury’s consideration on the issues of liability.” Amlan, Inc., 651 So. 2d at 703 (citing Emerson Elec. Co. v. Garcia, 623 So. 2d 523, 525 (Fla. 3d DCA 1993)).

II. CPH HAS NOT OFFERED ANY EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT ITS CLAIMS.

CPH has had ample opportunity to develop evidence, if any existed, in support of its motion. On September 9, 2003, CPH deposed a Morgan Stanley corporate representative, John Plotnick, to address topics related to Morgan Stanley’s document collection efforts in this case, and its document retention policies for hard copy and electronic documents.³ In addition, on February 10, 2004, CPH deposed a Morgan Stanley corporate representative, Robert Saunders, regarding Morgan Stanley’s e-mail retention policies and its ability to restore e-mail. CPH also deposed numerous fact witness regarding e-mail messages. Despite these extensive discovery efforts, CPH has not offered a any evidence to support its required showing that (1) additional Sunbeam-related e-mails existed; (2) Sunbeam-related e-mails were destroyed; and (3) the “missing” Sunbeam-related e-mails are “essential” to its prima facie case.

³ CPH has cited Mr. Plotnick’s testimony for the proposition that Morgan Stanley did not retain e-mail messages from 1997 and 1998, when Morgan Stanley was not a party to any Sunbeam-related litigation. It is absurd for CPH to attempt to make an issue of Morgan Stanley’s retention of e-mail when, by its own admission, CPH has never enacted or enforced a written document retention policy to prevent destruction of relevant documents, including emails, by its employees. See Part III.

A. There Are No “Missing” E-Mails

CPH argues — without any evidentiary support whatsoever — that “Morgan Stanley destroyed most or all of its 1998 e-mails concerning Sunbeam.” (Jan. 26, 2005 CPH’s Mot. for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to MS Destruction of E-Mails and MS’s Noncompliance with the Court’s Apr. 16, 2004 Agreed Order at 2 (“Mot.”).) As “proof” of this allegation, CPH states that Morgan Stanley produced “only a small handful of e-mails in response to CPH’s document requests.” (Id.) But this is a gross mischaracterization of Morgan Stanley’s prior production. Morgan Stanley has produced more than 9,000 pages of e-mail. (See Facts ¶¶ 3, 7.) Virtually all of these e-mails “concern Sunbeam,” and many are from the relevant 1997 and 1998 time period.

CPH’s motion misleadingly describes, again without any evidentiary support, a “general destruction of e-mails in 1999” (Motion at 1) and refers, without any explanation, to a industry-wide 2002 settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) (Id. at 2). CPH juxtaposes these arguments in an attempt to create the false impression that the SEC fined Morgan Stanley for destroying e-mail messages. That is not the case. The SEC settlement, which was industry-wide, addressed only the failure of certain registered broker-dealers, including Morgan Stanley, to comply with regulatory requirements that require broker-dealers to preserve certain electronic communications for a three-year period, and to preserve those electronic communications for the first two years in a readily accessible place.⁴ Nothing in the SEC settlement supports a “general destruction of e-mails in 1999,” or any inference that any Sunbeam-related e-mails were ever destroyed.

Simply put, conclusory allegations are not enough. If CPH believes it has evidence that additional Sunbeam-related e-mails existed and were destroyed, it should have provided that evidence in its motion. Otherwise, its motion is deficient and must be denied. See Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 347 (finding reversible error where a negative inference instruction was given and the requesting party “failed to offer any evidence to support the existence of the videotape”). CPH has not offered any such evidence here, and its motion should be denied on this ground alone.

B. CPH Is Not Entitled To An Adverse Inference Instruction Based On Materials That Might Exist On The Tapes Still Being Restored

CPH argues that a negative inference is warranted because Morgan Stanley produced additional responsive e-mails in November 2004 and is still in the process of restoring and searching e-mail backup tapes that were not identified or searched as part of Morgan Stanley’s May 14, 2004 e-mail production. But Morgan Stanley did exactly what a responsible litigant is supposed to do when it discovers the existence of additional materials that are (or may be) responsive to an opposing party’s discovery requests or a court order. As set forth in detail above, Morgan Stanley’s in-house and outside counsel: (1) notified CPH that Morgan Stanley had discovered additional potentially responsive materials; (2) searched restored data for responsive emails; (3) produced responsive documents; and (4) took affirmative steps to continue the process of restoring the remaining tapes. (See Facts ¶¶ 6-8.) Clearly, no adverse inference instruction is warranted under these circumstances.

CPH next argues that an adverse inference instruction is warranted because responsive materials might exist on backup tapes that are still in the process of being restored. First, such an assertion is purely speculative. Until the data from those tapes is restored, searched, and received by counsel, there is no way to determine whether the additional tapes contain any responsive materials. (See Facts ¶ 10.) Second, even if the contents of the additional tapes were known, such allegations are insufficient, as a matter of Florida law, to entitle CPH to the instruction it seeks. See Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 346 (holding it was reversible error to give adverse inference instruction and noting that “[w]e have found no case approving an instruction for an adverse inference to be drawn from the failure to produce evidence”).

Morgan Stanley has worked hard and with great diligence to complete the restoration of the additional backup tapes located since its May 14, 2004 production, and it expects that data from those tapes will begin to be available for review. If and when additional responsive e-mails are located, Morgan Stanley will promptly produce them. But there is no basis — in fact or in law — for CPH to bootstrap the mere possibility that additional responsive e-mails exist into an entitlement to an adverse inference instruction.

C. CPH Has Not Offered Any Proof That “Missing” E-Mails Are “Essential” To Its Prima Facie Case.

“Valcin requires that the missing evidence be essential to the opposing party’s prima facie case.” Jordan, 821 So. 2d at 347. Here, CPH has offered no evidence whatsoever regarding the subject matter of the allegedly “missing” e-mails, no explanation how the allegedly “missing” e-mails might relate to the subject matter of this lawsuit, and no argument as to how such e-mails are “essential” to its ability to establish its prima facie case. These defects are fatal to CPH’s motion. See Palmas Y. Bambu, 881 So. 2d at 580-81 (finding reversible error where a negative inference instruction was given and the requesting party “has not demonstrated an inability to proceed without the [missing] evidence”); Bulkmatic Transport Co. v. Taylor, 860 So. 2d 436, 449 (Fla. 1st DCA 2003) (instruction improper where plaintiff’s ability to establish prima facie case is not hindered by the absence of evidence).

III. CPH'S OWN FAILURE TO RETAIN E-MAILS PRECLUDES THE ADVERSE INSTRUCTION IT NOW SEEKS.

It is absurd for CPH to attempt to make an issue of Morgan Stanley's retention of e-mail when, by its own admission, CPH has never enacted or enforced a written document retention policy to prevent destruction of relevant documents, including emails, by its employees and has maintained a policy of recycling its own e-mail backup tapes every month — even after it threatened Sunbeam with a lawsuit, even after its executives became named parties to litigation related to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, even after it sued Arthur Andersen, and even after the onset of litigation in the present case. (See Sept. 15, 2003 Fasman Dep. at 31, 49 (Ex. 8); MS 1 (Ex. 9).)

CONCLUSION

CPH's motion invites the Court to commit reversible error at a critical stage of the case. Morgan Stanley has produced thousands of e-mails, and it acted reasonably and expeditiously when additional potentially responsive materials were discovered. CPH failed to offer any evidence to support the existence of additional Sunbeam-related e-mails, the destruction of a single Sunbeam-related e-mail, or its inability to present a prima facie case without them. Accordingly, its motion should be denied.

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that an evidentiary hearing on Coleman (Parent)
Holdings Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order is specially set before the Honorable Elizabeth T. Maass on February
14, 2005, at 9:30 a.m., in Courtroom 11A, 205 N. Dixie Hwy, WPB, FL 33401. By 12 noon February 8, 2005, MS & Co. shall provide CPH with a list of the name, address, and business title of each person it intends to present as a witness at hearing on the Motion, together with a summary of his or her expected testimony. Those individuals shall appear in Palm Beach County for deposition on either February 9, February 10, or February 11,
2005, as noticed by CPH. By 12 noon February 8, 2005, MS & Co. shall produce to CPH
(i) all documents to be referred to or relied on by any of the witnesses in his or her testimony; and (ii) all documents within MS & Co.'s care, custody, or control addressing or related to the additional e-mail back up tapes, including matters relating to the time or manner in which they were discovered; by whom they were discovered; who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were to be restored and made searchable, including any correspondence to or from outside or prospective outside vendors. "Documents" as used herein shall refer to the standard definition used by

CPH in its requests for production of documents to MS & Co. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the attorneys/parties must submit to the Court two (2) days before the hearing:

1. copies of all relevant pleadings;
2. a copy of any memorandum of law; and
3. copies of all case law authority.

This hearing shall not be canceled unless the issues of this motion have been settled, and an order entered, or the motion withdrawn.

DONE AND ORDERED in West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida this 3rd day of February, 2005.

IN THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

vs.

CASE NO: CA 03-5045 AI

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY'S SUPPLEMENTAL OPPOSITION TO CPH'S MOTION FOR ADVERSE INFERENCE INSTRUCTION

INTRODUCTION

As ordered by the Court, Morgan Stanley now has processed and produced responsive emails from the additional tapes. Moreover, the testimony of witnesses deposed pursuant to the Court's Order shows that Morgan Stanley acted with good faith and diligence in searching for and processing data from these tapes.

I. CPH'S MOTION IS MOOT BECAUSE THE TAPES HAVE NOW BEEN PROCESSED AND THE RESPONSIVE E-MAILS HAVE NOW BEEN PRODUCED.

During the February 2, 2005 hearing on CPH's motion for an adverse inference instruction, this Court recognized that "it would be a mistake to impose evidentiary sanctions when if we wait two weeks we'll know whether there's any prejudice or not. I mean we've come this far. I'm not interested in doing that." (Ex. 1, 2/2/05 Tr. at 150). That is precisely the case.

Since the hearing on February 5th, Morgan Stanley has reviewed thousands of e-mails for privilege and responsiveness and has produced a total of 21 documents. (Ex. 2, T. Clare Aff. at ¶ 6) Out of these 21 documents, 10 are exact duplicates of documents previously produced to CPH. (Id. at ¶ 6(a)) One of the 21 documents contains the same text as an e-mail document Morgan Stanley previously produced to CPH but bears a different date. (Id. at ¶ 6(b)) Two of the 21 e-mails are duplicates of each other with the only difference that they contain a message that the e-mail was not delivered to one of the intended recipients. (Id. ¶ 6(c)) One of the 21 e-mails is a computer-generated e-mail message informing the recipient that Sunbeam made a public form 10-K/A filing. (Id. at ¶ 6(d)) And two more of the 21 documents are substantial duplicates of e-mails Morgan Stanley already produced to CPH with the only slight difference being the inclusion of a reply message. (Id. at ¶ 6(e))

As a result, Morgan Stanley produced only 8 documents that contain e-mail threads that were not produced, in whole or in substantial part, to CPH. (Id. at ¶ 7) And none of the e-mail threads in this production are dated between February 1998 and April 30, 1998. (Id. at ¶¶ 7-8)

II. THE EVIDENCE IS CLEAR THAT THE LAWYERS IN THIS LITIGATION WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR SPEEDING UP THE PROCESSING OF THE TAPES AT ISSUE

Affidavit of Counsel

Morgan Stanley has previously submitted an affidavit of James F. Doyle, the lawyer with responsibility for the Coleman case, attesting that it was only at the end of October, 2004, that he first “learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data insert on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley’s May 14, 2004 e-mail production.” (Ex. 3, Doyle Aff. at ¶ 3) He further states that “[u]pon learning that information, I directed that the electronic searches described in the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order be conducted for any backup tapes that had not been restored and made searchable at that point, and that the process of restoring the remaining backup tapes continue as expeditiously as possible.” (Doyle Aff. at ¶ 3) From this October discovery by Mr. Doyle, Morgan Stanley outside counsel reviewed the output of this work and produced the first batch of additional documents in November. The reason that the outside counsel and the in-house lawyer responsible for this case did not learn until October/November of a limited number of additional backup tapes is because of a series of missteps by a Morgan Stanley employee, issues that did not come to light until after he was placed on administrative leave in August 2004. The employee is Arthur Riel, who was the architect of Morgan Stanley's newly implemented optical disk e-mail archivel system. Unknown to Morgan Stanley, this employee took advantage of access to the emails of other employees. (Ex. 4, 02/09/05 A. Gorman Dep. at 13). His replacement, Ms. Allison Gorman, discovered a number of issues with Mr. Riel's work in connection with the email archiving project—problems which hampered her ability to more quickly process the emails into the archive system.

The Testimony of Allison Gorman – Replacement for the Employee Placed on Administrative Leave

As described by Ms. Gorman, Mr. Riel and his team were placed on administrative leave for taking advantage of access to people's emails without authorization. (Gorman Dep. at 12-13) She took over certain of his responsibilities in August of 2004 and brought in her own team. The result was a nearly complete turnover in the entire group responsible for setting up and using Morgan Stanley's archive system to review e-mails. (Gorman Dep. at 13-14) Mr. Riel's team designed the tools that allowed the archive system to be searched. (Gorman Dep. at 28) When Ms. Gorman's team took over the system in 2004, they were faced with lots of time sensitive and critical issues left from Mr. Riel's performance. (Gorman Dep. at 51) She discovered that the system was out of disk space, that the code which was written to allow searches to be run had technical issues, and the system was dangerously close to not capturing live content. (Gorman Dep. at 52) Throughout September and October,

Ms. Gorman and her team worked diligently to try to correct these issues. Ms. Gorman and her team were able to create “space” for additional archives in October 2004 with the purchase of new hardware which allowed them to store more data. (Gorman Dep. at 53) Allowing the system to run out of space was one of the problems that occurred under Mr. Riel. (Gorman Dep. at 58) In addition, Mr. Riel did not keep a proper development environment, such that when the new group took over they did not know where the source codes used to run the system were located. (Gorman Dep. at 58).

One of the issues facing Ms. Gorman was a large amount of data in the “staging area.” The “staging area” is a part of the e-mail archive system that is used after backup tapes are processed by a third-party vendor, National Data Conversion, Inc. (“NDCI”) The data returned from NDCI is stored in this “staging area” until the system is properly programmed to allow the new data to be migrated into the e-mail archive. Because of the numerous challenges she faced in just keeping the current system operating when she first came on the job, Ms. Gorman did not make the processing of data in the “staging area” a priority until after an October meeting with Morgan Stanley’s counsel. (Gorman Dep. at 64-65, 69-70) After her conversations with counsel, Ms. Gorman made it a priority to ensure that all data currently in the “staging area” would be migrated to the e-mail archive system as soon as possible. (Gorman Dep. at 66-67)

Among the data in the “staging area” at this time, were e-mails harvested from backup tapes in a security room in Brooklyn. (Gorman Dep. at 65-66) The total data in the staging area was approximately 600 gigabytes of data. (Gorman Dep. at 66-67) There would have been no way for Ms. Gorman to migrate this data from the “staging area” in August 2004 because of the instability and lack of space in the system at that time. (Gorman Dep. at 55) As noted above, Ms. Gorman and her team worked diligently in August, September and October to correct these issues.

Processing the data required the use of scripts, which are computer programming “that index the context on [Morgan Stanley’s] database” that assist in inserting the data into Morgan Stanley’s file system.¹ (Gorman Dep. at 39-40) The data in the “staging area” could not be completely migrated into the e-mail archive system because of problems with the “scripts” needed to complete the task. (Gorman Dep. at 67) Ms. Gorman’s predecessor had not properly documented where the “scripts” were located and they could not be found until November 2004 - - where they were found in a completely different directory than would be expected. (Gorman Dep. at 70-71) When Ms. Gorman’s team tested these “scripts,” they realized they did not process the data in the “staging area” correctly. (Gorman Dep. at 71) Ms. Gorman and her team did more testing on the scripts in December and by January had completely debugged the system by recoding the piece that was not working properly. On January 14, 2005, Ms. Gorman’s team started processing the data. (Gorman Dep. at 71)

Simply put, Ms. Gorman and her team worked diligently to correct the issues that they inherited from a previous team. Ms. Gorman was provided with all the resources she needed to complete the task. Processing e-mail into the e-mail archive system is a time-consuming and technical task. Indeed, it would take anyone doing the work two to three months to even get up to speed on the various technicalities inherent in the project. (Gorman Dep. at 71)

Mr. Riel's responsibilities included apprising legal staff of the existence of emails on back-up recovery tapes. But this was another of his failings. He learned of the existence of additional tapes in approximately May of 2004 and learned that they contained email in July 2004, but it was only after his departure, and replacement by Ms. Gorman that legal staff learned of the existence of additional backup tapes that needed to be migrated onto the e-mail archive system. (Doyle Aff. at ¶ 3; Gorman Dep. at 69-70) After learning that there was additional data that needed to be migrated into the e-mail archive system, Morgan Stanley's in-house legal staff made sure that the IT staff understood that this task needed to be completed accurately and as soon as practicable. (Doyle Aff. at ¶ 3.)

III. ALTHOUGH MORGAN STANLEY'S INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY DEPARTMENT EXPERIENCED SOME SET-BACKS IN ITS ATTEMPT TO COMPREHENSIVELY IDENTIFY, AND RETRIEVE BACKUP E-MAILS FROM BEFORE 2003, THE EVIDENCE SHOWS IT SUCCESSFULLY IMPLEMENTATED A NEW AND IMPROVED MIGRATION SYSTEM

Development of the Email Archive System

On April 16, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order governing the search and production of Morgan Stanley e-mail messages restored from e-mail backup tapes. The Agreed Order was necessary because due to the passage of time and technical limitations, Morgan Stanley only was able to reliably restore electronic documents on backup tapes created after January 2000. Nevertheless, pursuant to the Agreed Order, Morgan Stanley agreed that it would undertake an electronic search of data from the oldest available backup tapes for certain employees' e-mail accounts, using certain agreed-upon keywords.

Before this Agreed Order, Morgan Stanley, for reasons unrelated to this particular litigation, had set in motion a process by which it could more efficiently and quickly restore and review these older backup tapes -- those from before January 1, 2003. Discussed more fully below, these efforts coincided with the requirements outlined in the Agreed Order.

As background, beginning in the 2001 and 2002 timeframe, Morgan Stanley frequently received "ad hoc requests" to search its backup tapes for e-mail responsive to various and sundry litigation and regulatory matters. (Ex. 5, 02/10/05 Saunders Dep. at 11, 48) In response to these requests, Morgan Stanley used its in-house resources to retrieve e-mails from backup tapes that it believed captured data relevant to the particular litigation or regulatory matter at issue. The result, however, was that the Company was often unsuccessful in retrieving significant data, often reinvented the wheel -- searching time and again the same backup tapes on an individual basis -- and often did so at a pace perceived by the Company to be too slow to satisfy its legal and regulatory obligations. (Saunders Dep. at 48)

As a result of these inefficiencies, the company implemented what it believed at the time were two improvements to the retrieval and review process. First, Morgan Stanley contracted with an outside vendor, NDCI, to extract from raw backup tapes (known as "DLT Legato tapes") relevant information and place that information on a SDLT tape. NDCI would then return those tapes to Morgan Stanley's back-up and restore group ("BURP"), which would arrange to load the SDLTs onto a disk and into a staging area where Arthur Riel's group would take over and further process the tapes. Morgan Stanley implemented this process because it believed it would allow it to "more expeditiously provid[e] search capability of e-mail prior to 2003 for litigations or for regulatory requests.” (Saunders Dep. at 11, 17)² This e-mail restoration project is what is referred to as the “migration process.” (Saunders Dep. at 6-8)

The second improvement related to the uploading and review of those tapes. As noted earlier, Arthur Riel, on behalf of the company, had designed a program that Morgan Stanley at the time believed would allow the Company to upload information into a searchable archive system where, with search terms, Morgan Stanley could locate potentially relevant e-mails housed anywhere in the ENTIRE e-mail backup collection. (Saunders Dep. at 11 (noting the benefits of a “comprehensive” process)) No longer would individual tapes have to be searched; instead, ALL e-mails collected in Morgan Stanley backup tapes would be housed in an archived and searchable database.

The Migration Process From December 2003 to May 2004

The migration process for these DLT Legato tapes began in approximately December, 2003. (Saunders Dep. at 10) Morgan Stanley monitored this process through a group dubbed the E-mail Archive group, comprised of representatives from BURP, Arthur Riel’s group and NDCI. For a period of time, the group met almost every week to review and record its own progress. (Saunders Dep. at 16; Ex. 6, 02/10/05 Seickel Dep. at 88-89.)

The process began with the BURP group. It brought back backup tapes being housed at Recall, its outside storage vendor, and forwarded those tapes to its e-mail retrieval vendor, NDCI. At the beginning of the process, Morgan Stanley had approximately 35,000 backup tapes at Recall, which it endeavored to bring back and forward to NDCI. The backup

² Morgan Stanley has identified both Glenn Seickel, the operational manager of BURP, and his boss, Robert Saunders, as individuals with knowledge about this process. Both have been deposed.

tapes were at Recall because Morgan Stanley had sent them there over the course of the past several years as part of its standard backup business practices. (Saunders Dep. at 34.) At the time, Morgan Stanley believed that the 35,000 tapes represented the complete universe of Morgan Stanley backup tapes. (Saunders Dep. at 35.)

With the approximately 35,000 tapes in hand, NDCI worked on retrieving and deduping e-mail data from the tapes during the early months of 2004. Although this process was fraught with problems (broken tapes, read errors, etc.), NDCI was able to report by May 6, 2004, that it had finished processing 32,832 of 35,000 tapes, resulting in the restoration of 114 SDLTs. (MS 0112286, attached as Ex. 7) As Robert Saunders noted, by the summer of 2004, the “project had been moving along . . . at a run rate capacity.” (Saunders Dep. at 16.) And NDCI’s performance had been “timely” and “very satisfactory.” (Saunders Dep. at 89) Pursuant to the Morgan Stanley protocol, these tapes were then placed in a staging area where Arthur Riel’s group was tasked with the responsibility of uploading the data into the new optical disc e-mail archive system for review.

The Brooklyn Tapes

Although Morgan Stanley believed during this early phase of the restoration process that it had identified all the backup tapes that needed to be converted (i.e., those that had, over time, been sent to Morgan Stanley’s Recall off-site facility), on or around May 6, 2004, over a thousand additional unlabeled DLT tapes were found in a security room in Brooklyn. (Saunders Dep. at 33-34.) According to Glenn Seickel, a facilities worker at the security room alerted John Pamula, a member of the E-Mail Archive group, that tapes had been found and needed to be moved. Pamula then notified Mr. Seickel. (Seickel Dep. at 37) Being unlabeled, it was unclear how old these tapes were, whether the tapes contained e-mails, and whether those emails were recoverable. The tapes were found in a bin in a cage in a locked room. (Seickel Dep. at 43.) After this discovery, the BURP group did a sweep and physically looked for any additional tapes that may have been missed or misplaced. (Saunders Dep. at 32, 37-38; Seickel Dep. at 44.) They found none.

Having found these "Brooklyn" tapes, Morgan Stanley tasked John Pamula, a contract employee from Siemens, to ship them to NDCI for processing. (Ex. 8, May 20, 2004 Minutes; 0112291) By June 18, 2004, the minutes to the E-mail archive group meeting reflect that these additional tapes (determined to number 1423 DLTs) had, in fact, been shipped to NDCI for processing. (Ex. 9, June 18, 2004 Minutes, 0112296) It is not clear when NDCI finished restoring and converting these tapes to SDLTs, but a mid-summer e-mail from NDCI's Bruce Buchanan to Arthur Riel suggests that by July 2, 2004, NDCI had restored at least some of the tapes and determined that 90 of those found in Brooklyn contained e-mails. Of the 90, Buchanan was able to determine dates for four of those tapes, three of the four falling in the May or August, 1999 timeframe, and one in 2001. (Ex. 10; MS 0112327) By July 2, 2004, NDCI had not yet identified any tapes with e-mails dated from February 15th to April 15th, 1998 -- the relevant timeframe identified in this Court's April Order.

By July 16, 2004, NDCI reported that it had identified an additional 22 tapes that contained e-mails data, bringing the total tally to 112 DLTs that contained e-mail data (Ex. 11, MS 0112889) The processed data from these tapes were in the staging area when Arthur Riel ^{placed on administrative leave} was ~~dismissed for integrity issues~~ in August 2004. (Gorman Dep. at 66-67)

The 8 mm Tapes

In addition to the Brooklyn tapes, there were also 738 8 mm tapes that were not uploaded into the e-mail archive system until ~~the Fall~~ ^{February} of 2004. Like the Brooklyn tapes, these tapes were placed at the end of the NDCI processing queue, and their processing progress was tracked during each of the E-mail archive meetings. (See, e.g., Ex. 12, MS 0112286, 0112291, 0112296, 0112301, 0112306, 0112311, 0112312, 0112313, 0112314) As Allison Gorman noted, once the script problems with the archival system were resolved, these tapes were promptly reviewed and any responsive documents produced.

¹⁶⁹ The 168 Tapes Found at Recall

In November or December, 2004, Glenn Seickel and John Pamula came to believe that there might be some backup tape containers at Recall that had not yet been processed by NDCI. (Seickel Dep. at 64-66) They learned this after identifying some discrepancies between boxes retrieved from Recall and those on the Recall Inventory List. (Id.) Legal counsel was alerted within no more than two days. (Seickel Dep. at 65) By ~~and January~~ ^{February}, NDCI had processed the tapes found within these misplaced boxes and returned them to Morgan Stanley for uploading and archival review. (Seickel Dep. at 74).

CONCLUSION

The Morgan Stanley E-mail Restoration And Review Process was a major undertaking, and has been a success. It has resulted in the production of thousands of pages of email messages in this litigation. The fact that the tapes found in the Brooklyn security room, the 8 millimeter tapes, and the tapes at Recall yielded virtually nothing is testament that Morgan Stanley was right in its prioritization, organization and processing of tapes as a part of the comprehensive E-mail Restoration and Review Process. Moreover, rather than delaying the processing of tapes potentially relevant to this case, the Morgan Stanley lawyers actually sped up the processing of those tapes. Accordingly, Plaintiff's motion should be dismissed as moot and without merit.

 3 THE COURT: Good morning, have a seat.
 4 Now, do we have new folks here who need to 5 be introduced or not?
 6 MR. SCAROLA: We do, Your Honor. Let me
 7 introduce Mr. Bob Byman, who will be helping us
 8 with the first matter on Your Honor's calendar.
 9 Mr. Byman is with Jenner & Block.
 10 MR. BYMAN: Good morning, Your Honor, I
 11 didn't know I would be shanghaied here, so I
 12 only brought a sport coats.
 13 THE COURT: I wouldn't have noticed.
 14 MR. DAVIDSON: Jeff Davidson from Morgan
 15 Stanley. And I have with me my partners Mike
 16 Jones and Tony Klapper.
 17 THE COURT: Great. And I appreciate your 18 name tags.
 19 Do we want to start with the hearing we had 20 set first up?
 21 MR. DAVIDSON: Yes, Your Honor.
 22 MR. SCAROLA: The e-mail matter.
 23 THE COURT: Did you all want to give any
 24 preliminary statement or begin with testimony?
 25 MR. DAVIDSON: Your Honor, if I might, for 25:1 everything.

2 THE COURT: Sure.

3 THEREUPON,

4 ALLISON GORMAN NACHTIGAL

5 having been first duly sworn, was examined and

6 testified as follows:

7 THE COURT: Raise your right hand.

8 Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole

9 truth and nothing but the truth?

10 THE WITNESS: I do.

11 THE COURT: Mr. Scarola, I'll take yours.

12 DIRECT EXAMINATION

13 BY MR. JONES:

14 Q. Good morning. Would you please state your

15 name for the record?

16 A. Allison Gorman Nachtigal.

17 THE COURT: What was your last name?

18 THE WITNESS: Nachtigal, N-A-C-H-T-I-G-A-L.

19 BY MR. JONES:

20 Q. Do you from time to time also use the last

21 name Gorman?

22 A. Yes. Professionally I just use Gorman.

23 Q. Just so there's no discrepancy this morning

24 when I was discussing this issue with the Court I was 25 referring to you as Ms. Gorman.

26:1 A. Yes.

2 Q. For purposes of today, do you have a

3 preference whether you use Gorman or Nachtigal?

4 A. Gorman is fine.

5 Q. Where do you work, Ms. Gorman?

6 A. I work at Morgan Stanley.

7 Q. If you could again keep your voice up.

8 You work at Morgan Stanley?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. In what capacity?

11 A. In the Information Technology Department,

12 part of a team called Enterprise and Client

13 Technologies.

14 Q. Now, what does that department do?

15 A. We have a variety of responsibilities

16 including all of our messaging systems, collaboration

17 systems. We're responsible for the e-mail archive as

18 well as other data retention initiatives around the 19 web. We're responsible for the internet facing

20 infrastructure. I'll go on.

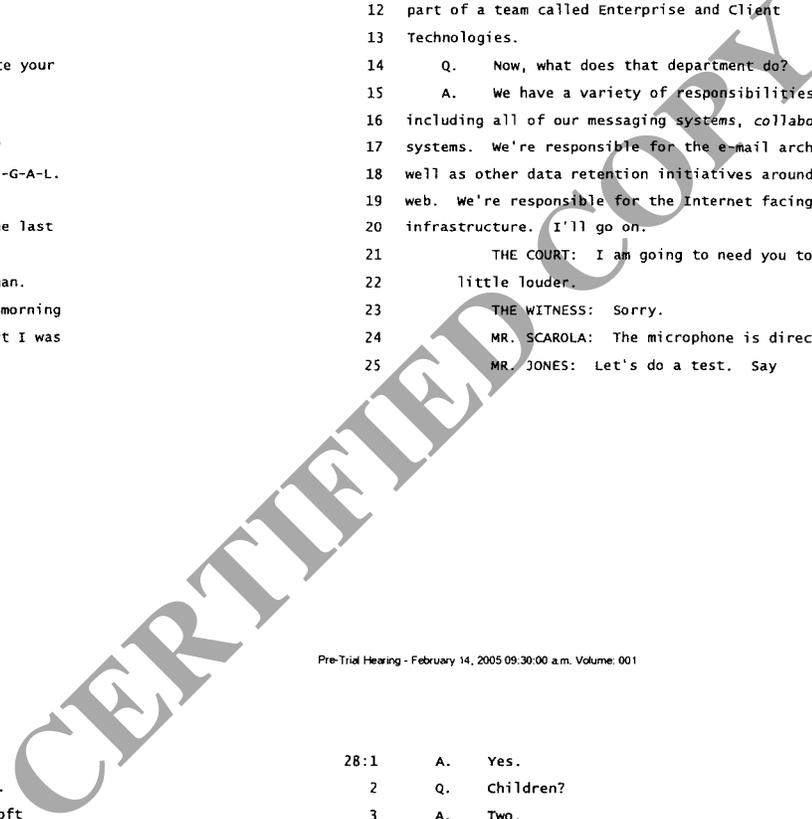

21 THE COURT: I am going to need you to talk a

22 little louder.

23 THE WITNESS: Sorry.

24 MR. SCAROLA: The microphone is directional.

25 MR. JONES: Let's do a test. Say

27:1 information technology.

2 THE WITNESS: Information technology.

3 THE COURT: You still are a little soft

4 spoken.

5 (A discussion was held off the record.)

6 BY MR. JONES:

7 Q. So let me just, with the Court's indulgence,

8 just back up a little bit.

9 You work for information technology?

10 A. Yes.

11 Q. And then you use another description?

12 A. The department within IT that I am in is 13 called Enterprise and Client Technologies. We're

14 responsible for a variety of messages, e-mail,

15 web-based infrastructure both internal and client

16 facing, collaboration systems, work flow systems and we

17 also have responsibility for the e-mail archive as well

18 as other data retention.

19 Q. I want to talk to you about the e-mail

20 archive in a little bit more detail in a minute. But

21 if you would just briefly describe for the Court your

22 educational background.

23 A. I have a BA in computer science from 24 Hamilton College.

25 Q. You are married?

28:1 A. Yes.

2 Q. Children?

3 A. Two.

4 Q. Now, you mentioned the e-mail archive

5 system. Can you tell us, first of all, what that

6 system is?

7 A. It's a system that collects -- really

8 there's three parts to the system. There's a component

9 that captures e-mail and other types of messaging

10 information like instant messaging out of our

11 infrastructure, indexes it on a database and inserts it

12 into our archive. There is an inquiry tool that sits

13 in front of that that allows us to pull information

14 from the archive. And there is a supervisory system

15 used by the business in order to monitor e-mail

16 communications at the business level. In addition, we

17 have data that we pulled in from tapes that completes

18 the overall data that is available in the archive.

19 Q. I wonder if you would describe for us,

20 please, your responsibility with respect to the e-mail

21 archive system?

22 A. I am the manager of the development team

23 that is responsible for the -- basically the three

24 components I just described, the development of those

25 components.

29:1 Q. Can I just back you up. Those three
 2 components are what?
 3 A. Data capture component. And that's coupled
 4 with the actual archive where the data is retained.
 5 Q. What does data capture mean?
 6 A. Data capture is the way we refer to the 7 process where we pick the information out of the 8 environment to insert into the file system and database
 9 which makes up the archive.
 10 Q. And then what's the second component?
 11 A. The inquiry tool.
 12 Q. Say it again.
 13 A. Inquiry tool.
 14 Q. Inquiry tool, what in the world does that 15 mean?
 16 A. An inquiry tool is a web-based user
 17 interface that we give to our users so that they can 18 run an inquiry into the data that is available in the 19 archive.
 20 Q. A search?
 21 A. A search, yes.
 22 Q. So what's the third component?
 23 A. The third component is a supervisory system.
 24 The mail is shunted off and made available in a random
 25 nature to the business to do e-mail supervision.

30:1 Q. How long have you had some responsibility
 2 for the e-mail archive system?
 3 A. Since mid August.
 4 Q. How long have you been at Morgan Stanley?
 5 A. 13 years.
 6 Q. Now, what were you doing prior to mid
 7 August, mid August of '04?
 8 A. Going backwards to the beginning?
 9 Q. Just generally.
 10 A. Generally, I had responsibility for 11 infrastructure that connects Morgan Stanley to the 12 acquisitions we made several years ago, the former Dean
 13 Witter and Discover, responsible for that 14 infrastructure.
 15 Responsible for product management of our
 16 directory infrastructure.
 17 Responsible for product management of the 18 Internet.
 19 And responsible for product management of 20 our distance learning tools.
 21 Q. What's your current title?
 22 A. Executive director.
 23 Q. How long have you been an executive
 24 director?
 25 A. Since the end of 2000, four years.

31:1 Q. When did you first become aware of this
 2 particular lawsuit?
 3 A. In mid January.
 4 THE COURT: Of what year?
 5 THE WITNESS: Of 2005.
 6 BY MR. JONES:
 7 Q. Does your department -- is your department
 8 involved in conducting any e-mail searches for this
 9 case?
 10 A. For this case right now, yes.
 11 Q. Who is actually conducting the searches?
 12 A. Combination of David Matteo is the lead
 13 assisted by two other people on my name.
 14 Q. David Matteo is the lead?
 15 A. Yes.
 16 Q. And who are the additional two people?
 17 A. Horace Sequeira.
 18 Q. What's the last name?
 19 A. S-E-Q-U-E-I-R-A.
 20 Q. And who is the third person?
 21 A. Andrew Brown.
 22 Q. And what is your role with respect to the 23 searches conducted for this case?
 24 A. I am a manager of the team. I interface
 25 with the investigations team that needs to escalate to 32:1 us.

 2 THE COURT: I'm sorry, that needs to
 3 escalate to us?
 4 THE WITNESS: So the tool is typically run
 5 by the IT investigations team. They are our 6 users. As the manager of the team, one of my
 7 primary responsibilities is an interface point
 8 to them, an interface point to legal as well as 9 overseeing the activities of group.
 10 BY MR. JONES:
 11 Q. What's the total size of your team in 12 addition to the two people that you were just 13 describing to the Court?
 14 A. Five. In addition to myself.
 15 THE COURT: Including the two we just spoke 16 about?
 17 THE WITNESS: Yes, including the two.
 18 BY MR. JONES:
 19 Q. Why don't we, if you don't mind, get out the 20 names of the other ones?
 21 A. Tim Brown.
 22 THE COURT: There's a Tim Brown and an
 23 Andrew Brown?
 24 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 25 And Sabita Arumalla, A-R-U-M-A-L-L-A.

33:1 BY MR. JONES:

2 Q. And then is that everybody? Or are we
3 missing one?
4 A. That should be five. You have Horace?
5 Q. Yes.
6 A. Yes.
7 Q. You gave a deposition in this case last
8 week, Wednesday, February the 9th, do you recall that?
9 A. Yes.
10 Q. Do you recall what time you got to Florida
11 on last Wednesday?
12 A. 2:30.
13 Q. And when did you leave Florida?
14 A. I took a 7:15 out.
15 Q. What time did you get back to -- you live in 16 New York?
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. What time did you get back to New York?
19 A. We landed around 10 or 10:30.
20 Q. That's Wednesday. Let's now go to Thursday.
21 Did you go to work on Thursday?
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. Did you do anything related to searching
24 e-mails for this particular case?
25 A. On Thursday, I think they were done with

34:1 that piece by Thursday.

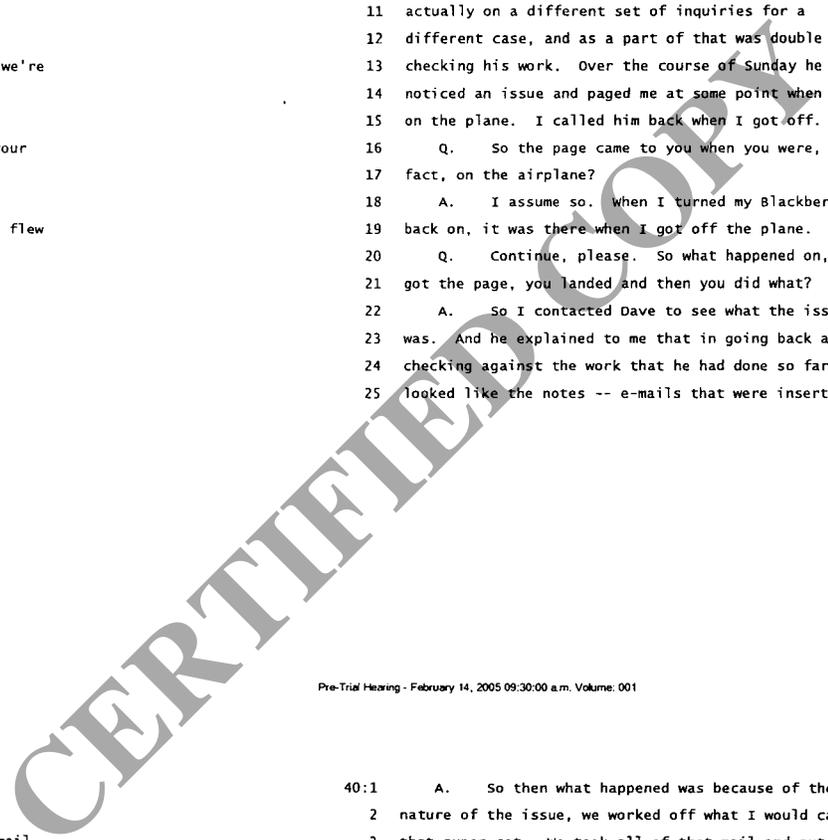

2 Q. Did you go to work on Friday?
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. Did you or your team do anything related to 5 e-mail searches in this case on Friday?
6 A. Yes. On Friday, as a part of double
7 checking work that he had done, Dave found an issue
8 related to pulling all of the attachments.
9 Q. And you say he was double checking his work,
10 please explain to the Court why he would be double
11 checking his work?
12 A. Well, there's really two reasons. We have 13 been working this process very quickly. And so in the 14 spirit of turning out results as quickly as possible,
15 we've been executing the scripts. We're running these 16 scripts against more than one case. We're using it for 17 multiple activities. So as a part of that, he's been 18 very meticulously and carefully back checking any 19 results that he pulled.
20 THE COURT: I'm sorry, what do you mean when
21 you say you have more than one activity?
22 THE WITNESS: We have multiple activities at 23 one time.
24 THE COURT: Related to this case?
25 THE WITNESS: No, multiple. In this date

35:1 range, pre-2000 date range. So we were using
2 these scripts for more than just this case.
3 BY MR. JONES:
4 Q. Can you just please explain to us in Court
5 what a script is?
6 A. A script is a piece of code -- in this case
7 we use perl -- that you can use to push an inquiry or 8 a search against your database and subsequently use
9 another piece of code to extract e-mails from a file
10 system and put them into a separate file. So the 11 script is the piece of code that we run.
12 Q. The script is the thing that you need to do
13 to conduct the search?
14 A. Yes, we've written scripts to do that 15 specifically.
16 Q. So did you learn -- the problem that you
17 learned about that you described in terms of the 18 attachments, when did you learn about this?
19 A. I was informed Friday afternoon.
20 Q. Do you remember the approximate time?
21 A. Would have been between 3 and 4.
22 Q. Can you just explain in a little bit more 23 detail than you have already what was the nature of the 24 scope of this problem?
25 A. Yes, so the way that the archive in -- let

36:1 me explain that the pre-2003 data specifically related
2 to the tape restores and is therefore handled in a very
3 different way than the post 2003. I want to draw that 4 distinction.
5 For pre-2003 the attachments are
6 unfortunately handled in multiple ways. So the 7 inquiries were pulling back attachments, which is why
8 it was a subtle problem. There was a category of 9 attachments they were not capturing.
10 Q. What category of attachments was that?
11 A. It was just a set in terms of the way they 12 were -- so they were attachments that had been detached 13 and indexed in separate tables versus attachments that 14 had not been detached. The ones that were still 15 imbedded in the e-mail were picked up. The ones that 16 were detached were missed.
17 Q. What's the best term to use to describe this 18 kind of error? Is this a software --
19 A. This is a software bug. He thought he was 20 picking them up. There was a bug in his code.
21 Q. So who -- I mean, if we can describe this as 22 an error, might I just pointedly ask you who made the 23 error?
24 A. Dave made the error coding the script.
25 Q. When was the script coded?

37:1 A. The scripts have been evolving since late
 2 December. And I say that because, again, we've been 3 writing, running and refining these continually since
 4 about that time.
 5 Q. And were the -- to your knowledge were these 6 attachments ultimately processed?
 7 A. Yes.
 8 THE COURT: I'm sorry, you're talking about
 9 over the weekend they were processed.
 10 THE WITNESS: So we gave the attachments
 11 over to legal department Friday night.
 12 BY MR. JONES:
 13 Q. So this is Friday, this Friday that we're 14 talking about. Did you work on Saturday?
 15 A. I did not.
 16 Q. Did your team work on Saturday, to your 17 knowledge?
 18 A. Yes.
 19 Q. Now we're at Sunday, yesterday. You flew
 20 from New York to West Palm Beach?
 21 A. Yes.
 22 Q. What time did you leave New York?
 23 A. It was a 4:40 flight.
 24 Q. What time did you arrive?
 25 A. 7:30.

38:1 Q. Can you just please explain to the Court
 2 what, if anything, happened on Sunday that's relevant
 3 to the e-mail searches that your team is responsible 4 for?
 5 A. Yes.
 6 Q. And if I can just urge you to speak, one, a
 7 little louder, as you have been doing, and then,
 8 secondly, a little bit more slowly both for our benefit
 9 and the court reporter.
 10 A. David continued working over the weekend
 11 actually on a different set of inquiries for a
 12 different case, and as a part of that was double 13 checking his work. Over the course of Sunday he 14 noticed an issue and paged me at some point when I was 15 on the plane. I called him back when I got off.
 16 Q. So the page came to you when you were, in 17 fact, on the airplane?
 18 A. I assume so. When I turned my Blackberry
 19 back on, it was there when I got off the plane.
 20 Q. Continue, please. So what happened on, you
 21 got the page, you landed and then you did what?
 22 A. So I contacted Dave to see what the issue
 23 was. And he explained to me that in going back and 24 checking against the work that he had done so far, it
 25 looked like the notes -- e-mails that were inserted

39:1 into the archive from Notes backups --
 2 THE COURT: I'm sorry, from Notes?
 3 THE WITNESS: Yes, Lotus Notes is a mail
 4 system.
 5 -- had been missed in his query scripts.
 6 And he was in the process of repulling those,
 7 correcting his error and pulling those out.
 8 BY MR. JONES:
 9 Q. And was he ultimately able to figure out the 10 number of e-mails that might have been missed?
 11 A. Yes. We gave e-mails over to legal in two 12 batches over the course of the night.
 13 Q. Did he describe to you a number of e-mails?
 14 Did he give any particular number in terms of the 15 magnitude of the problem?
 16 A. He gave me the -- the initial number that he 17 gave me represented a super set of e-mail, e-mail that 18 matched the criteria of having been sent to or from the 19 people who were the target of the inquiries. He had 20 not refined it for the two additional search parameters
 21 that then decreased the numbers.
 22 Q. So was that initial number 11,680?
 23 A. Yes.
 24 Q. What was the -- and then the search was 25 redone?

40:1 A. So then what happened was because of the
 2 nature of the issue, we worked off what I would call
 3 that super set. We took all of that mail and put it in 4 a file. And we parsed it for the two conditions that
 5 were the parameters we were given to subset that data.
 6 So we had one pull that we were doing that
 7 was a three-month super set -- sorry, subset.
 8 Q. What were those three months?
 9 A. Mid February through mid April. Was that
 10 two months? Two months, sorry.
 11 Q. I'm sorry, what was the smaller number that 12 was arrived at? The smaller estimate?
 13 A. 166 e-mails fell into that time period.
 14 Q. Now, when we're talking about the number
 15 11,680 e-mails, are we also talking about attachments?
 16 A. Yes.
 17 Q. Or is that just e-mails?
 18 A. That's just an e-mail count. There were 19 also attachments found.
 20 Q. How many attachments were found?
 21 A. About 2400.
 22 Q. What's the best way to describe this
 23 particular kind of error? Is this a programming error
 24 or software error?
 25 A. This error was the result of the way the 41:1 information was indexed.

2 Q. Explain that, please.

3 A. So before we took over, the team that
4 preceded ours wrote a set of scripts that moved e-mail
5 from the staging area into the archive and indexed it.

6 In all cases, both the tape restore context
7 for what I'll call Netscape mail, which is the vast 8 majority of our e-mail, as well as in our current
9 system there is a field that is a date/time stamp field
10 that represents the received date of the mail.

11 For all of that mail, that field represents 12 the time that the mail was actually received. So some 13 date in 1998. In the case of Lotus Notes restores, we 14 discovered that instead of inserting that date, the 15 scripts that we had inherited inserted the actual date
16 that the mail was inserted into the archive, which 17 would be something more along the lines of a 2004 date.

18 And so our inquiries were missing these
19 because the date/time stamp was inaccurate.

20 Q. So far as the search engine were concerned
21 these e-mails didn't exist, though, they in fact did 22 exist?

23 A. Yes.

24 Q. When were the -- are you able to give us an 25 approximate date as to when these particular scripts

42:1 were written?

2 A. I inherited them. It would have been -- I'm
3 not sure, early '04, potentially late 2003.

4 Q. Legal staff have any involvement in writing
5 scripts?

6 A. No.

7 Q. Now, we talked about e-mails and attachments
8 that were missed. Are you able to identify for the 9 Court the group that these e-mails and attachments
10 belonged to?

11 A. I'm not sure what you mean.

12 Q. Were these from the Investment Banking
13 Division?

14 A. The bulk of the people who use Lotus Notes
15 in that time period, or actually throughout the years
16 that are relevant is the Investment Banking Division.

17 Q. From what time period do you believe these 18 e-mails to be?

19 A. The criteria that we were given to search in 20 the larger span was 1997 through 2000.

21 THE COURT: I want to make sure I'm 22 understanding your testimony. The 11,680, was 23 that the 1999 to 2000 or the two months from 24 February to April?

25 THE WITNESS: Because there was a problem

43:1 with the way the date/time stamp was formed on
2 the database, what we had to do, there's one
3 database that holds all the 2000 and earlier
4 data, which goes back to way earlier.

5 THE COURT: Goes back much earlier?

6 THE WITNESS: The data there goes well
7 earlier than 1998 or 1997. What we did was we 8 just pulled all the e-mail to those people that 9 were available. And then we created a data set
10 that had that. And then we had to work on just 11 that data set and parse the dates separately.

12 Was that confusing?

13 THE COURT: I want to get the agreed order
14 in front of me.

15 The 11,680 represented what universe?

16 THE WITNESS: Represented all mail sent to 17 or from the 36 people we were handed any time
18 before January of 2000.

19 THE COURT: So it had a date parameter
20 before January 2000. Other than that, it was by 21 person, by person generated.

22 THE WITNESS: Yes, it had no date parameter.

23 THE COURT: I thought you said it had to be 24 before January 2000.

25 THE WITNESS: We had a database that had

44:1 pre-2000 e-mail.

2 THE COURT: All you were searching for
3 initially were e-mails generated by a listed
4 person?

5 THE WITNESS: Sent to or from the people on
6 our list, the names that we were given.

7 THE COURT: And then to get to the smaller
8 subset of the 166, that's just the percentage of 9 those that fell within that two-month period?

10 THE WITNESS: Yes.

11 THE COURT: And when you were testifying,
12 you said you made a smaller subset by searching
13 the two parameters in the order. Then you 14 mentioned the time parameter. What was the 15 second parameter?

16 THE WITNESS: We pulled the initial subset
17 using the "to" and "from." So we pulled the 18 overly inclusive set of mail just by name. That 19 was the first set.

20 THE COURT: And that got you to the 166.

21 THE WITNESS: That got us to the 11,000.
22 Then we went into that data set and we searched
23 by date.

24 THE COURT: And that got you to the 166.

25 THE WITNESS: That got us to the 166 for two

45:1 months.
 2 THE COURT: Did you ever search by term?
 3 When you say name, are you talking the name of a
 4 person or just a word?
 5 THE WITNESS: Name of a person.
 6 THE COURT: Okay.
 7 BY MR. JONES:
 8 Q. At this point, Ms. Gorman, two sort of big 9 questions. One, how could this problem have occurred?
 10 And secondly, why wasn't it discovered earlier?
 11 So the first question: Can you explain to 12 us how this problem could have occurred?
 13 A. This problem occurred because the data was 14 highly inconsistent within our database. So the Notes
 15 data was inserted in a completely different format than 16 any of the rest of the data. And, therefore, the 17 developer made what turned out to be a bad assumption,
 18 but not necessarily a surprising assumption, because 19 one would assume consistency.
 20 And then beyond that, I think just the rush
 21 has made it very difficult for us to do the types of 22 controlled testing that we would like to do when 23 performing this type of work.
 24 Q. Can you just then describe what's the normal
 25 procedure and time period for developing, widely

46:1 testing scripts?
 2 A. So normally if we were writing an inquiry
 3 tool like this, we would give an estimate of at least
 4 three months for proper development and QA. I'm sorry,
 5 QA is quality assurance.
 6 Q. Now, to bring that into sort of some sharper
 7 focus. You took over in August of 2004?
 8 A. Yes.
 9 Q. And can you just please describe for the 10 Court the state of affairs in terms of the archiving
 11 project when you took over in August? Let me back up.
 12 Who did you take over for?
 13 A. I took over for Arthur Reil.
 14 Q. And he had been in charge of it in advance
 15 of that?
 16 THE COURT: I'm sorry, did you start in 17 August or in October?
 18 THE WITNESS: August.
 19 BY MR. JONES:
 20 Q. So you started in August of '04?
 21 A. Yes.
 22 Q. Now, is Mr. Reil, this is the individual you
 23 described in your deposition as having been placed on 24 administrative leave and you took his place?
 25 A. Yes.

47:1 Q. What kind of -- what was the state of
 2 affairs when you took over in August?
 3 A. The system, we were focused primarily on the 4 live capture system. And there was --
 5 Q. What does that mean?
 6 A. So the system that runs every day and
 7 collects e-mail out of the environment every day needs
 8 to be properly managed from an operational perspective
 9 or you could lose data. So that immediately became our 10 focus.
 11 I would say from the start when we took over
 12 we had no documentation. We had some people -- sorry.
 13 Q. Can I just ask you: What do you mean you
 14 had no documentation?
 15 A. There was no documentation around how to 16 operate the system from a technology perspective. So,
 17 for example, there were a set of operational procedures
 18 that needed to be performed to keep the system beating.
 19 One key example that hit us, because we took over sort
 20 of mid, late August, was at the end of the month
 21 there's a set of operational procedures that need to 22 take place on the database in order for the system not 23 to lose any data. One of our key focuses when we took 24 over was how to do this, perform what is basically
 25 called rotate the database.

48:1 Q. How could it be that there was no
 2 documentation? I'm not sure that I get that.
 3 A. Arthur's team kept no documentation. I was
 4 not involved at that point.
 5 Q. So you were focused on capturing the live
 6 data?
 7 A. So we were focused on understanding how to 8 make sure that we didn't lose any information in the 9 live capture system as well as under a lot of strain
 10 because there was no disk space available in the 11 archive. So we were accumulating essentially what we 12 call tar balls, which are giant zipped up files of 13 e-mail and trying to find them all a home so we 14 wouldn't lose any data; as well as bringing ourselves
 15 up to speed as a team with respect to how to support
 16 the system, both the operational capture piece as well
 17 as the supervisory systems; and on top of that,
 18 supporting the inquiries.
 19 Q. So why wasn't there disk space available?
 20 A. They had run out and were waiting for a
 21 delivery that was due in October.
 22 Q. Isn't anticipating disk space need something
 23 that your predecessor should have been concerned with?
 24 A. Should have been concerned with it. I don't
 25 think he was very good at it.

49:1 Q. So when you took over, you described, I
2 believe in your deposition, that there was some data
3 that you called it the staging area. Just to sort of 4 speed us through this, can you first of all explain to 5 Your Honor what the staging area is and how does that
6 fit into the e-mail archive system?

7 A. So as a part of the tape restoration
8 process, the Enterprise Computing Group, which is the 9 group that Bob Saunders, for example, is a part of,
10 will get the tapes back from our vendor and take the 11 data off the tape and load it on to fast disk, which we 12 just refer to as staging. And from there make it
13 available to my team that we run scripts against that 14 data to do the insertion.

15 Q. So the staging is data that had been on 16 backup tapes at some point on the archiving and you're 17 waiting to put it into searchable form?

18 A. Yes.

19 Q. And in sort of waiting, you call staging?

20 A. Yes.

21 Q. How much data was in staging when you took 22 over in August?

23 A. In retrospect we found that to be what we 24 thought was first a terabyte, and when we ran through 25 it turned out to be about 600 gig.

50:1 Q. And is there some other way to describe
2 that? Is that a lot of data? How much data is that?

3 A. It's a good bit of data.

4 Q. Did you begin processing this data in 5 August?

6 A. No.

7 Q. Why not?

8 A. We had no space and we were far more
9 concerned with supporting the other components of the 10 system that I just mentioned, the daily capture
11 process, the inquiries that were running, the 12 supervisory system that was live. The data was sitting 13 in staging and to my knowledge it wasn't going
14 anywhere, it was somewhat lower priority.

15 Q. So it was a lower priority in August. At 16 some point did the priority change in terms of 17 processing the data which was in storage?

18 A. Yes.

19 Q. When did it change?

20 A. In the October time frame.

21 Q. Now, you described in your deposition that 22 you had a meeting with Morgan Stanley counsel in 23 October?

24 A. Yes. We had a series of meetings.

25 Q. And after that meeting your priorities

51:1 changed to focus on processing the data that was in 2 storage?

3 A. Yes.

4 Q. So this is October then. Can you then just 5 walk us through month by month, to the best you can,
6 what you did to process the data that was in storage?

7 A. So in October it became clear that there
8 were inquiries waiting on this data and that's why it
9 got prioritized. We went looking for the scripts and 10 it took us a bit of time to locate them.

11 Q. Can I just stop you there?

12 A. Sure.

13 Q. When you say you went looking for the 14 scripts, you mean you literally walked around in 15 different locations?

16 A. In different directories in the 17 infrastructure. So the code for this system was not 18 well organized. It was not all in a central 19 repository, it was spread around different home
20 directories from the various people who were a part of 21 the team that had preceded us as well as various parts
22 of our development file system. And so the scripts
23 were not in the -- we had interviewed the team that we 24 took over from. They told us -- they thought they told
25 us where they were, and when we didn't find them there,

52:1 we had to look around essentially.

2 Q. Did you ever find the scripts?

3 A. We found scripts that we believed to be
4 those scripts. We found scripts that had the right
5 names that appeared to perform the right operations, so
6 we began to test those.

7 Q. When did you find the scripts?

8 A. In early November.

9 Q. You said you began testing them when?

10 A. Right around there.

11 Q. Tell us what you did in December and 12 January.

13 A. So in November we ran initial tests on the 14 scripts and we weren't comfortable with the scripts.
15 It looked like the scripts weren't processing messages
16 properly. So we spent a good bit of December, albeit 17 months somewhat chopped up because of the holidays,
18 testing those scripts and debugging them and 19 essentially came into January, really got our arms
20 wrapped around and put some fixes in the code. And in 21 mid January we began the process of loading the data
22 out of staging.

23 Q. When you say you were debugging the scripts
24 in November, December, can you just please explain to 25 Your Honor what that means and what that entails?

53:1 A. We were taking a subset of the data that was
2 in staging and we were running the scripts against that
3 trying to understand exactly what they were supposed to 4 be doing. So it was a little bit more complicated than 5 it might sound, because there's a lot of details under 6 the covers of inserting data into a database.

7 THE COURT: What was your understanding of 8 what these scripts were going to do?

9 THE WITNESS: At a high level, they should
10 index the data in the database and insert them
11 in the file system.

12 THE COURT: So it had nothing to do with 13 this litigation?

14 THE WITNESS: No, just processing the 15 information that we knew was pending.

16 BY MR. JONES:

17 Q. Now, did you at some point come to learn
18 that -- before I ask you that. Let me just ask you
19 this. In terms of the processing of the data that was 20 in staging, is there some way that this could have been 21 done faster?

22 A. Not safely. We really needed to go through 23 the testing cycles that we went through. We had to 24 write the code to fix the scripts. And then it's just 25 a simple matter of physics that it takes a certain

54:1 amount of time to move data.

2 Q. Did you at some point come to learn that the
3 data that was in staging that you would ultimately 4 process, some of it came from the tapes that have been
5 discussed like Brooklyn tapes?

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. Now, is your group still rechecking scripts
8 even as we speak here today?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. Why are they doing that?

11 A. Well, we found two issues over the weekend,
12 so we certainly want to go back through and actually 13 have another set of eyes look over our shoulder and 14 make sure that we don't have any other errors, either
15 in our code or in how our code perceives the data to be 16 structured in the system.

17 Q. Now, I think you might have misspoke. I
18 think you said the 11,680 e-mail super set is 2000 and 19 earlier, I wonder, if you know, in say 2001 and earlier
20 or do you know?

21 A. I'm sorry, January 2000 and back.

22 THE COURT: I'm sorry, what's your
23 understanding of the date parameter on that? If 24 you don't know, just tell me you don't know.

25 THE WITNESS: I'm not sure working from

55:1 memory, but I thought we only went up through
2 2000.

3 THE COURT: Up through 2000 or up until
4 January of 2000?

5 THE WITNESS: Up until January of 2000.
6 Depending on how you want to split it. It's 7 2001 back considering we're getting what would
8 be the end of December, for some reason January
9 7th in my mind.

10 THE COURT: Of what year?

11 THE WITNESS: Of 2000 and back.

12 THE COURT: Earlier than that?

13 THE WITNESS: Yes.

14 THE COURT: So the latest date I believe we 15 were picking up is January 7th, 2000, but I'm 16 working from memory. And the person in my group
17 is working from an official document. So if my 18 memory is wrong --

19 BY MR. JONES:

20 Q. Who is the person?

21 A. Dave Matteo. And the other people I
22 mentioned as well.

23 Q. Do you have in mind some particular kind of 24 additional tests and checking that your group is doing
25 or planning to do?

56:1 A. One of the ways that you make sure your code
2 is correct is you run it against information that
3 you're familiar with. So, for example, the way that
4 Dave found this last issue was to run an inquiry
5 against himself and see how it behaved.

6 You have to know your results in order to
7 know if they're accurate. So we will both spot check
8 the information in the database to confirm how it's 9 stored and make sure that it is consistent so we know
10 we can write a consistent inquiry against it as well as 11 rerun the various -- do what we would call component
12 testing. So reconfirm that the various parts of our 13 logic are accurately handing us results. And we would 14 do that by running it against information that we're 15 familiar with so we'd know the expected results and we 16 could confirm that they're accurate.

17 Q. Anything else?

18 A. Other than bringing in -- we have one other
19 person in our department who has a fairly good skill
20 set so we're going to try and engage him today as well.

21 Q. Do you -- I think I'll just ask you. Do you
22 think you found all the problems now or do you not
23 know?

24 A. I don't know. We need to keep looking.

25 Q. Do you have some level of confidence that we

57:1 can -- what percentage confidence are you that you
 2 found all the problems in the script?
 3 A. Sir?
 4 Q. Do you know what I mean? You are not sure
 5 that you found all the problems. Are you able to 6 quantify where you are in terms of how much more there
 7 is to do? 10 percent sure, 15, 20, 70? Do you
 8 understand?
 9 A. I think I'm, you know, at about a 75 percent
 10 comfort level just given that we found a lot of issues
 11 we didn't anticipate and, therefore, I have to be 12 critical, and make sure that everything gets retested.
 13 MR. JONES: Let me have a second, Your
 14 Honor.
 15 BY MR. JONES:
 16 Q. Ms. Gorman, I'd like to take you back to the 17 discussion of the searches that were done last night.
 18 THE COURT: I'm sorry, that were done when?
 19 MR. JONES: Last night.
 20 BY MR. JONES:
 21 Q. Did you run a second search or a key word
 22 search on the 11,680 super set in addition to the date
 23 search?
 24 A. Yes, we did.
 25 MR. JONES: That's all I have, Your Honor.

58:1 THE COURT: Who will be questioning on
 2 Plaintiff's side?
 3 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Byman is our "e-male."
 4 That's A-L-E.
 5 MR. BYMAN: That means I know how to use
 6 e-mail, Your Honor, but I don't know much more.
 7 CROSS EXAMINATION
 8 BY MR. BYMAN:
 9 Q. I'm 75 percent more confident that I have 10 fewer questions for you today than I did last week.
 11 A. That's good.
 12 Q. Ms. Gorman, I want to establish one thing
 13 that I think is self-evident: The problems that you
 14 encountered when you took over for Mr. Reil's team, the 15 problems that you didn't discover until last week or 16 last night, these are all internal problems at Morgan
 17 Stanley, right?
 18 A. Yes.
 19 Q. Certainly CPH had nothing to do with causing 20 any of them?
 21 A. No. This is our system. This is our 22 internal code.
 23 Q. And Mr. Reil wasn't a lone wolf working out
 24 there, he had a team of other people working with him,
 25 right?

59:1 A. Yes, he had a small team.
 2 Q. And some of that team are still employed by
 3 Morgan Stanley, even though he has been, is it
 4 discharged, administrative leave, fired?
 5 A. Administrative leave is the term I
 6 understand to be appropriate.
 7 Q. Well, I don't know that it's appropriate or 8 not, but it's the term you've been told?
 9 A. It's the term I've been told to use. The 10 developers who worked on the system, they are all gone.
 11 Q. What about Mr. Wray Stewart, he was involved
 12 in some of the team?
 13 A. Wray is a part of the Enterprise Computing
 14 Group. He is familiar with the piece that leads up to 15 the component that I'm responsible for.
 16 Q. I just want to make sure that we're clear on 17 this. The people that were aware that this data was in 18 staging -- when you got there in August you found 600
 19 gigabytes of data, right?
 20 A. We were told what was in there.
 21 Q. And some of that was the Brooklyn found
 22 tapes?
 23 A. Yes. We came to understand that later.
 24 Q. And I'm going to show you a copy of Morgan
 25 Stanley's supplemental opposition mainly so that I can

60:1 show you the exhibits that are attached to it, Exhibit
 2 12.
 3 May I approach, Your Honor?
 4 THE COURT: Sure.
 5 BY MR. BYMAN:
 6 Q. You'll recall those are the minutes of the 7 e-mail archive group?
 8 A. Yes.
 9 Q. And we talked about those when I met you for 10 the first time at your deposition last week, right?
 11 A. Yes.
 12 Q. And the people that were given copies of 13 those minutes included not just Mr. Reil, but somebody
 14 named Kay Gunn?
 15 A. Yes.
 16 Q. And she still works for Morgan Stanley,
 17 doesn't she?
 18 A. I believe she does.
 19 Q. And Bruce Buchanan, who is an outside vendor
 20 for Morgan Stanley, he still is an outside vendor for 21 Morgan Stanley, right?
 22 A. Yes, I think so.
 23 Q. Annaline Dinklemann, she's still with Morgan
 24 Stanley?
 25 A. Yes.

61:1 Q. John Pamula, he's still with Morgan Stanley?
 2 A. Still haven't met him.
 3 Q. Have you heard his name?
 4 A. Only from here.
 5 Q. Wray Stewart you know, right?
 6 A. Yes, I know Wray.
 7 Q. And then there are a couple of address
 8 lists, e-mail archive core and DGR-NA?
 9 A. Yes.
 10 Q. And you know that some of the people in 11 those bigger address groups are still Morgan Stanley
 12 employees?
 13 A. Yes.
 14 Q. And all of these people would have gotten,
 15 on May 6th, 2004, a copy of this set of minutes of the 16 e-mail archive group that disclosed that there were 17 more than 1,000 unlabelled tapes which had been found
 18 in the Brooklyn security room?
 19 A. According to the mail.
 20 Q. And that became known as the Brooklyn found
 21 tapes, right?
 22 A. It would seem to be, yes.
 23 Q. And the Brooklyn found tapes, which were 24 found as of May 6th, 2004, were among the 600 gigabytes
 25 of data that you inherited in mid August 2004?

62:1 A. Yes, at least a subset of them.
 2 Q. And that data, which was ready to be
 3 uploaded into your computers, it had already been
 4 extracted by your outside vendor; is that right?
 5 A. Yes.
 6 Q. It was ready for uploading, but you gave it
 7 no priority in August; is that right?
 8 A. We gave a lower priority in August.
 9 Q. By lower?
 10 A. We had a long list and it was closer to the 11 bottom. Actually, we researched it. I had someone on 12 my team looking into it.
 13 THE COURT: I'm sorry, looking into what?
 14 THE WITNESS: Someone on my team, our 15 product manager, who is not a developer, working 16 with Wray and that team to get a handle on what 17 the process was and where we were.
 18 BY MR. BYMAN:
 19 Q. When you took over in mid August nobody told 20 you it was a priority to process that data, right?
 21 A. Not in relation to the longer list, no.
 22 Q. Nobody told you that there was some problem
 23 that needed to be addressed with respect to it?
 24 A. No, they told us it needed to be processed.
 25 There was no problem pointed out.

63:1 Q. In the fullness of time?
 2 A. In the fullness of -- yeah, sooner than
 3 later, but in some logical order given --
 4 Q. In October it became a priority when counsel
 5 told you that it was, right?
 6 A. Yes.
 7 Q. And by the way, I think that there was some
 8 reference in your testimony to Morgan Stanley counsel,
 9 that October meeting also included Kirkland and Ellis,
 10 didn't it?
 11 A. Yes, some of them did.
 12 Q. You understood that they were outside
 13 counsel to Morgan Stanley?
 14 A. Yes, sir.
 15 Q. Was there some event in October that moved 16 that data from low priority to higher priority other
 17 than counsel contacted you?
 18 A. A series of discussions with counsel --
 19 MR. JONES: Your Honor, I would object to 20 the content of discussions with counsel or 21 attorney-client privilege. Talk about she had a 22 meeting, but I would invoke the privilege as to
 23 discussions with counsel.
 24 MR. BYMAN: I don't know that my question
 25 asked for that. I wasn't trying to do that.

64:1 THE COURT: Why don't we complete the
 2 question.
 3 MR. SCAROLA: But do ask.
 4 BY MR. BYMAN:
 5 Q. Let me make sure that my question was clear.
 6 I wanted to know if there was some event, other than 7 counsel, in October that moved it from low priority to 8 priority?
 9 A. No, it was prioritized as a result of
 10 discussions with counsel.
 11 Q. And what was it that made it a priority,
 12 what were you told?
 13 MR. JONES: Objection, Your Honor,
 14 attorney-client privilege.
 15 THE COURT: Any response?
 16 MR. BYMAN: Your Honor, it's their burden to 17 try to show why this wasn't --
 18 THE COURT: And I think they're alleging to 19 privilege.
 20 BY MR. BYMAN:
 21 Q. In any event, in October -- by the way,
 22 early October, mid October, late October, do you
 23 remember the date?
 24 A. Don't remember the date.
 25 Q. Was it before Halloween, after Halloween?

65:1 A. That would be the very end. It was mid, not
 2 the first week, not the last week, one of those two in 3 the middle.
 4 Q. Sort of mid October?
 5 A. Sort of mid October.
 6 Q. And it took us until sort of mid January
 7 before you were actually ready to start processing that
 8 data, right, because you were finding scripts,
 9 debugging scripts?
 10 A. Yes.
 11 Q. Quality controlling scripts?
 12 A. Yes.
 13 Q. Roughly the three months you said it takes 14 to develop a program to do all of that, right?
 15 A. No. When I was referring to the program I
 16 was referring to the search tool, not the scripts.
 17 Q. Well, the search tool was already in 18 existence, wasn't it? You didn't have any trouble
 19 finding that.
 20 A. No, the search tool was in existence, but 21 the search tool had certain issues and those are the 22 scripts that we were writing to compensate for those 23 issues. We were doing those two things in parallel.
 24 Q. When you were told in mid October that this 25 was a priority, that it was a rush, did it move from

66:1 low priority or no priority to mid priority, high
 2 priority, utmost priority? What was your sense of 3 urgency?
 4 A. It moved to high priority and took a spot
 5 amongst two or three other very high priority tasks.
 6 So we split work across the team.
 7 Q. So there were three or four things now that
 8 were your highest priority items?
 9 A. Yes, we had multiple customers, so, yes.
 10 Q. In fact, what you were really trying to do
 11 here was not develop information for this particular 12 lawsuit for this particular agreed order to comply for 13 your obligations in this case, it was to do something
 14 firm wide, right?
 15 A. It was generally making sure that the 16 archive had all the data in it, yes, it was not 17 specific to this case.
 18 Q. For Morgan Stanley's convenience for all
 19 kinds of inquiries and all kinds of lawsuits?
 20 A. Yes.
 21 Q. Do you know how many other lawsuits were 22 pending that you were planning to use the results of 23 this work for?
 24 A. No.
 25 Q. So, and I want to make sure that I

67:1 understand this, because I think we established that my
 2 knowledge of computers is the on/off button. And you
 3 and I speak different languages, but this is the 4 equivalent of: I want a room for the night and the 5 hotel says, sure, we'll give you one as soon as we've 6 taken care of all the rooms in the hotel and they're 7 all clean. You weren't trying to just take care of my
 8 needs, you were trying to take care of the global needs
 9 of the hotel?
 10 MR. JONES: Your Honor, I object to the
 11 question.
 12 MR. BYMAN: I agree with him. It was a
 13 terrible analogy and I'll withdraw it.
 14 THE COURT: When did you first learn of this
 15 litigation?
 16 THE WITNESS: January, about mid.
 17 THE COURT: Mid January?
 18 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 19 BY MR. BYMAN:
 20 Q. Was it right around the time that you
 21 started actually running the data in this case?
 22 A. Data in this case? I don't remember the 23 order, but it would have been roughly the same time
 24 frame probably.
 25 Q. Now, you could have done this faster --

68:1 let's not even talk about between August and October.
 2 From the point that you were told that it
 3 was a priority, you know you could have done it faster
 4 if you had gone to an outside vendor and focused just
 5 on this subset of data; isn't that right?
 6 A. No.
 7 Q. You don't know that?
 8 A. An outside vendor can't insert data into our 9 system.
 10 Q. I'm not talking about getting it into your 11 firm-wide system.
 12 I agree with you that only you know how to 13 take care of your 15 terabytes of firm-wide data, but 14 you do know there are vendors out there that can take 15 600 gigabytes of data and process it and search it
 16 independent of your system, right?
 17 A. I suspect there are, yes.
 18 Q. Did you do any research to find out whether 19 those vendors were available and could do it faster
 20 than you do?
 21 A. I was not asked to, so I did not do that.
 22 Q. When you were told that this was the utmost
 23 priority, did it occur to you that, hey, we could do
 24 this faster if we went to an outside vendor?
 25 A. The priority I was given was first to insert

69:1 the data into the archive and then to later in January
2 run the inquiries for this case. I would say by the 3 time that came up, we could run an inquiry into our 4 system faster than a vendor could have.

5 Q. By mid January.

6 I'm asking if somebody had told you in
7 August when you took over for Mr. Reil, it's really
8 important, we have a Court order that says we're 9 supposed to produce everything. We want to do it as 10 quickly as possible. You know you could have done it
11 faster with an outside vendor, don't you?

12 MR. JONES: I object to the form of the 13 question.

14 THE COURT: What's the legal objection?

15 MR. JONES: Because the question was you've 16 got an order that you should have produced
17 everything, it's not been established that this 18 witness really is familiar with this Court
19 order.

20 THE COURT: Do you want to -- why don't you
21 rephrase it eliminating that?

22 BY MR. BYMAN:

23 Q. Let's put aside Court orders. Lawyers very 24 seldom tell you why they're doing anything because they 25 don't know themselves.

70:1 But suppose somebody said to you: It's
2 really important that we find e-mail with these search
3 characteristics and we find it as soon as possible. If 4 somebody had told you that in August when you took 5 over, you know you could have done it sooner than 6 February by going to an outside vendor, isn't that
7 right?

8 MR. JONES: Your Honor, I object to the form
9 of that question, too, as vague and ambiguous.

10 THE COURT: Overruled.

11 So we're all clear, particularly in the 12 trial, what I want are legal objections like the 13 one or two words and if I need an argument, I'll 14 ask for it. But vague and ambiguous I would 15 overrule.

16 Go ahead.

17 MR. BYMAN: Do you remember the question?

18 THE COURT: Try again.

19 BY MR. BYMAN:

20 Q. You arrive on the scene on August 15th, you
21 might as well have been from Mars with respect to this
22 project, because you don't know any of the history.
23 But somebody tells you: It's really important that we 24 find all responsive e-mail that fall within certain
25 search parameters. We have 600 gigabytes of data that 71:1 we need to search. What's faster, inserting it into

2 your total archive or sending that limited amount of 3 data out to an outside vendor and asking them to search
4 it?

5 MR. JONES: Objection, vague and ambiguous.

6 THE COURT: Overruled.

7 THE WITNESS: It would be somewhat
8 speculative for me to answer that question
9 because I don't know anything directly about
10 outside vendors that might process the data.
11 That is not something I deal with directly. So 12 the process of pulling data off tapes is 13 actually something that's typically done between 14 the enterprise computing team that's responsible
15 for tapes and the IT investigations team that 16 under normal circumstances drives an inquiry.
17 So no one asked me that question, nor would they 18 have.

19 And I wouldn't really consider myself an 20 expert enough in the area of what vendors can 21 and can't do to answer it.

22 BY MR. BYMAN:

23 Q. So you just don't know?

24 A. It's just really not my responsibility and I
25 have no experience with it.

72:1 Q. If I were to represent to you that we had an
2 outside vendor that Morgan Stanley and we are dealing
3 with directly together --

4 MR. JONES: Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: You need to let him finish the
6 question.

7 BY MR. BYMAN:

8 Q. -- who told us they can get the whole
9 process done and getting the actual output after 10 searching it, they can get it done between last week
11 when they first got the tapes and March 15th when 12 they've promised to deliver it, would that be 13 inconsistent with what you know or don't know?

14 A. It would be what you've told me.

15 Q. You have no reason to believe that that's 16 not accurate?

17 A. No, I have no reason to believe that's not 18 accurate.

19 Q. The 166 e-mails that apparently were 20 identified last night as fitting within the parameters,
21 the various search parameters, how thick of a stack of 22 documents are we talking about?

23 A. It was about 2 meg of data and we didn't 24 print it.

25 Q. 166 individual e-mails?

73:1 A. Yes.
 2 Q. And do you have any reason to believe that
 3 each e-mail or its chain was multiple pages?
 4 A. I didn't really look.
 5 Q. Meg of data is what, about 50 pages
 6 ordinarily if it's printed owed words?
 7 A. I guess.
 8 Q. I'm sorry, how many megs of data was this?
 9 A. 2 meg, I believe.
 10 Q. So maybe 100 pages?
 11 A. I don't know.
 12 Q. You don't happen to have those 100 pages in 13 your briefcase someplace that we could take a look at 14 them?
 15 A. I do not review mail for a living, I just 16 try and pull it out.
 17 Q. Was that data provided to anybody, that 18 2 megs of data?
 19 A. Yes.
 20 Q. By the way, that's a small enough size file
 21 that it could be e-mailed to someone and get through 22 firewalls?
 23 A. Yes, I helped to pull it up, actually.
 24 Q. So it was submitted to counsel for their 25 review?

74:1 A. Yes, we sent it -- my team made it available
 2 to counsel and I helped them get access to it.
 3 Q. You testified earlier that one of the 4 glitches that David had made, one of the errors that he
 5 made was that he had written something that didn't
 6 capture certain attachments, do you remember that?
 7 A. Yes.
 8 Q. What kinds of attachments did the program
 9 fail to capture?
 10 A. It wasn't really what types. It would be 11 any old kind of attachment. It was a category. So 12 certain attachments were never decoupled from the 13 e-mail. And at some point it looks like they changed
 14 the system so that the attachments were decoupled. In 15 the case where the attachments were decoupled, there
 16 were additional entries made into the database so that 17 you could retrieve those. And it was that latter
 18 category of attachments that we were missing.
 19 Q. What I'm trying to figure out and,
 20 unfortunately, I have to ask you this for the first 21 time because we didn't know about this to ask you about 22 it earlier. Are we talking about particular types of 23 attachments, would they be PDF files, Excel
 24 spreadsheets, Word documents?
 25 A. It would be everything. And probably, my

75:1 expectation, it would have more to do with -- well, it
 2 wouldn't even be that clean. This data was not
 3 processed in any logical date order or I could tell you
 4 it was stuff that was processed later, but that would
 5 likely not map back to a date.
 6 So it was really any type of attachment
 7 processed at some date in time where the scripts were 8 adjusted to detach this data. And I do not know that 9 date.
 10 Q. So if somebody had sent a spreadsheet in 11 June of 1998 to one of their colleagues, we might not 12 have that yet, it may be in the 2400 attachments you've 13 found out?
 14 A. The 2400 maps to the Lotus Notes issue. It
 15 would be in the attachment set that we handed over on 16 Friday night.
 17 Q. Handed over to who?
 18 A. Legal.
 19 Q. But not handed over to us?
 20 A. I don't know what they do after I give it to 21 them.
 22 MR. BYMAN: May I have a moment, Your Honor?
 23 THE COURT: Yes.
 24 BY MR. BYMAN:
 25 Q. One thing that I'd like to clarify. When

76:1 you talked about the two conditions that you ran
 2 against the 11,280 e-mails, one condition was the
 3 two-month time period, right?
 4 A. Yes.
 5 Q. And the other was that you searched it
 6 against names?
 7 A. We searched against the key words that we 8 were given.
 9 Q. What key words did you use? What number of 10 key words?
 11 A. I think I counted them. There were probably 12 just under 30 key words that had been given to us as a
 13 part of the search criteria.
 14 Q. Did you get them in the form of a copy of an 15 agreed order or were they given to you in some other
 16 form?
 17 A. I had it in the form of an e-mail that was 18 passed to me by the IT investigations team.
 19 Q. So it wasn't an attachment, it wasn't a 20 document you saw, somebody actually listed out the 21 things you were supposed to search?
 22 A. Yes.
 23 Q. Do you have a copy of that with you today?
 24 A. Copy of the e-mail?
 25 Q. Well, just so that we can find out whether

77:1 or not the things you searched are the same as the
 2 things that we think you searched because of Court
 3 proceedings.
 4 A. I don't have the document that was used
 5 by -- no, I don't have it with me. I don't have the 6 document that was used by my team.
 7 Q. Let me back up to one sort of global thing.
 8 We've put a couple of stacks here just to show what
 9 1300 pages are, that's the little stack about a foot
 10 high; 8,000 pages looks like about 3 and a half feet
 11 high. All of that together would represent about 250
 12 megabytes, right?
 13 A. I don't know.
 14 Q. Isn't it true that a megabyte is usually 15 about 50 printed pages in general?
 16 A. I don't know.
 17 Q. You don't have any idea about that?
 18 A. No.
 19 Q. The quantity of data that you inherited in 20 August when you came in and took over from Mr. Reil was 21 600 gigabytes, right?
 22 A. The quantity of information in staging was 23 600 gigabytes.
 24 Q. And so that is roughly 2400 times the amount
 25 of material that we've got printed out here, is that 78:1 fair?

 2 A. Presuming you just did that math correctly.
 3 I didn't do it in my head, yes.
 4 Q. Even I can do 600 times 4.
 5 A. I'm a little coffee deprived right now.
 6 Q. We know that there were a limited number of 7 e-mail messages in that 600 gigabytes of data. What 8 other kinds of data were on that --
 9 A. No, the 600 gig was purely e-mail. By the 10 time we get data in staging it is e-mail and 11 attachments.
 12 Q. Out of all of that we've managed to find 13 this, is that right? I'm sorry, you don't know what 14 this is?
 15 MR. JONES: Object to the form of the 16 question.
 17 MR. BYMAN: I've withdrawn it already. I
 18 think, unless somebody wants to tackle me, I've 19 done enough to Ms. Gorman.
 20 THE COURT: Do you have any other questions?
 21 MR. JONES: Yes, I do.
 22 REDIRECT EXAMINATION
 23 BY MR. JONES:
 24 Q. Ms. Gorman, you were just asked by Mr. Byman
 25 about the key word search that was done last night. Do

79:1 you have that in mind?
 2 A. I'm sorry?
 3 Q. Do you have it in mind?
 4 A. Yes.
 5 Q. What was the volume of data or documents
 6 that that key word search yielded?
 7 A. Around 32,000, potentially a little more.
 8 And change.
 9 Q. And that's a different search than the date
 10 search that you described earlier?
 11 A. Yes.
 12 Q. Questioning you about staging. 600
 13 gigabytes of data in staging, some of which you now
 14 know included data from the so-called Brooklyn tapes?
 15 A. Yes.
 16 Q. What would have been involved -- would it
 17 have been easier to try to figure out how to go in,
 18 segregate out, find out which of this data goes back to 19 the Brooklyn tapes, would that have been easier to do?
 20 Or would it have been easier to process everything that 21 was in staging? First of all, do you even understand
 22 the question?
 23 A. Would it have been easier to search the 24 subset? Is that what you're asking.
 25 Q. Let me ask a different question.

80:1 Would there have been a way for the data
 2 that was in staging, if somebody had said to you -- one
 3 of the questions that were asked by opposing counsel,
 4 somebody had said to you: Go into the staging area and 5 from this 600 gigabytes, figure out what part of that 6 comes from the Brooklyn tapes, would you have been able 7 to do that?
 8 A. I don't think so. We lose that 9 association -- the data gets really merged together as 10 it moves through the process, so certain distinctions,
 11 like what original DLT tape it came from, get sort of 12 lost in the translation.
 13 MR. JONES: That's all I have.
 14 THE COURT: Can I just ask a couple of 15 questions? And I apologize, I want to make sure
 16 I'm understanding your testimony. And please
 17 correct me if I'm wrong.
 18 As I understand what you're telling me,
 19 there were sort of three problems here. The 20 first is that there was a large part of, or 600
 21 gigabytes of information in the staging area
 22 that just hadn't been searched?
 23 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 24 THE COURT: Problem number two is sort of 25 Friday's problem when we discovered under the

81:1 script that was being used attachments that had
 2 been decoupled were not picked up in the search?
 3 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 4 THE COURT: And problem three is the Sunday
 5 problem when we discovered that the e-mails
 6 inserted from Lotus weren't being searched at 7 all either?
 8 THE WITNESS: Yes. Weren't being pulled up,
 9 yes.
 10 THE COURT: The attachment problem. Do we 11 know, can we quantify that?
 12 THE WITNESS: There was a number of 13 attachments that got passed off on Friday night.
 14 We did not deduplicate that number.
 15 THE COURT: You mean you don't know the 16 number?
 17 THE WITNESS: No, no. So the number, so
 18 the -- I heard a 4,000 type number. I can't 19 remember the exact number. But the distinction
 20 there is we didn't make any attempt to what I
 21 would call deduplicate those attachments. So if 22 we found an e-mail and it was associated with an 23 attachment and another one was associated with 24 the same attachment, we pulled it twice. We 25 were very simple and straight in the way we

82:1 extracted the data.
 2 THE COURT: The Sunday issue, the Lotus
 3 issue, we know the quantity of that that gets us
 4 down to the 166.
 5 THE WITNESS: For the two months, yes.
 6 THE COURT: Were you aware that there was 7 apparently a search done in May of 2004 looking 8 for these same parameters?
 9 THE WITNESS: I've heard that, yes.
 10 THE COURT: Did you ever go back and try to 11 find the code used to run that search?
 12 THE WITNESS: My expectation is that that
 13 was the standard inquiry tool run by our -- now
 14 run by the IT investigations team. I don't know
 15 if had it any enhancements done between May and 16 when I showed up.
 17 THE COURT: But your team didn't go back and 18 check those searches?
 19 THE WITNESS: No.
 20 THE COURT: Do you know if these two 21 problems we've discussed, the Lotus and the 22 decoupling problem, existed in that search?
 23 THE WITNESS: Based on what we saw of the 24 inquiry tool, I am 90 percent sure that the 25 Lotus content would not have been pulled back in

83:1 that search.
 2 Because the reason that we built scripts
 3 was -- one of the reasons was to compensate for 4 that. The attachment I would expect was handled
 5 properly, but having not inspected it.
 6 THE COURT: The numbers we talked about on
 7 Lotus is that on the 600 gigabytes or did you
 8 rerun from May?
 9 THE WITNESS: We run everything against the 10 full archive.
 11 THE COURT: That was in the archive and 12 you've ran everything?
 13 THE WITNESS: Once we've gotten everything
 14 inserted, we run searches to make sure that in 15 total nothing is missed.
 16 THE COURT: Any other questions from either
 17 side?
 18 Thank you very much.
 19 (Witness excused.)
 20 THE COURT: Who is going to testify next on 21 behalf of Morgan Stanley?
 22 MR. KLAPPER: Your Honor, that would be 23 Robert Saunders.
 24 THEREUPON,
 25 ROBERT J. SAUNDERS

84:1 having been first duly sworn, was examined and
 2 testified as follows:
 3 THE COURT: Do you swear to tell the truth,
 4 the whole truth and nothing but the truth?
 5 THE WITNESS: I do.
 6 DIRECT EXAMINATION
 7 BY MR. KLAPPER:
 8 Q. Would you please state your name for the 9 record?
 10 A. Robert John Saunders.
 11 Q. Mr. Saunders, where do you work?
 12 A. I work for Morgan Stanley.
 13 Q. And what do you do for Morgan Stanley?
 14 A. I'm an executive director in the Information
 15 Technology Division as a part of Institutional
 16 Securities.
 17 Q. What do your job responsibilities include
 18 within that division?
 19 A. I'm responsible for the operation of the 20 UNIX and storage plant in North America.
 21 Q. Are you responsible for things other than 22 operation? In other words, hardware, other issues like
 23 that?
 24 A. Sure. So specifically my groups are 25 responsible for the maintenance of the server hardware,

85:1 so the Dell, Sun Computers, Hewlett Packard, the
2 operating system that run on top of those such as UNIX
3 variants and also the storage associated with those 4 servers.

5 Q. For purposes of the issues that are before
6 the Court today, the retrieval, restoration and review
7 of e-mails, where within those three categories of 8 topics does your expertise and your responsibilities
9 lie at Morgan Stanley?

10 A. Sure. So the teams that I'm responsible for 11 are responsible for the retrieval and the restoration
12 process is the part of what you described.

13 Q. So the first two prongs?

14 A. That's right.

15 Q. The third prong, the review process, you're 16 not responsible for that; is that correct?

17 A. That's correct.

18 Q. Regarding today's testimony, are you
19 prepared to talk today about the steps that are taken
20 by Morgan Stanley and its vendors to process backup
21 tapes on to an archive system to review e-mails?

22 A. Yes.

23 Q. Are you also prepared to talk today about 24 the events of the past year and this past weekend,
25 including last night, regarding the discovery of

86:1 additional tapes?

2 A. Yes.

3 Q. Let's start first with this past weekend.

4 At your deposition, which was taken last
5 week, you were asked a number of times, were you not,
6 by counsel for the other side if you had searched for 7 additional tapes in the spring and summer of 2004. Do
8 you remember being asked questions along that line?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. And what was your testimony, sir?

11 A. My testimony was that to the best of my 12 knowledge at that time that there were searches
13 performed in the spring and summer of 2004 and that 14 those searches were successful, meaning that further
15 tapes were not found.

16 Q. And just for clarification for the Court,
17 when you say searches, you mean computer searches or 18 what do you mean by searches?

19 A. By searches I would indicate physical sweep
20 of technology spaces that could possibly have contained
21 backup tapes.

22 Q. Was the testimony that you gave during your 23 deposition accurate, sir?

24 A. It was. To the best of my knowledge at that 25 point, you know, I was aware of conversations with

87:1 people that had worked for me that such searches were
2 performed and were successful. However, my knowledge
3 was not personal in nature in that I had not performed
4 said searches.

5 Q. After your deposition, which took place I
6 believe last Wednesday or Thursday, did you take any 7 steps to engage in any other sweeps looking for
8 additional tapes?

9 A. Yes, I did.

10 Q. Why? Why did you do that?

11 A. Well, during my deposition on Thursday, as 12 you indicated, I was asked a number of times by counsel
13 regarding what had happened in the previous year, what
14 searches, how did I know that searches had occurred,
15 what types of reporting had been given to me about it.
16 On reflection of my testimony, I realized
17 that my testimony was based on comments from people who 18 had worked for me or were associated with my groups,
19 but I didn't have personal knowledge.

20 So I took it upon myself to ask the tape
21 management team to execute a further search this past
22 weekend, specifically Saturday morning and to search
23 the New York City data centers of Morgan Stanley for 24 additional tapes.

25 Q. Precisely when did these searches -- or I

88:1 should say sweeps, when did these sweeps begin?

2 A. Sure. So as I just indicated, I asked that
3 the tape management team execute a search in the data
4 centers on Saturday.

5 I took a further step of on Friday afternoon
6 I personally went to two sites in midtown Manhattan of 7 which I'm very familiar due to my role at Morgan
8 Stanley and some of the previous positions that I've 9 had, and I executed those searches Friday.

10 And then the Brooklyn and the Jersey city
11 centers were searched on Saturday morning and Saturday
12 afternoon.

13 Q. In the context of these searches both in 14 Manhattan and in Brooklyn, what specifically were you
15 looking for? And let me also add: What was your 16 understanding of the team who was assisting you as 17 looking for?

18 A. Sure. Specifically we were looking for the 19 existence of electronic backup data tapes of any sort,
20 whether they were in current use or whether they had 21 been in use in previous years.

22 Also, we were looking for containers that
23 may have been used either in the present or in the past
24 with respect to managing those tapes.

25 Q. Why were you looking in the particular

89:1 places you looked in Manhattan and Brooklyn? What
 2 caused you to pick those particular places to do this
 3 additional sweep?
 4 A. We went to the data centers where at various
 5 points in the last number of years that tape backups
 6 had occurred, whether they were the enterprise type
 7 backups of our more recent backup infrastructure or 8 whether they were kind of Legacy stand-alone backups
 9 for individual servers that were more likely to have 10 happened in the late '90s.
 11 Q. What I'd like to do now is talk a little bit
 12 about what you found and what the group who worked for 13 you found when you did these searches. I understand
 14 you have prepared, with the assistance of counsel, a
 15 chart to help you discuss that; is that correct?
 16 A. That's correct. It would help if I could 17 speak to that chart.
 18 MR. BYMAN: May we get a copy of that chart?
 19 MR. KLAPPER: Absolutely.
 20 (Defendant's Exhibit 1 was marked for 21 identification.)
 22 BY MR. KLAPPER:
 23 Q. I'm showing you what has been marked as 24 Defendant's Demonstrative Hearing Exhibit number 1.
 25 Take a look at that.

90:1 Do you recognize that document?
 2 A. I do.
 3 Q. Could you identify what that is for the
 4 Court?
 5 A. Yes, it's a document that I prepared with 6 counsel to explain the tapes that were found this past
 7 Friday and Saturday.
 8 Q. All right. Is the chart that you're looking 9 at an accurate summary of what you did and what you
 10 found and what your group found this weekend?
 11 A. Yes, it is.
 12 Q. Would it assist you for purposes of your 13 testimony today to use that chart?
 14 A. Yes, sir.
 15 MR. KLAPPER: Your Honor, with your
 16 permission, may I publish the chart in a blow-up
 17 form?
 18 MR. SCAROLA: We'd be happy to have it
 19 introduced into evidence.
 20 THE COURT: Sure. Do you want to offer it
 21 into evidence?
 22 MR. KLAPPER: Yes, Your Honor.
 23 MR. SCAROLA: We have one with an evidence
 24 sticker on it.
 25 MR. KLAPPER: Multiple stickers.

91:1 (Defendant's Exhibit 1 was marked in
 2 evidence.)
 3 BY MR. KLAPPER:
 4 Q. Okay. I'd like you to walk us, if you
 5 could, Mr. Saunders, through each of these rows
 6 starting with the location 1585 Broadway, New York
 7 City. First of all, what is located there?
 8 A. I'm sorry, what's in 1585 Broadway?
 9 Q. Yes.
 10 A. 1585 Broadway is the worldwide headquarters
 11 of Morgan Stanley.
 12 Q. And why specifically did you look there?
 13 A. The sites that I searched in midtown
 14 Manhattan, there are three floors in 1585 Broadway
 15 which contain technology, so servers, storage, tape
 16 drive, etcetera.
 17 And in the next building that I'll speak
 18 about, 1221, there's one site where we used to have 19 technology. So one floor in that building.
 20 Specifically in 1585 it's the 8th, 9th and 29th floors.
 21 Q. Did you search the 8th, 9th and 29th floors?
 22 A. That's correct.
 23 Q. And did you find tapes on any of those 24 floors?
 25 A. I found tapes only on the 9th floor.

92:1 Q. What tapes did you find?
 2 A. According to this chart I found 12, and this
 3 is going to get a little granular, so I apologize, but
 4 to be specific 12 DLT type IV tapes, 31 DLT type III
 5 tapes and 10 4-millimeters tapes.
 6 The 12 DLT type IVs, those are relatively 7 current tapes. And they are like the tapes that we 8 talked about in terms of the 35,000 e-mail tapes that
 9 we know as the e-mail tapes.
 10 Q. All right. Now, just to stop you there.
 11 When you say "current," for the benefit of the Court
 12 and all in the room, what do you mean by that?
 13 A. They're currently in use as an enterprise
 14 practice to backup data today. Some of these other
 15 types are out of use and we call them Legacy.
 16 Q. Do you know when the DLT type IV tapes first
 17 began to be used at Morgan Stanley?
 18 A. I believe that time frame was around 1999.
 19 Q. Moving down, stopping there for a second,
 20 you found 12 of those tapes?
 21 A. That's right.
 22 Q. And then you have a notation regarding type
 23 III tapes, how old are those?
 24 A. Those were in use definitely in the '98 and 25 '99 time frame. They were out of use, I would say, by

93:1 end of '99, early 2000, but I couldn't tell you when we
2 started using them.

3 Q. How many of those tapes did you find?

4 A. I found 31.

5 Q. Did you find any additional tapes at the 6 1585 location?

7 A. Sure. 10 4-millimeter tapes. I don't
8 believe we ever used those as backup tapes in terms of 9 in a large scale. And these particular tapes didn't
10 appear to be kind of what I would consider to be normal
11 Morgan Stanley backup tapes.

12 Q. Why did you look on the particular floors
13 you looked at for tapes? I think you mentioned 8, 9, 14 29.

15 A. Sure. So these are the main technology
16 sites in 1585 Broadway. So in previous years, so in 17 the '98, '99 time frame when technology really serviced
18 one building. These were the sites where the 19 technology that would support the businesses, whether 20 it be data basis or e-mail servers or web servers or 21 any type of application server that might serve the 22 business, like a financial analytics package. So these 23 floors actually contained the computer on racks with 24 the storage. And they supported the businesses in 25 1585.

94:1 Q. And you found tapes, was it the 9th floor?

2 A. That's right.

3 Q. Could you explain, walk us through what
4 happened. You obviously went up to the 9th floor and 5 started looking, can you walk the Court through that
6 search and sweep?

7 A. Certainly. So there are racks of equipment.
8 Some of them older, some of them newer. I proceeded to 9 step through each of the rows, in fact, I did each row
10 twice and was looking for any tapes that may be 11 freestanding or that may have been in a jukebox. And a 12 jukebox is just a fancy name for a tape drive for any 13 freestanding tape drive.

14 Q. And how confident do you feel today that you
15 have, from that sweep of 1585 Broadway, identified,
16 located all of the tapes, all the backup tapes that 17 exist there?

18 A. Very confident.

19 Q. And what's the basis for your confidence?

20 A. Well, at this point I took it upon myself on 21 Friday to go. In the past my knowledge was based on 22 others' comments. But I felt strongly in that I've 23 been in the technology department for eight years. And 24 previous to this job I was someone who would be in the 25 comm rooms for certain parts of my job. And since

95:1 these are older spaces, I knew that the tape management
2 team, who largely spend their time in Brooklyn and
3 Pavonia, that they would have less knowledge of this 4 area. And I would be the best person to perform an 5 exhaustive search.

6 Q. How much time have you spent in Manhattan to 7 know where to look?

8 A. Eight years.

9 Q. Is there anyone you know who has 10 significantly more knowledge at that location other 11 than yourself?

12 A. No.

13 Q. And the total tapes you found, what was it?

14 A. In 1585, 53 tapes.

15 Q. Was that the first place you looked?

16 A. No, first place was 1221 Avenue of the 17 Americas also known as 1221 6th Avenue.

18 Q. For the benefit of the Court, could you walk
19 us through what you were looking for, where you went 20 within that building to sweep for tapes?

21 A. Sure. This actually goes to why I went to 22 1585 in the first place.

23 After reviewing my testimony and thinking
24 about this on Friday morning and realizing I had a
25 couple holes in my schedule on Friday afternoon, the

96:1 third floor comm room in 1221 is no longer used by
2 Institutional Securities, it's used by IIG, which is
3 the Individual Investor Group. So it's a different
4 line of business.

5 We cleared out of there, I believe, two and 6 a half years ago and removed all but two or three 7 servers that basically support connectivity between 8 building, but that's all, there's no computing going on 9 in that building from an ISG perspective.

10 Q. Just to set the stage a bit, this is the 11 third floor at 1221 Avenue of the Americas?

12 A. That's right.

13 Q. Were there any other floors at 1221 Avenue
14 of the Americas that you went to look?

15 A. No. This was the main communication room
16 where our technology was kept.

17 Q. Are there any other floors at 1221?

18 A. Not to my knowledge, no.

19 Q. So you're on the third floor and what do you
20 see?

21 A. So I went to the third floor, knowing that 22 we had not been in that room for several years. And my 23 thought was if I want personal knowledge and where is 24 the place that someone may not have looked if they did
25 not have as exhaustive a knowledge of the area and

97:1 that's where I went. And I did find, when you walk
2 into the room it's essentially a large room full of 3 empty racks at this point. Because the technology has 4 been pulled, other than the IIG technology, which is in
5 a separate part of the room. There is a metal
6 freestanding file cabinet on the west wall and on top
7 of it neatly stacked were 129 tapes of various formats.

8 Q. Do you know how those tapes got there?

9 A. My -- I do not know how they got there.

10 Q. I should have asked that earlier with 11 respect to the 53 at 1585 Broadway, do you have any 12 idea how they got there?

13 A. I do not.

14 Q. Walk the Court, if you could, through what 15 you saw in this neatly arranged stack.

16 A. Sure. According to the chart, I found 7 DLT
17 type IV tapes, which, as I indicated previously, are 18 fairly recent tapes in that they're still in use, but
19 they do go back to the late '90s. 60 DLT type III
20 tapes, which are no longer in use. 36 8-millimeter
21 tapes, which we did use in the late '90s and two sets
22 of tapes which I have no knowledge of whatsoever, 23
23 90-millimeter.

24 Q. So that's an error, it should be meters?

25 A. There's two Ms and it should be 1 M.

98:1 Q. Any other tapes that you found at 1221
2 Avenue of the Americas?

3 A. That was the total tape.

4 Q. And the total was?

5 A. 129.

6 Q. You have two other locations listed, Pavonia
7 Newport and 1 PierrePont Plaza, did you personally
8 inspect those places?

9 A. I did not. I asked members of the tape
10 management team to inspect those areas. Those are 11 areas where they spend 90 percent of their time, day in 12 day out, 24 by 7. And I asked them to search those 13 sites.

14 Q. Who in particular did you ask?

15 A. John Pamula and Robert Volk, V-O-L-K.

16 Q. Who do they work for?

17 A. They work for Glenn Seickel. They are the 18 tape management team also known as the burden of proof
19 team. And Glenn works for Rob Place, who works for me.

20 Q. Are the two gentlemen who went to the 21 Brooklyn locations employees of Morgan Stanley?

22 A. They are not, they are contractors.

23 Q. What involvement did you personally have in 24 their search in these two locations in Brooklyn?

25 A. On Friday afternoon, previous to my going to

99:1 1221 and subsequently to 1585, I spoke to John Pamula,
2 who is the manager of the tape management team. I
3 called him personally to let me know I wanted him to 4 execute a search on the weekend of those two sites. I
5 let him know that he was going to be reporting to me in 6 this capacity and that I would be giving him
7 instruction as to what to look for and how exhaustive
8 to be and how to report to me.

9 Q. Were you on the phone with him, on the cell
10 phone with him on a regular basis?

11 A. Yes, we spoke a couple of times on Friday
12 just to kind of get a sense. I spoke to him before I 13 performed my own search and after the search to 14 indicate that I had found tapes, which I wasn't 15 expecting to, and that as a result I wanted him to be 16 aware that when he performed his search on Saturday to 17 be of a mind that he could very well find tapes.

18 THE COURT: Again, I want to make sure I'm 19 following as we go. Did you tell me both 20 Mr. Pamula and Mr. Volk are contractors not
21 employees?

22 THE WITNESS: They are not employees. They 23 work for Siemens. We have contracted with 24 Siemens to perform our tape management function
25 at Morgan Stanley.

100:1 BY MR. KLAPPER:

2 Q. Do you have an understanding based on this
3 sweep that Mr. Pamula and his colleague engaged in, do
4 you have an understanding of exactly what they did,
5 where they went within these buildings and what they 6 found?

7 A. I do.

8 Q. Let's start with Pavonia, Newport, Jersey
9 City?

10 A. There are two main data center spaces in 11 that building for Morgan Stanley, the 9th and the 11th
12 floors. They walked those floors. And they're kind of 13 open aisle rows and rows of computing equipment. There
14 are also a couple of storage spaces within that area
15 and a couple of spaces where there are desks for people
16 to sit with computers, basically to do system work, if 17 necessary.

18 Q. Do you know if Mr. Pamula and his colleague
19 searched both the 9th and 11th floor?

20 A. They did.

21 Q. Did they search both those areas?

22 A. They did.

23 Q. How do you know that?

24 A. Because I asked him and he gave me specific 25 information to my question.

101:1 Q. And what did he find? What is your
2 understanding as to what Mr. Pamula found and his
3 colleague found on Saturday at these locations?

4 A. In the sweep on the 11th floor in a storage
5 room they found two boxes that appeared to be Recall
6 boxes. And I'm not sure this has been in front of 7 Court yet, but we use a company called Recall for our 8 off-site tape storage. It's a company based in New 9 Jersey. He found two Recall boxes of tapes and they
10 contain 30 tapes each. And they appeared to be boxes
11 of tapes appropriately labelled from the 2002 time
12 frame.

13 In addition, he found one freestanding tape,
14 which was not labelled, on a shelf in that facility.
15 And that is the total of the 61 from Pavonia.

16 Q. Please explain, again, if you could, why
17 Mr. Pamula, pursuant to your instructions and his 18 colleague looked at that particular location in Jersey
19 City?

20 A. So our current backup practice is to, in 21 light of 9/11 and other events where a physical 22 disaster occurred, we would backup data outside the 23 location. I mentioned earlier in our history
24 technology sitting in a specific building, say 1585,
25 would support just that building.

102:1 Post 9/11 we've moved to an off-site backup
2 methodology. What that means is let's say 80 percent
3 of our technology is now housed between the Brooklyn
4 data center, so one PierrePont Plaza and the Pavonia
5 Jersey City location that you backup the Pavonia data
6 to Brooklyn and the Brooklyn data to Pavonia. Even if 7 a physical event occurred, the backup tapes would be at 8 the other location. And even just for a short period
9 of time they'd be there because what we do is we 10 off-site them in a time period after the data is backed
11 up.

12 Q. So the fourth and final you mentioned, I
13 think PierrePont Plaza, the fourth and final location
14 that was searched or swept was that location in 15 Brooklyn, correct?

16 A. Yes.

17 Q. And tell me what your understanding is as to 18 what Mr. Pamula and his colleague found there?

19 A. Sure. So they searched the second, third
20 and fourth floors which contain data centers in 21 Brooklyn. The fourth and the second floors are 22 recently built within the last couple of years. And 23 after having my searching the 1221 third floor, which 24 was decommissioned, I was also aware of the fact that 25 the third floor of Brooklyn is an older space and does

103:1 contain some of the older technology from that time
2 frame. And I indicated to John that that was a place
3 to search, perhaps more carefully because some of these
4 older tapes like I found in 1221 could have been there.
5 None were found.

6 Q. Let me ask you, did Mr. Pamula also look on 7 the second and fourth floors?

8 A. That's right.

9 Q. But he also looked thinking he may find
10 something on the third floor?

11 A. Right.

12 Q. What was found, if anything?

13 A. Nothing.

14 Q. All these tapes, where are they now and what 15 did you do with them, if anything?

16 A. Sure. So I discovered the tapes in 1585 and 17 1221 on Friday afternoon. I spoke to John Pamula about 18 executing the search. I made counsel aware of the fact
19 that I had found tapes. And I had, at that point I
20 contacted NDCI, our forensics vendor, that I would need
21 their assistance over the weekend in basically going
22 through these tapes in an expedited manner.

23 Q. Where is NDCI located?

24 A. Manhattan, 41 Madison.

25 Q. If you could explain to the Court exactly,

104:1 if you know, what it is they do, what it is you were
2 having NDCI do?

3 A. Sure. NDCI stands for National Data
4 Conversion Institute. And they are expert in the field
5 of extracting data from either current technology
6 sources or legacy data technologies.

7 Q. And what is your understanding as to what
8 they were looking for, this weekend when they received
9 these tapes?

10 A. Sure. So my knowledge of these tapes is 11 largely based on knowledge of Morgan Stanley's backup
12 practices going back to '98 and '99, it was also based 13 on either handwritten or printed instructions on the 14 tapes, but I didn't have a knowledge of what was 15 actually on the tapes.

16 So the best course of action and what I did
17 was I had the tapes gathered and delivered on Saturday
18 afternoon to NDCI so that they could go through the sum
19 total of 182 tapes, specifically looking for e-mail.
20 And, secondly, specifically looking for e-mail in or 21 about the time frame that would be relevant to this
22 matter.

23 Q. And have they started that process?

24 A. They have.

25 Q. And how far into that process are they?

105:1 A. As of 8 a.m. this morning when I got an
2 update from my contact, they had gone through 47
3 percent of the tapes. It's 85 out of the 182. And in 4 addition to my instructing them to look for e-mail, and
5 if e-mail were found, what the time frame would be, I
6 instructed them to -- I'm sorry, I just lost my train
7 of thought.

8 Q. You were instructing them --

9 A. I instructed them not only to look for 10 e-mail and what time frame, but I did give them a
11 listing of the tapes that I thought might be more
12 likely to have e-mail from this time period that would 13 be more relevant to this Court.

14 Q. Do you know if they looked at that list and 15 searched to see if those particular tapes contained
16 e-mails?

17 A. Yes. So the three priorities that I gave 18 them, basically the first three sets. They have gone
19 through those and no e-mail has been found.

20 Q. Could you, using the chart that we've marked
21 and admitted as Demonstrative Exhibit 1, could you tell
22 the Court which tapes that you thought might contain 23 e-mail were searched and turned out not to contain
24 e-mail?

25 A. Yes. From the 1585 tapes there were two

106:1 sets that peaked my interest for some reason --

2 Q. Let me stop you, you're talking now first
3 row?

4 A. First row, 1585. Of that first line, the 12
5 DLT type IVs there were two tapes that were labeled
6 with, and I apologize, I'll say it slowly, HQNTLD2 and 7 that's a server name at Morgan Stanley. And what that 8 indicates is a 1585 Lotus Notes Windows based server.

9 Q. And why did you give higher priority to 10 those particular tapes when you communicated with NDCI?

11 A. In the late '90s and early 2000s Morgan
12 Stanley entered into a pilot of e-mail with Lotus
13 Notes. And they were specifically based on the Windows
14 platform. And in my mind that was quite possibly an 15 e-mail server in that time frame.

16 Q. And those tapes that you suspected might 17 contain e-mail, those have been searched?

18 A. That's correct.

19 Q. And the result again?

20 A. No e-mail was found.

21 Q. What was the second group of tapes that you
22 have ascribed some level of priority to?

23 A. Sure. The second group are again, on that
24 first line, in 1585 Broadway, the 31 DLT type IIIs.

25 The reason why they peaked my interest was, one, the

107:1 vast majority were unlabeled since they were the type
2 III tapes which were in use in the '98 and '99 time
3 frame. And, lastly, three of the 31 did have a
4 handwritten date including the year 1998. That peaked
5 my interest.

6 Q. All right. And have those tapes also been
7 searched by NDCI?

8 A. All 31 of those have been searched. No
9 e-mail was found.

10 Q. What was the third group of tapes that you
11 ascribed some level of priority to?

12 A. The third group of tapes were a group of 30
13 plus tapes, they were the 8 millimeters from 1221. So
14 I'm now in the second row of the chart. And the server
15 name, which is escaping me to some degree at this 16 point, but I could refresh my memory. They were 17 basically -- the server name indicated quite possibly a
18 Novell Netware server from 1221 and it is likely with 19 the server name, which I believe was NYPUBF03,
20 N-Y-P-U-B-F-O-3, that it could have been an e-mail
21 server in the time frame of '98/'99, could have 22 contained cc mail.

23 Q. Has NDCI reviewed those tapes?

24 A. They have reviewed the majority of those 25 tapes, not all of them. And so far no mail was found.

108:1 Q. What is the status? You've talked about
2 they've gone through 47 percent of the tapes. Maybe I
3 should phrase it this way: When are they likely to
4 finish getting through 100 percent of the tapes?

5 A. I believe that they'll either finish late
6 tonight or early tomorrow. They've been working on 7 this round-the-clock since I would say 2 p.m. Saturday
8 afternoon when I dropped off the tapes.

9 Q. Are you receiving regular updates on them?

10 A. I am.

11 Q. If you could help us help the Court
12 understand how these tapes, the ones you've described
13 on this chart, could have been found so late?

14 A. Sure. Obviously, I've testified that on 15 Thursday my comments, which were truthful and to my 16 knowledge at that point that we had performed searches,
17 that we had exhausted the information and that we 18 weren't going to find further tapes. We went ahead and 19 executed a further search. And when I came upon the 20 tapes in the decommissioned comm room in 1221 I was 21 obviously not happy about that. I had gone to a room
22 that really hadn't been touched by people from my area
23 for some time and found that someone had kind of 24 co-located a number of tapes. They were not hard to 25 find, they were just sitting on that metal shelf.

109:1 At that point I realized that some of these 2 older tapes that do not look like, in large part, the 3 tapes that are in use and have been in use since the 4 '99 to 2002 time frame that we've been extracting
 5 e-mail off of to put into the e-mail archive, even
 6 though they didn't look like it, they didn't have bar
 7 codes, they clearly had not been used in a large tape
 8 silo such as we've been using for the last four or five 9 years. I didn't have personal knowledge of what was on 10 those tapes. So as a result I wanted to execute a -- 11 not just recovering the tapes, but having them, the 12 data recovered so that I could know for sure and 13 testify today that, in fact, no e-mail was found.

14 Q. What was the process that you had in place
 15 prior to this weekend, prior to doing the sweep? What 16 was the process you had in place to do retrieval and to 17 do restores?

18 A. As part of preparation for my testimony I
 19 worked with counsel on creating a document that might 20 better help explain this. I'm wondering if we might be 21 able to make that useful.

22 MR. KLAPPER: Your Honor, may I approach?

23 THE COURT: Yes. Why don't you show it to 24 Plaintiff's counsel first.

25 Any objection to the witness referring to?

110:1 MR. BYMAN: Since we can't understand it
 2 until he tells us what it is.

3 MR. KLAPPER: It was meant to facilitate 4 things.

5 THE COURT: Do you have an extra copy or
 6 not?

7 MR. KLAPPER: I do.

8 BY MR. KLAPPER:

9 Q. I'm showing you this document which has been
 10 marked for demonstrative purposes as Exhibit 2.

11 (Defendant's Exhibit 2 was marked for 12 identification.)

13 BY MR. KLAPPER:

14 Q. Do you recognize that?

15 A. I do.

16 Q. Could you identify for the Court what that 17 is?

18 A. Yes, it's a pictorial representation of the 19 retrieval, restoration and review process. I put this 20 together with counsel in order to better explain some 21 of the work that my teams do.

22 Q. Do you feel it accurately reflects the 23 process you're about to talk about?

24 A. Yes.

25 Q. Will it help with your testimony?

111:1 A. I believe so.

2 MR. KLAPPER: Your Honor, with your
 3 permission, I'd like to offer this into evidence
 4 as Demonstrative Exhibit number 2, Hearing
 5 Exhibit number 2.

6 MR. BYMAN: We don't have any problem with
 7 this. I don't know --

8 THE COURT: I don't think it comes into 9 evidence. It's labelled and I'm happy to make 10 it part of the record.

11 MR. KLAPPER: I was trying to be consistent
 12 with the last exhibit.

13 THE COURT: Well, this we'll just keep 14 marked for identification.

15 MR. KLAPPER: May I publish?

16 THE COURT: I've seen it. It's been sitting
 17 in front of me. I'm not sure what you mean.

18 MR. KLAPPER: May I put it up here?

19 MR. BYMAN: Your Honor, I think he's afraid
 20 of perishing, so he wants to publish.

21 MR. JONES: There are a lot of Federal 22 Judges that make you say those words, Your
 23 Honor.

24 THE COURT: I'm not going to comment.

25 BY MR. KLAPPER:

112:1 Q. If you could, Mr. Saunders, walk the Court
 2 through what this document, which you've labelled
 3 Retrieval, Restoration and Review process. And as 4 you're doing that, explain what your role and your
 5 group's role is in that process?

6 A. Certainly. So speaking about our usual
 7 corporate backup practice, starting in the upper
 8 left-hand corner, you see users working at work
 9 stations and the arrows pointing up to copy data.
 10 That's to indicate information on their work stations
 11 basically being copied to a central repository, a
 12 server, it could be an e-mail server, it could be a
 13 file server.

14 Then, so those servers would contain the 15 data.

16 The arrow to the right --

17 Q. Let me stop you there. Explain, if you
 18 could, the backup process. This is individuals working
 19 at their individual computers?

20 A. That's right. So the standard practice at 21 Morgan Stanley is information is not kept on individual
 22 work station computers. Work, whether it be individual
 23 or work group products, are saved to network drives or 24 network file servers. And, obviously, e-mail, we have 25 a corporate e-mail practice. So the e-mail is kept on 113:1 corporate servers, not on individual desktops.

 2 Q. And these e-mails are saved within the 3 server?
 4 A. That's right.
 5 Q. Where do they go from there?
 6 A. Sure. So our backup practice is that we 7 have processes that run on a nightly basis which would 8 copy that data to central tape silos, which are 9 basically large refrigerator-size devices that contain
 10 tape libraries. They can contain several hundred tapes
 11 and they can contain a robotic arm which would have the 12 ability to manipulate those tapes.
 13 And in the middle of the document on the top
 14 those are the location of the tape silos. And the 15 arrow is to duplicate the software process of copying
 16 that data into the silos.
 17 Q. Do the tapes just stay in those silos?
 18 A. The tapes stay in the silo until they fill,
 19 at which point the software would indicate to the tape
 20 management team that the tapes are to be pulled, boxed
 21 and shipped off-site to our vendor.
 22 Q. Sort of an automatic notification process?
 23 A. That's right.
 24 Q. You say boxed and shipped to your outside
 25 vendor, what vendor is that?

114:1 A. We use Recall. Capital R-E-C-A-L-L.
 2 Q. And who is responsible for shipping these 3 tapes to Recall? Is that individuals within your 4 group?
 5 A. That's correct. The tape management team is 6 responsible for getting those tapes to the Recall
 7 facility in Jersey.
 8 Q. Are there particular individuals within that
 9 group who have principal responsibilities of packing
 10 that up and sending it Recall?
 11 A. Yes, the members of that team.
 12 Q. I mean, is there a name?
 13 A. John Pamula is the manager of that team.
 14 Q. When the tapes get to Recall, what happens
 15 there to the extent you know?
 16 A. Certainly. Recall records the delivery of 17 the boxes of the shipments into their systems. And 18 then they are stored with other Morgan Stanley boxes
 19 of, you know, similar type.
 20 Q. And do they just stay at Recall, what
 21 happens with these boxes filled with backup tapes?
 22 A. Certainly. So if they are not requested,
 23 those tapes stay at the Recall site in perpetuity.
 24 Q. Under what circumstances would someone
 25 request that these tapes be pulled out of Recall?

115:1 A. There are two types of request that I would
 2 speak to; one is a normal business-as-usual restore
 3 practice, for example, a couple months down the line a
 4 user happened to delete either a folder or some other
 5 documents in their home directory. And they make a
 6 request of my team to perform a restore.
 7 Since the data is not kept on site or
 8 depending on the type of data, we would go to request
 9 the tapes from Recall, bring them back on site and 10 restore the data for the user.
 11 The second type of restore would be for 12 something relating to a legal matter, say a litigation
 13 or a regulatory matter.
 14 Q. I don't want to simplify this too much, but 15 does the retrieval prong of this process take us from 16 here to here?
 17 A. That's correct.
 18 Q. Does it go all the way up to the point of 19 getting to Recall?
 20 A. That is correct.
 21 Q. And at that point what's the next step?
 22 A. Well, it would depend on the time frame that 23 you're looking into, because the process changed
 24 significantly post January '03 and then prior to that.
 25 Q. Let's talk, if we could, about -- if you

116:1 could let us know what the process was prior to January
 2 1st, 2003 and then we'll move forward to after 2003.
 3 And before you do, let me ask you, is the pre-January
 4 1st, 2003 process depicted on this demonstrative?
 5 A. It is not. I tried to put something
 6 together for that, but it's a very complicated process
 7 that really did not -- it didn't come well with 8 pictures and, in fact, I'm going to take a moment to 9 kind of explain in more detail the lengthy process and 10 the difficulties that were associated with it.
 11 Q. Could you explain to the Court how the 12 process worked prior to January 1st, 2003?
 13 A. Certainly.
 14 So at that point when we were working with 15 the group IT security and working with legal to perform
 16 ad hoc restores to be responsive either to litigation
 17 or regulatory requests, the process would begin where 18 legal would contact IT security, which is another group
 19 within Institutional Securities IT. That's not my 20 team. They would work with them to explain the scope 21 of the request: How many users, what type of data, for 22 what time frame.
 23 Once that was understood, they would send 24 that information to -- if this was e-mail, they would 25 involve the messaging team. Depending on the time

117:1 frame, they would have to identify the set of users, as
 2 I said, they'd have to identify what e-mail system
 3 those users were on at the time. Once you understand
 4 the e-mail users, you have to go back and search for 5 what e-mail servers they were on. And because we run a
 6 large enterprise plant and we don't have many hundreds
 7 of e-mail servers, once you got to the particular
 8 e-mail server, there would be data partitions which 9 would contain multiple users on each partition.

10 Once you get to the partition level, the 11 messaging team was able to tell us the tape management
 12 and the backup team what particular partition and for 13 what days they wanted a restore.

14 Q. And this whole process is happening inhouse
 15 at Morgan Stanley?

16 A. This is all inhouse people at this point.
 17 So to continue, once they indicated to my
 18 team that the partition, the server and the time frame
 19 required, we would go and look at our Legacy backup
 20 databases to determine whether or not there was a valid
 21 backup for that date. And if there was, what tapes
 22 were required. Once we understood what tapes were 23 required, and in some cases it could be a single digit 24 in some cases it could be hundreds of tapes, we would 25 go to check our database of what boxes at Recall those

118:1 tapes were contained in.

2 We would then make a request of Recall to
 3 ship those boxes back to Morgan Stanley. We would put
 4 them in the room and we would have to manually go
 5 through the boxes of tapes looking for the right tape,
 6 separating them and then we would begin performing
 7 restores over the period of time.

8 Q. You did have a fairly lengthy process it
 9 sounds like, but did you have direct responsibility for 10 that process prior to January 1st, 2003?

11 A. I had -- well, to be specific, and I've been 12 specifically responsible for this area since December
 13 of 2003, but I was one of the managers in the area.
 14 Prior to 2003 we were very involved with our own
 15 inhouse staff in the retrieval and restoration process,
 16 but not in the review process.

17 Q. How effective, from your vantage point
 18 either as a manager or director within this group, how 19 effective was the pre-2003 process that you just 20 described working?

21 A. It was not very effective. We were taking 22 our own time, people who had been working on different
 23 efforts like project managing certain technology
 24 rollouts, all of a sudden we were managing a large 25 number of tapes, we were managing a large number of 119:1 restore requests. And when we got to the end of the 2 process of getting all the way through what is the

 3 scope of the request, what tapes are required
 4 performing the restores, legal and other folks were 5 commenting that it was not fast enough and we were not
 6 producing as much as they would need.

7 At that point we got National Data
 8 Conversion involved. And just to give you an example
 9 of why I have knowledge of why I felt we were 10 inefficient, once we gave them a couple of the restore
 11 processes that we our service had undertaken, they were 12 at least 20 to 30 percent more successful of getting 13 data e-mails off of those tapes than we were.

14 Q. How have you felt or what are your views as 15 to the effectiveness of NDCI throughout the entire 16 process that you've worked with them?

17 A. Sure. So beginning when we started with 18 them in the 2002 time frame coming through to now, 19 they've been very good partners. They've been 20 responsive. And they've done very good work for us.

21 Q. After January 1st, 2003 you started working
 22 with NDCI?

23 A. That's right.

24 Q. Could you explain to the Court what the 25 process is that is now in place post 2003?

120:1 A. If I could direct Your Honor's attention to
 2 the graphic, the bottom half of the graphic now
 3 indicates the process of working with NDCI. So to 4 start with, we would make requests of boxes of tapes.
 5 And then the arrow kind of coming down on the bottom
 6 right which then points to the microscope. NDCI, which
 7 is actually, they're an expert in data retrieval. So
 8 they're able to, whether it be a current type of tape
 9 or media or whether it be a legacy, they have 10 installations to get that information off of it quickly
 11 and efficiently. And, inevitably, because we're 12 dealing with physical media, we all have experience
 13 with VHS tapes or audio cassettes that sometimes
 14 there's errors. They are trained in how to either
 15 clean or make the best available data off of the tape
 16 in a timely manner.

17 So this process would, they would do the 18 extraction off of the data. And then they would take 19 the e-mails and they would put them into a condensed
 20 format, which is basically they would deduplicate mails
 21 that we had previously already brought inhouse.

22 Q. And let me just stop you there.

23 They're working off of what? These are the 24 original backup tapes that they receive from the Recall
 25 facilities?

121:1 A. Yes. So these are the tapes prior to the 2 2003 time frame, I guess what's been known as the 3 greater than 35,000 DLT tapes.
 4 Q. When they do their processing, when NDCI
 5 does their processing, what comes out, what's the 6 output from that work?
 7 A. Sure. So the output is -- starting with the 8 process, they were looking at not just every tape that 9 they had used, but every unique e-mail that they had 10 processed. They would take e-mails and copy them on to 11 an SDLT, which is a super DLT, which is different than 12 the DLT I mentioned. It's a denser tape. I believe
 13 the capacity is 150 gigabytes.
 14 Q. For the benefit of the Court reporter and 15 the Court, try to slow down.
 16 A. Sorry.
 17 Q. You may continue.
 18 A. They would make a copy of the SDLT, keep one
 19 inhouse at NDCI. They would ship us the other copy
 20 where my team would load that into an SDLT drive, a 21 drive that could read it. Where we would copy it on to 22 a disk, which is the graphic with the server in light
 23 in the box, which is indicating, that's what we call
 24 the staging area. This is where my team's
 25 responsibility would end and the e-mail archives team,

122:1 the e-mail archive team would work to process the data
 2 into the e-mail archive.
 3 Q. Prior to August 2004, who was responsible
 4 once you passed the SDLTs into the staging area, who
 5 took over the process from there?
 6 A. Arthur Reil and his team.
 7 Q. And after August 2004 who took over that 8 responsibility once you got these SDLTs into the 9 staging area?
 10 A. Allison Gorman.
 11 Q. Did your group or did you personally have 12 any other involvement in this process as depicted in 13 this exhibit after the tapes entered the staging area?
 14 A. No, I did not.
 15 Q. Did your group focus at all on whether the 16 tapes that came from Morgan Stanley that were processed
 17 by NDCI whether they contained e-mails responsive to 18 litigation?
 19 A. We were not responsible for the content of 20 the tapes. As I've indicated, we were responsible for 21 participating in the process to make sure that the sum
 22 total of tapes were delivered from the off-site vendor
 23 to NDCI, that NDCI performed their conversion and then
 24 once the SDLT, the condensed deduplicated results
 25 became available, that we would upload that on to

123:1 online disk at Morgan Stanley and make it available to
 2 the e-mail archive team.
 3 Q. What is the extent or what was the extent of 4 your group's and your personal interaction with legal
 5 in the context of this process?
 6 A. I personally and my team had no contact with 7 legal through this process. And we tend to call this 8 the e-mail restoration project. That's how we refer to 9 it.
 10 Q. In terms of implementation of this e-mail
 11 restoration project, how did that go? Did it go well
 12 during the initial stages?
 13 A. Sure. So, as I testified earlier, we kicked 14 the effort off formally at the end of 2003. And in the 15 January time frame of 2004 there was a weekly meeting
 16 where a number of team people from different parts of 17 IT, including Arthur Reil, myself, Glenn Seickel, Wray
 18 Stewart would meet to talk about how the project was 19 going, what pitfalls or what issues had come up, and to 20 basically work to get it to a run rate where it would 21 run and complete in a time frame that was appropriate
 22 to IT management. NDCI was also present at those 23 meetings. Bruce Buchanan personally attended those 24 meetings with us.
 25 Q. So your group, Arthur Reil's group and NDCI

124:1 were in attendance?
 2 A. That's right.
 3 Q. Were there any other groups represented
 4 during these meetings?
 5 A. Yes, there was another group as part of 6 Institutional Securities which would assist the Arthur
 7 Reil space and they were known as Company IT. They had
 8 some representatives that would help Arthur keep track
 9 of details, essentially project managed in some way.
 10 And they were participants as well.
 11 Q. Were members of the legal staff in 12 attendance during those meetings?
 13 A. No, they were not.
 14 Q. How many tapes, you've described the process
 15 to the Court about tapes being at Recall and then going 16 to NDCI. During these first few months of this
 17 conversion or this restoration project, how many tapes
 18 actually went through that process?
 19 A. For the first six to eight weeks, as you
 20 might expect, involving thousands of pieces of media
 21 and new technologies that were being developed both 22 inhouse and out of house, there were some bumps. So we 23 sent a smaller number of tapes in the first couple of 24 weeks.
 25 We knew that we would be extracting older

125:1 Lotus Notes mails, iMap mails, but we also knew that we
2 might find some surprises and there were some e-mail
3 format types that NDCI had not expected. And as a
4 result, their software had to be rewritten, recoded to 5 take advantage of those.

6 Q. And what effect did that have on the process
7 that was being implemented by Morgan Stanley, this
8 e-mail restoration process?

9 A. Sure. I would think that in terms of a
10 project that the initial spin up is going to be a
11 little slower than when you get to a sustained pace.
12 In fact, we did get to a sustained pace after these 13 weeks of growing pains.

14 Q. Was the 35,000 tapes that you've referenced
15 the complete universe of tapes that we now know today
16 contain e-mail?

17 A. Unfortunately not.

18 Q. Let's move forward in time and tell me the 19 circumstances in which you and your group located
20 additional tapes in addition to the 35,000.

21 A. So as I testified on Thursday, I have a
22 general knowledge that in the May or June time frame
23 that I personally became aware of the fact that a
24 number of tapes, in fact, a number greater than a
25 thousand tapes were located in Brooklyn in our Brooklyn

126:1 data center facility.

2 Q. You've created, as I understand, a chart
3 again to help understand this process, correct?

4 A. Yes, that's correct.

5 MR. SCAROLA: We'll agree to skip the
6 predicate and just go straight to the chart.

7 THE COURT: You're not putting it in
8 evidence?

9 MR. KLAPPER: I'm not.

10 (Defendant's Exhibit 3 was marked for 11 identification.)

12 BY MR. KLAPPER:

13 Q. I'm showing you what's been marked as 14 demonstrative exhibit 3. Given that I can pass through 15 the predicate, you were involved in the creation of 16 this chart; is that correct?

17 A. That's right.

18 Q. Can you help the Court walk through the 19 particulars of where additional tapes were located and 20 when?

21 A. Certainly. So the first line indicates a
22 group of DLT III and DLT IV tapes in the number of 1423
23 that were located in Brooklyn. And as it indicates
24 here, that they were located before June of 2004.

25 Q. And do you know the circumstances as to who 127:1 actually located these tapes that were found in 2 Brooklyn?

3 A. I am not aware.

4 Q. Did you know at the time, or do you know if
5 others at the time when these tapes were first located
6 whether they contained e-mails responsive to this
7 particular litigation?

8 A. I'm also not aware of that.

9 Q. Were the tapes labelled when they were 10 found?

11 A. No, they were not.

12 Q. What is your understanding as to what 13 happened after this collection of 1423 tapes were 14 located in Brooklyn?

15 A. My understanding is that we made Arthur Reil
16 aware of the fact that there were some tapes in 17 Brooklyn that had been found. They were then sent to 18 NDCI for processing.

19 Q. And after NDCI went through its processing, 20 what role or involvement did your group have with those
21 tapes?

22 A. At that point to my earlier testimony, we're
23 responsible for getting the SOLT tapes with the unique
24 e-mails brought into the staging area where it is set
25 up for the e-mail archive's use to upload into the 128:1 archive. So that's the extent of our involvement.

2 Q. Moving to the second collection of tapes.
3 Should that be meters or millimeters?

4 A. These are in fact 8-millimeter tapes. 738
5 8-millimeter tapes which were originally located in 6 1221 Avenue of the Americas before 2004 which were also
7 sent to NDCI this past summer.

8 Q. And when they were returned by NDCI to 9 Morgan Stanley, do you know what happened after that?

10 A. Could you be more specific?

11 Q. Yes. After NDCI, after you forwarded the 12 tapes or your group forwarded the tapes to NDCI, what 13 happened after that? Did NDCI process those tapes?

14 A. Yes, they were processed, e-mail was looked 15 for. And if e-mail was found, then it was deduplicated
16 and sent back to Morgan Stanley.

17 Q. Do you know personally when those tapes were 18 sent back?

19 A. I do not.

20 Q. How about the third category that you have 21 listed there, 169 Recall tapes?

22 A. Sure. So I have a little more knowledge of 23 this as I was more personally involved with this.

24 In the latter part of 2004, specifically in 25 the December time frame, John Pamula was working with

129:1 our off-site storage vendor Recall. He had knowledge
2 of a couple of boxes of tapes, and I believe it was
3 five that he had on a log from 2002 and indicated that
4 we had shipped them to Recall.

5 And we had a need for some of those tapes.
6 The initial two requests of those tapes of Recall
7 resulted in them saying they didn't have them. That 8 caused him some concern and --

9 Q. Let me stop you there. How did you learn
10 that Recall did not have these tapes? Was this a call
11 you made or Mr. Pamula made?

12 A. Mr. Pamula made the calls. And I was made
13 aware of this when actually on his, I believe, third
14 attempt that, in fact, Recall did find those boxes and 15 did send them back to Morgan Stanley.

16 Q. And when those boxes were returned to Morgan
17 Stanley, what happened next?

18 A. At that point Glenn Seickel made me aware of 19 this issue and of the time frame. And knowing the 20 sensitivity of the different issues that are going on,
21 we made counsel aware. And we began efforts to get
22 these processed by NDCI in an expedited manner.

23 Q. Is your group today still searching, or I
24 should say sweeping for any additional tapes?

25 A. No.

130:1 Q. Do you personally believe that you have
2 identified or located all the existing backup tapes
3 that are meant to be processed through the e-mail
4 archive restoration project?

5 A. Yes, I do.

6 MR. KLAPPER: I have no further questions,
7 Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Probably this is a good time to 9 take a lunch break. I just want to make sure I
10 understand.

11 The last one on the chart we just looked at,
12 the type IV DLT tapes, are those the ones you're 13 telling me that was in December of last year
14 that we discovered this was an issue they 15 couldn't find the tapes he was looking for?

16 THE WITNESS: Yes.

17 THE COURT: Then the chart says located
18 January 2004, should that be 5?

19 MR. KLAPPER: Your Honor, that should be 20 2005.

21 THE WITNESS: January 2005 is when they were
22 located, yes.

23 THE COURT: And that's when they were 24 located at Recall?

25 THE WITNESS: Yes.

131:1 THE COURT: For planning purpose, how many
2 other witnesses do you have and how long do you
3 think you're going to take?

4 MR. JONES: Your Honor, we don't have any
5 other witnesses. I believe that there are some 6 documents and exhibits that are already a part
7 of the record, declarations and deposition
8 testimony that was cited in opposition.

9 Now, whether we would just refer the Court
10 to it or make it a part of the record here, I
11 leave it up to the Court. That won't take very 12 long, we don't propose any additional witnesses.

13 THE COURT: Thank you. What about
14 Plaintiff?

15 MR. BYMAN: Your Honor, if I did my cross
16 examination now, it would be 10 minutes. If 17 it's over lunch, Mr. Scarola will give me
18 another 30 minutes of material.

19 THE COURT: Are you suggesting we do it now?
20 That's fine.

21 MR. BYMAN: We have one witness whose
22 testimony will be three minutes with his short 23 form resume' and 40 with his long form. But his 24 testimony is very short.

25 MR. JONES: Your Honor, I was talking that

132:1 we actually object to their calling a witness.
2 They did not, as we did, provide disclosure
3 forms and present our witness for depositions.
4 They didn't do that. And so --

5 THE COURT: But you all did it pursuant to a
6 Court order. And there wasn't any suggestion at 7 that hearing that they should be required to do
8 the same thing.

9 MR. JONES: That's true. I do recall the 10 order, the transcript. But I also don't recall
11 from the transcript, Your Honor, their 12 volunteering that they were in fact going to --

13 THE COURT: If the objection is to their 14 presenting evidence because the order I did that 15 required you to do the disclosure based on the 16 deficiencies up to that point did not include
17 them, I would deny it.

18 MR. JONES: If the Court is going to allow 19 him to testify, I would at least like some 20 leeway in the cross examination of things.

21 MR. BYMAN: Your Honor, I would like to 22 state for the record, which in our brief, which 23 counsel has seen on Friday, we disclosed that we 24 were going to have a third party vendor here for 25 purposes of talking about what a vendor could do.

So we've already told them what they were planning to do. If they had called us over the weekend --

THE COURT: My ruling is that the witness can testify. I'm not sure what you mean by leeway on cross examination. Obviously, if you ask a question that they think is objectionable, we'll listen to the objection.

We still want the 10 minutes?

MR. BYMAN: Your Honor, I think lunch would be appropriate.

MR. JONES: Your Honor, just so we're clear, we would also like to, over the lunch break, I said we hadn't planned to call any additional witnesses, I hadn't had a chance to talk to Mr. Davidson about that, I don't expect that will change.

THE COURT: Why don't we be back at 1:20.
(A lunch recess was taken at 12:15 p.m.)

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

242:1 understood you to tell me is that you
2 don't think they're entitled to any
3 sanctions in any event, so you have no
4 objection to their asking for more severe
5 sanctions because you don't think they're
6 getting anything, and if that's the case,
7 that's fine, and we can go forward and 8 argue now.

9 MR. JONES: what I think -- what I was 10 intending to convey to the court, that we 11 are prepared to argue based on what is in 12 the record now on a current motion. And 13 if they filed another one, we'll respond
14 to that.

15 THE COURT: I think all Mr. -- Maybe I
16 misunderstood. I thought you were saying,
17 hey, based on the evidence today we think 18 we're entitled to other sanctions, and we 19 want the leeway to argue other sanctions
20 are appropriate.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely. Your Honor
22 understood exactly what I was requesting.
23 We want to amend our motion to request
24 severer sanctions than those explicitly 25 requested in the pending motion. We

243:1 acknowledge that that might prejudice the
2 defense and are willing to give them
3 additional time to respond. If they say
4 they don't need it, we're ready to go
5 forward, too, but we want to go forward on 6 the basis of a pending motion that asks
7 for sanctions up to and including a
8 directed verdict in favor of the
9 plaintiff.

10 THE COURT: Okay. And as I understand,
11 Mr. Jones, and correct me if I'm wrong,
12 you're willing to allow that to be argued
13 now.

14 MR. JONES: Yes.

15 THE COURT: So that motion is granted.
16 And the adverse inference motion is 17 amended by interlineation to ask for any 18 appropriate sanctions.

19 And, Mr. Scarola, I think you are --
20 oh, just remind me we need to go back to 21 ore tenus motion number one before we
22 break today. Okay? Thanks.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, let me begin
24 with a very brief discussion of the 25 applicable law and then review what we

244:1 believe has been established from a
2 factual basis. First, Florida definitely
3 recognizes a duty to preserve evidence
4 after a lawsuit has been filed. That
5 principle is expressly stated in the case
6 of Rockwell International Corporation
7 versus Minzees (phonetic) at 561 So.2d 677
8 at page 680. That's a 1990 Third DCA
9 case.

10 But beyond that, Florida law also
11 recognizes that once a party anticipates
12 litigation, they have a duty to preserve
13 evidence. Silhan versus Allstate. It is 14 a federal case applying federal law,
15 236 F. Supp. 2d 1303 North District of
16 Florida, 2002.

17 Silhan talks about two types of 18 spoliation of evidence. First is an 19 independent cause of action, which is not
20 involved here, and the second is the type
21 where the loss or destruction of the 22 evidence is treated as a discovery
23 violation subject to sanctions. Where one
24 of the parties to the litigation causes
25 the spoliation, the courts should make an

245:1 attempt to craft a solution to the problem
2 which is less than the ultimate sanction
3 of dismissal or directed verdict in favor
4 of a plaintiff but will still give the 5 parties a fair trial. So the objective is 6 to do justice under the circumstances of 7 the particular case.

8 That general recognition comes from a
9 4th DCA case decided in 1993 called
10 Federal Insurance Company versus Allister
11 Manufacturing Company, 622 So.2d 1348.
12 And it is recognized by the Florida
13 Supreme Court that the trial court has 14 many sanctions available to it when
15 evidence establishes an intentional
16 interference with a party's access to 17 records. That case is one that is
18 recognized as a leading case in the area
19 of spoliation, Public Health Trust of Dade
20 County versus Valcin, 507 So.2d 596.

21 And the same principle is also
22 discussed in Metropolitan Dade County
23 versus Bermudes (phonetic), a First DCA
24 case, 648 So.2d 197 where the First DCA
25 talked about the fact that where

246:1 intentional destruction of evidence
 2 occurs, the courts will almost always
 3 impose sanctions against the offending
 4 party. And the court has the
 5 discretionary authority to enter sanctions
 6 as severe as the entry of a default upon
 7 making express findings of a willful
 8 failure to comply with discovery
 9 obligations.

10 So the predicate to the death penalty
 11 imposition, if I might refer to it that
 12 way, would be a finding of willful
 13 failure, and we recognize that that is the 14 obligation that we must meet.

15 where the defendant had actual control
 16 and knowledge of the documents requested,
 17 as clearly it did here; where the 18 materials requested were relevant to the 19 lawsuit, and within the scope of the 20 plaintiff's discovery requests, standards
 21 met here; where the defendant failed to 22 produce or intentionally destroyed the 23 documents, standards met here; where
 24 misrepresentations were made concerning
 25 the discovery, standards met here; and the

247:1 discovery could not be obtained in spite
 2 of a duty to preserve evidence in the case
 3 even absent a court order, although we had 4 a court order in this case, courts have
 5 upheld dismissal as an appropriate remedy.
 6 And I refer specifically to the Figgy
 7 (phonetic) International case at page 563
 8 and Federal Insurance Company case at page
 9 1350.

10 The court has discretionary authority
 11 to enter sanctions against a party upon
 12 making express findings of a willful
 13 failure to comply with discovery
 14 obligations. The court must determine the 15 appropriate sanctions, must determine the 16 appropriate sanctions when a party fails
 17 to preserve evidence in its custody based 18 upon the willfulness, bad faith, if any,
 19 of the party responsible for the loss, the 20 extent of the prejudice suffered by the 21 other party, and what is required to cure
 22 the prejudice.

23 In Valcin, the Florida Supreme Court
 24 adopted a shifting of the burden of 25 producing evidence when essential records

248:1 are found to be either missing or
 2 inadequate through the defendant's
 3 negligence. I suggest that certainly that 4 same shifting burden, the obligation in
 5 this case of the defendant to explain
 6 fully its failure to abide by this court's
 7 order of April 2004, that shifting burden
 8 would apply even more strongly where there
 9 is evidence that the failure was willful
 10 if it applies where the failure was 11 negligent.

12 In other words, although opposing
 13 counsel has stated to Your Honor at the 14 outset of this proceeding that it was 15 their position that they had no burden of 16 proof, the Florida Supreme Court says
 17 otherwise. The holding in Valcin is that 18 the burden shifts to the party failing to 19 make production under circumstances such 20 as this.

21 Valcin is a case where the Florida
 22 Supreme Court recognized the propriety of 23 establishing a rebuttable presumption. In 24 that case, which was a medical malpractice
 25 case, and where records disappeared with

249:1 regard to the relevant healthcare
 2 procedures, what the Supreme Court
 3 affirmed was the shifting of the burden of 4 proof to the defendant to prove
 5 non-negligence, compliance with the 6 general accepted standard of care rather
 7 than requiring the plaintiff to prove 8 negligence.

9 Let's focus for just a moment, then, on 10 what it is that we were attempting, have 11 been for a very long time attempting to 12 discover in this case. Clearly, a central
 13 issue in this case is what Morgan Stanley
 14 knew and when it learned what it knew.
 15 Certainly the content of communications
 16 among Morgan Stanley employees during the 17 key time period and after as well, but
 18 certainly during the key time period
 19 identified in Your Honor's order between 20 February 15 and April 15 of 1998 is highly 21 significant, relevant, probative evidence.

22 I am reminded by Mr. Byman that the 23 evidence that brought Arthur Andersen down
 24 was a single e-mail communication from an
 25 Arthur Andersen employee that had to do

250:1 with instructions about how documents were
2 to be handled within Arthur Andersen, and
3 it was that single key piece of evidence
4 that jurors in post-trial interviews, as 5 reported in the press, found to be most
6 damning against Arthur Andersen.

7 It doesn't take 1,000 pages of
8 documents for any document to be relevant
9 and material. It takes just a single 10 document. And we know, we know that such 11 documents do exist because at least some 12 of them have been identified to us even if 13 only in privilege logs at this point in 14 time.

15 But there is, for example, a disclosure
16 in a privilege log, and it's referenced at 17 the bottom of the e-mail chronology that I
18 provided to Your Honor, a June 22nd, 1998
19 e-mail from Mr. Strong to in-house
20 counsel. And it is described in the 21 privilege log as seeking legal advice
22 regarding Sunbeam press coverage.

23 Now, had Morgan Stanley and its lawyers
24 complied in good faith with this court's 25 orders, when Mr. Strong was deposed, just

251:1 knowing that Mr. Strong was seeking legal
2 advice in June -- on June 22nd, 1998
3 regarding matters relating to Sunbeam and
4 press coverage of Sunbeam would certainly
5 have been the subject of significant
6 examination of Mr. Strong during the 7 course of his deposition. But we were
8 deprived of that knowledge. And we don't
9 need to ask Mr. Strong what Mr. Strong
10 said to his lawyers. But we know that 11 Mr. Strong had some concern, and we 12 certainly would have been asking what 13 prompted that concern, what was the 14 concern, what were you worried about at 15 that point in time. And as we sit here
16 today, we don't know what those answers
17 would have been.

18 Now that's one example, and there are 19 many many others that we would be able to 20 give Your Honor, not only from what has 21 been withheld from us but what we have 22 received at this point as well, and we 23 have no idea what else is out there.

24 Let's go back and take a look at the 25 facts as they have been developed before

252:1 the court up to this point in time.

2 It was in March of 1998 that Morgan
3 Stanley recognizes the likelihood of 4 Sunbeam related litigation but fails to 5 preserve its e-mails, and we know that
6 because of the assertion of
7 attorney-client and work-product privilege
8 based upon the privilege log that we have 9 received. It was February of 1999 when in 10 anticipation of Sunbeam related litigation
11 Morgan Stanley gathers up hard copies of 12 Sunbeam related documents by communicating
13 with the bankers involved in this
14 transaction and telling them to preserve
15 that evidence for them.

16 Morgan Stanley does not, however, at
17 the same time it is instructing third
18 parties to preserve evidence for Morgan
19 Stanley's use do anything to preserve its 20 own records with regard to the same
21 anticipated litigation.

22 THE COURT: The last factual assertion
23 you made, where would I look in the record
24 of this hearing for that?

25 MR. SCAROLA: The request with regard

253:1 to --

2 THE COURT: To the bankers to keep the
3 hard copies.

4 MR. SCAROLA: We'll get that reference
5 to you in just a moment, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Okay.

7 MR. SCAROLA: I can tell you that
8 Mr. Plotnick (phonetic) in his testimony
9 at page 65 acknowledges that he called all
10 bankers involved in the merger to tell
11 them to preserve documents.

12 THE COURT: That's fine. I understand
13 that. But you're making factual
14 assertions that weren't established today,
15 and I don't know if we're agreeing to go
16 outside of what was established today or 17 not.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Actually, I think you're
19 right. We did not introduce 20 Mr. Plotnick's deposition. I would 21 request that we be permitted to reopen for 22 the purposes of doing that.

23 MR. JONES: I'd object to that. It's 24 hearsay.

25 THE COURT: You'd object to what, sir?

254:1 MR. JONES: I'd object to it as hearsay.
 2 THE COURT: What's your response to the
 3 hearsay objection to Mr. Plotnick's depo?
 4 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Plotnick is a Morgan
 5 Stanley employee. These are admissions
 6 against interest.
 7 MR. JONES: Your Honor, it has to be
 8 established. Asserting it doesn't make it
 9 so.
 10 THE COURT: Well, it doesn't even have 11 to really be --
 12 MR. SCAROLA: He identifies himself in 13 his deposition as a Morgan Stanley
 14 employee.
 15 MR. JONES: My point is asserting it's a
 16 statement against interest doesn't make it
 17 so.
 18 THE COURT: It doesn't have to be 19 adverse to the interest. It just has to 20 deal with Morgan Stanley's interest. I
 21 mean -- what we have to establish is a
 22 statement by Morgan Stanley. What's the 23 response to that?
 24 MR. JONES: Statement by Morgan Stanley
 25 against Morgan Stanley's interest is in

255:1 the hearsay exception.
 2 THE COURT: I'm not sure it has to be
 3 adverse, but, frankly, I think it probably
 4 is.
 5 MR. JONES: And he has to be authorized
 6 to make the admission. That has not been 7 established.
 8 MR. SCAROLA: No, he must be speaking
 9 within the scope of his authority.
 10 THE COURT: I thought we went through
 11 this whole legal argument a week or two 12 ago, what was an admission by a party
 13 opponent. I would grant the motion to 14 reopen the evidence.
 15 Do you want to share with him the parts
 16 that that you want to rely on and publish
 17 and see if there's an objection other than 18 what I've heard?
 19 Again, I'm looking at the statute,
 20 which is 90.803 18, and I certainly don't 21 see that it has to be adverse to the 22 interest.
 23 But, in any event, did you share with
 24 them --
 25 MR. JONES: They did, Your Honor. I'm

256:1 advised that there actual actually is a
 2 motion in limine going to Mr. Plotnick's
 3 testimony. So it may well be that that
 4 issue, this little discussion will be
 5 subsumed within that motion in limine.
 6 THE COURT: Any other argument against
 7 what they want to publish?
 8 MR. JONES: I will incorporate whatever
 9 objections we make in that motion in 10 limine.
 11 THE COURT: I'm happy to hear them now
 12 if you can tell me what they are.
 13 MR. DAVIDSON: Just one moment, Your
 14 Honor.
 15 THE COURT: Sure.
 16 MR. DAVIDSON: AS I understand the 17 motion, the motion has to do generally
 18 with this whole subject that has been
 19 raised, which would include this testimony
 20 but also other testimony. It's the 21 subject of Morgan Stanley's normal
 22 business practice of bundling up
 23 engagement materials and the destruction
 24 of those materials after a matter is 25 closed. And that is the subject.

257:1 THE COURT: Is there any part of that
 2 relevant for purposes of this? What I
 3 really need to know, is there any other
 4 grounds for objection other than the 5 hearsay we've already got?
 6 MR. DAVIDSON: Other than the fact of
 7 relevancy, Your Honor, because there is no
 8 showing that that was done in any way,
 9 shape or form to hide evidence, prevent
 10 the production of evidence, or anything of 11 that sort. There's just simply no
 12 evidence, although inquiries were made in 13 that regard, there was anything like that 14 at all.
 15 THE COURT: I would overrule the 16 relevancy. I don't think that's why
 17 you're offering it. So did you want to go
 18 ahead and publish it?
 19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.
 20 THE COURT: How long are we talking
 21 about, the part that you want to publish?
 22 MR. SCAROLA: Actually, there are a
 23 number of sections in the deposition that 24 relate to issues, to issues that are
 25 covered in this chronology. Mr. Plotnick

258:1 was actually designated as the corporate
2 representative for purposes of addressing
3 Morgan Stanley's knowledge of the 4 imposition of the SEC fine for document
5 destruction. And that's the purpose for 6 which his deposition was taken.

7 There is the two issues that I wish to
8 make reference to from Mr. Plotnick's
9 deposition, and perhaps we can agree
10 without having to read it all to Your
11 Honor, that both of these points are 12 covered, are first, the point that I just 13 made that there was no general internal 14 direction to preserve documents within 15 Morgan Stanley, but that Mr. Plotnick
16 issued directions to investment bankers
17 involved in the merger transaction for 18 them to preserve their documents.

19 The second point is that pursuant to a
20 12-month retention policy Morgan Stanley
21 was routinely destroying e-mails after a
22 12-month period of time throughout 1998
23 which was in violation of SEC regulations
24 requiring that e-mails be preserved at a
25 readily accessible form for a period of

259:1 three years. Those are the points
2 established by Mr. Plotnick.

3 THE COURT: I thought in the original
4 factual assertion you made there was a
5 time frame attached to when he told
6 investment bankers to hold --

7 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, February of 1999,
8 Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: February of '99.

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

11 THE COURT: So, as I understand it,
12 what you're asking for is a stipulation
13 that Mr. Plotnick testified in deposition
14 that Morgan Stanley had no general
15 internal direction to preserve documents
16 but for this specific transaction in 17 February of 1999 he instructed the 18 investment bankers to preserve their
19 documents?

20 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

21 THE COURT: And that number two, Morgan
22 Stanley had a policy in place in 1998 of 23 routinely destroying e-mails after 12
24 months despite an SEC rule that required
25 they be kept for three years.

260:1 MR. SCAROLA: In readily accessible
2 form.

3 THE COURT: Okay. Can you all
4 stipulate that that's what Mr. Plotnick
5 testified to?

6 MR. DAVIDSON: I will certainly
7 stipulate in February of '99 he asked --
8 actually went out and asked people have 9 you heard of Sunbeam litigation to 10 preserve documents.

11 THE COURT: Okay.

12 MR. DAVIDSON: Second of all, I will
13 also stipulate that up until January of 14 2001, as I recall, Morgan Stanley's
15 practice was to overwrite on backup tapes
16 the next cycle of backup recording. That 17 was not confined to e-mail. But the 18 backup tapes for data in general, which 19 was a dump for different kinds of 20 electronic information, after a period of 21 12 months that tape would be recycled, and 22 the material that was on it would be
23 overwritten.

24 THE COURT: And that's a functional
25 equivalent of destroying them. Was there

261:1 any ability to recall the information that
2 was first on the tape?

3 MR. DAVIDSON: There was not.

4 THE COURT: So it's a functional
5 equivalent of not having these e-mails
6 exist anymore.

7 MR. DAVIDSON: I think I would say it
8 would have the same effect.

9 THE COURT: The last point, I think,
10 was that there was no general internal
11 direction to preserve documents.

12 MR. DAVIDSON: Prior to that time, that 13 is correct.

14 MR. SCAROLA: I can read that one
15 answer, Your Honor, if there's any 16 question about this.

17 MR. DAVIDSON: As a general proposition,
18 I think that's true just so long as it's 19 clear it's not specifically related to 20 this case but as a general proposition,
21 that's true.

22 THE COURT: What is specifically
23 related to this case was the request in 24 February of '99 to the investment bankers?
25 Okay. If those three, if it's stipulated

262:1 those three points were testified to by
2 Mr. Plotnick, I don't -- is that all you
3 need from that?

4 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. I just
5 would like to publish this one question
6 and answer from page 65, question, "was a
7 firm-wide preservation notice ever
8 circulated directing Morgan Stanley
9 employees to preserve materials relating
10 to Sunbeam?"

11 Answer, "I'm not aware of it."

12 Okay.

13 THE COURT: Um-hum.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. That saves us
15 having to go --

16 THE COURT: We're back to where we were 17 in the argument.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. Your Honor, we then
19 know from the testimony that we have heard
20 that in 2002 Morgan Stanley found 738
21 eight-millimeter backup tapes in 22 Manhattan. On December 3rd, 2002 is when 23 the SEC fine was imposed of $1.65 million
24 for violating federal regulations.

25 THE COURT: Mr. Byman is laughing

263:1 because you're telling me stuff I don't
2 know. Are we going to find that some
3 place?

4 MR. BYMAN: That's Exhibit D.

5 MR. SCAROLA: That's the SEC ruling that
6 is.

7 THE COURT: Are you offering that now?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

9 THE COURT: Is there an objection?

10 MR. JONES: That's hearsay.

11 THE COURT: What's the response?

12 MR. SCAROLA: It is hearsay. Our 13 lawsuit was filed on May 8, 2003. On
14 May 9, 2003, we served our first request
15 for production of documents. On 16 July 25, 2003, Morgan Stanley responded to 17 our first request of production and
18 provided us with a handful of e-mails.

19 In October of 2003, because it was our 20 sense that there simply had to be a 21 greater volume of e-mails than those 22 produced, and after repeated attempts to
23 resolve the e-mail dispute, we filed a
24 motion to compel the production of 25 e-mails. And months of negotiation

264:1 followed leading to the April 16, 2004
2 agreed order.

3 Sometime before May 6, 2004, and we
4 don't know the exact date, Morgan Stanley
5 finds more than 1,000 DLT tapes, the
6 Brooklyn tapes. We know it was sometime
7 before May 6, 2004 because that date is 8 established in the minutes of the 9 committee that was dealing with these
10 issues.

11 On May 14, 2004, Morgan Stanley
12 produced 1,300 pages of e-mails but no
13 certification, established through the 14 testimony that Your Honor has heard in the 15 courtroom. And between June 3rd and
16 June 17, 2004, we know that Morgan Stanley
17 sent to its outside vendor, National Data
18 Conversion, Incorporated, the Brooklyn
19 tapes. There is, I note, a one-month
20 delay between the discovery of the tapes
21 and transferring those tapes for 22 processing.

23 On June 23rd, 2004, after repeated
24 requests, we get the certificate that was 25 supposed to have accompanied the

265:1 production pursuant to Your Honor's order
2 of April 16, 2004. That certification is
3 a certification that comes from 4 Arthur Reil. Mr. Reil was a party to the 5 communications regarding the Brooklyn
6 tapes. Mr. Reil knew that there were over
7 a thousand unsearched tapes when Mr. Reil,
8 the Morgan Stanley employee charged with
9 providing this certification to us,
10 falsely certified that a full and complete
11 search had been made.

12 On July 2nd, 2004, NDCI informs
13 Arthur Reil and others at Morgan Stanley
14 that the 738 eight-millimeter tapes found
15 back in 2002 contained e-mails dating back
16 to at least 1998 and that 1,423 DLT's
17 contain e-mails dating back at least to 18 1999. The information that the tapes
19 contained e-mails was provided to Mr. Reil
20 on July 2nd, 2004, less than two weeks
21 following his certification.

22 On July 16, 2004 -- Actually I don't
23 know that that point has been established
24 in the evidence. I'm going to skip it.

25 MS. BYMAN: It's Exhibit 11 to their

266:1 brief.
 2 MR. SCAROLA: It has been established by
 3 way of the submission that Morgan Stanley
 4 has made to Your Honor. On July 16, 2004,
 5 NDCI informs Morgan Stanley that the 1,423
 6 DLT tapes contain more than 2,100,000
 7 unique e-mails. Now neither CPH nor the 8 court are informed of the false
 9 certification.

10 At the time that Mr. Reil is informed
 11 on July 2nd that the certification is not
 12 only false from the standpoint that a
 13 complete search hasn't been made but now
 14 also false from the standpoint that all 15 relevant e-mails have been produced. The 16 same omissions occur again on July 16,
 17 2004. No notice to us or to the court.
 18 Mr. Reil is terminated. I'm sorry.
 19 Placed on administrative leave, which is 20 really rather interesting. And it's 21 interesting from two standpoints.

22 I know Your Honor took note because you
 23 could not help but noting that when 24 Miss Gorman testified about this what she
 25 said was that I was told that what I

267:1 should do is to call this an
 2 administrative leave. Now that has
 3 significance, because under Florida law
 4 terminated employees can be contacted
 5 directly. Someone who is still an
 6 employee of Morgan Stanley can not be
 7 contacted directly. So one way to keep
 8 Mr. Reil from any discussions with 9 opposing counsel outside the presence of 10 Morgan Stanley and its lawyers is to keep 11 him technically on the payroll. I don't 12 know whether Your Honor received the 13 same --

14 THE COURT: That's what I was looking
 15 for.

16 MR. SCAROLA: -- copy of the memorandum
 17 we received.

18 THE COURT: with the handwritten
 19 interlineations. I was looking for it so
 20 I could get the exact terminology that was 21 changed.

22 MR. SCAROLA: The exact terminology is 23 the process data from these tapes were the 24 staging area when Arthur Reil was
 25 dismissed for integrity issues in August

268:1 2004. Dismissed for integrity issues is
 2 crossed out and interlineated above it is
 3 "placed on administrative leave."

4 Now we are here relating to issues
 5 dealing with candor to the court and
 6 candor to the opposing parties. And for 7 Morgan Stanley in the context of this
 8 motion and for Morgan Stanley's counsel in 9 the context of this motion to instruct a
 10 witness that she should refer to Mr. Reil
 11 as an employee who's been placed on 12 administrative leave when there is a
 13 strong suspicion that, in fact, Mr. Reil
 14 was terminated for integrity reasons is 15 not something that displays candor.

16 Now can we prove that Mr. Reil was 17 terminated for integrity reasons? No.
 18 But the Supreme Court says we don't have 19 that burden of proof. The burden of proof
 20 to prove good faith, to prove
 21 inadvertence, to prove reasonable neglect
 22 is not upon us but upon them. And this 23 kind of evidence indicates that they have 24 fallen far short of the mark to satisfy
 25 that burden, although it clearly is not

269:1 the only evidence by any means of a lack
 2 of candor, and we'll get to that in more
 3 detail.

4 At any rate, Mr. Reil isn't with Morgan
 5 Stanley or isn't actively with Morgan
 6 Stanley as of August of 2004. And we know
 7 that upon his termination from the
 8 testimony we've heard from Miss Gorman,
 9 all sorts of problems, if her testimony is 10 to be believed, are found within the 11 department, the kinds of problems that 12 clearly indicate that there is going to be 13 significant difficulty and substantial
 14 delay if the information needed in this 15 case is going to be obtained by 16 integrating the large volume of 17 information that remains unprocessed into
 18 a system that does not have the capacity
 19 to handle it.

20 The response by Morgan Stanley is to 21 say, so what? Who cares? We're going to 22 do this our way, whatever time it may 23 take, as long as it is most convenient to 24 us. And our data is placed in a staging
 25 area along with a whole bunch of other

270:1 data down at the bottom of a list because
2 other things have got greater priority,
3 and we're not told what they were or why
4 they have greater priority, but we must
5 accept on faith that they do. And we'll
6 get to this when and if we can get to it,
7 in spite of the fact that there is hanging
8 out there a knowingly false certification.

9 So those are the circumstances that 10 exist as of August of 2004. We were
11 initially lead to believe that it was late
12 October 2004 when Miss Gorman finally 13 makes processing the tapes a priority of 14 sorts. We now know Mrs. Gorman upon
15 cross-examination clarifies it wasn't late
16 October but mid October when she is told
17 to make processing the tapes a priority
18 after conversations with counsel. The 19 party with the burden of proof to explain
20 these circumstances chooses, as it has a
21 right to, to assert attorney-client
22 privilege to preclude inquiry into those 23 conversations to make a determination as 24 to what it is that prompts this 25 reassignment of priorities, whether it's

271:1 got anything at all to do with this case.

2 THE COURT: Isn't it fair to assume it
3 does not if Mrs. Gorman didn't even know
4 about this case until January of 2005?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Well, it is certainly fair
6 to assume that Miss Gorman's actions are 7 not prompted by any concern about this
8 case because she has no knowledge of this
9 case until January.

10 THE COURT: That's what I'm saying.
11 Even if it prompted counsel, it certainly
12 didn't prompt a discussion between the two 13 of them of why this was necessary at least
14 relative to this action.

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. We know
16 that Miss Gorman was not motivated by
17 anything having to do with this lawsuit
18 because she knew nothing about it. We're 19 precluded from finding out by virtue of 20 the assertion of privilege what it is that
21 prompted counsel to request that she place
22 a priority on these matters, whether it
23 had anything to do with this lawsuit or 24 didn't have anything to do with this
25 lawsuit. Whether it was a fear that maybe

272:1 the SEC was coming back down on them again
2 for some reason or what it was, we don't
3 know.

4 But what we do know is that this was a,
5 again, a somewhat strange kind of priority
6 because we're still not trying to do what
7 we can to find out how quickly we can get
8 the data that we need in this case. We've 9 just moved up the list to be integrated 10 into the system so that when requests are 11 made to respond in litigation generally or 12 for administrative inquiries, generally
13 Morgan Stanley has got the capacity to be
14 able to respond, which up to this point it
15 still doesn't have. So we still don't
16 have any knowledge as to whether Morgan
17 Stanley's lawyers did or did not know as 18 early as October of 2004 that the 19 certifications were false. But what some 20 lawyer knew was -- excuse me. That's not 21 true. As of October 2004, we know that 22 the lawyers know the certifications are
23 false, because now they are telling Morgan
24 Stanley, you've got to prioritize the 25 processing of this data. We've got to

273:1 find out what's on there.

2 So at least as of October 2004, mid
3 October 2004 some lawyer, some lawyer for
4 Morgan Stanley knows that there are false
5 certifications hanging out there, there is 6 the potential at least that relevant and
7 material information that is the subject
8 of a long outstanding discovery request
9 and a court order has not been searched
10 for compliance. At the very least, in mid
11 October, 2004 a party and a law firm
12 acting in good faith should have 13 immediately placed both the court and the 14 opposing party and counsel on notice that 15 they could not rely upon the certification
16 that had previously been made.

17 November 17, 2004, a month after
18 October 2004 Morgan Stanley reveals to CPH
19 for the first time that additional backup
20 tapes exist. I think that the 21 correspondence regarding those matters has 22 already been provided to Your Honor where 23 inquiries were made with regard to the 24 circumstances and left unanswered.

25 Do you remember I handed up a whole

274:1 series of letters to the court?
 2 THE COURT: I recall that. Are we
 3 going back and offering those now?
 4 MR. SCAROLA: Sure. I think we ought to
 5 make those a part of the record.
 6 MR. JONES: I would object to any
 7 hearsay, letters coming into record.
 8 THE COURT: I don't know that they're
 9 being offered for the truth.
 10 MR. SCAROLA: They're not being offered
 11 for the truth, only to demonstrate those 12 exchanges occurred with respect to the 13 requests.
 14 MR. JONES: This is communication --
 15 THE COURT: Between counsel. Why don't
 16 you pull them out and show them to Mr.
 17 Jones and see if there is an objection.
 18 MR. JONES: I don't have any objection.
 19 THE COURT: You want to bring them up
 20 and let me mark them as plaintiff's
 21 composite number one?
 22 MR. SCAROLA: Sure. They're Exhibits to
 23 our original motion, and we'll extract
 24 them and mark them as a composite.
 25 THE COURT: I can mark them if you just 275:1 have them.

 2 MR. SCAROLA: Pardon me?
 3 THE COURT: I'll mark them if you have
 4 them.
 5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. It's -- we'll give
 6 you the letter references in just a
 7 moment. Exhibits O through U, Your Honor.
 8 I've got this copy.
 9 THE COURT: I'm going to attach them
 10 right now, and that way I have them.
 11 Thank you.
 12 (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1)
 13 MR. SCAROLA: You may remember the 14 circumstances under which those letters
 15 were provided to the court. They were in 16 response to an assertion by counsel that 17 we had somehow been dilatory in pursuing 18 this matter, that there was, I think the 19 term that was used radio silence if I
 20 remember correctly.
 21 And, again, in and of itself, standing
 22 alone, not a particularly significant
 23 matter that counsel may have mistakenly
 24 made such a representation to the court,
 25 but when taken in the context of all of 276:1 the inaccurate statements made to the 2 court, it takes on significantly greater

 3 significance, and there clearly have been
 4 misrepresentation after misrepresentation
 5 after misrepresentation. That was one of 6 them.
 7 On November 17, 2004, as I said, the 8 disclosure is first made to CPH. That's 9 six months after the Brooklyn tapes were 10 found, five months after they are known to 11 contain e-mails and five months after the 12 false certification.
 13 On November 18, 2004, we get 8,000
 14 pages of e-mails, six months after the 15 agreed order required production. Now let 16 me make an observation regarding these
 17 8,000 pages of documents that are included
 18 in this stack that we have made reference
 19 to. The witnesses have told us and the 20 representations have been made that those 21 were -- that was the product of the 22 Brooklyn tape review. But the testimony
 23 that we heard today was that the 24 processing of those tapes had not been 25 completed at that time. So we now based

277:1 upon the record before this court don't
 2 know where these did come from, but we
 3 know where they didn't come from.
 4 We know that representations that this
 5 was the Brooklyn tape production are
 6 inaccurate, so something else is going on
 7 and the party with the burden of proof
 8 hasn't yet explained what that is. It was
 9 not until sometime in November of 2004
 10 that Morgan Stanley finally locates the 11 software necessary to process the data
 12 from the 1,423 Brooklyn tapes. But we are 13 told they're not able to run it properly,
 14 so the production obviously can't be the 15 Brooklyn tape production.
 16 In November or December of 2004, 169
 17 additional tapes are found at Recall.
 18 Counsel was notified within two days of 19 the documents being found, but no notice
 20 to CPH and no notice to the court.
 21 In mid January of 2005, Morgan Stanley
 22 debugs the software necessary to process
 23 the tapes. So the Brooklyn tape
 24 processing begins in January, long after 25 the 8,000 pages are produced that came

278:1 from somewhere. And then also in January
2 of 2005 Morgan Stanley finds another 169
3 DLT tapes, allegedly lost by a storage
4 vendor, by Recall, but, again, we don't
5 get notice of that, and the court isn't
6 told.

7 On January 26, 2005, we file another
8 e-mail related motion. On February 2nd,
9 2005 after we have filed that motion
10 Morgan Stanley counsel tells the court
11 that the Brooklyn tapes were found
12 sometime during the summer of 2004.
13 That's the open court misrepresentation
14 that was made to Your Honor.

15 Because we know from the testimony that
16 the Brooklyn tapes were not found sometime
17 during the summer of 2004. They were 18 actually found two months earlier in May,
19 early May, May 6 of 2004. Not quite two 20 months, a month and a half before summer
21 begins. You know, again, May, summer.
22 Maybe not a big deal standing all by 23 itself except when we're talking about
24 matters as to which time is of the essence
25 because the concern that the court has

279:1 that's been addressed with counsel when
2 those representations are made is how long
3 did you delay before you told us.

4 So it serves counsel's purpose to bend
5 the truth and to tell Your Honor that we
6 didn't find out until the summer of 2004
7 when, in fact, it was a month and a half
8 earlier than the first day of summer 2004
9 when the documents indeed were found. It
10 was also at that February 2nd, 2005
11 hearing that Morgan Stanley's counsel made
12 the representation, Mr. Clare, that was 13 the subject of cross-examination.

14 And having occurred as recently as it
15 occurred, I don't need to remind Your
16 Honor about that testimony, but clearly it
17 is another example of a clear lack of 18 candor on the part of Morgan Stanley's
19 counsel. Now whether the 20 misrepresentations to Your Honor were made
21 willfully, that is, with a conscious
22 awareness of their falsity or whether they
23 were simply made recklessly, either
24 alternative is intolerable under these
25 circumstances.

280:1 The appropriate response to a question
2 from the court when the answer is not
3 known with some relative degree of 4 certainty is, I'm sorry, Your Honor, I do
5 not know. But those aren't the responses
6 that were made. The responses that were
7 repeatedly made to us and to the court
8 were responses that were couched in terms
9 of certainty but were clearly false. The 10 same way the certification was couched in 11 terms of certainty but was clearly false
12 and known to be false.

13 February 9th and 10th we deposed the 14 three witnesses designated by Morgan
15 Stanley with those persons with knowledge
16 with regard to the issues that were 17 specifically identified as issues of 18 concern. And what we find out is we're 19 talking to people who don't have direct
20 knowledge of who knew what when. And as 21 many questions, almost as many questions
22 remain unanswered after their depositions
23 as before their depositions:

24 On February 11 we get three additional
25 e-mail pages and, again, an announcement

281:1 that the e-mail production is complete and
2 a request in pleadings submitted to the 3 court that CPH's motion be dismissed as
4 moot because here's all the information,
5 and now you've got everything, and there's 6 nothing in there that amounts to a hill of 7 beans. Except that representation is also
8 false because there's still, as we stand
9 here today, significant data that has yet
10 to be searched and yet to be produced.

11 On the 12th of February, Morgan Stanley
12 informs the court that it has in the last 13 24 hours discovered additional tapes. And 14 we learned -- excuse me -- we learn the 15 attachments to the e-mails have not been 16 produced. And we have no firm, no firm
17 commitment as to when we are going to have 18 that information.

19 So where does that place us? It places
20 us in a situation where the party with the 21 burden to prove good faith and 22 inadvertence and to establish the 23 circumstances of their failure to abide by 24 the court's order has totally and
25 egregiously failed to meet its burden of

282:1 proof.

2 what has been established is repeated

3 misrepresentations to opposing counsel and

4 to the court. What has been established

5 is a wreckless disregard, at the very

6 least, of the obligations imposed by the

7 court order of April of 2004. And what

8 has been established is that days before

9 we are scheduled to begin jury selection

10 in an extremely significant case both from 11 the standpoint of the issues involved and

12 the dollars involved, within days of the 13 commencement of that case the plaintiffs

14 are placed in the terrible position of 15 having conducted months and months and

16 months of extraordinarily expensive

17 discovery and having moved 30 people from

18 Chicago into residence here in Palm Beach

19 County, renting office space, working day

20 and night to be properly prepared for this

21 trial while being diverted by issues that

22 never should have arisen at all, we are

23 placed in the position where the only way

24 in which justice can be done under the

25 circumstances that we presently confront

283:1 is for the death penalty to be imposed

2 against the defendants. A default

3 judgment should be entered against them.

4 we should be going to trial on issues of

5 liability alone.

6 THE COURT: Damages you mean.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Issues of damages alone.

8 Thank you. Appreciate that help.

9 THE COURT: Can I ask you just a few

10 questions?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

12 THE COURT: And I understand your

13 position, and, quite honestly, I need to 14 digest the evidence for a bit. If I were

15 to do something less than entry of default

16 on liability, what is it you suggest? And

17 I just want to work through what the 18 practical implications of that would be.

19 For instance, first you were asking for an

20 adverse inference instruction.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Correct.

22 THE COURT: And my question would be

23 would you then contemplate we would

24 present a lot of the evidence we heard

25 today before the jury so they could try to 284:1 rebut the adverse inference? I just -- or

2 what other sanctions short of entry of a

3 default did you consider?

4 MR. SCAROLA: Let me, if I could, sort

5 of take it step by step and review with

6 Your Honor what I perceive the hierarchy

7 of sanctions to be.

8 THE COURT: Just while I'm thinking of

9 it, and I apologize, sort of another

10 collateral issue I may have to think about

11 is are they required to continue the 12 search and provide you information, and if

13 so, I think you would want the same thing

14 you asked for before, which is you have

15 the ability to use any information it

16 found, but they don't. Or do we want

17 to -- at some point it would just strike

18 me you want to abort this and say we need

19 to try the case on what we know however

20 we're going to try it.

21 I'm trying to figure out what it is you

22 want and what are the implications of it.

23 MR. SCAROLA: what we want are in terms

24 of continuing efforts on the part of the 25 defendants. The implications will

285:1 obviously depend upon the sanction that

2 your Honor determines to impose.

3 THE COURT: Sure. I understand that.

4 MR. SCAROLA: What I have in

5 abbreviated fashion referred to as the

6 death penalty imposed, then subsequent

7 production from the defendants on

8 liability -- on issues that will only

9 relate to liability just doesn't make any

10 sense. It becomes irrelevant.

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. SCAROLA: Anything short of that, at

13 least as I have thought through it up to

14 this point in time, and obviously I'll

15 confess to the court that we haven't

16 deliberated on this issue as much as we

17 would ordinarily under similar

18 circumstances because all of this is

19 evolving quickly, it seems to me anything

20 short of the death penalty would require

21 ongoing efforts on the part of Morgan

22 Stanley to produce anything and everything

23 they can as quickly as they're able to 24 produce it, and we'd have to deal with

25 what is produced, including anything your

286:1 Honor may order as a consequence of our
2 challenge of the privilege assertions that
3 have been made based upon what it is that
4 gets produced when we see it.

5 So that -- I can't go beyond saying
6 that they ought to be continued, they
7 ought to be obliged to continue under very
8 strict orders an effort to produce
9 everything that can be produced as quickly
10 as possible.

11 So let's look at what the potential
12 hierarchy is. And I think that we get 13 good guidance in that regard from
14 Rule 1.380 subsection (b)(2), which deals
15 generally with failure to comply with 16 court orders and the sanctions to be 17 imposed.

18 And as I read the rule, the potential
19 sanctions, A, B and C are basically a
20 graduated hierarchy of severity. And then
21 D treating the noncompliance as a contempt
22 is not only an alternative to A, B and C
23 but also may be used in conjunction with 24 A, B and C. So the possibilities as 25 described in the rule taking them in

287:1 ascending order of severity are an order
2 that the matters regarding which the
3 questions were asked or other designated
4 facts shall be taken to be established for 5 the purposes of the action in accordance 6 with the claim of the party making the 7 order.

8 In this case, the e-mails, as I said,
9 relate to the issue of what Morgan Stanley
10 knew and when Morgan Stanley knew it. And 11 we would have to fashion a statement that
12 the court would make to the jury
13 establishing Morgan Stanley's knowledge of 14 the fraud and the point at which they knew 15 the fraud to exist. And since the 16 discovery relates to a period commencing
17 February 15, basically we'd need to work
18 on the language, but basically the court
19 would be telling the jury that as of 20 February 15, 2005, Morgan Stanley was
21 aware of the Sunbeam fraud.

22 THE COURT: Well, at least it would
23 shift the burden to Morgan Stanley to show
24 they were not. Or you don't want to do
25 that?

288:1 MR. SCAROLA: That's another
2 alternative. And that's one that I don't
3 know -- that's not specifically addressed
4 here. But that's the Valcin remedy. The 5 Valcin remedy is that Morgan Stanley has
6 the burden of proving that it did not know
7 of the fraud commencing as of February 15.
8 So that really gets added to the list as a
9 consequence of the Valcin, Supreme Court's
10 decision in Valcin as a specifically
11 identified alternative. So one way is 12 you're saying these facts are established.
13 The other way is saying I'm not
14 establishing these facts, but the burden
15 to prove the nonexistence of these facts
16 rests on Morgan Stanley. It is not the 17 plaintiff who has the burden of this
18 element of the claim.

19 THE COURT: We would have to give some
20 thought of when we say fraud, what is it
21 even that we're referring to?

22 MR. SCAROLA: And my response to that
23 would be the broadest definition that
24 could possibly have been established under 25 the evidence had the e-mails been

289:1 discovered.

2 THE COURT: I would not expect less,
3 Mr. Scarola.

4 MR. SCAROLA: And I think that that's
5 the only logical response since what we're
6 talking about is the absence of evidence.
7 So if, in fact, we were to determine that
8 was the appropriate remedy under the 9 circumstances, I think that would be the 10 scope of the remedy, the only logical
11 scope of the remedy.

12 As B recognizes, another alternative is 13 we get to put our evidence on with regard
14 to knowledge. They don't get to put any 15 evidence on with regard to knowledge. But 16 the burden of proof remains with us. We 17 still have the burden of proving it. We 18 get to elicit our proof. They're not
19 allowed to challenge that proof.

20 So there's clearly, there's a lot to 21 think about in terms of what is required
22 to do justice under these circumstances.
23 But the reason why I suggest to Your Honor
24 that it is, in fact, the most serious
25 sanction that is appropriate under these

290:1 circumstances is because we are still in a
 2 position today of simply not knowing how
 3 much more is out there. And it's because 4 we're in the position of not knowing how
 5 much more is out there that the only
 6 reasonable sanction is one that
 7 establishes our liability case under these
 8 circumstances.

9 And obviously this discovery is
 10 directed at the heart of our liability
 11 case. It is the primary contested issue
 12 that we have been seeking this discovery
 13 concerning.

14 I've been speaking a long time, and I
 15 want to close, but before I do that I do
 16 want to remind the court, because I think 17 that it is very significant, that even the 18 multiplicity of violations that have
 19 occurred with respect to these e-mails,
 20 and it has been a long list of violations
 21 with regard to the e-mails, those multiple
 22 violations are not the only violations
 23 that have occurred in this case. I bring
 24 Your Honor back to all the circumstances
 25 relating to the motion for contempt that

291:1 was pending for a long time. And while
 2 Your Honor understandably decided that it
 3 was not appropriate to go further with
 4 that, it is certainly an appropriate
 5 consideration in making a determination as 6 to the extent to which the defendant has 7 or has not acted in good faith in its
 8 compliance with court orders.

9 There have been numerous other matters
 10 that have been the subject of focus of the 11 court's attention in the past.
 12 Mr. Bram Smith (phonetic) walking out of 13 the room in the middle of his deposition
 14 in violation of discovery procedures
 15 refusing to answer a question, consulting
 16 with counsel and then coming back in while 17 that question is pending; the incredible
 18 problems that we have gone through in 19 order to attempt to establish the 20 admissibility of documents as business
 21 records; and the games that have been 22 played with regard to requests for
 23 admissions; and the inadequate
 24 interrogatory responses that we have 25 received that clearly indicate a lack of

292:1 good faith and due diligence and
 2 appropriate respect for discovery
 3 obligations with regard to those issues.
 4 There are others. And if it becomes of 5 significance, we would be prepared to
 6 provide a comprehensive list. But I think
 7 that not even needing to go beyond the 8 e-mail issues, the repetition of 9 misconduct with regard to e-mail issues in 10 and of itself is not, but placed in the 11 context even of just those limited numbers
 12 of examples that I've been able to give 13 Your Honor indicates a pattern of 14 misconduct, a pattern of disregard on the 15 part of the defendant and defendant's
 16 counsel, which justifies the admittedly
 17 unusual and harsh penalty that we are 18 seeking to have imposed.

19 Before I sit down I do want to check
 20 with my co-counsel to make sure that there
 21 isn't something of major importance that I
 22 missed.

23 There is something of importance that I
 24 ought to mention, and that is the fact
 25 that this record clearly establishes that

293:1 had we not been diligent in pressing these
 2 matters, it is highly unlikely that any of 3 this ever would have come to light. We've
 4 got Mr. Saunders taking the witness stand
 5 after having been deposed last week and
 6 swearing under oath, I'm confident that we 7 have fully and completely complied, and 8 then going back after his deposition to 9 conduct the search that should have been 10 conducted April 17th if the order was the 11 16th, April 17, 2004 at the very latest,
 12 and probably many months earlier when the 13 request for production was first made. He 14 tells us he is the man with the most 15 knowledge regarding these things. He's 16 been there for, I think he said 17 years.
 17 And for him to have waited until after he 18 was deposed to conduct the search that 19 should have been conducted over a year ago
 20 is extraordinary.

21 You can not help but wonder how much of 22 this got done because Your Honor accepted
 23 our suggestion and strong request that the 24 time had come to have somebody looking 25 over Morgan Stanley's shoulder and we

294:1 needed an outside vendor to be able to
 2 double-check the work that they were
 3 doing. If they did not know that there
 4 was going to be somebody else who was
 5 going to discover everything that they are 6 now admitting, they didn't find and never
 7 looked for, I don't think there's any
 8 question about the fact that we would not 9 have had voluntary disclosures. These
 10 aren't voluntary disclosures. These are 11 disclosures that are made under the shadow
 12 of somebody looking over their shoulder,
 13 breathing down their necks and ready to 14 come into the courtroom to tell Your Honor
 15 about what a wreckless approach they took 16 to the discovery in this case.

17 I think that that's it, Your Honor, and 18 thank you very much for your patience with 19 me.

20 THE COURT: Thanks. You ready to go
 21 forward?

22 MR. JONES: Well, Your Honor, by my
 23 count, Mr. Scarola took an hour. It's 24 five of 5:00. It's going to take me much
 25 longer than five minutes.

295:1 THE COURT: Do you want to take a break
 2 and come back?

3 MR. JONES: I'd like to take a break and 4 come back.

5 THE COURT: I think we need to finish
 6 this argument today. I can tell you, just 7 so you're prepared, the first question I'd
 8 like to put to bed is what those 8,000
 9 pages of documents are. I mean, that's
 10 the first question I was going to ask you,
 11 so if you can sort of address that factual
 12 assertion first and then go back into the
 13 argument...

14 MR. CLARE: We can do that after the 15 break.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Thanks.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT, IN
AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL FURTHER DISCOVERY REGARDING MORGAN STANLEY'S DESTRUCTION AND NONPRODUCTION OF E-MAILS

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully seeks leave to conduct certain discovery relating to the willful failure of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") to make full production of responsive e-mails, as it falsely certified it had done prior to June 23, 2004. CPH seeks this discovery not to buttress the record supporting the pending motion for sanctions relating to Morgan Stanley's failure to produce e-mails, but to obtain information for use at trial. The record as to the former issue is complete and justifies the immediate entry of a default judgment as to liability. But as explained below, this discovery is warranted to ascertain the full magnitude of the e-mail problem, which in turn can inform the jury's determinations about liability (if the Court does not grant a default judgment) and about the award of punitive damages.

Specifically, CPH asks that the Court (1) order Morgan Stanley to produce the 46 documents listed on Morgan Stanley's February 10, 2005 Privilege Log (Priv. Nos. 486-524), as well as any other documents reflecting when and how Morgan Stanley agents or employees, including in-house and outside counsel, learned about the existence and discovery of all electronic data storage sources potentially containing e-mail-related discovery materials, the failure to make complete production of e-mail-related discovery materials, and when and how Morgan Stanley's agents and employees responded; (2) order Morgan Stanley to make available for deposition in the next two weeks key personnel who were parties to attorney-client communications involving the production of e-mails in this case, including but not limited to Thomas A. Clare, James P. Cusick, James F. Doyle, Grant Jonas, Soo-Mi Lee, Arthur Riel, Zachary Stern, and Wray Stewart; and (3) bar Morgan Stanley from asserting attorney-client privilege to justify withholding documents or instructing deponents not to answer questions about Morgan Stanley's retention, destruction, production, or nonproduction of e-mails or backup tapes, based on the crime/fraud exception recognized in FLA. STAT. ANN. § 90.502(4)(a) (West 2004). For the reasons stated below, Morgan Stanley — which owns and repeatedly has invoked the attorney-client privilege — should no longer be permitted to assert the privilege to hide the fraud it has perpetrated upon this Court and CPH.

CPH needs the opportunity to inquire into these matters to establish the magnitude and seriousness of Morgan Stanley's repeated and egregious violations of the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order — the latest of which was revealed just this weekend when Morgan Stanley once again advised CPH that it had located yet another batch of backup tapes that have not yet been searched. See Ex. A (February 19 e-mail advising CPH that "Morgan Stanley has located additional boxes of backup tapes"); see also Ex. B (CPH's proposed order presenting a menu of possible sanctions). In recent days, Morgan Stanley has sought to minimize the severity of its misconduct by arguing (1) that Arthur Riel, the former head of Morgan Stanley's e-mail archive project, was a renegade employee who for some unknown reason orchestrated a fraudulent discovery scheme on his own; and (2) that counsel took every appropriate step to address the problem when they learned about it in October. MS Supp. Opp'n at 2-3, 6. Neither argument, however, is supported by any record evidence, and Morgan Stanley has used assertions of privilege to block CPH from inquiring into these matters, both in depositions and in open court. Moreover, as explained below, there are multiple reasons to doubt the veracity of these assertions — reasons that fully justify revoking the protections of privilege in view of Morgan Stanley's failure to satisfy its discovery obligations even today, despite having certified its full compliance eight months ago.

BACKGROUND

As the Court is aware, it is only as a result of CPH's persistence that Morgan Stanley has begun taking steps in the direction of compliance with the April 16, 2004 Order, eight months after Morgan Stanley certified that it already had fully complied. How close Morgan Stanley now is to full compliance and whether it will ever reach the Court-ordered destination remain unsolved mysteries. If CPH had not made an appropriate motion, it is highly unlikely that Morgan Stanley ever would have located multiple sets of additional, unsearched tapes or would have done anything beyond processing an incomplete set of tapes on its own schedule, at its own pace. See, e.g., Ex. C at 187, 195 (Mr. Clare testifying that he learned only after CPH filed its January 26, 2005 motion that the "Brooklyn found" tapes had been discovered before the certification on June 23); id. at 202 (Mr. Clare testifying that he only recently learned that Ms. Gorman had "been instructed [in October] that the processing of these tapes was to be given a higher priority than it had previously"); Ex. D at 155-56 (Mr. Saunders testifying that his deposition inspired additional searches that turned up another 243 tapes); Ex. E (February 16, 2005 notice revoking Morgan Stanley's June 23, 2004 certificate of compliance).

But the problems continue. Remarkably, just this weekend, Morgan Stanley once again revealed that it was still finding additional backup tapes that have never been analyzed or searched. On Saturday afternoon, Morgan Stanley's counsel, Mr. Thomas A. Clare of Kirkland & Ellis LLP, sent CPH's attorneys an e-mail message stating, in full:

We have been informed that Morgan Stanley has located additional boxes of backup tapes in a security room. Morgan Stanley is working to catalog the tapes and determine their contents. We will provide you with this information when it becomes available. As of this morning, however, Morgan Stanley has identified four (unlabelled) DLT tapes among the collection. Those four tapes will be sent to NDCI for further analysis.

Ex. A (e-mail sent at 12:54 p.m. on Saturday, February 19, 2005).¹ This message arrived only days after Morgan Stanley's Robert Saunders twice testified under oath that he was "confident" all tapes had already been located. Ex. D at 152-56 (Saunders's testimony at February 14, 2005 hearing, recounting his February 10, 2005 deposition testimony).

The Court already has determined based on evidence presented at the February 14 hearing that Morgan Stanley's failure to make a complete and timely production of e-mails in compliance with the Court's Order was willful. But the full magnitude of the effort to commit fraud on the Court and on CPH remains unknown. Morgan Stanley continues to assert (1) that this problem was originated by one employee, Mr. Riel, who was subsequently placed on "administrative leave" for incompetence and lack of integrity; and (2) that Morgan Stanley acted appropriately and with dispatch when its legal department learned of the issue in October. MS

Supp. Opp'n at 2-3, 6. This motion seeks a way to test those assertions for purposes of establishing the truth, which can in turn be disclosed at trial.

A review of the chronology of key events reveals why additional discovery is justified and why Morgan Stanley no longer should be allowed to invoke privilege to hamper that discovery:

- On May 14, 2004, Morgan Stanley made what purported to be a complete production of e-mails pursuant to the Agreed Order, based on electronic searches run in April.
- But two years earlier, hundreds of eight-millimeter tapes had been discovered (but not uploaded or searched), and by no later than May 6, 2004 (a full week before the May 14 production), the Morgan Stanley employee responsible for this project, Arthur Riel, knew there were other backup tapes (the "Brooklyn tapes") whose contents also had not been uploaded to the archive and searched. Ex. F, MS 112286 (May 6 minutes). He also knew that Morgan Stanley's vendor, NDCI, had not yet completed processing all of the original 35,000 backup tapes in order to allow them to be uploaded. See MS Supp. Opp'n at 8-9 (noting that, as of May 6, 2004, NDCI had yet to process more than 2,000 of the original 35,000 tapes).
- Despite that knowledge, on June 23 Mr. Riel falsely certified in writing that Morgan Stanley had fully complied with the Agreed Order.
- By July 2, Mr. Riel learned that there were potentially responsive e-mails on the tapes still being processed. Ex. G, MS 112327 (July 2 minutes).

But according to Morgan Stanley, no one in the legal department had any knowledge until late October that the May 14 production was not complete and that the June 23 certificate was therefore false. There are several reasons to doubt this story.

First, it is inherently implausible. No reason is suggested why Mr. Riel would take it upon himself to orchestrate a fraud not only on CPH but on Morgan Stanley's own counsel. Certainly there must have been multiple communications between counsel and Mr. Riel in April, May, and June 2004 about this very topic.

Second, Morgan Stanley has not offered any actual evidence of this story — instead offering only a carefully phrased declaration by Mr. Doyle stating that he learned in late October “that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley's May 14, 2004 e-mail production.” Ex. H. Mr. Doyle, who was present but not called as a witness at the February 14 hearing, says nothing in his declaration about whether he was otherwise aware that the May 14 production was incomplete, nor does he describe any inquiry he made of other counsel at Morgan Stanley about when they acquired such knowledge.

Third, and even more glaringly, Morgan Stanley's latest privilege log lists a June 7, 2004 e-mail from Mr. Riel to two in-house Morgan Stanley attorneys, James Cusick and Soo-Mi Lee, “seeking legal advice regarding [the] status of [Morgan Stanley's] e-mail restoration process.” Ex. I (privilege log, entry no. 490). The timing of that June 7 request for legal advice is disturbing, as it came after Mr. Riel oversaw the May 14 production of e-mails but before he signed the June 23 certificate stating that Morgan Stanley had fully complied with the Agreed Order, which he knew at the time was false. Morgan Stanley's attempt to portray Mr. Riel as a renegade employee is undercut by the fact that he affirmatively sought legal guidance from Morgan Stanley's counsel before affixing his name to the knowingly false certificate. On the one hand, if in June 2004 Mr. Riel or his staff revealed to Morgan Stanley's counsel that certain backup tapes had not yet been searched, that could serve to establish that Mr. Riel conspired with attorneys at Morgan Stanley to conceal the falsity of Morgan Stanley's certificate and thereby to defraud both this Court and CPH. That misconduct should trigger the crime/fraud exception to the privilege, under FLA. STAT. ANN. § 90.502(4)(a) (West 2004). On the other hand, if Mr. Riel or his staff manipulated counsel to keep them ignorant and thereby to perpetrate a fraud on CPH and on this Court, that too should trigger the crime/fraud exception, as it is the client's knowledge — not the attorney's — that matters for purposes of the exception.

CPH should be allowed to depose both Mr. Riel and the in-house counsel (Mr. Cusick and Ms. Lee) from whom Mr. Riel sought legal advice on June 7, 2004. But the discovery also should go further, to include other key inside and outside counsel and information-technology professionals whose names appear repeatedly on Morgan Stanley's recent privilege log. Roughly half of the 46 documents on that log date from October or November 2004, when there was a flurry of communications about the e-mail production situation. At some point, a decision was made to produce 8,000 pages of e-mails and to tell CPH that these were a first installment of production from "additional e-mail backup tapes" that Morgan Stanley allegedly had discovered "since [its] e-mail production in May 2004." Ex. J (November 17, 2004 letter from Thomas A. Clare to CPH's counsel); see id. (referring to "newly discovered tapes"). But Morgan Stanley's own witnesses at the February 14, 2005 hearing testified that the data from the DLT tapes found in Brooklyn and the 8-mm tapes found in Manhattan were not put into searchable form until January 2005. Ex. K at 52, 65, 68-69 (Gorman). Morgan Stanley's false claim that the November production came from "newly discovered" backup tapes apparently was designed to conceal the fact that not all of the 35,000 original tapes stored at the Recall facility in New Jersey had been searched in April 2004. CPH should be allowed to take discovery on the genesis of this cover story. CPH and this Court should learn the full story, under oath, with all witnesses fully subject to all the penalties for providing false testimony.

So far, CPH's efforts to learn that full story have been stymied by Morgan Stanley's repeated assertions of privilege. See, e.g., Ex. L at 63-64 (invoking the privilege during Ms. Gorman's February 14, 2005 in-court testimony); Ex. M at 181-82, 196 (invoking the privilege during Mr. Clare's February 14, 2005 in-court testimony); Ex. N at 47, 63-65 (invoking the privilege during Ms. Gorman's February 9, 2005 deposition); Ex. O at 23-27 (invoking the privilege during Mr. Saunders's February 10, 2005 deposition). Those assertions of privilege might have been appropriate if there had been a record here of good faith. But the opposite is the case. Representation after representation of complete production has proved false, as carefully worded declarations obfuscate the truth and leave more questions than answers. The privilege log reveals the fingerprints of counsel on these clumsy, false representations. It is time for the full facts to be aired, under oath and under penalty of perjury.

ARGUMENT

The crime/fraud exception recognizes that the attorney-client privilege "ceas[es] to operate at a certain point, namely, where the desired advice refers not to prior wrongdoing, but to future wrongdoing." United States v. Zolin, 491 U.S. 554, 562-63 (1989). Under Florida law, the crime/fraud exception bars any party from claiming as privileged any communications with a lawyer when the lawyer's services "were sought or obtained to enable or aid anyone to commit or plan to commit what the client knew was a crime or fraud." FLA. STAT. ANN. § 90.502(4)(a) (West 2004) (emphasis added); see Butler, Pappas, Weihmuller v. Coral Reef of Key Biscayne

Developers, Inc., 873 So. 2d 339, 342 (Fla. 3d DCA 2004) (requiring showing that communication was part of effort to commit fraud, and party sought attorney's advice in order to further fraud); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Turney, 824 So. 2d 172, 187 (1st DCA 2001) (requiring showing that communication with counsel was "in order to obtain advice or assistance in perpetrating what the client knows to be a crime or fraud"). It does not matter whether the lawyers knew of the fraud, so long as the client knew and used its lawyers to commit (or plan to commit) a fraud. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Turney, 824 So. 2d at 187. As this Court put it, even counsel's sincere belief that it acted in good faith does not "absolve[] its client of the consequences of any of the client's bad acts. . . . [S]ometimes the [sins] of a client come back and visit the client." Ex. P at 618-19.

Florida law has long recognized "fraud on the court," a species of fraud designed to "produc[e] a judicial act by fraudulent representations to the Judge." State v. Burton, 314 So. 2d 136, 137 (Fla. 1975). Furthermore, "fraud on the court" encompasses abuses not only in open court, but also in pretrial discovery. Thus, in Medina v. Florida East Coast Railway, L.L.C., 866 So. 2d 89 (Fla. 3d DCA 2004), where the plaintiff had repeatedly lied under oath at his deposition, the appellate court reaffirmed the principle that a Florida trial court, after giving the plaintiff an opportunity to be heard, has "the inherent authority to dismiss an action when it finds that a plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court." Id. at 90.

Courts in Florida and elsewhere have not hesitated to apply the crime/fraud exception to frauds on the court, including discovery abuses, destruction of evidence, and obstruction of justice. See, e.g., Volcanic Gardens Mgmt. Co. v. Paxson, 847 S.W.2d 343, 348 (Tex. Ct. App. 1993) ("[U]nder the crime/fraud exception to the lawyer-client privilege, 'fraud' would include the commission and/or attempted commission of fraud on the court or on a third person," as when a “client seeks the assistance of an attorney in order to make a false statement or statements of material fact or law to a third person or the court for personal advantage.”).

In Gutter v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours, 124 F. Supp. 2d 1291 (S.D. Fla. 2000), a Florida federal court applied the crime/fraud exception when DuPont’s counsel made false and misleading statements to the court regarding privilege logs. Although the court could identify no single lawyer at DuPont who knew all the facts behind the misstatements, there was “ample evidence that DuPont itself had the requisite knowledge and intent” for a finding of fraud on the court. Id. at 1313. The parallels to the present case are striking: Certain of the defendant’s lawyers knew that certain documents could be produced (and had been in other litigation), but the defendant withheld the documents and informed the court that the documents could not be produced. See id. at 1302. When the pieces were fit together, the defendant’s fraud was revealed.

Such discovery misconduct triggers the crime/fraud exception because the destruction of records eviscerates “the court’s ability to ascertain the truth.” In re Sealed Case, 754 F.2d 395, 401 (D.C. Cir. 1985); see id. (invoking the crime/fraud exception where a party “perpetrated a continuing fraud connected with, but not limited to, the actual destruction of records”). The destruction of evidence is every bit as troubling with electronic documents as with traditional paper documents. As this Court put it on February 15, “This is a case of fraud. And electronic data is the functional equivalent of a paper trail.” Ex. P at 614-15.

For these reasons, courts do not hesitate to deny the protections of privilege when circumstances suggest, for example, that a party and its lawyers were overseeing the destruction of e-mails and other documents while anticipating litigation. See Rambus, Inc. v. Infineon Techs. AG, 220 F.R.D. 264, 283, 287-88 (E.D. Va. 2004). In Rambus, a suit involving counterclaims of fraud, the defendant sought discovery of documents, including attorney-client communications, relating to the plaintiff's document-retention program, on the theory that the document-retention program resulted in the intentional spoliation of relevant documents, and therefore the crime/fraud exception to the attorney-client privilege applied. In response to the plaintiff's claim that it had destroyed documents to reduce the potential cost of discovery in future cases, not to suppress evidence in this particular case, the court held that even if the plaintiff "did not institute its policy in bad faith, if it reasonably anticipated litigation when it did so, it is guilty of spoliation." Id. at 286. The court concluded that "the crime/fraud exception extends to materials or communication created for planning, or in furtherance of, spoliation." Id. at 283; see also State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 54 Cal. App. 4th 625, 648-49 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) (applying the crime/fraud exception to discovery abuses).

When parties engage in discovery misconduct and abuse the attorney-client privilege, Florida courts similarly have not hesitated to reject those parties' claims of privilege and to require production of documents that otherwise would have been protected from disclosure. See, e.g., Metabolife Int'l, Inc. v. Holster, 888 So. 2d 140, 140-41 (Fla. 1st DCA 2004) (holding that defendant's failure timely to file a privilege log waived its claims of privilege and required production of documents that otherwise would have been subject to attorney-client and work-product privileges); General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So. 2d 1010, 1032 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (holding that defendant's misconduct during discovery justified a finding that defendant had waived its privilege claims); Omega Consulting Group, Inc. v. Templeton, 805 So. 2d 1058, 1060 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (affirming the trial court's order requiring corporate defendant to disclose three e-mails, and rejecting the corporation's claims that the communications were protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege).

This Court's April 16, 2004 Order gave Morgan Stanley one full month to produce all responsive, nonprivileged e-mails. Today, more than 10 months later, Morgan Stanley has yet to comply with that Order. And for almost the entire period of delay, up until a few days ago (when Morgan Stanley finally revoked its certificate of compliance, see Ex. E), Morgan Stanley insisted on telling CPH and this Court that it had complied with the Order. The time has come for this Court to stop accepting Morgan Stanley's blanket claims of attorney-client privilege and to acknowledge that Morgan Stanley has used its lawyers to "carry[] out [its] misrepresentations and concealment." American Tobacco Co. v. State, 697 So. 2d 1249, 1257 (Fla. 4th DCA 1997).

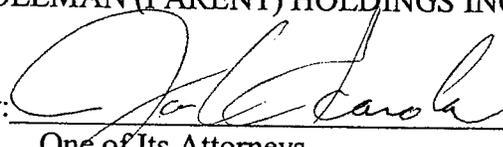

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should invoke the crime/fraud exception to order Morgan Stanley (1) to produce the 46 documents listed on Morgan Stanley's February 10, 2005 Privilege Log (Priv. Nos. 486-524), as well as any other documents reflecting when and how Morgan Stanley agents or employees, including in-house and outside counsel, learned about the existence and discovery of all electronic data storage sources potentially containing e-mail-related discovery materials, the failure to make complete production of e-mail-related discovery materials, and when and how Morgan Stanley's agents and employees responded; (2) to make available for deposition in the next two weeks key personnel who were parties to attorney-client communications involving the production of e-mails in this case, including but not limited to Thomas A. Clare, James P. Cusick, James F. Doyle, Grant Jonas, Soo-Mi Lee, Arthur Riel, Zachary Stern, and Wray Stewart; and (3) not to assert attorney-client privilege as a basis for withholding documents or when the deponents are asked questions about Morgan Stanley's retention, destruction, production, or nonproduction of e-mails or backup tapes.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH's") request for a default judgment should be denied because this extraordinary relief is not warranted, and cannot be squared with Florida Supreme Court precedent. CPH has not, and cannot, show that Morgan Stanley willfully and deliberately disregarded this Court's authority. CPH has also failed to show that its case has been prejudiced on the merits. And CPH has offered no credible reason why less onerous sanctions are inappropriate. Finally, CPH's own failure to retain evidence, including emails, as well as its failure to produce documents evidencing both the value of the Sunbeam warrants and the Sunbeam stock CPH received as part of the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction, bar the relief requested here as a matter of equity.

I. FLORIDA LAW DOES NOT PERMIT DEFAULT JUDGMENTS EXCEPT UNDER EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCES NOT PRESENT IN THIS CASE.

A default judgment "is the most severe of all sanctions" and "should be employed only in extreme circumstances." Ham v. Dunmire, No. SC03-2038, 2004 WL 2973857, at *2 (Fla. Dec. 23, 2004) (internal quotations & citation omitted; emphasis added); Wallraff v. TGI Friday's Inc., 490 So. 2d 50, 51 (Fla. 1986). Default judgments are strongly disfavored under Florida law because "the right of access to [Florida] courts is constitutionally protected" and, except under the most extraordinary circumstances, may not be denied. USB Acquisition Co. v. U.S. Block Corp., 564 So. 2d 221, 222 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (emphasis added) (citing Art. I., § 21 Fla. Const.). The Florida Supreme Court has held that if any other sanction "appears to be a viable alternative, the trial court should employ such an alternative." Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *3 (internal quotations & citation omitted); see also id. at *6 (dismissal is unwarranted where more appropriate sanctions are available).

Rule 1.380(b) governs sanctions for failure to comply with discovery orders. Florida courts have recognized that default judgments, like dismissals with prejudice, should be used "as a discovery sanction only as a last resort.” Muhtar v. Aetna Ins. Co., 456 So. 2d 586, 587 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984) (abuse of discretion to dismiss suit as a sanction for failure to comply with discovery order where plaintiffs, while not responding as quickly or fully as parties to litigation might like, made a good-faith effort to, and in fact did, substantially comply with the discovery order) (per curiam). CPH asserts that the ultimate sanction of default judgment is appropriate because (1) Morgan Stanley has allegedly engaged in a pattern of discovery abuses; and (2) Morgan Stanley has allegedly destroyed evidence that may have been useful to its case. Neither allegation provides grounds for relieving CPH of its burden of proving the merits of its claims.

Rather, to justify the severe sanction of default under Rule 1.380(b), the moving party — here CPH — bears the heavy burden of proving with clear and conclusive evidence: (i) that discovery violations were made in deliberate disregard of the court’s authority, and; (ii) that the moving party has been prejudiced in a meaningful way. See Beaver Crane Serv., Inc. v. National Surety Corp., 373 So. 2d 88, 89 (Fla. 3d DCA 1979) (default judgment held to be inappropriate where party “ha[s] not demonstrated [that it was] prejudiced in any meaningful way by” discovery abuses). CPH can prove neither.

II. CPH HAS NOT PRESENTED EVIDENCE THAT WOULD JUSTIFY THE SANCTION OF DEFAULT FOR ALLEGED DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS

A. CPH Has Not Shown That Morgan Stanley Deliberately And Contumaciously Disregarded The Court’s Authority.

A default judgment or dismissal with prejudice is justified only when the court finds by clear and conclusive evidence that a party has shown “[a] deliberate and contumacious disregard of the court’s authority.” Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *2 (internal quotations & citation omitted; alteration in original; emphases added). Before imposing such extreme sanctions, the Court must make “express written findings of fact supporting the conclusion that the failure to obey the court order demonstrated willful or deliberate disregard.” Id. As the Second District Court of Appeal observed recently in Smith Original Homes, Inc. v. Carpet King Carpets, Inc., imposing the ultimate sanction of a default judgment on “[a]nything short of this standard is an abuse of discretion.” No. 2D03-4759, 2005 WL 415082, at *2 (Fla. 2d DCA Feb. 23, 2005).

A party’s negligent failure to respond to discovery requests does not justify a default judgment. As even CPH concedes, “[m]ere negligence does not suffice” to justify the sanction of a default judgment. Baja Village Markets, Inc. v. Baja Supermarket, Inc., 712 So. 2d 465, 466 (Fla. 3d DCA 1998) (per curiam). Likewise, the mere fact that a party exhibits “a continuing and repeated failure to comply” with a court’s pre-trial orders is not enough to warrant the ultimate sanction. See Kelley v. Schmidt, 613 So. 2d 918, 919-21 (Fla. 5th DCA 1993).

CPH nonetheless argues that the Court should enter default judgment against Morgan Stanley for its “[r]epeated and prolonged failures to carry out a thorough search for back-up tapes.” (Feb. 24, 2005 CPH’s Outline in Supp. of its Pending Mot. to Strike Morgan Stanley’s Answer at 2.) CPH further suggests that this extreme sanction is justified because Morgan Stanley supposedly engaged in a “conscious avoidance of discovery” and a “cover-up effort[.]” (Id.) The record does not support CPH’s contentions. The record evidence shows just the opposite. Morgan Stanley disclosed the existence of both the additional tapes and the potential problems with the search scripts and set about correcting them. In fact, Morgan Stanley has gone to extraordinary lengths — and expense — to make whatever relevant, non-privileged information exists on those tapes available to CPH.

CPH argues that Morgan Stanley discovered the additional tapes and script problems because Morgan Stanley “was facing independent third-party verification of the production that had been made.” (Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1325-26.) That is not correct. The record shows that months before the Court suggested in the February 2, 2005 hearing that a third-party vendor be hired to review the additional tapes, Morgan Stanley had notified CPH that (1) additional e-mail backup tapes had been discovered; (2) additional responsive e-mails had been identified; and (3) e-mail backup tapes were still being restored. (Nov. 17, 2004 T. Clare Letter to M. Brody (Ex. 1).) Likewise, Morgan Stanley's IT group had been working on discovering and correcting errors with the "scripts" well before the Court suggested that a third-party vendor might be an appropriate sanction. (Feb. 14, 2003 Hrg. at 52-53; Feb. 9, 2005 L. Gorman Dep. at 70-71 Ex. 2.)

In the end, CPH's motion must be denied because Morgan Stanley has never deliberately disregarded this Court's authority. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley is working diligently and expending huge resources to bring prompt closure to this issue. There is not one shred of evidence in the record that Morgan Stanley's finding of additional backup tapes or errors in the script program amount to a "cover-up" or a "conscious avoidance of discovery" as CPH suggests. See In re Southeast Banking Corp., 204 F.3d 1322, 1332 (11th Cir. 2000) (If a litigant's alleged discovery violation is "caused by simple negligence, misunderstanding, or inability to comply" a default judgment is not appropriate) (internal quotations & citation omitted).

B. CPH Has Not Shown That It Has Been Prejudiced On The Merits Of Its Case.

The motion for default judgment should also be denied because CPH has not shown that it suffered any significant prejudice on the merits as a result of the alleged discovery abuses. As the Florida Supreme Court has recognized, default judgments are generally not appropriate unless the moving party has suffered substantial prejudice. See Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *6 ("[D]ismissal is far too extreme as a sanction in those cases where discovery violations have no absolutely prejudice to the opposing party.”); but see USB Acquisition Co., Inc., 564 So. 2d 221, 222 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (“Lack of prejudice is irrelevant” in determining whether a plaintiff’s complaint should be dismissed for discovery abuse.). Florida courts have therefore held that in sanctioning discovery abuses the trial court’s discretion “should be guided largely” by whether such abuses “will prejudice the opposing party.” Green v. Shoop, 240 So. 2d 85, 86 (Fla. 3d DCA 1970); see also Fuller v. Rinebolt, 382 So. 2d 1239, 1241 (Fla. 4th DCA 1980) (holding that trial court, in absence of showing of prejudice, should not exclude testimony of witness whose name had not been disclosed to opposing party).

This rule reflects the core principle that the Court’s “authority to sanction is not unbridled; the sanction imposed must be commensurate with the offense.” Kelley, 613 So. 2d at 920. Because the “purpose of reposing in the trial court the authority to enter a default is to ensure compliance with its order, not to punish or penalize,” Garden-Aire Vill. Sea Haven, Inc. v. Decker, 433 So. 2d 676, 677 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983) (per curiam), it is “imperative that trial courts strike the appropriate balance between the severity of the infraction and the impact of the sanction when exercising their discretion to discipline parties to an action.” Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *6. Accordingly, unless discovery abuses prevent a part from proving its prima facie case the ultimate sanction of default is not appropriate.

1. CPH Has Not Suffered Any Prejudice Demonstrable Prejudice By Morgan Stanley’s Recent Discovery Of Additional E-Mail Tapes.

CPH argues that Morgan Stanley: (1) failed to disclose the existence of 738 8-millimeter tapes when they were found; (2) failed to disclose the Brooklyn tapes when they were found; (3) made false representations to the Court about when the Brooklyn tapes were found; and (4) made false representations to the Court about when the first time anyone knew that there was recoverable e-mail data on the Brooklyn tapes. None of these allegations, even if true, supports the issuance of a default judgment because CPH has not shown that any of these hotly-contested “facts” prejudiced the merits of its case.

First, the Brooklyn tapes, no matter when they were found, have been searched, and responsive non-privileged documents have been produced to CPH. In addition, the Brooklyn tapes have been turned over to a third-party vendor to run its own searches for responsive e-mails. CPH has not identified any e-mails from the Brooklyn tapes that CPH claims are needed to establish its prima facie case. As a result, the late production of the Brooklyn tapes cannot support the relief CPH requests.

Second, the 738 8-millimeter tapes have likewise been searched and responsive non-privileged documents have been produced to CPH. These tapes have been given to the same third-party vendor to run its own searches for responsive e-mails. Again, CPH has not identified any e-mails from these tapes that it claims are needed to establish its prima facie case.

Third, CPH’s claim that Morgan Stanley made “false representations” about when the Brooklyn tapes were found is wrong, and irrelevant to the issue of a default. The fact that the Brooklyn Tapes were located in May 2004 and not the summer of 2004 does not rebut the evidence that the Brooklyn Tapes have been searched and responsive documents have been produced to CPH. CPH has therefore suffered no prejudice. See Muhtar, 456 So. 2d at 587 (default judgment is an abuse of discretion because of the lack of prejudice to complaining party when opposing party substantially complies with order, albeit not as quickly or fully as the Court would have liked).

Fourth, Morgan Stanley has consistently contended that no one in its Law Division knew of the existence of additional recoverable e-mail data on the tapes before October 2004. Morgan Stanley has previously submitted an affidavit of the individual attorney with responsibility for the Coleman case, attesting that it was at the end of October 2004 when he first “learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data insert on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley’s May 14, 2004 e-mail production.” (Jan. 31, 2005, Doyle Decl. ¶ 3 (Ex. 3).) That attorney has further testified that “[u]pon learning that information, I directed that the electronic searches described in the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order be conducted for any backup tapes that had not been restored and made searchable at that point, and that the process of restoring the remaining backup tapes continue as expeditiously as possible.” (Id. ¶ 3.) To the extent CPH relies on an out-of-context statement at the February 2, 2005 hearing to support its assertion that Morgan Stanley somehow misrepresented to the Court about the first time someone knew that there was recoverable e-mail data on the Brooklyn tapes, CPH’s motion should be denied because Morgan Stanley has repeatedly clarified any alleged ambiguity in the statement. (See Feb. 14, 2005 Hrg. at 213-15.) And CPH cannot show that it suffered any prejudice as a result of the representation.

Finally, the comprehensive e-mail restoration and review process that Morgan Stanley began on its own initiative, separate and apart from this litigation, has been a success despite the many issues encountered by Morgan Stanley along the way in organizing and searching a massive amount of electronic information. Approximately 35,000 backup e-mail tapes have been searched, and the process has resulted in the production of thousands of pages of e-mail messages in this litigation. Morgan Stanley does not dispute that the tapes found in the Brooklyn security room and the 8-millimeter tapes should have been found and produced earlier, but when they were found they were disclosed and searched for responsive email. CPH simply has not suffered any prejudice because the tapes were not found before May 14, 2004.

2. CPH Has No Demonstrable Evidence Of Prejudice Resulting From A Purported "Pattern Of Conduct"

CPH has combed the record and assembled every "historic" discovery disagreement between the parties in an effort to cobble together what it deems to be a "well-established pattern of disregard for [Morgan Stanley's] litigation related obligations." (CPH Outline at 6.) The eighteen-month discovery period is now closed, and it is a matter of record that the parties engaged in hard-fought discovery battles going both ways and that both sides lost motions to compel and produced evidence not previously-produced. These other disputes hardly rise to the level of "deliberate and contumacious disregard of this Court's authority." Moreover, none of these disputes have irreparably prejudiced CPH's prima facie case.

In its outline and argument on this issue, CPH focuses on two categories of purported discovery misconduct (apart from the e-mail tapes) from which it urges the Court to conclude that there is no alternative but to grant judgment in CPH's favor. The first category is PC Docs data that Morgan Stanley searched for and produced in response to the Court's February 3, 2005 Order. Morgan Stanley did not disregard the Court's order as CPH must show — Morgan Stanley fully complied with the Court's order and CPH does not claim otherwise. Nor does CPH have any credible claim of prejudice with respect to these documents which relate solely to the authenticity and admissibility of six documents. In fact, the Court has already ruled on that issue in CPH's favor and imposed the costs of additional discovery leading to the PC Docs profiles on Morgan Stanley.

The second category of alleged misconduct relates to documents regarding the Italian charge against William Strong. Again, Morgan Stanley did not disregard this Court's authority but rather complied with the Court's order to produce these documents. These documents are not relevant or admissible at trial (for the reasons set forth in Morgan Stanley's Motion in Limine

No. 23), but even if they were, CPH has no credible claim of prejudice because it is in possession of the documents.¹

Tacitly conceding that it cannot show prejudice with respect to any specific category of documents, as it is required to do under the law, CPH has resorted to two last-ditch prejudice arguments, neither of which hold water. The first is that Morgan Stanley's purported misconduct has made it necessary to "start the discovery process from the beginning" and re-do "almost all of the discovery that has already been completed":

page 1337 MR. SCAROLA:

9 Based upon the fragmentary production to
10 date, documents disclosed after the close of 11 discovery would require that almost all of the 12 discovery that has already been completed be
13 redone, because the disclosures that have been
14 made to date implicate in one way or another the 15 key testimony of almost every witness from whom
16 deposition testimony has been taken.
17 We would need to start this discovery
18 process from the beginning. I provided the
19 Court with a list of the new witnesses we would 20 need to depose. That in and of itself is a
21 lengthy list.

(Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1337.) This argument is disingenuous. The "list of new witness" are word processing employees and temp secretaries employed by Morgan Stanley in 1997-1998. There is no dispute that they typed keystrokes on some of the six documents at issue. But their typing is not an issue. Morgan Stanley has never denied that the documents were resident on

¹ CPH has not, and cannot, claim that the other out-of-context, unrelated incidents cited by CPH in its attempt to "pile on" grievances (Morgan Stanley's purported disclosure of a document already in the public record, a witnesses taking a break from a deposition in frustration from being asked the same question repeatedly, or a witness' verification of interrogatory responses his best knowledge as of the time of the verification) resulted in any prejudice to CPH's ability to make its claims. Moreover, CPH cannot show that Morgan Stanley violated any Court orders.

Morgan Stanley's document management system. Rather the issue is whether the documents are objectionable for the reasons before the Court. In short, the issue is the admissibility in evidence of the documents — nothing more.²

CPH's final argument is that default judgment is warranted because CPH simply does not trust Morgan Stanley, and that CPH has no confidence in the "integrity of the pretrial process" or the integrity of the individual lawyers in the case. (Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1345-46, 1425-26.) Morgan Stanley respectfully submits that if the standard for granting default judgment in Florida was that opponents in litigation must have complete confidence in each other then no major litigation would ever get to a jury. Moreover, Morgan Stanley, too, would be entitled to default judgment on liability, on the basis of, among other things, CPH's purposeful non-disclosure and subsequent wrongful redaction of arguably the most damaging documents in the case. Because Florida law requires willful disregard of the Court and specific prejudice to impose the "death penalty" sanction of default, and because CPH has not made any showing of either requirement, its motion must be denied.

III. CPH CANNOT JUSTIFY A DEFAULT FOR PURPORTED EVIDENCE SPOILATION BECAUSE CPH HAS NOT SHOWN THAT MORGAN STANLEY DELIBERATELY DESTROYED RELEVANT EVIDENCE.

Florida courts have recognized that the sanction of a default judgment is not appropriate unless missing evidence has been intentionally destroyed maliciously and in bad faith. See Federal Ins. Co. v. Allister Mfg. Co., 622 So. 2d 1348, 1351 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993) ("except perhaps where there has been a malicious destruction of evidence, the ultimate sanction should be avoided if possible”) (discussing Headley v. Chrysler Motor Corp., 141 F.R.D. 362 (D. Mass. 1991)). “Mere negligence in losing or destroying the records is not enough for an adverse inference as it does not sustain an inference of consciousness of a weak case.” Bashir v. Amtrak, 119 F.3d 929, 931 (11th Cir. 1997); see also Vick v. Texas Employment Comm’n, 514 F.2d 734, 737 (5th Cir. 1975). In fact, as recognized by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, “the vast weight of authority ... holds that absent bad-faith conduct applying a rule of law that results in dismissal on the grounds of spoliation of evidence is not authorized.” Cole v. Keller Indus., 132 F.3d 1044, 1047 (4th Cir. 1998). If the moving party does not come forward with extrinsic evidence proving that missing materials would have been unfavorable to the opposing party or relevant to the issues in the lawsuit, there can be no sanctions. See id. (finding that dismissal was improper where “there is no evidence that [the plaintiff’s] actions were undertaken in an effort to prevent the defendant from inspecting and testing the [evidence]”).

Here, CPH has no evidence that Morgan Stanley maliciously and purposefully destroyed evidence related to the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction. As a substitute for clear and convincing evidence, CPH asks the Court to choose between three hypothetical “possible constructions” for Morgan Stanley’s over-writing of e-mail tapes, ranging from negligence on Morgan Stanley’s part to an intentional destruction of tapes to conceal incriminating evidence in this case. (CPH Outline at 1.) Again, having no evidence that Morgan Stanley intended to conceal any evidence related to this case, CPH asks the Court simply to assume that this was Morgan Stanley’s “actual intent” for two reasons: (1) Morgan Stanley’s routine over-writing of e-mail tapes was the subject of an SEC inquiry and settlement; and (2) Morgan Stanley purportedly failed to preserve or gather e-mail relating to the Sunbeam transaction in connection with this case. (Id.)

First, contrary to CPH's representation, the SEC settlement was an industry-wide SEC proceeding that addressed the failure of certain registered broker-dealers, of which Morgan Stanley was one, to comply with regulatory requirements that broker-dealers preserve certain electronic communications for three years in a readily accessible place.³ Nothing in the SEC settlement — in which none of the broker-dealers admitted any wrongdoing — supports an inference that any Sunbeam-related e-mails were ever destroyed with malicious intent.⁴ And CPH has provided nothing but lawyer hyperbole to show that Sunbeam-related e-mails existed and were destroyed, and that those tapes would have contained damning evidence against Morgan Stanley. The inference is just as likely that any overwritten tapes contained e-mail evidencing that CPH knew about Sunbeam's slow first quarter sales and yet decided not to do any financial due diligence of Sunbeam including reading its interim financial statements. There is no evidence that Morgan Stanley did anything other than routinely overwrite tapes as was common in the industry at the time, and as CPH itself did and continues to do to this day. (Jan. 21, 2004 Fasman Dep. at 41-43, 68-69, 131-33 (Ex. 5).)

Second, CPH argued in writing to the Court that Morgan Stanley "issued specific instructions to gather hard copies of Sunbeam-related documents but failed to include any effort to preserve or gather e-mail." (CPH Outline at 1.) CPH reiterated this assertion at the February 23 hearing:

³ The recycling of e-mail tapes at Morgan Stanley ended in January 2001, (Feb. 10, 2004 Saunders Dep. at 57-60, 82-83 (Ex. 4)), over two years before CPH filed suit against Morgan Stanley.

⁴ The Court took judicial notice of the SEC proceeding without considering Morgan Stanley response to the plaintiff's request. Morgan Stanley respectfully suggests the Court erred in doing so for the reasons stated in Morgan Stanley's submission on February 21, 2005.

13 I remind the Court that the record has
14 already established the fact that Morgan Stanley
15 issued specific instructions to gather hard
16 copies of Sunbeam related documents, but clearly
17 excluded from its instructions to its own staff
18 any instructions to preserve electronic data,
19 specifically any instructions to preserve any
20 e-mail.

(Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1323.) CPH provided no record cite for this alleged “already established fact.” The record squarely contradicts this assertion. John Plotnick, Morgan Stanley’s corporate representative for document collection in this case, testified in no uncertain terms that he contacted all of the Morgan Stanley bankers who worked on the Sunbeam transaction and directed them “over and over again” to send him “all their electronic documents, including e-mail”:

Page 54

6 Q. With respect to any of the
7 employees who -- Morgan Stanley employees who
8 had any involvement with Sunbeam, have you
9 determined whether any of them backed up
10 information residing on the hard drives of
11 their PC’s?

12 A. I called all of the bankers that
13 worked on the Sunbeam transaction and directed
14 them to send me all of their hard copy and
15 printouts of all their electronic documents,
16 including e-mail, anything that would be on
17 their PC’s.

18 Q. Okay, did you refer specifically to
19 any backup that they may have made from their
20 hard drives from that time period?

21 A. I directed them over and over, all
22 hard copy and all electronic files.

(Sept. 9, 2003 Plotnick Dep. at 54 (emphasis added) (Ex. 6).) Indeed, before the November 24, 2004 close of discovery, Morgan Stanley had produced over 9,400 pages of e-mail related to the Sunbeam transaction. (See May 14, 2004 K. DeBord Letter to M. Brody and Nov. 18, 2004 M.

Occhuizzo Letter to M. Brody (Ex. 7).) CPH, in contrast, has produced less than forty e-mails from its files.

Third, CPH is not entitled to a default judgment also is not justified because CPH has not shown — and cannot show — that there is any specific “missing evidence” that is essential to its prima facie case. Indeed, Florida courts have held that even an instruction for an adverse inference — a sanction far less serious than default — is not warranted unless the missing evidence is absolutely “necessary to prove a prima facie case.” Jordan v. Masters, 821 So. 2d 342, 347 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (a jury instruction for an adverse inference is not appropriate when nonmoving party has failed to produce nonessential evidence); see also Public Health Trust of Dade County v. Valcin, 507 So. 2d 596, 599 (Fla. 1987) (holding that to obtain an adverse inference, the plaintiff must “establish to the satisfaction of the court that the absence of the records hinders his ability to establish a prima facie case”).

Nonetheless, CPH would have this Court eliminate altogether the requirement that prejudice is a necessary condition of any default judgment. Not once in its written submission does CPH mention the prejudice requirement — let alone make any effort to demonstrate that the hypothetical missing evidence somehow “hinders [CPH’s] ability to establish a prima facie case.” Id. Nor could CPH make that showing given the size of the discovery record, which includes over eighty witness depositions, over 450,000 pages of documents and numerous additional CDs containing additional electronic information.

In any event, the claim of prejudice here is not supported by the record. As noted above, Morgan Stanley has already produced responsive e-mails from the files of the Brooklyn tapes and the “738 8-millimeter tapes.” Likewise, Morgan Stanley is reviewing whether there are any script errors remaining in its e-mail archive system. If there are, Morgan Stanley will re-run the agreed-upon searches against the entirety of the e-mail archive system and produce all remaining non-privileged responsive materials, if any exist. Further, Morgan Stanley has provided each of the "additional tapes" to a third-party vendor so that it can run searches independent of Morgan Stanley's work. Consequently, CPH cannot realistically claim that it is somehow prejudiced when it either has already received responsive e-mails or will receive them as soon as they are available.

New York State National Organization for Women v. Cuomo, No. 93 Civ. 7146 (RLC) JCF, 1998 WL 395320 (S.D.N.Y. July 14, 1998) is analogous to the situation here. In that case, the plaintiff sought sanctions against New York's governor for failing to preserve computer database evidence that included letters and reports, internal memoranda, monthly summary reports, and electronic mail. Although the Court determined that the Governor's obligation to preserve evidence arose when the plaintiff filed its complaint, sanctions were not appropriate even though the computer database, including its e-mail, had been destroyed. Id. at *2. The Court explained that sanctions were not warranted because there was no evidence that defendants "deleted computer databases or destroyed monthly summary reports in order to impede [the] litigation." Id. Moreover, the plaintiffs had not demonstrated "that they were prejudiced by the loss of the records." Id. at *3. In fact, the plaintiffs had not identified "with any specificity what information they would have been reasonably likely to find." Id. The Court refused to impose the requested sanctions because plaintiffs' only prejudice in that case, as here, was that "the defendants' conduct deprived them of a pond in which they would like to have gone on a fishing expedition." Id.

IV. THE CASES RELIED ON BY CPH ARE READILY DISTINGUISHED AND DO NOT SUPPORT A DEFAULT

In the fourteen cases cited in CPH's motion, not one resembles the procedural posture of this case: a motion for default judgment after discovery has closed and after the plaintiff has prevailed on summary judgment. And, as noted above, in the few cases that have actually found default warranted, discovery had come to a virtual halt because of repeated failures to comply with court orders and no communication on the part of the defaulting party with the court or opposing party about the status of discovery requests. Discovery in this case, by contrast, was extensive and is now complete with the exception of e-mail backup tapes currently in the collection and production process.

CPH purports to cite three "cases whose fact patterns more closely resemble those at issue here." (Feb. 24, 2005 Plf's Mem. of Law in Supp. Of Its Pending Mot. To Strike Morgan Stanley's Answer at 3-4 (citing Precision Tune Auto Care, Inc. v. Radcliffe, 804 So. 2d 1287 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002); HZJ, Inc. v. Wysocki, 511 So. 2d 1088, 1089 (Fla. 3d DCA 1987); Weck v. Weck, 464 So. 2d 619 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985) (per curiam).) The comparison lacks all merit.

In Wysocki, the trial court order lacked any factual discussion and referred in the abstract to the defendant "thwarting the discovery process and this Court's Orders requiring the production of documentation and witnesses in this cause." 511 So. 2d at 1089. This thin opinion suggests at the very least that discovery had come to a halt in light of the defendant's willful failure to comply with specific court orders — a holding that would not justify default here. Similarly, in Weck, the entire opinion consists of nine lines of text, at least two of which are citations. There is no discussion of the underlying conduct at issue other than an off-hand reference to an "intentional delay and abuse of the system." 464 So. 2d at 618 (internal quotations & citation omitted). Once again, there is no basis whatever for inducing some connection between the facts of that case and this one. Furthermore, both Wysocki and Weck pre-date Tubero, in which the Supreme Court held that any default judgment must be based upon an explicit written finding of willful noncompliance. Neither opinion can survive that standard.

The final case, Precision Tune Auto Care, 807 So. 2d 1287, is more recent but equally inapposite. There, after the plaintiff had moved for sanctions on three separate occasions, the court ordered the defendant to produce three witnesses for deposition, set "an exact deadline," and specifically admonished the defendant that if it did not comply its pleadings would be struck. Id. at 1291. The defendant did not produce the witnesses and "simply disregarded the order of trial court because it was inconvenient to the company's officer." Id. at 1291. As the Fourth District emphasized, no attempt was even made to contact opposing counsel to explain why witnesses could not appear; instead, the defendant and its attorney "had a cavalier attitude regarding the necessity to comply with the court's order." Id.

Here, by contrast, Morgan Stanley initiated this whole sequence of discovery hearings because it notified the plaintiff of the discovery of additional tapes that needed to be searched for e-mail, and then produced its corporate representative and its Information Technology employees to give testimony in Florida. Morgan Stanley is financing the expedited processing of all remaining backup tapes and has repeatedly expressed its willingness to work with CPH and the Court to set a reasonable "drop dead date" for ensuring that all remaining responsive e-mails, if any exist, are produced. There is no evidence that Morgan Stanley has refused to comply with the Court's orders because they have been "inconvenient to the company's officers." Id. at 1291. Rather, Morgan Stanley has spent significant amounts of money and employee time to attempt to ensure compliance with the Court's orders.

V. CPH'S OWN FAILURE TO RETAIN EVIDENCE AND ITS OWN DISCOVERY ABUSES PRECLUDE ENTERING A DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

CPH's request for a default judgment should also be denied because CPH has itself engaged in flagrant discovery abuses. See Fayemi v. Hambrecht & Quist, Inc., 174 F.R.D. 319, 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (employer disqualified under unclean hands doctrine from obtain sanctions because he had himself acted "unconscionabl[y]"). As courts have long recognized, a court "considering sanctions can and should consider the equities involved before rendering a decision." Schlaifer Nuance & Co., v. Estate of Warhol, 194 F.3d 323, 341 (2d Cir. 1999).

Here, by its own admission, CPH has never enacted or enforced a document retention policy to prevent the destruction of relevant documents, including e-mails. (Sept. 15, 2003 Fasman Dep. at 31 (Ex. 5).) When CPH undertook its first document collection related to the Sunbeam matter in 1999 or 2000, it did not search its electronic servers for documents, nor did it instruct employees who provided documents to provide electronic documents. (Id. at 84-85, 96, 107-08.) Indeed, even after CPH threatened Sunbeam with a lawsuit, even after its executives became named parties to litigation related to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, even after it sued Arthur Andersen, and even after the onset of litigation in the present case, CPH continued to override its backup tapes. (Id. at 31, 49, 63; MS 1 (Ex. 8).)

Unlike Morgan Stanley, CPH systematically and intentionally destroyed all of its e-mail tapes related to the Sunbeam acquisition in the face of threatened and pending litigation. It is fundamentally unfair to impose outcome-determinative sanctions on Morgan Stanley — when Morgan Stanley has gone to unprecedented lengths to locate, upload, and produce thousands of pages of e-mails in this case — when CPH, through identical conduct, has deprived Morgan Stanley of all e-mail evidence relating to what its executives and employees knew and what they did.

Moreover, CPH — not Morgan Stanley — is the party who has been shown to have deliberately withheld “smoking gun” documents that require re-opening of fact and expert discovery. (Feb. 17, 2005 Order on MS’s Mot. to Compel Prod. of Docs.) Despite Morgan Stanley’s efforts to pursue such discovery for over a year and a half, CPH withheld its internal valuations which seriously undercut CPH’s claimed damages and expose that CPH is seeking a windfall of hundreds of millions of dollars more than what it actually believed that it lost prior to filing this lawsuit. (See Feb. 23, 2005 Morgan Stanley’s Motion for Additional Discovery Regarding MAFCO’s Internal Valuation of Sunbeam Stock.) Even more troubling, the documents revealed for the first time that CPH’s representatives misrepresented the value of the warrants it received as a result of the Sunbeam settlement by tens of millions of dollars, stated under oath that CPH had not performed any valuation at their issuance date when CPH had done such a valuation, and then attempted to conceal the valuation by redacting portions of the documents once the Court ordered them produced. (See Feb. 22, 2005 Morgan Stanley’s Motion for Sanctions and Additional Discovery Concerning Plaintiffs’ Improper Concealment of the Value of the Sunbeam Warrant.) For these reasons, even if CPH had met the requirements under Florida law for the extraordinary sanction of default judgment, which it has not, its own “unclean hands” make such a sanction unfair and inappropriate in this case.

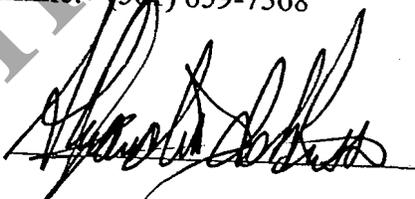

WHEREFORE, CPH has failed to carry its burden of showing willful disobedience of this Court's orders, deliberate and malicious destruction of evidence relating to this case, or any evidence of prejudice beyond monetary sanctions, which the Court has already imposed. Therefore, CPH's motion for default judgment should be denied.

ORDER ON CPH'S MOTION TO DEEM CERTAIN DOCUMENTS ADMISSIBLE AND FOR SANCTIONS DUE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S DISREGARD OF COURT ORDER

THIS CAUSE came before the Court February 22 and 23, 2005 on CPH's Motion to Deem Certain Documents Admissible and for Sanctions Due to Morgan Stanley's Disregard of Court Order, with both parties well represented by counsel.

Throughout this case, CPH has been trying to determine MS & Co.'s role in creating certain disputed documents. On January 8, 2004, Tyrone Chang was deposed and disclosed that in 1997 and 1998 MS & Co. had the ability to retrieve electronic data regarding authors and editors of documents stored on MS & Co.'s network. In response, on January 20, 2004, counsel for CPH wrote counsel for MS & Co. and stated:

Third, Mr. Chang testified that in 1997 and 1998, Morgan Stanley's internal document network utilized a version of PC Docs. That program allows users to identify authors and editors of documents stored on the network. Please produce all information retained by this document management system pertaining to the documents concerning Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam.

Counsel for MS & Co. responded:

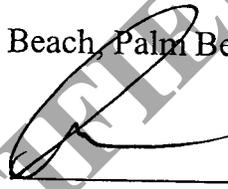

Third, we utilized the PC Docs program, including its ability to identify authors of documents, to conduct our search for responsive documents by authors and keywords--a search which we described in our September 2, 2003 written response to the 1.310 topics. All responsive documents that were located using that program have already been produced. In addition, the time records you addressed in your January 23, 2004 letter to Tom Clare also have already been produced.

Thus, there seems to have been a basic miscommunication between counsel: CPH asked for information available from the PC Docs program; MS & Co. responded that it had used the information to locate requested documents, without providing the information.

On October 22, 2004, CPH served its Sixth Request for Admission, seeking predicate admissions to establish that certain documents were business records. In addition, CPH served its Rule 1.310 Notice of Deposition, seeking deposition of a corporate representative should MS & Co. deny any of the requests. MS & Co. sought a protective order, which was denied November 17, 2004. On November 22, 2004 MS & Co. served its responses to the requests. On December 3, 2004, the Court overruled MS & Co.'s objections and compelled both better answers and the deposition of the corporate representative. On January 12, 2005, MS & Co. produced its in-house counsel, James Doyle, as its 1.310 representative. Mr. Doyle was wholly unprepared to fulfill his duties. Consequently, on February 3, 2005, the Court ordered MS & Co. to provide a sworn statement averring to all information conveyed by or inferable from the word processing stamp or computer footer and, at CPH's election, for it to produce a 1.310 representative to be deposed. Mr. Doyle was again produced, on February 11, 2005. While Mr. Doyle provided some information at his second deposition, taken as a whole he once again failed to faithfully fulfill his duty to testify as to matters known or reasonably available to MS & Co..

Based on the foregoing and the proceedings before the Court, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Motion is Granted, in part. MS & Co. is hereby found to be the author of those documents designated as CPH 9 and 182 and the jury shall be so told, subject to MS & Co.'s right to present evidence that it relied on information supplied by a third party in authoring the documents. All information conveyed by the profile and profile histories provided as to all documents shall be admissible in evidence before the jury. See Rule 1.380 (b) (2) (A), Fla. R. Civ. P. CPH shall be entitled to recover 50% of its reasonable fees and costs incurred in taking Mr.
Doyle's February 11, 2005 deposition, which the Court reserves jurisdiction to award after an evidentiary hearing following trial in this matter. See 1.380 (b) (2), Fla. R. Civ. P.

AMENDED ORDER ON COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.'S MOTION FOR ADVERSE INFERENCE INSTRUCTION DUE TO MORGAN
STANLEY'S DESTRUCTIONS OF E-MAILS AND MORGAN STANLEY'S
NONCOMPLIANCE WITH THE COURT'S APRIL 16, 2004 AGREED ORDER,
AND MOTION FOR ADDITIONAL RELIEF AND ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S MOTION
TO COMPEL FURTHER DISCOVERY REGARDING MORGAN STANLEY'S DESTRUCTION AND NON-PRODUCTION OF E-MAILS

THIS CAUSE came before the Court on February 14, 2005 on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s ("CPH's") Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, as modified by CPH's February 14, 2005 ore tenus motion for additional relief, and on February 28, 2005 on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Further Discovery Regarding Morgan Stanley's Destruction and Non-Production of E-Mails, with both counsel present. Based on evidence introduced, the Court finds:

1. CPH has sued Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), for fraud in connection with CPH's sale of its stock in Coleman, Inc., to Sunbeam Corporation in return for Sunbeam stock. Whether MS & Co. had knowledge of the fraudulent scheme undertaken by Sunbeam in 1997 and early 1998 and, if so, the extent of that knowledge, is central to the case. CPH has sought access to MS & Co.'s internal files, including e-mails, since the case was filed.

2. Though MS & Co. instructed its investment bankers to preserve paper documents in their possession in connection with the Sunbeam transaction in February, 1999, it continued its practice of overwriting e-mails after 12 months, despite an SEC regulation requiring all e-mails be retained in readily accessible form for two years. See 17 C.F.R. §240.17a-4 (1997).

3. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered its Agreed Order requiring MS & Co. to (1) search the oldest full backup tape for each of 36 MS & Co. employees involved in the Sunbeam transaction; (2) review e-mails dated from February 15, 1998 through April 15, 1998 and e-mails containing any of 29 specified search terms such as "Sunbeam" and "Coleman", regardless of their date; (3) produce by May 14, 2004 all nonprivileged e-mails responsive to CPH's document requests; (4) give CPH a privilege log; and (5) certify its full compliance with the Agreed Order.

4. On May 14, 2004, MS & Co. produced approximately 1,300 pages of e-mails but failed to provide the required certification. Finally, on June 23, 2004, after inquiries by CPH, MS & Co. provided CPH with a certificate of full compliance with the April 16 Agreed Order signed by Arthur Riel, the MS & Co. manager assigned this task.

5. As organized by MS & Co., the effort to recover e-mails from any remaining backup tapes had several stages. First, the relevant backup tapes (in various formats, such as "DLT" tapes and eight-millimeter tapes) had to be located by searching the potential storage locations. Second, the tapes were sent to an outside vendor, National Data Conversion, Inc. ("NDC"), to be processed, and the data returned to MS & Co. in the form of "SDLT" tapes. Third, MS & Co. had to find a way to upload the contents of these SDLT tapes into its new e-mail archive. Fourth, MS & Co. would run "scripts" to transform this data into a searchable form, so that it could later be searched for responsive e-mails. MS & Co. personnel used the term "staging area" to describe the stage of the process when SDLT tapes remained in limbo, waiting to be uploaded to the archive.

6. At some point prior to May 6, 2004, Arthur Riel and his team became aware that more than 1,000 backup tapes had been found at a MS & Co. facility in Brooklyn, New York. These 1,423 DLT tapes had not been processed by NDCI and thus had not been included in the archive or searched when MS & Co. made its supposedly complete production on May 14, 2004, and when Mr. Riel certified full compliance with the Agreed Order on June 23, 2004. Aware of the tapes' discovery, Mr. Riel knew when he executed the certification that it was false. He and others on MS & Co.'s e-mail archive team knew by July 2, 2004 that these "Brooklyn tapes" contained e-mail dating back at least to the late 1990's. MS & Co. neither withdrew its certification nor informed CPH about the potential for additional production of e-mails, however. During the summer of 2004, the Brooklyn tapes were processed and sent to the staging area, but they were not uploaded to the e-mail archive so as to be available to be searched until January 2004, at least eight months after they were found.

7. MS & Co. also failed to timely produce e-mails from 738 8-millimeter backup tapes found at a MS & Co. facility in Manhattan, in 2002. These 738 8-mm tapes, like the 1,423 Brooklyn tapes, had not been processed by NDCI and thus had not been included in the archive and searched when MS & Co. made its supposedly complete production on May 14, 2004, and when Mr. Riel certified full compliance with the Agreed Order on June 23, 2004. Mr. Riel and others were told by their vendor, NDCI, by July 2, 2004 that the 8-mm tapes contained e-mail dating back at least to 1998. MS & Co. neither withdrew its certification nor informed CPH about the potential for additional production of e-mails, though. During the summer of 2004, the 8-mm tapes were processed and sent to the staging area. Like the Brooklyn tapes, though, they also were not uploaded to MS & Co.'s e-mail archive.

8. In August 2004, Mr. Riel was relieved of his employment responsibilities. He and his team were replaced by a new team headed by Allison Gorman Nachtigal.

9. Ms. Gorman testified that she was instructed to describe the circumstances of Mr. Riel's replacement as his having been "placed on administrative leave." That same term appears by interlineation over the original typed description in MS & Co.'s memorandum addressing these issues. The typed language stated: "[Mr. Riel was] dismissed for integrity issues." MS & Co. presented no evidence to explain why Mr. Riel would have been placed on administrative leave rather than terminated. CPH argued that it may have been to deprive CPH of the ability to contact him directly.

10. Upon taking over Mr. Riel's responsibilities, Ms. Gorman did not initially make significant efforts to address the backlog of data in the staging area; indeed, she was not informed of the existence of this litigation until five months later, in January 2005. In October 2004, Ms. Gorman met with a group of MS & Co. attorneys. Following that meeting, Ms. Gorman gave the project somewhat greater priority, although even then it clearly did not move as expeditiously as possible. For example, MS & Co. gave no thought to using an outside contractor to expedite the process of completing the discovery, though it had certified completion months earlier; it lacked the technological capacity to upload and search the data at that time, and would not attain that capacity for months; and it knew trial was scheduled to begin in February, 2005. Even at this point, no one from MS & Co. or its outside counsel, Kirkland & Ellis LLP, gave CPH or this Court any hint that the June certification was false.

11. On November 17, 2004, more than six months after the May 14, 2004 deadline for producing e-mails in response to the Agreed Order, MS & Co. sent CPH a letter revealing that its June 23 certificate of compliance was incorrect. The letter stated:

Morgan Stanley has discovered additional e-mail backup tapes since our e-mail production in May 2004. The data on some of [the] newly discovered tapes has been restored and, to ensure continued compliance with the agreed order, we have re-run the searches described in the order. Some responsive e-mails have been located as a result of that process. We will produce the responsive documents to you as soon as the production is finalized.

The letter also foreshadowed further delays: "(s)ome of the backup tapes are still being restored. To ensure continued compliance with the agreed order, we intend to re-run the searches again when the restoration process is complete and will produce any responsive documents that result."

12. The next day, November 18, 2004, MS & Co. produced an additional 8,000 pages of e-mails and attachments. MS & Co.'s November 2004 letter stated that the 8,000 pages came from "newly discovered" tapes; but the testimony now makes clear that this statement was false because Ms. Gorman's team did not figure out how to upload and make searchable the materials from the staging area until January, 2005.

13. MS & Co. has failed to offer any explanation to reconcile the obvious conflict between its assertions at the time of production that the 8,000 pages came from "newly discovered" tapes (i.e., the "Brooklyn tapes") and the testimony of its own witness, Ms. Gorman, that data from those newly discovered tapes were not capable of being searched until two months later, in January.

14. After a follow-up inquiry by CPH, on December 17, 2004, MS & Co. produced a privilege log and told CPH that "[n]o additional responsive e-mails have been located since our November production." MS & Co. refused to answer CPH's questions about whether MS & Co.

had restored all the backup tapes described in its November 17 letter and why the tapes had not been located earlier, however.

15. On December 30, 2004, CPH sought confirmation that MS & Co. had reviewed all e-mail backup tapes and produced all responsive e-mails and, if not, asked when the review would be completed. On January 11, 2005, MS & Co. informed CPH that the "restoration of e-mail back tapes is ongoing. Restoration of the next set of backup tapes is estimated to be completed at the end of January. We intend to re-run the searches described in the agreed order at that time."

16. On January 19, 2004, CPH wrote asking MS & Co. to explain the circumstances under which MS & Co. located the "newly discovered" backup tapes and to disclose when the tapes were located. CPH also asked MS & Co. to explain why the backup tapes could not be restored sooner.

17. On January 21, 2005, MS & Co. sent CPH a letter that failed to answer CPH's questions. Instead, MS & Co. described its efforts to restore the backup tapes as "ongoing"; informed CPH that "there is no way for MS & Co. to know or accurately predict the type or time period of data that might be recovered"; and stated that MS & Co. "cannot accurately estimate when all of the tapes will be restored or whether any recoverable data will be found on the remaining tapes."

18. On January 26, 2005, CPH filed the Motion at issue here, asking the Court to instruct the jury that MS & Co.'s destruction of e-mails and other electronic documents and MS. & Co.'s noncompliance with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order can give rise to an adverse inference that the contents of the missing e-mails would be harmful to MS & Co.'s defense in this case.

19. Meanwhile, MS & Co. found another 169 DLT tapes in January, 2005, that allegedly had been misplaced by its New Jersey storage vendor, Recall. Again, MS & Co., chose to provide no specifics to CPH or to the Court.

20. At a February 2, 2005 hearing on CPH's Motion, Thomas A. Clare of Kirkland & Ellis, LLP, representing MS & Co., stated that "late October of 2004...[is] the date I represent to Court is the first time that anyone knew that there was recoverable e-mail data" on the Brooklyn tapes. Hr'g Tr. (2/2/05) at 133-34. The actual date, however, was at least three months earlier, by July 2, 2004. Furthermore, MS & Co. refused to provide the Court with definitive answers about when its e-mail production would be complete, merely stating that it would proceed with "all deliberate speed." Id. at 139. Also at the February 2 hearing, Mr. Clare neglected to inform the Court about the 8-mm tapes that had been located in 2002, and told the Court that the 1,423 DLT tapes had been found in Brooklyn "sometime during the summer" of 2004. The truth of this assertion is belied by the evidence showing that the tapes were found before May 6, 2004.

21. On February 3, 2005, the Court ordered further discovery and set an evidentiary hearing for February 14, 2005. The discovery took place on February 9 and 10, when CPH deposed the three e-mail witnesses identified by MS. & Co.

22. On Saturday afternoon, February 12, 2005, MS & Co. informed the Court that it had, in the previous 24 hours, discovered additional tapes. Also, MS & Co. stated that its recent production omitted certain "attachments" to e-mails. MS & Co. did not attempt to clarify or substantiate either of these statements to CPH or to the Court until the Monday, February 14, 2005 hearing.

23. At the February 14 hearing, none of the witnesses MS & Co. presented was involved in or familiar with the actual electronic searches conducted using the parameters specified in this

Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, and none explained where the 8,000 pages produced in November, 2004 had come from. MS & Co.'s witnesses did, however, describe three new developments. First, Robert Saunders, a Morgan Stanley executive director in the Information Technology Division, testified that he returned to New York after his February 10 deposition and, concerned about his unqualified assertion that the was "confident" that a complete search for backup tapes had been conducted, decided finally to undertake a personal search of MS & Co.'s "communication rooms," going to the areas he thought most obvious first. By doing so, he and two contractors discovered more than 200 additional backup tapes openly stored in locations known to be used for tape storage. Those discoveries were made on Friday and Saturday, February 11 and 12, 2005. As of the February 14 hearing, NDCI had not yet determined which, if any, of these newly discovered backup tapes contained e-mails. Second, Ms. Gorman reported that on Friday, February 11, 2005 she and her team had discovered that a flaw in the software they had written had prevented MS & Co. from locating all responsive e-mail attachments. Third, Ms. Gorman reported that MS & Co. discovered on Sunday evening, February 13, 2005, that the date-range searches for e-mail users who had a Lotus Notes platform were flawed, so there were at least 7,000 additional e-mail messages that appeared to fall within the scope of the Agreed Order had yet to be fully reviewed by MS. & Co.'s outside counsel for responsiveness and privilege. As counsel for MS & Co. admitted, this problem "dwarf[s]" their previous problems. Hr'g Tr. (2/14/05) at 13. Ms. Gorman indicated she was "90 percent sure" that the problem infected MS & Co.'s original searches in May, which means that even they failed to timely produce relevant materials that had been uploaded into the archive by that point. Id. at 82-83. The bulk of the employees using the Lotus Notes platform in the relevant time period came from the Investment Banking Division, the division responsible for the transaction under review here.

24. On February 19, 2005 MS & Co. informed counsel for CPH that "additional boxes of back up tapes" have been located "in a security room" and that, "(a)s of this morning, Morgan Stanley has identified four (unlabeled) DLT tapes among the collection. Those four tapes will be sent to NDCI for further analysis." The disclosure did not state when the discovery was made. MS & Co.'s counsel represented to the Court that it was his understanding that about 73 bankers' boxes of tapes were discovered. No explanation for the late discovery was offered.

25. Throughout this entire process, MS & Co. and its counsels' lack of candor has frustrated the Court and opposing counsel's ability to be fully and timely informed.

26. MS & Co.'s failure during the summer and fall of 2004 to timely process a substantial amount of data that was languishing in the "staging area," rather than being put into searchable form and then searched, was willful and a gross abuse of its discovery obligations.

27. MS & Co.'s failure to time notify CPH of the existence of the DLT and 8-mm tapes, which it had located as early as 2002 and certainly prior to the June 23, 2004 certification, and its failure to timely process those raw backup tapes was willful and a gross abuse of its discovery obligations.

28. MS & Co.'s failure to produce all e-mail attachments was negligent, and it was discovered and revealed only as a result of CPH's hiring a third-party vendor, pursuant to the Court's February 4, 2005 Order, to double-check MS & Co.'s compliance with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order.

29. MS & Co.'s failure to produce all of the Lotus Notes e-mails was negligent, and it was discovered and revealed only as result of CPH's hiring a third-party vendor, pursuant to the 034916

Court's February 4, 2005 Order, to double-check MS & Co.'s compliance with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order.

30. MS & Co.'s failure to locate other potentially responsive backup tapes before Saturday, February 12, 2005 was grossly negligent.

31. Given the history of the discovery, there is no way to know if all potentially responsive backup tapes have been located.

32. In sum, despite MS & Co.'s affirmative duty arising out of the litigation to produce its e-mails, and contrary to federal law requiring it to preserve the e-mails, MS & Co. failed to preserve many e-mails and failed to produce all e-mails required by the Agreed Order. The failings include overwriting e-mails after 12 months; failing to conduct proper searches for tapes that may contain e-mails; providing a certificate of compliance known to be false when made and only recently withdrawn; failing to timely notify CPH when additional tapes were located; failing to use reasonable efforts to search the newly discovered tapes; failing to timely process and search data held in the staging area or notify CPH of the deficiency; failing to write software scripts consistent with the Agreed Order; and discovering the deficiencies only after CPH was given the opportunity to check MS & Co.'s work and the MS & Co.'s attorneys were required to certify the completeness of the prior searches. Many of these failings were done knowingly, deliberately, and in bad faith.

It is clear that e-mails existed which were requested by CPH that have not been produced because of the deficiencies discussed above. Electronic data are the modern-day equivalent of the paper trail. Indeed, because of the informalities of e-mail, correspondents may be less guarded than with paper correspondence. In this case, the paper trail is critical to CPH's ability to make out its prima facie case. Thus, MS & Co.'s acts have severely hindered CPH's ability to proceed. The only way to test the potentially self-serving testimony of MS & Co. personnel is with the written record of the events.

The failures outlined in this Order are of two types. First, by overwriting e-mails contrary to its legal obligation to maintain them in readily accessible form for two years and with knowledge that legal action was threatened, MS & Co. has spoiled evidence, justifying sanctions. See Martino v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 835 So. 2d 1251 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003). “The appropriateness of sanctions for failing to preserve evidence depends on: (1) willfulness or bad faith of the responsible party, (2) the extent of prejudice suffered by the other party, and (3) what is required to cure the prejudice.” Nationwide Lift Trucks, Inc. v. Smith, 832 So. 2d 824, 826 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002). Second, MS & Co.’s willfull disobedience of the Agreed Order justifies sanctions. See Rule 1.380 (b) (2), Fla. R. Civ. P. The conclusion is inescapable that MS & Co. sought to thwart discovery in this specific case.

Sanctions in this context are not meant to be punitive. They are intended, though, to level the playing field.

A reasonable juror could conclude that evidence of MS & Co.’s misconduct demonstrates its consciousness of guilty. It is relevant to the issues before the jury. Further, CPH should not be penalized by being forced to divert the jurors’ attention away from the merits of its claim to focus on highly technical facts going to MS & Co.’s failures here, facts that are not reasonably disputed. Evidence of that failure, though, alone does not make CPH whole. Indeed, it can be said it is not a “sanction” at all, but merely a statement of unrefuted facts that the jury may find relevant. Shifting the burden of proof, though, forces MS & Co. to accept the practical consequence of its failures—that some information will never be known. Obviously, this sanction is of consequence only in the marginal case. If there is overwhelming proof of MS & Co.'s knowledge of the fraud and collusion with Sunbeam, CPH would have prevailed on those elements in any event. And, to the contrary, if there is overwhelming evidence MS & Co. did not know of the fraud or conspire with or aid Sunbeam in its commission, it would have prevailed in any event. If the case is close on those issues, though, MS & Co., not CPH, should bear the burden of persuasion. Further, shifting the burden on the fraud issue does not relieve CPH of its obligation to establish the other elements of its claims, most notably reliance, proof of which is independent of the MS & Co. e-mails. Thus, the sanctions chosen are the most conservative available to the Court to address the spoliation of evidence and willfull violation of the Agreed Order.^{1 2}

031918

Finally, the Court notes that CPH has requested the e-mails since May of 2003. MS & Co. was supposed to comply with the April 16, 2004 Order by May 14, 2004. Fact discovery in this case closed November 24, 2004. MS & Co.'s actions have resulted in the diversion of enormous amounts of resources, by both the parties and the Court, into a fact discovery dispute that should have never arisen and which would have long ago been put to bed had MS & Co. timely recognized its obligations to CPH and this Court. Opening argument in this complex case is set for March 21, ¹MS & Co.'s bad acts and pocket book may not be used to gain the continuance it has sought from the beginning. Further, the Court has no confidence that, even if a continuance were granted, MS & Co. would fully comply with discovery in this case.

²The undersigned notes that the sanctions imposed are not enumerated in Rule 1.380 (b) (2), and is aware of the concern expressed in the 2000 Handbook on Discovery Practice, Joint Committee of the Trial Lawyers Section of the Florida Bar and Conferences of Circuit and County Court Judges ("(f)or the trial court to be on solid footing, it is wise to stay within the enumerated orders" [Handbook at p. 4]). However, MS & Co.'s violations involve both the violation of a discovery order and the intentional spoliation of evidence. The sanction imposed is less severe than that provided in Rule 1.380 (b) (2) (B), under which the Court could preclude MS & Co. from presenting evidence of its lack of knowledge of or collusion with the Sunbeam fraud, which the Court finds is the least severe enumerated sanction appropriate to place the parties on a level playing field.

2005. Preliminary jury selection has begun. MS & Co. has controlled the timetable of this portion of the litigation long enough. Consequently, CPH should have the ability to continue to require MS & Co. to attempt to comply with the Agreed Order and the February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search, or to elect to terminate the e-mail discovery and concentrate on trial preparation.

Based on the foregoing, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that:

1. Plaintiff's Motion for Adverse Interference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Non-Compliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and Motion for Additional Relief is GRANTED.
2. MS & Co. shall continue to use its best efforts to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and shall continue to comply with the February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search until March 21, 2005 or written notice from CPH, whichever ever first occurs. Either party shall notify the other in writing of its intention to offer into evidence e-mails actually produced to CPH prior to termination of e-mail discovery in conformity with this Order, within 72 hours of the e-mail's production to CPH. The Court shall hear and determine any objections to use of the e-mails.
3. The Court shall read to the jury the statement of facts attached as Exhibit A during whatever evidentiary phase of CPH's case that it requests. These findings of fact shall be conclusive. See Rule 1.380 (b) (2) (A). No instruction shall be given to the jury regarding inferences to be drawn from these facts. However, counsel may make such argument to the jury in favor of whatever inferences that evidence may support. No other evidence concerning the production of e-mails, or lack thereof, shall be presented absent further Court order.

4. CPH will be allowed to argue that MS & Co.'s concealment of its role in the Sunbeam transaction is evidence of its malice or evil intent, going to the issue of punitive damages. See, e.g., General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So.2d 10120.

5. MS & Co. shall bear the burden of proving to the jury, by the greater weight of the evidence, that it lacked knowledge of the Sunbeam fraud and did not aid and abet or conspire with Sunbeam to defraud CPH. The traditional order of proof shall remain unaffected, however.

6. MS & Co. shall compensate CPH for costs and fees associated with the Motion. The amount shall be determined at an evidentiary hearing to be held after the completion of the trial.

7. Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Further Discovery Regarding Morgan Stanley's Destruction and Non-Production of E-Mails is Denied.

EXHIBIT A

A federal regulation in effect in 1997 and all times since required Morgan Stanley to preserve e-mails for three years and to preserve them in a readily accessible place for two years. Beginning in no later than 1997, Morgan Stanley had a practice of overwriting e-mails after 12 months. E-mails could no longer be retrieved once they were overwritten. This practice was discontinued in January, 2001. CPH has sought access to Morgan Stanley's e-mails relating to this transaction since the case was filed in May, 2003.

Prior to 2003, Morgan Stanley recorded e-mails and other electronic data on back up tapes. On April 16, 2004, the Court ordered Morgan Stanley to (1) search the oldest full backup tape for each of 36 Morgan Stanley employees involved in the Sunbeam transaction; (2) review e-mails dated from February 15, 1998 through April 15, 1998 and e-mails containing any of 29 specified search terms such as "Sunbeam" and "Coleman", regardless of their date; (3) produce by May 14, 2004 all e-mails relating to this case found by the search I have just described; and (4) certify its full compliance with the Court's order.

On May 14, 2004, Morgan Stanley produced approximately 1,300 pages of e-mails. It did not produce the required certification. On June 23, 2004, after inquiries by CPH, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with a certificate of full compliance with the April 16 Order signed by Arthur Riel, the Morgan Stanley manager assigned this task.

As organized by Morgan Stanley, the effort to recover e-mails from the backup tapes had several stages. First, the relevant backup tapes had to be located by searching the potential storage locations. Second, the tapes were sent to an outside vendor, National Data Conversion, Inc., which I will call "NDCI", to be processed, and the data returned to Morgan Stanley. Third, Morgan Stanley had to upload the processed data into its e-mail archive. Fourth, Morgan Stanley had to run scripts, or pieces of computer code, to transform this data into a searchable form. Finally, Morgan Stanley had to search the data for e-mails related to this case. Morgan Stanley personnel used the term "staging area" to describe the stage of the process when the processed data returned by NDCI remained in limbo, waiting to be uploaded to Morgan Stanley's archive.

034923

At some point prior to May 6, 2004, Arthur Riel and his team became aware that 1,423 backup tapes had been found at a Morgan Stanley facility in Brooklyn, New York. These 1,423 tapes had not been processed by NDCI and thus had not been included in the archive or searched when Morgan Stanley made its production to CPH on May 14, 2004. Aware of the tapes' discovery, Mr. Riel knew when he executed the certification of full compliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Order that it was false. He and others on Morgan Stanley's e-mail archive team knew by July 2, 2004 that these "Brooklyn tapes" contained e-mail dating back at least to the late 1990's. During the summer of 2004, the Brooklyn tapes were processed and the data sent to the staging area. The scripts were not written and tested to permit the search for e-mails relating to this case to begin until the middle of January, 2004. Such a search, even if perfectly done, can take weeks.

Morgan Stanley also failed to timely produce e-mails from 738 backup tapes found at a Morgan Stanley facility in Manhattan in 2002. These 738 tapes, like the 1,423 Brooklyn tapes, had not been processed by NDCI and thus had not been included in the archive and searched by either on May 14, 2004 or June 23, 2004. Mr. Riel and others were told by NDCI by July 2, 2004 that these tapes contained e-mail dating back at least to 1998. During the summer of 2004, the these tapes were processed and sent to the staging area. Like the Brooklyn tapes, though, they also were not searched.

In August 2004, Mr. Riel was relieved of his employment responsibilities. He and his team were replaced by a new team headed by Allison Gorman Nachtigal. At that time, the staging area contained about 600 gigabytes of e-mail data that had not yet been uploaded into the Morgan Stanley archive and had not been searched for e-mails relating to this case.

Upon taking over Mr. Riel's responsibilities, Ms. Gorman did not initially make significant efforts to address the backlog of data in the staging area. Indeed, she was not informed of the existence of this litigation until five months later, in January 2005. In October 2004, Ms. Gorman gave the project somewhat greater priority, although even then it did not move as expeditiously as possible. Morgan Stanley did not consider using an outside contractor to expedite the process.

Morgan Stanley found another 169 DLT tapes in January, 2005, that had been misplaced

034924

by its New Jersey storage vendor. Morgan Stanley discovered more than 200 additional backup tapes openly stored in locations known to be used for tape storage on February 11 and 12, 2005. On February 11, 2005 Morgan Stanley discovered that a flaw in the software it had written had prevented Morgan Stanley from locating all e-mail attachments about the Sunbeam transaction. Morgan Stanley discovered on February 13, 2005, that the date-range searches for e-mail users who had a Lotus Notes platform were flawed, so that additional e-mail messages that appeared to fall within the scope of the April 16, 2004 Order had not been given to CPH. Further, it appears that the problem infected Morgan Stanley's original searches in May of 2004. The bulk of the employees using the Lotus Notes platform in the relevant time period came from the Investment Banking Division, the division responsible for the transaction under review here. On February 16, 2005, Morgan Stanley withdrew its certificate of compliance with the April 16, 2004 Order. On February 19, 2005 Morgan Stanley notified CPH that it had found boxes of additional tapes that have not been uploaded into its archive or searched for responsive e-mails. Morgan Stanley did not tell CPH it had found any tapes that it had not searched until November 17, 2004. Even then, it did not tell CPH how many tapes were found, when they were found, or when they would be searched. MS & Co. did not provide all of this information to CPH until February of 2005. The searches had not yet been completed when this trial was begun, when they were terminated without completion.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

CASE NO. 2003CA 005045 AI

Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

Filed Under Seal — Subject To Confidentiality Order

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RENEWED MOTION FOR ENTRY OF DEFAULT JUDGMENT AND OTHER SANCTIONS

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully requests that this Court strike Morgan Stanley's answer, enter a default judgment against Morgan Stanley on the issue of liability, and impose other sanctions and relief. The appropriateness of such an Order has become clear following the entry of this Court's March 1, 2005 sanctions Order. Since that time, additional facts have come to light showing that Morgan Stanley has deliberately engaged in — and is continuing to engage in, notwithstanding prior Court Orders and sanctions — a pattern of abusive conduct aimed at obstructing justice. The record described below establishes that Morgan Stanley persists in failing to comply with this Court's Orders and persists in making willful misrepresentations and omissions to the Court. For example, as this Court found the morning of March 8, Morgan Stanley "intentionally omitted" from a privilege log the fact that a key document was disclosed to the SEC "precisely so Coleman (Parent) Holdings would not know of even the existence of the SEC investigation" into former Morgan Stanley executive Arthur Riel's charge that Morgan Stanley destroyed approximately 10,000 e-mail backup tapes.

See Ex. 1, 3/8/05 Tr. at 2409. Moreover, in addition to finding this willful omission, the Court further found that Morgan Stanley had violated a previous Order to disclose documents concerning problems with e-mail retrieval and processing within 12 hours of their receipt by counsel by failing to produce the SEC documents until March 7. See id. at 2409-10. Finally, it became perfectly apparent at the March 8 hearing that the non-production of the SEC materials also violated the Court's February 3, 2005 Order setting the February 14 hearing on e-mail issues and requiring production by February 8 of documents relating in any way to the discovery, recovery, or production of additional e-mail backup tapes.

In its March 1 Order, while opting for lesser sanctions, this Court recognized serious misconduct relating to e-mail production and observed that the Court possessed the discretion to default Morgan Stanley and bar it from defending against CPH's claims. See Ex. 2 at 12 n.2. Florida law clearly confirms that discretion. Rule 1.380(b) authorizes trial courts to enter orders "striking out pleadings or parts of them, . . . or dismissing the action or proceeding or any part of it, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party." The Florida Supreme Court has held repeatedly that a "deliberate and contumacious disregard of the [trial] court's authority will justify application of the severest sanctions, . . . as will bad faith, willful disregard or gross indifference to an order of the court, or conduct which evinces deliberate callousness." Mercer v. Raine, 443 So. 2d 944, 946 (Fla. 1983) (citing Herold v. Computer Components International, Inc., 252 So. 2d 576 (Fla. 4th DCA 1971); Swindle v. Reid, 242 So. 2d 751 (Fla. 4th DCA 1970)); see McCord Commonwealth Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Tubero, 569 So. 2d 1271, 1273 (Fla. 1990).

The pattern of abuse by Morgan Stanley, including disclosures subsequent to the March 1 Sanctions Order, now warrants entry of the sanction that this Court recognized but reserved in the March 1 Order. Since that time, additional, serious misconduct has come to light concerning: (1) Morgan Stanley's violations of e-mail-related Orders and attempts to cover up SEC proceedings relating to Morgan Stanley's deliberate and systematic destruction of countless e-mails; (2) Morgan Stanley's willful refusal to comply with prior orders of this Court relating to the Italian criminal proceedings involving William Strong; and (3) other intentional and contumacious misconduct on the part of Morgan Stanley. These additional instances of serious wrongdoing, when viewed in light of the many instances of misconduct already found by this Court, confirm beyond any question that the more serious sanction of a default judgment against Morgan Stanley is necessary to preserve the integrity of the system of justice and to prevent irreparable prejudice to CPH.

ARGUMENT

I. In Light of New Information Concerning Misconduct with Regard to E-Mail Retention and Production, the Court's Existing Sanctions Order Is Insufficient.

The SEC documents CPH received on March 7 and 8 reveal a number of key facts that were previously concealed from CPH and the Court. These new facts require further action from this Court.

Suppression of the Existence of the SEC Investigation. Since last fall, Morgan Stanley has been facing at least three serious legal problems involving its failure to preserve e-mails — (1) this lawsuit; (2) an SEC investigation into the alleged massive destruction of e-mails in violation of federal law and the 2002 SEC cease-and-desist order (SEC File Number MHO-10086) (the “Riel investigation”); and (3) the alleged failure of Morgan Stanley to produce e-mails sought in connection with the SEC's IPO investigation (SEC File Number HO-09140) (the “TPO investigation”). Morgan Stanley's strategy has been to keep the SEC investigations hermetically sealed off from this lawsuit — not telling the SEC the truth about events in this case and not revealing anything to this Court about the SEC investigations. Obviously, the handling of e-mail has become a major issue here. Simultaneously, the SEC staff was assessing whether Morgan Stanley had produced all of its e-mails in connection with the IPO investigation, and the staff was probing in detail the extent to which Morgan Stanley had failed to maintain e-mails as part of the Riel investigation.

Morgan Stanley was desperate to keep secret that both SEC investigations had exposed Morgan Stanley's failure to preserve e-mails. Thus, in January 2005, in connection with Morgan Stanley's negotiations with the SEC to resolve the IPO matter, Morgan Stanley decided that it would seek assurance from the SEC's Director of Enforcement that the e-mail destruction issues would not be made public or, alternatively, Morgan Stanley would insist that the IPO settlement contain an express condition that the SEC would make no public statement concerning the e-mail issues. In a January 14, 2005 e-mail from Paul Gerlach (Morgan Stanley's counsel from Sidley) to Andrew Clubok (Morgan Stanley's counsel from Kirkland) and Donald Kempf (Morgan Stanley's General Counsel), Gerlach reported on a conversation he had earlier that day with the SEC. See Ex. 39. Gerlach stated:

Staff willing to go forward with Reg. M settlement [Regulation M deals with trading in connection with securities offerings] with no reference to document issue. (Note — Chion [a member of the SEC staff] noted that she can not control Commission regarding public statement on doc. issue. Don [presumably Don Kempf, Morgan Stanley's General Counsel] should get comfort from Cutler [presumably Stephen Cutler, the SEC's Director of Enforcement] on this or expressly condition settlement of Reg M on no public statement being made re doc. issue). Reg M case to be considered by Commission on Tuesday 1/18.

Gerlach also reported that the SEC staff extended the date for "Wells response on document issue," the staff requested that "Morgan Stanley continue sharing info we are gathering re tape overwriting," and the staff requested that "MS provide source docs re IT [information technology] work being done on tape history.” Id. Pointedly, the staff also had requested “copies of all instructions given by legal or others to retain and preserve docs covered by SEC requests or subpoenas.” Id. Importantly here, the staff “[a]sked whether Morgan Stanley had done analysis whether it had satisfied its obligations in private litigation given potential document issues now under review.” Id. (emphasis added).

Despite Morgan Stanley’s efforts to keep the SEC investigations of Morgan Stanley’s “document issue” secret, we now know that the SEC staff recommended a permanent injunction and imposition of a $10 million fine. But Morgan Stanley went to great lengths not to have the SEC investigation revealed to the Court and CPH. The obvious reason was that the allegations in the SEC investigations would have had a huge impact on this litigation. Morgan Stanley wanted to present Riel as a prime malefactor who failed to produce responsive documents on his own — not as an important source in an ongoing SEC investigation. Moreover, a claim that 10,000 backup tapes had been destroyed during the time when it was represented that they would be preserved would have triggered a whole new round of inquiry in this case into the completeness of the May 14, 2004 production of e-mail. That, in turn, would have led to revelation of other facts known to Riel — including the fact that the May 14 production did not come close to covering responsive e-mails from all of the backup tapes that Morgan Stanley knew to exist at that time.

Moreover, if this investigation had come to light sooner, Morgan Stanley would have had to admit to this Court that some substantial amount of destruction of e-mail backup tapes continued after 2001, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s prior representations. The February 10 Wells submission to the SEC disputes the figure of 10,000 tapes supplied by Riel, but it acknowledges that tapes did continue to be overwritten even after the 2001 Morgan Stanley policy barring such destruction supposedly was in place. In fact, Morgan Stanley reported to the SEC on February 10, 2005 that it had tested a 199-tape sample of the 12,000 tapes that had been used to back-up e-mail in the year 2000. See Ex. 14 at 11. Morgan Stanley concluded that 22 of the 199 had been overwritten in violation of the 2001 policy and one had been overwritten in violation of the 2002 SEC cease-and-desist order. Id. at 12. Extrapolating to the full set of 12,000 tapes used to back up pre-2001 e-mail, that would mean that more than 1,300 tapes had been overwritten after Morgan Stanley says it stopped doing so in 2001!

The effort to suppress knowledge of the SEC investigations included testimony from Morgan Stanley's witnesses before this Court who obviously had been coached to avoid mentioning the SEC investigations. For example, Allison Gorman recalled that her efforts to address the problem of archiving a backlog of old e-mail began after a meeting with counsel from Kirkland sometime in October in which the entire problem was discussed in detail. See Ex. 3, 2/14/04 Tr. at 50-51, 63-64; Ex. 4, Gorman Dep. at 69. Since the law firms of Sidley Austin and Kirkland & Ellis were counsel in the SEC's Riel investigation, and the timing fits, there can be little doubt how this meeting came about: The SEC had contacted Morgan Stanley concerning Riel's allegations. But various witnesses, from Ms. Gorman to Mr. Saunders to Mr. Clare, all of whom were heavily involved, testified in this case about the circumstances under which Morgan Stanley focused attention on the e-mail production issue in the fall of 2004 — but not one of those witnesses disclosed the fact that there were two major SEC investigations probing Morgan Stanley's destruction of its e-mails. This occurred even though Ms. Gorman, Mr. Saunders, and James Cusick from the Morgan Stanley Law Division had recently been interviewed by the SEC in connection with the Riel investigation.

But the suppression efforts went beyond coaching of witnesses. As explained in Court on March 8, it is clear that under a document request served on October 12, 2004, Morgan Stanley had a duty to produce all documents relating to the SEC's Riel investigation. But Morgan Stanley represented on November 12, 2004 that it had no responsive documents.¹

In addition, production of the SEC documents was required by the terms of several of this Court's recent Orders preceding the March 4 directive to produce SEC-related material. In particular, the February 3 Order setting the February 14 hearing on e-mail issues provided that Morgan Stanley was to produce, by noon on February 8, "all documents . . . related to the additional e-mail backup tapes, including matters relating to the time in which they were discovered; by whom discovered, who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were to be restored and made searchable." Ex. 8. There can be no doubt that Morgan Stanley had such documents in its possession on February 8 and its counsel was busily preparing still more, including the February 10 Wells submission to the SEC.

¹ On October 12, 2004, CPH had served on Morgan Stanley a document request designed to bring prior document productions current. It sought all documents responsive to CPH's prior requests that had not been previously produced. See Ex. 5, Req. No. 1. The prior requests included CPH's Third Request for Production (dated December 17, 2003), which asked for all communications to or from the SEC relating to "Morgan Stanley's policies and/or procedures with regard to the retention, storage, deletion, and/or backup of electronic mail (e-mails)." See Ex. 6, Req. No. 1. When Morgan Stanley did not produce a significant volume of documents in response to this earlier request in January 2004, there followed a series of letters from Morgan Stanley's counsel culminating in an assurance on January 26, 2004 that Morgan Stanley had produced "all nonprivileged documents that were submitted to the SEC or received from the SEC, and all documents reflecting communications with the SEC in connection with any investigation, inquiry, or examination concerning or relating to Morgan Stanley's policies and/or procedures with regard to the retention, storage, deletion, and/or backup of electronic mail." Ex. 36. Eleven months later, Morgan Stanley answered the October 12, 2004 follow-up Request for Production by saying that it had "not located any additional responsive, non-privileged documents." See Ex. 7, Resp. No. 1. At that time, however, Morgan Stanley had in its possession a number of responsive documents relating to communications with the SEC about its e-mail retention policies and practices, including (1) a September 28, 2004 certification by James Cusick of complete production in connection with a prior SEC investigation (Ex. 32); (2) at least two notices from the SEC seeking documents and information relating to the IPO investigation (Exs. 33, 15); (3) a letter to the SEC from Sidley on behalf of Morgan Stanley providing requested information in connection with that investigation (Ex. 34); and (4) correspondence from counsel for Morgan Stanley to the SEC in connection with the separate Riel investigation (Exs. 37, 38).

On March 2, the Court ordered that Morgan Stanley produce, within 12 hours of their coming into possession of counsel, documents from other court cases and administrative proceedings involving e-mail production. See Ex. 9. Since Kirkland & Ellis was co-counsel in the SEC matters, it obviously had possession of the SEC documents. Thus, they had an obligation to produce them immediately under the March 2 Order. But this Order was disobeyed as well: The documents were first produced on March 7.

Similarly, when Morgan Stanley claimed privilege on the June 7, 2004 e-mail from Riel to Cusick, Morgan Stanley had a duty to reveal on the privilege log that the document had been disclosed to the SEC. But Morgan Stanley failed to do so. As explained above, the Court already has found that the purpose of this intentional and improper action was to avoid telling CPH about the SEC investigation.

Finally, when the Court was reviewing other documents on the same privilege log, Morgan Stanley did not respond to the Court's invitations to provide more specific affidavits that would establish a factual basis to support its assertion of the work-product privilege. Indeed, Morgan Stanley's counsel only began to describe portions of the SEC's Riel investigation in response to the Court's very pointed questioning during the March 4, 2005 hearing. See Ex. 43, 3/4/05 Tr. at 2182-92. In light of the March 7 disclosures, it is apparent that Morgan Stanley had intentionally avoided making further disclosures in hopes of avoiding revelation of the substance of the SEC investigations.

Additional Evidence Relating to the Intentional Violation of the April 16, 2004 Order. Now that we have some of the documents supplied to the SEC in an attempt to fend off an injunction and a $10 million fine for destruction and non-production of e-mail backup tapes, we have learned significant new information relating to the very issues already litigated in this Court at the February 14 hearing. This information, found primarily in the February 10, 2005 Wells submission to the SEC by Morgan Stanley and its counsel (both the Sidley firm and the Kirkland firm), reinforces the Court's findings of misconduct and compels the conclusion that the existing sanctions must be strengthened.

First, CPH may now have uncovered the actual source of the 8,000 pages of e-mails that were produced in November 2004 — and that source is certainly not what Morgan Stanley has told this Court on numerous occasions. As the Court will recall, Morgan Stanley has repeatedly attributed that production to “newly discovered” backup tapes, but — as far as CPH has been able to determine — Morgan Stanley had not in fact discovered any additional backup tapes in the six months immediately prior to the November 2004 production. So the “newly discovered tapes” story was a hoax. Furthermore, the 8,000 pages could not have come from the 1,423 “Brooklyn” DLT tapes that Morgan Stanley found in the spring of 2004 or from the 738 eight-millimeter tapes that Morgan Stanley found in 2002, because neither of those sets of tapes was processed and searched until 2005.

A document provided to the SEC in the Wells submission, but not (until now) to CPH, may explain this mystery: The April 29, 2004 minutes from Morgan Stanley's e-mail archive group reveal an entirely different cache of backup tapes that — unlike any of the tapes Morgan Stanley has previously pointed to (the “Brooklyn found” tapes, the 8mm tapes, etc.) — could have been searched in October or November 2004 but not in April or May 2004. The minutes state that “NDCI [Morgan Stanley's tape-restoration vendor] discovered an additional ~700 Legato tapes that were not been [sic] processed. They expect to have them done within two weeks.” Ex. 10. Thus, right in the midst of the four-week period that the Court gave Morgan Stanley to produce all responsive e-mail — April 16 through May 14, 2004 — Morgan Stanley knew that 700 unprocessed tapes had just been located. E-mails from those tapes could not possibly have been included in the May 14 Court-ordered production, since NDCI’s processing would not even be completed until mid-May. Yet, rather than tell CPH or the Court of this new discovery, Morgan Stanley simply produced 1,300 pages of e-mails on May 14 and then certified that this May production was complete and fully compliant with the Court’s April 16 Order.

Second, the same April 29, 2004 minutes — which, again, were produced to the SEC but not to CPH — indicate that “a final sweep of the NY comm rooms to search for stray DLT tapes” was planned, but had not yet been completed. Even if those sweeps were conducted the very next day — which likely did not happen, since sweeps of the same “N[ew] Y[ork] comm[unications] rooms” in February 2005 turned up an additional 243 tapes, according to Robert Saunders’s in-Court testimony — any “stray DLT tapes” that might have turned up could not possibly have been processed and searched before the Court-imposed deadline of May 14. Id. But again, Morgan Stanley’s knowledge that the May 14 production was incomplete did not deter Morgan Stanley from certifying the contrary.

Third, CPH has now confirmed from the SEC documents that the declaration Morgan Stanley filed with this Court on January 31, 2005, by James F. Doyle, an Executive Director in Morgan Stanley’s Law Division, was intentionally misleading. Doyle swore that he did not learn of additional, unsearched e-mail backup tapes until “the end of October 2004.” Ex. 11. But CPH has now learned that Doyle’s colleague in the Law Division, Soo-Mi Lee, and their boss — James P. Cusick — were informed on June 7, 2004, that “[t]he storage folks [had] found an additional 1,600 backup tapes in a closet.” Ex. 12.

It seems clear that Morgan Stanley hand-picked Mr. Doyle to file with this Court a declaration stating that he — and implicitly, but only implicitly, the entire Law Division of which he is the Executive Director — was unaware of additional tapes until late October, when in fact the Law Division was aware of the tapes by June 7, 2004. Doyle's declaration was intentionally misleading.

Fourth, that same June 7, 2004 e-mail message to Cusick and Lee in the Law Division stated that nearly one third of the backup tapes that had been restored — 10,138 out of 34,926 — “did not contain email (which implies they were recycled despite the order from [C]ompliance not to do so).” Id. This allegation — that Morgan Stanley overwrote, and thus deleted e-mails from, more than 10,000 tapes in violation of the SEC's December 2002 cease-and-desist order — is a key part of the SEC's currently pending investigation of Morgan Stanley, in which the SEC staff has recommended a permanent injunction and a $10 million fine.

Fifth, the February 10 Wells submission reveals for the first time that a large percentage of the e-mails in the original set of 35,000 backup tapes that were to be archived had been prepared for insertion in the archive but not actually inserted by last June. See Ex. 14 at 25. Of the 143 SDLT tapes containing e-mails processed by NDCI, only 120 had been actually put into the archive. Id. The rest were not in fact put into the archive until sometime after November. The February 10 letter indicates that these facts were known to Ms. Gorman and the Law Division by November, id. at 26, but that fact was never revealed until now. Indeed, the constant focus on newly discovered tapes likely was a device intended to prevent revelation of the fact that the original tapes were never fully archived.

Conflicts Between Representations to this Court and to the SEC. The newly produced documents also show that Morgan Stanley did not always tell the same story to the SEC as it did to this Court.

First, Morgan Stanley got off on the same wrong foot with the SEC investigation in October/November as it did with CPH — lying about the origins of the unsearched backup tapes. According to a November 8, 2004 letter from the SEC, Morgan Stanley told the SEC that it had only “recently found” the “700 eight millimeter tapes.” Ex. 15 at 2. But in this Court, Morgan Stanley has acknowledged that these tapes were located in 2002. At his February 10, 2005 deposition, Morgan Stanley’s Glenn Seickel testified that the 700-plus 8mm tapes were found sometime in 2002. Ex. 15 at 2. Moreover, a document that Morgan Stanley later produced to the SEC reveals that several high-level IT professionals knew about the 8mm tapes no later than January 2004. See Ex. 16 (Jan. 25, 2004 e-mail re 8mm tapes from Bob Saunders to Arthur Riel and Don Haight).

In addition, the February 10 Wells submission included this remarkable factual assertion: “Finally, since settling its e-mail issues with the Commission [in 2002], Morgan Stanley voluntarily undertook to overcome the limitations of its backup tapes by migrating all of its pre-2003 e-mail to a new archive system. This migration was recently completed, and Morgan Stanley’s pre-2003 e-mails are now indexed, searchable, and readily accessible in response to investigatory demands.” Ex. 14 at 2 (emphasis in original). In fact, as we know, the process of archiving the pre-2003 e-mail for production was anything but purely voluntary. By April 16, 2004, Morgan Stanley was under a Court Order to produce a substantial amount of material and the archive was the mechanism it was using to do so. Moreover, Morgan Stanley’s notice to the SEC that the process of putting e-mails into the archive is now "completed" is flatly contrary to multiple representations made to this Court in recent weeks.

In deciding whether the existing sanctions relating to e-mails are sufficient in light of this additional factual record, it is important to consider how Morgan Stanley responded to those sanctions. Far from being chastened by those sanctions, Morgan Stanley immediately sought to use them to avoid disclosure of the SEC investigations. When CPH asked for documents from other court cases and administrative proceedings reflecting representations made by Morgan Stanley about production of e-mails, Morgan Stanley argued that the existing sanctions made that further inquiry unnecessary. Morgan Stanley also pointed to the burdensomeness of undertaking such a task, as it allegedly would involve 320 court cases and 75 law firms. But in fact, what Morgan Stanley had in mind was the February 10 Wells submission to the SEC that it had in hand but desperately did not want to produce. Regrettably, the fair conclusion is that the lesson has not yet been learned and further action by this Court is required.

II. Morgan Stanley Willfully Violated the Court's March 3, 2004 Order and Made Baseless Claims of Privilege Regarding Documents Related to the Italian Proceedings Against William Strong.

Morgan Stanley's conduct with regard to the production of documents relating to William Strong and the Italian criminal proceedings also must be considered as part of the basis for an additional sanction. On March 3, 2004, this Court expressly required Morgan Stanley to produce "[a]ll references (positive or negative) to [any relevant] employee's truthfulness, veracity or moral turpitude." Ex. 18, 3/3/04 Order at 2. On March 11, 2004, James Mangan of Morgan Stanley's litigation department transmitted an Italian "legal document" to a New York translation service. See Ex. 19, J. Mangan Fax Transmittal Page to K. Bayegan, 3/11/04. Despite the fact that this transmittal came eight days after the Court's Order, no Italian "legal document" was provided to CPH. Indeed, although Morgan Stanley's litigation department was continuously monitoring the Italian proceedings regarding William Strong since at least late 1993, at the time of the Court's March 3, 2004 Order nothing about the Italian investigation of Strong was produced to CPH.

More than ten months later, on January 25, 2005 — with still no production of materials from Morgan Stanley related to the Italian investigation — CPH obtained a copy of a November 10, 1998 Bloomberg article describing Strong's involvement in an Italian corruption scandal. The article quotes a Morgan Stanley spokeswoman who stated that Morgan Stanley conducted its own investigation into the charges against Strong. See Ex. 20, Bloomberg, "Italian Judge Orders Salomon Executives To Face Trial," 11/10/98. CPH concluded that Morgan Stanley's failure to produce any documents related to the Italian investigation was a direct violation of the Court's March 3, 2004 Order.

On February 9, 2005, CPH filed a motion asking the Court to direct Morgan Stanley to produce documents related to the Strong proceedings which it had improperly withheld. The Court held a hearing on that motion on February 17, 2005. At that hearing, Morgan Stanley's counsel attempted to argue that the Italian documents were "not within the document request" and that there was "nothing in [Strong's] personnel file on this." Ex. 21, 2/17/05 Tr. at 1154. The Court found that the documents related to Strong's involvement in the Italian proceedings were "without doubt fairly included in [CPH's] request for production" and described Morgan Stanley's conduct as "egregious." Id. at 1155. The Court noted that this was symptomatic of a "problem that's permeated the case. Morgan Stanley wants to take the position, if we don't think it's relevant, we don't have to give it. And we're going to weed it out of the discovery request." Id. at 1161 (emphasis added).

On February 17, 2005, this Court ordered the immediate production of the documents, and directed that a privilege log be served by February 20, 2005. See Ex. 22, 2/17/05 Order. On February 18, 2005, two years after the fact, but just one day after the Court's Order, Mr. Strong filed with the National Association of Securities Dealers ("NASD") a Form U-4 Amendment to include comments concerning his appeal and the ruling of the Italian Court of Appeal. See Ex. 23, W. Strong Form U-4, 2/18/05.

Morgan Stanley identified "fully complying with NASD Rules to avoid adverse regulatory action" as one of the common legal interests it shared with Strong in its response to CPH's motion requesting an Order declaring the attorney-client privilege waived for certain documents relating to Strong. Ex. 24, Resp. at 7. Morgan Stanley noted that "[o]ne of these rules requires individuals and their employers to amend the individual's Form U-4 (application for NASD registration) within 30 days after learning of the facts or circumstances giving rise to the amendment." Id. (emphasis added). Yet clearly, it appears that the Court's Order, and not Morgan Stanley's or Strong's legal interests, prompted Strong to amend his U-4 on February 18, 2005. Indeed, Strong also failed to timely file an amended U-4 when he learned of the Italian investigation, which occurred no later than when he received the "Notice of Prosecution" from the Milan Public Prosecutor by April 1996.

On February 20, 2005, Morgan Stanley filed a privilege log regarding the documents it had been ordered to produce, and then filed revised logs on February 23 and 28, 2005. On their face, the privilege logs demonstrate a willful disregard for the basic tenets of privilege. Morgan Stanley asserted the privilege where it had no common legal interest with Strong or with Strong's former employer, Salomon Brothers International ("Salomon Brothers"). The February 28 logs also were deficient in several respects, including that the logs obviously did not disclose all the recipients of the documents. For example, numerous entries contain no Morgan Stanley names in the "Recipient(s)" column despite the fact that most of the documents were produced from Morgan Stanley's own files. See TIG Ins. Corp. of Am. v. Johnson, 799 So. 2d 339, 341 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001), rev. den., 821 So. 2d 304 (Fla. 2002).

The privilege logs reveal that senior Morgan Stanley in-house litigation attorneys were well aware of the existence of the documents relating to the Italian authorities' investigation of Strong — documents that clearly fell within the Court's March 3, 2004 Order to produce "[a]ll references (positive or negative) to [any relevant] employee's truthfulness, veracity or moral turpitude." James Cusick, the Morgan Stanley Managing Director responsible for litigation, appears on more than 60 entries in the February 23, 2005 logs. Monroe Sonnenborn, the former head of litigation for Morgan Stanley, appears on more than 200 entries in the February 23, 2005 logs. Donald Kempf, Morgan Stanley's General Counsel, and Christine Edwards, Mr. Kempf's predecessor, also are listed on the February 23, 2005 logs. It is inconceivable that Morgan Stanley's in-house attorneys did not know that the documents relating to the Italian authorities' investigation of Strong fell squarely within the ambit of the Court's March 3, 2004 Order. See Ex. 21, 2/17/05 Tr. at 1155 (THE COURT: "I cannot accept that any fair interpretation of this request didn't include that information.").

Given Morgan Stanley's baseless assertions of privilege over documents listed on its privilege logs for which Morgan Stanley had only a business interest and not a legal interest, CPH filed a motion requesting an order declaring the attorney-client privilege waived for certain documents relating to Strong on February 24, 2005. CPH argued that with respect to certain documents that may have originally been privileged, the voluntary act of Strong, Salomon Brothers, or their attorneys sharing documents with Morgan Stanley constituted a waiver, and that communications directly among Morgan Stanley and Salomon Brothers, Strong, or their attorneys were never privileged in the first place.

On February 28, 2005, Morgan Stanley filed a response to CPH's motion. Morgan Stanley asserted that it had a "contractual duty to assert the joint defense privilege" under two alleged joint-defense agreements it had entered into with Strong and Salomon Brothers. Morgan Stanley argued that "because they so accurately capture the parties' intentions, these joint defense agreements should be accorded significant weight." Ex. 24, Resp. at 5. Yet Morgan Stanley refused to produce these alleged joint-defense agreements to CPH, claiming that they were privileged. See id. at 4 n.4.

On March 3, 2005, CPH filed a motion to compel production of the alleged joint-defense agreements relating to the Strong documents. The Court held a hearing on that motion on March 4, 2005. At that hearing, Morgan Stanley's counsel alleged that the two "joint-defense agreements" it refused to produce to CPH "reflect[ed] defense strategy, specifically the thought process of the attorneys in maintaining and advocating the same legal defense strategy, and so this constitutes work product." Ex. 25, 3/4/05 Tr. at 2139. After conducting an in camera review, the Court found that it was not possible to "read either of these letters as disclosing any trial strategy or containing any work product other than what has been voluntarily disclosed already by Morgan Stanley." Id. at 2149-50.

On March 4, 2005, over Morgan Stanley's objection, this Court ordered Morgan Stanley to turn over two letters that Morgan Stanley asserted were "joint-defense agreements" involving Morgan Stanley. The Court stated: "I don't think either item reflects any legal interest on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any understanding that Morgan Stanley was entering into a common defense agreement. I think they were published to Morgan Stanley for business purposes, not for legal purposes.” Id. at 2150.

CPH received the alleged “joint-defense agreements” on March 4, 2005. These letters reveal that (1) Morgan Stanley’s claims of privilege with respect to the letters were meritless; (2) Morgan Stanley was not engaged in a joint defense with Salomon Brothers or Strong; and (3) the only possible protected joint defense was between Strong and Salomon Brothers, but Strong waived the privilege with respect to the documents associated with that defense by making documents available to Morgan Stanley. Those so-called “joint-defense” letters therefore establish the bad faith of Morgan Stanley’s assertion of the joint-defense privilege. Morgan Stanley’s letter to Salomon Brothers notes that the only “common interest” is between Strong and Salomon Brothers, and Mr. Cooney’s letter to Mr. Mayhew refers to Davis Polk’s representation of Strong, and Clifford Chance’s representation of Salomon Brothers. Morgan Stanley is not named as a party with a “common interest” in any supposed “joint-defense” agreement. See Ex. 26, Ltr. from J. Cooney to D. Mayhew, 5/11/95; Ex. 27, Ltr. from M. Sonnenborn to Salomon Brothers, 5/11/95.

On March 7, 2005, the Court held a hearing on CPH’s motion requesting an Order declaring the attorney-client privilege waived for certain documents relating to Strong. At that hearing, Morgan Stanley’s counsel asserted that Documents 935 through 1074 on the Strong privilege log had been provided to Morgan Stanley for the first time in connection with this litigation by John Cooney, a Davis Polk attorney who purportedly represented both Strong and Morgan Stanley during the Italian proceedings (despite Morgan Stanley’s lack of a legal interest in those proceedings). See Ex. 28, 3/7/05 Tr. at 2235-45; id. at 2236-37 (“So they have only been shared with Morgan Stanley by us going to Mr. Strong’s counsel Davis Polk and requesting them for review and production in this matter.”). The Court found this a “bizarre development” in Morgan Stanley’s position and requested that Mr. Cooney prepare a declaration attesting to which documents he had not previously shared with Morgan Stanley. Id. at 2243.

On March 8, 2005, Morgan Stanley’s counsel backed away from these prior statements about the Davis Polk documents. Instead, counsel stated that there were a “small handful of documents” consisting of Mr. Cooney’s handwritten notes that were not shared with Morgan Stanley. Ex. 29, 3/8/05 Tr. at 2463. The remainder of the documents would not be privileged because Mr. Cooney could not affirm that he had not shared them with Morgan Stanley, which had no common legal interest with Strong or Salomon Brothers.

In sum, CPH’s attempts to get information about Strong’s Italian criminal proceedings have been thwarted by Morgan Stanley at every turn. Morgan Stanley has made itself the arbiter of what is and is not relevant; it has decided on its own what is and is not called for by CPH’s requests for production; it has invoked baseless claims of privilege over documents that clearly are not privileged; and it has misrepresented to the Court the nature both of documents and of its attempts to retrieve those documents. William Strong was a key player in the Sunbeam fraud. He signed the engagement letter with Sunbeam on behalf of Morgan Stanley in September 1997, led the firm’s work for Sunbeam, and took credit for all the fees received. At that time, he knew that he was facing prosecution by the Milan Public Prosecutor for the crime of complicity in bribery. See Ex. 30, U.S. Department of Justice Ltr. to W. Strong, 4/17/96, attaching 11/6/95 “Notice of Prosecution.” This matter was a “heavy millstone around [Strong’s] neck” (see Ex. 31, e-mail from B. Gans to W. Strong, 9/27/01), no doubt motivating him to generate as much revenue as possible in the Sunbeam transaction in the hope that Morgan Stanley would look the other way regarding the criminal proceedings in Italy.

Morgan Stanley has done its best to hide these facts from CPH, and it is only through CPH's relentless pursuit of this information that these facts have finally come to light. By hiding the facts, Morgan Stanley has tried to accomplish two things. First, Morgan Stanley has tried to suppress key evidence going to Strong's motive to aid and abet the Sunbeam fraud. Second, Morgan Stanley has tried to conceal evidence that corroborates damning criticisms of Strong by some of the most senior executives at Morgan Stanley — Joseph Perella and Tarek Abdel-Meguid. As the Court is aware, Perella's 1997 evaluation of Strong stated: "The one problem I continue to have with Bill is that you never seem to get the whole story unless you probe very hard." Ex. 40, 1997 Performance Evaluation at MS 85461. Meguid's 1997 evaluation of Strong states: "Bill can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transaction opportunities. Makes some judgments which are sometimes very close to, if not over, the line." Ex. 41, 1998 Performance Evaluation at MS 85480.

At their depositions in this case, both Perella and Meguid variously failed to recall specifics concerning their criticisms of Strong or sought to explain away those criticisms. See, e.g., Ex. 42, Perella Dep. at 98 (Perella trying to explain away his critical evaluation of Strong as referring only to a "goal to improve internal communication"). If CPH had received the documents concerning the criminal proceedings in Italy, CPH could have confronted Perella and Meguid with those documents at their depositions. CPH could have tested whether Perella and Meguid's explanations and lack of recall concerning their 1997 evaluations of Strong were credible or whether the senior executives at Morgan Stanley were closing ranks as CPH exposed Morgan Stanley's willingness to look the other way, so long as Strong remained a major rainmaker for the firm.

III. Morgan Stanley's Systematic Misconduct in All Stages and All Facets of This Case Warrants the Relief CPH Seeks.

The foregoing willful violations by Morgan Stanley of the Court's Orders and efforts to cover up those willful violations are not isolated incidents, but part of a pattern of abuse stretching back to the beginning of this litigation. For example, although Morgan Stanley ultimately escaped being sanctioned, it is clear that Morgan Stanley willfully violated the Court's December 4, 2003 and July 31, 2003 Orders governing the use and disclosure of the terms of the settlement agreement between CPH and Arthur Andersen ("Andersen"). See Ex. 35, CPH's 3/1/05 Chronology of Discovery Abuses by Defendant ("Chronology") at 16-19 (filed on March 1, 2005); see 3/1/05 Chronology Appendix ("Chronology App.") Ex. 88 (12/4/03 Order); id. Ex. 87 (7/31/03 Order).² In violation of those Orders, sometime prior to March 1, 2004, Morgan Stanley used the information derived from the settlement agreement for the improper purpose of devising a scheme to commence separate litigation against Andersen. See Chronology at 18, ¶¶ 7-9. Counsel admitted that the Andersen agreement precipitated the separate suit: "I think Your Honor would know the reasons we would bring Arthur Andersen in now that we have the settlement agreement, which we didn't get, by the way, until December, so it's a fairly recent development." Chronology App. Ex. 92 at 14-15. Morgan Stanley also improperly disclosed the terms of the Andersen agreement to lawyers who were not counsel of record in this litigation. Chronology at 18, ¶ 10. And during the resulting contempt proceedings, Morgan Stanley attempted to cover its tracks by repeatedly misrepresenting to the Court that these outside lawyers were retained to handle only the "Andersen aspects" of the case, an assertion that even its own counsel revealed to be untrue. See Chronology App. Ex. 99 at 47-48, 51, 62-64, 107-09; see id. at 115 (outside lawyers to serve as co-counsel “in all aspects of the case”).

Morgan Stanley exhibited the same pattern of abuse by intentionally failing to produce electronic information related to the authenticity and authorship of Morgan Stanley’s own documents and then misleading the Court to conceal the violation. See Chronology at 9-13. Morgan Stanley had maintained since as early as January 20, 2004 that it had disclosed all the electronic information retained by Morgan Stanley’s document management system pertaining to documents concerning Morgan Stanley’s work for Sunbeam. See Chronology at 9-10, ¶¶ 1-3, 12. In a further attempt to stonewall CPH’s efforts, Morgan Stanley repeatedly disobeyed the Court’s successive Orders requiring Morgan Stanley to respond adequately to CPH’s Sixth Set of Requests for Admission concerning authenticity, business record status, and authorship of specified documents. See Chronology at 10, ¶¶ 6-10. At the February 2, 2005 hearing on CPH’s Motion to Deem Certain Documents Admissible and for Sanctions, counsel for Morgan Stanley repeatedly misrepresented to the Court that Morgan Stanley had no more information pertaining to the specified documents. See Chronology at 11, ¶ 13. Yet, on February 7, 2005 — in response to the Court’s Order on CPH’s motion and on the eve of trial — Morgan Stanley produced 83 pages of electronic data relating to the documents that clearly identified, among other things, authorship of the documents and when and for how long Morgan Stanley employees viewed and edited them. See Chronology App. Ex. 72. Moreover, according to the testimony of Morgan Stanley’s corporate representative on February 11, 2005, Morgan Stanley has had the ability to retrieve electronic data regarding documents since 1997, and it took only one to two days to generate the 83-page production. See Chronology App. Ex. 73 at 133. He further admitted that Morgan Stanley had made no attempt to access this electronic data until after the Court's February 3, 2005 Order. See id. at 132.

These are by no means the only instances of Morgan Stanley's lack of candor with the Court and with CPH. For example, Morgan Stanley repeatedly made misrepresentations to CPH when it claimed that one key witness could not be deposed for months, thereby avoiding her deposition until the very end of fact discovery, by claiming that she could not be deposed for health reasons — while all the while she was working 12-hour days and leading an active social life. See Chronology at 19, ¶ 1. Morgan Stanley similarly misrepresented that other witnesses were unavailable for deposition on certain dates, when Morgan Stanley later admitted that it had not even contacted those witnesses — and denied representing witnesses it had previously indicated were under its control. See Chronology at 22, ¶ 7.

Even when CPH was able to depose Morgan Stanley's employees, many of the witnesses gave nonresponsive answers to CPH's questions. For instance, John Tyree refused to say whether he authored correspondence which named Tyree as the sender and which had been produced to CPH by the named recipients of the correspondence. See Chronology App. Ex. 107 at 160, 207; Chronology App. Ex. 108; Chronology App. Ex. 109. Similarly, Johannes Groeller denied all but the most limited involvement in the Sunbeam transaction, even in the face of document after document related to the Sunbeam engagement that listed him as the document's sender, and even in the face of a performance review that credited him for his great contributions to Morgan Stanley's Sunbeam team. See Chronology App. Ex. 132 at 40, 19, 38, 45, 56, 60-61.

Morgan Stanley's pattern of abuse extended to the suit Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF") filed against CPH alleging that MSSF relied on CPH's purported misrepresentations about the "synergies" that Sunbeam could expect from acquiring Coleman. Morgan Stanley's answers to CPH's First Set of Interrogatories — requesting the names of Morgan Stanley employees who relied on the purported synergies misrepresentations — were improper, merely listing individuals who “may have relied, directly or indirectly” on CPH's and MAFCO's supposed misrepresentations, and who “may have” prepared or used Morgan Stanley's synergy-related documents. See Chronology App. Ex. 111. When CPH deposed the individual who verified Morgan Stanley's answers, he conceded that he “did not have personal knowledge” of the matters asserted in MSSF's responses and did not recall what he had done to verify them, nor had he detected blatantly obvious errors — even those about his own position at Morgan Stanley. See Chronology App. Ex. 105 at 108, 148-49; 155; Chronology App. Ex. 106 at 351-52. Tellingly, after avoidance tactics such as those, MSSF voluntarily dismissed its case rather than comply with the Court's September 30, 2004 Order requiring MSSF to provide an answer to the interrogatories that “fairly meets the question posed.” See Chronology App. Ex. 113 (Order); id. Ex. 112 (Voluntary Dismissal).

CONCLUSION

In sum, Morgan Stanley's discovery abuses, lack of candor with the Court and CPH, and interference with the proper administration of justice have been a glaring constant throughout this litigation. In light of Morgan Stanley's deliberate misconduct, which continues unabated to this very day, this Court should strike Morgan Stanley's pleadings, enter a default judgment, and impose such other sanctions as may be appropriate, including without limitation informing the jury of Morgan Stanley's further misconduct during this litigation and the imposition of monetary sanctions. The Court's prior sanctions simply have not persuaded Morgan Stanley of the need to comply with its obligations to this Court and the system of justice.

Key Terms and Definitions

Admissible - evidence that is acceptable or allowable in court.

Archive - a long-term computer storage area.

Attachments - any file type associated with or attached to an e-mail.

Backup tapes - tape media used to backup data.

Chain-of-custody - a process used to maintain and document the chronological history of electronic evidence. A chain-of-custody ensures that the data presented is "as originally acquired" and has not been altered prior to admission into evidence. RenewData maintains an electronic chain-of-custody link between all electronic data and its original physical media throughout the production process.

Data extraction - the process of removing files and meta-data from backup tapes.

Deleted files and data - recoverable information from deleted files and data may be stored in unallocated or slack space on a computer hard drive.

De-duplication - the process of providing one instance of an item when there was once two or more identical copies. This process usually involves landing all files into a database and then searching for duplicate files.

Basic de-duplication: performed on a select and limited basis, such as for file names and types, and is usually based on the hash value of the entire electronic document.

Dynamic de-duplication: RenewData's proprietary dynamic de-duplication technology handles large volumes of information and ensures that unique meta-data and original content are stored only once. This dynamic de-duplication process is executed as the data flows off the tapes, avoiding large and expensive processing and storage requirements.

Discovery - a pre-trial process in which each party tries to find all the information held by the other party and by certain third parties that is relevant, probative and can be admitted into evidence at trial. Each party is required to cooperate with the other to the extent required by the relevant rules of civil procedure.

Electronic Evidence - according to Black's law dictionary, evidence is "any species of proof, or probative matter, legally presented at the trial of an issue, by the act of the parties and through the medium of witnesses, records, documents, exhibits, concrete objects, etc. for the purpose of inducing belief in the minds of the court or jury as to their contention." Electronic information (like paper) generally is admissible into evidence in a legal proceeding.

E-mail - the whole of an electronic document containing the message envelope and message content (attachments, etc.).

Filtering - electronic filtering of e-mails and files for privilege or by keyword, file type or name. Filtering removes files that don't fit the search criteria and reduces the volume of data that requires further investigation.

Forensically sound procedures - procedures used for acquiring electronic information in a manner that ensures it is "as originally discovered" and is reliable enough to be admitted into evidence. Such procedures are defined in part by the US Department of Justice publication "Searching and Seizing Computers and Obtaining Electronic Evidence in Criminal Investigations."

Hard drives - the primary computer storage medium in desktop and laptop computers.

Hash - an algorithm that creates a value to verify duplicate electronic documents. A hash mark serves as a digital thumbprint.

Images (or forensic duplicates or mirror images) - a bit-by-bit duplicate of a backup tape or hard drive that is forensically sound.

Internal inquiries - a close examination of a matter in a search for information or truth that is internal to a company.

Investigation - an inquiry usually initiated by a government agency.

Media - the physical material used to store electronic data. Media includes hard drives, backup tapes, computer disks, CD, DVD, PDA, memory, etc.

Media conversion - moving data from one type of media to another such as tape to CD.

Merge - the process of combining various e-mail files (i.e. Microsoft Outlook's .pst) into one file for de-duplication purposes.

Meta-data - meta-data is data about data. Meta-data captures data elements or attributes (name, size, date, type, etc.), data about records or data structures (length, fields, columns, etc.) and data about data (where it is located, how it is associated, ownership, etc.).

Native environment - the original configuration (software, passwords, server configuration, etc.) of a backup tape or e-mail system (i.e. Microsoft Exchange).

Native File - a file saved in the format of the original application used to create the file. Dealing with native files can minimize expensive per-page costs for the traditional TIFF and/or PDF processing and will maximize the relevant information available from the file.

Non-native environment - proprietary RenewData process in which electronic data is obtained directly from backup tapes without the need to recreate a native environment.

Obstruction of Justice - according to Black's law dictionary, obstruction of justice means "impeding or obstructing those who seek justice in a court, or those who have duties or powers of administering justice therein."

Onsite extraction - the extraction of high volumes of data from backup tapes at a client site (no risk of loss of original evidence) - RenewData patent-pending technology.

Paper - the traditional method of printing electronic files.

PDF - (Portable Document Format) a proprietary format of Adobe Corporation, it has become a de facto standard for transmitting documents that the sender does not want to be altered and for transmitting documents to commercial printers and to the Web for online publishing.

Production - delivery of data or information in response to an interrogatory, subpoena or discovery order or a similar legal process.

Repository - a centralized database stored on a computer that houses specific information.

Searching - the ability to look within the data and search by a name, date or keyword to find desired information.

Slack Space - remnant data from deleted files still located in clusters on a hard drive.

Spoilation - generally, the intentional or negligent destruction or alteration of evidence when there is current litigation or an investigation or there is reasonable anticipation that either may occur in the near future. Some jurisdictions also define it as a failure to preserve information that may become evidence.

TIFF - (Tagged Image File Format) a widely used bit-mapped graphics file format. This is essentially a picture of a document.

Unallocated Space - space on a hard drive that potentially contains intact files, remnants of files, subdirectories or temporary files which were created and then deleted by either a computer application, the operating system or the operator.

Unstructured Data - Data that is not in tabular or delimited format. File types include word processing files, html files (web pages), project plans, presentation files, spreadsheets, graphics, audio files, video files and emails.

1 A. The review indicated that there were e-mail
2 within the files that I looked at.

3 Q. Actual e-mail messages?

4 A. Yes.

5 Q. I don't want to try to oversell this. How 6 many of these files did you actually open up and look 7 at?

8 A. I selected two NSF files and two PST.

9 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Two of each?

10 THE WITNESS: (Nodding head). From a single 11 tape.

12 BY MR. BYMAN:

13 Q. That's hardly a statistical sample, is it?

14 A. No, it's not. It was done as an overview of 15 our processing to -- with one of our quality control
16 personnel to ensure that I understood how this data had 17 been processed.

18 Q. So at this point let me make sure that we're
19 clear. You can't state with any certainty the quantity
20 of e-mail that you found on these 917 tapes, actual 21 e-mail messages?

22 A. We have not completed that analysis.

23 Q. You can state with some certainty that there
24 are at least 11,000 archive files in which one might 25 expect to find e-mail messages; is that right?

Counsel for Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.

CPH's "Issue"	What CPH Represented to this Court	What CPH Misrepresented or Omitted
Can we have any confidence that Morgan Stanley has located, much less searched and processed all relevant existing email?	CPH correctly notes that Morgan Stanley has found a number of new tapes since May 14, 2004. CPH also claims that various statements of Mr. Clare, Mr. Saunders and Morgan Stanley in February 2005 that all back-up tapes had been found were untrue when made.	While subsequent events have shown that additional tapes existed, there is no evidence that these statements were known or suspected to be false when made.
What do we know about Morgan Stanley's willful destruction of email? In violation of Federal law, Morgan Stanley overwrote – destroyed – emails after one year. Morgan Stanley supposedly put an end to that systematic destruction in January 2001. But did it?	CPH contends that Morgan Stanley has admitted to the SEC that more than 10% of its back-up tapes continued to be overwritten despite Federal law and its own directive.	Morgan Stanley's analysis of 7,482 tapes for the SEC showed that 53, fewer than 1%, were overwritten. And, the substantial duplication inherent in the back-up tapes likely means that few unique emails were lost. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 15-16.) SEC Rule 17a-4 only requires the retention of documents for three years, so that relevant 1997-1998 emails would have been recycled in any event before CPH filed suit.
CPH moves to compel email production in October 2003. Was Morgan Stanley's response in good faith?	CPH suggests Morgan Stanley has lied about the cost and extreme burden of restoring email, contrasting one statement that it is burdensome and expensive with a different statement that it is quickly accessible. CPH claims Morgan Stanley misled the Court and CPH by not disclosing that it had begun building an Archive in January 2003.	CPH's own chart belies its false comparison. One statement (cost and extreme burden) relates to restoring email off back-up tapes, while the other statement (quickly accessible) relates to restoring email off the Archive. No good deed goes unpunished. In 2003, the Archive only captured and contained email from 2003 forward, and, thus, could not be used to produce relevant Coleman email. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 25.) It was only in 2004, when Morgan Stanley voluntarily migrated email from its old back-up tapes to the Archive, that the Archive became useful in this litigation -- at which time Morgan Stanley used it to produce emails to comply with (and go well beyond) the Agreed Order. (Feb. 10, 2005

		Letter at 7, 20; Riel Dep. at 50-56.)
How complete/reliable was the Archive when Morgan Stanley used it in May 2004 to produce documents and certify completeness?	CPH asserts that Morgan Stanley failed to disclose to CPH and the Court that, as of June 7, 2004, only 120 of the 143 SDLT output tapes produced by NDCI had been processed into the Archive. CPH suggests Mr. Riel's Certificate of Compliance was, therefore, false.	It is uncontroverted that Morgan Stanley understood that NDCI was processing, and the Archive was being loaded with, the oldest tapes first. (Riel Dep. at 67-68; 139-140.) The Agreed Order required Morgan Stanley to produce emails off the oldest full back-up tapes. Thus, when Mr. Riel searched the Archive for old emails in April-May 2004, he reasonably believed it contained the emails from the earliest full backup tape available for each person identified. (Riel Dep. at 57-58; 65-66.)
How complete/reliable was the Archive at the time of the February 14 Hearing?	CPH points out that Mr. Saunders was mistaken when he expressed confidence a month ago that all back-up tapes had been found, and that Morgan Stanley was likely mistaken when it told the SEC that all recoverable pre-2003 email had been migrated to the Archive.	There is no evidence that Mr. Saunders or Morgan Stanley knew or should have known that their statements were false when made. It is true that additional back-up tapes have been found since mid-February, which may contain recoverable email. But it is not known whether any of these tapes contain responsive email under the Agreed Order. (Mar. 14, 2005 Tr. at 258-263.) Previous new-found tapes have not resulted in many new, unique responsive emails because of the substantial redundancy inherent in Morgan Stanley's back-up tapes. (Mar. 14, 2005 Tr. at 255-256.)
What problems existed at the time the May search was made which affected the completeness of the search?	CPH claims every time it asks, it gets a different list of problems.	There is no questions that coding errors and other glitches existed in the Archive when searches were run in May 2004. (Feb. 14, 2005 Tr. at 41-42, 52.) As Microsoft Corporation's many product patches demonstrate, software

		glitches are common in large, complex IT projects. (Mar. 7, 2005 Gorman Dep. at 53.) Morgan Stanley has worked hard to identify and resolve these problems, and in any event, its Archive search was much more robust than the search required by the Agreed Order. (Mar. 14, 2005 Tr. at 256.)
	CPH cites Mr. Riel for the notion that 10,138 tapes that did not contain email had been recycled.	Morgan Stanley, in its SEC Wells submission, analyzed these 10,138 tapes and determined that only 31 were non-redundant back-ups of email servers that had been overwritten in violation of Morgan Stanley's January 2001 directive. And, even on those 31 tapes, statistical analysis indicates that it is likely that only a tiny fraction (around 1%) of unique emails were lost. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 15-16.) There is no evidence that any of these emails related to this case, and it remains undisputed that none of Morgan Stanley's email retention or retrieval practices was driven by this case.
Why did Morgan Stanley create the email Archive?	CPH claims Morgan Stanley attempted to curry favor with the SEC by claiming voluntarily to have migrated old email to its Archive, while at the same time telling CPH and the Court that it should not be required to make full production because of the burden of searching back-up tapes.	Morgan Stanley did not simply claim voluntarily to have migrated old email to its Archive, it had voluntarily migrated old email to its Archive. (Mar. 13, 2005 Anfang Dep. at 74-75.) And, CPH's fiction that Morgan Stanley cried "burden" to limit its email production to a handful of tapes is remarkable given that it is undisputed that Morgan Stanley used its comprehensive Archive, not individual back-up tapes, to produce emails in this case. (Riel Dep. at 54, 67-68.)
	CPH claims "Morgan Stanley never told the SEC that it had obligations under the April Order which	Morgan Stanley has no obligation to inform the SEC how it intends to meet its discovery

	it intended to meet by using the Archive."	obligations in civil litigation. Also, the Archive was not created, updated or loaded with new tapes to satisfy Morgan Stanley's obligations in this case, although Morgan Stanley did choose to capitalize on this investment for plaintiff's benefit.
Was there anything extraordinary about Morgan Stanley's decision to create an Archive?	CPH claims that Morgan Stanley's statements that "everybody on the street was building an email archive" and that "no other firm [was] taking similar steps to migrate email" "cannot [both] be true. One is false."	CPH's statement is disingenuous. The simple truth is that everyone on the street was building an Archive for current/future email, but Morgan Stanley is the only firm (of which it is aware) that has voluntarily and at great expense elected to migrate its old emails from back-up tapes to its new Archive to make them more accessible. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 8, 20.)
Was the June 23, 2004 Completeness Certificate true or false?	CPH contends that Mr. Riel's Certificate of Completeness was false when made because 1,423 DLT and 738 8mm tapes had not been processed. CPH goes so far as to suggest that Mr. Riel only signed the Certificate to keep Morgan Stanley's lawyers happy.	It is undisputed that Mr. Riel did not know or suspect that the Brooklyn and 8mm tapes contained email, much less responsive email, when he signed his Certificate (Riel Dep. at 75-78), and that he believed then, and now, that his Certificate was accurate (Riel Dep. at 50-58; 64-68; 162).
	CPH suggests that Mr. Riel's deposition supports the notion that Mr. Riel's Certificate was false because he did not search back-up tapes, as required by the Agreed Order.	Another remarkable statement. Mr. Riel made clear at his deposition, over and over again, that he believed emails from Morgan Stanley's oldest back-up tapes were migrated to the Archive before he ran his search, so that his search picked up responsive emails from back-up tapes. (Riel Dep. at 53-54; 57-58; 67-68.)
What is Arthur Riel's status?	CPH suggests that Morgan Stanley changes its view of Mr. Riel from "trusted employee" to "untrustworthy" to suit its purposes.	Morgan Stanley trusted Mr. Riel when he signed the Certificate in June 2004, but lost faith in his trustworthiness when it learned

Where did the 8,000 pages of production made in November 2004 come from?	CPH correctly points out that Morgan Stanley's representations about the November 2004 production of 8,000 pages have been confused.	months later that Mr. Riel had been secretly monitoring the emails of his supervisors, without authorization and in violation of Morgan Stanley's Code of Conduct. (Riel Dep. p. 16; 146-154.) Morgan Stanley apologizes for unintentionally confusing CPH and the Court. Past misstatements have resulted from haste, honest misunderstandings, and the difficulty of determining which pages of the production came from which of the tapes whose email had been migrated into the Archive. As adduced at this week's hearing, the evidence is that, of the 8000 pages, most are duplicates of emails and attached reports, with only 13 unique emails (some with attachments) in the production. Of these 13 unique emails, three were inserted into the Archive in May-August 2004, nine were captured by the May 2004 search of the Archive but withheld as non-responsive by Kirkland & Ellis, and one was in the Archive in May 2004 but not captured by the query. (Mar. 14, 2005 Tr. at 174-75.)
When were the "newly discovered" tapes actually discovered?	CPH claims that Morgan Stanley's representations about the timing of the discovery of the Brooklyn tapes vary slightly from internal IT meeting minutes.	The "discrepancy" between "sometime during the summer" and "May 6" is insignificant.
The 1423 Brooklyn "Found" Tapes
When were the "newly discovered" tapes actually	CPH highlights the difference between when Morgan Stanley's IT department learned of the	While the miscommunication is unfortunate, CPH has failed to supply any evidence that the

discovered? The 738 8mm Tapes	8mm tapes (2002) and when the Law Division did (2004).	Law Division knew about the 8mm tapes before November 2004.
When did Morgan Stanley learn that the newly discovered tapes actually contained email?	CPH correctly notes that the IT Department learned that a portion of the Brooklyn tapes contained some email in July 2004, while the Law Division only learned in October 2004.	Again, while the miscommunication is regrettable, CPH offers no evidence that IT told the Law Division before October 2004 that email existed on some Brooklyn tapes.
When did Morgan Stanley learn that the newly discovered tapes actually contained 1998 email?	CPH notes that IT determined in July 2004 that one or more Brooklyn tapes had some email from 1998 and 1999, and then purports to contrast that with statements in January and February 2005 that Morgan Stanley could not determine the type or time period of data that might be recovered from tapes that had yet to be restored.	The IT Department did not inform the lawyers that it had found pre-2000 email on the Brooklyn tapes until October 2004. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 25.) And, knowledge that the Brooklyn tapes had some pre-2000 email is not inconsistent with the statements that only by restoring new-found tapes could Morgan Stanley determine what email, if any, was on them.
Not that it matters, but when did Mr. Riel share with lawyers what Morgan Stanley knew, that the found tapes contained email?	CPH cites Mr. Riel's deposition for the suggestion that Mr. Riel may have had a conversation with Morgan Stanley's lawyers after June 2004 in which he may have told them that the Brooklyn tapes contained email.	CPH's surmise is flatly contradicted by Mr. Riel's testimony. He does not recall telling Morgan Stanley's lawyers that the Brooklyn tapes had email (Riel Dep. 86-87; 142), and, indeed, he voluntarily retracted the testimony CPH cites later in his deposition and said he was not sure he had any conversation with Morgan Stanley's lawyers after June 2004 (Riel Dep. 123-124).
When did Morgan Stanley disclose the existence of the found tapes and the fact that they contained email?	CPH claims Morgan Stanley delayed telling CPH that the found tapes contained email.	The delay between when the Law Division learned (late October 2004) and when Kirkland & Ellis wrote CPH's counsel (November 17, 2004) was minor and did not prejudice CPH.

When did Morgan Stanley counsel know that the Archive was not complete as of May 14, 2004?	CPH suggests that Morgan Stanley's counsel knew the Archive was not complete in May 2004, rather than October 2004.	Morgan Stanley's counsel learned from Mr. Riel that "tapes" had been found in June 2004, but Mr. Riel specifically told them that he did not know whether the tapes were email tapes. It is uncontroverted that counsel did not learn that some of the found tapes contained email until late October 2004. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 50.)
When - and why - did Morgan Stanley put any priority on getting the data in staging into the Archive?	CPH suggests that the only reason Morgan Stanley prioritized moving email data from "staging" into the Archive in October 2004 was because the SEC initiated an inquiry into Morgan Stanley's alleged destruction of email back-up tapes.	Ms. Gorman testified that the migration of email data from "staging" into the Archive stopped shortly after Mr. Riel was placed on administrative leave in late August 2004. (Feb. 14, 2005 Tr. at 50.) Morgan Stanley began to prioritize the process of migrating email data again in October 2004, after the Law Division was alerted. (Feb. 14, 2005 Tr. at 50, 61.)
Why did it take so long to process the data in staging?	CPH cites Mr. Riel's self-serving testimony for the notion that he could have speeded up the processing of the email data in "staging."	As noted above, Mr. Riel was placed on administrative leave in August 2004 for unauthorized monitoring of his superiors' emails in violation of Morgan Stanley's Code of Conduct. (Riel Dep. at 16.) The Firm's actions with regard to Mr. Riel may have slowed the migration process, but were an unfortunate and unavoidable consequence of his misconduct.
	CPH suggests that the processing of email data would have gone faster had Morgan Stanley simply accepted CPH's proposal to use a third-party vendor to process and search back-up tapes.	CPH's self-serving speculation, which parrots the bravado of its expert, Quintin Gregor from eMag Solutions, at the February 14, 2005 hearing, is belied by events of the last month. Mr. Gregor claimed that email data could be completely extracted from 2,160 back-up tapes within six weeks -- or four weeks, if expedited. (Feb. 14, 2005 Tr. at 229.) However, after having the tapes an entire month, Renew Data

		was able to process only 1-2% of the data. (Mar. 13, 2005 Wolfe Dep. at 50-54.) Morgan Stanley was quick by comparison, largely processing more than 35,000 tapes in about six months. (Feb. 10, 2005 Letter at 8, 25-26.)
How much data – how much potential email – is on the “found” tapes?	CPH tries to make much of Morgan Stanley’s varying descriptions of the quantity of information in “staging.”	Morgan Stanley regrets that it has given different estimates of the amount of email in “staging.” Any miscommunication was unintentional and did not prejudice CPH. Moreover, regardless of the precise amount of email data in the staging area, all of the data that was in “staging” at the time Ms. Gorman assumed Mr. Riel’s responsibilities was migrated to the Archive by early February 2005. (Mar. 14, 2005 Tr. at 197.)
The Bottom Bottom-Line	Morgan Stanley has made a considerable investment to create a more accessible and searchable Archive out of hundreds of millions of unique e-mails from tens of thousands of cumbersome and unwieldy magnetic tapes. Those efforts have enabled Morgan Stanley, in this case, to search an Archive containing emails from tens of thousands of back-up tapes rather than just the thirty-six tapes required by the Agreed Order. CPH cannot begin to defend its own discovery practices, when it expressly recognized the likelihood of Sunbeam litigation but then carried out a systematic campaign to “purge” its files of emails and electronic documents until “everything was long gone...” (Jan. 21, 2004 Fasman Dep. at 156.)

ORDER ON CPH'S RENEWED MOTION FOR ENTRY OF DEFAULT JUDGMENT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court March 14 and 15, 2005, on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, with both parties well represented by counsel.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"), has sued Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), for aiding and abetting and conspiring with Sunbeam to perpetrate a fraud. Early in the case, CPH was concerned that MS & Co. was not thoroughly looking for emails responsive to its discovery requests. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered an Agreed Order ("Agreed Order") that required MS & Co. to search its oldest full backup tapes for emails subject to certain parameters and certify compliance. MS & Co. certified compliance with the Agreed Order on June 23, 2004. On November 17, 2004, CPH learned that MS & Co. had found some backup tapes that had not been searched. On January 26, 2005 it served its Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Motion"), claiming that MS & Co.'s violation of the Agreed Order, coupled with its systemic overwriting of emails after 12 months, justified an adverse inference against it. The Court ordered certain limited discovery. Responses to that discovery prompted CPH to orally amend its Adverse Inference Motion to seek more severe sanctions.

The Court held an evidentiary hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion on February

14, 2005. On March 1, 2005 it issued its Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Order"). In its current Motion, CPH argues that it has since learned that the discovery abuses addressed in the Adverse Inference Motion and Order represent only a sampling of discovery abuses perpetrated by MS & Co. and that the abuses have continued, unabated. It claims that these abuses, when taken as a whole, infect the entire case. To understand CPH's argument, it is necessary to go back to the beginning.

This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which CPH sold its 82% interest in the Coleman Company, Inc., to Sunbeam Corporation. MS & Co. served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000.00 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the cash portion of the deal.

CPH's Complaint¹ alleged claims against MS & Co. arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy, and sought damages of at least $485 million.

On May 12, 2003, MS & Co. was served with the Complaint and CPH's First Request for Production of Documents ("Request"). The Request sought, in essence, all documents connected with the Sunbeam deal. "Documents" was broadly defined, and specifically included items electronically stored. Concerned that, out of more than 8,000 pages of documents produced, it had received only a handful of emails, CPH on October 29, 2003, served its Motion to Compel Concerning E-Mails. That motion sought an order requiring MS & Co. to make a full investigation for email messages, including a search of magnetic tapes and hard drives; produce within 10 days all emails located; and produce a Rule 1.310 witness.

¹On February 17, 2005, CPH served its First Amended Complaint, which dropped the claims against MS & Co. for fraudulent and negligent misrepresentation, leaving only the aiding and abetting and conspiracy claims.

within 20 days "to describe the search that was conducted, identify any gaps in Morgan Stanley's production, and explain the reasons for any gaps."

In its Opposition to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel served November 4, 2003, MS & Co. argued that CPH wanted "this Court to order a massive safari into the remote corners of MS & Co.'s email backup systems" and represented that "(t)he restoration efforts demanded by CPH would cost at least hundreds of thousands of dollars and require several months to complete (emphasis in original). MS & Co. argued that CPH's "true" motive was to "harass and burden MS & Co. with unnecessary and costly discovery demands and attempt to smear MS & Co. with out-of-context recitations from other proceedings" because "CPH concedes that MS & Co. is only able to restore email from backup tapes from January 2000 and later - more than a year and a half after the events that allegedly gave rise to CPH's claims," (emphasis in original).

CPH's "concession" was based on representations like the kind made to it by MS & Co.'s counsel in a March 11, 2004 letter that suggested "(t)he burden on Morgan Stanley from . . . a wholesale restoration [of email back up tapes], both in terms of dollars and manpower would be enormous. Regardless of who performs the initial restoration, it would require hundreds (perhaps thousands) of attorney-hours to review millions of irrelevant and non-responsive e-mails . . ."²

In response to CPH's Motion to Compel, the parties agreed to reciprocal corporate

²Complaints about MS & Co.'s tactics are not new. See Ex. 196 [February 26, 2004, letter from EEOC to Hon. Ronald L. Ellis in EEOC/Schieffelin v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., et al., 01-CV-8421 (RMB) (RLE) (S.D.N.Y.): "(w)hen EEOC received [Morgan Stanley's] January 27, 2004 Responses to EEOC's Fifth Requests for Production of Documents which did not contain any e-mails, the parties communicated further. At that time, Morgan Stanley took the position that searching for e-mails would be burdensome both in regards to expense and the time it would take to respond. While the parties were in the process of attempting to work out these disputes, EEOC for the first time learned that [Morgan Stanley has] an easy, systematic ability to search for relevant documents. In a February 16, 2004, conversation with an IT representative of [Morgan Stanley], EEOC learned that [Morgan Stanley has] an e-mail system, which, while not yet fully comprehensive, was easily searchable on February 18, 2004, the close of discovery . . . which is certain to produce discoverable information highly relevant to EEOC's and Plaintiff-Intervenor's claims . . . After disclosing their state-of-the-art system to EEOC, [Morgan Stanley] dropped [its] assertion that the process was too expensive, but maintained that they refuse to search for e-mails because it is burdensome for attorneys to review large numbers of documents prior to production.")

depositions on the email issue. CPH deposed Robert Saunders on February 10, 2004.³ After completion of the corporate representative depositions, and unable to obtain MS & Co.'s agreement to a mutual email restoration protocol, CPH served its Motion for Permission to have Third Party Retrieve Morgan Stanley E-Mail and Other Responsive Documents, proposing that a third party vendor be given access to both parties' email systems for restoration at each party's expense. At the hearing on that Motion, CPH offered to split the expenses evenly. MS & Co. refused.

MS & Co.'s continued assertions that the email searches could be conducted only at enormous cost and would be fruitless because there were not backup tapes with email from 1997 and 1998 were confirmed to the Court by MS & Co.'s counsel, Thomas Clare of Kirkland & Ellis, at a hearing held March 19, 2004:

Mr. Scarola: Electronic records of e-mails that have been exchanged.

The Court: Do we agree that there has been such a request outstanding?

Mr. Clare: There has been a request outstanding.

The Court: And have you all objected?

Mr. Clare: From the beginning.

The Court: And what's the basis of the objection?

Mr. Clare: We objected to the breadth of the request that they're making. And to answer Your Honor's question directly – and the burden that is associated with it – that given the particular e-mail back-up tapes that are in existence five, six years after the fact of these transactions, that the scope of the e-mail request that they are seeking is improperly and unduly burdensome given the enormous costs that would be required, given the fact that the time period for which we have back-up tapes post dates the events by several years.

Unable to resolve the email issue, on April 9, 2004, CPH served its Motion to Compel ³Saunders provided misleading information in his deposition. See footnote 12, infra.

Concerning E-Mails and Other Electronic Documents. On the eve of the hearing on CPH's Motion to Compel, the parties reached an accommodation, and on April 16, 2004 the Court entered the Agreed Order. Under the Agreed Order, MS & Co. was required to (1) search the oldest full backup tape for each of 36 MS & Co. employees involved in the Sunbeam transaction; (2) review emails dated from February 15, 1998, through April 15, 1998, and emails containing any of 29 specified search terms such as "Sunbeam" and "Coleman" regardless of their date; (3) produce by May 14, 2004, all nonprivileged emails responsive to CPH's document requests; (4) give CPH a privilege log; and (5) certify its full compliance with the Agreed Order.

As required by the Agreed Order, MS & Co. produced about 1,300 pages of emails on May 14, 2004. It did not, however, certify compliance with the Agreed Order. After prompting by CPH, on June 23, 2004, MS & Co. served a certificate of compliance signed by Arthur Riel, an Executive Director and manager of its Law/Compliance IT Group.⁴

CPH got its first indication that the Agreed Order may have been violated in the late fall of 2004.

On November 17, 2004, Clare wrote Michael Brody of Jenner & Block, CPH's outside counsel, that MS & Co. had "discovered additional e-mail backup tapes . . ."; that "(t)he data on some of [the] newly discovered tapes has been restored;" that "we have re-run the searches described in [the Agreed Order]"; that "some responsive e-mails have been located as a result of that process"; and that "(w)e will produce the responsive documents to you as soon as the production is finalized."

On December 14, 2004, Brody wrote Clare back:

in [your November 17, 2004 letter], you state that Morgan Stanley located additional email backup tapes, and that you

⁴Though CPH would not learn for months that the certificate was false, and even then the magnitude of MS & Co.'s misrepresentations would not be admitted, MS & Co. personnel, including in-house counsel, knew the certification of compliance was false when made.

041693

would be producing documents soon. Within two days of that letter, you produced some emails to us. In your November 17, 2004 letter, however, you also indicated that "some of the backup tapes are still being restored." Have those backup tapes been restored? Have you found additional responsive emails? If so, when will Morgan Stanley produce those emails? How is it that the tapes were only recently located?

On December 17, 2004, Clare wrote back, telling Brody "(n)o additional responsive e-mails have been located since our November production."⁵

Brody wrote back to Clare December 30, 2004, noting the deficiencies in Clare's correspondence:

You do not inform us whether the review of the recently-located backup tapes still is ongoing. Please confirm that all email backup tapes from the relevant time period have been reviewed and all responsive emails have been produced. If the review still is proceeding, please let us know when the review will be completed.

Clare wrote back on January 11, 2005, telling Brody that the "restoration of e-mail backup tapes is ongoing. Restoration of the next set of backup tapes is estimated to be completed at the end of January. We intend to re-run the searches described in the agreed order at that time."

Concerned about Clare's lack of candor, on January 19, 2005 Brody wrote again:

I write in response to your January 11, 2005 letter concerning e-mails back-up tapes. Unfortunately, your letter raises more questions than it answers. As I requested in my December 14, 2004 letter, please explain the circumstances under which Morgan Stanley located these backup tapes and advise us of the date on which the tapes were located.

⁵Not only does this letter fail to answer Brody's legitimate questions, it implies that MS & Co. was still processing and reviewing emails from the newly found tapes. As we now know, though, no additional information was migrated to the archives between approximately August 18, 2004 and January 15, 2005. Of course "no additional responsive e-mails [would have been] located."

041494

Further, please explain your statement that "the next set of backup tapes" is scheduled to be restored "at the end of January." How many tapes will be restored by the end of January? When exactly in January will Morgan Stanley complete the process of restoring and searching these tapes for responsive documents? Are there other backup tapes that are not yet in the process of being restored? If so, please advise us of (a) the number of tapes that are not yet in the process of being restored; (b) the time period of the data contained on those tapes; and (c) Morgan Stanley's timetable for restoring and searching those tapes. In addition, please explain why those tapes are not yet in the process of being restored. Please also explain why Morgan Stanley cannot complete the restoration and searching of all remaining backup tapes before "the end of January." As you know, our trial is scheduled to begin on February 22, 2005.

We look forward your complete response to these questions no later than January 21, 2005 so that we can bring this matter to the Court's attention, if necessary.

Conforming to what was by now his usual stonewall tactic, Clare responded by letter dated January 21, 2005:

I write in response to your January 19, 2005 letter regarding Morgan Stanley's production of e-mails restored from backup tapes.

Morgan Stanley completed its initial production of restored e-mail messages on May 14, 2005. The May 2004 production was conducted in accordance with the agreed-upon order governing, and the searches that resulted in that production encompassed data from all of the backup tapes known to exist at the time. Subsequent to the May 2004 production, additional tapes were found in various locations at Morgan Stanley. The discovered tapes were not clearly labeled as to their contents, were not found in locations where e-mail backup tapes customarily were stored, and many of the tapes were in a different format than other e-mail backup tapes. In November 2004, once it was determined at least some of the discovered tapes contained recoverable e-mail data, Morgan Stanley re-ran the searches described in the agreed-upon order. Those searches resulted in Morgan Stanley's November 2004 production.

Morgan Stanley's efforts to restore the backup tapes discovered after the May 2004 production are ongoing. It is a time-consuming and painstaking process and, given the absence of clear labels or other index information for the backup tapes, there is no way for Morgan Stanley to know or accurately predict the type or time period of data that might be recovered from tapes that have yet to be restored. While Morgan Stanley cannot accurately estimate when all of the tapes will be restored or whether any recoverable data will be found on the remaining tapes, we understand from Morgan Stanley that, when the agreed-upon searches are run again at the end of January, those searches will include approximately one terabyte of additional data restored since the prior production.

On January 26, 2005, CPH served its Adverse Inference Motion, seeking sanctions based on MS & Co.'s disclosure of the newly found tapes. Hearing was scheduled for February 14, 2005. In preparation for that hearing, on February 3, 2005 the Court ordered MS & Co. to produce by noon on February 8, 2005 "(i) all documents to be referred to or relied on by any of the witnesses in his or her testimony; and (ii) all documents within MS & Co.'s care, custody, or control, addressing or related to the additional email backup tapes, including matters relating to the time or manner in which they were discovered; by whom they were discovered; who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were be restored and made searchable, including any correspondence to or from outside or prospective outside vendors."

later than May of 2004; the undisclosed discovery of the 738 8-millimeter backup tapes in 2002; the presence of unsearched data in the staging area; the discovery of 169 DLT tapes in January 2005; the discovery of more than 200 additional tapes on February 11 and 12, 2005; the discovery of a script error that had prevented MS & Co. from locating responsive email attachments; and discovery of another script error that had infected the ability to gather emails from Lotus Notes platform users.

In response to these deficiencies, the Court issued the Adverse Inference Order. That Order reversed the burden of proof on the aiding and abetting and conspiracy elements and included a statement of evidence of MS & Co.'s efforts to hide its emails to be read to the jury, as relevant to both its consciousness of guilt and the appropriateness of punitive damages. It specifically provided that "MS & Co. shall continue to use its best efforts to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and . . . February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search."⁶

It is now clear why MS & Co. was so unwilling to provide CPH with basic information about how and when the tapes were found or when production would be complete. First, candor would have required MS & Co. to admit that it had not done a good faith search for the oldest full backup tapes, and that Riel's certificate of compliance was false. Some unsearched tapes had been found by 2002; others had been found no later than May, 2004. Together, over 2,000 tapes had been found which were not searched prior to the May production. It is untrue that the tapes were "not in locations where e-mail backup tapes customarily were stored."

⁶Concerned that MS & Co. had been less than candid with both CPH and the Court, on February 4, 2004, the Court entered its Order on Coleman (Parent) Holding's ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Backup Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search, ordering MS & Co. to pay for a third party vendor to check its compliance with the Agreed Order. The Court previously found that the two scripts errors testified to by Allison Gorman at the February 14, 2005, hearing would not have been discovered or revealed without the threat that the third-party vendor would discover the errors. Given Ms. Gorman's testimony at the March 14, 2005, hearing, though, it now appears MS & Co. knew about the errors before the appointment of the third-party vendor. Consequently, the errors were only revealed, but not discovered, in response to the February 4, 2004, Order.

Second, MS & Co. desperately wanted to hide an active SEC inquiry into its email retention practices.^{7 8 9 10} Finally, MS & Co. did not want to admit the existence of the historical email archive, which would expose the false representations it had made to the Court and used to induce CPH to agree to entry of the Agreed Order.^{11 12}

⁷On December 17, 2003, CPH served its Third Request for Production seeking "(a)ll materials and documents submitted to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), received from the SEC, or reflecting communications with the SEC in connection with any investigation, inquiry, or examination concerning or relating to Morgan Stanley's policies and/or procedures with regard to the retention, storage, deletion, and/or back-up of electronic mail (emails) . . ." On October 12, 2004, CPH served its Request for Supplemental Documents seeking to bring MS & Co.'s document production current, requesting "(a)ll documents not previously provided by MS & Co. that are responsive to any Request for Production of Documents that CPH previously has served upon MS & Co. in the litigation, including documents obtained by MS & Co. or its counsel after the date of MS & Co.'s prior productions." No SEC documents were produced in response to either request; no privilege log was generated. On other privilege logs generated in response to court orders, MS & Co. did not show the SEC on the distribution portion of the log. See March 9, 2005 Order Following in Camera Inspection (Riel/SEC Documents) footnotes 1, 2. See, also, footnote 15, infra. Kirland & Ellis, outside counsel for MS & Co. in this litigation, represents MS & Co. in the SEC's inquiry into its email retention practices.

⁸MS & Co. manipulated the unhinging of the SEC's email investigation from the IPO litigation in January, 2005, to conceal the email issues as long as possible.

⁹It is now apparent that MS & Co. chose deliberately to keep its affidavits concerning the informal SEC inquiry submitted to support its privilege claims vague, despite two requests from the Court seeking specific information. See February 28, 2005 Order (Release of Exhibits).

¹⁰See February 25, 2005 Order on Morgan Stanley's Objections to Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc.'s Notice to Produce at Hearing and Motion for Protective Order and March 4, 2005 Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production.

¹¹While MS & Co. contends that its representations to the Court that it would cost "hundreds of thousands of dollars" to search the backup tapes and that there was no pre-2000 backup tapes were not false, they were deliberately misleading: MS & Co. never had an intention to search the back up tapes to respond to the requests and some of the year 2000 backup tapes backed up email back to 1997.

In 2001, MS & Co. decided to create the email archive. By June, 2003, it had decided that the archive should have two components. First, MS & Co. wanted to create an archive that captured and stored email as it was generated. Second, MS & Co. wanted to add historical data to the archive. That task involved searching for all email backup tapes containing historical emails; sending those tapes to an outside processor; loading the processed tapes into a staging area; and migrating the stored data from the staging area onto the archive. As we now know, archive searches are quick and inexpensive. They do not cost "hundred of thousands of dollars" or "take several months." The restrictions imposed by the Agreed Order were not needed.

¹²On February 10, 2004, Robert Saunders, an executive director of IT for MS & Co., was deposed. He testified that in January, 2003, MS & Co. had put into effect the email archive system. When specifically asked whether the new email archive system would include prior backups or only going forward backups, he testified that "(t)he way it was built was for going forward backup." He was next asked whether "(w)ith respect to backup dated January 2001 and previously, does Morgan Stanley have any new capabilities to restore and search e-mail?" After counsel interposed a vagueness objection, he answered "(t)here are no new capabilities to search that e-mail." That testimony was so misleading as to be false. As Saunders well knew, since he was on the team responsible, the "live" email capture portion of the archive was already operational. The migration of the historical data to the archive was expected to be completed by April of 2004, just two months after his deposition.

MS & Co.'s wrongful conduct has continued unabated.¹³ Since the February 14, 2005, hearing, it has come to light that:

- Only two whole and four partial tapes from the Brooklyn tapes had been migrated to the archive and were thus searched for the November, 2004, production. MS & Co. sought to hide this information to create the impression that all the produced documents came from the Brooklyn tapes, rather than reveal that the production came from material that had migrated from the staging area to the archive since the May, 2004, production or some other, as yet undisclosed, source.¹⁴
- Contrary to MS & Co.'s counsel's November 17, 2004, letter to CPH, none of the November, 2004 production came from the "newly found" tapes. MS & Co. carefully crafted its responses to inquiries about the November, 2004, production to avoid both disclosure of the existence of the archive and outright lying.
- The scripts MS & Co. used to process emails into its archive caused the bodies of some messages to be truncated. MS & Co. discovered this problem on February 13, 2005, but did not tell the Court about it until March 14, 2005.
- A migration issue caused about 5% of email harvested by NDCI from the backup tapes not to be captured in the archive, based on testing of a representative sample of tapes. MS & Co. told the SEC about this problem on February 24, 2005, but failed to tell CPH or the Court.
- As of June 7, 2004, only 120 out of 143 SDLT tapes had been processed into the archive.
- An analysis requested by the SEC showed that, based on a representative sample, 10% of backup tapes were overwritten after January, 2001.

¹³MS & Co. sought to use the entry of the Adverse Inference Order as a shield against further inquiry into its email abuses, arguing that the matter was closed by the Adverse Inference Order. It previously used this tactic with the SEC, arguing that the December 3, 2003 Cease and Desist Order shielded it from other sanctions for email retention failures. See Ex. 14 [February 10, 2005 letter from outside counsel for MS & Co. to SEC]

¹⁴MS & Co. argued at the March 14 and 15, 2005 hearing that there were only 13 unique, new emails contained in the November 2004 production when compared to the May 2004 production. Nine of those emails, however, were originally given to MS & Co.'s lawyers for responsiveness review by the IT staff for the May 2004 production. No explanation of why they were not produced in May was offered. This is particularly concerning given the large number of documents Ms. Gorman testified the search parameters found compared with the relatively small number found responsive and produced after review by counsel.

- A software error caused blind carbon copies not to be captured in the archive process. MS & Co. told the SEC about this problem on February 24, 2005. MS & Co. did not tell CPH or the Court.
- A software error caused the searches to be hyper case-sensitive, resulting in a failure to capture all emails. MS & Co. knew of the problem as of December, 2004, but did not tell CPH or the Court. The problem was not purportedly fixed until March, 2005.
- A script error caused the archive to have problems pulling group email in Lotus Notes.
- MS & Co. provided sworn testimony at the February 14, 2005, hearing that it had located 600 gigabytes of data, while contemporaneously telling the SEC it had located a terabyte of data. A gigabyte represents 20,000 to 100,000 pages. Incredibly, MS & Co.'s witness on this point, Allison Gorman, testified on March 14, 2005, that it was simply a "terminology" issue that she did not choose to correct because it could cause "confusion."
- CPH requested MS & Co. to produce responses it had made to third-parties in civil, criminal, or administrative proceedings describing limitations on MS & Co.'s ability to produce emails and all notices in such proceedings that MS & Co. had newly discovered backup tapes containing email. MS & Co. objected, arguing that there were over 300 separate proceedings, involving over 70 outside law firms, and that the cost of compliance would be too great. On March 2, 2005, the Court ordered the production, after shortening the time period involved, and required production within 12 hours after counsel's review of each item for responsiveness but, in any event, within 10 days. At the time MS & Co. objected to CPH's request as unduly burdensome, it knew of its Wells submission to the SEC made on February 10, 2005. Kirkland and Ellis, co-counsel here, was co-counsel for MS & Co. in that SEC proceeding. Consequently, it appears MS & Co.'s real concern was not that expressed to the Court, but was based on its realization that compliance would reveal the existence of the SEC inquiry into its email retention policy and MS & Co.'s efforts to keep the existence of that investigation secret. MS & Co. violated the Court's March 2, 2005, Order on Morgan Stanley's Responses and Objections to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Notice to Produce at Hearing requiring it to disclose items responsive to CPH's Request for Production within 12 hours of review for responsiveness by waiting days, not hours, to produce the Wells submission.

- MS & Co.'s failure to produce or log the SEC documents violated the Court's February 3, 2005, Order.¹⁵
- James Doyle's, the Executive Director of MS & Co.'s Law Division, declaration that he did not learn of additional unsearched backup tapes until the end of October, 2004, was intended to mislead CPH and the Court. Obviously, MS & Co. sought to create the implication in the declaration that no one in the Law Division knew of the backup tapes before then. Instead, both Soo-Mi Lee, Doyle's associate, and James Cusick, Doyle's superior, knew of the tapes no later than June 7, 2004.
- In-house counsel for MS & Co. knew as of June 7, 2004, that nearly a third of the restored backup tapes did not contain email, implying they may have been recycled in violation of the December 3, 2002 Cease and Desist Order. They did not tell CPH or the Court.
- MS & Co.'s searches looked for only two types of emails. There are other types of emails that were not included in the searches. CPH did not learn of this deficiency until March 13, 2005.
- MS & Co. improperly failed to produce 125 documents required to be produced by the Court's February 3, 2005, Order Specially Setting Hearing which required limited discovery be made in connection with the February 14, 2005, hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion.
- MS & Co. improperly withheld 13 documents required to be produced by the Court's March 4, 2005, Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production.
- An additional 282 tapes were found on February 23 and 25, 2005; CPH was not told of the discovery until March 13, 2005.
- An additional 3,536 tapes were discovered on February 23, 2005, in a security room.
- An additional 2,718 tapes were found at Recall, MS & Co.'s third party off-site storage vendor, on March 3, 2005.
- An additional 389 tapes were found March 2 through March 5, 2005. CPH was not told

¹⁵The Court previously rejected MS & Co.'s argument that the January 14, 2005, email exchange between its outside and in-house counsel was not required to be produced under the February 3, 2005, Order Specially Setting Hearing because it referred to the "documents issue" and not specifically to the backup tapes. See March 16, 2005 Order on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Disqualify Plaintiff's Counsel Searcy, Denney, Scarola, Barnhart & Shipley, P.A. and Jenner & Block, LLC. MS & Co.'s insistence on a narrow interpretation of the February 3, 2005, Order is not particularly sympathetic, when the only reason that Order confined production to the backup tape issue was because MS & Co. had failed to notify the Court of the other deficiencies in its certificate of compliance.

until March 13, 2005.

On March 4, 2005, the Court entered its Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production, which ordered MS & Co. to produce by 3:00 p.m. on March 7, 2005, all items within its care, custody, or control dealing with the Riel/SEC investigation, other than documents representing communications between or among MS & Co. inside and outside counsel that were not copied to anyone other than counsel. MS & Co. sought to discredit Riel and thus distance itself from the false June 23, 2004 certificate of compliance; in doing so, it sought to hide Riel's whistle blower status and the existence of an SEC investigation into whether MS & Co. employees sought kick backs from third party vendors; whether MS & Co. employees were improperly pressured into dealing with third-party vendors who may provide business to MS & Co.; and whether MS & Co. continued to overwrite backup tapes contrary to the SEC's December 3, 2002, Cease and Desist Order.

A script error prevented the insertion of some emails into the archive. MS & Co. produced over 4,600 pages of emails on March 21, 2005, some of which it suggested may have been located on correction of the error; alternatively, it suggested the emails may have been located by NDCI as part of its efforts to verify MS & Co.'s searches.

MS & Co.'s discovery abuses have not been confined to its email production.

William Strong is a MS & Co. managing director and was one of the principal players for it in the Sunbeam deal. He took credit for the fees generated. On May 9, 2003, CPH requested a copy of "(a)ll documents concerning employment contracts, performance evaluations, and/or personnel files (including without limitation any documents that describe or discuss [his] training, experience, competence, and accomplishments) . . ." MS & Co. asserted that the requested documents were not relevant and that production "would unnecessarily infringe on the privacy interests of [Strong]." On March 15, 2004, the Court ordered MS & Co. to produce "(a)ll references (positive or negative) to [Strong's] truthfulness, veracity, or moral turpitude." Some portions of Strong's evaluations were produced in response to that order. Those evaluations noted Strong's colleagues' reservations about his candor and ethics. Two of his evaluators, Joseph Perella and Tarek Abdel-Meguid, were deposed, when some relatively vague testimony about the bases for those conclusions was offered. It now appears Strong was facing criminal prosecution in Italy for complicity in bribery while he was working on the Sunbeam transaction, which his evaluators knew, and that MS & Co. purposely

16div-031341

withheld that information from CPH and the Court.¹⁶

Even once CPH independently discovered evidence of Strong's indictment in Italy, MS & Co. sought to shield its files from discovery. It claimed that virtually all of the documents it had were privileged under joint defense agreements in place between it, Strong, and Saloman Brothers, Strong's employer at the time of the incident. As the Court's March 10, 2005 Order Following In Camera Inspection (Strong) details, the documents MS & Co. relied on to support that position, and sought to prevent CPH from obtaining, reflect no such agreement.

The other discovery abuses and misrepresentations by MS & Co. other than those involving its email production practices are outlined in CPH's Chronology of Discovery Abuses by Defendant served March 1, 2005, and would take a volume to recite. They include:

- failing to provide the information retained by MS & Co.'s internal document management system pertaining to MS & Co.'s work for Sunbeam; falsely representing to the Court that no useful information was contained in that information; and producing a Rule 1.310 representative who had made an insufficient inquiry into authenticity, business record status, and authorship of documents; see February 28, 2005 Order on CPH's Motion to Deem Certain Documents Admissible and for Sanctions due to Morgan Stanley's Disregard of Court Order;
- when faced with contempt proceedings for violating the Stipulated Confidentiality Order by providing a copy of a settlement agreement between CPH and Arthur Andersen to other counsel, representing to the Court that the law firm of Kellogg, Huber was retained to handle the "Andersen aspects" of this litigation because of a conflict between Andersen and Kirkland & Ellis; Mark Hansen, a partner at Kellogg, Huber, testified that his firm was hired as co-counsel for all aspects of the case;
- providing answers to interrogatories signed by a corporate representative who performed insufficient verification of the responses;

¹⁶MS & Co. originally argued that documents concerning the Italian proceedings were not in Strong's "personnel file" and so were not required to be produced in response to CPH's initial request. MS & Co.'s practice of filing damaging information about an employee other than in his personnel file and then claiming it was not included in the request is about as convincing as its argument that, since it has a corporate directive not to keep drafts of documents once they are in final form, document drafts cannot be business records exempt from hearsay because they are not "kept in the course of a regularly conducted business activity." See Fla. Stat. §90.803 (6) (a). In any event, there was no excuse for not producing its records of the Italian proceedings once the Court's March 15, 2004 Order was entered.

- routinely asserting unfounded privilege claims;¹⁷ and
- failing to timely comply with the Court's orders; for example, MS & Co. did not produce Strong's 1994 Performance Evaluation until the afternoon of March 15, 2005, though it was obviously included in the Court's March 15, 2004 Order. The failure cannot be excused as oversight since, when CPH specifically asked for the 1994 evaluation in the spring of 2004, MS & Co.'s counsel said it was withheld as non-responsive; see, also, Ex. 197, 198.

In sum, MS & Co. has deliberately and contumaciously violated numerous discovery orders, including the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order; February 3, 2005 Order Specially Setting Hearing; and the March 4, 2005 Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production. At the February 14, 2005, hearing on CPH's Adverse Inference Motion, it chose to hide information about its violations and coach witnesses to avoid any mention of additional, undisclosed problems with its compliance with the Agreed Order. Implicit in the requirement that MS & Co. certify compliance with the Agreed Order was the requirement to disclose impediments to its ability to so certify. As outlined in this Order, MS & Co. employees, and not just counsel, have participated in the discovery abuses. The prejudice to CPH from these failings cannot be cured. Even if all the script errors have been located and corrected, and MS & Co. has failed to show they have, and even if all of the email backup tapes have now been located, and MS & Co. has failed to show they have, the searches cannot be completed in time. The other discovery abuses outlined call into doubt all of MS & Co.'s discovery responses. The judicial system cannot function this way. Based on the foregoing and on the Court's March 1, 2005 Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment is Granted, in part. See Robinson v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 887 So. 2d 328 (Fla. 2004); Mercer v. Raine, 443 So. 2d 944 (Fla. 1983); Precision Tune Auto Care, Inc. v.

¹⁷For example, MS & Co. produced over 260 documents dealing with the Strong investigation over which it had previously claimed privilege once the Court announced its intention to conduct an in camera review; the Court found another 200 documents were not privileged after conducting its review, by its March 10, 2005 Order.

A copy of a redacted Amended Complaint is attached as Exhibit A. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Court shall read to the jury a Statement similar to that attached as Exhibit A to the Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, but incorporating the relevant additional findings of this Order, and the jury will be instructed that it may consider those facts in determining whether MS & Co. sought to conceal its offensive conduct when determining whether an award of punitive damages is appropriate. See General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002), rev. den. 851 So. 2d 728 (Fla. 2003). Counsel are each invited to submit proposed Statements. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that CPH shall be entitled to an award of reasonable fees and costs incurred as a result of the Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment and the violations of Court orders recited herein. The amount shall be determined at an evidentiary hearing following trial. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that MS & Co. is relieved of any future obligations to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and the February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back-Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the pro hac vice admission of Thomas Clare is revoked. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the portions of CPH's Motion for Correction and Clarification of Order on CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference that seek to amend the body of that Order to correct clerical and spelling errors, as agreed to by counsel, is Granted, and the corrections deemed made to the body of the Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, by interlineation. In all other respects the remainder of the Motion for Correction and Clarification is declared moot.

In April 1997, Morgan Stanley began serving as Sunbeam's investment banker. Morgan Stanley originally attempted to find someone to buy Sunbeam. When Morgan Stanley was unable to find a buyer, Morgan Stanley developed a strategy for Sunbeam to use its fraudulently-inflated stock to acquire a large company that Sunbeam would own and operate. Then, trading on Morgan Stanley's relationships with CPH's senior officers, Morgan Stanley found

Coleman for Sunbeam. At the time of the sale to Sunbeam, Coleman was a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the worldwide outdoor recreation market, with annual revenues in excess of $1 billion.

ION shares

After Sunbeam announced plans to acquire Coleman, Morgan Stanley agreed to underwrite a $750 million debenture offering for Sunbeam. Sunbeam needed the proceeds of that debenture offering to complete the acquisition of Coleman. As Sunbeam's investment banker and as the sole underwriter for the $750 million debenture offering, Morgan Stanley received detailed and specific information concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and performance. Morgan Stanley received information that directly contradicted Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's assertions to CPH that Sunbeam had undergone a successful turnaround and that its financial performance had dramatically improved. By no later than March 18, 1998, Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were only 50% of January and February 1997 sales, and Morgan Stanley also knew that the shortfall was caused by Sunbeam's practice of accelerating sales which otherwise would have occurred in 1998 in order to boost Sunbeam's income in 1997. Although Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam previously had advised CPH that Sunbeam's sales were running ahead of analysts' expectations for the first quarter, Morgan Stanley decided not to correct those material misrepresentations. Instead, in March 1998, Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam in concealing the problems with Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales.

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") directly or indirectly owned 44,067,520 shares — or approximately 82% — of Coleman prior to the transactions at issue. On March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired CPH's interest in Coleman. Sunbeam paid for the Coleman shares with 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam common stock and other consideration.

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") is a highly sophisticated investment banking firm that provides a wide range of financial and securities services. Among other things, Morgan Stanley provides advice on mergers and acquisitions and raises capital in the equity and debt markets. Morgan Stanley served as Sunbeam's investment banker and as the underwriter of securities issued by Sunbeam in connection with the events at issue herein.

041510

Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam") was a publicly-traded company headquartered in Delray Beach, Florida. Sunbeam designed and manufactured small household appliances and outdoor consumer products, which it marketed under the Sunbeam and Oster brand names. Sunbeam filed a bankruptcy petition under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in February 2001.

Albert Dunlap ("Dunlap") was the Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam from July 1996 until June 1998 when he was terminated by Sunbeam's Board of Directors.

Russell Kersh ("Kersh") was the Executive Vice President of Sunbeam from July 1996 until June 1998 when he was terminated by Sunbeam's Board of Directors.

Arthur Andersen LLP ("Andersen") provided outside accounting services to Sunbeam through its West Palm Beach, Florida office. Andersen auditors provided information concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and earnings to Morgan Stanley.

Sunbeam designed and manufactured outdoor and household consumer products, which it marketed under the Sunbeam and Oster brand names. Sunbeam's products included small kitchen appliances, humidifiers, electric blankets, and grills. Many of the country's leading retail stores, including Wal-Mart, Target, and Home Depot, were among Sunbeam's major customers.

Despite Sunbeam's well-known brands and strong customer base, its financial performance was disappointing. In 1994, Sunbeam earned $1.30 per share. In 1995, Sunbeam's earnings declined to $0.61 per share. In 1996, Sunbeam's earnings continued to suffer. On March 22, 1996, Sunbeam issued an early warning that its first quarter earnings would be well under analysts' expectations and down from first quarter 1995. Shortly after issuing the March 22 earnings warning, Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer and two of Sunbeam's directors announced their resignations. Less than a week later, Sunbeam announced that its first quarter 1996 earnings had plunged 42% from first quarter 1995 levels. Sunbeam also announced that its second quarter 1996 earnings would be lower than its second quarter 1995 earnings.

Sunbeam's disappointing earnings caused its stock price to plummet. During 1995, the price at which Sunbeam's stock traded fell 40%, from a high of $25-1/2. In 1996, Sunbeam's stock price continued to decline until it reached a low of $12-1/4 in July.

On July 18, 1996, Sunbeam's board of directors hired Albert Dunlap as Sunbeam's new Chief Executive Officer. Based upon brief terms as Chief Executive Officer of other publicly traded companies, including Scott Paper Company ("Scott Paper"), Dunlap was viewed as a "turnaround specialist" — that is, someone who could take a poorly performing company and significantly increase its value by "turning around" its financial performance. Because Dunlap touted the benefits from firing large numbers of employees and closing large numbers of plants, Dunlap became widely known as "Chainsaw Al." Dunlap lived in Boca Raton, Florida, and one of his first tasks at Sunbeam was to consolidate the company's six headquarters into one located in Delray Beach, Florida.

Immediately after joining Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Kersh as Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer. Kersh had teamed with Dunlap for over 15 years, serving as a senior executive with Dunlap at other companies, including Scott Paper. Dunlap also brought in several other hand-picked executives to make up his senior management team.

Dunlap and his senior management team entered into employment agreements with Sunbeam. Under those agreements, Dunlap and his senior management team stood to make tens of millions of dollars if they were able to boost Sunbeam's apparent value and then sell Sunbeam to another company at a premium.

In order to convince other companies that they should want to purchase Sunbeam, Dunlap needed to improve Sunbeam's reported financial performance quickly and dramatically. It was, of course, no small task to transform Sunbeam from a poorly performing company, with weak sales and declining profits, into a strong company with growing sales and soaring profits. In fact, as the world later learned, Dunlap did not achieve that change in Sunbeam's fortunes. Instead, Dunlap created the illusion of a dramatic turnaround at Sunbeam by engaging in what SEC officials subsequently described as a "case study" in financial fraud.

Dunlap had a three-step plan at Sunbeam. In the first step, Dunlap overstated Sunbeam's financial problems so that Sunbeam appeared to be in worse shape than it really was. After making Sunbeam look worse, Dunlap moved to step two, where he made Sunbeam look more valuable than it really was by inflating Sunbeam's sales and engaging in other earnings manipulations. In step three, Dunlap planned to sell Sunbeam to another company before it became apparent that the "improved" results were fictional. By doing so, Dunlap would make tens of millions of dollars and would be free to blame his successor for any subsequent problems.

Dunlap began implementing his strategy soon after his arrival at Sunbeam in 1996. Claiming to be engaged in a clean-up of Sunbeam's financial problems, Dunlap recorded artificially high reserves and booked expenses that should not have been recorded until later periods. Both of those actions made Sunbeam's financial condition appear worse than it really was, thus lowering the benchmark for measuring Sunbeam's performance in future years.

The overstated reserves also provided Dunlap a means by which he could inflate Sunbeam's future results during the second step of his plan. Dunlap later could "re-evaluate" and release millions of dollars from the overstated reserves to boost income in later periods. The income from released reserves contributed to the illusion of a rapid turnaround in Sunbeam's performance. Using inflated reserves to enhance income in future periods is a fraudulent practice and overstated reserves are commonly called "cookie jar" reserves.

After making Sunbeam look worse than it really was in 1996, Dunlap manipulated Sunbeam's sales and expenses in 1997 to create the false appearance of quarter after quarter improvement in financial performance. For example, Dunlap caused Sunbeam to inflate its sales by engaging in phony "bill and hold" sales. Under this practice, Sunbeam recognized revenues from "sales," even though customers did not actually pay for or even take delivery of the products, which continued to sit in Sunbeam's own warehouses. Although Sunbeam recorded the "bill and hold" sales as if they were current sales, they were, in reality, simply sales stolen from future quarters. In 1997, phony "bill and hold" sales added approximately $29 million in sales and $4.5 million in income.

Throughout 1997, Sunbeam also engaged in a sales practice known as "channel stuffing" — accelerating sales that otherwise would occur in a later period, sometimes by offering steep discounts or other extraordinary customer inducements. On the grand scale employed by Sunbeam, channel stuffing inevitably leads to major sales shortfalls in later periods when "stuffed" customers simply stop buying. Sunbeam's senior sales officer referred to Sunbeam's unsustainable practice of inflating performance through accelerated sales as the "doom loop."

Dunlap further "enhanced" Sunbeam's income in 1997 by causing Sunbeam to record a "profit" of $10 million from a sham sale of its warranty and spare parts business. Dunlap also made Sunbeam appear to be more successful than it really was by reaching into the "cookie jar," reversing inflated reserves, and recording $35 million as income. Sunbeam's 1997 profit margins also looked better than they really were because Dunlap already had recorded millions of dollars of 1997 expenses in 1996.

In October 1997, Dunlap announced that Sunbeam's "turnaround" was complete. Compared to the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam's third quarter 1997 performance was remarkable. In the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam had reported a loss of $18.1 million. In the third quarter of 1997, however, Sunbeam reported earnings of $34.5 million — an extraordinary turnaround from substantial losses to hefty profits. Sunbeam's combined results for the first three quarters showed dramatic improvement as well. Sunbeam reported that its profits for the first nine months were up tenfold over the same period the year before — from $6.5 million in 1996 to $67.7 million in 1997. Sunbeam's reversal of fortune caused a spectacular increase in the price of its stock. In July 1996, when Dunlap was hired, Sunbeam's shares traded at $12-1/4. By October 1997, Sunbeam's shares had risen to $49-13/16.

With steps one and two successfully completed, Dunlap was more than eager to complete the final step of his scheme: to sell Sunbeam to another company and collect tens of millions of dollars for himself before the outside world could learn the truth about Sunbeam's phony "turnaround." To accomplish that third and final step, Dunlap needed an investment banking firm

When Dunlap announced in early 1997 that he would begin interviewing investment bankers, Morgan Stanley immediately began pursuing the job. Although Morgan Stanley had no previous relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's senior executives, William Strong, had worked closely with Dunlap on other large transactions between 1986 and 1993, when Strong was employed by Salomon Brothers.

01/15/90

Morgan Stanley knew that it was competing with other investment bankers, including Mark Davis, for Dunlap's business. Davis was the head of the mergers and acquisitions department at Chase Securities and had worked previously with Strong at Salomon Brothers. Davis had a very strong relationship with Dunlap, and Davis had served as Dunlap's investment advisor on numerous transactions, including Dunlap's sale of Scott Paper. Shortly after arriving at Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Davis to handle the sale of Sunbeam's furniture business.

Morgan Stanley put together a team headed by its Vice Chairman, Bruce Fiedorek, and Strong. Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley's personnel traveled to Sunbeam's offices in Delray Beach, Florida to study Sunbeam and woo Dunlap. After months of uncompensated work, in September 1997, Morgan Stanley finally persuaded Dunlap to name Morgan Stanley as Sunbeam's exclusive investment banker. Dunlap instructed Morgan Stanley to find a buyer for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley knew that if it failed to deliver a major transaction, Morgan Stanley would not be compensated for the extensive work it had performed for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley also knew that Davis and Chase Securities were standing by — ready and willing to reclaim their position as Dunlap's investment banker of choice.

Throughout the fall of 1997, Morgan Stanley aggressively searched for a buyer for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley put together extensive and detailed materials to use in marketing Sunbeam to potential buyers. Morgan Stanley pitched the transaction to more than 10 companies — including Gillette, Colgate, Sara Lee, Rubbermaid, Whirlpool, and Black & Decker — that Morgan Stanley hoped might have an interest in acquiring Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley, however, was not able to find a buyer.

As 1998 approached, the pressure on Dunlap increased. Dunlap was aware that Sunbeam would be unable to sustain the appearance of a successful turnaround in 1998 because Sunbeam had stolen sales from 1998 to boost 1997's numbers and the "cookie jar" reserves had been depleted. Dunlap needed a way to conceal Sunbeam's phony turnaround until a buyer could be found. Morgan Stanley provided the solution to Dunlap's problem.

Morgan Stanley knew that its failure to find a buyer for Sunbeam could prove fatal to the relationship it had worked so hard to establish with Dunlap. As the pressure on Dunlap increased, the pressure on Morgan Stanley increased as well. Although Morgan Stanley was not able to find a buyer for Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley responded with a plan that would allow Dunlap to conceal his fraud. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam acquire other companies, using Sunbeam's stock, which was fraudulently inflated, as the "currency" that would be used to pay for the acquisitions.

Morgan Stanley's strategy was doubly deceptive. First, Morgan Stanley's acquisition strategy would allow Dunlap to consolidate Sunbeam's results with those of the newly-acquired companies. That would help Dunlap camouflage Sunbeam's results and make it difficult to detect any shortfall in Sunbeam's performance. Dunlap simply could label any problems that were detected as attributable to the poor performance of the acquired companies or as a temporary "blip" caused by the distraction of integrating the acquired companies with Sunbeam. Second, Morgan Stanley's strategy would allow Dunlap to take new massive restructuring charges (purportedly relating to the acquisitions) and thus create more "cookie jar" reserves that could be tapped to bolster the future earnings of the combined companies.

Morgan Stanley identified Coleman as one of the key potential acquisition targets. CPH owned 82% of Coleman's stock. Morgan Stanley searched the ranks of its investment bankers to locate those with the best access to CPH. Drawing on relationships between some of Morgan Stanley's investment bankers and senior CPH officers, Morgan Stanley set about trying to persuade CPH to sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam — and, most importantly, to accept Sunbeam stock as consideration.

Morgan Stanley laid the groundwork for a meeting to take place in December 1997 in Palm Beach, Florida between Dunlap and Kersh and representatives of CPH. In advance of the Palm Beach meeting, Morgan Stanley provided materials to Sunbeam to prepare Sunbeam for the meeting. Morgan Stanley also met with Kersh and other Sunbeam personnel to prepare for the Palm Beach meeting. However, Dunlap nearly scuttled Morgan Stanley's carefully crafted plan at the outset. During the December 1997 Palm Beach meeting, when CPH rejected Dunlap's initial all-stock offer, Dunlap became so angry that he cursed and ranted at the CPH representatives and stormed out.

Dunlap's tantrum appeared to kill any chance that CPH would sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley, however, worked to revive the discussions. Drawing again on Morgan Stanley's relationships with CPH officers, Morgan Stanley was able to restart the discussions with CPH with the promise that Dunlap would be kept away from the negotiating table. Thereafter, Morgan Stanley, through Managing Directors Strong, James Stynes, and Robert Kitts, led the discussions with CPH on Sunbeam's behalf.

041519

Morgan Stanley knew that it had to persuade CPH not only to sell Coleman, but also to accept Sunbeam stock — ultimately, 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock — as a major part of the purchase price. During the course of negotiations, Morgan Stanley prepared and provided CPH with false financial and business information about Sunbeam designed to create the appearance that Sunbeam was prospering and that Sunbeam's stock had great value. For example, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with false 1996 and 1997 sales and revenue figures, as well as false projections that Sunbeam could not expect to achieve. Together, in face-to-face discussions, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam assured CPH that (a) Sunbeam would meet or exceed its first quarter 1998 earnings estimates; (b) analysts' 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct; and (c) Sunbeam's plan to earn $2.20 per share in 1998 was easily achievable and probably low. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam also falsely assured CPH that Sunbeam's "early buy" sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues. However, the "early buy" program was one of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs — and the devastating effects of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs already had begun to materialize at Sunbeam. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were down drastically, although those results were not disclosed to CPH or the public. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together specifically advised CPH that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "tracking fine" and running ahead of analysts' estimates.

041520

On February 27, 1998, Sunbeam's Board of Directors met at Morgan Stanley's offices to consider the purchase of Coleman, as negotiated by Morgan Stanley.

At the February 27, 1998 meeting, Morgan Stanley made an extensive presentation to Sunbeam's Board concerning the proposed transaction. Numerous Morgan Stanley representatives, including Managing Directors Strong, Kitts, Stynes, Ruth Porat, and Vikram Pandit, attended the meeting.

Morgan Stanley presented Sunbeam's board with Morgan Stanley's opinion on the value of Coleman. Using a discounted cash flow analysis, which Morgan Stanley represented was the best gauge of stand-alone economic value and the best method of capturing the unique value of Coleman, Morgan Stanley valued CPH's Coleman stock at a range of $31.06 to $53.24 per Coleman share. CPH's 44,067,520 Coleman shares were worth, therefore, between $1.369 billion and $2.346 billion.

Following Morgan Stanley's presentation, Sunbeam's Board of Directors voted to acquire Coleman on the very favorable terms that Morgan Stanley had negotiated.

Morgan Stanley spent the following weekend developing Sunbeam's public relations strategy to announce the Coleman transaction. Morgan Stanley scripted the points for Dunlap to make in a conference call with analysts. Morgan Stanley also crafted a list of "key media messages" for Dunlap to use in his communications with the press. On Sunday, March 1, 1998, Morgan Stanley spoke with a reporter for the Wall Street Journal to inform him that Sunbeam would announce its acquisition of Coleman the following morning.

041521

Sunbeam announced its acquisition of Coleman on Monday, March 2, 1998, prior to the opening of the financial markets. Consistent with Morgan Stanley's valuation, investors viewed Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman — and the price that Sunbeam had paid — very favorably. The day before the acquisition was announced, Sunbeam's stock closed at $41-3/4. In the days following Sunbeam's announcement of the transaction, Sunbeam's stock rose approximately 25%, to a high of $52.

Dunlap knew that Sunbeam needed to raise funds to pay the cash portion of the acquisition consideration. Dunlap also knew that Sunbeam needed cash to purchase two other smaller companies in addition to Coleman. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam raise funds through a $500 million offering of convertible subordinated debentures. To assure the offering's success, Morgan Stanley lent its name to the offering. Indeed, Morgan Stanley agreed to serve as the sole underwriter for the offering.

The money raised from the sale of the debentures was used by Sunbeam to complete the acquisition of Coleman.

Unbeknownst to CPH or the public, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a small fraction of the financial community's expectations for the quarter. If Dunlap could consolidate Sunbeam's sales with Coleman's sales, Dunlap knew that he could obscure Sunbeam's actual first quarter sales. As a result, Dunlap was especially anxious to complete the acquisition of Coleman before Sunbeam announced its first quarter 1998 sales. Indeed, the success of the scheme depended upon Sunbeam's ability to complete the Coleman acquisition before Sunbeam's first quarter results were announced. To satisfy Dunlap's objectives, Morgan Stanley moved up the launch date of the offering.

The debentures were marketed to investors at a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls arranged by Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley prepared and distributed a memorandum for its sales force to use in marketing the debentures to investors. Morgan Stanley also developed the script for Dunlap and Kersh to deliver during the road show. In those materials, Morgan Stanley misrepresented Sunbeam's financial performance and emphasized Dunlap's purported "turnaround" accomplishments.

Morgan Stanley launched the debenture offering with a research analyst presentation to the Morgan Stanley sales force. As part of Morgan Stanley's growing relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's top-rated research analysts planned to initiate equity coverage of Sunbeam. That Morgan Stanley analyst had modeled values for Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman that were higher than even Sunbeam's management had predicted.

Although Morgan Stanley initially planned to sell $500 million worth of debentures, Morgan Stanley's efforts were so successful that the size of the offering was increased to $750 million on March 19, 1998 — the day of the last road show. The debentures were sold to investors nationwide, including investors based in Florida.

As Sunbeam's investment banker and the sole underwriter for the debenture offering, Morgan Stanley had a duty to investigate Sunbeam's finances and business operations.

Morgan Stanley, which had been working hand-in-hand with Sunbeam for almost a year and had traveled to Sunbeam's Florida offices, repeatedly asserted that it had satisfied that duty.

1041523

Strong, who was one of the senior Morgan Stanley investment bankers involved, has admitted in sworn testimony that he may have had more than 100 telephone conversations with Dunlap and Kersh (whose offices were in Sunbeam's Delray Beach headquarters) and that Strong was "sure" that he would have been apprised of Sunbeam's financial performance during the first two months of 1998.

With the $750 million debenture offering and the Coleman transaction set to close at the end of March 1998, Sunbeam's Florida-based outside auditors were shocked that Morgan Stanley had not asked them about Sunbeam's financial performance for first quarter 1998. Sunbeam's auditors were alarmed because Sunbeam's first quarter results were a disaster, but Dunlap, Kersh, and Morgan Stanley were telling CPH and the investing public, that Sunbeam's turnaround was a success, that Sunbeam's sales for the first quarter of 1998 were ahead of the expectations of outside financial analysts, and that Sunbeam was poised for record sales.

On March 17, Sunbeam's auditors forced the issue. From their Florida offices, Sunbeam's auditors sent Morgan Stanley a letter reporting that Sunbeam's net sales through January 1998 were down 60% — $28 million in January 1998, as compared to $73 million in January 1997. The March 17 letter explained that the decline was "primarily due to the . . . new early buy program for grills which accelerated grill sales into the fourth quarter of fiscal 1997."

The next day, Morgan Stanley was faxed a schedule from Sunbeam's Florida office that showed that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 net sales totaled $72 million, an amount that was 50% lower than Sunbeam's January and February 1997 net sales of $143.5 million.

Based on information that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley had disseminated, Wall Street analysts were anticipating that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 net sales would be in the range of $285 million to $295 million. Sales in that range would have been approximately 15% higher than first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales, however, totaled barely 25% of $285 million. As Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the sales drop-off was caused by Sunbeam's sales acceleration program. The information put into Morgan Stanley's hands on March 17 and March 18 showed that Morgan Stanley's and Sunbeam's assertions to CPH and other investors were false. Contrary to what Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented, Sunbeam had not undergone a successful turnaround, Sunbeam's financial performance had not dramatically improved, and Sunbeam's performance in 1998 was not better than Wall Street analysts' expectations. It was imperative, therefore, that the truth be kept from CPH until the Coleman transaction closed at the end of March 1998.

Morgan Stanley did not disclose Sunbeam's disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not insist that Sunbeam disclose its disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not correct any of the false and misleading statements it and Sunbeam had made to CPH about Sunbeam's business or performance, and Morgan Stanley did not suspend any of the critical transactions that were scheduled to close in the next two weeks. Instead, with Morgan Stanley's knowledge and assistance, Sunbeam prepared and issued a false press release on March 19, 1998 that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true condition.

The March 19, 1998 press release stated: "Sunbeam Corporation . . . said today that it is possible that its net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates for $285 million to $295 million, but net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. . . . The shortfall from analysts' estimates, if any, would be due to changes in inventory management and order patterns at certain of the Company's major retail customers. The Company further stated that based on the strength of its new product offerings and powerful brand names, it remains highly confident about the overall sales outlook for its products for the entire year."

As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the March 19, 1998 press release was false, misleading, and failed to disclose material information. The March 19, 1998 press release failed to disclose Sunbeam's actual January and February 1998 sales or the true reasons for the poor results. Instead, the press release held out the false possibility that Sunbeam still could achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and suggested that, if any shortfall occurred, that shortfall would be due to the fact that certain retailers had decided to defer first quarter purchases to the second quarter. The press release also assured that Sunbeam at least would exceed first quarter 1997 net sales of $253.4 million.

Based on information that Morgan Stanley had in its hands on March 18, 1998, it was obvious that Sunbeam would not achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales would be below its first quarter 1997 numbers. To simply meet 1997 first quarter sales, Sunbeam needed sales of $123.3 million over the 12 remaining days of the quarter — an average of $10.28 million per day. Sales of $10.28 million per day would be 306% more than the average per day sales in March 1997, and 281% more than the average per day sales for the first 17 days of March 1998. Furthermore, Morgan Stanley knew that the shortfall from analysts' estimates was not caused by retailers' deciding to defer purchases from the first quarter of 1998 to the second quarter, as the press release indicated. Rather, as Sunbeam's outside auditors had advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the collapse in first quarter sales was caused by Sunbeam's acceleration of 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997.

After Sunbeam's false press release was issued, Morgan Stanley stood arm-in-arm with Sunbeam while Dunlap and Kersh told CPH, analysts, and investors that the March 19, 1998 release was a purely cautionary statement because some first quarter 1998 sales might simply "spillover" into the second quarter and that Sunbeam still believed that it actually would meet analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million in first quarter 1998 sales.

Morgan Stanley knew that a full and truthful disclosure of Sunbeam's first quarter sales would doom the debenture offering, which was scheduled to close on March 25, 1998,

As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the written contract between CPH and Sunbeam gave CPH the express legal right to refuse to close the sale if there was a material adverse change in Sunbeam's "business, results of operation or financial condition."

Furthermore, if the transactions did not close, Morgan Stanley would not be paid its $10.28 million fee for the Coleman acquisition or its $22.5 million fee for underwriting the subordinated debenture offering. Morgan Stanley also knew that Sunbeam would promptly replace Morgan Stanley with another investment banking firm – such as the Chase Securities team led by Mark Davis.

041527

Sunbeam's outside auditors already had made it perfectly clear to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a disaster,

One of Sunbeam's senior outside auditors, Lawrence Bornstein, has testified under oath that on March 19, 1998, he told Morgan Stanley's John Tyree that the statement in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release — that Sunbeam would at least exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million — was not credible: "Just do the math . . . they've done a million dollars in sales the first 70 days of the year and now they need to do $10 million worth of sales for the next . . . I think it was 11 days . . . I mean, something ridiculous." Bornstein also told Tyree: "I've been to every shipping dock domestically, I've been to Hattiesburg, I've been to Neosho, I've been to Mexico City, and I don't think these guys can physically ship this much stuff."

Morgan Stanley knew that the March 19 press release was false and misleading. Despite that knowledge and Bornstein's explicit statements, Morgan Stanley continued with its preparations to close the debenture offering on March 25, 1998 and the Coleman acquisition on March 30, 1998.

As part of those preparations, on March 24, 1998, Morgan Stanley's Tyree spoke by telephone with Sunbeam's Kersh, who was located in Sunbeam's Delray Beach offices, to obtain an updated report concerning Sunbeam's first quarter performance. By the time of that March 24, 1998 call, Sunbeam had fallen even further behind first quarter 1997 sales. As of March 18, 1998, Sunbeam needed to achieve average sales of $10.28 million per day, over 12 days, to reach first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's sales between March 18 and March 24, 1998 had averaged only $6.81 million per day — well short of the $10.28 million per day that Sunbeam needed to achieve. Sunbeam's March 18 through March 24, 1998 sales were further proof that Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release was false and that Sunbeam would not achieve first quarter 1998 sales in excess of first quarter 1997 sales.

Morgan Stanley also knew no later than March 25, 1998, if not much earlier, that Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were going to miss Wall Street analysts' earnings expectations, which were in the range of $0.28 to $0.31 per share (excluding one-time charges). Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley on March 25 that Sunbeam had suffered a $41.19 million loss during the first two months of 1998, including a one-time charge of $30.2 million. Even excluding that one-time charge, Sunbeam's loss for the first two months was $0.13 per share. To achieve first quarter 1998 operating earnings of $0.28 per share, which were at the low end of analyst expectations, Sunbeam needed to realize a profit of $35.5 million during March 1998 alone. A net profit of $35.5 million in March was 500% more than Sunbeam's net profit for the entire first quarter of 1997. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings fell far short of Wall Street's expectations.

Sunbeam's first quarter earnings were material,

Having directly participated in misleading CPH Morgan Stanley had a duty to disclose the true facts before the closing of the debenture offering and the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley also could have required Sunbeam to postpone the closings of those transactions until the necessary disclosures were made. Morgan Stanley did neither. Instead, Morgan Stanley marched forward and closed the $750 million debenture offering on March 25, 1998, which was needed to close the Coleman transaction, and assisted Sunbeam in closing the acquisition of Coleman on March 30, 1998.

Morgan Stanley received $22.5 million for the subordinated debenture offering and $10.28 million for the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley would have received nothing if the transactions had failed to close.

On April 3, 1998 — just four days after the Coleman transaction closed — Sunbeam announced that sales for the first quarter of 1998 would be approximately 5% below the $253.4 million in sales that Sunbeam reported in the first quarter of 1997. In other words, Sunbeam was expecting sales in the range of $240 million. That sales shortfall was shocking news, particularly in view of assurances provided by Sunbeam both in and after its March 19, 1998 press release that $285 million to $295 million of sales was still a real possibility. The April 3, 1998 press release also disclosed that Sunbeam expected to show a loss for the quarter, although the release did not disclose the magnitude of the loss or how much of the loss was attributable to operating earnings as opposed to one-time charges. Sunbeam's news stunned the market. On April 3rd, Sunbeam's stock price dropped 25% — from $45-9/16 to $34-3/8.

Sunbeam's actual first quarter 1998 performance was even worse than Sunbeam disclosed on April 3, 1998. The April 3, 1998 release indicated that Sunbeam's first quarter sales were in the range of $240 million. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter sales were $224.5

million. Sunbeam obscured the true shortfall by extending its quarter from March 29 to March 31, 1998 — thereby adding two more days of Sunbeam sales. Sunbeam also failed to disclose that it had included two days of Coleman sales after the Coleman transaction closed on March 30. Further, Sunbeam inflated first quarter 1998 sales with $29 million of new phony “bill and hold” sales.

70. Just as Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 sales had been a disaster, so, too, were Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 earnings. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented to CPH that Sunbeam would achieve or exceed analyst first quarter 1998 earnings estimates. At the time of that representation, the consensus among analysts was that Sunbeam would enjoy first quarter 1998 earnings of $0.33 per share. However, on May 9, 1998, Sunbeam disclosed that it would record a first quarter loss of $0.09 per share (excluding one-time charges) — more than $0.40 per share lower than CPH had been told to expect.

Within weeks, Dunlap’s fraudulent scheme began to unravel. In June 1998, after a number of news articles critical of Sunbeam’s practices, Sunbeam’s Board of Directors launched an internal investigation. That investigation led quickly to the firing of Dunlap and Kersh, and, subsequently, to a restatement of Sunbeam’s financial statements for 1996, 1997, and the first quarter of 1998.

As detailed above, Morgan Stanley participated in a scheme to mislead CPH and others and cover up the massive fraud at Sunbeam until Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam could close the purchase of Coleman. Morgan Stanley provided CPH with false information concerning Sunbeam’s 1996 and 1997 financial performance, its business operations, and the value of Sunbeam’s stock. Morgan Stanley also actively assisted Sunbeam in concealing Sunbeam’s disastrous first quarter 1998 sales and earnings and the true reasons for Sunbeam's poor performance.

Morgan Stanley knew that its statements to CPH were materially false and misleading and omitted the true facts.

Morgan Stanley intended that CPH rely on Morgan Stanley's representations concerning Sunbeam.

As detailed above, Dunlap engaged in a fraudulent scheme to inflate the price of Sunbeam's stock by improperly manipulating Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 performance, by falsely asserting that Sunbeam had successfully "turned around," and by concealing the collapse of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and earnings and the reasons for Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance.

86 As detailed above, Morgan Stanley knew of Dunlap's fraudulent scheme and helped to conceal it until after Sunbeam could close the purchase of Coleman.

041532

As detailed above, Morgan Stanley provided substantial assistance to Dunlap and Sunbeam, including: concealing Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales collapse; assisting with the false March 19, 1998 press release; arranging road shows and meetings with prospective debenture purchasers at which Morgan Stanley, Dunlap, and others made false statements concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; preparing and disseminating the preliminary and final offering memoranda for the subordinated debenture offering, both of which contained false information concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; providing CPH with false financial and business information concerning Sunbeam; scripting Dunlap's false public statements concerning Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman;

and underwriting the $750 million convertible debenture offering, proceeds from which were used to fund Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman.

041533

As detailed above, Morgan Stanley conspired with Dunlap and other senior Sunbeam executives to conceal the truth about Sunbeam's financial performance and business operations.

As detailed above, Morgan Stanley committed overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including: concealing Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales collapse; assisting with the false March 19, 1998 press release; arranging road shows and meetings with prospective debenture purchasers at which Morgan Stanley, Dunlap, and others made false statements concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; preparing and disseminating the preliminary and final offering memoranda for the subordinated debenture offering, both of which contained false information concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; providing CPH with false financial and business information concerning Sunbeam; scripting Dunlap's false public statements concerning Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman;

and underwriting the $750 million convertible debenture offering, proceeds from which were used to fund Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman.

Defendant's Offer of Proof re: James P. Cusick

If called to testify, James P. Cusick would state under oath as follows:

Mr. Cusick is a Managing Director in Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") Law Division and is Co-Head of Global Litigation at Morgan Stanley. Mr. Cusick is responsible for representing and advising Morgan Stanley in his professional capacity as an attorney in a number of litigation and regulatory matters and for overseeing a number of litigation and regulatory matters involving Morgan Stanley, including the instant action. In connection with this role, Mr. Cusick supervises Soo-Mi Lee and James F. Doyle and represents Morgan Stanley in this litigation.

On or about June 6, 2004, Mr. Cusick first learned that backup tapes had been found at one of Morgan Stanley's facilities in Brooklyn ("Brooklyn Tapes"). At the same time, Mr. Cusick also learned that it was not known whether the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail. On or about October 25, 2004, Mr. Cusick first learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes. To Mr. Cusick's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes before October 25, 2004.

In early November 2004, Mr. Cusick first learned that certain 8-millimeter tapes had been found and that some of these 8-millimeter tapes contained e-mail. To Mr. Cusick's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on these 8-millimeter tapes before early November 2004.

Defendant's Offer of Proof re: James F. Doyle

If called to testify, James F. Doyle would state under oath as follows:

Mr. Doyle is an Executive Director in the Law Division of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"). He has been employed in Morgan Stanley's Law Division since October 2000. Mr. Doyle is responsible for representing and advising Morgan Stanley in his professional capacity as an attorney in a number of litigation and regulatory matters, including the instant action. In that role, Mr. Doyle represents Morgan Stanley in this litigation.

Mr. Doyle has sought in good faith to assist Morgan Stanley to meet fully its discovery obligations to CPH and the Court.

At no time in connection with this case did Mr. Doyle have any intent to conceal or withhold responsive, non-privileged documents from CPH or the Court.

Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of the e-mail backup tapes which have been referenced as the Brooklyn Tapes until late October 2004. At that time, Mr. Doyle understood that the e-mail contained on those tapes had already been migrated to the Archive. In submitting his January 31, 2004 Declaration to the Court, Mr. Doyle did not intend to mislead the Court or CPH regarding Morgan Stanley's discovery of the Brooklyn Tapes.

Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of 8-millimeter tapes containing e-mails until November 2004.

Ms. Lee is responsible for representing and advising Morgan Stanley in her professional capacity as an attorney in a number of litigation and regulatory matters, including the instant action. In this role, Ms. Lee supervises James F. Doyle, and represents Morgan Stanley in this litigation.

On or about June 6, 2004, Ms. Lee was notified that backup tapes had been found at one of Morgan Stanley's facilities in Brooklyn ("Brooklyn Tapes"). At the same time, Ms. Lee was also apprised that it was not known whether the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail. Ms. Lee recalls first learning in late October that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes. To Ms. Lee's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes before that time.

Ms. Lee recalls that in or about early November 2004, she first learned that certain 8-millimeter tapes had been found and that some of these 8-millimeter tapes contained e-mail. To Ms. Lee's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on these 8-millimeter tapes before that time.

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 36 TO CLARIFY WHAT EVIDENCE IS ADMISSIBLE TO SHOW PLAINTIFF'S ENTITLEMENT TO AND AMOUNT OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES

THIS CAUSE came before the Court May 13, 2005 on Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 36 to Clarify what Evidence is Admissible to Show Plaintiff's Entitlement to and Amount of Punitive Damages, with both parties well represented by counsel.

By its March 1, 2005 Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction, the Court found that MS & Co. sought to hide evidence in this specific case. By its March 23, 2005 Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, the Court found that the discovery failings could not be cured, and deemed certain facts not subject to dispute. Both Orders were predicated, in part, on a finding that MS & Co. had manipulated the record in this case, depriving CPH to access to documents crucial to its claims. CPH claims that the deemed facts should apply for all purposes in the punitive damages phase of the trial, if any. MS & Co. claims that they should have no further effect. CPH claims that the Court's findings of litigation misconduct remain relevant in any punitive damages phase. MS & Co. claims they do not.

Four principles are clear. First, the legal significance in the punitive damages phase of facts admitted by default is narrow. See Humana Health Insurance Company of Florida, Inc. v. Chipps, 802 So. 2d 492 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001). Second, punitive damages are focused on a defendant's conduct, not a plaintiff's harm. See Nordyne, Inc., v. Florida

MAY 17 2005 iv-031384

Mobile Home Supply, Inc., 625 So. 2d 1283 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993). Third, evidence of general pre-trial discovery disputes is not relevant. Amlan, Inc. v. Detroit Diesel Corp., 651 So. 2d 701 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995). Finally, evidence of concealment of a fraud, even if during the discovery phase, is relevant in the punitive damages phase as indicative of malice. See General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003).

Applying these principles, it is clear that the consequences of MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct carry forward into Phase II in two discrete ways. First, as described in the March 23, 2005 Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, MS & Co.'s acts in depriving CPH of crucial documents and discovery to prove its claims require that certain facts be removed from dispute, in order to level the playing field. Second, MS & Co.'s efforts to hide its fraud may be indicative of malice. Were it otherwise, a defendant whose liability is clear facing a claim for punitive damages would have a strong economic motive to destroy all incriminating documents: at worst, liability for compensatory damages, which was already clear, would be admitted; at best, neither the documents nor their destruction would be available in the punitive damages phase.

The Court concludes, then, that (i) the deemed facts should continue to bind MS & Co., but only for the specific fraud under review and should not be permitted to be used as a predicate for a separate fraud¹; and (ii) MS & Co.'s attempts to hide direct evidence of its wrongdoing remain relevant as indicative of malice.

Based on the foregoing, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Motion is Granted, in part, and ruling deferred, in part. If this action proceeds to Phase II on punitive damages, the facts established by Exhibit A to the Court's March 23, 2005 Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment shall be binding on the parties to support a claim for punitive damages predicated solely on the fraud against CPH. If CPH seeks to argue entitlement or amount of punitive damages based on any other bad acts or collateral consequences, all predicate facts, including MS & Co.'s knowledge of and participation in the fraud, shall be ¹This ruling balances the need to keep the playing field level with the need to focus on MS & Co.'s acts, not CPH's harm.

independently proved. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the statement concerning litigation misconduct to be read to the jury shall be limited to the email issue. MS & Co. shall be permitted to offer evidence not inconsistent with its findings such as would permit a reasonable juror to conclude that MS & Co. did not intend to conceal evidence of the fraud.² It is further ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Court shall consider the admissibility of evidence of similar misconduct on a case-by-case basis.

1 MR. SOLOVY: Your Honor, their proffer
2 says --

3 MS. BEYNON: We're withdrawing that.

4 We would request a final sentence on that
5 paragraph that states: "There is no evidence
6 that any lawyer in Morgan Stanley's law division
7 was aware prior to October 2004 that any of the 8 tapes contained any e-mail."

9 MR. SOLOVY: I don't think that's true.

10 THE COURT: That's against the evidence, I
11 think. I'd have to go back and look.

12 MS. BEYNON: We'd request that the entire
13 paragraph come out, Your Honor. We think that 14 this is unduly focusing on the lawyers and 15 conduct in a way that, unless this is explained
16 in the context of what the lawyers knew
17 regarding, or what they didn't know regarding 18 whether e-mails were on these tapes, is

1 Thirteen, an executive director of Morgan
2 Stanley's law division filed a sworn declaration
3 stating that he did not learn of additional
4 unsearched backup tapes until the end of October
5 2004. The declaration suggested that no one in 6 Morgan Stanley's law division knew of the backup
7 tapes before then. Instead, at least two Morgan
8 Stanley inhouse lawyers, including the executive
9 director's superior, knew of the tapes no later
10 than June 7th, 2004.

11 Fourteen, Morgan Stanley sought to discredit
12 Mr. Riel and, thus, distance itself from the 13 false June 23rd, 2004 certificate of compliance
14 that he had signed. In doing so, Morgan Stanley
15 sought to conceal that Mr. Riel might be the

TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE
THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH T. MAASS

West Palm Beach, Florida
Wednesday, May 18, 2005
9:28 a.m. - 12:38 p.m.

1 misconduct statement does not say that people in
2 Morgan Stanley's law division knew of e-mail on
3 the backup tapes the end of October 2004.

4 There's evidence they knew of backup tapes but 5 not that the backup tapes contained e-mail. And 6 it's undisputed that they learned that these 7 contained e-mail in October 2004 which set these 8 events in motion basically.

9 THE COURT: It turned out they did contain
10 e-mail.

11 MS. BEYNON: They didn't know it, Your 12 Honor. It's inaccurate for plaintiffs to be 13 able to use a slide --

14 THE COURT: I understand the point. We'll
15 come back to it. It would be falsely --

16 MR. SCAROLA: I have edited as follows.

17 THE COURT: Go ahead.

18 MR. SCAROLA: "Morgan Stanley presented a
19 sworn declaration intended to mislead CPH and 20 the Court indicating that Morgan Stanley's
21 in-house lawyers did not know about unsearched
22 e-mail backup tapes when they did know."

23 THE COURT: Can you change it "...did not
24 know about unsearched backup tapes later found
25 to contain e-mail" or something? I think that

1 the problem is, to make it clear to the jury --
2 well, frankly, I don't know whether they knew
3 they had e-mail or not when the declaration was
4 made. They certainly knew they existed.

5 MR. SOLOVY: I don't know why we have to be
6 tarnished with all the caveats for a
7 certification made by them.

8 MS. BEYNON: Your Honor, it's undisputed in
9 the record that the lawyers at Morgan Stanley
10 learned that e-mail was on these tapes in
11 October 2004. There's been no contrary evidence
12 to this. And to say as a fact they falsely
13 misrepresented --

14 THE COURT: There's no contrary evidence,
15 but we also know the in-house attorneys knew
16 about the tapes in June.

17 MS. BEYNON: They knew about the tapes in 18 June, but they didn't know they contained
19 e-mail.

20 THE COURT: We don't know if they knew they
21 contained e-mail.

22 MR. SOLOVY: They never put them on the 23 stand.

NOTICE

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") hereby notifies the court and Plaintiff that it retracts, withdraws and corrects certain statements in the offers of proof, declaration, and related statements more fully described and listed below.

1. In the listed offers of proof and related statements, Morgan Stanley asserted that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.
2. As a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.
3. Morgan Stanley submits this Notice to: (a) correct Defendant's Offers of Proof from James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle (the first sentence of paragraph 4 and the entirety of paragraph 5); (b) withdraw the Declaration of James F. Doyle of January 31,

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated
Case No. CA 03-5045 AI
Notice

2005; and (c) correct related statements that reference or were based on the foregoing submissions¹.

4. Morgan Stanley does not limit this notice and correction to the specific documents described or listed herein. Morgan Stanley retracts, withdraws and corrects any and all statements, written or oral, made or submitted on its behalf, to the effect that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.

¹ The related statements include: paragraph 4 on pages 2-3 of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, dated January 31, 2005; the first two sentences of the second full paragraph on page 2 of Morgan Stanley's Supplemental Opposition to CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction, dated February 11, 2005; the last paragraph on page 6 that carries over to page 7 of Morgan Stanley Opposition to CPH's Motion for a Default Judgment, dated February 28, 2005; the last clause of the fourth sentence from the bottom and the last two sentences on page 20, and the first two sentences of the second full paragraph on page 31 of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion for a Default Judgment (corrected version filed March 13, 2005 and original version served March 12, 2005); the second sentence in the second full paragraph on page 7 of Morgan Stanley's Submission of Proposed Statement to be Read to the Jury Pursuant to Court's March 23, 2005 Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, dated March 28, 2005; the second sentence of the first full paragraph on page 24, the second sentence on page 26, the heading for Section C and the second and third sentences in that section on page 26, the last clause in the second to last sentence and the last sentence in that section on page 27, the final sentence on page 33 that carries over to the top of page 34, and the first clause of the second sentence of the first full paragraph on page 35 of the Summary of Offer of Proof Regarding Defendant's Alleged Litigation Misconduct (Addendum to Morgan Stanley's Opposition to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Second Renewed Motion for Correction and Clarification of the Litigation-Misconduct Statement) ("Summary of Offer of Proof"), originally filed May 12, 2005 and re-filed on May 17, 2005 in Phase II; February 2, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 132:1-7, 133:6-11, 147:22-25 (statements by counsel); the second half of the heading for Section C on page 15 and the first paragraph of page 17 of Morgan Stanley's Response to CPH's Chronology of Purported Discovery Abuses, dated March 15, 2005; the second, third and fifth rows (first sentence) on page 6 of Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Overnight Response to CPH's Additional Submission in Support of its Motion for Default, dated March 15, 2005; May 16, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 15266:4-8; and May 18, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 15607:4-8, 11-13, 15608:8-13, 17-19.

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant.

VERIFIED PETITION FOR A SHOW-CAUSE ORDER
REGARDING MORGAN STANLEY'S CRIMINAL CONTEMPT OF COURT

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") hereby petitions the Court pursuant to Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.840 for an Order to show cause why Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), Donald G. Kempf, Jr., James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle should not be held in criminal contempt for (1) deliberately and obstructively misleading the Court about when Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers knew of the existence of unsearched backup tapes and knew that those tapes contained potentially responsive e-mail, and (2) continuing to mislead the Court in the very June 17, 2005 pleading in which Morgan Stanley admitted the prior false statements. As we show, the facts of the current situation amply justify the additional disciplinary sanction of criminal contempt.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

In support of this Petition, CPH alleges as follows:

1. In its March 1 and March 23, 2005 Orders regarding Morgan Stanley's "deliberate[] and contumacious[]" misconduct, this Court found that Morgan Stanley had engaged in a systematic effort to prevent CPH from obtaining e-mail evidence in Morgan Stanley's possession. Ex. A, 3/23/05 Order, at 16; see also Ex. B, 3/1/05 Order.

2. A key issue in the controversy involved when Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that Morgan Stanley's certification of compliance with this Court's April 2004 Agreed Order on e-mail production was false. On June 23, 2004, Arthur Riel certified that Morgan Stanley had fully complied with the April 2004 Agreed Order. At that time, both he and Morgan Stanley in-house lawyers James Cusick and Soo-Mi Lee knew that there were hundreds of backup tapes found in Brooklyn that had not been searched. In its defense, Morgan Stanley argued that the certification was not false because (1) Mr. Riel did not learn until several days later that the unsearched tapes (of which he and in-house counsel were already aware) contained e-mail, and (2) Morgan Stanley in-house lawyers did not learn about the existence of e-mail on the tapes until months later, in October. See, e.g., Ex. C, Morgan Stanley's Opp'n to CPH's Mot. for a Default Judgment, at 11 (filed Mar. 12, 2005) ("When Mr. Riel signed his Certification of Compliance in June 2004, he did not know or suspect that there was any e-mail on the so-called 'Brooklyn tapes' . . .") (emphasis in the original); id. at 11-12 ("Mr. Riel also testified that . . . he learned that some of the Brooklyn tapes contained some e-mail . . . , [but] he does not recall ever communicating that fact to anyone in the Law Division.") (emphasis in the original); Ex. D, Morgan Stanley's Opp'n to CPH's Mot. for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, at 2 (filed Jan. 31, 2005) ("At the end of October 2004, James F. Doyle, the attorney at Morgan Stanley who directed Morgan Stanley's prior search for e-mail messages, learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to the May 14, 2004 e-mail production."); Ex. E, Declaration of James F. Doyle of January 31, 2005 (attesting to the same facts).

3. The same claim — that in-house counsel did not learn about the existence of unsearched e-mail until October 2004 — was repeated as recently as May 16, 2005, when Morgan Stanley's counsel argued that the Court should delete from the Litigation Misconduct Statement all references to the knowledge and participation of in-house counsel on the ground that "unless this is explained in the context of what the lawyers knew regarding, or what they didn't know regarding whether e-mails were on these tapes, [it] is extremely prejudicial to Morgan Stanley and should not be put before the jury." Ex. F, Tr. 5/16/05, at 15266. Then, on May 18, 2005, the same point was made when Morgan Stanley's counsel argued for changes in CPH's proposed demonstratives. Ex. G, Tr. 5/18/05, at 15606-07. And on June 6, 2005, in Morgan Stanley's Memorandum in Support of its Motion for Judgment in Accordance with Motion for Directed Verdict and Alternative Motion for New Trial, Morgan Stanley repeated its argument that the Court erred in refusing to excise from the Litigation Misconduct Statement "all references to what certain individuals in Morgan Stanley's Law Division knew." Ex. H, at 75-76.

4. On June 17, 2005, Morgan Stanley filed a Notice admitting that the repeated representations it had made to this Court about when its Law Division knew about the existence of unsearched e-mail were false — because "the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed." Ex. I, 6/17/05 Notice, at 1. The statements withdrawn pursuant to the Notice include the January 31, 2005 declaration of Mr. Doyle in which he stated that he personally did not learn about the existence of unsearched e-mail on the Brooklyn Tapes until the "end of October 2004." Id. at 1-2. It thus appears that Mr. Doyle himself was among those aware of unsearched e-mail in July, despite his sworn declaration to the contrary.

5. The Notice further claims, without any sworn basis and without even supplying the pertinent documents, that “Morgan Stanley . . . determined” that its prior statements were false “[a]s a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search.” Id. at 1. The Notice contains no explanation of how “Morgan Stanley” can be said to have previously lacked knowledge of facts that were known to its own in-house counsel, including those who made false statements to the Court. Nor does it explain the circumstances of this “new e-mail search,” which presumably occurred after the end of the trial in May 2005 and, indeed, after the briefing on the June 2005 post-trial motions had been completed. Morgan Stanley chose not to identify what “new” information has come to light, how it came to light, and who within Morgan Stanley was aware of that information.

6. Morgan Stanley waited to file this Notice until after the jury had returned its $1.45 billion verdict, and after CPH had submitted its final briefing on Morgan Stanley’s motions for remittitur, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and a new trial. A few days later, the Court denied Morgan Stanley’s motions. Ex. J, 6/23/05 Order. Given Morgan Stanley’s record of delaying e-mail disclosure to gain strategic advantage, Morgan Stanley should not be allowed to conceal when and how the facts set forth in its June 17 Notice first came to the attention of Morgan Stanley’s officers, employees, and attorneys.

ARGUMENT

I. MORGAN STANLEY’S MISCONDUCT SATISFIES THE ELEMENTS FOR CRIMINAL CONTEMPT.

Under Florida law, the sanction of criminal contempt exists to punish any act that is designed to “embarrass, hinder or obstruct the trial court in the administration of justice, or which is calculated to lessen the court’s authority or dignity.” Murrell v. State, 595 So. 2d 1049, 1050 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992). For criminal-contempt proceedings based on a party’s or witness’s false statements, Florida courts have settled on a three-element test: (1) there must exist judicial knowledge of the falsity of the statements; (2) the false statements must be pertinent to the issues at trial; and (3) the false statements must have an obstructive effect. Duff v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 386 So. 2d 253, 255 (Fla. 5th DCA 1980). An Order to show cause is clearly warranted here based on the facts already known. Moreover, the relevant facts may well be supplemented if the Court, exercising its authority under Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.840, chooses to further investigate the matters that Morgan Stanley's Notice seeks to finesse, such as when and how "Morgan Stanley" supposedly learned that its own in-house lawyers had not previously been telling the truth about when they became aware of unsearched e-mail.

There can be no doubt regarding whether the three requisite elements already have been met in this instance. First, with regard to the element of "judicial knowledge" of the prior statements' falsity, Morgan Stanley has now admitted its prior misstatements to the Court. In the June 17 Notice, Morgan Stanley concedes that it made misrepresentations to the Court in fifteen different pleadings and transcripts — and Morgan Stanley "does not limit this notice and correction to the specific documents described or listed herein." Ex. I, 6/17/05 Notice, at 2 & n.1. No further evidence is needed to satisfy the judicial-knowledge-of-falsity requirement.

Second, the Court already has found that the misconduct at issue was "pertinent to the issues at trial," as the second element requires. Duff, 386 So. 2d at 255. The misrepresentations about Morgan Stanley's e-mail capabilities are relevant not only because they demonstrate Defendant's "consciousness of guilt," but because they were part of a massive effort to keep from the jury the best evidence of the elements of the offense. Ex. B, 3/1/05 Order, at 11. Thus, the Court has found expressly that Morgan Stanley's e-mail misconduct "is relevant to the issues before the jury," id., and "infect[s] the entire case," Ex. A, 3/23/05 Order, at 2.

Third, Morgan Stanley's acknowledged misconduct satisfies the third element because it obstructed the justice process. See id. at 16 ("The judicial system cannot function this way." (emphasis in the original)). The misconduct was part of an ongoing effort designed to mislead CPH and the Court. The isolated misrepresentations that Morgan Stanley specifically acknowledges in its June 17, 2005 Notice are but the tip of the iceberg. See id. at 11-14 (requiring three single-spaced pages to list misconduct that came to light after this Court's February 14 hearing). And Florida law is clear that "[r]epeated disregard of court orders and lack of candor by a party toward the Court justifies findings of either civil or indirect criminal contempt." Lo v. Lo, 878 So. 2d 424, 426 (Fla. 3d DCA 2004). This Court already has found that Morgan Stanley "deliberately and contumaciously violated numerous discovery orders." Ex. A, 3/23/05 Order, at 16. Indeed, "[i]t is well established that perjured testimony obstructs the proper administration of justice." Duff, 386 So. 2d at 255; see also Ex. I, 6/17/05 Notice, at 1-2 (withdrawing James F. Doyle's declaration); cf. Vega v. Vega, 110 So. 2d 29, 32-33 (Fla. 3d DCA 1959) (concluding that when testimony "misled the court in at least three major respects, . . . a gross and wanton fraud had been perpetrated upon it").

Criminal-contempt proceedings are appropriate here. And because the contumacious conduct at issue here involved withholding information known to Morgan Stanley's Law Division, it is also appropriate to include in the show-cause Order the in-house attorneys involved. They include Mr. Doyle, who made the sworn declaration now withdrawn; Mr. Cusick and Ms. Lee, who personally learned of the Brooklyn Tapes' existence by early June 2004; and Mr. Kempf, who as the Court is aware became heavily and personally involved in supervising this litigation at least as early as March 2005.

II. MORGAN STANLEY WAIVED ITS ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE BY VOLUNTARY DISCLOSURE.

By making sworn statements about when Morgan Stanley's lawyers knew key facts, and then stating that "Morgan Stanley" had only recently learned that these prior statements were false, Morgan Stanley has waived any attorney-client privilege. Section 507 of the Evidence Code provides that "[a] person who has a privilege against the disclosure of a confidential matter or communication waives the privilege if the person . . . voluntarily discloses . . . or consents to disclosure of any significant part of the matter or communication." FLA. STAT. ANN. § 90.507 (West 2005). And disclosure of a single communication results in disclosure of all other communications related to the same subject matter. See, e.g., Hoyas v. State, 456 So. 2d 1225, 1229 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984). As Professor Ehrhardt has explained, "[w]hen a party injects into litigation issues that necessarily require exploration of otherwise privileged matters, a waiver of that privilege will be implied. Fairness requires that a party not be permitted to affirmatively insert an issue into the case and then assert a privilege to protect information that is relevant to the issue raised." CHARLES W. EHRHARDT, FLORIDA EVIDENCE § 507.1, at 418 (2004 ed.) (footnotes and citations omitted).

Here, Morgan Stanley has repeatedly and voluntarily disclosed communications involving its in-house counsel. Just to take a single example, there are no fewer than nine statements in Morgan Stanley's May 2005 Summary of Offer of Proof about communications involving Morgan Stanley's in-house attorneys and the timing of their awareness that the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that the 8-millimeter tapes existed:

- "Cusick and Lee would not learn that there was e-mail on some of these tapes until the end of October 2004." (p. 24)

- “Upon learning there was e-mail on some of those tapes, he [Arthur Riel] did not inform in-house counsel.” (p. 26)
- “Morgan Stanley attorneys learn[ed] in October 2004 that there was some e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes.” (heading on p. 26, capitalization omitted)
- “It was not until late October 2004, however, that they [Cusick and Lee] and other lawyers in Morgan Stanley’s Law Division learned that there was e-mail on some of these back-up tapes.” (p. 26)
- “Additionally, these lawyers did not learn of the existence of the 8-mm Tapes or that e-mail existed on some of those tapes until November 2004.” (p. 26)
- “[T]he operative fact in Doyle’s Declaration was when lawyers learned of e-mail, and, in that respect, there is no confusion.” (p. 27)
- “Neither Doyle nor Lee nor Cusick knew that there were e-mails on the Brooklyn Tapes until late October 2004.” (p. 27)
- “And, indeed, while some IT personnel learned that there was some e-mail on the Brooklyn and 8-mm Tapes in July 2004, Morgan Stanley’s Law Division only learned of e-mail on the Brooklyn Tapes and 8-mm Tapes in October and November 2004, respectively.” (pp. 33-34)
- “[T]his statement [— that late October 2004 was the first time anyone at Morgan Stanley knew that there was recoverable e-mail data on the Brooklyn Tapes —] was true as to the Law Division.” (p. 35)

The unsworn, unsigned “Offers of Proof” from the individual contemnors echo these same points. The Offer of Proof for James P. Cusick, the Managing Director of Morgan Stanley’s Law Division and Co-Head of Global Litigation at Morgan Stanley, who is supervised by Donald G. Kempf, Jr., states: "On or about October 25, 2004, Mr. Cusick first learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes. To Mr. Cusick's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes before October 25, 2004. . . . In early November 2004, Mr. Cusick first learned that certain 8-millimeter tapes had been found and that some of these 8-millimeter tapes contained e-mail. To Mr. Cusick's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on these 8-millimeter tapes before early November 2004." Ex. K, at 1. The Offer of Proof for Soo-Mi Lee, an Executive Director in Morgan Stanley's Law Division who is supervised by Mr. Cusick, states: "Ms. Lee recalls first learning in late October [2004] that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes. To Ms. Lee's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on some of the Brooklyn Tapes before that time. . . . Ms. Lee recalls that in or about early November 2004, she first learned that certain 8-millimeter tapes had been found and that some of these 8-millimeter tapes contained e-mail. To Ms. Lee's knowledge, no one in Morgan Stanley's Law Division learned that there was e-mail on these 8-millimeter tapes before that time." Ex. L, at 1. And the Offer of Proof for James F. Doyle, an Executive Director in Morgan Stanley's Law Division who is supervised by Ms. Lee, states: "Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of the e-mail backup tapes which have been referenced as the Brooklyn Tapes until late October 2004. . . . Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of the 8-millimeter tapes containing e-mails until November 2004." Ex. M, at 1.

CPH's Response to Morgan Stanley's Offers of Proof correctly noted that "[t]he proffers from Mr. Cusick and Ms. Lee, as well as Mr. Doyle, constitute waivers of the attorney-client privilege." Ex. N, at 12 n.4. Indeed, the same is true of the June 17 Notice itself: By filing that Notice, Morgan Stanley again waived the privilege, as the Notice states that "the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.” Ex. I, 6/17/2005 Notice, at 1.

Regardless of whether some of Morgan Stanley’s communications with its attorneys may have been confidential and privileged at one time, there can be no doubt that these communications have now been repeatedly and voluntarily injected into this litigation and thus disclosed to CPH, to this Court, and to the public. Under Section 507 of the Evidence Code, that voluntary disclosure waives the attorney-client privilege as to all communications related to the subject matter at issue here, and any assertion of privilege to protect information relevant to that subject matter must be rejected.

III. THE COURT HAS BROAD DISCRETION TO ENTER APPROPRIATE CRIMINAL-CONTEMPT SANCTIONS, INCLUDING REVOCATION OF STATE LICENSES, FINES, AND IMPRISONMENT.

Florida law grants trial judges broad discretion when sentencing defendants found guilty of criminal contempt. Potential punishments include revocation of privileges and licenses, fines, and imprisonment for a fixed term.

The breadth of the trial courts’ discretion flows from the fact that the power to punish for contempt is an inherent power of the judiciary under the Florida Constitution. Walker v. Bentley, 678 So. 2d 1265, 1267 (Fla. 1996) (“[T]he power of a court to punish for contempt is an inherent one that exists independent of any statutory grant of authority and is essential to the execution, maintenance, and integrity of the judiciary.”).

Among the appropriate sanctions for contempt are garnishment of wages, the delivery of certain assets, and the revocation of licenses. See Parisi v. Broward County, 769 So. 2d at 365 (listing “a broad arsenal” of civil-contempt sanctions available to trial courts); Gifford v. Payne, 432 So. 2d 38, 38-39 (Fla. 1983) (listing Florida Bar grievance proceedings and judicial disciplinary proceedings — resulting in potential disbarment — as appropriate sanctions for an attorney-contemnor's litigation misconduct); see also Cunningham v. State, 349 So. 2d 702, 704-07 (Fla. 4th DCA 1977), cert. denied, 362 So. 2d 1052 (Fla. 1978). Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated has licenses to do business in the State of Florida as a broker dealer, a broker dealer branch, and an investment adviser. See Office of Financial Regulation, Florida Department of Financial Services, Licensing Data Download Site, available at <http://www.fldfs.com/OFR/licensing> (using "BD" to indicate "broker dealer," BDB to indicate "broker dealer branch," and IA to indicate "investment adviser").

A person who commits criminal contempt also may be fined. See, e.g., Levin, Middlebrooks, Mabie, Thomas, Mayes & Mitchell, P.A. v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 639 So. 2d 606, 609 (Fla. 1994); Pennekamp v. Circuit Court of Eleventh Judicial Circuit In and For Dade County, 21 So. 2d 41, 41 (Fla. 1945); Shook v. Alter, 729 So. 2d 527, 528 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999); see also Levine v. Keaster, 862 So. 2d 876, 880 & n.4 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003); Pollock v. T & M Inv., Inc., 346 So. 2d 620, 621 (Fla. 3d DCA 1977). In setting the amount of a fine for contempt, the court must consider the contemnor's financial resources. See Parisi v. Broward County, 769 So. 2d 359, 366 (Fla. 2000); Condren v. Bell, 792 So. 2d 578, 579 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001). Both a corporation and its officers or employees may be held in contempt. See Florida Cent. & P.R. Co. v. Williams, 33 So. 991, 991-93 (Fla. 1903).

Florida courts also can impose fixed sentences of imprisonment to punish a defendant for a completed act of contempt. See Parisi v. Broward County, 769 So. 2d at 364-65. The sentencing court must pronounce a "definite, determinate, and certain" sentence. See Senterfitt v. Oaks, 775 So. 2d 431, 432 n.1 (Fla. 1st DCA 2001).

IV. THE COURT SHOULD APPOINT CPH'S COUNSEL TO ASSIST IT IN PREPARING FOR AND CONDUCTING THE CONTEMPT HEARING.

The June 17 Notice has every appearance of being another example of Morgan Stanley trying to avoid a full and fair disclosure of relevant information. To get to the bottom of this latest controversy, the Court should appoint CPH's counsel to assist in preparing for and conducting the contempt hearing. See FLA. R. CRIM. P. 3.840(d) (West 2005) ("The judge may conduct a hearing without assistance of counsel or may be assisted by the prosecuting attorney or by an attorney appointed for that purpose."). Appointed counsel should be authorized to subpoena documents and to depose key witnesses in advance of the hearing.

The need for further investigation is twofold. To begin with, the timing of Morgan Stanley's Notice is suspicious. In a series of well over a dozen separate filings and in-Court arguments, dating from January 2005 right up through the last day of trial, Morgan Stanley persisted in claiming that its in-house attorneys were unaware until October 2004 that the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and were unaware until November 2004 that the 8-millimeter tapes even existed. Equally strange is Morgan Stanley's claim in the June 17 Notice that "Morgan Stanley" only recently determined that its own in-house lawyers had prior knowledge. Who within Morgan Stanley had this knowledge prior to June 17? The Court should not simply accept without explanation Morgan Stanley's unsupported and facially illogical claim that facts known by its senior in-house counsel working on this case were unknown to "Morgan Stanley" for many months.

The Court's investigation — which could be most efficiently conducted with the assistance of undersigned counsel — need not be complex or lengthy. Videotaped depositions could be held in the Court's jury room and would focus primarily on a handful of witnesses, including the four individual contemnors named in this Petition. And the subpoena directed at

¹ The principal categories of documents would include:

- all analyses of, responses to, or documents concerning Morgan Stanley's June 17, 2005 Notice and/or the statements contained in that Notice;
- all analyses of, responses to, or documents concerning Morgan Stanley's allegedly "new" e-mail search;
- all e-mails discovered by Morgan Stanley's allegedly "new" e-mail search responsive to any of CPH's prior document-production requests;
- all documents concerning Morgan Stanley's review of the e-mails discovered by Morgan Stanley's allegedly "new" e-mail search;
- all documents concerning Mr. Doyle's January 31, 2005 declaration, now withdrawn;
- all documents concerning Morgan Stanley's Offers of Proof from Mr. Cusick, Ms. Lee, and Mr. Doyle; and
- all documents concerning any communication (whether oral, written, or electronic) between, among, or involving any of the following: Mr. Kempf, Mr. Cusick, Ms. Lee, Mr. Doyle, any attorneys or employees at the law firms of Kellogg Huber Hansen Todd Evans & Figel PLLC, Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Carlton Fields PA, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood LLP, or Shearman & Sterling LLP; and concerning the allegedly "new" e-mail search, the accuracy and comprehensiveness of prior e-mail searches, or the accuracy of any oral testimony, affidavit, declaration, representation by counsel, or statement in any paper served or filed in this action concerning any of the e-mail issues that were the subject of CPH's motions or of the Court's March 1 or March 23, 2005 Orders.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should (1) order Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, Donald G. Kempf, Jr., James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle to appear before the Court to show cause why they should not be held in criminal contempt of Court; and (2) appoint undersigned counsel to assist the Court in preparing for and conducting the contempt hearing pursuant to Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.840(d).

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT,
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

AFFIDAVIT OF ARTHUR RIEL

Arthur Riel, being first duly sworn, on oath states as follows:

1. From September 11, 2000 through September 27, 2005 I was employed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley"); my title was Executive Director of Technology. I was placed on administrative leave by Morgan Stanley on August 18, 2004 and my employment was terminated by Morgan Stanley on September 27, 2005.

2. In the spring of 2001, I occupied the position of Executive Director in charge of the Law and Compliance IT Organization ("Law IT Organization"). The Law IT Organization handles technology solutions for Morgan Stanley's Law Division ("Law Division"). The Law Division is comprised of several units, including Litigation and Compliance, all of which report directly to the Chief Legal Officer, Donald Kempf. Throughout my tenure within the Law IT Organization, I interacted with Morgan Stanley attorneys in Litigation and Compliance of the Law Division including, Donald Kempf, David Elston, Scott Rockoff, Robert Koppenol and Mihal Nahari in Compliance, and James Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, Zach Stern, James Magnan, Mary Lou Peters and James Doyle in Litigation.

3. In January 2001 Shelley Leibowitz, who I reported to at the time, requested that I architect a solution to the e-mail retention issues as requested by Donald Kempf which had previously been analyzed by the Institutional IT Division of Morgan Stanley. This project was de-prioritized by Compliance of the Law Division in the Spring of 2001, at which time the Law IT Organization stopped analyzing the project. In early 2002, Compliance of the Law Division restarted the project and David Elston assigned to the Law IT Organization the responsibility to develop and manage an e-mail archive system designed to capture, save and maintain in searchable form all Morgan Stanley e-mail created after January 1, 2003. Initially a date was not set as to when the total project was to be accomplished. However, in May 2002 the Law IT Organization created a schedule with an internal deadline of October 2002 and a "published" deadline of January 1, 2003. An SEC order against Morgan Stanley required the archive be operational by March 1, 2003.

4. In Spring of 2002 I became aware of 39,000 back-up tapes while attending meetings with William Hollister and Robert Saunders of the Institutional IT Storage Group ("Saunders' Group") in order to prepare for a meeting with the SEC concerning e-mail production requirements.

5. During the first quarter of 2003 I was requested by James Cusick of Litigation of the Law Division to architect a solution that would allow Morgan Stanley to integrate into the archive e-mails dated earlier than January 1, 2003 contained in Morgan Stanley back-up tapes. The Law IT Organization was first to target the approximately 35,000 back-up tapes, that Mr. Hollister indicated were known to contain some e-mail data. In the Spring of 2003 Mr. Hollister explained in a meeting that the 4,000 tape discrepancy was due to his review of the 39,000 tapes revealed that 4,000 did not have any e-mail data within the tape and were therefore recycled. So in Mr. Hollister's and Mr. Saunders' view the total number of back-up tapes was 35,000. I presented an integration plan directly to Donald Kempf sometime toward the end of the second quarter 2003, which included specific information relating to the existence of over 35,000 back-up tapes that needed to be processed and placed in the archive as part of the project. Mr. Kempf approved the integration plan and signed a multi-million dollar expense request to fund the project.

6. The Law IT Organization did not have the responsibility at Morgan Stanley to locate, control or otherwise inventory pre-2003 back-up tapes containing e-mail. The responsibility to locate, control or otherwise inventory pre-2003 back-up tapes was the responsibility of the Saunders' Group headed by Robert Saunders or William Hollister who was Robert Saunders' superior at the time that the solution was designed. As the Saunders' Group located the back-up tapes, they sent the tapes to an outside vendor to restore and "de-dupe" (eliminate duplicative messages) the e-mails. The vendor would then return the culled e-mail messages on SDLT tapes to Ms. Gunn within the Saunders' Group who in turn would arrange for the data to be entered on a disk in order to provide it to the Law IT Organization for loading in the archive. Until the data was placed on a disk the Law IT Organization, had no access, control or responsibility for e-mail data or back-up tapes not processed as of that time.

7. By May 2004 the Saunders' Group and the vendor had restored in excess of 300,000,000 pre-2003 e-mails from 35,000 back-up tapes, although the restoration process was not complete at that time. In May of 2004, I became aware that the Saunders' Group had acknowledged the existence of in excess of 1,000 DLT tapes located in a Brooklyn Security Office ("Brooklyn tapes"). I believe it was the fall 2003 that the Saunders' Group disclosed the existence of a cache of 8mm tapes, all of which might contain e-mail. (Exhibit A, E-mail Archive Meeting Minutes, 5/6/04)

8. On June 7, 2004 I advised James Cusick and Soo-Mi Lee in Litigation of the Law Department of the existence of the Brooklyn tapes and the fact that they may contain e-mail:

The storage folks found an additional 1,600 backup tapes in a closet. We are not sure if they have email on them, but it is expected that they predate 1/2000. Unless you say otherwise, I have told the storage team to process them like the other backup tapes (i.e. dump them, screen for email, dedupe the email, and give it to us). I will inform you if any pre-2000 email tapes are found in this batch.

(Exhibit B, E-mail, 6/7/04)

9. As early as July 2, 2004, I knew that the Brooklyn and 8mm tapes contained e-mail dating back at least to 1998:

We looked at the "found" tapes we were able to restore and 90 of them had mail. We got the label (internal) off 4 of them and the dates are 5/12/99, 5/14/99, 8/03/99, and 2/18/01. Obviously there is pre 2000 mail.

We also catalogued 2 of the 8mm test tapes we have and the dates on those are 6/16/98 and 6/7/98 so again there is pre 2000 mail there.

(Exhibit C, E-mail, 7/2/04)

10. In this regard, in a report to Compliance of the Law Division relating to issues existing as of July 2, 2004, Mr. Elston and members of Compliance of the Law Division was forwarded information and I informed Mr. Elston and many of his direct reports that e-mail was contained in the Brooklyn tapes. I made a presentation in this regard directly to Mr. Elston and many of his direct reports who attended the meeting held on or about July 8, 2004:

Notes: All tapes in the original project have been archived. Currently working on 1600 additional tapes.

7/10/04: 1000 discovered tapes have different format from others. Vendor had to modify code. Will start receiving data from tapes the week of 7/15.

(Exhibit D, Priority Project Status Report, 7/2/04)

11. I have been informed that Allison Gorman has asserted that "unexpected delays" in producing e-mails were caused by "unknown software clichés." To my knowledge, two software issues indicated by Ms. Gorman arose regarding the project for which the Law IT Organization was responsible, which was with respect to (i) pre-2003 e-mails that were rejected during initial processing by the Law IT Organization and (ii) less than accurate group membership data. With respect to (i) above Compliance of the Law Division was informed of this software issue early in the project by January 2004 and decided that corrective action if at all, would take place at the end of the project. This software issue was again discussed and reported in the August 2004 Compliance Status meeting. With respect to (ii) above I was informed by Ms. Zhang of Institutional IT, that e-mail group membership data prior to January 1, 2003 was not available. I immediately notified Compliance of the Law Division, specifically Scott Rockoff, who determined the Law IT Organization should use the January 2003 e-mail group membership data for pre-January 2003 e-mail production. Therefore, Ms. Gorman's assertion be it directly or indirectly, that these two issues were unknown to Morgan Stanley as of October 2004 are false.

12. In the August 2004 Compliance Status meeting I attended with Mr. Elston and many of his direct reports, I reported on the status of the pre-2003 e-mail migration to the archive. I informed them at this meeting that the archiving of the e-mail data from the Brooklyn tapes was ongoing and expected to be completed by August 30, 2004. This status report was formalized in writing and distributed that month.

13. On June 23, 2004 I executed a Certification of Compliance ("Certification") at the request of either Jim Doyle, Jim Magnan or Zach Stern, which I ultimately determined was Jim Doyle. Mr. Doyle had not initially sought me to execute the Certification, but rather addressed the request to Anush Danilyan, a college student who performed data entry functions, a relatively junior and a low level position within the Law IT Organization. Ms. Danilyan sought guidance from Christopher Muscatella, her supervisor, who promptly brought the Certification to my attention. I determined that Ms. Danilyan was too junior to execute such a document. My understanding of what I was certifying was that a search of the archive had been conducted and that everything responsive that resulted from the search had been produced. I did not understand that by signing the Certification I was certifying that all responsive e-mail from any Morgan Stanley source whatsoever, including any particular set of back-up tapes was produced. Indeed, I could not make such a certification nor should Morgan Stanley even request such of the Law IT Organization, because it was known that the Saunders' Group possessed a substantial quantity of as yet unprocessed tapes. I would have been surprised that anyone connected to the Law Division particularly Litigation ask any person employed in the Law IT Organization to make such a certification since the Law Division was aware that the Law IT Organization was not in a position to do so. The Saunders' Group, not the Law IT Organization, controlled the collection, processing and inventorying of tapes for pre-2003 e-mail, so only the Saunders' Group could certify whether all possible tapes had been located, processed and produced. The Law IT Organization could only attest to what it had done with the data provided by the Saunders' Group.

14. On or about April 26, 2005 it was requested by Zach Stern within Litigation of the Law Division to review a draft of a proffer of testimony. The draft proffer submitted by Mr. Stern included a paragraph that stated I did not advise the Law Division after June 7, 2004 about any knowledge I may have that there were e-mails contained on the Brooklyn tapes and 8mm tapes. On or about April 28, 2005 Mr. Stern's proffer was rejected and he was informed that I had recalled informing Mr. Elston and many of his direct reports in Compliance of the Law Division on July 8, 2004, both orally and in writing, that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mail data. While I do not have absolute recollection of advising Mr. Cusick in Litigation of the Law Division, it is my strong conviction that he requested e-mail data from the Brooklyn tapes be placed on a separate SDLT tape. This would have been requested by Litigation of the Law Division in my experience at Morgan Stanley, although I had already informed Compliance of the Law Division. The Morgan Stanley monthly Compliance Status meeting will document my recollection of informing Compliance of the Law Division in this regard.

15. I have been made aware that Morgan Stanley has, on June 17, 2005, retracted a number of statements it previously made, and now concedes that its Law

Division was aware in July 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained e-mail and that the 8mm tapes existed:

1. In the listed offers of proof and related statements, Morgan Stanley asserted that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.

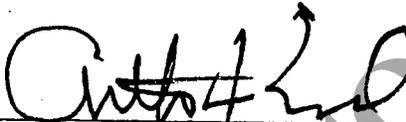

2. As a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.

16. Morgan Stanley's current claim of finding e-mail(s) in a "new search" of the archive does not make sense to me. Any e-mail dated January 1, 2003 or later was captured in near real-time from Morgan Stanley's mail hubs. Unlike e-mail dated before January 1, 2003, to the best of my knowledge there can not be a more complete source of data than the archive.

17. Any search for 2004 e-mails made in 2005—whether in February, March, April or June – should have identified exactly the same search results. There is a simple, inexpensive way to verify exactly when Morgan Stanley did discover the e-mail or e-mails that it represents led it to the June 17, 2005 retraction. The archive is designed so that every e-mail is assigned a unique message ID number. The archive is further designed to log all searches and the message ID's of all returned results. Thus armed with the message ID of the subject e-mail, it is a simple process to generate a log which will show exactly when the message was first identified in a search, as of my last day of active employment or August 18, 2004.

18. I am ready and willing to appear for live testimony to affirm or supplement the matters addressed in this affidavit.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
 2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH T.
 3 MAASS, in Chambers, in the Palm Beach County
 4 Courthouse, West Palm Beach, Florida, on Thursday,
 5 November 3, 2005 starting at 2:56 p.m., with
 6 appearances as hereinabove noted, to wit:
 7 * * *
 8 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Have a seat.
 9 MR. IANNO: Afternoon, Your Honor.
 10 MR. SCAROLA: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
 11 THE COURT: And we're here on Coleman's
 12 verified petition for show cause order regarding
 13 Morgan Stanley's criminal contempt of court.
 14 Why don't we all introduce ourselves. Front row
 15 I know.
 16 MR. SCAROLA: Do we have enough time, Your
 17 Honor? We'll skip our introductions.
 18 THE COURT: The folks I don't know or
 19 haven't met personally probably should introduce
 20 themselves, maybe starting in the back row.
 21 Mr. Shaw, obviously I know you.
 22 MR. SCHWARTZ: Barry Schwartz.
 23 MR. HIRSCH: Sam Hirsch.
 24 THE COURT: I know you.
 25 MR. DUNCAN: Douglas Duncan.

1 speaking of.
 2 MR. HANSEN: We've withdrawn the offers of
 3 proof, I believe, totally, Your Honor. The
 4 Doyle one must be the one that refers to the
 5 fifth paragraph.
 6 THE COURT: I have an offer of proof as to
 7 three, as I understand it. I also have the 8 declaration as to Mr. Doyle. The declaration as
 9 to Mr. Doyle is paragraph 3B of your motion.
 10 I'm talking about of the notice.
 11 MR. HANSEN: There's also a proffer for
 12 Mr. Doyle.
 13 THE COURT: Right. And isn't that the offer
 14 of proof?
 15 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.
 16 THE COURT: Right. So what I'm talking
 17 about now is 3A. Do you have that in front of 18 you with the notice?
 19 MR. HANSEN: I do have it, Your Honor.
 20 THE COURT: Okay. The parenthetical, is
 21 that meant to apply only to the offer of proof
 22 for Mr. Doyle or as to all three?
 23 MR. HANSEN: I believe that's as to
 24 Mr. Doyle, Your Honor.
 25 THE COURT: Okay. So if we go to Mr. Doyle,

1 October 2004; to the best of my knowledge,
 2 nobody in the law division knew about it until
 3 October of 2004; and then have it turn out, oh,
 4 somebody in the law division did actually know
 5 in July of 2004. Those are not three
 6 inconsistent statements.
 7 So I'm trying to figure out when you say
 8 you're correcting... for instance, when you
 9 withdraw Miss Lee's statement that she didn't
 10 know until October of 2004, I'm assuming you are
 11 now saying she did know before then or simply 12 that she was mistaken in believing nobody in the 13 law division knew before then.
 14 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I would leave that
 15 to Miss Lee's counsel. From Morgan Stanley's
 16 standpoint we didn't want to make any
 17 representation. We're withdrawing any
 18 suggestion from any witness proffered to the
 19 court that members of the law division, and that
 20 includes all those people, didn't know.
 21 THE COURT: What are you affirmatively
 22 representing now, that Morgan Stanley is
 23 correcting the record to show these three
 24 individuals did know in July of 2004 or simply
 25 some unnamed person in the law division knew?

1 I want to make sure first I understand what
 2 you're withdrawing as to him. You're
 3 withdrawing the first sentence of one, two,
 4 three -- you're withdrawing the statement
 5 Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of the 6 e-mail backup tapes which had been referred to
 7 as the Brooklyn tapes until late October, 2004.
 8 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.
 9 THE COURT: And you're withdrawing the
 10 statement Mr. Doyle did not learn of the 11 existence of the eight-millimeter tapes
 12 containing e-mail until November 2004.
 13 MR. HANSEN: Morgan Stanley is withdrawing
 14 those things, yes, has withdrawn those.
 15 THE COURT: Okay. Now as to the other two,
 16 you're withdrawing them in their entirety as to
 17 Cusick and Lee, or are you withdrawing still 18 just -- I'm trying to figure out what you're
 19 withdrawing first.
 20 MR. HANSEN: The gist of it is what we're
 21 withdrawing is anything that relates to the
 22 subject matter.
 23 THE COURT: I'm still sort of trying to
 24 clarify it. To me it's not inconsistent for
 25 Miss Lee to say I didn't know about it until

1 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I think the proffer
 2 through the notice --
 3 THE COURT: I don't understand. Again, if I
 4 understood it, I wouldn't ask the questions. I
 5 mean, if you're saying that that's not something
 6 you're prepared to clarify, that's fine, we can
 7 go forward.
 8 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I guess I'm not
 9 prepared to go beyond what the notice says. To
 10 the extent it's unclear, I apologize. But we
 11 have withdrawn any suggestion on the subject
 12 from those proffers. In other words -- there's
 13 no -- in other words, Your Honor, previously
 14 there was a representation and a proffer from
 15 Miss Lee on that subject. Take her for example.
 16 THE COURT: Miss Lee said I didn't know
 17 before October. I'm using her as an example. I
 18 didn't know before October of 2004. And to the 19 best of my knowledge, nobody from the law
 20 division did.
 21 MR. HANSEN: And that's withdrawn.
 22 THE COURT: But now you've said you've
 23 corrected that to say someone in the law
 24 division did know in July of 2004. Well, those
 25 three statements are not inconsistent with each

1 other, so I'm not sure why -- I'm not sure -- By
2 withdrawing the first two, are you telling me
3 they were simply wrong, or are you just saying
4 you want to just take them out of the record,
5 you're not telling me whether they're wrong or
6 right?

7 MR. HANSEN: Well, I think what we're
8 saying, Your Honor, is several things. Maybe
9 there's some things we're saying, some things
10 we're not saying. What we're saying is we want
11 no representation to the Court from Morgan
12 Stanley about any members of the law division
13 and when they were aware of those subjects.
14 We've taken them out. There were proffers on 15 that subject. We've withdrawn the proffers on
16 that subject. They don't exist in the record.
17 We have not made affirmative representation on 18 behalf of the individuals as to what they knew
19 and when they knew it.

20 THE COURT: So you're not taking out when
21 Miss Lee said she didn't know until October of 22 2004. You're not prepared to admit that was
23 incorrect. You're just taking -- we're taking
24 it out of the record? How are we doing that?

25 MR. HANSEN: We're correcting the record,

1 affirmatively representing the members of the
2 law division were aware. We previously made an
3 argument based on that.

4 THE COURT: But what you want to do is
5 remove the proffer that Miss Lee did not know
6 until October 2004. And I need to know are you
7 just trying to reopen the proffer and remove
8 that and put it to the side and not tell me
9 anything about the subject, or are you telling
10 me that was wrong?

11 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, we have stated that
12 we did not believe those proffers and those
13 subjects should be relied upon by the Court, so
14 we've withdrawn them.

15 THE COURT: But you're not prepared to
16 say --

17 MR. HANSEN: I can't make a representation.

18 THE COURT: -- you believe it was wrong --

19 MR. HANSEN: I can't make representation of
20 Miss Lee's knowledge or lack of knowledge.

21 THE COURT: But it was a notice filed by
22 Morgan Stanley. I'm trying to figure out what
23 you meant.

24 MR. HANSEN: We've asked Your Honor not to
25 credit that. We've said it is erroneous.

1 Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Then I need to know what -- are
3 you saying we submitted a proffer from Miss Lee
4 that said she didn't know until October 2004.
5 We have an ethical obligation. We recognize
6 that that's erroneous, and we're now correcting
7 it to say she did know July of 2004, or are you
8 saying we made a proffer; it's in the record
9 Miss Lee knew in October 2004. We're not
10 prepared to say that was wrong, but we want to 11 somehow open up the record and remove that piece
12 of paper --

13 MR. HANSEN: We've withdrawn the
14 representation.

15 THE COURT: Then -- We can talk procedurally
16 what that means, but I had understood from a
17 prior discussion that Morgan Stanley felt it had
18 an ethical obligation to correct erroneous --
19 it's in the testimony, but erroneous proffers in 20 the record. Now what you're telling me is
21 you're not correcting an erroneous proffer
22 because you're not suggesting what she said was
23 wrong. You simply want to remove a part of 24 proffer.

25 MR. HANSEN: No, Your Honor, we're

1 THE COURT: I can think of a bunch of
2 procedural questions, but I understand what, I
3 think, you're telling me, and that's you're not
4 willing to add what we have.

5 MR. HANSEN: No, Your Honor. Let me see if
6 I can be more clear. I don't think we can stand
7 here and supplement, I don't, frankly, think
8 we're required or should be required to provide
9 additional evidence. The question is whether
10 there's a record about a lie. So I don't want
11 to get bypassed.

12 THE COURT: I understand.

13 MR. HANSEN: But if you're asking what the
14 technical -- what we have done here, we have
15 said, as Morgan Stanley, not as Miss Lee or her
16 counsel --

17 THE COURT: No, I understand.

18 MR. HANSEN: -- we have said, Your Honor,
19 these proffers were made on this subject, and we
20 don't believe you should rely on them. Members
21 of the law department were aware of these facts
22 in July of '04.

23 THE COURT: That's a little bit different
24 than what -- and maybe I misunderstood what you
25 told me at a prior hearing. I thought what

1 Morgan Stanley was saying -- and, again, I'm a
2 little confused by the whole notice, but I
3 thought what Morgan Stanley was saying is we
4 made representations to you. We now know as
5 officers of the Court and a party before the
6 Court they were incorrect, and we want to make
7 them correct. What you're now telling me is,
8 well, I'm not really prepared to say they were
9 incorrect, but we just want to remove them.

10 MR. HANSEN: From Morgan Stanley's
11 standpoint, Your Honor, we believe they were 12 incorrect and we take them back. But, Your
13 Honor, I just don't think it's appropriate to
14 ask me to represent Miss Lee's knowledge.

15 THE COURT: I'm not at all.

16 MR. HANSEN: I can tell you as Morgan
17 Stanley's lawyer we put in a proffer from her.
18 We've told the Court that's inaccurate. We
19 don't want it relied upon.

20 THE COURT: All I'm asking -- And let me ask
21 a simple question. In submitting the notice, is
22 it Morgan Stanley's position that Ms. Lee's
23 proffer that she was not aware of the existence
24 of the e-mail or the tapes until October or
25 November of 2004, is that incorrect?

1 withdrawn in their entirety because we believe
2 them to be inaccurate on that subject.

3 THE COURT: The second question I had about
4 the notice, and you tell me, is you say you want
5 to correct the record to state the law division
6 was aware in July of 2004 that some Brooklyn
7 tapes contained e-mail and certain
8 eight-millimeter tapes existed. Do you mean to
9 say "first aware" or do you mean simply to say
10 "aware"?

11 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, it says what it
12 says. The prior discussion had been whether
13 July or October. Those were the suggested
14 dates. And this says that -- it says what it
15 says.

16 THE COURT: So you're not attempting to say
17 that was when Morgan Stanley was first aware?
18 You're simply saying they were aware?

19 MR. HANSEN: We have said they were aware at
20 that time.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. HANSEN: And that was the focus of the 23 issue before us, so we've addressed the focus of 24 the issue before. Again, this is not a
25 representation -- I wish to be very clear --

1 MR. HANSEN: That is Morgan Stanley's
2 position, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: That that was not a correct
4 statement?

5 MR. HANSEN: That there would be evidence to
6 suggest notice to the people for proffers
7 submitted. Yeah, we're not talking about --

8 THE COURT: Notice to Miss Lee. Not just
9 that somebody in the law department knew about
10 it.

11 MR. HANSEN: Not just somebody. As to
12 Miss Lee's representation, we believe that was 13 inaccurate, and we have sought to have it, as
14 Morgan Stanley, withdrawn. But I can't say,
15 Your Honor, and I don't have Miss Lee's state of
16 mind or what she knew and when she knew it.

17 And I assert in the strongest terms that
18 there is nothing to suggest that Ms. Lee or any
19 other Morgan Stanley person deliberately
20 misstated their knowledge. But I am stating
21 that from Morgan Stanley's standpoint we have
22 corrected the prior representations to take out
23 things we believe to be inaccurate. And
24 Ms. Lee's representation about her knowledge of 25 the e-mail, Mr. Doyle, Mr. Cusick have been

1 THE COURT: I just don't want to
2 misapprehend what it is the notice is saying.
3 The notice is not saying we were first aware in
4 July 2004. It's not saying it was. It's just
5 saying we were aware in July of 2004.

6 MR. HANSEN: It's -- Certainly the
7 implication of notice would suggest first aware,
8 Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: It is, and that's why I want
10 to -- before I accept that implication as what
11 you intended to convey I want to know what
12 that --

13 MR. HANSEN: That's the implication of the 14 notice. I suspect the way -- again, we're
15 getting into the drafting of it. That was the 16 issue before July versus October. So I think
17 the implication of the notice is that was when
18 it came, the new information came --

19 THE COURT: But is Morgan Stanley standing
20 on that implication that what you intend to say
21 is that you, Morgan -- the law division was 22 first aware in July of 2004? Because that is
23 the implication. And before we argue from that
24 I want to make sure we're all clear on what
25 we're talking about.

1 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, on that particular
2 point, this notice corrected previous
3 statements. I'm aware Mr. Reil comes into Court
4 on his third affidavit and says he told people
5 in January of '04 about the eight-millimeter
6 tapes, for example. That's a recent allegation
7 by Mr. Riel.

8 THE COURT: As I said, when I first read
9 this, to me what it said was that the law
10 division was first aware in July of 2004. And,
11 again, I agree with you, that was the
12 implication. If that's not what Morgan Stanley
13 intends it to say, that's fine. I just need to
14 know what it says.

15 MR. HANSEN: I think that's the fair reading
16 of the notice, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: But is that what you intend --
18 is Morgan Stanley telling me the law division
19 was first aware July of 2004 of the existence of
20 the e-mail and the eight-millimeter tapes?

21 MR. HANSEN: Morgan Stanley is making that
22 representation to the Court based on its
23 knowledge at the time.

24 THE COURT: Right here now?

25 MR. HANSEN: Right here now? Your Honor --

1 opposition papers you talk about the law
2 division being informed in July of 2004. Was
3 that just a -- well, I mean informed -- that
4 there was some affirmative act in July of 2004.
5 Although I didn't see that from the notice. Is
6 that -- are we just parsing words or?

7 MR. HANSEN: Was aware -- they were on
8 notice. I think, you know, that could be a
9 number of things.

10 THE COURT: When you say informed can we
11 just say they knew?

12 MR. HANSEN: Could have been from a
13 conversation, could have been from an e-mail.

14 THE COURT: Sure.

15 MR. HANSEN: They were on notice. They were
16 made aware. They are informed.

17 THE COURT: We agree the notice doesn't tell
18 me something specific happened in July of 2004
19 to inform Morgan Stanley's law division of the
20 e-mail or the tapes?

21 MR. HANSEN: Judge, again, I think all we
22 can do is stand on what we filed as the notice.

23 THE COURT: I appreciate that.

24 MR. HANSEN: As to the extent there are any
25 new -- I don't want to provide additional

1 THE COURT: Or as of even the day you filed
2 this, June 17th of 2005?

3 MR. HANSEN: As of the day we filed it
4 Morgan Stanley -- this was the correction Morgan
5 Stanley sought to make.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Again, I just want to
7 make sure we're both really clear. Are you
8 telling me I should read this and Morgan Stanley
9 intends me to read it as saying it's corrected
10 to state that the law division was first aware
11 in July of 2004?

12 MR. HANSEN: I think that's the fair reading
13 of it, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Is that the reading Morgan
15 Stanley wants me to accept for purposes of this
16 hearing?

17 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I think for
18 purposes of this hearing we should stand on what
19 we've provided.

20 THE COURT: If you just want to say stand on
21 the words, that's fine. Anything more?

22 MR. HANSEN: I don't want to provide any
23 more or less.

24 THE COURT: That's fine. The final question
25 I have, and it's a minor point, in some of your

1 testimony. I'm not in a position to make
2 representations of fact as to what's true and
3 what's not true. This was the notice supplied
4 by Morgan Stanley.

5 THE COURT: Again, I just want to understand
6 what you meant. That's all. So as I understand
7 it, you are telling me that it's Morgan
8 Stanley's position that the statements by
9 Mr. Cusick, Mr. Doyle and Miss Lee that they
10 were unaware of the e-mail or the
11 eight-millimeter tapes until October, November
12 of 2004 was simply incorrect. And we can talk
13 about whether it was an intentional or -- I'm
14 not -- was simply incorrect. That their
15 statements to the best of their knowledge nobody
16 in the law division even knew about the e-mail
17 or eight-millimeter tapes until October or
18 November 2004 was simply incorrect. And, in 19 addition, a third fact was at least somebody in 20 the law division knew of the e-mail and
21 eight-millimeter tapes in July of 2004.

22 MR. HANSEN: It says the law division.

23 THE COURT: Right. We don't know -- we
24 don't know who.

25 MR. HANSEN: Not further specified.

1 That's --
 2 THE COURT: Is that what you're telling me?
 3 MR. HANSEN: That's accurate.
 4 THE COURT: And what you're saying is that
 5 the law division or someone in it was aware of
 6 the e-mail and the tapes in July of 2004, but
 7 that doesn't necessarily imply when it was first
 8 learned?
 9 MR. HANSEN: I just don't think I can do any
 10 better than -- say any other words.
 11 THE COURT: I appreciate the clarification.
 12 Thanks. That's all I needed to know.
 13 How do you want to divide up time?
 14 MR. SCAROLA: May I make a suggestion, Your
 15 Honor, that perhaps one additional clarification
 16 would be helpful?
 17 THE COURT: And what would that be?
 18 MR. SCAROLA: In the June 17 notice there is
 19 a reference to a new e-mail search and a review
 20 of e-mails discovered by new e-mail search. I'm 21 wondering whether Morgan Stanley would like to
 22 tell us what that means.
 23 THE COURT: That's not -- I understand your
 24 client's curiosity, and I don't think that's
 25 material to what I'm doing today.

1 would say ten minutes.
 2 THE COURT: Okay.
 3 MR. FISKE: Maybe a little more.
 4 THE COURT: Sure.
 5 MR. LUBIN: Your Honor, on behalf of
 6 Mr. Doyle probably about 15 minutes is what it
 7 would take depending on the questions the Court
 8 may have.
 9 THE COURT: Sure.
 10 MS. STRAUSS: Your Honor, on behalf of 11 Miss Lee, about 10 to 15 minutes as well.
 12 THE COURT: Okay.
 13 MR. DUNCAN: And on behalf of Mr. Kempf, the 14 same, Your Honor.
 15 THE COURT: That's fine. Okay.
 16 Mr. Scarola, I guess you're first up. And I can 17 tell you, I'm sure you have your presentation.
 18 I had a couple questions. Maybe I can just pose 19 them, and you can hit them when you do your
 20 presentation.
 21 MR. SCAROLA: Certainly.
 22 THE COURT: First of all, one is not a
 23 question. It's merely a request. I need to be 24 very clear from the presentation what you think 25 were the contemptuous acts as to each of the

1 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
 2 THE COURT: How do we want to divide our
 3 time?
 4 MR. SCAROLA: Is it my understanding that we
 5 have a total of two hours?
 6 THE COURT: We do. Obviously we'll go until 7 we're done. I mean, I'm not going to stop at 8 6:00 if we're not done by then. So tell me how 9 long you need and how you want me to divide it
 10 up.
 11 MR. SCAROLA: I would think Your Honor
 12 initially I need somewhere between 15 minutes
 13 and 25 minutes for introductory remarks and 14 would save the balance of my time for rebuttal.
 15 THE COURT: Okay.
 16 MR. SCAROLA: Might take a whole lot less
 17 than that initially.
 18 THE COURT: Okay. We'll see. Mr. Hansen,
 19 you're responding on behalf of Morgan Stanley?
 20 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. I expect 20
 21 minutes, Your Honor.
 22 THE COURT: I'm not going to time. I'm
 23 trying to figure out about how long we think 24 we'll go.
 25 MR. FISKE: Your Honor, for Mr. Cusick I

1 attorneys you're seeking to have me issue orders
 2 to show cause against. In particular, I need to
 3 have you address, the only thing I think I saw
 4 under oath was something from Mr. Doyle and
 5 whether it's contemptuous to do an offer proof,
 6 for Morgan Stanley to give me an offer of proof
 7 unsigned by an in-house counsel and have it
 8 contain something erroneous and how that would 9 give rise to a contempt against the person named
 10 in the offer of proof.
 11 Also looking at the case law cited by both 12 sides you have to show, as I understand it, that 13 the false statement obstructed, had the effect
 14 of obstructing the judicial process. And I
 15 guess what would be the response to the 16 contention that that even if we had had the 17 knowledge at the time we were doing all this,
 18 the law division knew of this in July as opposed
 19 to November, we may have spent less time, but 20 the outcome would have been the same, so
 21 ultimately it did not obstruct the judicial 22 process. We maybe spun our wheels for a while 23 longer, but it didn't effect the outcome of the 24 case.
 25 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like me to start

1 with a response to the last question first?

2 THE COURT: However you want to start is
3 fine.

4 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. Let me address the
5 last question first, if I could, Your Honor. It
6 really ties in the first point --

7 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Go ahead.

8 MR. SCAROLA: It ties into the first point I
9 wanted to make, and that's an answer to the 10 question why bother? At this point why should 11 we become bothering with any of this? I think
12 it is incorrect to dismiss misinformation,
13 outright false representations to the Court and 14 failure to comply with direct court orders on 15 the basis that all they did was cause us to 16 waste time. I think that the efficiency of the 17 civil justice system is a very legitimate
18 concern on the part of the Court. And if, in 19 fact, all that happened, although I concede it
20 is not, I suggest it is not, but if all that 21 happened was that we spent hours, days, dealing 22 with issues that we should not have dealt with 23 because of the misrepresentations and the 24 failure to produce documents in direct violation
25 of the Court orders, that in and of itself would

1 November of 2004 that was really known in July
2 of 2004.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Or, more accurately, we
4 believe, in December of 2003 or January of 2004
5 giving credence, as I suggest we should be, to 6 Mr. Riel's affidavit.

7 THE COURT: Sure. But we're still sort of 8 back to where we are. Going back -- I did go
9 back and re-read the sanctions orders to try to 10 recreate in my head where we were because it's a 11 while ago now, at least for me. And obviously 12 what I found, which was that the Morgan Stanley
13 personnel knew about the e-mail and the 14 eight-millimeter tapes, and whether or not they
15 choose to share that information with in-house
16 counsel probably had some bearing on the 17 appropriateness of the continuance and the 18 timing of some of the discovery items, but 19 didn't change the underlying fact that Morgan
20 Stanley itself had information that it simply 21 chose not to share with the Court.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I suggest, Your Honor, that of 23 equal significance is the fact that in the midst
24 of proceedings focusing on Morgan Stanley's
25 litigation misconduct, Morgan Stanley,

1 be a sufficient obstruction to warrant the
2 Court's dealing with these matters by virtue of 3 criminal contempt.

4 But that isn't all that happened. There
5 were indeed substantial arguments about how the 6 jury should be instructed concerning Morgan
7 Stanley's litigation misconduct. And I venture
8 to say that if we knew what we now know, and if 9 we had available to us the information that
10 apparently is readily available that Morgan
11 Stanley continues to choose to conceal from us
12 that what the jury would have been told about 13 Morgan Stanley's litigation misconduct may have 14 very well have been stated in different and far
15 stronger terms.

16 THE COURT: Maybe. But what you're
17 suggesting there is that you think Morgan
18 Stanley continued to fail to comply with the 19 court's discovery orders throughout the trial.
20 And whether or not that's true is not an issue
21 in front of me now. All we're talking about is 22 whether it was contemptuous to file, as I
23 understand it, the declaration and the three
24 offers of proof and make arguments to the court
25 based on them that something was not known until

1 regardless of what the individual respondents
2 did or did not know and when they did or did not
3 know, Morgan Stanley in the midst of hearings
4 relating to litigation misconduct chose to
5 continue to intentionally engage in litigation
6 misconduct to conceal the true nature and extent
7 of the litigation misconduct that was under 8 investigation.

9 I don't know -- I don't know how this court,
10 which has clearly recognized in its past orders
11 the significance of protecting the integrity of 12 the civil justice system, in light of the 13 information now before this court could possibly 14 choose not to proceed further.

15 THE COURT: Let's stop a moment and back up.
16 Let me have you address one of the questions I
17 asked. Be very specific to me as to each, both 18 as to Morgan Stanley and as to each of the 19 respondents what you think is the act or failure
20 to act that give -- that can give rise to 21 issuing an order to show cause for contempt.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Sure. Let's start with Morgan
23 Stanley first. Morgan Stanley repeatedly
24 represented to the Court under oath in the form
25 of Mr. Doyle's affidavit, unsworn to in the form

1 of the offers of proof. It repeatedly
2 misrepresented facts to this court that were
3 material to the Court's inquiry regarding what
4 Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel knew and when
5 Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel knew it.

6 THE COURT: Okay.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Those facts are now absolutely
8 beyond dispute as a consequence of the June 17
9 filing. Because we have -- we have received a 10 clarification at this point. If there were any 11 doubt about it before, at least as I understood
12 the tortured clarification that we ultimately 13 got this afternoon, they are acknowledging that 14 the statements that were made were false
15 statements. And they have withdrawn those false
16 statements.

17 THE COURT: Well, I think what they're
18 acknowledging, not to parse it, is that Morgan
19 Stanley believes they were false. Is that 20 accurate? You're not saying whether they were 21 false or not. You're just saying you believe
22 they were false based on a review of e-mails.

23 MR. HANSEN: We believe they're inaccurate,
24 Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

1 correcting the statements. It repeatedly says
2 we are correcting the statements and repeatedly
3 says that. They knew these statements would say
4 we didn't know until October. They're saying we
5 knew in July. I still am not sure --

6 THE COURT: Are we saying Mr. -- does Morgan
7 Stanley intend to say that its belief is that
8 Miss Lee knew in July? I'm still confused.

9 MR. HANSEN: I'm sorry, Your Honor. I don't
10 mean to parse words. Morgan Stanley is saying
11 that when we made those representations about --
12 proffered that testimony, Mr. Cusick, Mr. Doyle, 13 Miss Lee, any one of the witnesses about when 14 they knew something, that was incorrect. They 15 knew it in July.

16 THE COURT: Miss Lee knew it in July;
17 Mr. Cusick knew in July; and Mr. Doyle knew it
18 in July --

19 MR. HANSEN: That's Morgan Stanley's view.

20 THE COURT: Those three individuals knew in 21 July.

22 MR. HANSEN: And the law division.

23 THE COURT: And maybe others in the law
24 division but at a minimum those three.

25 MR. HANSEN: I didn't mean to parse words,

1 MR. HANSEN: False has the connotation, and
2 Mr. Scarola takes it as people were deliberately
3 lying to the court. We, Morgan Stanley, have 4 clarified that those statements about that
5 subject were not accurate. That's our -- that's 6 Morgan Stanley's position.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

8 MR. SCAROLA: This -- it astounds me that 9 after all we have been through in front of this 10 court about the tortured use of language on 11 Morgan Stanley's part throughout these
12 proceedings that they continue to torture
13 language as they do. If it -- if the statements
14 were not accurate, then they were false.
15 They're either true and accurate statements or 16 they are false statements. These statements
17 were false. The law department, the law
18 department knew prior to October of 2004 each of 19 the individuals who they have said made
20 statements that they didn't know prior to 21 October 2004, knew prior to October 2004.
22 That's what the June 17 statement says. It
23 doesn't just say we're withdrawing these 24 statements because we no longer know whether 25 they are true or false. It says we are

1 Your Honor, but I just didn't want to let it
2 pass this is somehow an intentional falsehood.
3 We concede. It's not an issue in this court as 4 to whether Morgan Stanley believes those are 5 accurate statements. They were not. They were 6 wrong and they've been corrected.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

8 MR. SCAROLA: With regard to Morgan Stanley
9 itself, the corporate entity, it is a basic 10 principle of Florida law that a corporation is 11 charged, a principal is charged with knowledge
12 of its agents acquired within the course and 13 scope of their agency.

14 THE COURT: Is that true as a concept of 15 criminal law as well?

16 MR. SCAROLA: It's true as a concept of all
17 Florida law as far as I know, Your Honor, that a
18 corporation --

19 THE COURT: I would need to look to see what 20 you need -- frankly, I haven't looked at 21 criminal stuff in a long enough time that I
22 understand --

23 MR. SCAROLA: It's my understanding that a
24 corporation being an imaginary being enjoying 25 the privilege of existence through the law, one

NOTICE

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this Notice and states as follows:

At the November 3, 2005 contempt hearing the Court inquired about the meaning of certain language in the Notice filed on June 17, 2005. The Notice is attached as Appendix "A." A copy of the colloquy with the Court is attached as Appendix "B." The Court's November 10, 2005 Order noted that the colloquy left the issue unresolved. See Appendix C. p.4, n.4. This Notice resolves any ambiguity. Morgan Stanley's Law Division was aware of the existence of the referenced e-mail back-up tapes and the presence of e-mail on some of those tapes prior to July 2004.

APPENDIX A

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN AND
FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: CA 03-5045 AI

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

NOTICE

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") hereby notifies the court and Plaintiff that it retracts, withdraws and corrects certain statements in the offers of proof, declaration, and related statements more fully described and listed below.

1. In the listed offers of proof and related statements, Morgan Stanley asserted that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.
2. As a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.
3. Morgan Stanley submits this Notice to: (a) correct Defendant's Offers of Proof from James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle (the first sentence of paragraph 4 and the entirety of paragraph 5); (b) withdraw the Declaration of James F. Doyle of January 31,

2005; and (c) correct related statements that reference or were based on the foregoing submissions¹.

4. Morgan Stanley does not limit this notice and correction to the specific documents described or listed herein. Morgan Stanley retracts, withdraws and corrects any and all statements, written or oral, made or submitted on its behalf, to the effect that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.

¹ The related statements include: paragraph 4 on pages 2-3 of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, dated January 31, 2005; the first two sentences of the second full paragraph on page 2 of Morgan Stanley's Supplemental Opposition to CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction, dated February 11, 2005; the last paragraph on page 6 that carries over to page 7 of Morgan Stanley Opposition to CPH's Motion for a Default Judgment, dated February 28, 2005; the last clause of the fourth sentence from the bottom and the last two sentences on page 20, and the first two sentences of the second full paragraph on page 31 of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion for a Default Judgment (corrected version filed March 13, 2005 and original version served March 12, 2005); the second sentence in the second full paragraph on page 7 of Morgan Stanley's Submission of Proposed Statement to be Read to the Jury Pursuant to Court's March 23, 2005 Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, dated March 28, 2005; the second sentence of the first full paragraph on page 24, the second sentence on page 26, the heading for Section C and the second and third sentences in that section on page 26, the last clause in the second to last sentence and the last sentence in that section on page 27, the final sentence on page 33 that carries over to the top of page 34, and the first clause of the second sentence of the first full paragraph on page 35 of the Summary of Offer of Proof Regarding Defendant's Alleged Litigation Misconduct (Addendum to Morgan Stanley's Opposition to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Second Renewed Motion for Correction and Clarification of the Litigation-Misconduct Statement) ("Summary of Offer of Proof"), originally filed May 12, 2005 and re-filed on May 17, 2005 in Phase II; February 2, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 132:1-7, 133:6-11, 147:22-25 (statements by counsel); the second half of the heading for Section C on page 15 and the first paragraph of page 17 of Morgan Stanley's Response to CPH's Chronology of Purported Discovery Abuses, dated March 15, 2005; the second, third and fifth rows (first sentence) on page 6 of Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Overnight Response to CPH's Additional Submission in Support of its Motion for Default, dated March 15, 2005; May 16, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 15266:4-8; and May 18, 2005 Hr'g Tr. 15607:4-8, 11-13, 15608:8-13, 17-19.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH T.
3 MAASS, in Chambers, in the Palm Beach County
4 Courthouse, West Palm Beach, Florida, on Thursday,
5 November 3, 2005 starting at 2:56 p.m., with
6 appearances as hereinabove noted, to wit:

7 * * *

8 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Have a seat.

9 MR. IANNO: Afternoon, Your Honor.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: And we're here on Coleman's
12 verified petition for show cause order regarding
13 Morgan Stanley's criminal contempt of court.
14 Why don't we all introduce ourselves. Front row
15 I know.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Do we have enough time, Your
17 Honor? We'll skip our introductions.

18 THE COURT: The folks I don't know or
19 haven't met personally probably should introduce
20 themselves, maybe starting in the back row.

21 Mr. Shaw, obviously I know you.

22 MR. SCHWARTZ: Barry Schwartz.

23 MR. HIRSCH: Sam Hirsch.

24 THE COURT: I know you.

25 MR. DUNCAN: Douglas Duncan.

1 MR. SIFFERT: John Siffert from New York,
2 Your Honor, for Don Kempf.

3 MS. STRAUSS: Audrey Strauss from New York
4 for Soo Mi-Lee.

5 MR. WEINBERG: Sandy Weinberg from Tampa for 6 Soo Mi-Lee.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. FISKE: Bob Fiske from New York for Jim
9 Cusick.

10 MR. LUBIN: Richard Lubin, Your Honor, for 11 James Doyle.

12 MR. LEVINE: Alan Levine for James Doyle.

13 MR. CRITTON: Bob Critton for Jim Cusick.

14 THE COURT: Did they not give you a chair?

15 MR. CRITTON: They relegated me.

16 THE COURT: We can find you a chair.

17 That's --

18 MR. CRITTON: That's okay. Would you prefer
19 that I be here?

20 THE COURT: I don't care. I don't want you
21 to think we didn't have room for you.

22 MR. CRITTON: I get better service here than 23 I do at my office.

24 THE COURT: I'm assuming that says a lot.

25 Thank you.

1 MR. CRITTON: It does. Thank you.

2 THE COURT: About your office.

3 I don't know how you want to best proceed or 4 how you want to divide up your time. I -- in 5 reviewing the papers, it strikes me that a large
6 part of Coleman's argument is based on the 7 notice that was filed by Morgan Stanley. I have 8 some questions about some of the statements in 9 the notice and what they mean, and I don't know
10 if Morgan Stanley is able to clarify those 11 first. And then maybe we can talk about how we 12 want to divide up time and go forward. Are you
13 willing --

14 MR. SCAROLA: We would be happy to proceed
15 in that fashion, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: And, Mr. Hansen, I'm not
17 suggesting your client -- Let me ask you what my 18 questions are first on the notice and maybe you
19 can help.

20 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Do you have a copy in front of 22 you?

23 MR. HANSEN: I will have one, Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: Okay, great. Thanks. As I said
25 at a prior hearing, I'm still a little befuddled

1 about the purpose of the notice. If we're going
2 to have -- I'd like to at least understand it.
3 Paragraph two, all right, it says, as a result
4 of review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail
5 search, Morgan Stanley determined that the 6 offers of proof and related statements should be
7 corrected to state the law -- and then corrected
8 to state something. Sort of I guess I have two
9 questions. First I want to understand
10 specifically what's being corrected in the 11 offers of proofs, because it strikes me that 12 what Morgan Stanley is saying here is that it
13 has since discovered its law division was aware 14 of e-mail on the Brooklyn tapes and the 15 eight-millimeter tapes in July of 2004, correct?

16 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: That's not inconsistent with 18 what's in the offers of proof as I understand
19 them. And I want to know are you withdrawing -- 20 tell me what you're withdrawing in the offers of 21 proof.

22 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I think you put
23 your finger on it. I don't want to go beyond
24 the words. I just want to be clear on what the 25 notice says and what we think it does. We

1 wanted to withdraw any suggestion to the court
2 that had previously been made, whether an offer
3 of proof or argument of counsel the law division
4 was not on notice of those facts in July of '04.

5 THE COURT: Sure, but, for instance, if you
6 go to paragraph three, it submits the notice to,
7 A, correct Defendant's offers of proof from the 8 three individuals. Although when it -- sort of 9 has the parenthetical, the first sentence
10 paragraph four and the entirety of paragraph
11 five, is that only the offer of proof as to 12 Mr. Doyle, or is it all three?

13 MR. HANSEN: All three, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: On the offers of proof all
15 you're amending is the first sentence of 16 paragraph four and the entirety of paragraph
17 five?

18 MR. HANSEN: That's where that subject was 19 addressed, I believe, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay. Then if we go to the 21 offers of proof, I didn't see a paragraph five,
22 unless we're counting paragraphs differently.
23 So tell me exactly when you say the first
24 paragraph of -- first sentence of paragraph four 25 what we're talking about, what verbiage we're

1 speaking of.

2 MR. HANSEN: We've withdrawn the offers of
3 proof, I believe, totally, Your Honor. The
4 Doyle one must be the one that refers to the
5 fifth paragraph.

6 THE COURT: I have an offer of proof as to
7 three, as I understand it. I also have the
8 declaration as to Mr. Doyle. The declaration as
9 to Mr. Doyle is paragraph 3B of your motion.
10 I'm talking about of the notice.

11 MR. HANSEN: There's also a proffer for
12 Mr. Doyle.

13 THE COURT: Right. And isn't that the offer
14 of proof?

15 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Right. So what I'm talking
17 about now is 3A. Do you have that in front of 18 you with the notice?

19 MR. HANSEN: I do have it, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay. The parenthetical, is
21 that meant to apply only to the offer of proof
22 for Mr. Doyle or as to all three?

23 MR. HANSEN: I believe that's as to
24 Mr. Doyle, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Okay. So if we go to Mr. Doyle,

1 I want to make sure first I understand what
2 you're withdrawing as to him. You're
3 withdrawing the first sentence of one, two,
4 three -- you're withdrawing the statement
5 Mr. Doyle did not learn of the existence of the
6 e-mail backup tapes which had been referred to
7 as the Brooklyn tapes until late October, 2004.

8 MR. HANSEN: Yes, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: And you're withdrawing the
10 statement Mr. Doyle did not learn of the
11 existence of the eight-millimeter tapes
12 containing e-mail until November 2004.

13 MR. HANSEN: Morgan Stanley is withdrawing
14 those things, yes, has withdrawn those.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Now as to the other two,
16 you're withdrawing them in their entirety as to
17 Cusick and Lee, or are you withdrawing still
18 just -- I'm trying to figure out what you're
19 withdrawing first.

20 MR. HANSEN: The gist of it is what we're
21 withdrawing is anything that relates to the
22 subject matter.

23 THE COURT: I'm still sort of trying to
24 clarify it. To me it's not inconsistent for
25 Miss Lee to say I didn't know about it until

1 October 2004; to the best of my knowledge,
2 nobody in the law division knew about it until
3 October of 2004; and then have it turn out, oh,
4 somebody in the law division did actually know
5 in July of 2004. Those are not three
6 inconsistent statements.

7 So I'm trying to figure out when you say
8 you're correcting... for instance, when you
9 withdraw Miss Lee's statement that she didn't
10 know until October of 2004, I'm assuming you are
11 now saying she did know before then or simply
12 that she was mistaken in believing nobody in the
13 law division knew before then.

14 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I would leave that
15 to Miss Lee's counsel. From Morgan Stanley's
16 standpoint we didn't want to make any
17 representation. We're withdrawing any
18 suggestion from any witness proffered to the
19 court that members of the law division, and that
20 includes all those people, didn't know.

21 THE COURT: What are you affirmatively
22 representing now, that Morgan Stanley is
23 correcting the record to show these three
24 individuals did know in July of 2004 or simply
25 some unnamed person in the law division knew?

1 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I think the proffer
2 through the notice --

3 THE COURT: I don't understand. Again, if I
4 understood it, I wouldn't ask the questions. I
5 mean, if you're saying that that's not something
6 you're prepared to clarify, that's fine, we can
7 go forward.

8 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I guess I'm not
9 prepared to go beyond what the notice says. To
10 the extent it's unclear, I apologize. But we
11 have withdrawn any suggestion on the subject
12 from those proffers. In other words -- there's
13 no -- in other words, Your Honor, previously
14 there was a representation and a proffer from
15 Miss Lee on that subject. Take her for example.

16 THE COURT: Miss Lee said I didn't know
17 before October. I'm using her as an example. I
18 didn't know before October of 2004. And to the 19 best of my knowledge, nobody from the law
20 division did.

21 MR. HANSEN: And that's withdrawn.

22 THE COURT: But now you've said you've
23 corrected that to say someone in the law
24 division did know in July of 2004. Well, those
25 three statements are not inconsistent with each

1 other, so I'm not sure why -- I'm not sure -- By
2 withdrawing the first two, are you telling me
3 they were simply wrong, or are you just saying
4 you want to just take them out of the record,
5 you're not telling me whether they're wrong or
6 right?

7 MR. HANSEN: Well, I think what we're
8 saying, Your Honor, is several things. Maybe
9 there's some things we're saying, some things
10 we're not saying. What we're saying is we want
11 no representation to the Court from Morgan
12 Stanley about any members of the law division
13 and when they were aware of those subjects.
14 We've taken them out. There were proffers on 15 that subject. We've withdrawn the proffers on
16 that subject. They don't exist in the record.
17 We have not made affirmative representation on
18 behalf of the individuals as to what they knew
19 and when they knew it.

20 THE COURT: So you're not taking out when
21 Miss Lee said she didn't know until October of
22 2004. You're not prepared to admit that was
23 incorrect. You're just taking -- we're taking
24 it out of the record? How are we doing that?

25 MR. HANSEN: We're correcting the record,

1 Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Then I need to know what -- are
3 you saying we submitted a proffer from Miss Lee
4 that said she didn't know until October 2004.
5 We have an ethical obligation. We recognize
6 that that's erroneous, and we're now correcting
7 it to say she did know July of 2004, or are you
8 saying we made a proffer; it's in the record
9 Miss Lee knew in October 2004. We're not
10 prepared to say that was wrong, but we want to 11 somehow open up the record and remove that piece
12 of paper --

13 MR. HANSEN: We've withdrawn the
14 representation.

15 THE COURT: Then -- We can talk procedurally
16 what that means, but I had understood from a
17 prior discussion that Morgan Stanley felt it had
18 an ethical obligation to correct erroneous --
19 it's in the testimony, but erroneous proffers in
20 the record. Now what you're telling me is
21 you're not correcting an erroneous proffer
22 because you're not suggesting what she said was
23 wrong. You simply want to remove a part of 24 proffer.

25 MR. HANSEN: No, Your Honor, we're

1 affirmatively representing the members of the
2 law division were aware. We previously made an
3 argument based on that.

4 THE COURT: But what you want to do is
5 remove the proffer that Miss Lee did not know
6 until October 2004. And I need to know are you
7 just trying to reopen the proffer and remove
8 that and put it to the side and not tell me
9 anything about the subject, or are you telling
10 me that was wrong?

11 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, we have stated that
12 we did not believe those proffers and those
13 subjects should be relied upon by the Court, so
14 we've withdrawn them.

15 THE COURT: But you're not prepared to
16 say --

17 MR. HANSEN: I can't make a representation.

18 THE COURT: -- you believe it was wrong --

19 MR. HANSEN: I can't make representation of
20 Miss Lee's knowledge or lack of knowledge.

21 THE COURT: But it was a notice filed by
22 Morgan Stanley. I'm trying to figure out what
23 you meant.

24 MR. HANSEN: We've asked Your Honor not to
25 credit that. We've said it is erroneous.

1 THE COURT: I can think of a bunch of
2 procedural questions, but I understand what, I
3 think, you're telling me, and that's you're not
4 willing to add what we have.

5 MR. HANSEN: No, Your Honor. Let me see if
6 I can be more clear. I don't think we can stand
7 here and supplement, I don't, frankly, think
8 we're required or should be required to provide
9 additional evidence. The question is whether
10 there's a record about a lie. So I don't want
11 to get bypassed.

12 THE COURT: I understand.

13 MR. HANSEN: But if you're asking what the
14 technical -- what we have done here, we have
15 said, as Morgan Stanley, not as Miss Lee or her
16 counsel --

17 THE COURT: No, I understand.

18 MR. HANSEN: -- we have said, Your Honor,
19 these proffers were made on this subject, and we
20 don't believe you should rely on them. Members
21 of the law department were aware of these facts
22 in July of '04.

23 THE COURT: That's a little bit different
24 than what -- and maybe I misunderstood what you
25 told me at a prior hearing. I thought what

1 Morgan Stanley was saying -- and, again, I'm a
2 little confused by the whole notice, but I
3 thought what Morgan Stanley was saying is we
4 made representations to you. We now know as
5 officers of the Court and a party before the
6 Court they were incorrect, and we want to make
7 them correct. What you're now telling me is,
8 well, I'm not really prepared to say they were
9 incorrect, but we just want to remove them.

10 MR. HANSEN: From Morgan Stanley's
11 standpoint, Your Honor, we believe they were 12 incorrect and we take them back. But, Your
13 Honor, I just don't think it's appropriate to
14 ask me to represent Miss Lee's knowledge.

15 THE COURT: I'm not at all.

16 MR. HANSEN: I can tell you as Morgan
17 Stanley's lawyer we put in a proffer from her.
18 We've told the Court that's inaccurate. We
19 don't want it relied upon.

20 THE COURT: All I'm asking -- And let me ask
21 a simple question. In submitting the notice, is
22 it Morgan Stanley's position that Ms. Lee's
23 proffer that she was not aware of the existence
24 of the e-mail or the tapes until October or
25 November of 2004, is that incorrect?

1 MR. HANSEN: That is Morgan Stanley's
2 position, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: That that was not a correct
4 statement?

5 MR. HANSEN: That there would be evidence to
6 suggest notice to the people for proffers
7 submitted. Yeah, we're not talking about --

8 THE COURT: Notice to Miss Lee. Not just
9 that somebody in the law department knew about
10 it.

11 MR. HANSEN: Not just somebody. As to
12 Miss Lee's representation, we believe that was
13 inaccurate, and we have sought to have it, as
14 Morgan Stanley, withdrawn. But I can't say,
15 Your Honor, and I don't have Miss Lee's state of
16 mind or what she knew and when she knew it.

17 And I assert in the strongest terms that
18 there is nothing to suggest that Ms. Lee or any
19 other Morgan Stanley person deliberately
20 misstated their knowledge. But I am stating
21 that from Morgan Stanley's standpoint we have
22 corrected the prior representations to take out
23 things we believe to be inaccurate. And
24 Ms. Lee's representation about her knowledge of 25 the e-mail, Mr. Doyle, Mr. Cusick have been

1 withdrawn in their entirety because we believe
2 them to be inaccurate on that subject.

3 THE COURT: The second question I had about
4 the notice, and you tell me, is you say you want
5 to correct the record to state the law division
6 was aware in July of 2004 that some Brooklyn
7 tapes contained e-mail and certain
8 eight-millimeter tapes existed. Do you mean to
9 say "first aware" or do you mean simply to say
10 "aware"?

11 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, it says what it
12 says. The prior discussion had been whether
13 July or October. Those were the suggested
14 dates. And this says that -- it says what it
15 says.

16 THE COURT: So you're not attempting to say
17 that was when Morgan Stanley was first aware?
18 You're simply saying they were aware?

19 MR. HANSEN: We have said they were aware at
20 that time.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. HANSEN: And that was the focus of the
23 issue before us, so we've addressed the focus of
24 the issue before. Again, this is not a
25 representation -- I wish to be very clear --

1 THE COURT: I just don't want to
2 misapprehend what it is the notice is saying.
3 The notice is not saying we were first aware in
4 July 2004. It's not saying it was. It's just
5 saying we were aware in July of 2004.

6 MR. HANSEN: It's -- Certainly the
7 implication of notice would suggest first aware,
8 Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: It is, and that's why I want
10 to -- before I accept that implication as what
11 you intended to convey I want to know what
12 that --

13 MR. HANSEN: That's the implication of the
14 notice. I suspect the way -- again, we're
15 getting into the drafting of it. That was the 16 issue before July versus October. So I think
17 the implication of the notice is that was when
18 it came, the new information came --

19 THE COURT: But is Morgan Stanley standing
20 on that implication that what you intend to say
21 is that you, Morgan -- the law division was 22 first aware in July of 2004? Because that is
23 the implication. And before we argue from that
24 I want to make sure we're all clear on what
25 we're talking about.

1 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, on that particular
2 point, this notice corrected previous
3 statements. I'm aware Mr. Reil comes into Court
4 on his third affidavit and says he told people
5 in January of '04 about the eight-millimeter
6 tapes, for example. That's a recent allegation
7 by Mr. Riel.

8 THE COURT: As I said, when I first read
9 this, to me what it said was that the law
10 division was first aware in July of 2004. And,
11 again, I agree with you, that was the
12 implication. If that's not what Morgan Stanley
13 intends it to say, that's fine. I just need to
14 know what it says.

15 MR. HANSEN: I think that's the fair reading
16 of the notice, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: But is that what you intend --
18 is Morgan Stanley telling me the law division
19 was first aware July of 2004 of the existence of
20 the e-mail and the eight-millimeter tapes?

21 MR. HANSEN: Morgan Stanley is making that
22 representation to the Court based on its
23 knowledge at the time.

24 THE COURT: Right here now?

25 MR. HANSEN: Right here now? Your Honor --

1 THE COURT: Or as of even the day you filed
2 this, June 17th of 2005?

3 MR. HANSEN: As of the day we filed it
4 Morgan Stanley -- this was the correction Morgan
5 Stanley sought to make.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Again, I just want to
7 make sure we're both really clear. Are you
8 telling me I should read this and Morgan Stanley
9 intends me to read it as saying it's corrected
10 to state that the law division was first aware
11 in July of 2004?

12 MR. HANSEN: I think that's the fair reading
13 of it, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Is that the reading Morgan
15 Stanley wants me to accept for purposes of this
16 hearing?

17 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, I think for
18 purposes of this hearing we should stand on what
19 we've provided.

20 THE COURT: If you just want to say stand on
21 the words, that's fine. Anything more?

22 MR. HANSEN: I don't want to provide any
23 more or less.

24 THE COURT: That's fine. The final question
25 I have, and it's a minor point, in some of your

1 opposition papers you talk about the law
2 division being informed in July of 2004. Was
3 that just a -- well, I mean informed -- that
4 there was some affirmative act in July of 2004.
5 Although I didn't see that from the notice. Is
6 that -- are we just parsing words or?

7 MR. HANSEN: Was aware -- they were on
8 notice. I think, you know, that could be a
9 number of things.

10 THE COURT: When you say informed can we
11 just say they knew?

12 MR. HANSEN: Could have been from a
13 conversation, could have been from an e-mail.

14 THE COURT: Sure.

15 MR. HANSEN: They were on notice. They were
16 made aware. They are informed.

17 THE COURT: We agree the notice doesn't tell
18 me something specific happened in July of 2004
19 to inform Morgan Stanley's law division of the
20 e-mail or the tapes?

21 MR. HANSEN: Judge, again, I think all we
22 can do is stand on what we filed as the notice.

23 THE COURT: I appreciate that.

24 MR. HANSEN: As to the extent there are any
25 new -- I don't want to provide additional

1 testimony. I'm not in a position to make
2 representations of fact as to what's true and
3 what's not true. This was the notice supplied
4 by Morgan Stanley.

5 THE COURT: Again, I just want to understand
6 what you meant. That's all. So as I understand
7 it, you are telling me that it's Morgan
8 Stanley's position that the statements by
9 Mr. Cusick, Mr. Doyle and Miss Lee that they
10 were unaware of the e-mail or the
11 eight-millimeter tapes until October, November
12 of 2004 was simply incorrect. And we can talk
13 about whether it was an intentional or -- I'm
14 not -- was simply incorrect. That their
15 statements to the best of their knowledge nobody
16 in the law division even knew about the e-mail
17 or eight-millimeter tapes until October or
18 November 2004 was simply incorrect. And, in
19 addition, a third fact was at least somebody in
20 the law division knew of the e-mail and
21 eight-millimeter tapes in July of 2004.

22 MR. HANSEN: It says the law division.

23 THE COURT: Right. We don't know -- we
24 don't know who.

25 MR. HANSEN: Not further specified.

1 That's --

2 THE COURT: Is that what you're telling me?

3 MR. HANSEN: That's accurate.

4 THE COURT: And what you're saying is that
5 the law division or someone in it was aware of
6 the e-mail and the tapes in July of 2004, but
7 that doesn't necessarily imply when it was first
8 learned?

9 MR. HANSEN: I just don't think I can do any
10 better than -- say any other words.

11 THE COURT: I appreciate the clarification.
12 Thanks. That's all I needed to know.

13 How do you want to divide up time?

14 MR. SCAROLA: May I make a suggestion, Your
15 Honor, that perhaps one additional clarification
16 would be helpful?

17 THE COURT: And what would that be?

18 MR. SCAROLA: In the June 17 notice there is
19 a reference to a new e-mail search and a review
20 of e-mails discovered by new e-mail search. I'm
21 wondering whether Morgan Stanley would like to
22 tell us what that means.

23 THE COURT: That's not -- I understand your
24 client's curiosity, and I don't think that's
25 material to what I'm doing today.

1 any kind of intent.

2 THE COURT: Other than Mr. Hansen's -- if I
3 accept the clarification from Morgan Stanley
4 today that at least there is an e-mail that
5 would suggest that he knew it was false --

6 MR. LUBIN: In other words, if we were in a
7 different courtroom on a different matter and 8 that had been included, this the verified
9 petition --

10 MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, that's not what I
11 said.

12 THE COURT: Are you saying that they -- I
13 understood you to say Lee, Cusick and Doyle
14 Morgan Stanley believed knew in July of 2004 the 15 Brooklyn tapes had e-mail and the 16 eight-millimeter tapes existed.

17 MR. HANSEN: We're saying that there was 18 notice to them at that time. That does not mean
19 then they submitted subsequent false --

20 THE COURT: Right, but you're saying in July 21 of 2004 they knew of those items. They may have 22 forgotten them in January of 2005 or May of 23 2005.

24 MR. HANSEN: Morgan Stanley's view is -- We 25 don't want the Court to rely on the

1 misrepresentations on a contrary basis from
2 Morgan Stanley's view what they were informed on 3 in July of 2004. But we did not, I want to be 4 absolutely clear, we do not make any
5 representation or any sort of suggestion they
6 intentionally did anything false.

7 THE COURT: Yes, but that they did make
8 misstatements in at least the offers of proof.

9 MR. HANSEN: It was inaccurate. The 10 statement as to when they first learned was 11 inaccurate. I'm not sure there's evidence to 12 the contrary at an earlier time. That's all I
13 have.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. LUBIN: But if you follow it along the 16 way, Counsel isn't going to be a witness at a 17 final hearing. And when we're talking about how 18 could we ever prove that James Doyle had 19 knowledge or that he intentionally lied to the 20 court? Not from an argument of counsel. I
21 mean, from evidence. And there's no evidence
22 alleged by CPH here. There's no evidence.

23 THE COURT: Well, that goes back to the 24 statement I asked you before. Were you

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

ORDER ON COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.'S VERIFIED PETITION
FOR A SHOW-CAUSE ORDER REGARDING MORGAN STANLEY'S CRIMINAL
CONTEMPT OF COURT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court November 3, 2005 on CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court, with counsel for CPH, MS & Co., and non-party respondents Donald G. Kempf, Jr., James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle present.

CPH sued MS & Co. for aiding and abetting and conspiring with Sunbeam Corporation to perpetrate a fraud. Early in the case, CPH was concerned that MS & Co. was not thoroughly looking for emails responsive to its discovery requests. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered an Agreed Order that required MS & Co. to search its oldest full backup tapes for emails subject to certain search parameters and certify compliance ("Agreed Order"). MS & Co. served a certificate of compliance signed by Arthur Riel, an Executive Director of Technology, on June 23, 2004 ("Certificate of Compliance").

On November 17, 2004 CPH learned that MS & Co. had found some backup tapes that had not been searched. Over the next ten weeks it sought more information about both how and when the tapes were found and when they would be searched. When MS & Co. failed to provide meaningful responses, on January 26, 2005 CPH served its Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Motion.")

On January 31, 2005, MS & Co. served the Declaration of James F. Doyle ("Doyle Declaration"), an Executive Director in its Law Division, in support of its opposition to the Adverse Inference Motion. The Doyle Declaration was signed under penalty of perjury. In it, Doyle averred that "(a)t the end of October 2004, I learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley's May 14, 2004 e-mail production."

The court held an evidentiary hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion on February 14, 2005. In preparation for that hearing, on February 3, 2005 the court ordered MS & Co. to produce by noon on February 8, 2005 all documents within its "care, custody, or control, addressing or related to the additional email back up tapes, including matters relating to the time or manner in which they were discovered; by whom they were discovered; who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were to be restored and made searchable . . ." ("February 3, 2005 Order"). The court issued its ruling on the Adverse Inference Motion March 1, 2005 ("Adverse Inference Order"), finding MS & Co. had engaged in discovery abuses and shifting the burden of proof on two elements of CPH's claims.

Thereafter, CPH discovered that MS & Co. had not been candid with it or the court at the February 14, 2005 hearing, prompting it to serve its Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment ("Renewed Motion"). The court held an evidentiary hearing on the Renewed Motion on March 14 and 15, 2005. On March 23, 2005 it issued its Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment ("Default Order"), which built on the Adverse Inference Order. The Default Order found that MS & Co. had deliberately violated numerous discovery requests and orders, to the permanent prejudice of CPH. The violations included MS & Co.'s failure to timely notify CPH and the court that Riel's Certificate of Compliance was false because, among other deficiencies, 1,423 tapes found in a store room in Brooklyn (the "Brooklyn tapes") and 738 8 millimeter backup tapes ("8 millimeter tapes") had not been searched. The Default Order removed certain facts to which the discovery had been directed from dispute and provided that a statement of MS & Co.'s failures would be read to the jury to consider in determining the propriety of a punitive damage award. The Default Order left the exact wording and content of the statement to be read open and invited counsel to submit proposals.

Kempf was general counsel for MS & Co. at all pertinent times. Cusick was Co-Head of Global Litigation. Lee was an Executive Director in MS & Co.'s Law Division and Doyle's supervisor. In May of 2005 in connection with the court's consideration of the litigation misconduct statement to be read to the jury, MS & Co. filed Offers of Proof for Lee, Doyle, and Cusick. In general, the Offers asserted that each first learned¹ there was email on the Brooklyn tapes in late October 2004 and on the 8 millimeter tapes in November 2004. Cusick and Lee asserted that each knew of no one in the Law Division who knew the information earlier.²

Based on the Offers of Proof, counsel for MS & Co. asked the court to instruct the jury that MS & Co.'s counsel did not know there was email on the Brooklyn and 8 millimeter tapes until October 2004. CPH contends that Kempf was sitting in the courtroom at the time of those arguments on May 16 and 18, 2005. The jury returned verdicts in CPH's favor for compensatory and punitive damages. The court rendered its Final Judgment in CPH's favor based on the verdicts on June 23, 2005. MS & Co. served its Notice of Appeal and posted a supersedeas bond June 27, 2005.

On June 17, 2005 MS & Co. served a document entitled "Notice".³ The Notice

¹Lee's Offer qualifies her statements by asserting they are based on recollection.

²The Offer of Proof for Doyle stated that if called to testify he would state that he did not learn of the existence of email on the Brooklyn tapes until late October 2004 and that he "did not learn of the existence of 8 millimeter tapes containing emails until November 2004." It is unclear whether Doyle's proffered testimony is that he was unaware of the existence of the 8 millimeter tapes until November 2004, when he learned both that they existed and that some contained email, or that he may or may not have been aware of the tapes' existence, but was not aware that they contained email, prior to November 2004. Unlike Cusick and Lee, Doyle's Offer did not state that he knew of no one in the Law Division who knew that tapes contained email before he did.

³The Notice's legal effect, if any, on the proceedings is unclear to the court.

stated that

1. In the listed offers of proof and related statements, Morgan Stanley asserted that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.
2. As a result of a review of emails discovered by a new email search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware⁴ in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained email and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.
3. Morgan Stanley submits this Notice to: (a) correct Defendant's Offers of Proof from James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James Doyle (the first sentence of paragraph 4 and the entirety of paragraph 5);⁵ (b) withdraw the Declaration of James F. Doyle of January 31 2005; and (c) correct related statements that reference or were based on the foregoing submissions. (footnote omitted).
4. Morgan Stanley does not limit this notice and correction to the specific documents described or listed herein. Morgan Stanley retracts, withdraws and corrects any and all statements, written or oral, made or submitted on its behalf, to the effect that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained email until ⁴The court asked MS & Co. to clarify whether the Notice was to be interpreted to state that MS & Co. first became aware that there was email on some of the Brooklyn tapes and that the 8 millimeter tapes existed in July 2004, or simply that MS & Co. knew those things in July 2004, without regard to whether it first learned them. While initially acknowledging that the Notice implied that MS & Co. first became aware of the items in July 2004, MS & Co. chose to stand on the language in the Notice, leaving unresolved whether it first learned of the items in July 2004 or simply knew of them as of that time.

⁵It would not be inconsistent for MS & Co. to assert that (i) Cusick, Lee, and Doyle did not know the Brooklyn tapes contained email or that the 8 millimeter tapes existed and contained email until late October and early November 2004, respectively; (ii) Cusick, Lee, and Doyle did not think any one else in the Law Division knew those facts before they did; and (iii) others in the Law Division did know those facts in July 2004. Counsel for MS & Co. clarified at the hearing that the Notice was intended to convey MS & Co.'s belief that Cusick, Lee, and Doyle themselves knew that some of the Brooklyn tapes had email and the 8 millimeter tapes existed in July 2004, though not convey that MS & Co. believes Cusick, Lee, or Doyle intentionally misstated their recollections when the Offers and Declaration were prepared.

October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.

In response to the Notice, CPH filed its Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court, taking the position that by the Notice MS & Co. admitted it made false statements to the Court.

CPH filed, too, an Affidavit and Second Affidavit of Arthur Riel. Riel avers that in the first quarter of 2003 Cusick asked him to design the historical email archive; that Kempf approved the plan late in the second quarter of 2003; that MS & Co. knew of the Brooklyn tapes by May of 2004; that he believes that MS & Co. knew of the existence of the 8 millimeter tapes in the fall of 2003; that he knew by July 2, 2004 that the Brooklyn and 8 millimeter tapes had email dating back to at least 1998; that he told an attorney in MS & Co.'s Compliance of the Law Division and others within the division in a meeting on July 8, 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained email; that he told MS & Co.'s counsel on or about April 28, 2005 that he had told the Law Division that there was email on the Brooklyn tapes on July 8, 2004; that he told Cusick and others that the 8 millimeter tapes existed no later than January 2004; that Doyle asked him to sign the Certificate of Compliance after first asking a college student who performed data entry functions to sign it; and, finally, that MS & Co. had monthly reports and meeting minutes which could show when people within MS & Co. were notified of the existence of the tapes and the fact that some contained email.

CPH seeks to have this court initiate criminal contempt proceedings against MS & Co., Kempf, Cusick, Lee, and Doyle. It contends that MS & Co. is in contempt of court for (i) offering the Declaration and Offers of Proof with knowledge they contained false information; (ii) repeatedly arguing for favorable rulings based on the allegedly false information; and (iii) failing to comply with the Court's discovery orders. It contends Kempf is in contempt for failing to correct the misrepresentations of fact made to the Court in his presence on May 16 and 18, 2005. It contends Lee and Cusick are in contempt for proffering allegedly false statements to the court with the intention the court rely on them. Finally, it contends Doyle is in contempt for the same, together with signing the allegedly false Declaration with knowledge it would be submitted to the court. It contends each of these acts was intended to and did obstruct the administration of justice.⁶

Here, the allegedly contemptuous acts fall within two general classes. First, CPH contends that MS & Co. failed to comply with the court's orders to produce documents relating to the email issue, including the February 3, 2005 Order requiring it to produce all documents addressing or related to the backup tapes. It asserts that Riel's affidavit would allow a reasonable person to conclude that reports and minutes were generated that were responsive to the court's February 3, 2005 Order and that MS & Co. deliberately failed to produce those items.⁷ Second, CPH contends that MS & Co.'s assertions in the Notice together with Riel's affidavits would allow a reasonable person to conclude that Kempf, Cusick, Lee, and Doyle knew that Law Division personnel were aware of the existence of email on some of the Brooklyn tapes and the 8 millimeter tapes in July 2004 and that representations to the contrary were intended to mislead the Court and obstruct the administration of justice. As a subcategory, CPH contends that Doyle's Declaration was perjurious.

It is reasonable to assume that on appeal MS & Co. will question both the factual findings in the Default Order and the sanctions imposed. This will, of necessity, implicate the Offers and the assertions of counsel, which were used in argument about the jury statement given as a result of the Default Order; the Declaration, which was used to oppose the Adverse Inference Motion; and the propriety of and level of compliance with the ⁶See, e.g., Milian v. State, 764 So. 2d 860 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000), rev. den. 786 So. 2d 579 (Fla. 2001); M.W. v. Lafthiem, 855 So. 2d 683 (Fla. 2d DCA 2003); Murrell v. State, 595 So. 2d 1049 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992); see, also, Duff v. Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., 386 So. 2d 253 (Fla. 5th DCA 1980) (action can be obstructionist even if ultimate outcome unaffected); Milian; Thomson v. State, 398 So. 2d 514 (Fla. 2d DCA 1981).

⁷CPH argues, too, that the Notice itself refers to yet other emails responsive to the February 3, 2005 Order not timely produced.

February 3, 2005 Order, among others, violation of which were used to support the Default Order.

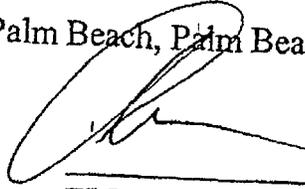

Once an appellate court's jurisdiction attaches the trial court is divested of jurisdiction to consider matters that may affect the matters on appeal. See Willey v. W.J. Hoggson Corp., 89 Fla. 446, 105 So. 126 (1925); Waltham A. Condominium Association v. Village Management, Inc., 330 So. 2d 227 (Fla. 4th DCA 1976). While post-judgment proceedings collateral to and independent of the subject matter may proceed while a judgment is on appeal, the trial court lacks jurisdiction where the matter is "directly intertwined" with the matter on appeal. Amlan, Inc. v. Detroit Diesel Corporation, 651 So. 2d 701, 706 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995); Publix Supermarkets, Inc. v. Griffin, 837 So. 2d 1139 (Fla. 2d DCA 2003); cf. Miseveth v. Stafford, 667 So. 2d 1012 (Fla. 3d DCA 1996).

If the court were to pursue criminal contempt as requested,⁸ it could alter the current record of what MS & Co. knew and when it knew it. It could add to the judicial response to MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct. The current record of MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct, and the propriety and correctness of this court's rulings based on it, are presently before the appellate court. Indeed the argument that the appeal divested in court of jurisdiction to consider contempt of court based on discovery violations is stronger here than in Amlan. In Amlan, all requested documents were eventually produced, albeit at extraordinary cost, thus the record before the appellate court on the point was complete. Here, CPH argues all discovery was not made and, therefore, pursuit of the contempt allegations could result in a separate record of discovery abuses, perhaps one inconsistent with the record currently before the appellate court. The court determines, then, that the allegedly contemptuous conduct is directly intertwined with the matters on appeal, and that this court lacks jurisdiction to consider CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court. Based on the foregoing, it is ⁸The Court has made no determination that it could or should. MS & Co. and the non-party respondents vigorously contend that they are not guilty of contempt.

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that this court declines to rule on CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court pending disposition of the primary action on appeal.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO.
INCORPORATED,

CASE NO: 4D05-2606
L.T. No. CA 03-5045 AI

Appellant,

vs.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Appellee.

RESPONSE OF MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED
TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC. CONSOLIDATED
MOTION FOR REHEARING AND MOTION FOR REHEARING
EN BANC, AND TO COLEMAN'S MOTION FOR CERTIFICATION

In this submission Morgan Stanley responds to all of CPH's post-opinion filings. The CPH Consolidated Motion should be denied. The panel decision did not overlook or misapprehend any facts or law, does not present a matter of exceptional importance as that phrase applies to en banc proceedings, and does not present any conflict with prior decisions of this Court. The Motion for Certification should be denied because the panel decision does not present any issue of great public importance, and does not expressly and directly conflict with a decision of another district court on the same question of law.

I.

THERE IS NO CONFLICT WITH AULT AND ENGLE

CPH is wrong to suggest that Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989), Engle v. Liggett Group, Inc., 945 So. 2d 1246 (Fla. 2006), or any other decision allows punitive damages for fraud absent compensatory damages. There is no freestanding cause of action for punitive damages for fraud. Ault involved an assault. Actual damages are not an essential element of that claim. Fraud is different. “[A]ctual damages and the measure thereof are essential as a matter of law in establishing a claim of fraud.” Nat’l Equipment Rental Ltd. v. Little Italy Rest. & Delicatessen, Inc., 362 So. 2d 338, 339 (Fla. 4th DCA 1978) (emphasis supplied); Nat’l Aircraft Serv., Inc. v. Aeroserv Int’l, Inc., 544 So. 2d 1063, 1065 (Fla. 3d DCA 1989).

Justice Ehrlich’s concurrence in Ault spelled out the applicable principle: “where actual damage is an essential element of the underlying cause of action, an award of compensatory damages must be a prerequisite to an award of punitive damages.” Ault, supra at 457 (Ehrlich, C.J., concurring specially). CPH incorrectly asserts that other justices “rejected” that distinction. Motion at 8. This Court was right to rely on Justice Ehrlich’s concurrence as “highly persuasive.” Opinion at 11, n.2. Here CPH failed to prove damages, an essential element of its fraud claim. Ault does not give CPH the right to recover punitive damages.

Nor does Engle. Engle does not hold that a punitive damage award can be made in a fraud case without an award of compensatory damages. Indeed, the Court made a special effort to say exactly what it “held,” and that holding was what the panel found – that Engle dealt with “the order of proof in determining the entitlement to punitive damages.” Opinion at 11. The Supreme Court wrote:

More specifically we hold as follows:

A majority of the Court (Anstead, Pariente, Lewis, and Quince) also concludes that the Third District misapplied Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454, 456 (Fla. 1989) by holding that compensatory damages must be determined before a jury can consider entitlement to punitive damages.

Engle, 945 So. 2d at 1254 (emphasis supplied); see also id. at 1262 (stating that a jury may consider entitlement to punitive damages before setting the amount of compensatory damages because “the order of these determinations is not critical”) (emphasis supplied). So Engle was about timing, just as the panel decision stated.

CPH wrongly reads Engle, a class action case, as altering the substantive requirements for when punitive damages may be recovered in single plaintiff fraud actions. Engle does not hold that a punitive damage award can be made in a fraud case without an award of compensatory damages, nor did it rely on Ault for such a broad proposition. CPH misapprehends the limited reach of Engle. There is no substance to CPH’s arguments as to Ault and Engle conflicts.

II.

THERE IS NO CONFLICT WITH OTHER DECISIONS

CPH claims conflict with Russin v. Richard F. Greminger, P.A., 563 So. 2d 1089 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) and Horizon Leasing v. Leefmans, 568 So. 2d 73 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990). Again, not so. This court's brief per curiam decision in Russin, which CPH cited in its Answer Brief, did not involve a fraud claim. While Horizon Leasing is a fraud case, compensatory damages were awarded in that case. 568 So. 2d at 75. Thus, neither decision presents a reason for en banc review of the panel decision.

Likewise, none of the cases cited by CPH from other districts holds that punitive damages can be awarded on a fraud claim without proof of compensatory damages. Thus, they do not pose conflict with the panel decision either.

III.

THE FAILURE OF PROOF WAS FATAL; THE BMW v. GORE RELATIONSHIP REQUIREMENT WAS RELEVANT

CPH incorrectly asserts that footnote 3 of the panel opinion about why punitive damages would be minimal without compensatory damages "was based on a misreading of BMW North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559 (1996)." Motion at 12. But Gore and State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 418 (2003) leave no doubt that there must be a reasonable relationship between compensatory and punitive damages. In addition to the constitutional restraints on punitive damages, Florida Statute section 768.73 requires a ratio between compensatory and punitive damages. It also establishes a cap on punitive damages of three times compensatory damages, which cannot be exceeded here because CPH did not request the findings necessary to exceed the cap.

CPH's reliance on Tronzo v. Biomet, 236 F. 3d 1342 (Fed. Cir. 2001) for its "potential harm" theory for punitive damages is inapposite because the "potential harm" concept addresses thwarted schemes, not situations where a plaintiff has failed to prove actual damages from an alleged fraud. See Bains LLC v. Arco Prods. Co., 405 F. 3d 764 (9th Cir. 2005). Nor can CPH's repeated contention that the jury found "substantial" damages be credited where the only finding was the product of improper proof of damages. See, e.g., Motion at 4.

Thus, CPH's submission that it was damaged by the claimed fraud is unproven, and its claim that the panel misread Gore is wrong. Neither is a basis for revisiting the panel decision.

IV.

TECA WAS PROPERLY APPLIED. THERE IS NO CONFLICT, NO DENIAL OF JURY TRIAL AND NO REASON FOR REHEARING, REHEARING EN BANC OR CERTIFICATION

CPH argues that the “decision to deny a retrial . . . misapprehends Teca, [Inc. v. WM-TAB, Inc., 726 So. 2d 828 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (en banc)]” Motion at 14. CPH claims Teca creates “direct intra – and inter – District conflicts” and “violates the right to a jury trial.” Id. CPH ignores the fact that the Court has twice recently followed the Teca en banc opinion. See T.A. Enterprises, Inc. v. Olarte, Inc., Case No. 4D05-829, 4D05-3052, 2007 WL 750614, *1 (Fla. 4th DCA Mar. 14, 2007) and M.A. Hajianpour, M.D., P.A. v. Khosrow Maleki, P.A., 932 So. 2d 459 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), rev. den. 949 So. 2d 198 (Fla. 2007).

CPH’s claims of the unfairness of applying Teca are unpersuasive. Teca simply acknowledges the plaintiff’s burden to prove actual damages in a fraud case. Because CPH did not do so, a directed verdict was required, as Morgan Stanley urged at trial, post-trial, and on appeal. Had the issue on appeal been whether Morgan Stanley failed to present competent evidence supporting an affirmative defense, it would not have been given a new trial. See Estate of Myra Engskow v. Cullen, 428 So. 2d 388 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983). The result mandated by Teca is not one-sided.

CPH makes an extended argument (Motion at 14-17) that it relied on the trial court's rulings in presenting its evidence and "thus had no reason to present the specific damages evidence that the panel majority later ruled was necessary." Id. at 15. But CPH overlooks the fact that Morgan Stanley repeatedly pointed out the evidentiary damages defect and the consequences of that defect under Teca before CPH's damages expert testified at trial. See, e.g., R217 43219 (arguing, "If CPH fails to provide evidence fixing the value 'on the date of the sale, a crucial element in the damage[s] equation,' Morgan Stanley is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. See Teca, 726 So. 2d at 829 (emphasis supplied)."); see also R148 29402-03; R207 41388; R216 43192-94. CPH nonetheless chose to proceed with its flawed measure of damages proof.

The trial court did not decide what evidence CPH should present to prove its damages. To the contrary, CPH submitted its expert report calculating damages as of a date other than the date of the transaction before any of the trial court's rulings on that issue. See R147 29398-99. CPH's counsel, not the trial court, instructed that expert to "assume" that the Sunbeam stock was worthless because CPH was never able to realize any value from it later on. Opinion at 3-4.

Moreover, CPH is incorrect to claim that this is "not a case in which [it] could have protected itself by presenting alternative evidence in anticipation that an appellate court might disagree with the trial court." Motion at 15. In fact, the trial court expressly ruled that the parties could prove damages either on the date when CPH could first sell the stock or on an earlier date when the stock could not be sold, such as the date of the transaction, so long as “an appropriate liquidity discount has been established, is not required, or is implicit in the figure offered.” R217 43378. CPH could have presented alternative damage evidence. It chose not to do so.

In sum, CPH hoisted itself on the petard of its desire to obtain the best of two worlds: to seek benefit-of-the-bargain damages, but to seek a better bargain than it made. CPH chose its measurement of damages for its own reasons. It cannot blame its strategic decisions on the trial court. As the panel wrote: “CPH cannot complain about rulings that it urged the court to make in accordance with its damages theory.” Opinion at 10. In Arky, Freed, Stearns, Watson, Greer, Weaver & Harris P.A. v. Bowmar Instrument Corporation, 537 So. 2d 561 (Fla. 1989), the Court required a directed verdict, not a new trial, when a party chose the wrong course:

In this case, Bowmar was on notice that Arky, Freed considered Bowmar’s evidence beyond the scope of the pleadings. Rather than reevaluating this position, Bowmar opposed the motion for continuance and chose to proceed to trial under the risk that Arky, Freed might have been correct. This “reliance” is no different than that of any lawyer who, at trial, chooses to present evidence over opposing counsel’s overruled objection. By “relying” on the trial court’s ruling, counsel always proceeds at the clear risk of reversal if the trial court was wrong.

Our growing, complex society and diminishing resources mandate the requirement that litigants present all claims to the extent possible, at one time, and one time only.

Id. at 563; DuPont v. Desarrolle Industrial Bioacuatico, 857 So. 2d 925, 930 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (following Arky). See also Cordoba v. Rodriguez, 939 So. 2d 319, 323 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006) (“[a] party may not make or invite error at trial and then take advantage of the error on appeal”), quoting Goodwin v. State, 751 So. 2d 537 (Fla. 1999) (emphasis supplied).

Nor does CPH make a case for conflict between Teca and other cases in this district or other districts. There is no conflict with Boca Developers, Inc. v. Fine Decorators, Inc., 862 So. 2d 803 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003), which does not even discuss Teca. Moreover, it affirmatively “appear[ed] from the record” in Boca Developers that the plaintiff could have presented adequate proof, but for the erroneous pretrial ruling. Id. at 805. In contrast, none of CPH’s experts properly determined the value of the stock at the time of the transaction, although the trial court’s ruling expressly allowed CPH to present such evidence.

CPH also cites Safeguard Mgmt., Inc. v. Pinedo, 865 So. 2d 672, 674 (Fla. 4th DCA 2004), without explaining why that decision creates conflict. It does not.

The decision does not discuss Teca or whether to reverse for judgment in accordance with a motion for directed verdict.

The remainder of the cases cited by CPH on this point are from outside this district and do not support a motion for rehearing en banc. Each is factually distinguishable. Rowland involved a plaintiff who was not "seeking to introduce additional evidence which she should have put on in the first place." Rowland v. Whitehead, 375 So. 2d 607, 609 (Fla. 2d DCA 1979). That is what CPH seeks to do here, so Rowland is inapposite. Wolfe v. Gencorp, Inc., 529 So. 2d 1154 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988) and Porter v. Vista Building Maintenance Services, Inc., 630 So. 2d 205 (Fla. 3d DCA 1993) did not involve failures of proof in the plaintiff's substantive case. Chasteen v. Chasteen, 213 So. 2d 509 (Fla. 1st DCA 1968), Srybnik v. Ice Tower, Inc., 162 So. 2d 294 (Fla. 3d DCA 1964) and Sostchin v. Doll Enters., Inc., 847 So. 2d 1123 (Fla. 3d DCA 2003) addressed the remedy issue so perfunctorily that they cannot fairly be viewed as holdings on the issue. In Cirou v. Naples Awning & Glass, Inc., 376 So. 2d 929 (Fla. 2d DCA 1979), the trial judge affirmatively prevented the plaintiff from meeting his burden of proof. And in Wagner v. Nottingham Assocs., 464 So. 2d 166 (Fla. 3d DCA 1985), the plaintiff in fact met his burden of proof. No inter-district conflict exists.

CPH's claim that the application of Teca denies it a constitutional right to a jury trial is also unavailing. Motion at 17-18. The cases cited by CPH stand for the unexceptional proposition that there is a right to a jury trial with proper instructions, a right that CPH availed itself of here. CPH simply failed, by its own choice, to prove an essential element of its cause of action. None of the cases it cites involve the failure of proof at trial. CPH's lead offering (id. at 17), Brant v. Dollar Rent a Car Sys. Inc., 869 So. 2d 767, 768 (Fla. 4th DCA 2004), remanded for a new trial because the jury, not the judge, should have determined the damages from the evidence presented. Neither Brant nor any other cited cases required a remand for a new trial where the plaintiff failed to prove its claim in the original proceeding.

v.

THE PANEL'S ANALYSIS OF BENEFIT-OF-THE-BARGAIN DAMAGES POSES NO BASIS FOR REHEARING, REHEARING EN BANC OR CERTIFICATION

CPH devotes the last ten pages of its Motion to rearguing why it should be entitled to use the damage methodology it used at trial. Motion at 22-31. Since CPH's arguments were considered and addressed by the panel decision, the prohibition against reargument in a rehearing motion is enough to require denial of the motion.

CPH repeatedly says again that it sought damages for "fraud inflicted losses . . . after the transaction date" (id. at 22-23); that "fraud prevented CPH from selling those shares.” Id. at 28. But it was the agreement that prevented CPH from selling its shares, not the fraud. As the panel observed:

Benefit-of-the-bargain damages do not turn on what would have happened if CPH had known the representations were false. They measure what CPH would have received had the representations been true. By opting for benefit-of-the-bargain damages, CPH does not seek to rescind the transaction; it seeks to affirm the transaction and claim the benefit of the bargain. The bargain, in this case, included sale restrictions.

Opinion at 6 (emphasis in original).

The cases CPH cites (Motion at 25-26 nn. 5&6) are all distinguishable. Silverberg v. Paine Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc., 710 F. 2d 678 (11th Cir. 1983); Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. v. Bork, 1991 WL 164465 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 21, 1991); Alloys Unlimited, Inc. v. Raesler, 1976 WL 16605 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. June 22, 1976); and IDS Bond Fund, Inc. v. Gleacher Nat. West Inc., 2002 WL 373455 (D. Minn. Mar. 6, 2002) were all cited in CPH’s appellate brief. Those cases involved out-of-pocket damages, not benefit-of-the-bargain damages. CPH ignores a critical distinction between benefit-of-the-bargain damages and out-of-pocket damages that justifies a different treatment of contractual sale restrictions under each measure. The plaintiff who claims out-of-pocket damages chooses to reject the contract rather than claim its benefits, asserting that, but for the fraud, he would not have accepted the bargain at all.

By contrast, when the plaintiff claims the benefit of his bargain, the contractual sale restrictions (and any losses that would have resulted during their duration even absent the fraud) are part of the bargain the plaintiff chose to reaffirm and seeks to recover the benefit of. CPH continues to ignore the distinction, and the other cases it offers do not support CPH's continuing attempt to craft a measure of benefit-of-the-bargain damages that would give it a deal better than the one it made.

The panel decision did not impose "a new and different causation requirement for common law fraud cases." Motion at 28. It carefully considered CPH's arguments and the applicable cases (Opinion at 6-9) and held CPH to the unexceptional principle of Florida (and federal) law that "requires the plaintiff to prove the actual 'fraud free' value of the stock at the time of the purchase." Opinion at 9. Finally, CPH's argument that the panel's decision would encourage defrauded purchasers to sell their fraudulently inflated stock to another buyer (Motion at 30-31) is incorrect. Reselling artificially inflated stock would only reduce the seller's own damages vis à vis the original seller and expose the reseller to a fraud claim by the new purchaser. CPH's parade of horrors is as unpersuasive as its litany of reasons for rehearing and rehearing en banc.

VI.

THERE IS NO BASIS FOR CERTIFICATION OF ANY QUESTION TO THE SUPREME COURT OF FLORIDA

As we have set forth above, there is no conflict, there is no exceptional importance, and there is no issue of great public importance. The three “questions” for certification posited by CPH are completely deficient. For example, questions 1 and 2 incorrectly assume that CPH proved “significant” and “substantial” damage, when in fact it was the absence of competent proof of damages that led to reversal. Question 3 omits the critical facts that underlie the Court’s decision on this point – i.e., that the proscription of immediate sale was part of the bargain CPH sought the benefit of, and that CPH affirmatively elected not to pursue consequential damages, but rather only benefit-of-the-bargain damages.

Finally, this Court’s decision is not in “direct conflict” with any of the six cases cited by CPH in its Motion for Certification. This Court reversed on the ground that a directed verdict should have been granted because CPH failed to offer proof of the actual value of the stock it received on the transaction date, under the benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages CPH elected to pursue as its sole remedy. The Court also held there can be no punitive damages in this fraud case, where no actual damages were proven by CPH.

None of the cases cited for alleged conflict involved a claim for benefit-of-the-bargain damages in a complex corporate merger which provided substantial benefits to the party claiming fraud (here CPH received approximately $160 million in cash and over $500 million in debt relief in addition to stock in Sunbeam). R404 9659-60. None of the cases involved a directed verdict for lack of competent evidence at trial. None hold that a plaintiff should get a new trial where a directed verdict should have been granted at trial. None hold that punitive damages always may be recovered in a fraud case, even where no actual damages are proven.

The cited cases involved errors in admission of evidence (Wolfe, Rowland, Porter); granting summary judgment (Platte); and trial court error (in a non-jury trial) in applying the proper measure of damages (Mortellite; Srybnik). Four of the cases (Wolfe, Rowland, Porter, and Srybnik) did not involve any issue of punitive damages. Mortellite and Platte involved claims for punitive damages, without proof of compensatory damages, on breach of fiduciary duty, libel, and intentional interference with a business relationship claims – not claims for punitive damages for fraud. In sum, there is no basis for certification.

CONCLUSION

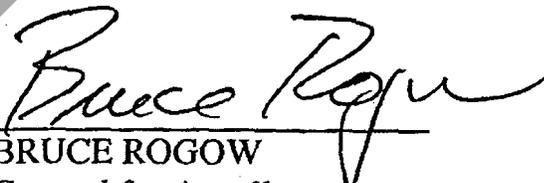

For all the foregoing reasons, CPH's Consolidated Motion for Rehearing and Rehearing En Banc and its separate Motion for Certification should be denied.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

There is no express and direct conflict with Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989) and Engle v. Liggett Group, Inc., 945 So. 2d 1246 (Fla. 2006). Neither case holds that a party may recover punitive damages for fraud even though it failed to prove it suffered actual, compensable damages, an essential element of a cause of action for fraud. Rather, as the Fourth District correctly held, “[t]he punitive damages award cannot stand where, as here, no legally cognizable damage was shown as a result of the alleged fraud.” Appendix A, p. 10.

Nor is there express and direct conflict with Webb Furniture Co. v. Everett, 105 Fla. 292, 141 So. 115 (1932). Contrary to Petitioner’s contention, Webb does not require a new trial where, as here, the plaintiff failed to present legally sufficient evidence of an essential element of its claim. There also is no conflict with Goldberg v. Florida Power & Light Co., 899 So. 2d 1105 (Fla. 2005) or McCain v. Florida Power Corp., 593 So. 2d 500 (Fla. 1992). Those cases do not address benefit-of-the-bargain damages. None of the other cases cited by Petitioner presents express and direct conflict, the prerequisite for this Court’s jurisdiction.

ARGUMENT

I

THERE IS NO EXPRESS AND DIRECT CONFLICT WITH AULT OR ENGLE

There is no express and direct conflict with Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989). Ault held that an assault plaintiff could recover punitive damages without proving actual, compensable damages. Id. at 456. Actual damages are not an essential element of the tort of assault. Appendix A, p. 10. But this was a fraud case. “[D]amage” is the “very essence of an action [for] fraud,” and without proof of damages, a fraud is not actionable. Casey v. Welch, 50 So. 2d 124, 125 (Fla. 1951).

Petitioner’s assertion that it “prove[d] conclusively that it was injured in fact” (Jur. Br., p. 4) is incorrect. The Fourth District stated: “[N]o legally cognizable damage was shown as a result of the alleged fraud.” Appendix A, p. 10. Because Petitioner did not prove a critical element of fraud – compensable injury – there could be no liability for fraud and no punitive damages. Indeed, “[h]ad the trial court properly directed a verdict for Morgan Stanley, the case would have ended at that point and the punitive damages phase never would have been reached.” Id. There is no conflict with Ault, which was not a fraud case.

Nor is there an express and direct conflict with Engle v. Liggett Group, Inc., 945 So. 2d 1246 (Fla. 2006). Petitioner incorrectly says that in Engle this Court “held that a fraud plaintiff seeking punitive damages need not prove a ‘specific injury’ or a specific amount of compensatory damages,” and that “Engle’s holding [was] that a party found liable for fraud can be required to pay punitive damages even if the plaintiff ‘did not suffer any compensable damage.’” Jur. Br., p. 4-5 and n.1 (emphasis supplied). This Court did not so “hold.” It said this:

More specifically, we hold as follows:

* * *

A majority of the Court (Anstead, Pariente, Lewis, and Quince) also concludes that the Third District misapplied Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454, 456 (Fla. 1989), by holding that compensatory damages must be determined before a jury can determine entitlement to punitive damages.

945 So. 2d at 1254 (emphasis supplied).

As the Fourth District correctly recognized, that holding addressed the timing of proof, i.e., whether a jury in a class action can, before individual compensatory damages are decided, find that the defendant’s conduct was sufficiently wrongful to warrant a potential punitive damages award. Engle did not hold that punitive damages may be awarded to an individual fraud plaintiff that ultimately fails to prove the essential element of compensable damages.

The different opinions in Engle confirm that the Court did not create a free-standing claim for punitive damages in the absence of proof of a prima facie case. A majority (Lewis, C.J., Quince, J., Wells, J., and Bell, J.) recognized that an award of punitive damages to the individual plaintiffs in Engle must be predicated on proof of actual injury. See 945 So. 2d at 1280 (Lewis, C.J., concurring in part and dissenting in part, joined by Quince, J.) (“[N]o plaintiff in the Engle Class may ultimately receive an award of punitive damages without proving that he or she suffered actual damages in Phase III”); id. at 1284-85 (Wells, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part, joined by Bell, J.) (“The [United States] Supreme Court has made it clear that punitive damages must be in ratio to compensatory damages. . . . It necessarily follows, then, that there must be compensatory damages in order for punitive damages to be in ratio to compensatory damages.”).¹

In addition, Engle recognized that “the amount of compensatory damages must be determined in advance of a determination of the amount of punitive damages awardable, if any, so that the relationship between the two may be reviewed for reasonableness.” 945 So. 2d at 1265. Moreover, section 768.73, Fla. Stat., imposes a cap of three times compensatory damages. Here, “no legally cognizable damage was shown.” Appendix A, p. 10. Thus, not only is there no conflict with Engle and Ault, there is no practical need to exercise discretionary jurisdiction in this case.

II
THERE IS NO EXPRESS AND DIRECT CONFLICT
WITH THIS COURT’S 1932 DECISION IN WEBB FURNITURE
OR WITH OTHER DECISIONS

The Fourth District’s decision does not expressly and directly conflict with Webb Furniture Co. v. Everett, 105 Fla. 292, 141 So. 115 (1932), a case which Petitioner did not even cite below. Nothing in Webb establishes a rule that a remand for entry of judgment cannot follow a reversal based on insufficient evidence of a claim. Webb pre-dates the 1950 rule changes allowing trial courts to enter judgment in accordance with a motion for directed verdict. Moreover, Webb did not require a new trial on a previously tried claim that failed for insufficient proof. It remanded for a trial only on claims that had not yet been tried, claims that the plaintiff had sought to add after a prior appeal. Webb, 105 Fla. at 293-97, 141 So. at 115-16. That is entirely different from the relief Petitioner seeks, a remand to retry the same claim it failed to prove at trial.

Petitioner offers Webb's statement that, after a reversal, parties on remand should be "restored to the position they found themselves [in] at the time the error was committed" and that, "when error occurs in the trial, . . . the cause must be tried again." 141 So. at 116. The Fourth District did not hold otherwise. It recognized that the trial court's error occurred when that court failed to "grant[] Morgan Stanley's motion for directed verdict" after the close of Petitioner's evidence. Appendix A, p. 9. At that point, Respondent should have been granted judgment as a matter of law. The remand for the entry of judgment "restored [the parties] to the position they found themselves [in] at the time the error was committed." 141 So. at 116. That poses no conflict with Webb.

Petitioner asserts that it relied on the trial court's rulings in presenting its damages evidence at trial and thus should receive a new trial. However, the decision below is not about evidentiary rulings; it is based on Petitioner's failure to present legally sufficient evidence to prove its claimed benefit-of-the-bargain damages. Petitioner, not the trial court, instructed its expert to "[d]epart[] from his practice in other securities cases" and "simply assume[] CPH could not have recovered any value." Appendix A, p. 4. Having made that strategic decision before the trial court's rulings, Petitioner cannot blame its failure of proof on the trial court.

Petitioner's failure at trial to present legally sufficient evidence to prove the benefit-of-the-bargain damages it elected to pursue required the directed verdict Respondent had sought. In Arky, Freed, Stearns, Watson, Greer, Weaver & Harris, P.A. v. Bowmar Instrument Corporation, 537 So. 2d 561, 563 (Fla. 1989), the Court required entry of judgment, not a new trial, when the plaintiff chose to proceed over the other party's overruled objection. The similar outcome here created no conflict with Webb.

There also is no express and direct conflict with Petitioner's other cited cases. Those decisions either (1) do not involve failure to prove an element of the tort, Linn v. Fossum, 946 So. 2d 1032 (Fla. 2006); Wolfe v. Gencorp, Inc., 529 So. 2d 1154 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988); (2) predate the 1950 rule changes, Jones v. Tampa Elec. Co., 143 Fla. 693, 197 So. 385 (1940); (3) have no analysis demonstrating conflict, Srybnik v. Ice Tower, Inc., 162 So. 2d 294, 296 (Fla. 3d DCA 1964); or (4) involve unique and utterly dissimilar facts, such as a trial premised on an unconstitutional statute, see Florida E. Coast Ry. Co. v. Edwards, 197 So. 2d 293 (Fla. 1967). None holds that a plaintiff gets a new trial if it fails to prove an essential element of its claim at trial.

Rowland v. Whitehead, 375 So. 2d 607 (Fla. 2d DCA 1979), also is inapposite. That court allowed a new trial because it was "not a case in which the plaintiff . . . is seeking to introduce additional evidence which she should have put on in the first place.” Id. at 609. Here, Petitioner could have introduced the required damages evidence at trial, and having chosen not to do so, now seeks a new trial to introduce the evidence it should have presented in the first place. See, e.g., St. Petersburg Hous. Auth. v. J.R. Dev., 706 So. 2d 1377, 1377 (Fla. 2d DCA 1998) (reversing order granting rehearing on damages because such a hearing “improperly allows appellee a ‘second bite at the apple’ at proving damages, an element of proof that should have been proven at trial”). None of Petitioner’s cases poses express and direct conflict with the decision below.

III
THERE IS NO EXPRESS AND DIRECT CONFLICT WITH GOLDBERG OR MCCAIN

The decision below likewise does not conflict with McCain or Goldberg, neither of which was cited by Petitioner below. Those personal injury cases, involving issues of foreseeability and intervening cause, have nothing to do with the proper test for proving benefit-of-the-bargain damages in a commercial fraud case. Benefit-of-the-bargain damages are the difference between what the plaintiff was promised and what it actually received. Petitioner failed to prove the value of what it received, and thus failed to prove that difference. That is a damages issue, and presents no express and direct conflict with Goldberg or McCain.

Petitioner claims the Fourth District created a “new fraud damages rule” by holding that a plaintiff “must conduct an ‘event study’ to prove the amount of its damages.” Jur. Br., p. 8. Not so. The Fourth District merely observed that securities fraud plaintiffs “[u]sually” employ an event study to prove damages, and that other jurisdictions had “often” required such studies. Appendix A, p. 7. But the court ultimately held only that Petitioner had to prove, by any proper means, “the actual ‘fraud-free’ value of the stock at the time of purchase.” Id. at 9.

Petitioner was not entitled to assume the stock’s value was zero and thereby recover three years of unrelated stock-price declines. Sunbeam did not go bankrupt for nearly three years after the transaction at issue. Appendix A, p. 3. Furthermore, well after the alleged fraud was disclosed and Sunbeam restated its 1997 financials, “Sunbeam still showed a profit for 1997, even after the restatement, and still had assets of $3.5 billion.” Id. at 2. Whatever may have motivated Petitioner to avoid proving the fraud-free value of the stock at the time of its purchase, one thing is clear: the failure to do so, and its consequences, present no conflict with decisions of this Court or any other District Court of Appeal.

Petitioner claims that it suffered losses during the three years it held the Sunbeam stock (when its own officers ran Sunbeam, Appendix A, p. 2) because the alleged fraud prevented it from selling the stock earlier. But Petitioner’s bargain with Sunbeam included a “lockup” that prevented it from selling during that period. Appendix A, p. 2. Petitioner cannot claim benefit-of-the-bargain damages while ignoring the part of its bargain that required it to assume the risk of stock price declines from ordinary market events. Petitioner did not seek consequential damages, id. at 5 n.1, and a “plaintiff who seeks a benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages is not entitled to a better bargain than the one it made.” Id. at 6. On this issue too Petitioner has demonstrated no express and direct conflict with any decisions.

Finally, we note that Petitioner’s assertion that Respondent had a “proven role” (Jur. Br., p. 1) in Sunbeam’s fraud is misleading. A discovery sanction precluded Respondent from contesting its alleged involvement, an issue the Fourth District did not need to reach because Petitioner “fail[ed] to prove compensatory damages by not establishing the fraud-free value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the merger transaction.” Appendix A, pp. 1-2.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should decline to exercise its express and direct conflict jurisdiction in this case because there is no express and direct conflict.

DISTRICT COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA
FOURTH DISTRICT
January Term 2007

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Appellant,

v.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Appellee.

No. 4D05-2606

[March 21, 2007]

TAYLOR, J.

This appeal arises from a merger between The Coleman Company, Inc., a manufacturer of camping gear, and Sunbeam, Inc., a manufacturer of household products. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. (CPH), which owned most of the Coleman stock before the merger, exchanged its stock for shares of Sunbeam stock. Later, as reports emerged that Sunbeam's sales were falling and that the company had artificially inflated the value of its stock, Sunbeam's stock price plunged. Sunbeam ultimately declared bankruptcy. CPH sued Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (Morgan Stanley), Sunbeam's investment banker in the transaction, alleging that Morgan Stanley helped Sunbeam in carrying out its fraudulent scheme to inflate the price of its stock until after the merger. A jury returned a verdict against Morgan Stanley for conspiracy and aiding and abetting fraud. It awarded CPH compensatory damages of $604,334,000 and punitive damages of $850 million. Morgan Stanley appeals the $1.58 billion judgment entered on the jury verdict. We reverse.

Morgan Stanley raises several issues on appeal, including: (1) whether the trial court improperly entered a partial default against Morgan Stanley as a sanction for discovery misconduct; (2) whether the trial court properly applied Florida law rather than New York law on the issues of justifiable reliance and damages; (3) whether CPH failed to prove compensatory damages by not establishing the fraud-free value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the merger transaction; (4) whether the trial court erred in denying Morgan Stanley a fair opportunity to contest and mitigate evidence of litigation misconduct presented during the punitive damages phase of trial; and, (5) whether the punitive damages awarded were excessive. Because our decision on the third issue regarding proof of damages is dispositive, we do not reach the other issues and confine our discussion to compensatory and punitive damages.

A. Compensatory Damages

Pursuant to the merger agreement, Sunbeam bought the Coleman stock and paid CPH approximately half of the purchase price with its own stock. CPH received 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock, with an estimated value over $600 million. The transaction closed on March 30, 1998.

The merger agreement contained a "lockup" restriction, which limited CPH's ability to sell its Sunbeam stock for a specified period. CPH could not sell more than 25% of the Sunbeam stock for 90 days, then could sell another 25% in another 90 days and the remaining 50% in 270 days. A "lockup" provision is customary in situations where, as here, a company is selling a substantial number of shares and wants them sold in an orderly fashion. The shares were unregistered, but Sunbeam had agreed to register them promptly.

On April 3, 1998, Sunbeam issued a press release announcing that first quarter sales would be 5% below 1997 sales and that the company would show a loss for the quarter. Sunbeam stock dropped 10%, to $34 a share, after this report.

In mid-June 1998, Sunbeam's CEO, Al Dunlap, was fired after an internal investigation revealed fraudulent bookkeeping. Jerry Levin, formerly Coleman's CEO, then took the reins as Sunbeam's CEO and brought several senior Coleman executives with him. By then, the stock price had dropped to $18. Shortly after Dunlap's firing, Arthur Andersen "pulled" its 1996 and 1997 audit certificates.

By the end of 1998, Levin and his team had been at Sunbeam for almost six months. The company had restated its financials for 1996 and 1997, reducing the loss in 1996 and moving it to 1997. Sunbeam still showed a profit for 1997, even after the restatement, and still had assets of $3.5 billion.

Originally, CPH had planned to sell the Sunbeam shares after the "lockup" period. However, several circumstances prevented it from doing so. First, because of the fraud and Arthur Andersen's restatement of Sunbeam's financials, registration of the Sunbeam shares could not be completed until late 1999. Registration of a security is required before it can be sold in the public markets. Second, according to CPH, if, at any time after June 1998, the market had learned that CPH was attempting to sell its Sunbeam stock, "the market would clearly have viewed that as CPH abandoning a sinking ship and would have destroyed any value for the CPH stock." Third, because senior executives previously affiliated with CPH had assumed positions on Sunbeam's board and gained access to information concerning Sunbeam's performance, CPH was concerned that selling any of its Sunbeam shares could subject it to liability for insider trading.

On February 6, 2001, nearly three years after the transaction closed, Sunbeam went bankrupt. Howard Gittis, the vice-chairman of CPH, testified that, in his opinion, Sunbeam went bankrupt because it was overleveraged, i.e., had too much debt. As a result of the bankruptcy, CPH's Sunbeam shares became worthless.

At trial, CPH sought benefit-of-the-bargain damages. To establish these, CPH presented the testimony of its expert, Dr. Blaine Nye, a financial economist. Dr. Nye testified that CPH suffered damages between $634 and $680 million. He used an expected value for the 14.1 million Sunbeam shares of $48.26 per share (based on the average share price from the time the deal was publicly disclosed until the day it closed), for a total expected value of more than $680 million. Dr. Nye stated his opinion that, because CPH never was able to realize any value from the shares, CPH effectively received "zero" value. As an alternative, he assumed that three-quarters of the shares were saleable in the first quarter of 2000, which would have yielded a share price of $4.35 per share (averaged over the quarter). By that method, CPH's loss amounted to $634 million.

Morgan Stanley objected to the admission of Dr. Nye's opinion on damages. It argued that Dr. Nye's testimony was incompetent, because he did not factor a valuation date into his analysis. Contrary to the requirements set by settled law on fraud damages, his opinion was not based upon the value of the stock on the March 30, 1998 date of the transaction. The court overruled the objection. During cross-examination of Dr. Nye, Morgan Stanley established that Dr. Nye did not calculate the actual value of Sunbeam shares at any point in time.

Departing from his practice in other securities cases, he did not determine the "fraud-free" price of Sunbeam stock on the date of closing. He simply assumed CPH could not have recovered any value, as he was instructed to do by CPH. He did not consider whether other factors affected the stock price, such as business decisions by the new management team or the stock market crash of 2000. He did not analyze whether Sunbeam's acquisition of other small companies during this time created problems. He did not look at Sunbeam's expenses while it was being operated by the new management.

After Dr. Nye's examination, Morgan Stanley moved to strike Dr. Nye's testimony and renewed its earlier motions in limine and motion to exclude. Morgan Stanley argued that Dr. Nye's testimony was legally deficient, pointing out that the expert admitted at trial, as well as in deposition, that he "did not use the date of the deal at all" in his analysis and made no attempt to estimate the value of the loss as of March 30, 1998. The court denied the motions. It also denied Morgan Stanley's motion to direct a verdict in its favor due to CPH's failure to prove damages.

On May 16, 2005, the jury returned a verdict finding, by clear and convincing evidence, that CPH relied on the false statements made by Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam, and that it suffered damages as a result. The jury awarded CPH compensatory damages in the amount of $604,334,000. Two days later, after brief testimony regarding punitive damages, the jury returned a verdict for punitive damages in the amount of $850 million. Morgan Stanley appealed the entire judgment on these verdicts.

CPH sought benefit-of-the-bargain damages from Morgan Stanley. Under the "flexibility theory" of damages followed in Florida, a defrauded party is entitled to the measure of damages that will fully compensate him. Nordyne, Inc. v. Fla. Mobile Home Supply, Inc., 625 So. 2d 1283, 1286 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993) ("The 'flexibility theory' permits the court to use either the 'out-of-pocket' or the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule, depending upon which is more likely fully to compensate the injured party."). At CPH's request, the trial court concluded that CPH was entitled to benefit-of-the-bargain damages. Damages under the benefit-of-the-bargain rule are measured by the difference between the value of the property as represented and the actual value of the property on the date of the transaction. Kind v. Gittman, 889 So. 2d 87, 90 (Fla. 4th DCA 2004); Totale, Inc. v. Smith, 877 So. 2d 813, 815 (Fla. 4th DCA 2004); Teca, Inc. v. WM-TAB, Inc., 726 So. 2d 828, 829 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999); Pertman v.

Ferman Corp., 611 So. 2d 1340, 1341 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993). Actual value of the property at the time of purchase is a "crucial element in the damage equation." Teca, 726 So. 2d at 829. This is so whether a plaintiff seeks benefit-of-the-bargain damages or an out-of-pocket measure of damages. Kind, 889 So. 2d at 90; Totale, 877 So. 2d at 815. The same standard is applied in federal securities cases. See Miller v. Asencio & Co., 364 F.3d 223, 227 (4th Cir. 2004) (citing Affiliated Ute Citizens v. U. S., 406 U.S. 128, 155 (1972)) (stating that the measure of damages in 10(b) case was the difference between the fair value of what plaintiff received and the fair value of what they would have received had there been no fraudulent conduct at the time of sale); In Re Imperial Credit Indus., Inc. Sec. Litig., 252 F. Supp. 2d 1005, 1014 (C.D. Cal. 2003).¹

As a general rule, plaintiffs alleging securities fraud rely on expert proof to establish both the fact of damage and the appropriate method of calculation. Sowell v. Butcher & Singer, Inc., 926 F.2d 289, 301 (3d Cir. 1991). CPH's expert testified as to the bargained-for value of the Sunbeam stock, but he did not testify as to the actual value of the Sunbeam stock at the time of purchase – a necessary element of proof. He testified that although he had done such calculations in other cases, in this case he did not isolate the fraud-free price and perform the standard securities analysis to determine what would have been the stock's value on the date of transaction. Instead, he treated the stock as though it had no value when the transaction occurred in 1998.

CPH defends the evidence it presented at trial on damages. It argues that Morgan Stanley is liable for the full amount of its loss, because Morgan Stanley defrauded CPH into accepting shares that it could not resell. It contends that "in cases where misconduct induces a plaintiff to purchase stock and then hinders the plaintiff from reselling that stock, courts repeatedly have held that the wrongdoer is liable for losses until resale can occur." CPH maintains that, because it could not sell its stock, it was not bound by the date-of-transaction rule, but could recover for stock price declines until such time as it could resell the stock. Consistent with CPH's theory of damages, the trial court instructed the jury to value the stock on the date CPH could first resell it after December 1999, when the shares could be registered.

Morgan Stanley counters that CPH should not be allowed to recover for declines in Sunbeam's stock price during the period that CPH had agreed to a contractual "lockup". By agreeing to the "lockup", CPH bargained for at least part of the stock's illiquidity and accepted the risk of declines in stock price due to market conditions or other non-fraud related factors during the "lockup period". Thus, to allow CPH to recover for non-fraud related losses during the "lockup" period, when CPH had effectively agreed to absorb non-fraud related losses for that period, would amount to giving CPH more than what it bargained for. The record shows that Sunbeam lost approximately 90% of its value during the contractual "lockup" timeframe.

CPH maintains that it is entitled to recover for even non-fraud related stock price declines during this period, because it would not have entered the agreement, with its "lockup" clause, but for the fraud. However, CPH's "but for" causation argument disregards the proximate causation required for fraud damages and is at odds with the benefit-of-the-bargain recovery it elected. Benefit-of-the-bargain damages do not turn on what would have happened if CPH had known the representations were false. They measure what CPH would have received had the representations been true. By opting for benefit-of-the-bargain damages, CPH does not seek to rescind the transaction; it seeks to affirm the transaction and claim the benefit of the bargain. The bargain, in this case, included sale restrictions.

A plaintiff who seeks a benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages is not entitled to a better bargain than the one it made. This is true even under Florida's "flexibility theory" of damages. The "flexibility theory" of damages, which allows a plaintiff to choose either benefit-of-the-bargain or out-of-pocket damages in fraud cases, is not so flexible as to allow a plaintiff to pick and choose which parts of the contract it wants to affirm and which parts it wants to disaffirm. Furthermore, applying CPH's "but for" rationale to proving damages would result in recovery of all non-fraud related losses in virtually every fraud case, because the defrauded party would need only assert that it would not have agreed to the contract had it known of the fraud.

To support its argument that it was entitled to all "pre-sale" losses, CPH relies primarily on Shearson Loeb Rhoades, Inc. v. Medlin, 468 So. 2d 272, 273 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985). However, Shearson hinders rather than helps CPH's claim. In that case, we held that the measure of damages for delay in delivery of stock certificates is the difference between the value when the certificates should have been delivered and the value when they were actually delivered. We barred damages for subsequent depreciation absent proof that the plaintiff "would have sold" earlier had the stock been properly delivered. Here, CPH introduced no such proof. To the contrary, it had actually agreed not to sell during the most critical period when Sunbeam lost 90 % of its value.

As to the date-of-transaction rule, CPH argues that the transaction date is not necessarily the operative valuation date in a case involving stock or other property that, due to fraud, could not be resold when the fraud was exposed. It contends that once it placed in evidence a stock price table showing the daily market price of Sunbeam shares from March 1998 until Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001, the jury could simply select a date when the effects of the fraud no longer existed and perform its own calculation in making an award. However, even if the jury had chosen a date, such as the date Arthur Andersen restated the Sunbeam financials, other factors existed that could have affected the stock price. As the Supreme Court explained in Dura Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 342-43 (2005):

When a purchaser subsequently resells such shares, even at a lower price, that lower price may reflect, not the earlier misrepresentation, but changed economic circumstances, changed investor expectations, new industry-specific or firm-specific facts, conditions, or other events, which taken separately or together account for some or all of that lower price.

Thus, recovering in a securities case "require[s] elimination of that portion of the price decline that is the result of forces unrelated to the wrong." Miller, 364 F.3d at 232 (quoting In re Executive Telecard, Ltd. Sec. Litig., 979 F. Supp. 1021, 1025 (S.D.N.Y. 1997)).

Usually, a securities plaintiff proves the actual, or "fraud-free," value of the stock at the time of purchase by presenting an expert "event study" or "event analysis." In fact, an "event analysis" is often required to support an expert's damages calculation and "generally involves the computation of a statistical regression analysis or, at a minimum, the compilation of a detailed analysis of each particular event that might have influenced the stock price." Miller, 364 F.3d at 234. This is the kind of calculation that CPH's expert said he had done in other cases.

In Miller, the expert claimed to have done the "event analysis" in his head, never committing any portion of it to paper, other than his final conclusion. The court characterized this analysis as "markedly thin" and upheld a zero verdict, stating that the record was one from which the jury "cannot" have awarded damages. Id. at 235.

In In re Imperial Credit Industries, Inc. Securities Litigation, 252 F. Supp. 2d 1005 (C.D. Cal. 2003), at the summary judgment stage, the court excluded the defense expert's damages report as junk science under Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceutical, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), then entered summary judgment for the defendant, because the report contained no "event study" or similar analysis. In so doing, it noted:

11. Because of the need "to distinguish between the fraud-related and non-fraud related influences of the stock's price behavior," In re Oracle Sec. Litig., 829 F. Supp. 1176, 1181 (N.D. Cal. 1993), a number of courts have rejected or refused to admit into evidence damages reports or testimony by damages experts in securities cases which fail to include event studies or something similar. See, e.g., In re Northern Telecom Sec. Litig., 116 F. Supp.2d 446, 460 (S.D. N.Y.2000) ("Torkelson's testimony is fatally deficient in that he did not perform an event study or similar analysis to remove the effects on stock price of market and industry information and he did not challenge the event study performed by defendants' expert."); Executive Telecard, 979 F. Supp. at 1024-26 (finding an expert's methodology not reliable because he failed to conduct an event study or regression analysis to detect whether stock price declines were the result of forces other than the alleged fraud; applying Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharm., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 125 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1993) to exclude the expert damages report); Oracle, 829 F. Supp. at 1181 ("Use of an event study or similar analysis is necessary more accurately to isolate the influences of information specific to Oracle which defendant allegedly have distorted... As a result of his failure to employ such a study, the results reached by [plaintiffs' expert] cannot be evaluated by standard measures of statistical significance.")

12. The importance and centrality of the event study methodology in determining damages in securities cases-and the propriety of rejecting expert damages reports which do not use such a methodology-has been conceded by plaintiffs in other securities fraud cases:

"[A]ccording to [plaintiffs], the methodology-'event study methodology'-used to calculate shareholder damages during the class period 'has been used by financial economists since 1969 as a tool to measure the effect on market prices from all types of new information relevant to a company's equity valuation.' It is so accepted, plaintiffs add, that courts now reject expert damage estimates which do not use event study methodology to evaluate the impact on the market of a company's disclosures."

In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Litig., 109 F. Supp. 2d 235, 253-54 (D.N.J. 2000).

Imperial Credit, 252 F. Supp. 2d at 1015.

CPH was not entitled to have the jury speculate as to the value of the stock on the date of sale. Rather, it was required to prove the stock's value on that date. As we explained in Totale, "the crucial time for the measurement is the time of the fraudulent representation. Later appreciation or depreciation of the property that is subject of the false representation generally does not alter the fraud damage computation." 877 So. 2d at 815. The federal cases cited above merely expand on Florida law that requires the plaintiff to prove the actual, "fraud-free" value of the stock at the time of purchase. Although CPH insisted in oral argument that the stock market was doing well and that there were no non-fraud related factors affecting the stock price during the "lockup" period, it failed to present any competent proof at trial establishing the absence of non-fraud related factors.

In sum, CPH failed to meet its burden of proving the actual, "fraud-free" value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the transaction. Instead, it measured damages based on the stock's value years after the transaction. Because there was no proof presented at trial on the correct measure of damages, the trial court should have granted Morgan Stanley's motion for directed verdict. We therefore reverse the final judgment for compensatory damages and remand for entry of a judgment for Morgan Stanley. See Kind, 889 So. 2d at 90; Teca, 726 So. 2d at 830.

We reject CPH's argument that it should, at the least, be given a new trial to prove damages because the trial court erred in its pretrial rulings and jury instructions concerning the proper measure of damages. CPH cannot complain about rulings that it urged the court to make in accordance with its damages theory. Furthermore, as we held in Teca, a plaintiff is not entitled to a second "bite at the apple" when there has been no proof at trial concerning the correct measure of damages. Id. at 830.

B. Punitive Damages

The trial was bifurcated, with the jury deciding liability and compensatory damages in Phase I. In Phase II, the jury tried the issue of punitive damages and awarded CPH $850 million in punitive damages. Because we conclude that Morgan Stanley was entitled to a directed verdict and reversal of the compensatory damages award, we reverse the punitive damages award as well. The punitive damages award cannot stand where, as here, no legally cognizable damage was shown as a result of the alleged fraud. Had the trial court properly directed a verdict for Morgan Stanley, the case would have ended at that point and the punitive damages phase never would have been reached.

CPH argues that we should nevertheless uphold the award of punitive damages. It suggests that even after entering a directed verdict on compensatory damages, the trial court could have submitted the liability issue to the jury as a possible predicate for punitive damages. Relying on Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989), and Engle v. Liggett Group, Inc., 945 So. 2d 1246 (Fla. 2006), CPH argues that, where an intentional tort is proved, punitive damages are recoverable even in the absence of compensatory damages. We conclude that Ault is distinguishable and that Engle is not controlling in this case.

Ault was an assault and battery case. The jury in that case awarded the plaintiff punitive damages, but no compensatory damages. The Florida Supreme Court approved the punitive damages award because of the jury's express finding of liability. The court held that "a finding of liability alone will support an award of punitive damages 'even in the absence of financial loss for which compensatory damages would be appropriate.'" 538 So. 2d at 456. Assault and battery torts, however, are fundamentally different from fraud. Unlike in the case of fraud, actual injury or compensatory damages are not essential to stating a cause of action for assault and battery. See, e.g., Paul v. Holbrook, 696 So. 2d 1311, 1312 (Fla. 5th DCA 1997); Lay v. Kremer, 411 So. 2d 1347, 1349 (Fla. 1st DCA 1982).

It is fundamental that “[a]ctual damages and the measure thereof are essential as a matter of law in establishing a claim of fraud.” Nat’l Equip. Rental, Ltd. v. Little Italy Rest. & Delicatessen, Inc., 362 So. 2d 338, 339 (Fla. 4th DCA 1978). “Damage is of the very essence of an action for fraud or deceit.” Casey v. Welch, 50 So. 2d 124, 125 (Fla. 1951). Without proof of actual damage the fraud is not actionable. Id.; Stokes v. Victory Land Co., 128 So. 408 (1930); Pryor v. Oak Ridge Dev. Corp., 119 So. 326 (1928); Wheeler v. Baars, 15 So. 584 (1894); Nat’l Aircraft Servs., Inc. v. Aeroserv Int’l, Inc., 544 So. 2d 1063 (Fla. 3d DCA 1989); Nat’l Equip. Rental, 362 So. 2d at 339. Thus, to prevail in an action for fraud, a plaintiff must prove its actual loss or injury from acting in reliance on the false representation.²

Even if CPH established the fact of some unquantified damage (which theoretically could have supported a nominal damage award), this is not enough to justify a punitive damage award in a fraud case. Punitive damages for fraud cannot be based on nominal damages alone. Nat’l Aircraft Servs., 544 So. 2d at 1065. Although the Florida Supreme Court’s recent Engle opinion does state that “an award of compensatory damages is not a prerequisite to a finding of entitlement to punitive damages,” we read the opinion as addressing the order of proof in determining entitlement to punitive damages. 945 So. 2d at 1262 (“Therefore we conclude that the order of these determinations is not critical.”).³

³ Even if we were to accept CPH’s argument that some amount of punitive damages would still be awardable after a directed verdict on compensatory damages, due process principles would not have permitted an $850 million punitive damage award to stand in a case where no compensatory damages were awarded. See BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559 (1996) (holding that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to compensatory

Accordingly, we reverse both the compensatory and punitive damage awards and remand this cause with directions to enter judgment for Morgan Stanley.

I have a different perception.⁴ Mine sees differences in the case actually litigated in the trial court from the case on appeal. In sum, I see nothing wrong under Florida law with Coleman's theory of compensatory damages or proof and would affirm that part of the judgment. As for punitive damages, however, I would reverse and remand for a new trial on the issue of *entitlement*⁵ and, if necessary, the amount. I elaborate in the following paragraphs.

Compensatory Damages

Sunbeam sought to buy Coleman's stock to acquire control of the company. It agreed to pay part of the price with its own stock and part in cash. Coleman's reasons for accepting some of the price in the buyer's own securities were doubtlessly based on the tax laws, but there are other considerations as well. For example, one reason to hold the stock would be to receive future earnings from what was represented to be worth $640,000,000. And so the mere fact that part of the price was paid in securities hardly means that the seller intended to convert such damages). Under due process principles, only a small fraction of the $850 million award would conceivably have been recoverable in this situation.

⁴ I do agree with the majority's necessarily implicit affirmance of the trial court's application of Florida law instead of New York. Florida has a significant and undeniable interest in providing remedies for persons injured by false financial statements emanating from this state by companies who have decided to locate their headquarters here. I agree that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in the sanctions imposed on Morgan Stanley for substantial violations of court orders.

⁵ See § 768.725, Fla. Stat. (2005) ("In all civil actions, the plaintiff must establish at trial, by clear and convincing evidence, its entitlement to an award of punitive damages.").

securities into cash, or that buyer's damages should be based only on some hypothetical price the stock might have fetched if resold at some point.

The claim is intentional fraud, not breach of contract. Coleman claimed that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley deliberately falsified financial reports to induce Coleman to accept Sunbeam stock as part of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. That means that the worth of the stock is critical to measuring Coleman's damages.

The value of stock is affected by an objective factor, which in turn may be enhanced by subjective factors. Objectively, it reflects the intrinsic worth of the corporation: the value of its assets in excess of its liabilities. Its worth might also be enhanced by intangible factors: for example, although heavily in debt, a pending transaction could inject considerable profits.

Theoretically, there are two ways in which the value of the Sunbeam stock could have been falsified by the misrepresentations of Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley. The first would be that the stock really had no objective value at all because the corporation was insolvent and lacked any prospects to rescue it.⁶ The alternative could be that the stock actually retained a value less than the corporate financial reports indicated. In other words, the distinction is the difference between zero and some positive whole number.

Florida law, therefore, understandably gave Coleman different ways to measure the injury it suffered from stock whose value had been deliberately misrepresented.

"Florida has adopted two standards for the measurement of damages in an action for fraudulent representation. Either may be used to do justice as the circumstances demand. The first standard is the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule.... The second standard is the 'out-of-pocket' rule...." [e.s.]

See Martin v. Brown, 566 So.2d 890, 891 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990); see also Strickland v. Muir, 198 So.2d 49, 51 (Fla. 4th DCA 1967), receded from on

⁶ Again, even if the stock lacked objective value because of the insolvency of the corporation, the owners of its stock might still avoid a liquidation if they could point to some prospective advantage to conceivably rescue the situation. But without that, the stock would have no value.

other grounds, TECA, Inc. v. WM-TAB, Inc., 726 So.2d 828 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999). Looking at the benefit-of-the-bargain rule, I see nothing wrong with the jurisprudence of allowing the deceived victim of fraud to hold a defendant to his lies for purposes of assessing damages. So if a defendant had represented the thing to be worth $10,000 when it was actually worth nothing, it is fit and appropriate to mulct him in money damages for the full $10,000. Let the defendant pay what he said the value was. Essentially that is what the benefit-of-the-bargain theory of damages does.

At trial Coleman measured its damages by the benefit of its bargain. It did not seek to prove that the stock had some reduced value above zero. To the contrary, it contended instead that the stock was worthless. As I understand its evidence at trial if believed by the jury, it could have been properly understood as showing that the stock it received from Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley never really had any real value because of the concealed insolvency of Sunbeam—as the later bankruptcy confirmed.

One important aspect of compensating someone for the intentional deceit of another is to make the damages fit the fraud and place the deceived person where he (it) would have been if the goods (stock) had been as represented. If Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley were guilty of deceiving Coleman into believing that the shares given in payment for the company were worth at least $640,000,000, even though the stock had no real value because of the corporation's concealed insolvency, then it seems only right to hold Sunbeam indebted to Coleman for the same $640,000,000 in money damages. Such compensation is just and fair because it vindicates the value (mis)represented.

I see no legal reason why the deceiver should be benefited in the measurement of damages by the mere fact that Coleman held on to the stock and refrained from selling it in the market when it might have done so. For one thing, by requiring a resale of inflated stock to an unsuspecting public, the court's reasoning would encourage aggrieved buyers unwittingly to make use of their seller's fraudulent representations concealing its real lack of value. The law of damages can hardly countenance such a perpetuation of fraudulent financial statements. If the tainted stock has no value, there is no reason for one in the position of Coleman to produce evidence of the selling price of the stock for any particular day after the sale and before the lawsuit so long as it instead proved that from the day of the sale it had no real value on account of the hidden financial failure of the company. Moreover,

Coleman's failure to sell the stock at the first chance was obviously weighed by the jury. The verdict demonstrates that the jury apparently found that Coleman's failure to attempt resale was of no consequence.

At trial Morgan Stanley's damages defense was apparently meant to defeat Coleman's benefit-of-the-bargain theory by focusing on the second method of proving fraud damages. To reduce damages it sought to establish that even if the stock fell short of the entire value represented by the financial statements, it was nevertheless still worth some lesser value. Morgan Stanley certainly elicited evidence of a lesser value and so argued to the jury. The problem for Morgan Stanley on appeal is that its theory was substantially rejected by the jury. While there may have been contrary evidence, Coleman produced contrary evidence to support its theory of zero value. The jury relied on Coleman's theory instead of Morgan Stanley's, a reliance that should impel this court on appeal to reject the alternative theory of measuring damages as well.

The principal policy underlying compensation in fraud cases has been explained thus:

"In tort actions, the goal is to restore the injured party to the position it would have been in had the wrong not been committed. In most cases, the measure of damages which will accomplish this goal is that provided by the 'out-of-pocket rule.' However, in some cases, the measure of damages afforded by that rule will prove inadequate to achieve the desired goal. To address those latter cases in which the claim is for fraud, what has been described as the 'flexibility theory' has been developed. The 'flexibility theory' permits the court to use either the 'out-of-pocket' or the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule, depending upon which is more likely fully to compensate the injured party." [c.o., e.s.]

Nordyne, Inc. v. Fla. Mobile Home Supply, Inc., 625 So.2d 1283, 1286 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993). Coleman had strong authority under Florida law to rely on the benefit-of-the-bargain rule and succeeded in producing evidence that the stock it received was essentially worthless. While Morgan Stanley was free to hitch its star to the alternative out-of-pocket rule, it was the function of the jury to decide which of the two theories would fully compensate the deceived victim of this particular fraud. From the amount awarded, it is obvious that the jury largely used the benefit-of-the-bargain rule, reducing the amount claimed by Coleman to fit the jury's resolution of the evidence. I do not think the trial judge abused her discretion in allowing the evidence or by refusing to disturb the jury's compensation verdict.

Punitive Damages

In Ault v. Lohr, 538 So.2d 454 (Fla. 1989), the court held that a plaintiff can recover punitive damages when the fact finder has found a breach of duty but compensatory or actual damages have not been proven; nominal damages need not first be awarded before punitive damages are proper. Yet in spite of Ault, the majority peremptorily holds that no punitive damages are possible in this intentional fraud case because of its reversal of the jury's award of compensatory damages. Their reasoning is:

"Although the Florida Supreme Court's recent Engle opinion does state that 'an award of compensatory damages is not a prerequisite to a finding of entitlement to punitive damages,' we read the opinion as addressing the order of proof in determining entitlement to punitive damages, not as eliminating the need for proof of damages establishing the underlying case of fraud."

(referring to Engle v. Liggett Group, Inc., 945 So.2d 1246, 1262 (Fla. 2006)). To understand why Engle does not hold what the majority said it did, I set out the Engle court's actual discussion on this subject in its entirety:

"A. Phase I Finding on Entitlement to Punitive Damages

"The last question on the Phase I verdict form asked the jury to determine whether '[u]nder the circumstances of this case, ... the conduct of any Defendant rose to a level that would permit a potential award or entitlement to punitive damages.' The jury answered 'yes' with respect to each of the defendants. In Phase II-B, the jury awarded a total of $145 billion in punitive damages to the class.

"The Third District ruled that the trial erred in awarding classwide punitive damages 'without the necessary findings of liability and compensatory damages.' Engle II, 853 So.2d at 450.⁷ A majority of the Court (Anstead, Pariente, Lewis and Quince) concludes that an award of compensatory damages is not a prerequisite to a finding of entitlement to punitive damages. Compensatory and punitive damages serve distinct purposes. As the United States Supreme Court has explained:

The former are intended to redress the concrete loss that the plaintiff has suffered by reason of the defendant's wrongful conduct. The latter, which have been described as 'quasi-criminal,' operate as 'private fines' intended to punish the defendant and to deter future wrongdoing. A jury's assessment of the extent of a plaintiff's injury is essentially a factual determination, whereas its imposition of punitive damages is an expression of its moral condemnation. Cooper Indus., Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001) (citations omitted).

"Because a finding of entitlement to punitive damages is not dependent on a finding that a plaintiff suffered a specific injury, an award of compensatory damages need not precede a determination of entitlement to punitive damages. Therefore, we conclude that the order of these determinations is not critical. See Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., Inc., 782 F.2d 468, 474 (5th Cir.1986).

"A different majority of the Court (Wells, Anstead, Pariente and Bell) concludes that under our decision in Ault v. Lohr, 538 So.2d 454, 456 (Fla.1989), a finding of liability is required before entitlement to punitive damages can be determined, and that liability is more than a breach of duty. A finding of liability necessarily precedes a determination of damages, but does not compel a compensatory award. For example, in Ault, the jury found that the defendant had committed an assault and battery but awarded $0 in compensatory damages and $5000 in punitive damages. See id. at 455. Thus, unlike the Phase I jury in this case, the jury in Ault found that the plaintiff had proved the underlying cause of action but did not suffer any compensable damage.

"Although we appeared to use 'breach of duty' and 'liability' interchangeably in Ault, the Court expressly adopted the principles set forth in dicta in Lassiter v. International Union of Operating Engineers, 349 So.2d 622 (Fla.1976). Specifically, we stated that [n]ominal damages are awarded to vindicate an invasion of one's legal rights where, although no physical or financial injury has been inflicted, the underlying cause of action has been proved to the satisfaction of a jury.

Accordingly, the establishment of liability for a breach of duty will support an otherwise valid punitive damage award even in the absence of financial loss for which compensatory damages would be appropriate. Ault, 538 So.2d at 455 (quoting Lassiter, 349 So.2d at 625-26).'

"In this case, the Phase I verdict did not constitute a 'finding of liability' under Ault. This is evidenced by the fact that had the jury found for Tobacco on the legal cause and reliance issues during Phase II, there would have been no opportunity for the jury to award the named plaintiffs damages of any type. In other words, Phase II findings for Tobacco on legal causation and reliance would have precluded the jury from awarding compensatory or punitive damages. It was error for the trial court to allow the jury to consider entitlement to punitive damages before the jury found that the plaintiffs had established causation and reliance.

"In Phase I, the jury decided issues related to Tobacco's conduct but did not consider whether any class members relied on Tobacco's misrepresentations or were injured by Tobacco's conduct. As the Third District noted, the Phase I jury 'did not determine whether the defendants were liable to anyone.' Engle II, 853 So.2d at 450. It was therefore error for the Phase I jury to consider whether Tobacco was liable for punitive damages." [e.s.]

945 So.2d at 1262-63. By no stretch of the imagination could this explanation be understood by me as merely fixing an "order of proof in determining entitlement to punitive damages." Ault v. Lohr had already "eliminat[ed] the need for proof of damages establishing the underlying case of fraud," and Engle explicitly proceeded to follow and apply Ault in the holding quoted above. Id. It is not reasonable to read the above quotation to mean anything other than that an award of some compensatory damages is unnecessary to find an entitlement to punitive damages.

Because the majority's reading of Engle on the punitive damages issue is obviously at odds with the Supreme Court's earlier holding in Ault, it is apparent that the majority thinks that Engle has impliedly overruled Ault. But the Supreme Court has repeatedly made clear that it does not impliedly overrule itself. See Puryear v. State, 810 So.2d 901, 905 (Fla. 2002) ("We take this opportunity to expressly state that this Court does not intentionally overrule itself sub silentio. Where a court encounters an express holding from this Court on a specific issue and a subsequent contrary dicta statement on the same specific issue, the court is to apply our express holding in the former decision until such time as this Court recedes from the express holding." [e.s.]); State v. Ruiz, 863 So.2d 1205, 1210 (Fla. 2003) ("Further, as we have made clear, 'this Court does not intentionally overrule itself sub silentio.'"); F.B. v. State, 852 So.2d 226, 228 (Fla. 2003) ("Thus, while the Second District's reliance ... is understandable, we again remind the courts that this Court does not intentionally overrule itself sub silentio."); City of Miami v. McGrath, 824 So.2d 143, 152 (Fla. 2002) ("there is no indication that the Court ... intended to recede from its prior approach to analyzing when a statute is an impermissible special law."). There is absolutely nothing in Engle suggesting that Ault was being explicitly overruled; indeed the court actually proceeded to apply Ault. See Engle, 945 So.2d at 1262-63 ("A finding of liability ... does not compel a compensatory award. For example, in Ault, the jury found that the defendant had committed an assault and battery but awarded $0 in compensatory damages and $5000 in punitive damages. Thus, unlike the Phase I jury in this case, the jury in Ault found that the plaintiff had proved the underlying cause of action but did not suffer any compensable damage.").

Ault's actual holding is that zero compensatory damages do not preclude punitive damages. In fact the court granted review specifically to answer that question. Ault, 538 So.2d at 456 ("The narrow question for resolution by this Court is whether a plaintiff can recover punitive damages where the factfinder has found a breach of duty but no compensatory or actual damages have been proven."). In holding that liability without at least some compensatory damages does not foreclose an award of punitive damages, Ault explained:

"We believe an express finding of a breach of duty should be the critical factor in an award of punitive damages. Accordingly, we hold that a finding of liability alone will support an award of punitive damages 'even in the absence of financial loss for which compensatory damages would be appropriate.' We reject Ault's contention that at least nominal damages must first be awarded before punitive damages are proper. We conclude that nominal damages are in effect zero damages and are defined as those damages flowing from the establishment of an invasion of a legal right where actual or compensatory damages have not been proven. In approving an award of punitive damages upon an express finding of liability by the factfinder, we accept the view that nominal damages will be presumed from an encroachment upon an established right." [e.s., f.o.]

Id. In a special concurring opinion, Justice Ehrlich contributed the following:

"The crucial element in determining whether punitive damages may be awarded absent an award of compensatory damages is proof of the underlying cause of action. Where actual damage is an essential element of the underlying cause of action, an award of compensatory damages must be a prerequisite to an award of punitive damages. This case involved the torts of assault and battery, which do not require proof of actual damage. Therefore, I agree that in this case, where the jury made an express finding of liability, punitive damages could properly be awarded even absent an award of compensatory damages."

538 So.2d at 457.

The majority has not disturbed the jury's finding of liability for fraud—for which plaintiff was required to present evidence of the fact (if not the amount) of some damage. Effectually the majority has resurrected this court's holding in Buonopane v. Fritz, 477 So.2d 1030 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985) ("The law in Florida is clear that one cannot recover for punitive damages if no compensatory damages are awarded."). But that holding that was expressly disapproved in Ault. 538 So.2d at 456 ("For the reasons expressed, we ... disapprove Buonopane v. Fritz, 477 So.2d 1030 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985)..."). There is a world of difference between the fact that one was damaged—i.e., harmed or injured—by a falsehood (fraud being merely one example of an actionable falsehood, defamation another) and the entirely separate issue of its quantification in money damages. Ault requires only the former and eschews the latter.

In setting aside the compensatory damages in this case, the majority's premise is that the stock may well have had some lesser value than Morgan Stanley represented but the evidence fails to establish that any precise lesser value on some relevant date. Clearly, however, the evidence supported the inference that Coleman was damaged by the fraud, even if it fails to support the precise amount awarded. In First Interstate Development Co. v. Ablanado, 511 So.2d 536 (Fla. 1987), the supreme court held that punitive damages are appropriate for any tortious conduct accomplished through fraud. See also Winn & Lovett

Grocery Co. v. Archer, 171 So. 214, 221, 222 (1936) (exemplary damages are given solely as a punishment where torts are committed with fraud; to recover exemplary or punitive damages, the declaration must allege some general facts and circumstances of fraud). If proof of intentional fraud is per se enough for punitive damages, then the failure to establish the precise monetary amount of the actual loss caused by the fraud does not affect the entitlement to punitive damages. It may have an effect on the amount of punitive damages but not entitlement.

In order for the jury in this case to have assessed any compensatory damages, it first had to decide that Coleman had established the fact of damage from Morgan Stanley's intentionally false financial statements. Accordingly, under Engle and Ault, if the majority could properly decide that Coleman failed to prove any amount of compensatory damages, it would be necessary to presume at least nominal damages for fraud. The result should then be to remand the case to the trial court for a new trial on punitive damages.

But apart from Engle, I think a new trial on punitive entitlement is required for an entirely different reason. My reasoning is this.

Liability on the fraud issue was partially established by the trial court's imposition of sanctions on Morgan Stanley and its consequent jury instruction that it must take as established the essential facts Coleman relied on to prove liability for fraud. Later when this bifurcated trial entered the punitive damages phase, Morgan Stanley tried to present evidence contrary to those facts deemed established by the jury instruction for purposes of deciding the liability phase. The trial judge barred Morgan Stanley from doing so. In my opinion, this was error.

In deciding whether to inflict civil punishment by punitive damages, the critical issue turns on "the degree of reprehensibility⁸ of the defendant's misconduct." State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 418 (2003); BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 575 (1996). While there are other lesser factors, it is manifest that any "moral outrage" of the jury must arise from conduct suitably blameworthy. See e.g. Cooper Indus., Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 432 (2001) ("A jury's ... imposition of punitive damages is an expression of its moral condemnation."). The moral condemnation is the censure of a civil society expressed collectively by its representative members on a jury. It is not the individual reaction of a single judge—not even when the judge is imposing sanctions for discovery violations by directing the jury to take certain facts as proven. The facts creating an entitlement to punitive damages are not something that a trial judge can impose on a jury as a presumption. Unavoidably, it is the jury who must find and express that moral condemnation.

A jury cannot make this severe condemnation without admissible evidence confirming that the defendant's conduct was adequately blameworthy. Due process thus requires that defendant must necessarily have the right to offer admissible evidence that members of the community might logically and reasonably consider as mitigating its blameworthiness for such punishment. In this case the trial judge essentially denied Morgan Stanley that right. For that reason I would have a new trial as to both entitlement and (if necessary) any amount.

DEFENDANT MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S OPPOSITION TO VERIFIED MOTION OF COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.
TO VACATE THE JUDGMENT AND GRANT A NEW TRIAL ON DAMAGES

Having lost on appeal to the Fourth District Court of Appeal, Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") now seeks to avoid the Fourth District's mandate by invoking Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540. CPH suggests that the Court should vacate the new judgment entered pursuant to the Fourth District's mandate and grant it a new trial on damages by imposing greater discovery sanctions on Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") than were initially sought or imposed. This Court should reject CPH's motion.

First, a new trial is foreclosed by the decision and mandate of the Fourth District. The Fourth District reversed the judgment for CPH on the sole ground that CPH had failed to present legally sufficient proof of damages, and hence the Fourth District did not address the discovery sanctions imposed prior to trial (or any other issue on appeal). Finding that the damages error had resulted from CPH's choice of a flawed damages theory, the Fourth District expressly denied CPH a new trial and directed this Court to enter judgment in favor of MS & Co. The Fourth District denied CPH's request for rehearing and the Florida Supreme Court denied review. CPH's motion is an improper effort to escape those binding appellate decisions.

Second, Rule 1.540(b) is a limited exception to the rule of finality that requires a showing of new information whose absence prevented a party from fully and fairly presenting his case. CPH has failed to meet this high standard. The information CPH now relies upon was fully available to CPH and this Court prior to entry of judgment, as well as to the Fourth District prior to issuance of the mandate, and CPH cannot establish that any earlier disclosure would have changed the sanctions, the trial, or the appellate outcome. To the contrary, the trial court sought to impose sanctions narrowly tailored to “level the playing field,” and expressly recognized that the non-production of MS & Co.’s internal e-mails was “independent” of CPH’s ability to prove damages. Similarly, the date on which MS & Co.’s in-house lawyers knew of the existence of e-mails on certain backup tapes was irrelevant to CPH’s ability to fully and fairly prove its damages.

Finally, CPH is barred by its earlier strategic decisions. In addition to its choice of a flawed damage theory, CPH made tactical choices in pursuit of sanctions that it now seeks to revisit, despite the mandate. CPH could have raised the arguments it now makes prior to entry of judgment or on appeal. CPH chose not to do so. Given those decisions, CPH has no right to revisit discovery sanctions at this late date.

CPH’s motion should be denied.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

This case arose from the merger between The Coleman Company (“Coleman”) and Sunbeam Inc. (“Sunbeam”) in 1998. See Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124, 1125-26 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007). In connection with the merger, CPH exchanged its stock in Coleman for, inter alia, shares of Sunbeam stock, and received other benefits amounting to $660 million. On February 6, 2001, nearly three years after the transaction closed, Sunbeam went bankrupt. (Id. at 1127).

A. Overview of the Case and Trial

In May 2003, CPH sued MS & Co., which acted as Sunbeam's investment banker in the merger, claiming that MS & Co. had participated in Sunbeam's fraud, and that the shares of Sunbeam stock which were part of the purchase price were overvalued. (Id. at 1125-26). Because CPH elected benefit-of-the-bargain damages, a crucial element of its case was the actual value of the Sunbeam stock it received, measured at the time of the transaction. (Id. at 1127-28). At trial, however, CPH's expert did not testify as to the actual value of the Sunbeam stock at the time of the merger. (Id. at 1128-29). In fact, CPH instructed its expert not to conduct an "event study" to establish the "fraud-free" value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the merger, contrary to his normal practice. (Id. at 1127-28, 1130). Instead, CPH told its expert to assume that the value of the Sunbeam stock it received was zero (the value it held three years later, after Sunbeam had filed for bankruptcy). (Id. at 1127).

On March 21, 2007, the Fourth District reversed "both the compensatory and punitive damage awards and remand[ed] this cause with directions to enter judgment for Morgan Stanley." (Id. at 1133) (emphasis supplied). The Fourth District concluded that CPH failed to prove the actual, "fraud-free" value of the Sunbeam stock on the date of the merger, as required by settled Florida law. (Id. at 1131). The Fourth District faulted CPH for not having its expert conduct an event study to account for factors, independent of the fraud, that might have contributed to the declining value of the Sunbeam stock and its ultimate bankruptcy. (Id. at 1130-31). This was significant because Sunbeam had been solvent -- and for a time profitable -- during the nearly three years following the merger (id. at 1126-27), and there were numerous factors, such as CPH's installation of its new management team to run Sunbeam, the stock market crash of 2000, and Sunbeam's other acquisitions, that might have contributed to Sunbeam's bankruptcy. (Id. at 1127).

The Fourth District expressly rejected CPH's argument that it should be entitled to a new trial on damages. CPH attempted to evade responsibility for its failure to prove damages by arguing that "the trial court erred in its pretrial rulings and jury instructions concerning the proper measure of damages," but the Fourth District held that "CPH cannot complain about rulings that it urged the court to make in accordance with its damages theory." (Id. at 1131). Furthermore, the Fourth District stated, "as we held in Teca, a plaintiff is not entitled to a second 'bite at the apple' when there has been no proof at trial concerning the correct measure of damages." (Id. (citing Teca, Inc. v. WM-TAB, Inc., 726 So. 2d 828, 830 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999))). That decision is final and the mandate on it has issued to this Court.

B. The Trial Court's Discovery Sanctions and MS & Co.'s June 2005 Notice

Discovery disputes led to an "Agreed Order" on April 16, 2004, which required MS & Co. to conduct certain e-mail searches. Before trial, CPH twice filed motions for discovery sanctions based, inter alia, on MS & Co.'s failure to comply fully with the Agreed Order, including the failure to search for e-mails on certain sets of backup tapes. After initially seeking only an adverse inference, CPH later requested a complete default judgment as to liability in connection with its first motion. The Court, however, chose instead to impose the lesser, though still severe, sanction of granting CPH an adverse inference as to all elements of CPH's claims except reliance and damages.

The Court justified the scope of its sanctions by explaining:

[S]hifting the burden on the fraud issue does not relieve CPH of its obligation to establish the other elements of its claims, most notably reliance, proof of which is independent of the MS & Co. e-mails. Thus, the sanctions chosen are the most conservative available to the Court to address the spoliation of evidence and willful violation of the Agreed Order.

(3/1/05 Am. Order at 12) (emphasis supplied). The Court stated that its purpose in imposing these sanctions was to “level the playing field” rather than be “punitive.” (Id. at 11).

Accordingly, the Court stated that it would tailor the adverse inference to all elements of proof that were potentially impacted by MS & Co.’s failure to produce e-mail, but still require CPH to carry its burden as to elements that were “independent of the MS & Co. e-mails” (i.e., reliance and damages). (Id. at 12) (emphasis supplied).

CPH’s second motion raised additional discovery violations and sought as sanctions “a default judgment against Morgan Stanley on the issue of liability,” not a default or any burden shifting on the issue of damages. (3/9/05 Renewed Motion at 1). Upon finding additional discovery violations by MS & Co., which included the conduct of MS & Co. in-house lawyers (3/23/05 Order at 13), the Court (1) entered a partial default against MS & Co. on all elements of CPH’s claims other than reliance and damages; (2) ordered a statement of deemed facts to be read to the jury that MS & Co. could not contradict, including the statement that MS & Co. participated in and covered up the massive fraud alleged by CPH; and (3) ordered a discovery misconduct statement to be read to the jury that MS & Co. could not contradict, and which the jury could consider in determining punitive damages. (Id. at 16-18).

CPH opposed MS & Co.’s request for a continuance that would allow it an opportunity to produce the outstanding e-mails, and the Court denied that request in light of the trial schedule and relieved MS & Co. from any further e-mail discovery obligations. (Id.). CPH did not challenge this ruling or seek additional discovery from MS & Co. with respect to the discovery misconduct.

During arguments relating to the discovery misconduct statement, and again during arguments relating to the demonstrative exhibits CPH proposed to use during summations in the punitive damages phase of trial, MS & Co. unsuccessfully asserted that the Court should draw a distinction between what MS & Co.'s Information Technology professionals knew about its backup tapes and what MS & Co.'s Law Division knew. (See 5/16/05 Tr. at 15266:4-15267:8; 5/18/05 Tr. at 15605:5-15609:15). The Court consistently rejected this argument, expressing the view that MS & Co.'s in-house lawyers then handling the litigation were involved in the discovery misconduct the Court had found to have occurred. (See 5/16/05 Tr. at 15267:5-8 (“We’re talking about what inhouse {sic} counsel of Morgan Stanley did and, quite honestly, it was done in an effort to mislead opposing counsel and me.”))).

Following trial but before judgment, MS & Co. filed a Notice on June 17, 2005, stating it had discovered, following new e-mail searches, that its “Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the [backup] tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm [backup] tapes existed.” (MS & Co. 6/17/05 Notice at 1). The Notice withdrew and/or corrected prior statements to the Court addressing when MS & Co.'s Law Division knew about these matters. (Id. at 2).

At the June 20, 2005, hearing on MS & Co.'s post-trial motions, in which MS & Co. had asserted, inter alia, that it should be granted judgment due to CPH's failure to prove its “benefit-of-the-bargain” damages, CPH focused on the June 2005 Notice, arguing it “was quite a revelation.” The Court disagreed, stating that “[f]rankly, I’m not sure it tells me anything that I hadn’t already found.” When CPH pressed the issue, the Court reiterated that it did not believe the June 2005 Notice had “any effect on what we're doing,” i.e., on the post-trial motions. CPH agreed. (6/20/05 Tr. at 15778:14-15779:4).

C. CPH Did Not Appeal the Court's Sanctions Rulings or Argue on Appeal that the Notices Established that MS & Co. Should Have Received Sanctions that Would Have Relieved CPH of Any Burden to Prove Damages

MS & Co. appealed the final judgment, seeking review of, among other things, the Court's choice of law, the sufficiency of CPH's proof of damages and reliance, and the severity of the Court's sanctions rulings. CPH did not cross appeal the Court's sanctions rulings, though it could have contended, just as it does now, that the June 2005 Notice warranted the imposition of even greater sanctions relieving it of its burden to prove damages. Instead, CPH embraced the narrowed sanctions on appeal, arguing that "the lesser sanctions imposed by the trial court are unassailable." (CPH 2/10/06 Answer Br. at 24). In fact, CPH argued that MS & Co.'s June 2005 Notice confirmed that the Court's sanctions had been appropriate. (Id. at 11, 15, 23). Importantly, CPH never argued that the Notice had any bearing on its right to a new trial in the event that its judgment was reversed.

On December 21, 2006, while the appeal was pending, MS & Co. filed an additional Notice with the Court and the Fourth District stating that "Morgan Stanley's Law Division was aware of the existence of the referenced e-mail backup tapes and the presence of e-mail on some of those tapes prior to July 2004." (MS & Co. 12/21/06 Notice at 1). The trial court had previously recognized that while the June 2005 Notice could be given this reading, the Notice was ambiguous as to when the Law Division first became aware of the information. (11/10/05 Order at 4 n. 4). The December 2006 Notice clarified any ambiguity.

Even then, CPH did not argue (as it does now) that the December 2006 Notice shows that the Court should have imposed greater sanctions on MS & Co. To the contrary, CPH relied on this Notice, just as it had with the June 2005 Notice, to defend the scope of the challenged sanction already imposed, telling the Fourth District that the December 2006 Notice "should serve to underscore that the trial court was justified in sanctioning Morgan Stanley." (CPH 12/26/06 Notice of Supp. Authority at 2). CPH never requested that the appellate court relinquish jurisdiction to the trial court to explore the content or significance of either Notice or to expand the record on appeal. Nor did it argue that the facts disclosed in the Notices precluded judgment in MS & Co.'s favor even if the Court concluded CPH's damages proof was legally insufficient.

In March 2007, the Fourth District reversed the judgment in favor of CPH as to both compensatory and punitive damages, unanimously denied CPH's motions for rehearing and rehearing en banc, and then issued the mandate directing this Court to enter judgment for MS & Co. In so doing, the Court rejected the argument in CPH's motion for rehearing that it should receive a new trial to prevent MS & Co. from escaping accountability for "the extensive litigation misconduct in which it admittedly engaged." (CPH 4/20/07 Consol. Mtn. for Rehearing at 3). Notably, CPH did not advance their current argument that the Notices provided a basis for imposing additional discovery sanctions entitling CPH to a new trial. CPH sought review by the Florida Supreme Court based on the denial of a new trial on damages, but review was denied.

ARGUMENT

Rule 1.540(b), like Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b), is a limited exception to the rule of finality. It is to be used sparingly. As relevant here, it requires a party to show that "the verdict was obtained through fraud ... [and] the conduct complained of prevented the losing party from fully and fairly presenting his case or defense." Wilson v. Charter Mktg. Co., 443 So. 2d 160, 161 (Fla. 1st DCA 1983) (emphasis supplied); see also 11 C. Wright, A. Miller & M. Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2873, p. 439 (2d ed. 1995) ("FP&P") (court should consider whether "circumstances not previously known to [the trial or the appellate] court compel a new trial"). CPH cannot satisfy this demanding standard.

Rule 1.540 does not permit a trial court to “flout the decision of the appellate court.” FP&P § 2873, p. 439. CPH’s Rule 1.540 motion improperly invites this Court to do just that, arguing the Court should ignore the Fourth District’s mandate that CPH is not entitled to a new trial on damages. This is not a proper use of Rule 1.540. See, e.g., Glatstein v. City of Miami, 391 So. 2d 297, 298 n. 1 (Fla. 3d DCA 1980) (“[A] trial court may not entertain a post-mandate motion, made under the guise of Rule 1.540(b), which seeks the very same relief which the appellate court has denied.”).

Moreover, Rule 1.540 motions are not to be used “to rehash a matter fully explored at trial.” Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d 579, 580 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994) (“In many cases, the term ‘fraud’ is loosely used to label all conduct which has displeased an opposing party.”). CPH attempts just such a misuse of the rule. MS & Co.’s litigation misconduct, including the involvement of in-house counsel in that misconduct, was vigorously pursued by CPH prior to trial, resulting in the severe discovery sanctions entered by the Court. The facts asserted in CPH’s motion were either already known or apparent to the Court, or were merely cumulative of facts previously found by the Court. Equally important, these facts have absolutely nothing to do with the issue the appellate court found dispositive: CPH’s own failure to prove its benefit-of-the-bargain damages at trial under the controlling legal standard. That standard precluded CPH from seeking damages based on the value of the Sunbeam stock years after the merger rather than the date of the transaction, which is what CPH tried to do at trial. That failure had nothing to do with when MS & Co.’s in-house lawyers knew about the existence of e-mails on certain backup tapes.

Finally, Rule 1.540 is not intended as an invitation for a party to revisit its strategic decisions. The rule “does not have as its purpose or intent the reopening of lawsuits to allow parties to state new claims or offer new evidence omitted by oversight or inadvertence,” and this reasoning applies, “with equal force, to new legal arguments that trial counsel overlooked or chose not to use.” Phenion Dev. Group, Inc. v. Love, 940 So. 2d 1179, 1183-84 (Fla. 5th DCA 2006) (affirming denial of appellants’ motion based on mistake) (quoting Viking Gen. Corp. v. Diversified Mortg. Investors, 387 So. 2d 983, 985 (Fla. 2d DCA 1980)). Having chosen previously not to pursue the relief it now seeks, CPH is foreclosed from doing so under a Rule 1.540 motion.

I. CPH’s Request To Retry Its Damages Case is Foreclosed By The Decision And Mandate Of The Fourth District Court Of Appeal

Because CPH’s motion attempts to circumvent the Fourth District’s holding that CPH’s damage theory was fatally flawed and no new trial on damages should be had, it improperly exceeds the limited purpose of Rule 1.540. The Fourth District reversed the judgment on the sole basis that CPH chose to utilize a damage theory unsupportable under Florida law. The Fourth District’s decision had nothing to do with sanctions, just as the sanctions requested and awarded at trial had nothing to do with CPH’s choice to use a flawed damages theory that was held to be legally insufficient by the Fourth District. CPH’s attempt to connect these two wholly unrelated issues is contrary to the Court’s sanctions rulings and without merit.

CPH contends that “[h]ad Morgan Stanley received the sanction it deserved based upon all the information we now know, Morgan Stanley would not have been in a position to urge the grounds for reversal upon which the Fourth District decided the appeal.” (Motion at 41). But the record shows that is incorrect. The Fourth District was aware of the facts disclosed in the Notices; thus, it did know “all the information we now know” and still refused to permit CPH a new trial. The Fourth District rejected CPH’s rehearing argument that denying CPH a new trial would allow MS & Co. to escape accountability for the “extensive litigation misconduct in which it admittedly engaged.” (CPH 4/20/07 Consol. Mtn. for Rehearing at 3).

Those holdings are the law of the case, and CPH’s motion fails to identify any fact or law that would now entitle CPH to the same new trial on damages that the Fourth District expressly denied. See, e.g., Dept. of Transportation v. Juliano, 801 So. 2d. 101, 105 (Fla. 2001) (“The doctrine of the law of the case requires that questions of law actually decided on appeal must govern the case in the same court and the trial court, through all subsequent stages of the proceedings.”). Rule 1.540 does not permit CPH to avoid the Fourth District’s clear mandate that CPH does not have a second chance to obtain a judgment for its alleged damages.

II. CPH’s “New Evidence” is Not “New” and Does Not Justify the Extraordinary Relief that CPH is Seeking

To “demonstrate a prima facie case of fraud” under Rule 1.540(b), CPH must identify not only supposed misrepresentations, but also show that those representations were material and relied upon by CPH and the Court. Hembd v. Dauria, 859 So. 2d 1238, 1240 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003); see also Quittner v. Quittner, 725 So. 2d 1168, 1169 (Fla. 3d DCA 1998) (reversing relief granted under Rule 1.540(b) because of insufficiency of reliance and materiality). The facts raised may not be merely cumulative or impeaching; they must go to the “substantial matters in dispute” or have “a legitimate and effective influence or bearing on the decision of the case.” E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co. v. Native Hammock Nursery, Inc., 698 So. 2d 267, 269 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (vacating relief granted under Rule 1.540(b) motion); accord Quittner, 725 So. 2d at 1169 (rejecting claimed fraud as “not material” and “de minimis”).

CPH contends that the June 2005 and December 2006 Notices materially altered facts on which CPH and the Court had relied on in sanctioning MS & Co. That is incorrect. The information contained in the post-trial Notices was merely cumulative and would not have altered the Court's findings with respect to the type of sanction necessary to "level the playing field," the deliberations by the jury, or the relief available to CPH. Because CPH cannot show that the disclosures in the Notices would have produced a different sanction or a different judgment that would have cured its flawed damages proof, it cannot demonstrate a prima facie case of fraud under Rule 1.540.

A. There is No Basis for Finding a Damages Default Would Have Been Imposed Based on the Notices' Contents

CPH cannot show the Notices' contents would have been material to the Court's ruling with respect to the nature of the sanctions to be entered. When CPH initially raised the June 2005 Notice, the Court was not surprised, stating "[f]rankly, I'm not sure it tells me anything that I hadn't already found." (6/20/05 Tr. at 15778:24-25). In response to CPH's insistence that the Notice was nonetheless significant because "now they're admitting that," the Court replied, "I understand that. I'm not sure that has any effect on what we're doing." (6/20/05 Tr. at 15779:1-4). At the time, CPH was addressing MS & Co.'s post-trial motions, which included a request for judgment in its favor due to CPH's flawed damages proof. Clearly, the Court did not consider the June 2005 Notice as relevant to that issue.

As noted above, the Court's response to the June 2005 Notice was consistent with its rulings weeks earlier when MS & Co. had attempted to distinguish between what MS & Co.'s Information Technology professionals knew about its backup tapes and what MS & Co.'s Law Division knew. The Court refused to accept that MS & Co.'s Law Division was aware of the existence of tapes, but not aware that they contained e-mails, and so that distinction was never made to the jury. The Court had already reached the conclusion CPH now offers as the premise for its new trial motion -- that MS & Co.'s in-house counsel had engaged in discovery misconduct. The Court's Order on CPH's second motion for default specifically refers to misconduct by MS & Co.'s in-house lawyers. (3/23/05 Order at 13). The litigation misconduct statement the Court read to the jury refers to misconduct by in-house lawyers. (Litigation Misconduct Statement, at 8). The Court did not preclude CPH from making arguments to the jury about in-house lawyers' misconduct. Thus, it is clear that the June 2005 Notice was cumulative and would not have changed the Court's or jury's perception of MS & Co.'s discovery conduct.

Nor did the December 2006 Notice provide a significant new disclosure. It only clarified the "imprecision" of the June 2005 Notice (Motion at 21) -- an imprecision that the Court expressly acknowledged in 2005. (11/3/05 Tr. at 25:4-12; 11/10/05 Order at 4 n. 4).

But beyond all this, the fact remains now, just as then, that the June 2005 and December 2006 Notices had no bearing on CPH's earlier decision to instruct its damages expert to assume a zero value for the Sunbeam stock at the time of the merger. Even if the Court had determined the Notices' content warranted some form of additional sanction, this would not have created any need for damages-related sanctions because the Court's sanctions determinations were based solely on the principle of "leveling the playing field."

The timing of the in-house lawyers' knowledge that certain backup tapes had e-mail on them had nothing to do with the contents of the e-mails. More importantly, as the Court expressly recognized when tailoring its original adverse inference sanction, CPH's decision on how to instruct its damages expert was independent of the contents of MS & Co. e-mails. (3/1/05 Am. Order at 12) ("shifting the burden on the fraud issue does not relieve CPH of its obligation to establish the other elements of its claims, most notably reliance, proof of which is independent of the MS & Co. e-mails") (emphasis supplied). The Court subsequently adhered to this point in granting a default sanction as to all elements of CPH's claims but reliance and damages. Moreover, CPH's failure to prove damages was due solely to its instruction to its expert to ignore evidence relating to Sunbeam's value on the date of the merger, so any additional evidence from MS & Co. e-mails on that issue would not have affected CPH's damages case. Because CPH's ability to prove damages was always wholly within its control, nothing in the Notices would have led the Court to impose a sanction relating to damages.

B. The Sanctions Sought Now Are Not and Were Not Obtainable

CPH cannot be heard to say post-appeal that it would have requested the damages-default sanction it now seeks. CPH aggressively pursued sanctions during trial based on litigation misconduct, and while it frequently sought a total default on liability, it never requested a default or burden-shifting on the amount of its damages,¹ even though MS & Co. was expressly challenging the sufficiency of CPH's damages evidence under controlling Fourth District precedent. (See 1/26/05 Motion in Limine No. 16 of MS & Co. at 7-9 (seeking exclusion of expert's damages opinion); 5/2/05 Tr. at 12066:15-12070:8 (arguing MS & Co. ore tenus Motion for Directed Verdict as to damages)). CPH's belated suggestion that it would also have sought sanctions as to damages based on these Notices is made only in hindsight because of the appellate court's decision that CPH's damages case was fatally flawed.

Moreover, the greater sanctions CPH now requests are without legal support. CPH argues it might have obtained a "negative causation" sanction requiring MS & Co. to bear the burden of proving that CPH's losses were not caused by fraud. But CPH cites no Florida decision granting such relief as a sanction.

¹ CPH cites its counsel's assertion that the litigation misconduct "went to every element of the claim, including the fact of damages" (Motion at 35) (emphasis supplied) without also noting that the Court was dismissive of this "exercise in imagination," (see 3/15/05 Tr. at 3944:17-3945:13) and ultimately rejected the argument by carving out both reliance and damages from the default sanction. If the litigation misconduct had in fact affected CPH's proof of damages, CPH should have made that argument in response to MS & Co.'s post-trial motions and on appeal. It did not do so.

Nor can CPH show that it might have obtained a default sanction effectively awarding it damages. Florida law is clear that even where there is a total default, there must still be a hearing to determine the amount of damages. See Talucci v. Matthews, 960 So. 2d 9, 10 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007) ("For more than a century it has been the law in Florida that a defaulted defendant has the right to contest the amount of unliquidated damages and may offer evidence in mitigation thereof."). Even in those cases cited by CPH to suggest that default judgments may be entered as to the "fact of damage," (Motion at 41-42), the amount of any damages may not be determined on a default (absent liquidated damages).

In Levine v. Del American Properties, Inc., 642 So. 2d 32 (Fla. 5th DCA 1994), the court reversed the lower court's determination of damages "without allowing Levine the opportunity for a trial on the issue of damages." Id. at 34. Likewise, in Williams v. Direct Dispensing, Inc., 630 So. 2d 1195 (Fla. 3d DCA 1994), the Court held that "a trial with proper notice is necessary to establish unliquidated damages." Id. at 1196. Under Florida law, CPH was always going to have to prove its damages and it was CPH's own strategic choices as to that proof that led the Fourth District to reverse the judgment.

C. CPH Cannot Show the Jury Would Have Rendered a Materially Different Verdict

CPH cannot show that any of the purported misrepresentations were material to the jury's deliberations on the dispositive issue of damages. While CPH cites MS & Co.'s efforts to make a distinction between its in-house attorneys' knowledge of backup tapes and knowledge of whether there was e-mail on those tapes (Motion at 15-17), the Court rejected this distinction when imposing its sanctions and when instructing the jury.

As part of its sanction, the Court read a detailed statement of deemed facts to the jury identifying willful litigation misconduct by MS & Co., including that of its in-house attorneys. CPH emphasized MS & Co.'s discovery misconduct to the jury. Whatever else CPH could have argued to the jury about MS & Co.'s discovery misconduct would not have resulted in damages that could have survived appellate review. CPH failed to prove actual damages solely because it directed its expert not to perform an event study of the value of Sunbeam stock at the time of the transaction, and instead simply assume a zero value, not because of the nature or extent of the discovery sanction entered against MS & Co. Similarly, CPH cannot establish that the Notices' content could possibly have led to a different appellate decision because the Fourth District was clearly aware of their content before it issued its decision.

D. CPH is Not Entitled to Further Discovery or an Evidentiary Hearing

CPH is not entitled to any further discovery or an evidentiary hearing on these issues. The Fourth District considered this case and had all the evidence underlying CPH's motion and nevertheless issued a clear mandate ordering this Court to issue a judgment for MS & Co. and denying CPH a new trial.

Evidentiary hearings concerning Rule 1.540(b) motions are limited to narrow circumstances where the motion itself sets forth facially sufficient grounds for relief. See Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 580. For the reasons set forth above, CPH's motion fails to establish any such grounds.

As the Court itself correctly recognized, MS & Co.'s failure to produce all of its e-mails did not preclude CPH's ability to prove damages; further discovery on the issue of when MS & Co. in-house lawyers learned of the existence of e-mails on certain backup tapes will not justify any "remedial" sanction as to damages because CPH itself is responsible for the fatal flaw in its damages case. See, e.g., Scutieri v. Paige, 808 F.2d 785, 795 (11th Cir. 1987) (district court did not err in denying a motion for further discovery and an evidentiary hearing where petitioner did not indicate how discovery would have aided the court's determination of a trial witness's competency and qualifications); USX Corp. v. Tieco, Inc., 132 Fed. Appx. 237, 239 (11th Cir. 2005) (“[W]e agree with the district court that none of the discovery [petitioner] could obtain would change in any meaningful or relevant way the earlier ruling of this Court.”).

III. CPH Waived Its Ability to Seek Further Sanctions

As the Florida Supreme Court has emphasized, “[i]t has never been the role of the trial courts of this state to relieve attorneys of their tactical mistakes. The rules of civil procedure were never designed for that purpose, and nothing in Rule 1.540(b) suggests otherwise.” Randle-Eastern Ambulance Serv., Inc. v. Vasta, 360 So. 2d 68, 69 (Fla. 1978). CPH’s Rule 1.540 motion is just an attempt to avoid the consequences of its prior strategic decisions, including the decision to instruct its expert to value the Sunbeam stock not at the date of the merger, but at a much later date when it was worth nothing.

MS & Co. contended even before the trial ended that CPH failed to properly prove its damages and judgment should be entered for MS & Co. CPH thus had good reasons to advance any legal argument it could muster -- including an argument for greater sanctions -- to uphold the judgment in the event of a reversal on its damages proof. CPH is not permitted to hold back to see how the appellate court rules on a particular issue before raising arguments it could have made prior to and during the appeal to sustain the judgment in its favor.

CPH had numerous opportunities to revisit the Court’s sanctions rulings prior to MS & Co.’s appeal, but chose not to pursue them. For example, after receiving the June 2005 Notice,

CPH might have sought to renew its sanctions motion for greater relief, reopen discovery, or otherwise expand the record, as an additional ground for opposing MS & Co.'s post-trial motion for judgment in its favor based on CPH's failure to prove its damages. See, e.g., Commercial Garden Mall v. Success Acad., Inc., 453 So. 2d 934, 936 (Fla. 4th DCA 1984) ("trial court had the discretion to entertain a petition for rehearing"). It did not do so.

After entry of judgment in its favor, CPH could have cross appealed the Court's sanctions decision as too lenient and pressed for the broader and more severe sanctions it had originally requested. See Breakstone v. Baron's of Surfside, Inc., 528 So. 2d 437, 439 (Fla. 3d DCA 1988) ("The function of a cross-appeal is to call into question error in the judgment appealed, which, although substantially favorable to the appellee, does not completely accord the relief to which the appellee believes itself entitled." (emphasis supplied) (quoting Webb Gen. Contracting, Inc. v. PDM Hydrostorage, Inc., 397 So. 2d 1058, 1059-60 (Fla. 3d DCA 1981))). It did not do so, instead defending as "unassailable" the Court's award of sanctions narrower than CPH had requested. (CPH 2/10/06 Answer Br. at 24).

CPH also could have urged the Fourth District to grant CPH a new trial on damages, should its damages proof be found inadequate, advancing the exact same reason it now asserts through its Rule 1.540 motion. It did not do so.

CPH could have also moved the Fourth District to relinquish jurisdiction so that the Court could develop a further record regarding the Notices. See, e.g., Murphy v. Centlivre, 850 So. 2d 600, 602-03 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (appellate court granted motion to relinquish jurisdiction to permit additional discovery relating to matter on appeal and ruled that it was error for trial court to deny motion for rehearing based on new discovery obtained following relinquishment of jurisdiction). Indeed, that is exactly what the plaintiffs did in Molinos Del S.A. v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 947 So. 2d 521 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), a case CPH relies upon. (Motion at 25-26). Those plaintiffs asked the appellate court to relinquish jurisdiction when they learned during appeal that the defendant had engaged in discovery misconduct that they believed had limited their substantial damages award at trial. CPH did not do so.

To the contrary, CPH argued on appeal that the Notices affirmatively supported the appropriateness of the Court's sanctions. (CPH 2/10/06 Answer Brief at 11, 15, 23). And even when seeking rehearing from the Fourth District saying that a new trial on damages should be granted in order to hold MS & Co. accountable for its litigation misconduct, CPH did not argue it was entitled to greater sanctions as a result of the Notices, although it could have easily advanced that particular point as a part of its motion.

CPH has thus waived any claim that even more severe sanctions should have been entered. Where a party fails to make arguments before the trial or appeals court that could have been raised and decided on appeal, those arguments are waived in any subsequent proceedings and the prior rulings become the law of the case. See Generazio v. State, 727 So. 2d 333 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (holding that where defendant did not raise issue by cross-appeal in previous appeal, law of the case barred claim of trial error); Airvac, Inc. v. Ranger Ins. Co., 330 So. 2d 467, 469 (Fla. 1976) (holding that defendant "had full opportunity to perfect an appeal, assign as error or otherwise present the issue of the denial of its motion to the appellate court on the initial appeal but did not, thereby waiving any objection to the trial court's rejection of its amendment on this issue"). Under well-settled principles, CPH's motion should be denied.

CONCLUSION

CPH's motion, resting on matters that (1) were already brought to the attention of the parties, the trial court and the Fourth District; (2) were not material to the decisions of either the trial court or the Fourth District on the discrete issue of damages; and (3) were never the subject of the argument CPH makes now, provides no basis for CPH to avoid the binding decision of the Fourth District reversing the judgment below and denying a new trial. CPH's motion should be denied, thereby respecting the finality of the judgment ordered on appeal.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S
MOTION TO TAX APPELLATE COSTS RELATING TO COST APPEAL
(Appeal No. 4D05-4756)

Pursuant to Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.400(a) and Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.525, Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") hereby moves for an order awarding its taxable appellate costs relating to Fourth District Court of Appeal case number 4D05-4756 against Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("Coleman"). In support of this motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

1. On June 23, 2005, a Final Judgment was entered in favor of Coleman. Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal of that Final Judgment on June 27, 2005. That appeal was docketed at the Fourth District as 4D05-2606 (the "main appeal").

2. On November 22, 2005, a "Judgment on CPH's Motion to Tax Costs" (the "cost judgment") was entered in favor of Coleman. Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal of the cost judgment on December 16, 2005. That appeal was docketed at the Fourth District as 4D05-4756 (the "cost appeal").

3. On March 21, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeal reversed the Final Judgment in the main appeal, and remanded the case with instructions to enter judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley. Thereafter, on April 20, 2007, Plaintiff filed motions for rehearing, rehearing en banc, clarification, and certification in the Fourth District. Those motions were denied on June 4, 2007.

4. On July 5, 2007, the Fourth District ordered Coleman to show cause why the cost judgment should not be reversed in light of the Fourth District's opinion in the main appeal. Coleman responded by seeking and obtaining a stay of the cost appeal pending a decision on its petition seeking review at the Florida Supreme Court. When the Florida Supreme Court denied review, Coleman agreed that the stay should be lifted.

5. On June 22, 2007, the Fourth District issued its mandate in the main appeal, returning jurisdiction to this Court. A copy of the mandate is attached as Exhibit "A".

6. On January 16, 2008, the Fourth District again ordered Coleman to show cause why the cost judgment in its favor should not be reversed. On January 30, 2008, Coleman responded by stating that "no reason presently exists why the cost judgment should not be reversed.". Thereafter, on February 27, 2008, the Fourth District issued an opinion reversing the cost judgment "in light of the finality of [its] decision reversing the award of damages". Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 974 So. 2d 631 (Fla. 4th DCA 2008). The Fourth District's mandate reversing the cost judgment was issued on March 14, 2008. A copy of that mandate is attached as Exhibit "B".

7. Along with this Motion, Morgan Stanley has filed the Affidavit of Joseph Ianno, Jr. to itemize the costs incurred in the cost appeal. Pursuant to rule 9.400(a), the affidavit sets forth categories of costs such as filing fees, record preparation costs, and supersedeas bond premiums. The recoverable appellate costs for the cost appeal total $6,600.00 plus all available pre-judgment and post-judgment interest.

8. Notably, the vast majority of the appellate costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to the cost appeal are supersedeas bond premiums and bond costs. As set forth in Mr. Ianno's affidavit, Coleman was given the opportunity to waive the bonding requirement, but refused. But for the posting of the bond, Coleman could have executed upon the judgment being appealed. If Morgan Stanley's offer had been accepted, Morgan Stanley would not have been required to incur the bulk of the costs that it now seeks to recover relating to the cost judgment.

9. Morgan Stanley reserves the right to supplement this Motion with further supporting documentation concerning the reasonable costs incurred and recoverable pursuant to Rule 9.400.

ARGUMENT

MORGAN STANLEY IS AUTOMATICALLY ENTITLED TO RECOVER ITS COSTS INCURRED IN THE COST APPEAL

Under rule 9.400(a), taxable appellate costs are to be awarded by the trial court on motion of the prevailing party, to be served within 30 days after issuance of the mandate. Fla. R. App. P. 9.400(a). Morgan Stanley timely filed a motion to tax appellate costs relating to the cost appeal. Because Morgan Stanley prevailed in the cost appeal, this Court is required by law to award taxable appellate costs against Coleman and in favor of Morgan Stanley.

Florida law is crystal clear that Morgan Stanley is "automatically entitled" to an award of its appellate costs in the cost appeal as set forth in rule 9.400(a). Schoettle v. State of Florida, 522 So. 2d 962, 962 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988) (stating that the language of rule 9.400(a) "automatically entitles the prevailing party to the taxation of certain enumerated costs."); Di Teodoro v. Lazy Dolphin Devel. Co., 432 So. 2d 625 (Fla. 3d DCA 1983) ("Under [rule]

9.400(a), the prevailing party in [the appellate court] is automatically entitled to taxation of certain enumerated costs unless otherwise directed by the respective courts of appeal.”). The Fourth District’s mandate in favor of Morgan Stanley has issued in the cost appeal, making Morgan Stanley the prevailing party as a matter of law.

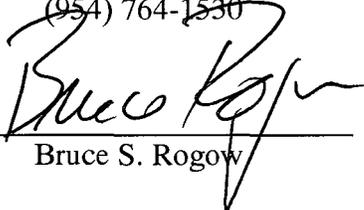

WHEREFORE, Defendant, Morgan Stanley, respectfully requests this Court enter an order granting Morgan Stanley’s Motion to Tax Appellate Costs Relating to Cost Appeal, with the amount of those costs to be determined at a subsequent hearing, and grant such other relief as this Court deems just and proper.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN
AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: 2003 CA-005045 AJ

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S
AMENDED MOTION TO TAX TRIAL COSTS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned counsel, pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.525 and section 57.041, Florida Statutes, hereby moves for an order taxing its trial costs against Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("Coleman"), and in favor of Morgan Stanley. In support of this motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. On June 23, 2005, this Court entered a Final Judgment in favor of Coleman. Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal of that Final Judgment on June 27, 2005. On March 21, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeal reversed the Final Judgment, and remanded the case with instructions to enter judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley.

2. Thereafter, on April 20, 2007, Plaintiff filed motions for rehearing, rehearing en banc, clarification, and certification in the Fourth District. Those motions were denied on June 4, 2007.

3. On June 22, 2007, the Fourth District issued its mandate, returning jurisdiction in this case to this Court. A copy of the mandate is attached as Exhibit "A".

4. On March 18, 2008, this Court entered Final Judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley and reserved jurisdiction to award costs to Morgan Stanley. Consequently, Morgan Stanley is the prevailing party in this action and entitled to an award of costs. Indeed, the Fourth District reversed a cost judgment entered for Coleman for trial costs "in light of the finality of [the Fourth District's] decision reversing the award of damages." Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 974 So. 2d 631 (Fla. 4th DCA 2008). When the Fourth District queried whether Coleman had any objection, Coleman responded that there was no reason not to reverse the cost judgment. Id. Based upon the Fourth District's decision and this Court's March 18, 2008 Final Judgment, Morgan Stanley, not Coleman, is now the prevailing party.

5. Morgan Stanley is submitting affidavits in support of this Amended Motion that will itemize the trial costs for which it seeks to recover. The total amount of trial costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in accordance with this Amended Motion is $2,019,183.09 plus all available pre-judgment and post-judgment interest.

ARGUMENT

MORGAN STANLEY IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER ITS TAXABLE TRIAL COSTS AS THE PREVAILING PARTY

In accordance with the mandate of the Fourth District, this Court entered a Final Judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley. Costs in this matter are awarded pursuant to Section 57.041, Fla. Stat. (2007) which provides: "(1) The party recovering judgment shall recover all his or her legal costs and charges which shall be included in the judgment . . ." (emphasis added). In this action, Morgan Stanley is without question the party recovering judgment. Therefore, an award of all Morgan Stanley's legal costs is mandatory, with the only decision being the amount of costs to be awarded.

It is well established that the trial court does not have discretion to deny the entitlement of a party recovering judgment to an award of costs. See Connell v. City of Plantation, 901 So. 2d 317 (Fla. 4th DCA 2005). In Connell, the Fourth District noted that section 57.041 provided that "the prevailing party in a civil action is entitled to recover all of his or her costs associated with the underlying litigation." Id. at 320 (emphasis added). The Court further stated: "[t]his provision requires the trial court to award costs to the prevailing party." Id. (emphasis added).

Similarly, in Oriental Imports, Inc. v. Alilin, 559 So. 2d 442, 443 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990), the Court stated that section 57.041 "mandates that every party who recovers a judgment in a legal proceeding is entitled as a matter of right to recover lawful court costs and that a trial judge has no discretion under that statute to deny court costs to the party recovering the judgment." Id. at 443 (quoting Governing Bd. of St. Johns River Water Mgmt. Dist. v. Lake Pickett Ltd., 543 So. 2d 883 (Fla. 5th DCA 1989) (internal quotes omitted and emphasis added). This rule is also followed by other courts. See Dragstrem v. Butts, 370 So. 2d 416 (Fla. 1st DCA 1979); Warren Hunnicutt, Jr., Inc. v. Gleason, 462 So. 2d 878 (Fla. 2d DCA 1985); Weitzer Oak Park Estate, Ltd. v. Petto, 573 So. 2d 990 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991).

"[E]very party who recovers a judgment in a legal proceeding is entitled as a matter of right to recover lawful court costs, and a trial judge has no discretion to deny costs to the parties recovering judgment." Weitzer Oak, 573 So. 2d at 991 (emphasis added). The Dragstrem court was particularly clear when it held that a prevailing party in an action at law is "absolutely entitled" to the taxing of costs in his or her favor under section 57.041. Dragstrem, 370 So. 2d at 417. Further, the Court concluded: "the trial court was required to tax costs in favor of [the prevailing party], regardless of the equities involved.” Id. The Alilin court similarly concluded: “[t]he determination of the amount and type of costs that are appropriate . . . is the task of the trial court rather than the initial determination of whether the successful litigant is entitled to costs.” Alilin, 559 So. 2d at 442 (emphasis in original).

Accordingly, this Court should review the costs itemized by Morgan Stanley to determine if they were reasonable and necessary under Florida law. If, based upon the evidence presented, the Court finds them to be reasonable and necessary under the Uniform Guidelines for Taxation of Costs, the Court is required by law to enter a cost judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley. Final Judgment has now been entered in Morgan Stanley’s behalf in this case, making it the prevailing party as a matter of law.

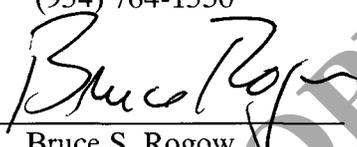

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court enter an order finding that Morgan Stanley is entitled to an award of its trial court costs,¹ with the amount of those costs to be determined at a subsequent hearing, and grant such other relief as this Court deems just and proper.

¹ Morgan Stanley has separately sought an award of its appellate costs in connection with the two appeals in this action.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AJ

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S
AMENDED MOTION TO TAX APPELLATE COSTS FOR MAIN APPEAL
(Appeal No. 4D05-2606)

Pursuant to Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.400(a) and Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.525, Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") hereby moves for an order awarding its taxable appellate costs relating to Fourth District Court of Appeal case number 4D05-2606 against Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("Coleman"). In support of this Motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

1. On June 23, 2005, a Final Judgment was entered in favor of Coleman. Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal of that Final Judgment on June 27, 2005. That appeal was docketed at the Fourth District as 4D05-2606 (the "main appeal.")

2. On March 21, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeal reversed the Final Judgment, and remanded the case with instructions to enter judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley. Thereafter, on April 20, 2007, Plaintiff filed motions for rehearing, rehearing en banc, clarification, and certification in the Fourth District. Those motions were denied on June 4, 2007.

3. On June 22, 2007, the Fourth District issued its mandate in the main appeal, returning jurisdiction in this case to this Court. A copy of the mandate is attached as Exhibit "A".

4. On January 23, 2008, Morgan Stanley filed the Affidavit of Joseph Ianno, Jr. in support of its pending motion for appellate costs relating to the main appeal. Pursuant to the Court's Order permitting Morgan Stanley to supplement its previously filed motion, Morgan Stanley is filing an Amended Affidavit of Joseph Ianno, Jr. in support of this amended motion. Pursuant to rule 9.400(a), the affidavit sets forth categories of costs such as filing fees, copy costs, record preparation costs, and supersedeas bond premiums. The recoverable amount of appellate costs for the main appeal is $9,141,898.72 plus all available pre-judgment and post-judgment interest.

5. Notably, the vast majority of the appellate costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relate to supersedeas bond premiums and bond costs. As set forth in Mr. Ianno's affidavit, Coleman was given the opportunity to waive the bonding requirement, but refused. But for the posting of the bond, Coleman could have executed upon the judgment being appealed. If Morgan Stanley's offer had been accepted, Morgan Stanley would not have incurred the enormous premium obligations required to obtain the bond.

6. Morgan Stanley reserves the right to supplement this motion with further supporting documentation concerning the reasonable costs incurred and recoverable pursuant to rule 9.400.

ARGUMENT

MORGAN STANLEY IS AUTOMATICALLY ENTITLED TO RECOVER ITS COSTS INCURRED IN THE MAIN APPEAL

Under rule 9.400(a), taxable appellate costs are to be awarded by the trial court on motion of the prevailing party, to be served within 30 days after issuance of the mandate. Fla. R. App. P. 9.400(a). Morgan Stanley timely filed a motion to tax appellate costs for costs relating to the main appeal and now supplements that motion. Because Morgan Stanley prevailed in the main appeal, this Court is required by law to award taxable appellate costs against Coleman and in favor of Morgan Stanley.

Florida law is crystal clear that Morgan Stanley is “automatically entitled” to an award of its appellate costs in the main appeal as set forth in rule 9.400(a). Schoettle v. State of Florida, 522 So. 2d 962, 962 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988) (stating that the language of rule 9.400(a) “automatically entitles the prevailing party to the taxation of certain enumerated costs.”); Di Teodoro v. Lazy Dolphin Devel. Co., 432 So. 2d 625 (Fla. 3d DCA 1983) (“Under [rule] 9.400(a), the prevailing party in [the appellate court] is automatically entitled to taxation of certain enumerated costs unless otherwise directed by the respective courts of appeal.”). The Fourth District’s mandate in favor of Morgan Stanley has issued in the main appeal, making Morgan Stanley the prevailing party as a matter of law.

WHEREFORE, Defendant, Morgan Stanley, respectfully requests this Court enter an order granting Morgan Stanley’s Motion to Tax Appellate Costs for Main Appeal, with the amount of those costs to be determined at a subsequent hearing, and grant such other relief as this Court deems just and proper.

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S VERIFIED REPLY BRIEF
IN SUPPORT OF ITS
VERIFIED MOTION TO VACATE THE JUDGMENT

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Rule 1.540(b) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, respectfully submits this verified reply brief in support of its Verified Motion to Vacate the Judgment and Grant a New Trial on Damages.

INTRODUCTION

Morgan Stanley's fatally flawed procedural objections cannot divert attention from the straightforward inquiry required under Florida law: If the facts alleged in CPH's verified motion raise a "colorable entitlement" to relief from the judgment, CPH is legally entitled to discovery and an evidentiary hearing. Given the egregious wrongdoing described in CPH's verified motion, the "colorable entitlement" standard has been easily met in this case. Indeed, Morgan Stanley's unverified opposition never denies that its in-house counsel flatly lied to the Court and to CPH. It never takes issue with CPH's assertion that there are yet more Morgan Stanley lies to be uncovered. And it never comes close to suggesting that it is not guilty of egregious litigation misconduct that has undermined the Florida justice system and public confidence in it. Nor does

CIRCUIT CIVIL 4

Morgan Stanley ever argue that these uncontradicted facts lack sufficient specificity or otherwise fail as a substantive matter to make out a colorable claim under Rule 1.540(b).

By its silence, Morgan Stanley effectively concedes that its in-house lawyers committed a fraud on the Court. When lawyers, as officers of the court, perpetrate a fraud on the court in the course of procuring a favorable judgment, the opposing party is entitled to relief from the judgment — without regard to whether the fraud changed the outcome of the case. That principle is borne out in a series of cases that CPH cited in its motion. Morgan Stanley has not even attempted to refute or distinguish those cases. Morgan Stanley thus cannot defeat this motion by arguing that CPH has not shown prejudice. As a matter of law, prejudice is not required. See infra Part I-A.

As a matter of fact, however, prejudice is manifest in this case. Morgan Stanley made every effort to conceal the truth about its wrongdoing, disclosing as little as possible, as late as possible. Morgan Stanley made these disclosures after the trial and appellate proceedings officially were closed and only after the fraud had achieved its intended purpose of materially misleading the Court. Morgan Stanley's strategy of late, partial, sporadic disclosures accomplished just what Morgan Stanley wanted: No court has ever had the opportunity to address the full scope of Morgan Stanley's misconduct. No court has ever had the opportunity to rule on the allegations contained in CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion. Indeed, the trial court expressly acknowledged in its post-trial ruling on criminal contempt that Morgan Stanley's additional, untimely disclosures about the role of its in-house attorneys raised issues beyond those in the existing trial record and therefore could not be addressed without potentially affecting the issues then on appeal. For that reason, the trial court declined to consider these issues at that time. See infra Part I-B.

Morgan Stanley's other procedural arguments are meritless. CPH's motion is not foreclosed by the Fourth District's mandate. The Fourth District did not address the issues presented by CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion (see infra Part II-A), and the law-of-the-case doctrine applies only to issues that actually were considered and decided by the appellate court, which clearly was not the case here (see infra Part II-B). Further, Morgan Stanley's unclean hands bar it from invoking the equitable doctrine of waiver. In any event, CPH had no ability or was under no obligation to present the arguments in its Rule 1.540(b) motion at any earlier stage in the proceedings. See infra Part III.

As discussed in more detail below, there can be no doubt that the Rule 1.540(b) motion is proper and that CPH has made a colorable claim. The Court therefore should permit CPH to present in full the depths of Morgan Stanley's misdeeds, with the benefit of the discovery and the evidentiary hearing to which CPH is entitled (see infra Part IV), and then grant relief that will vindicate the defrauded courts and help restore public confidence in Florida's judicial system.

ARGUMENT

I. CPH Has Demonstrated a Colorable Entitlement to Relief Under Rule 1.540(b).

A party seeking relief under Rule 1.540(b) need only "raise a colorable entitlement" to relief to obtain discovery and an evidentiary hearing. Dynasty Express Corp. v. Weiss, 675 So. 2d 235, 239 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996) (quoting Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Welden, 483 So. 2d 487, 489 (Fla. 1st DCA 1986)); see Schleger v. Stebelsky, 957 So. 2d 71, 71-73 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007). Here, therefore, CPH need do no more than allege facts that, if proved, would entitle it to relief from judgment. See, e.g., Dynasty Express Corp., 675 So. 2d at 239. CPH unquestionably has alleged such facts. Morgan Stanley does not contend otherwise,¹ and there is no merit to any of the technical arguments that Morgan Stanley puts forth as a basis for denying discovery and an evidentiary hearing on CPH's motion.

A. Because Morgan Stanley Committed a Fraud on the Court, No Showing of Prejudice Is Required.

Morgan Stanley premises most of its argument that CPH is not entitled to relief on the assumption that CPH must demonstrate some prejudice. According to Morgan Stanley, CPH must show that Morgan Stanley's lies prevented CPH from fully and fairly presenting its case, so that the outcome of the proceedings to date necessarily would have been different if the full facts about Morgan Stanley's lies had been known at the relevant time. MS Opp'n at 8; see also id. at 2, 11.

That premise is dead wrong. Relief from a judgment procured by defrauding a court requires no showing of prejudice. That is the clear legal principle stated in numerous cases that CPH has cited to the court (see CPH Mot. at 26-32), but which Morgan Stanley fails to address in its brief. Indeed, CPH is not aware of a single case in which any court has considered the issue and rejected this principle. Morgan Stanley's failure even to address this issue amounts to a clear concession that this well-established principle of law is unassailable.

The cases CPH has cited make clear that fraud on the court is particularly egregious when it is perpetrated by attorneys, who are officers of the court and are held to the highest standards of conduct in their dealings with the court. See, e.g., Chewing v. Ford Motor Co., 579 S.E.2d 605, 611 (S.C. 2003) ("Attorney fraud calls into question the integrity of the judiciary and erodes public confidence in the fairness of our system of justice."); Synanon Found., Inc. v. Bernstein,

¹ Indeed, Morgan Stanley's opposition is unverified. See Rosso v. Golden Surf Towers Condo. Ass'n, 711 So. 2d 1298, 1299 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998) (noting that an "unverified" response to a "verified" Rule 1.540(b) motion "did not dispute" the facts alleged (emphasis in original)).

503 A.2d 1254, 1264 (D.C. 1986) (“[C]ounsel’s behavior was such a violation of a lawyer’s duty to the court — a duty imposed not alone by principles of honesty and good morals but also by a code of ethics adopted as rules of court — as to amount to a fraud on the court for which equity will grant relief.” (internal quotation marks omitted)); see also Ramey v. Thomas, 382 So. 2d 78, 81 (Fla. 5th DCA 1980) (“An attorney is first an officer of the court, bound to serve the ends of justice with openness, candor, and fairness to all.”); Rules Reg. Fla. Bar, Chapter 4, Florida Rules of Professional Conduct, Preamble and Rule 4-3.3 (2006) (requiring “candor toward the tribunal” and stating that lawyers are “officers of the court” who “should demonstrate respect for the legal system and for those who serve it”). If lawyers do not adhere to these high standards, the courts simply cannot function. That is precisely why, in the original trial-court proceedings, Morgan Stanley emphasized the opposite — but false — point that its in-house attorneys were unaware of Morgan Stanley’s lies and deceptions, which Morgan Stanley tried to pass off as the renegade efforts of some information-technology staffers.

With no answer to the authorities that CPH has cited, Morgan Stanley pretends they do not exist. Instead, Morgan Stanley recites several inapposite cases that do not involve allegations of fraud on the court, and focus on matters that are utterly irrelevant here. See MS Opp’n at 11 (citing Quittner v. Quittner, 725 So. 2d 1168, 1169 (Fla. 3d DCA 1998) (discussing elements of a substantive claim of fraud, not fraud on the court), and E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co. v. Native Hammock Nursery, Inc., 698 So. 2d 267, 268-69 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (discussing the standard for a new-trial motion based on new evidence rather than fraud on the court)). Because CPH alleges that Morgan Stanley perpetrated a fraud on the Court, CPH need not show prejudice.

B. Although CPH Is Not Legally Obligated to Show Prejudice, the Evidence of Actual Prejudice in this Case Is Overwhelming.

Even if prejudice were required, CPH has adequately alleged that the pretrial remedial orders addressing Morgan Stanley's known misconduct — and the outcome of the case — would have been different here if the Court had known the true scope of the misconduct. See CPH Mot. at 1-22, 33-38.

Morgan Stanley seeks to obfuscate this obvious point by asserting that the trial court already knew the facts, and that Morgan Stanley's two Notices were nothing but "cumulative." MS Opp'n at 9, 11-13. That is not a proper argument at this stage of the proceeding, when the Court is concerned with assessing the sufficiency of the facts stated in the pleading, rather than with resolving factual disputes. But the argument is wrong in any event.

If the Notices were merely "cumulative," Morgan Stanley would have had no reason to bother filing them at all. Furthermore, it is clear that the Court never had the opportunity to consider the information contained in the two Notices when it issued its remedial orders. On several occasions the Court said as much with reference to the June 2005 Notice — which was filed well after entry of the remedial orders and the jury's verdict. For instance, the Court declined to rule on CPH's criminal-contempt petition specifically because it believed that pursuing CPH's allegations based on the June 2005 Notice "could alter the current record of what MS & Co. knew and when it knew it. It could add to the judicial response to MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct." Ex. A, 11/10/2005 Crim. Contempt Order at 7 (emphasis added). Thus, while it is true that the Court's pretrial remedial orders take account of certain failings of Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers (which Morgan Stanley claimed were inadvertencies), they simply do not take account of the additional and very serious misconduct detailed in CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion. See CPH Mot. at 15-22.²

Further, the critical information contained in the December 2006 Notice was not available to the Court until long after the first judgment had been entered. That Notice was filed almost 18 months after the entry of judgment and more than 12 months after the criminal-contempt hearing. Even now, almost three years after the original entry of judgment, the full extent of Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court remains unknown due to the studied ambiguity and cryptic content of Morgan Stanley's two Notices.³

² The Court's remedial orders did not (and could not) account for Morgan Stanley's additional misconduct, because Morgan Stanley persistently misrepresented what its in-house attorneys knew and when they knew it. See, e.g., Ex. B, 2/28/05 MS Opp'n to CPH's Mot. for a Default Judgment, at 6 (“[N]o one in [the] Law Division knew of the existence of additional recoverable e-mail data on the tapes before October 2004.” (emphasis in original)); Ex. C, 3/13/05 MS Opp'n to CPH Mot. for a Default Judgment (Corrected Version), at 31 (“[T]he Law Division did not learn that some of the newly discovered tapes contained some e-mails until October 2004.”); Ex. D, 5/18/05 Tr. at 15607:4-7 (“There's evidence they knew of backup tapes but not that the backup tapes contained e-mail. And it's undisputed that they learned that these contained e-mail in October 2004.”); Ex. D, 5/18/05 Tr. at 15608:8-11 (“Your honor, it's undisputed in the record that the lawyers at Morgan Stanley learned that e-mail was on these tapes in October 2004.”); Ex. D, 5/18/05 Tr. at 15608:17-19 (“They knew about the tapes in June, but they didn't know they contained e-mail.”).

Had the trial court known that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers defrauded the Court to the extent that we now know they did, there is no question that events would have played out very differently. In response to such egregious misconduct, the Court likely would have granted CPH's March 2005 motion for a total default judgment on all liability issues, thus deeming established the fact of damage (as an element of liability) and entitling CPH to some recovery. See CPH Mot. at 33-36; see also id. at 3-4 (explaining that the Fourth District's decision denying CPH all relief hinged on CPH's supposed failure to prove the "fact" of damage, an element of liability). CPH might well have sought and been granted a greater sanction than the one it was misled to request. See id. at 35-36, 40-45. For example, CPH might have asked the Court to bar Morgan Stanley from introducing certain damages evidence. See id. at 42-43 (citing cases). Or CPH might have asked the Court to place on Morgan Stanley the burden of proving "negative causation," thus forcing Morgan Stanley to attempt to prove what part of CPH's loss, if any, could be attributed to causes other than the securities fraud that Morgan Stanley helped commit. See id. at 44-45 & n.5.

Morgan Stanley insists that none of these things would have happened because the Court's only goal in responding to Morgan Stanley's misconduct was to "level the playing field" and to address issues as to which Morgan Stanley's e-mail likely contained evidence. MS Opp'n at 2, 13-14. This contention ignores the fact that the Court adopted this conservative approach precisely because Morgan Stanley and its in-house lawyers had kept it in the dark about the full extent of their fraud upon the Court. Due to Morgan Stanley's falsehoods, the Court mistakenly believed that Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers had very little knowledge of or involvement in the investment bank's bad acts. Had the Court been fully informed that Morgan Stanley's in-house attorneys were heavily implicated in — even possibly orchestrating — Morgan Stanley's wrongdoing, the Court might well have acted to vindicate its own authority and to redress the public wrong inherent whenever lawyers defraud a court. The Court likely would not have restricted itself to the most moderate relief available. See Babe Elias Builders, Inc. v. Pernick, 765 So. 2d 119, 120-21 (Fla. 3d DCA 2000) (trial courts have inherent authority to severely sanction parties that perpetrate fraud on the court); Tramel v. Bass, 672 So. 2d 78, 83 (Fla. 1st DCA 1996) (same). It is thus clear beyond doubt that Morgan Stanley's fraudulent conduct had a prejudicial effect.

Morgan Stanley tries to escape that conclusion by asserting that sanctions relating to a trial's damages phase are never appropriate. See MS Opp'n at 14-15. But that is both incorrect and highly disingenuous. Throughout the appeal, Morgan Stanley repeatedly insisted on the need to distinguish between the fact of damage, which is an element of liability, and the amount of damages, which is a remedial issue. Now, however, Morgan Stanley tries to blur that distinction. As CPH's motion explains, if the trial court had defaulted Morgan Stanley as to all elements of liability, including the fact of damage, the Fourth District could not have later ruled as it did, directing entry of judgment for an adjudicated fraudfeasor, with no possibility of a new trial. See CPH Mot. at 3-4, 41-42. And the remedial phase of the trial, when the jury determines the amount of damages, can be the proper subject of sanctions as well. See id. at 42-45. Although Morgan Stanley relies on some general authority for the unexceptional proposition that unliquidated damages must be quantified in an adversarial proceeding (MS Opp'n at 15), Morgan Stanley never rebuts CPH's showing that the Court properly could have ordered Morgan Stanley to prove "negative causation" in that proceeding, or limited the damages evidence that Morgan Stanley could introduce at trial. Such requirements are often placed on defendants without any suggestion that the right to a damages trial has thereby been taken away. See CPH

Mot. at 44-45 & n.5 (collecting cases). Indeed, requiring the defendant to prove negative causation is standard practice in many securities-fraud cases. See id. (collecting Florida and federal authorities).

Thus, although no showing of prejudice is necessary for CPH to prevail on this motion, CPH has amply demonstrated a “colorable” claim of prejudice.

II. CPH’s Rule 1.540(b) Motion Is Not Foreclosed by the Fourth District’s Mandate.

A. The Fourth District Did Not Address the Issue Presented by CPH’s Rule 1.540(b) Motion.

Morgan Stanley claims that CPH’s Rule 1.540(b) motion should be denied out of hand because CPH is seeking to “retry its damages case,” which allegedly would violate the Fourth District’s mandate. MS Opp’n at 10. That, too, is wrong.

The whole point of a Rule 1.540(b) motion is to set aside a judgment. The Rule applies equally to judgments in cases that were never appealed and to judgments entered following an appeal and remand. See, e.g., Ohio Cas. Group v. Parrish, 350 So. 2d 466, 469 (Fla. 1977); Molinos Del S.A. v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., 947 So. 2d 521, 523-25 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006).

Here, the Fourth District never addressed the issue presented by CPH’s Rule 1.540(b) motion — whether sanctions relating to the fact or amount of damages were warranted by the fraud on the trial court that Morgan Stanley’s in-house attorneys committed and concealed before and during trial. All that the appellate court decided was that CPH’s proof of damages was insufficient on the existing trial-court record — a record that necessarily was limited because of Morgan Stanley’s continuing fraud and concealment. Indeed, the fact that the issues raised by the June 2005 Notice were not squarely before the Fourth District is clear from the trial court’s November 2005 decision not to address the merits of the criminal-contempt petition at that time and thereby alter the trial-court record. Specifically, the trial court chose not to pursue CPH's allegations based on the June 2005 Notice because doing so "could alter the current record of what MS & Co. knew and when it knew it" and "could add to the judicial response to MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct." Ex. A, 11/10/2005 Crim. Contempt Order at 7 (emphasis added). So we need not speculate about whether the trial court would have considered evidence of additional misconduct in assessing the need for further sanctions. The trial court explicitly stated that is exactly what would happen.

Since the trial court expressly declined to expand the misconduct record, it is clear that the Fourth District could not and did not consider whether further sanctions should be ordered, or what the result of such an order would be. Therefore, nothing about the Fourth District's decision stands in the way of CPH's post-judgment application for Rule 1.540(b) relief and sanctions against Morgan Stanley. See CPH Mot. at 24-26 (collecting cases holding that a trial court has authority to decide a Rule 1.540(b) motion brought by appellee following a reversal on appeal).

B. Morgan Stanley Has No Basis for Asserting the Law-of-the-Case Doctrine.

Morgan Stanley next claims that the Fourth District was fully aware of all the facts alleged in CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion, and that the Fourth District's remand for entry of judgment therefore somehow establishes "law of the case," which bars CPH's current application for relief. See MS Opp'n at 10-11.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Morgan Stanley may pretend that it approached the Fourth District in a spirit of candor and transparency, but its conduct was quite the opposite. When Morgan Stanley decided (without explanation) to file its December 2006 Notice, the appeal already had been argued orally and submitted for decision for nearly six months. In addition, the significance of the information contained in the Notice was not at all obvious, and the Notice did not even pretend to answer the mystery of when, prior to July 2004, Morgan Stanley's in-house attorneys became aware of the facts they concealed. And, of course, the appellate court also was not aware of the additional evidence of falsity that CPH expects to develop in the context of this Rule 1.540(b) motion.

Most important, the Fourth District did not actually consider and rule on the issue presented here. Indeed, the Fourth District did not address any issue even tangentially related to Morgan Stanley's litigation misconduct. The court decided the case on other grounds. In these circumstances, the law-of-the-case doctrine has no conceivable applicability, as the Fourth District has squarely held. In Analyte Diagnostics, Inc. v. D'Angelo, 792 So. 2d 1271 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001), while the case was on appeal to the Fourth District, the appellants became aware of facts suggesting that the appellees had committed fraud on the trial court. See id. at 1272. That issue was brought to the appellate court's attention and raised in the parties' briefs. See id. But the issue was not addressed by the appellate court, which affirmed the judgment. See id. The appellants then filed a Rule 1.540(b) motion to vacate the judgment in the trial court. See id. The trial court denied that motion, holding that the appellate court's affirmance of the judgment had effectively resolved the issues raised in the Rule 1.540(b) motion and constituted the law of the case. See id. The Fourth District reversed and remanded, holding that the law-of-the-case doctrine applied only to those issues that were actually considered and decided on the former appeal: "[E]ven though the issue was presented to this court, it was not properly before it as the question had neither been considered nor ruled upon below." Id.; see Whitby v. Infinity Radio Inc., 951 So. 2d 890, 895-96 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007); see also, e.g., Florida Dep't of Transp. v.

Juliano, 801 So. 2d 101, 107 (Fla. 2001) (law-of-the-case doctrine “bars consideration only of those legal issues that were actually considered and decided in a former appeal”).⁴

III. CPH Did Not Waive Its Right to Bring the Rule 1.540(b) Motion.

Finally, Morgan Stanley presses the extraordinary argument that CPH has waived its right to further sanctions by failing to seek them sooner — even though Morgan Stanley concealed the relevant information about its misconduct from the courts and from CPH at every step of the way, and is thus in no position to invoke any equitable doctrine. See, e.g., Goodwin v. Blu Murray Ins. Agency, Inc., 939 So. 2d 1098, 1105 (Fla. 5th DCA 2006) (“[t]he equitable defenses of waiver and laches require clean hands”). But even if Morgan Stanley could properly invoke the waiver doctrine, there was no waiver here. CPH either lacked the ability or was not required to take the various actions that Morgan Stanley suggests it should have taken at earlier points in this case.⁵

Morgan Stanley contends that prior to the appeal CPH should have moved for rehearing or otherwise sought additional relief from the trial court. But CPH did not have the benefit of Morgan Stanley’s December 2006 Notice until 18 months after entry of the judgment — and that Notice is critically important to CPH’s arguments because it was the first time that Morgan Stanley admitted (albeit even then indirectly) that its in-house lawyers likely knew that the June 23, 2004 e-mail certification was false when made. And the ambiguous phrasing of the ⁴ Morgan Stanley relies upon Airvac, Inc. v. Ranger Insurance Co., 330 So. 2d 467, 469 (Fla. 1976), for the proposition that the law-of-the-case doctrine is much broader and bars any argument that “could have been raised and decided on appeal.” MS Opp’n at 19. That is incorrect, and Airvac is no longer good law, as Juliano makes clear. See Juliano, 801 So. 2d at 106-07 (expressly receding from Airvac, 330 So. 2d at 469).

December 2006 Notice (“prior to July 2004”) also suggests that Morgan Stanley’s in-house lawyers may have known that the Morgan Stanley corporate representative lied in his February 2004 deposition testimony about the e-mail archive and that Morgan Stanley lied in its December 2003 statements to this Court about the erasure of e-mail backup tapes.

As for the June 2005 Notice, it admitted only a small part of Morgan Stanley’s malfeasance and did not come until a month after the trial was over and the jury had been excused. And when CPH brought a petition to show cause why Morgan Stanley and its in-house counsel should not be held in criminal contempt, the trial court ruled that it did not want to alter the record to explore additional wrongdoing that might have supported a punitive order until such time as the appeal of the existing remedial order was concluded. See Ex. A, 11/10/2005 Crim. Contempt Order at 7. Morgan Stanley can hardly be permitted to lie to and defraud the Court (and CPH), take steps to cover up those lies, and then fault CPH for not realizing the full extent of the lies until after the trial-court proceedings terminated.

Morgan Stanley next contends that CPH should have argued for more serious sanctions during the appeal itself — by cross-appealing, by arguing that Morgan Stanley’s additional misconduct was an alternative reason for a new damages trial, or by moving for relinquishment of jurisdiction. That is wrong on every score. Cross-appeals are not required unless the appellee seeks to modify the judgment in some way to obtain greater relief than the trial court afforded it. See, e.g., City of Coral Gables v. Puiggros, 376 So. 2d 281, 284 n.3 (Fla. 3d DCA 1979); Credit Indus. Co. v. Remark Chem. Co., 67 So. 2d 540, 540-41 (Fla. 1953). Here, no cross-appeal was necessary — or proper — because the result reflected in the judgment from which Morgan Stanley appealed was wholly favorable to CPH, and CPH was not seeking to modify the judgment in any way. Morgan Stanley’s December 2006 Notice could not have triggered an obligation to cross-appeal in any event, because the time for filing a cross-appeal had expired long before the Notice was filed. See Fla. R. App. P. 9.110(g). Furthermore, although parties with wholly favorable judgments may file a “conditional” or “contingent” cross-appeal as to errors that would be reached only if the appellate court reversed or modified the judgment, failure to file such a contingent cross-appeal does not waive any argument in subsequent proceedings. See, e.g., Allington Towers N., Inc. v. Weisberg, 452 So. 2d 1122, 1123 (Fla. 4th DCA 1984) (appellee was not required to file “what would be tantamount to a contingent cross appeal” and therefore “should not be barred from exercising his indemnification claim because he failed to appeal from an order which entirely vindicated him”); see also Mosher v. Speedstar Div. of AMCA Int’l, Inc., 52 F.3d 913, 917 & n.2 (11th Cir. 1995).

For similar reasons, CPH also was in no position to urge additional sanctions as an alternative ground for the Fourth District to grant a new trial; nor was it under any obligation to do so. Morgan Stanley did not file its December 2006 Notice until six months after the appeal was argued and submitted. The timing of this “disclosure” by Morgan Stanley was surely no accident. But even if CPH had possessed the necessary facts at an earlier stage, it could not have pressed in the Fourth District an argument that the trial court had not had any opportunity to pass on. The Fourth District is not, after all, in the business of finding facts. The result of such a futile gesture would likely have been the same as in Analyte Diagnostics, in which the Fourth District held that it could not rule on appeal on a question involving fraud on the court that “had neither been considered nor ruled upon below,” and that a subsequent Rule 1.540(b) motion was the proper procedural mechanism. 792 So. 2d at 1272.

The assertion that CPH waived its arguments by failing to ask the Fourth District to relinquish jurisdiction after the filing of the December 2006 Notice is equally fanciful. As with not cross-appealing the June 2005 Notice, there was no reason to consider the extraordinary step of seeking relinquishment when the judgment entered by the trial court was entirely adequate. And Morgan Stanley cites no authority suggesting that not seeking the extraordinary remedy of relinquishment results in a waiver. Morgan Stanley relies on Molinos Del S.A. v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., 947 So. 2d 521 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), to show that relinquishment of jurisdiction is possible. See MS Opp'n at 18-19. But the holding of Molinos is that a Rule 1.540(b) motion may be brought within one year of a substantive change in a judgment on appeal. 947 So. 2d at 525. Here, the judgment was reversed on appeal, a new judgment was entered pursuant to the Fourth District's mandate, and CPH filed its Rule 1.540(b) motion within days. CPH has therefore followed exactly the procedure that the Fourth District endorsed in Molinos.

IV. CPH Is Entitled to Discovery and an Evidentiary Hearing.

Because CPH has demonstrated a "colorable entitlement" to relief under Rule 1.540(b), this Court must "permit full discovery and thereafter . . . conduct a new evidentiary hearing on [the Rule 1.540(b)] motion." Pelekis v. Florida Keys Boys Club, 302 So. 2d 447, 449 (Fla. 3d DCA 1974); see also, e.g., Pearlman v. Pearlman, 425 So. 2d 666, 666 (Fla. 3d DCA 1983) (based on colorable claim, defendant is entitled to "full discovery of the plaintiff, her attorneys and any other party relative to the defendant's rule 1.540(b) motion"); Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 483 So. 2d at 489 ("[W]here the moving party's allegations raise a colorable entitlement to rule 1.540(b)(3) relief, a formal evidentiary hearing on the motion, as well as permissible discovery prior to the hearing, is required."); Dynasty Express Corp., 675 So. 2d at 239; Smith v. Smith, 903 So. 2d 1044, 1045 (Fla. 5th DCA 2005) ("A motion for relief from judgment should not be summarily dismissed without an evidentiary hearing unless its allegations and accompanying affidavits fail to allege ‘colorable entitlement’ to relief.”); Schleger, 957 So. 2d at 73 (same) (citing Smith, 903 So. 2d at 1045).

The need for discovery is particularly acute in this case because Morgan Stanley controls all evidence relating to its in-house lawyers’ fraud — and Morgan Stanley has made no effort, in its response to the Rule 1.540(b) motion or otherwise, to clarify the remaining ambiguities regarding this remarkable misconduct. Indeed, the opposite is the case. Morgan Stanley has declined to explain the precise meaning of its deliberately vague assertion that its in-house lawyers knew that the backup tapes contained e-mail “prior to” July 2004. Although Morgan Stanley clearly knows, it has steadfastly refused to say precisely when — “prior to July 2004” — its attorneys acquired this knowledge. There must be a reason why Morgan Stanley has chosen to treat that information as top secret. In any event, discovery and a subsequent hearing are the only available means of finding out the true extent of Morgan Stanley’s bad acts. See, e.g., Florida Keys Boys Club, Inc. v. Pelekis, 327 So. 2d 804, 806 (Fla. 3d DCA 1976) (permitting document requests); Pelekis, 302 So. 2d at 448 (permitting document requests and depositions).

Aside from the arguments discussed above regarding CPH’s “colorable entitlement” to relief, Morgan Stanley makes no independent argument that CPH lacks a right to further discovery and an evidentiary hearing, except perhaps to suggest that such proceedings are appropriate only in a narrow set of circumstances. See MS Opp’n at 16-17. But as demonstrated by the cases cited above, discovery and an evidentiary hearing are not optional where, as here, a party has established a colorable entitlement to relief.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, CPH respectfully requests that this Court rule that CPH has raised a colorable entitlement to relief, grant CPH the right to take discovery, schedule an evidentiary hearing, and provide such other relief as the Court deems just and proper.

IN THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

ORDER ON COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.'S VERIFIED PETITION
FOR A SHOW-CAUSE ORDER REGARDING MORGAN STANLEY'S CRIMINAL
CONTEMPT OF COURT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court November 3, 2005 on CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court, with counsel for CPH, MS & Co., and non-party respondents Donald G. Kempf, Jr., James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James F. Doyle present.

CPH sued MS & Co. for aiding and abetting and conspiring with Sunbeam Corporation to perpetrate a fraud. Early in the case, CPH was concerned that MS & Co. was not thoroughly looking for emails responsive to its discovery requests. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered an Agreed Order that required MS & Co. to search its oldest full backup tapes for emails subject to certain search parameters and certify compliance ("Agreed Order"). MS & Co. served a certificate of compliance signed by Arthur Riel, an Executive Director of Technology, on June 23, 2004 ("Certificate of Compliance").

On November 17, 2004 CPH learned that MS & Co. had found some backup tapes that had not been searched. Over the next ten weeks it sought more information about both how and when the tapes were found and when they would be searched. When MS & Co. failed to provide meaningful responses, on January 26, 2005 CPH served its Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Motion.")

EXHIBIT A

16div-031615

On January 31, 2005, MS & Co. served the Declaration of James F. Doyle ("Doyle Declaration"), an Executive Director in its Law Division, in support of its opposition to the Adverse Inference Motion. The Doyle Declaration was signed under penalty of perjury. In it, Doyle averred that "(a)t the end of October 2004, I learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley's May 14, 2004 e-mail production."

The court held an evidentiary hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion on February 14, 2005. In preparation for that hearing, on February 3, 2005 the court ordered MS & Co. to produce by noon on February 8, 2005 all documents within its "care, custody, or control, addressing or related to the additional email back up tapes, including matters relating to the time or manner in which they were discovered; by whom they were discovered; who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were to be restored and made searchable . . ." ("February 3, 2005 Order"). The court issued its ruling on the Adverse Inference Motion March 1, 2005 ("Adverse Inference Order"), finding MS & Co. had engaged in discovery abuses and shifting the burden of proof on two elements of CPH's claims.

Thereafter, CPH discovered that MS & Co. had not been candid with it or the court at the February 14, 2005 hearing, prompting it to serve its Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment ("Renewed Motion"). The court held an evidentiary hearing on the Renewed Motion on March 14 and 15, 2005. On March 23, 2005 it issued its Order on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment ("Default Order"), which built on the Adverse Inference Order. The Default Order found that MS & Co. had deliberately violated numerous discovery requests and orders, to the permanent prejudice of CPH. The violations included MS & Co.'s failure to timely notify CPH and the court that Riel's Certificate of Compliance was false because, among other deficiencies, 1,423 tapes found in a store room in Brooklyn (the "Brooklyn tapes") and 738 8 millimeter backup tapes ("8 millimeter tapes") had not been searched. The Default Order removed certain facts to which the discovery had been directed from dispute and provided that a statement of MS & Co.'s failures would be read to the jury to consider in determining the propriety of a punitive damage award. The Default Order left the exact wording and content of the statement to be read open and invited counsel to submit proposals.

Kempf was general counsel for MS & Co. at all pertinent times. Cusick was Co-Head of Global Litigation. Lee was an Executive Director in MS & Co.'s Law Division and Doyle's supervisor. In May of 2005 in connection with the court's consideration of the litigation misconduct statement to be read to the jury, MS & Co. filed Offers of Proof for Lee, Doyle, and Cusick. In general, the Offers asserted that each first learned¹ there was email on the Brooklyn tapes in late October 2004 and on the 8 millimeter tapes in November 2004. Cusick and Lee asserted that each knew of no one in the Law Division who knew the information earlier.²

Based on the Offers of Proof, counsel for MS & Co. asked the court to instruct the jury that MS & Co.'s counsel did not know there was email on the Brooklyn and 8 millimeter tapes until October 2004. CPH contends that Kempf was sitting in the courtroom at the time of those arguments on May 16 and 18, 2005. The jury returned verdicts in CPH's favor for compensatory and punitive damages. The court rendered its Final Judgment in CPH's favor based on the verdicts on June 23, 2005. MS & Co. served its Notice of Appeal and posted a supersedeas bond June 27, 2005.

On June 17, 2005 MS & Co. served a document entitled "Notice".³ The Notice

¹Lee's Offer qualifies her statements by asserting they are based on recollection.

²The Offer of Proof for Doyle stated that if called to testify he would state that he did not learn of the existence of email on the Brooklyn tapes until late October 2004 and that he "did not learn of the existence of 8 millimeter tapes containing emails until November 2004." It is unclear whether Doyle's proffered testimony is that he was unaware of the existence of the 8 millimeter tapes until November 2004, when he learned both that they existed and that some contained email, or that he may or may not have been aware of the tapes' existence, but was not aware that they contained email, prior to November 2004. Unlike Cusick and Lee, Doyle's Offer did not state that he knew of no one in the Law Division who knew that tapes contained email before he did.

³The Notice's legal effect, if any, on the proceedings is unclear to the court.

stated that

1. In the listed offers of proof and related statements, Morgan Stanley asserted that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail until October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.
2. As a result of a review of emails discovered by a new email search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware⁴ in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained email and that certain 8-mm tapes existed.
3. Morgan Stanley submits this Notice to: (a) correct Defendant's Offers of Proof from James P. Cusick, Soo-Mi Lee, and James Doyle (the first sentence of paragraph 4 and the entirety of paragraph 5);⁵ (b) withdraw the Declaration of James F. Doyle of January 31 2005; and (c) correct related statements that reference or were based on the foregoing submissions. (footnote omitted).
4. Morgan Stanley does not limit this notice and correction to the specific documents described or listed herein. Morgan Stanley retracts, withdraws and corrects any and all statements, written or oral, made or submitted on its behalf, to the effect that its Law Division was not aware that any of the Brooklyn Tapes contained email until ⁴The court asked MS & Co. to clarify whether the Notice was to be interpreted to state that MS & Co. first became aware that there was email on some of the Brooklyn tapes and that the 8 millimeter tapes existed in July 2004, or simply that MS & Co. knew those things in July 2004, without regard to whether it first learned them. While initially acknowledging that the Notice implied that MS & Co. first became aware of the items in July 2004, MS & Co. chose to stand on the language in the Notice, leaving unresolved whether it first learned of the items in July 2004 or simply knew of them as of that time.

⁵It would not be inconsistent for MS & Co. to assert that (i) Cusick, Lee, and Doyle did not know the Brooklyn tapes contained email or that the 8 millimeter tapes existed and contained email until late October and early November 2004, respectively; (ii) Cusick, Lee, and Doyle did not think any one else in the Law Division knew those facts before they did; and (iii) others in the Law Division did know those facts in July 2004. Counsel for MS & Co. clarified at the hearing that the Notice was intended to convey MS & Co.'s belief that Cusick, Lee, and Doyle themselves knew that some of the Brooklyn tapes had email and the 8 millimeter tapes existed in July 2004, though not convey that MS & Co. believes Cusick, Lee, or Doyle intentionally misstated their recollections when the Offers and Declaration were prepared.

October 2004 and was not aware of certain 8-mm tapes until November 2004.

In response to the Notice, CPH filed its Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court, taking the position that by the Notice MS & Co. admitted it made false statements to the Court.

CPH filed, too, an Affidavit and Second Affidavit of Arthur Riel. Riel avers that in the first quarter of 2003 Cusick asked him to design the historical email archive; that Kempf approved the plan late in the second quarter of 2003; that MS & Co. knew of the Brooklyn tapes by May of 2004; that he believes that MS & Co. knew of the existence of the 8 millimeter tapes in the fall of 2003; that he knew by July 2, 2004 that the Brooklyn and 8 millimeter tapes had email dating back to at least 1998; that he told an attorney in MS & Co.'s Compliance of the Law Division and others within the division in a meeting on July 8, 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes contained email; that he told MS & Co.'s counsel on or about April 28, 2005 that he had told the Law Division that there was email on the Brooklyn tapes on July 8, 2004; that he told Cusick and others that the 8 millimeter tapes existed no later than January 2004; that Doyle asked him to sign the Certificate of Compliance after first asking a college student who performed data entry functions to sign it; and, finally, that MS & Co. had monthly reports and meeting minutes which could show when people within MS & Co. were notified of the existence of the tapes and the fact that some contained email.

CPH seeks to have this court initiate criminal contempt proceedings against MS & Co., Kempf, Cusick, Lee, and Doyle. It contends that MS & Co. is in contempt of court for (i) offering the Declaration and Offers of Proof with knowledge they contained false information; (ii) repeatedly arguing for favorable rulings based on the allegedly false information; and (iii) failing to comply with the Court's discovery orders. It contends Kempf is in contempt for failing to correct the misrepresentations of fact made to the Court in his presence on May 16 and 18, 2005. It contends Lee and Cusick are in contempt for proffering allegedly false statements to the court with the intention the court rely on them. Finally, it contends Doyle is in contempt for the same, together with signing the allegedly false Declaration with knowledge it would be submitted to the court. It contends each of these acts was intended to and did obstruct the administration of justice.⁶

Here, the allegedly contemptuous acts fall within two general classes. First, CPH contends that MS & Co. failed to comply with the court's orders to produce documents relating to the email issue, including the February 3, 2005 Order requiring it to produce all documents addressing or related to the backup tapes. It asserts that Riel's affidavit would allow a reasonable person to conclude that reports and minutes were generated that were responsive to the court's February 3, 2005 Order and that MS & Co. deliberately failed to produce those items.⁷ Second, CPH contends that MS & Co.'s assertions in the Notice together with Riel's affidavits would allow a reasonable person to conclude that Kempf, Cusick, Lee, and Doyle knew that Law Division personnel were aware of the existence of email on some of the Brooklyn tapes and the 8 millimeter tapes in July 2004 and that representations to the contrary were intended to mislead the Court and obstruct the administration of justice. As a subcategory, CPH contends that Doyle's Declaration was perjurious.

It is reasonable to assume that on appeal MS & Co. will question both the factual findings in the Default Order and the sanctions imposed. This will, of necessity, implicate the Offers and the assertions of counsel, which were used in argument about the jury statement given as a result of the Default Order; the Declaration, which was used to oppose the Adverse Inference Motion; and the propriety of and level of compliance with the ⁶See, e.g., Milian v. State, 764 So. 2d 860 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000), rev. den. 786 So. 2d 579 (Fla. 2001); M.W. v. Lafthiem, 855 So. 2d 683 (Fla. 2d DCA 2003); Murrell v. State, 595 So. 2d 1049 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992); see, also, Duff v. Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., 386 So. 2d 253 (Fla. 5th DCA 1980) (action can be obstructionist even if ultimate outcome unaffected); Milian; Thomson v. State, 398 So. 2d 514 (Fla. 2d DCA 1981).

⁷CPH argues, too, that the Notice itself refers to yet other emails responsive to the February 3, 2005 Order not timely produced.

February 3, 2005 Order, among others, violation of which were used to support the Default Order.

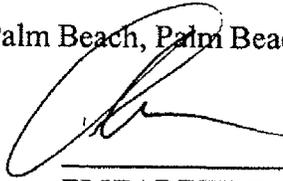

Once an appellate court's jurisdiction attaches the trial court is divested of jurisdiction to consider matters that may affect the matters on appeal. See Willey v. W.J. Hoggson Corp., 89 Fla. 446, 105 So. 126 (1925); Waltham A. Condominium Association v. Village Management, Inc., 330 So. 2d 227 (Fla. 4th DCA 1976). While post-judgment proceedings collateral to and independent of the subject matter may proceed while a judgment is on appeal, the trial court lacks jurisdiction where the matter is "directly intertwined" with the matter on appeal. Amlan, Inc. v. Detroit Diesel Corporation, 651 So. 2d 701, 706 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995); Publix Supermarkets, Inc. v. Griffin, 837 So. 2d 1139 (Fla. 2d DCA 2003); cf. Miseveth v. Stafford, 667 So. 2d 1012 (Fla. 3d DCA 1996).

If the court were to pursue criminal contempt as requested,⁸ it could alter the current record of what MS & Co. knew and when it knew it. It could add to the judicial response to MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct. The current record of MS & Co.'s litigation misconduct, and the propriety and correctness of this court's rulings based on it, are presently before the appellate court. Indeed the argument that the appeal divested in court of jurisdiction to consider contempt of court based on discovery violations is stronger here than in Amlan. In Amlan, all requested documents were eventually produced, albeit at extraordinary cost, thus the record before the appellate court on the point was complete. Here, CPH argues all discovery was not made and, therefore, pursuit of the contempt allegations could result in a separate record of discovery abuses, perhaps one inconsistent with the record currently before the appellate court. The court determines, then, that the allegedly contemptuous conduct is directly intertwined with the matters on appeal, and that this court lacks jurisdiction to consider CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court. Based on the foregoing, it is ⁸The Court has made no determination that it could or should. MS & Co. and the non-party respondents vigorously contend that they are not guilty of contempt.

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that this court declines to rule on CPH's Verified Petition for a Show-Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court pending disposition of the primary action on appeal.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH's") request for a default judgment should be denied because this extraordinary relief is not warranted, and cannot be squared with Florida Supreme Court precedent. CPH has not, and cannot, show that Morgan Stanley willfully and deliberately disregarded this Court's authority. CPH has also failed to show that its case has been prejudiced on the merits. And CPH has offered no credible reason why less onerous sanctions are inappropriate. Finally, CPH's own failure to retain evidence, including emails, as well as its failure to produce documents evidencing both the value of the Sunbeam warrants and the Sunbeam stock CPH received as part of the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction, bar the relief requested here as a matter of equity.

I. FLORIDA LAW DOES NOT PERMIT DEFAULT JUDGMENTS EXCEPT UNDER EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCES NOT PRESENT IN THIS CASE.

A default judgment "is the most severe of all sanctions" and "should be employed only in extreme circumstances." Ham v. Dunmire, No. SC03-2038, 2004 WL 2973857, at *2 (Fla. Dec. 23, 2004) (internal quotations & citation omitted; emphasis added); Wallraff v. TGI Friday's Inc., 490 So. 2d 50, 51 (Fla. 1986). Default judgments are strongly disfavored under Florida law because "the right of access to [Florida] courts is constitutionally protected" and, except under the most extraordinary circumstances, may not be denied. USB Acquisition Co. v. U.S. Block Corp., 564 So. 2d 221, 222 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (emphasis added) (citing Art. I, § 21 Fla. Const.). The Florida Supreme Court has held that if any other sanction "appears to be a viable alternative, the trial court should employ such an alternative." Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *3 (internal quotations & citation omitted); see also id. at *6 (dismissal is unwarranted where more appropriate sanctions are available).

Rule 1.380(b) governs sanctions for failure to comply with discovery orders. Florida courts have recognized that default judgments, like dismissals with prejudice, should be used "as a discovery sanction only as a last resort.” Muhtar v. Aetna Ins. Co., 456 So. 2d 586, 587 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984) (abuse of discretion to dismiss suit as a sanction for failure to comply with discovery order where plaintiffs, while not responding as quickly or fully as parties to litigation might like, made a good-faith effort to, and in fact did, substantially comply with the discovery order) (per curiam). CPH asserts that the ultimate sanction of default judgment is appropriate because (1) Morgan Stanley has allegedly engaged in a pattern of discovery abuses; and (2) Morgan Stanley has allegedly destroyed evidence that may have been useful to its case. Neither allegation provides grounds for relieving CPH of its burden of proving the merits of its claims.

Rather, to justify the severe sanction of default under Rule 1.380(b), the moving party — here CPH — bears the heavy burden of proving with clear and conclusive evidence: (i) that discovery violations were made in deliberate disregard of the court’s authority, and; (ii) that the moving party has been prejudiced in a meaningful way. See Beaver Crane Serv., Inc. v. National Surety Corp., 373 So. 2d 88, 89 (Fla. 3d DCA 1979) (default judgment held to be inappropriate where party “ha[s] not demonstrated [that it was] prejudiced in any meaningful way by” discovery abuses). CPH can prove neither.

II. CPH HAS NOT PRESENTED EVIDENCE THAT WOULD JUSTIFY THE SANCTION OF DEFAULT FOR ALLEGED DISCOVERY VIOLATIONS

A. CPH Has Not Shown That Morgan Stanley Deliberately And Contumaciously Disregarded The Court’s Authority.

A default judgment or dismissal with prejudice is justified only when the court finds by clear and conclusive evidence that a party has shown “[a] deliberate and contumacious disregard of the court’s authority.” Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *2 (internal quotations & citation omitted; alteration in original; emphases added). Before imposing such extreme sanctions, the Court must make “express written findings of fact supporting the conclusion that the failure to obey the court order demonstrated willful or deliberate disregard.” Id. As the Second District Court of Appeal observed recently in Smith Original Homes, Inc. v. Carpet King Carpets, Inc., imposing the ultimate sanction of a default judgment on “[a]nything short of this standard is an abuse of discretion.” No. 2D03-4759, 2005 WL 415082, at *2 (Fla. 2d DCA Feb. 23, 2005).

A party’s negligent failure to respond to discovery requests does not justify a default judgment. As even CPH concedes, “[m]ere negligence does not suffice” to justify the sanction of a default judgment. Baja Village Markets, Inc. v. Baja Supermarket, Inc., 712 So. 2d 465, 466 (Fla. 3d DCA 1998) (per curiam). Likewise, the mere fact that a party exhibits “a continuing and repeated failure to comply” with a court’s pre-trial orders is not enough to warrant the ultimate sanction. See Kelley v. Schmidt, 613 So. 2d 918, 919-21 (Fla. 5th DCA 1993).

CPH nonetheless argues that the Court should enter default judgment against Morgan Stanley for its “[r]epeated and prolonged failures to carry out a thorough search for back-up tapes.” (Feb. 24, 2005 CPH’s Outline in Supp. of its Pending Mot. to Strike Morgan Stanley’s Answer at 2.) CPH further suggests that this extreme sanction is justified because Morgan Stanley supposedly engaged in a “conscious avoidance of discovery” and a “cover-up effort[.]” (Id.) The record does not support CPH’s contentions. The record evidence shows just the opposite. Morgan Stanley disclosed the existence of both the additional tapes and the potential problems with the search scripts and set about correcting them. In fact, Morgan Stanley has gone to extraordinary lengths — and expense — to make whatever relevant, non-privileged information exists on those tapes available to CPH.

CPH argues that Morgan Stanley discovered the additional tapes and script problems because Morgan Stanley “was facing independent third-party verification of the production that had been made.” (Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1325-26.) That is not correct. The record shows that months before the Court suggested in the February 2, 2005 hearing that a third-party vendor be hired to review the additional tapes, Morgan Stanley had notified CPH that (1) additional e-mail backup tapes had been discovered; (2) additional responsive e-mails had been identified; and (3) e-mail backup tapes were still being restored. (Nov. 17, 2004 T. Clare Letter to M. Brody (Ex. 1).) Likewise, Morgan Stanley's IT group had been working on discovering and correcting errors with the "scripts" well before the Court suggested that a third-party vendor might be an appropriate sanction. (Feb. 14, 2003 Hrg. at 52-53; Feb. 9, 2005 L. Gorman Dep. at 70-71 Ex. 2).)

In the end, CPH's motion must be denied because Morgan Stanley has never deliberately disregarded this Court's authority. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley is working diligently and expending huge resources to bring prompt closure to this issue. There is not one shred of evidence in the record that Morgan Stanley's finding of additional backup tapes or errors in the script program amount to a "cover-up" or a "conscious avoidance of discovery" as CPH suggests. See In re Southeast Banking Corp., 204 F.3d 1322, 1332 (11th Cir. 2000) (If a litigant's alleged discovery violation is "caused by simple negligence, misunderstanding, or inability to comply" a default judgment is not appropriate) (internal quotations & citation omitted).

B. CPH Has Not Shown That It Has Been Prejudiced On The Merits Of Its Case.

The motion for default judgment should also be denied because CPH has not shown that it suffered any significant prejudice on the merits as a result of the alleged discovery abuses. As the Florida Supreme Court has recognized, default judgments are generally not appropriate unless the moving party has suffered substantial prejudice. See Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *6 ("[D]ismissal is far too extreme as a sanction in those cases where discovery violations have no absolutely prejudice to the opposing party.”); but see USB Acquisition Co., Inc., 564 So. 2d 221, 222 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (“Lack of prejudice is irrelevant” in determining whether a plaintiff’s complaint should be dismissed for discovery abuse.). Florida courts have therefore held that in sanctioning discovery abuses the trial court’s discretion “should be guided largely” by whether such abuses “will prejudice the opposing party.” Green v. Shoop, 240 So. 2d 85, 86 (Fla. 3d DCA 1970); see also Fuller v. Rinebolt, 382 So. 2d 1239, 1241 (Fla. 4th DCA 1980) (holding that trial court, in absence of showing of prejudice, should not exclude testimony of witness whose name had not been disclosed to opposing party).

This rule reflects the core principle that the Court’s “authority to sanction is not unbridled; the sanction imposed must be commensurate with the offense.” Kelley, 613 So. 2d at 920. Because the “purpose of reposing in the trial court the authority to enter a default is to ensure compliance with its order, not to punish or penalize,” Garden-Aire Vill. Sea Haven, Inc. v. Decker, 433 So. 2d 676, 677 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983) (per curiam), it is “imperative that trial courts strike the appropriate balance between the severity of the infraction and the impact of the sanction when exercising their discretion to discipline parties to an action.” Ham, 2004 WL 2973857, at *6. Accordingly, unless discovery abuses prevent a part from proving its prima facie case the ultimate sanction of default is not appropriate.

1. CPH Has Not Suffered Any Prejudice Demonstrable Prejudice By Morgan Stanley’s Recent Discovery Of Additional E-Mail Tapes.

CPH argues that Morgan Stanley: (1) failed to disclose the existence of 738 8-millimeter tapes when they were found; (2) failed to disclose the Brooklyn tapes when they were found; (3) made false representations to the Court about when the Brooklyn tapes were found; and (4) made false representations to the Court about when the first time anyone knew that there was recoverable e-mail data on the Brooklyn tapes. None of these allegations, even if true, supports the issuance of a default judgment because CPH has not shown that any of these hotly-contested “facts” prejudiced the merits of its case.

First, the Brooklyn tapes, no matter when they were found, have been searched, and responsive non-privileged documents have been produced to CPH. In addition, the Brooklyn tapes have been turned over to a third-party vendor to run its own searches for responsive e-mails. CPH has not identified any e-mails from the Brooklyn tapes that CPH claims are needed to establish its prima facie case. As a result, the late production of the Brooklyn tapes cannot support the relief CPH requests.

Second, the 738 8-millimeter tapes have likewise been searched and responsive non-privileged documents have been produced to CPH. These tapes have been given to the same third-party vendor to run its own searches for responsive e-mails. Again, CPH has not identified any e-mails from these tapes that it claims are needed to establish its prima facie case.

Third, CPH’s claim that Morgan Stanley made “false representations” about when the Brooklyn tapes were found is wrong, and irrelevant to the issue of a default. The fact that the Brooklyn Tapes were located in May 2004 and not the summer of 2004 does not rebut the evidence that the Brooklyn Tapes have been searched and responsive documents have been produced to CPH. CPH has therefore suffered no prejudice. See Muhtar, 456 So. 2d at 587 (default judgment is an abuse of discretion because of the lack of prejudice to complaining party when opposing party substantially complies with order, albeit not as quickly or fully as the Court would have liked).

Fourth, Morgan Stanley has consistently contended that no one in its Law Division knew of the existence of additional recoverable e-mail data on the tapes before October 2004. Morgan Stanley has previously submitted an affidavit of the individual attorney with responsibility for the Coleman case, attesting that it was at the end of October 2004 when he first “learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within Morgan Stanley, and that the data insert on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to Morgan Stanley’s May 14, 2004 e-mail production.” (Jan. 31, 2005, Doyle Decl. ¶ 3 (Ex. 3).) That attorney has further testified that “[u]pon learning that information, I directed that the electronic searches described in the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order be conducted for any backup tapes that had not been restored and made searchable at that point, and that the process of restoring the remaining backup tapes continue as expeditiously as possible.” (Id. ¶ 3.) To the extent CPH relies on an out-of-context statement at the February 2, 2005 hearing to support its assertion that Morgan Stanley somehow misrepresented to the Court about the first time someone knew that there was recoverable e-mail data on the Brooklyn tapes, CPH’s motion should be denied because Morgan Stanley has repeatedly clarified any alleged ambiguity in the statement. (See Feb. 14, 2005 Hrg. at 213-15.) And CPH cannot show that it suffered any prejudice as a result of the representation.

Finally, the comprehensive e-mail restoration and review process that Morgan Stanley began on its own initiative, separate and apart from this litigation, has been a success despite the many issues encountered by Morgan Stanley along the way in organizing and searching a massive amount of electronic information. Approximately 35,000 backup e-mail tapes have been searched, and the process has resulted in the production of thousands of pages of e-mail messages in this litigation. Morgan Stanley does not dispute that the tapes found in the Brooklyn security room and the 8-millimeter tapes should have been found and produced earlier, but when they were found they were disclosed and searched for responsive email. CPH simply has not suffered any prejudice because the tapes were not found before May 14, 2004.

2. CPH Has No Demonstrable Evidence Of Prejudice Resulting From A Purported “Pattern Of Conduct”

CPH has combed the record and assembled every “historic” discovery disagreement between the parties in an effort to cobble together what it deems to be a “well-established pattern of disregard for [Morgan Stanley’s] litigation related obligations.” (CPH Outline at 6.) The eighteen-month discovery period is now closed, and it is a matter of record that the parties engaged in hard-fought discovery battles going both ways and that both sides lost motions to compel and produced evidence not previously-produced. These other disputes hardly rise to the level of “deliberate and contumacious disregard of this Court’s authority.” Moreover, none of these disputes have irreparably prejudiced CPH’s prima facie case.

In its outline and argument on this issue, CPH focuses on two categories of purported discovery misconduct (apart from the e-mail tapes) from which it urges the Court to conclude that there is no alternative but to grant judgment in CPH’s favor. The first category is PC Docs data that Morgan Stanley searched for and produced in response to the Court’s February 3, 2005 Order. Morgan Stanley did not disregard the Court’s order as CPH must show — Morgan Stanley fully complied with the Court’s order and CPH does not claim otherwise. Nor does CPH have any credible claim of prejudice with respect to these documents which relate solely to the authenticity and admissibility of six documents. In fact, the Court has already ruled on that issue in CPH’s favor and imposed the costs of additional discovery leading to the PC Docs profiles on Morgan Stanley.

The second category of alleged misconduct relates to documents regarding the Italian charge against William Strong. Again, Morgan Stanley did not disregard this Court’s authority but rather complied with the Court’s order to produce these documents. These documents are not relevant or admissible at trial (for the reasons set forth in Morgan Stanley’s Motion in Limine

No. 23), but even if they were, CPH has no credible claim of prejudice because it is in possession of the documents.¹

Tacitly conceding that it cannot show prejudice with respect to any specific category of documents, as it is required to do under the law, CPH has resorted to two last-ditch prejudice arguments, neither of which hold water. The first is that Morgan Stanley's purported misconduct has made it necessary to "start the discovery process from the beginning" and re-do "almost all of the discovery that has already been completed":

9 Based upon the fragmentary production to
10 date, documents disclosed after the close of
11 discovery would require that almost all of the 12 discovery that has already been completed be
13 redone, because the disclosures that have been
14 made to date implicate in one way or another the
15 key testimony of almost every witness from whom
16 deposition testimony has been taken.
17 We would need to start this discovery
18 process from the beginning. I provided the
19 Court with a list of the new witnesses we would
20 need to depose. That in and of itself is a
21 lengthy list.

(Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1337.) This argument is disingenuous. The "list of new witness" are word processing employees and temp secretaries employed by Morgan Stanley in 1997-1998. There is no dispute that they typed keystrokes on some of the six documents at issue. But their typing is not an issue. Morgan Stanley has never denied that the documents were resident on

¹ CPH has not, and cannot, claim that the other out-of-context, unrelated incidents cited by CPH in its attempt to "pile on" grievances (Morgan Stanley's purported disclosure of a document already in the public record, a witnesses taking a break from a deposition in frustration from being asked the same question repeatedly, or a witness' verification of interrogatory responses his best knowledge as of the time of the verification) resulted in any prejudice to CPH's ability to make its claims. Moreover, CPH cannot show that Morgan Stanley violated any Court orders.

Morgan Stanley's document management system. Rather the issue is whether the documents are objectionable for the reasons before the Court. In short, the issue is the admissibility in evidence of the documents — nothing more.²

CPH's final argument is that default judgment is warranted because CPH simply does not trust Morgan Stanley, and that CPH has no confidence in the "integrity of the pretrial process" or the integrity of the individual lawyers in the case. (Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1345-46, 1425-26.) Morgan Stanley respectfully submits that if the standard for granting default judgment in Florida was that opponents in litigation must have complete confidence in each other then no major litigation would ever get to a jury. Moreover, Morgan Stanley, too, would be entitled to default judgment on liability, on the basis of, among other things, CPH's purposeful non-disclosure and subsequent wrongful redaction of arguably the most damaging documents in the case. Because Florida law requires willful disregard of the Court and specific prejudice to impose the "death penalty" sanction of default, and because CPH has not made any showing of either requirement, its motion must be denied.

III. CPH CANNOT JUSTIFY A DEFAULT FOR PURPORTED EVIDENCE SPOILATION BECAUSE CPH HAS NOT SHOWN THAT MORGAN STANLEY DELIBERATELY DESTROYED RELEVANT EVIDENCE.

Florida courts have recognized that the sanction of a default judgment is not appropriate unless missing evidence has been intentionally destroyed maliciously and in bad faith. See Federal Ins. Co. v. Allister Mfg. Co., 622 So. 2d 1348, 1351 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993) ("except perhaps where there has been a malicious destruction of evidence, the ultimate sanction should be avoided if possible”) (discussing Headley v. Chrysler Motor Corp., 141 F.R.D. 362 (D. Mass. 1991)). “Mere negligence in losing or destroying the records is not enough for an adverse inference as it does not sustain an inference of consciousness of a weak case.” Bashir v. Amtrak, 119 F.3d 929, 931 (11th Cir. 1997); see also Vick v. Texas Employment Comm’n, 514 F.2d 734, 737 (5th Cir. 1975). In fact, as recognized by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, “the vast weight of authority ... holds that absent bad-faith conduct applying a rule of law that results in dismissal on the grounds of spoliation of evidence is not authorized.” Cole v. Keller Indus., 132 F.3d 1044, 1047 (4th Cir. 1998). If the moving party does not come forward with extrinsic evidence proving that missing materials would have been unfavorable to the opposing party or relevant to the issues in the lawsuit, there can be no sanctions. See id. (finding that dismissal was improper where “there is no evidence that [the plaintiff’s] actions were undertaken in an effort to prevent the defendant from inspecting and testing the [evidence]”).

Here, CPH has no evidence that Morgan Stanley maliciously and purposefully destroyed evidence related to the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction. As a substitute for clear and convincing evidence, CPH asks the Court to choose between three hypothetical “possible constructions” for Morgan Stanley’s over-writing of e-mail tapes, ranging from negligence on Morgan Stanley’s part to an intentional destruction of tapes to conceal incriminating evidence in this case. (CPH Outline at 1.) Again, having no evidence that Morgan Stanley intended to conceal any evidence related to this case, CPH asks the Court simply to assume that this was Morgan Stanley’s “actual intent” for two reasons: (1) Morgan Stanley’s routine over-writing of e-mail tapes was the subject of an SEC inquiry and settlement; and (2) Morgan Stanley purportedly failed to preserve or gather e-mail relating to the Sunbeam transaction in connection with this case. (Id.)

First, contrary to CPH's representation, the SEC settlement was an industry-wide SEC proceeding that addressed the failure of certain registered broker-dealers, of which Morgan Stanley was one, to comply with regulatory requirements that broker-dealers preserve certain electronic communications for three years in a readily accessible place.³ Nothing in the SEC settlement — in which none of the broker-dealers admitted any wrongdoing — supports an inference that any Sunbeam-related e-mails were ever destroyed with malicious intent.⁴ And CPH has provided nothing but lawyer hyperbole to show that Sunbeam-related e-mails existed and were destroyed, and that those tapes would have contained damning evidence against Morgan Stanley. The inference is just as likely that any overwritten tapes contained e-mail evidencing that CPH knew about Sunbeam's slow first quarter sales and yet decided not to do any financial due diligence of Sunbeam including reading its interim financial statements. There is no evidence that Morgan Stanley did anything other than routinely overwrite tapes as was common in the industry at the time, and as CPH itself did and continues to do to this day. (Jan. 21, 2004 Fasman Dep. at 41-43, 68-69, 131-33 (Ex. 5).)

Second, CPH argued in writing to the Court that Morgan Stanley "issued specific instructions to gather hard copies of Sunbeam-related documents but failed to include any effort to preserve or gather e-mail." (CPH Outline at 1.) CPH reiterated this assertion at the February 23 hearing:

³ The recycling of e-mail tapes at Morgan Stanley ended in January 2001, (Feb. 10, 2004 Saunders Dep. at 57-60, 82-83 (Ex. 4)), over two years before CPH filed suit against Morgan Stanley.

⁴ The Court took judicial notice of the SEC proceeding without considering Morgan Stanley response to the plaintiff's request. Morgan Stanley respectfully suggests the Court erred in doing so for the reasons stated in Morgan Stanley's submission on February 21, 2005.

13 I remind the Court that the record has
14 already established the fact that Morgan Stanley
15 issued specific instructions to gather hard
16 copies of Sunbeam related documents, but clearly
17 excluded from its instructions to its own staff
18 any instructions to preserve electronic data,
19 specifically any instructions to preserve any
20 e-mail.

(Feb. 23, 2005 Hrg. at 1323.) CPH provided no record cite for this alleged “already established fact.” The record squarely contradicts this assertion. John Plotnick, Morgan Stanley’s corporate representative for document collection in this case, testified in no uncertain terms that he contacted all of the Morgan Stanley bankers who worked on the Sunbeam transaction and directed them “over and over again” to send him “all their electronic documents, including e-mail”:

Page 54

6 Q. With respect to any of the
7 employees who -- Morgan Stanley employees who
8 had any involvement with Sunbeam, have you
9 determined whether any of them backed up
10 information residing on the hard drives of
11 their PC's?

12 A. I called all of the bankers that
13 worked on the Sunbeam transaction and directed
14 them to send me all of their hard copy and
15 printouts of all their electronic documents,
16 including e-mail, anything that would be on
17 their PC's.

18 Q. Okay, did you refer specifically to
19 any backup that they may have made from their
20 hard drives from that time period?

21 A. I directed them over and over, all
22 hard copy and all electronic files.

(Sept. 9, 2003 Plotnick Dep. at 54 (emphasis added) (Ex. 6).) Indeed, before the November 24, 2004 close of discovery, Morgan Stanley had produced over 9,400 pages of e-mail related to the Sunbeam transaction. (See May 14, 2004 K. DeBord Letter to M. Brody and Nov. 18, 2004 M.

Occhuizzo Letter to M. Brody (Ex. 7).) CPH, in contrast, has produced less than forty e-mails from its files.

Third, CPH is not entitled to a default judgment also is not justified because CPH has not shown — and cannot show — that there is any specific “missing evidence” that is essential to its prima facie case. Indeed, Florida courts have held that even an instruction for an adverse inference — a sanction far less serious than default — is not warranted unless the missing evidence is absolutely “necessary to prove a prima facie case.” Jordan v. Masters, 821 So. 2d 342, 347 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (a jury instruction for an adverse inference is not appropriate when nonmoving party has failed to produce nonessential evidence); see also Public Health Trust of Dade County v. Valcin, 507 So. 2d 596, 599 (Fla. 1987) (holding that to obtain an adverse inference, the plaintiff must “establish to the satisfaction of the court that the absence of the records hinders his ability to establish a prima facie case”).

Nonetheless, CPH would have this Court eliminate altogether the requirement that prejudice is a necessary condition of any default judgment. Not once in its written submission does CPH mention the prejudice requirement — let alone make any effort to demonstrate that the hypothetical missing evidence somehow “hinders [CPH’s] ability to establish a prima facie case.” Id. Nor could CPH make that showing given the size of the discovery record, which includes over eighty witness depositions, over 450,000 pages of documents and numerous additional CDs containing additional electronic information.

In any event, the claim of prejudice here is not supported by the record. As noted above, Morgan Stanley has already produced responsive e-mails from the files of the Brooklyn tapes and the “738 8-millimeter tapes.” Likewise, Morgan Stanley is reviewing whether there are any script errors remaining in its e-mail archive system. If there are, Morgan Stanley will re-run the agreed-upon searches against the entirety of the e-mail archive system and produce all remaining non-privileged responsive materials, if any exist. Further, Morgan Stanley has provided each of the “additional tapes” to a third-party vendor so that it can run searches independent of Morgan Stanley’s work. Consequently, CPH cannot realistically claim that it is somehow prejudiced when it either has already received responsive e-mails or will receive them as soon as they are available.

New York State National Organization for Women v. Cuomo, No. 93 Civ. 7146 (RLC) JCF, 1998 WL 395320 (S.D.N.Y. July 14, 1998) is analogous to the situation here. In that case, the plaintiff sought sanctions against New York’s governor for failing to preserve computer database evidence that included letters and reports, internal memoranda, monthly summary reports, and electronic mail. Although the Court determined that the Governor’s obligation to preserve evidence arose when the plaintiff filed its complaint, sanctions were not appropriate even though the computer database, including its e-mail, had been destroyed. Id. at *2. The Court explained that sanctions were not warranted because there was no evidence that defendants “deleted computer databases or destroyed monthly summary reports in order to impede [the] litigation.” Id. Moreover, the plaintiffs had not demonstrated “that they were prejudiced by the loss of the records.” Id. at *3. In fact, the plaintiffs had not identified “with any specificity what information they would have been reasonably likely to find.” Id. The Court refused to impose the requested sanctions because plaintiffs’ only prejudice in that case, as here, was that “the defendants’ conduct deprived them of a pond in which they would like to have gone on a fishing expedition.” Id.

IV. THE CASES RELIED ON BY CPH ARE READILY DISTINGUISHED AND DO NOT SUPPORT A DEFAULT

In the fourteen cases cited in CPH's motion, not one resembles the procedural posture of this case: a motion for default judgment after discovery has closed and after the plaintiff has prevailed on summary judgment. And, as noted above, in the few cases that have actually found default warranted, discovery had come to a virtual halt because of repeated failures to comply with court orders and no communication on the part of the defaulting party with the court or opposing party about the status of discovery requests. Discovery in this case, by contrast, was extensive and is now complete with the exception of e-mail backup tapes currently in the collection and production process.

CPH purports to cite three "cases whose fact patterns more closely resemble those at issue here." (Feb. 24, 2005 Plf's Mem. of Law in Supp. Of Its Pending Mot. To Strike Morgan Stanley's Answer at 3-4 (citing Precision Tune Auto Care, Inc. v. Radcliffe, 804 So. 2d 1287 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002); HZJ, Inc. v. Wysocki, 511 So. 2d 1088, 1089 (Fla. 3d DCA 1987); Weck v. Weck, 464 So. 2d 619 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985) (per curiam).) The comparison lacks all merit.

In Wysocki, the trial court order lacked any factual discussion and referred in the abstract to the defendant "thwarting the discovery process and this Court's Orders requiring the production of documentation and witnesses in this cause." 511 So. 2d at 1089. This thin opinion suggests at the very least that discovery had come to a halt in light of the defendant's willful failure to comply with specific court orders — a holding that would not justify default here. Similarly, in Weck, the entire opinion consists of nine lines of text, at least two of which are citations. There is no discussion of the underlying conduct at issue other than an off-hand reference to an "intentional delay and abuse of the system." 464 So. 2d at 618 (internal quotations & citation omitted). Once again, there is no basis whatever for inducing some connection between the facts of that case and this one. Furthermore, both Wysocki and Weck pre-date Tabero, in which the Supreme Court held that any default judgment must be based upon an explicit written finding of willful noncompliance. Neither opinion can survive that standard.

The final case, Precision Tune Auto Care, 807 So. 2d 1287, is more recent but equally inapposite. There, after the plaintiff had moved for sanctions on three separate occasions, the court ordered the defendant to produce three witnesses for deposition, set “an exact deadline,” and specifically admonished the defendant that if it did not comply its pleadings would be struck. Id. at 1291. The defendant did not produce the witnesses and “simply disregarded the order of trial court because it was inconvenient to the company’s officer.” Id. at 1291. As the Fourth District emphasized, no attempt was even made to contact opposing counsel to explain why witnesses could not appear; instead, the defendant and its attorney “had a cavalier attitude regarding the necessity to comply with the court’s order.” Id.

Here, by contrast, Morgan Stanley initiated this whole sequence of discovery hearings because it notified the plaintiff of the discovery of additional tapes that needed to be searched for e-mail, and then produced its corporate representative and its Information Technology employees to give testimony in Florida. Morgan Stanley is financing the expedited processing of all remaining backup tapes and has repeatedly expressed its willingness to work with CPH and the Court to set a reasonable “drop dead date” for ensuring that all remaining responsive e-mails, if any exist, are produced. There is no evidence that Morgan Stanley has refused to comply with the Court’s orders because they have been “inconvenient to the company’s officers.” Id. at 1291. Rather, Morgan Stanley has spent significant amounts of money and employee time to attempt to ensure compliance with the Court’s orders.

V. CPH'S OWN FAILURE TO RETAIN EVIDENCE AND ITS OWN DISCOVERY ABUSES PRECLUDE ENTERING A DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

CPH's request for a default judgment should also be denied because CPH has itself engaged in flagrant discovery abuses. See Fayemi v. Hambrecht & Quist, Inc., 174 F.R.D. 319, 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (employer disqualified under unclean hands doctrine from obtain sanctions because he had himself acted "unconscionabl[y]"). As courts have long recognized, a court "considering sanctions can and should consider the equities involved before rendering a decision." Schlaifer Nuance & Co., v. Estate of Warhol, 194 F.3d 323, 341 (2d Cir. 1999).

Here, by its own admission, CPH has never enacted or enforced a document retention policy to prevent the destruction of relevant documents, including e-mails. (Sept. 15, 2003 Fasman Dep. at 31 (Ex. 5).) When CPH undertook its first document collection related to the Sunbeam matter in 1999 or 2000, it did not search its electronic servers for documents, nor did it instruct employees who provided documents to provide electronic documents. (Id. at 84-85, 96, 107-08.) Indeed, even after CPH threatened Sunbeam with a lawsuit, even after its executives became named parties to litigation related to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, even after it sued Arthur Andersen, and even after the onset of litigation in the present case, CPH continued to override its backup tapes. (Id. at 31, 49, 63; MS 1 (Ex. 8).)

Unlike Morgan Stanley, CPH systematically and intentionally destroyed all of its e-mail tapes related to the Sunbeam acquisition in the face of threatened and pending litigation. It is fundamentally unfair to impose outcome-determinative sanctions on Morgan Stanley — when Morgan Stanley has gone to unprecedented lengths to locate, upload, and produce thousands of pages of e-mails in this case — when CPH, through identical conduct, has deprived Morgan Stanley of all e-mail evidence relating to what its executives and employees knew and what they did.

Moreover, CPH — not Morgan Stanley — is the party who has been shown to have deliberately withheld “smoking gun” documents that require re-opening of fact and expert discovery. (Feb. 17, 2005 Order on MS’s Mot. to Compel Prod. of Docs.) Despite Morgan Stanley’s efforts to pursue such discovery for over a year and a half, CPH withheld its internal valuations which seriously undercut CPH’s claimed damages and expose that CPH is seeking a windfall of hundreds of millions of dollars more than what it actually believed that it lost prior to filing this lawsuit. (See Feb. 23, 2005 Morgan Stanley’s Motion for Additional Discovery Regarding MAFCO’s Internal Valuation of Sunbeam Stock.) Even more troubling, the documents revealed for the first time that CPH’s representatives misrepresented the value of the warrants it received as a result of the Sunbeam settlement by tens of millions of dollars, stated under oath that CPH had not performed any valuation at their issuance date when CPH had done such a valuation, and then attempted to conceal the valuation by redacting portions of the documents once the Court ordered them produced. (See Feb. 22, 2005 Morgan Stanley’s Motion for Sanctions and Additional Discovery Concerning Plaintiffs’ Improper Concealment of the Value of the Sunbeam Warrant.) For these reasons, even if CPH had met the requirements under Florida law for the extraordinary sanction of default judgment, which it has not, its own “unclean hands” make such a sanction unfair and inappropriate in this case.

WHEREFORE, CPH has failed to carry its burden of showing willful disobedience of this Court's orders, deliberate and malicious destruction of evidence relating to this case, or any evidence of prejudice beyond monetary sanctions, which the Court has already imposed. Therefore, CPH's motion for default judgment should be denied.

14 THE COURT: I understand the point. We'll

16 MR. SCAROLA: I have edited as follows.

17 THE COURT: Go ahead.

18 MR. SCAROLA: "Morgan Stanley presented a

23 THE COURT: Can you change it "...did not

1 the problem is, to make it clear to the jury --
2 well, frankly, I don't know whether they knew
3 they had e-mail or not when the declaration was

5 MR. SOLOVY: I don't know why we have to be

8 MS. BEYNON: Your Honor, it's undisputed in
9 the record that the lawyers at Morgan Stanley
10 learned that e-mail was on these tapes in
11 October 2004. There's been no contrary evidence
12 to this. And to say as a fact they falsely

14 THE COURT: There's no contrary evidence,

16 about the tapes in June.

17 MS. BEYNON: They knew about the tapes in

JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN AND FOR
PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AJ

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Defendant.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S OPPOSITION
ON THE ISSUE OF ENTITLEMENT
TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S
AMENDED MOTION TO TAX APPELLATE COSTS FOR MAIN APPEAL, MOTION TO TAX APPELLATE COSTS RELATING TO COST APPEAL, AND
AMENDED MOTION TO TAX TRIAL COSTS

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, respectfully submits this combined opposition, on the issue of entitlement, to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's

- (1) Amended Motion to Tax Appellate Costs for Main Appeal ("Main-Appeal Motion");
- (2) Motion to Tax Appellate Costs Relating to Cost Appeal ("Costs-Appeal Motion"); and
- (3) Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs ("Trial-Costs Motion").

In this case, CPH sued Morgan Stanley for the damage CPH sustained due to Morgan Stanley's participation in the largest stock fraud in Florida history. The trial court found that during the pretrial phase of the litigation Morgan Stanley "deliberately and contumaciously" disobeyed Court orders, made false statements to the Court and to CPH, coached witnesses to mislead the Court, and caused CPH incurable prejudice. 3/23/05 Remedial Order at 16; see also 3/2/05 Remedial Order. CPH nonetheless prevailed at trial. On appeal, the Fourth District reversed the judgment based on a damages issue, but left undisturbed all of the trial court's litigation-misconduct findings. As more fully explained in CPH's verified Rule 1.540(b) motion (filed March 25, 2008), Morgan Stanley has admitted that it engaged in serious misconduct — misconduct that was not known at the time of trial and that has not been addressed previously by any court. Nevertheless, Morgan Stanley has filed three motions seeking more than $11 million in costs from CPH, the established victim of both Morgan Stanley's fraud and its egregious litigation misconduct. CPH respectfully submits that these motions should not be granted.

First, the Court should defer ruling on Morgan Stanley's entitlement to costs until after it rules on CPH's pending Rule 1.540(b) motion — a motion that calls into question Morgan Stanley's right to any judgment in its favor. If this Court grants CPH's motion, there will be a new trial at which, we believe, CPH will prevail. Then CPH, not Morgan Stanley, will be entitled to costs. See infra Part I.

Second, in the event the Court chooses not to defer ruling on the entitlement issue, the Court should exercise its discretion to deny Morgan Stanley's requests for costs. The Court has discretion to determine whether Morgan Stanley is entitled to its claimed costs (as well as to determine the proper amount of any such costs). The equities in this case militate strongly against an award of these extraordinary amounts to a party that admittedly has engaged in extensive and gross misconduct. Contrary to Morgan Stanley's assertions, this Court is permitted to take such equitable considerations into account, and to exercise its discretion to strike Morgan Stanley's multi-million-dollar request for costs. See infra Part II.

Consistent with this Court's March 31, 2008 Scheduling Order, CPH is addressing only Morgan Stanley's lack of entitlement to costs. CPH does not, of course, waive any argument as to the amount of Morgan Stanley's claimed costs, including challenges to specific items or categories of costs. Nor is CPH waiving its rights to discovery and an evidentiary hearing in the event that this Court rules that Morgan Stanley is entitled to some costs. See infra Part III.

ARGUMENT

I. This Court Should Defer Ruling on Morgan Stanley's Entitlement to Costs.

CPH respectfully suggests that the Court should defer any ruling on Morgan Stanley's entitlement to costs until CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion has been decided. See CPH's Verified Rule 1.540(b) Motion. In the event that CPH ultimately prevails, CPH, rather than Morgan Stanley, will be entitled to its costs, and this Court will have spent a substantial amount of time and effort deciding questions that have become moot.

Trial costs are awarded to the party that ultimately prevails in the case. See Mulato v. Mulato, 734 So. 2d 477, 478 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (“[W]here the judgment on which a cost judgment is predicated is reversed, the original cost judgment also cannot stand.”); Fraser-Watson v. Maxim Healthcare Servs., 849 So. 2d 1201, 1201 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003); Higgs v. Klock, 873 So. 2d 591, 592 (Fla. 3d DCA 2004) (“determination of entitlement to costs must await final judgment”) (citing Lake Region Paradise Island, Inc. v. Graviss, 323 So. 2d 610, 612 (Fla. 2d DCA 1975)).

At present, it is not known whether Morgan Stanley will ultimately prevail. If this Court grants CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion and CPH prevails in a new trial, then Morgan Stanley will not be entitled to its costs. There is thus no reason to award Morgan Stanley those costs now.

The result is no different for appellate costs. Appellate costs are ordinarily awarded to the party that prevails on appeal, regardless of whether that party ultimately prevails in the case. See, e.g., Stringer v. Katzell, 695 So. 2d 369, 369-70 (Fla. 4th DCA 1997). But Morgan Stanley's status as “prevailing party” at the appellate level is premised on the egregious fraud that it perpetrated on the Court and on CPH. If the trial court had known the full extent of that misconduct and had entered a sanction corresponding to the magnitude of Morgan Stanley's litigation fraud, the whole basis for Morgan Stanley's appeal would have been eliminated. That is so because a sanction commensurate with Morgan Stanley's bad acts would have required more than "leveling the playing field" and likely would have included a default on the fact of damage and a determination that Morgan Stanley bore the burden to prove "negative causation" — i.e., that some factors other than the securities fraud caused CPH's Sunbeam stock to decline in value. See CPH's Verified Rule 1.540(b) Motion at 40-45 (discussing these options in greater detail). Moreover, the Court might well have entered contempt sanctions, which Morgan Stanley would have had to purge before pursuing an appeal. See id. at 24-25 n.3 (citing cases).

Morgan Stanley should not be permitted to obtain appellate costs if this Court ultimately determines that the judgment was procured by fraud. In any event, there is no need to decide these issues now, when subsequent developments in connection with CPH's Rule 1.540(b) motion may render a present disposition moot.

II. Morgan Stanley Is Not Entitled to Recover Costs After Conspiring to Commit a Massive Securities Fraud and Then Engaging in Egregious Litigation Misconduct to Cover up the Conspiracy.

If the Court decides to reach the entitlement issue now, it should deny Morgan Stanley's motions for costs for two compelling reasons — one relating to Morgan Stanley's securities fraud, the other to Morgan Stanley's fraud on the Court.

First, Morgan Stanley obtained a judgment in its favor solely because CPH failed to prove the amount of damages under the methodology ultimately articulated by the Fourth District. The jury's determination that Morgan Stanley conspired to commit a massive securities fraud in connection with Sunbeam Corporation's purchase of CPH's interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. remains undisturbed.

The circumstances here are far more egregious than those in USM Corp. v. SPS Technologies, Inc., 102 F.R.D. 167 (N.D. Ill. 1984), a federal case in which costs were denied altogether. In that case, the appellate court declined to review the trial court's finding that the defendant had procured its patent by fraud; instead, the appellate court awarded the defendant a victory based on res judicata. The trial court explained that a prevailing party may be denied costs if it would be "inequitable under all the circumstances in the case to put the burden of costs upon the losing party," and found that awarding costs to the defendant would be inequitable given its fraud. Id. at 172 (quoting Lichter Found., Inc. v. Welch, 269 F.2d 142, 146 (6th Cir. 1959)). Here, too, the findings of Morgan Stanley's involvement in a massive fraud were not overturned, and a result similar to that in USM Corp. is therefore warranted.

Second, to cover up its role in the Sunbeam fraud, Morgan Stanley engaged in egregious litigation misconduct in this case, including violating multiple Court orders, abusing the discovery process, and repeatedly lying to the Court. See 3/23/05 Remedial Order (recounting Morgan Stanley's violations); 3/2/05 Remedial Order (same). That misconduct continued even after the trial court's March 2005 remedial decisions, as CPH's verified Rule 1.540(b) motion extensively details. See id. While CPH is aware of no Florida decision specifying the effect of litigation misconduct on a request for costs, federal courts have found that far less serious litigation misconduct has justified denying or reducing costs, or even awarding costs against the prevailing party.

For example, in Remington Products, Inc. v. North American Philips Corp., 763 F. Supp. 683 (D. Conn. 1991), the court denied costs to the prevailing party because that party, acting in bad faith, initially had refused to provide discovery. The court explained that “[t]he presumption in favor of awarding costs to the prevailing party can . . . be overcome by a showing of bad faith or misconduct during the litigation.” Id. at 687-88. Similarly, in McFarland v. Gregory, 425 F.2d 443 (2d Cir. 1970), the Second Circuit upheld an order denying costs to the prevailing defendant where the trial court concluded that the defense had been conducted “in the tradition of old fashioned total warfare.” Id. at 449. In Sheets v. Yamaha Motors Corp., U.S.A., 891 F.2d 533 (5th Cir. 1990), the Fifth Circuit upheld an order taxing costs against the prevailing defendants where, among other things, the defendants “unjustifiably refused to produce documents” in violation of an order to compel and made false statements to the trial court. Id. at 539-40. And in Thompson v. Sun Oil Co., 523 F.2d 647 (8th Cir. 1975), the Eighth Circuit upheld an order taxing appellate costs against the prevailing defendant because the defendant was “evasive throughout the discovery process.” Id. at 650 & n.4.

Morgan Stanley claims, however, that under Florida law the taxation of costs is automatic, mandatory, and nondiscretionary. See, e.g., Costs-Appeal Motion at 3. That is incorrect. Although the cases cited above did not emanate from Florida, their outcomes comport with the Florida courts’ long-standing recognition that judicial discretion must play a central role in deciding whether certain appellate and trial costs are taxable.

The Fourth District has emphasized that the trial court must exercise discretion and consider “a myriad of factors” when determining the costs to be taxed under Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.400(a). Am. Med. Int’l, Inc. v. Scheller, 484 So. 2d 593, 594 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985); see also Fla. Power & Light Co. v. Polackwich, 705 So. 2d 23, 25 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997) (“trial court’s decision on issues involved in a motion to tax appellate costs is largely discretionary”); Lone Star Indus., Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 688 So. 2d 950, 952 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (“trial courts are vested with discretion to award certain enumerated appellate costs such as bond premiums to the prevailing party on appeal”). Accordingly, Morgan Stanley errs in asserting that it is “‘automatically entitled’ to an award of its appellate costs.” Costs-Appeal Motion at 3 (citation omitted).¹

The Fourth District likewise has recognized trial courts’ discretion in taxing trial costs. See, e.g., Nasser v. Nasser, 975 So. 2d 531, 532 (Fla. 4th DCA 2008) (noting trial court’s discretion to deny costs not “reasonably necessary to defend the case”); Wyatt v. Milner Document Prods., Inc., 932 So. 2d 487, 489 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006) (“A trial court’s ruling on a motion to tax costs is reviewed for abuse of discretion.”); Deleuw, Cather & Co. v. Grogis, 655 So. 2d 240, 241 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995) (noting “the well-established principle that the taxation of costs is ‘traditionally within the discretion of the trial court’”) (quoting del Real v. Dawson, 320 So. 2d 20, 21 (Fla. 4th DCA 1975)); Thomas v. Sports Car Club of Am., Inc., 386 So. 2d 272, 274 (Fla. 4th DCA 1980) (finding no abuse of discretion in trial court’s ruling on motion to tax costs); see also In re Amendments to Uniform Guidelines for Taxation of Costs, 915 So. 2d 612, 614 (Fla. 2005) (“the appropriate assessment of costs in any particular proceeding remains within the discretion of the trial court”). Hence, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s assertions, there is nothing mandatory or automatic about an award of any particular claimed category of trial costs.²

¹ Morgan Stanley bases this contention on Schoettle v. Department of Administration, 522 So. 2d 962, 962 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988), and Di Teodoro v. Lazy Dolphin Development Co., 432 So. 2d 625, 626 (Fla. 3d DCA 1983). But Morgan Stanley’s reliance on these two cases is misplaced, because neither one addressed a trial court’s discretion to determine whether certain costs appropriately could be taxed under Rule 9.400(a). Indeed, the case law clearly demonstrates that not all costs that may appear to fall within the ambit of Rule 9.400(a) are recoverable. See, e.g., Rehman v. ECC Int’l Corp., 707 So. 2d 752, 753 (Fla. 5th DCA 1998) (interest that appellant lost in connection with the cash bond that he posted on appeal was not a taxable cost).

² The cases on which Morgan Stanley relies, see Trial-Costs Motion at 3-4, are not to the contrary. For instance, in Oriental Imports, Inc. v. Alilin, 559 So. 2d 442 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990), the Fifth District ruled that it is the task of the trial court to determine “the amount and type of

The fundamental principle embodied in these Florida cases — that the taxation of costs always implicates a trial court’s discretion — strongly suggests that this Court should reject Morgan Stanley’s alleged entitlement to automatic and immediate taxation of costs. Like the federal cases, the Florida cases are grounded in the same principle of judicial discretion that informs Florida’s case law on taxation of costs.

Morgan Stanley’s repeated violations of Court orders, discovery abuses, and lies to this Court dwarf the misconduct involved in those cases in which the trial courts denied costs to the prevailing parties. This Court, too, should deny Morgan Stanley the costs it seeks. No other result would fairly take account of Morgan Stanley’s role as a co-conspirator in the massive Sunbeam fraud, as well as the fraud it perpetrated on the Court to cover up that role.

III. CPH Reserves Its Rights to Challenge Specific Costs Claimed by Morgan Stanley.

Morgan Stanley’s three motions, as well as the attached exhibits, are largely devoted to summaries of specific claimed costs, which total more than $11 million. Pursuant to this Court’s March 31, 2008 Scheduling Order, CPH reserves its right to address all these specific costs at an appropriate time. Even a cursory glance at Morgan Stanley’s filings, however, shows that there will be numerous issues relating to the amount of costs, including whether certain categories of costs are taxable under the relevant Florida statutes or rules and whether various items that Morgan Stanley lists were reasonable and necessary to the resolution of this case. In any event, costs that are appropriate for the action in which they were incurred.” Id. at 443. Likewise, in Weitzer Oak Park Estate, Ltd. v. Petto, 573 So. 2d 990 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991), the Third District instructed a trial court to “carefully scrutinize the costs incurred [by a prevailing party] before entering an appropriate cost award.” Id. at 991. In both Connell v. City of Plantation, 901 So. 2d 317 (Fla. 4th DCA 2005), and Warren Hunnicutt, Jr., Inc. v. Gleason, 462 So. 2d 878 (Fla. 2d DCA 1985), the appellate courts remanded the cases to the trial courts to determine appropriate cost awards in the exercise of their discretion.

as paragraph 6 of this Court's Scheduling Order suggests, none of these costs could properly be taxed without first conducting discovery and an evidentiary hearing.

CONCLUSION

CPH respectfully suggests that the Court defer ruling on the issue of Morgan Stanley's entitlement to costs until the Court has resolved CPH's pending Rule 1.540(b) motion. In the alternative, Morgan Stanley's motions should be denied outright.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: 2003 CA-005045 AJ

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S
REPLY TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S OPPOSITION ON THE ISSUE
OF ENTITLEMENT TO MORGAN STANLEY'S AMENDED MOTION TO TAX
APPELLATE COSTS FOR MAIN APPEAL, MOTION TO TAX APPELLATE COSTS
RELATING TO COST APPEAL, AND AMENDED MOTION TO TAX TRIAL COSTS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") respectfully submits this reply to Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") opposition to Morgan Stanley's motions for trial and appellate costs.

INTRODUCTION

CPH argues it would be inequitable for Morgan Stanley to recover its trial and appellate costs, complaining of pretrial discovery misconduct that was previously sanctioned by Judge Maass. In a rush of accusations, CPH disregards the Florida authorities holding that purported equitable setoffs and adjustments to an award of costs are not available and that Morgan Stanley is clearly entitled to an award of its taxable trial and appellate costs. The Court should reject CPH's request to delay proceedings relating to Morgan Stanley's cost motions, order that Morgan Stanley is entitled to its trial and appellate costs, and require CPH to specifically identify those costs that it is challenging as not taxable or unreasonable under the Florida rules.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In opposing the standard taxation of prevailing party costs, CPH again reaches back to discovery misconduct before trial. Not only was Morgan Stanley sanctioned monetarily for discovery violations, the imposed default sanctions had a profound impact on Morgan Stanley's defense at trial and gave CPH an immense advantage in prosecuting its case. Even with the sanctions, however, CPH was obligated to present competent evidence establishing the amount of its own damages. CPH failed to do so. See Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124, 1127 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007).

In addition to the damages issue that Morgan Stanley asserted on appeal, Morgan Stanley also argued that the sanctions entered by the trial court were too severe. The Fourth District determined that it did not need to reach the sanctions issues because Morgan Stanley was entitled to judgment in its favor since CPH failed to prove an essential element of its claim. Now, CPH claims that Morgan Stanley's costs should be denied based on misconduct that was supposedly not known at the time of trial and that has not been addressed by any court. (CPH Opp. at 2). That is simply wrong.

CPH's argument, like its Rule 1.540(b) motion, rests on discovery conduct that served as the basis for drastic sanctions already imposed against Morgan Stanley. Indeed, Judge Maass declared that the June 2005 notice, which CPH offers here for much of its argument, did not appear to contain anything that she had not already found in her orders. (6/20/05 Tr. at 15778:14-15779:4). Nor does the alleged discovery misconduct have anything to do with CPH's failure to prove its own damages. CPH's pending Rule 1.540(b) motion does not change the fact of the Fourth District's mandates in the main appeal or the cost appeal, and the 1.540(b) motion cannot override the duties imposed by the mandates.

In compliance with the main appeal mandate, final judgment in Morgan Stanley's favor has now been entered by this Court. CPH argues that it is not known whether that final judgment will be vacated or reversed via its 1.540(b) motion. But future proceedings cannot alter present obligations. A prevailing party is entitled to recover its costs based upon the judgment that has been entered. CPH's own trial cost judgment, which it obtained at the conclusion of the trial, has now been vacated by the Fourth District. Now Morgan Stanley is the prevailing party in both the trial court and the appellate court. Therefore, it is entitled under Florida law to an award of its appellate and trial costs.

ARGUMENT

I. This Court Should Not Defer Ruling on Morgan Stanley's Entitlement to Costs.

CPH asks the Court to defer any ruling on appellate or trial costs until it rules on CPH's pending 1.540(b) motion. The invitation to defer taxation of costs to the prevailing party should be declined.

Morgan Stanley's claim for appellate costs is primarily made up of over nine million dollars ($9,000,000.00) in bond premiums and other bond costs that Morgan Stanley incurred because CPH insisted upon a supersedeas bond. There is no reason to delay a determination of Morgan Stanley's entitlement to the clearly reasonable appellate costs. CPH concedes that the Fourth District has held that appellate costs are awarded to the party that prevails in the appellate proceeding, regardless of whether the party ultimately prevails after the completion of all litigation. (CPH Opp. at 3, citing Stringer v. Katzell, 695 So. 2d 369, 369-70 (Fla. 4th DCA 1997)). So the appellate cost recovery is undeniable.

CPH fails to note the holdings from each of Florida's other district courts of appeal that have rejected CPH's contentions. For example, in Centennial Mortgage, Inc. v. SG/SC, Ltd., 864

So. 2d 1258, 1260 (Fla. 1st DCA 2004), that Court specifically stated: “[t]he case law construing Rule 9.400 persuades us that an award of costs after a successful appeal may not be conditioned upon the ultimate outcome of the case.” It continued: “[t]he prevailing party in an appeal is entitled to then recover his cost judgment and enjoy an immediate writ of execution.” Id. (internal quotes and citation omitted). The Court held: “Rule 9.400 contains no provision for equitable setoff or adjustment after a case is concluded, and the case law construing the rule uniformly defines ‘prevailing party’ as the party who prevailed on the appeal, not in the underlying case.” Id. at 1261.¹ CPH fails to provide any contrary Florida authority indicating that an award of appellate costs should await the results of a later filed 1.540(b) motion. Since Morgan Stanley was unquestionably the prevailing party on appeal, it is entitled to immediate award of its taxable appellate costs.

The same is true of trial court costs. Florida Statutes section 57.041 is mandatory in providing that “[t]he party recovering judgment shall recover all his or her legal costs and charges” (emphasis added). “This provision requires the trial court to award costs to the prevailing party.” Connell v. City of Plantation, 901 So. 2d 317, 320 (Fla. 4th DCA 2005). See also Weitzer Oak Park Estate, Ltd. v. Petto, 573 So. 2d 990, 991 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991) (“[E]very party who recovers a judgment in a legal proceeding is entitled as a matter of right to recover lawful court costs, and a trial judge has no discretion to deny costs to the parties recovering judgment.").

CPH does not seriously dispute those authorities (or the other authorities cited in Morgan Stanley's motion on these points); instead, CPH notes that these cases also allow the trial court some discretion to determine the reasonable amount of costs. (CPH Opp. at 7, n.1 & 2). But the only issue now before the Court is entitlement to costs, not the amount of costs.

In opposing Morgan Stanley's entitlement to its prevailing party costs, CPH also relies on cases stating that the party entitled to costs is the one that ultimately prevails in the case and that a cost judgment must be reversed if the judgment on which it is predicated is reversed. Those cases do not aid CPH because here, based upon the Fourth District's mandates, a final judgment has been entered in favor of Morgan Stanley; a judgment that has not been reversed or vacated. CPH has not offered a single case stating that a party with a final judgment in its favor needs to wait for resolution of a Rule 1.540(b) motion before it is entitled to an award of its taxable trial costs.

CPH did not defer recovery of its own trial costs while Morgan Stanley appealed to the Fourth District. Instead, CPH demanded, and obtained, a cost judgment in its favor, forcing Morgan Stanley to incur costs to separately appeal and separately post a supersedeas bond for that cost judgment. When CPH's own costs were at issue, counsel for CPH took the same position that Morgan Stanley takes here: "As the party recovering judgment under the statute, we are entitled to a recovery of costs." (11/22/05 Tr. at 4). Just as CPH was entitled to trial costs then, Morgan Stanley has the same entitlement, now that it is the party recovering judgment under Florida Statute section 57.041.

II. Morgan Stanley is Entitled to Its Appellate and Trial Costs Based Upon the Binding Mandates of the Fourth District Court of Appeal.

Seeking to avoid Morgan Stanley's clear entitlement to its appellate and trial costs, CPH relies almost exclusively on federal cases decided under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d). Those cases hold, unlike Florida authorities based on a different rule, that the decision of whether a party is entitled to prevailing party costs is discretionary. Those federal decisions are the product of the language of Rule 54(d), which states that "costs shall be allowed as of course to the prevailing party unless the court otherwise directs." See e.g., USM Corp. v. SPS Technologies, 102 F.R.D. 167, 172 (D.C. Ill. 1984) (quoting that portion of the rule).

Florida's trial cost statute, section 57.041, has no qualifier with regard to entitlement to trial costs. Although Appellate Rule 9.400(a) has similar language, Florida courts have held that does not give the trial court discretion to negate a prevailing party's entitlement to an award of its appellate costs. The Fourth District has specifically held that "the court" referenced in Rule 9.400(a) is the appellate court -- in this situation the Fourth District itself -- not the trial court. American Medical International, Inc. v. Scheller, 484 So. 2d 593, 594 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985).

The Fourth District entered no order in this case limiting the amount of appellate costs that Morgan Stanley may recover. Nor did CPH ever ask the Fourth District to do so. The time for CPH to challenge Morgan Stanley's entitlement to appellate costs was prior to entry of the Fourth District's mandate. See Polackwich, 705 So. 2d at 25 n. 1. (noting failure of party, who received an unfavorable outcome on appeal, to file motion for rehearing with district court requesting deferral of taxation of costs.). Having failed to do so, CPH has waived any challenge to Morgan Stanley's entitlement to such costs.

Contrary to CPH's attempt to recast Morgan Stanley's arguments, Morgan Stanley is not suggesting that this Court has no discretion in the matter of costs. Obviously, this Court may utilize its discretion to make findings as to a reasonable amount of costs, and Morgan Stanley does not quarrel with CPH's citation to generic Florida cases describing a trial court's discretion to determine the amount of fees or costs.² But both section 57.041 and Rule 9.400(a) clearly mandate that Morgan Stanley is entitled to an award of its reasonable trial and appellate costs. See Oriental Imports, Inc. v. Alilin, 559 So. 2d 442, 442 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990) (“[t]he determination of the amount and type of costs that are appropriate . . . is the task of the trial court rather than the initial determination of whether the successful litigant is entitled to costs.”) (emphasis in original); American Medical, 484 So. 2d at 595 (holding that trial court may not disregard categories of costs set forth in Rule 9.400, but still retains discretion on the reasonable amount of such costs based upon competent evidence in the record).

III. CPH Should Identify Those Costs It Is Challenging And Agree to Those Costs It Is Not Challenging.

CPH should be required to identify for Morgan Stanley and the Court what specific costs, if any, it is challenging as not taxable under Florida law. There is no reason to delay. CPH cannot seriously argue that some costs, such as the bond premiums and bond costs (for a bond specifically required by CPH), were not reasonably incurred, especially when that category of cost is specifically allowed by Rule 9.400(a). If the parties can resolve those disputed costs now, they should. Otherwise, after the presentation of evidence and an evidentiary hearing, this Court should decide the amount of reasonable taxable costs and award them.

² Since the Fourth District issued its mandate requiring that this Court enter a final judgment in Morgan Stanley's favor, this case does not involve the need for the trial court to determine what party was the “prevailing party” after a mixed result at trial or on appeal. Compare Polackwich, 705 So. 2d at 25 (recognizing trial court's discretion to determine prevailing party where each party filed a notice of appeal and prevailed on significant issues in that appeal). Morgan Stanley unequivocally prevailed on appeal and has now prevailed in this Court based on the Fourth District's mandate.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court enter an order finding that Morgan Stanley is entitled to an award of its trial court and appellate costs, with the amount of those costs to be determined at a subsequent hearing.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S VERIFIED POST-HEARING BRIEF
IN SUPPORT OF ITS
VERIFIED MOTION TO VACATE THE JUDGMENT

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully submits this verified post-hearing brief to clarify and supplement its answers to certain questions that the Court raised at the May 22, 2008 hearing on CPH's verified Rule 1.540(b) motion to set aside the judgment.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FRAUD ON THE COURT

1. Intrinsic and Extrinsic Fraud: Under Parker v. Parker, 950 So. 2d 388 (Fla. 2007), and DeClaire v. Yohanan, 453 So. 2d 375 (Fla. 1984), is CPH alleging an "intrinsic" fraud or an "extrinsic" fraud? What is the significance of that distinction? See Transcript of May 22, 2008 Hearing at 28, 45-46, 56-57, 92-93 [hereinafter "Tr."], attached as Ex. A.

CPH has alleged both an "intrinsic fraud," which "pertains to the issues in the case that have been tried or could have been tried," DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 377, and an "extrinsic fraud," which is a "fraud on the court" that "'interfere[d] with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate'" this case and to properly calibrate the sanctions for Morgan Stanley's litigation wrongdoing, Andrews v. Palmas De Majorca Condo., 898 So. 2d 1066, 1069 (Fla. 5th DCA 2005).

Morgan Stanley has conceded for purposes of this motion that it committed fraud on the Court. Tr. 73, 78, 92. Thus, CPH need not further allege (or prove) “prejudice,” that is, that the fraud affected the judgment. CPH’s motion and reply brief cited five federal cases holding that no showing of prejudice is required in order to set aside a judgment for fraud on the court. Morgan Stanley cited no case to the contrary.¹ And the federal cases CPH has cited are authoritative here because the Florida Supreme Court looks to federal decisions to “harmonize our rules with the federal rules.” Gleneagle Ship Mgmt. Co. v. Leondakos, 602 So. 2d 1282, 1283-84 (Fla. 1992) (citations omitted); see, e.g., DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 377 (noting that Florida Rule 1.540(b) is substantially identical to Federal Rule 60(b), and therefore relying on federal cases interpreting the latter rule).

2. Flemenbaum: Under Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d 579 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994), isn’t CPH required to “explain why the fraud, if it exists, would entitle [CPH] to have the judgment set aside”? See Tr. 26-27, 56-57, 92-93.

Flemenbaum is not a case about fraud on the court. Although captioned as a “pro se motion for new trial based upon fraud upon the court Rule 1.540,” the husband’s motion merely alleged an intrinsic fraud — his wife had lied about her “cohabitation with another.” 636 So. 2d at 580. CPH has established, and Morgan Stanley does not contest, that the type of fraud at issue here is fraud on the court. Accordingly, CPH has established its colorable entitlement to relief from the judgment. Flemenbaum does not say otherwise.

The day before this Court's May 22 hearing, the Third District cited Flemenbaum in a case that supports CPH's request for discovery and an evidentiary hearing. In Hinson v. Hinson, ___ So. 2d ___, No. 3D07-2586 (Fla. 3d DCA May 21, 2008), the Third District reversed the trial court's decision not to hold an evidentiary hearing on a motion for relief from judgment alleging fraud, after stating that "fraud allegations are ordinarily not suitable for summary disposition because determining fraud generally requires a full explanation of the facts and circumstances of the alleged wrong." Slip Op. at 3.

QUESTIONS ABOUT ACTUAL PREJUDICE

- Total Default on Liability: If the trial court had granted CPH's Rule 1.380(b)(2)(C) motion for a total default on liability but had not shifted the burden of proof on damages, and CPH's expert had then used the same incorrect measure of damages, wouldn't the Fourth District have reached the exact same result — directing entry of judgment for Morgan Stanley? See Tr. 28, 53-56.

No. Under that scenario, the Fourth District would have remanded for a new trial where CPH could have presented expert testimony calculating the amount of compensatory damages using the correct method. And the Fourth District also would have allowed CPH to pursue punitive damages.

Retrial on Compensatory Damages: By definition, a total default on liability would have included a default as to every essential element of liability, including the "fact of damage"

(which is distinct from the “amount of compensatory damages”²), and therefore would have required a retrial applying the correct measure of damages. A total default on liability “admits . . . the plaintiff’s right to recover on the cause of action.” Talucci v. Matthews, 960 So. 2d 9, 10 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007) (citing Watson v. Seat, 8 Fla. 446 (1859)). Therefore, the Florida Supreme Court has required a new trial on damages where the finding of liability is affirmed but the trial court’s judgment is reversed because the plaintiff used an incorrect measure of damages. See, e.g., Allied Van Lines, Inc. v. Bratton, 351 So. 2d 344, 348 (Fla. 1977); see also Ballard & Ballard v. Pelala, 73 So. 2d 840, 842 (Fla. 1954). The district courts likewise have remanded for a new trial where the trial court had properly found liability but had erred as to the measure of damages. See, e.g., City of Key West v. Duck Tours Seafari, Inc., 972 So. 2d 901, 903 (Fla. 3d DCA 2007); Levitt-Ansca Towne Park Partnership v. Smith & Co., 873 So. 2d 392, 397 (Fla. 4th DCA 2004); Nystrom v. Cabada, 652 So. 2d 1266, 1268 (Fla. 2d DCA 1995).

Morgan Stanley has now flatly contradicted itself on this issue. At the May 22 hearing before this Court, Morgan Stanley said that “even if the ultimate sanction [of a total default on liability] was given,” there could be no retrial because CPH “still had to go on and prove . . . the fact of damage.” Tr. 86. In making that argument to this Court, Morgan Stanley took the position that a total default on liability would not have included the fact of damage. Previously, however, Morgan Stanley had argued to the Supreme Court that the fact of damage was an essential element of liability. Morgan Stanley argued that CPH was not entitled to a new trial because it had failed to prove “damage,” which it called “an essential element” of CPH’s fraud claim, and thus Morgan Stanley had “no liability for fraud.” CPH App. 32 at 1-2 (citations omitted); see id. at 7. And Morgan Stanley similarly argued to the Fourth District that CPH should be denied a retrial precisely because it had failed “to prove actual damages,” an “essential element” of CPH’s fraud claim. CPH App. 31 at 6, 11. Morgan Stanley cannot have it both ways.

² Black-letter tort law distinguishes between the fact of damage (singular) and the specific quantum, or amount, of damages (plural). See American Stevedores, Inc. v. Porello, 330 U.S. 446, 450 n.6 (1947). The former term speaks to liability, the latter to remedy. The fact of damage — the fact that plaintiff suffered some (perhaps unquantified) injury or loss — is an essential element of a fraud claim. See Johnson v. Davis, 480 So. 2d 625, 627 (Fla. 1985); Lance v. Wade, 457 So. 2d 1008, 1011 (Fla. 1984). But the quantum of damages — that is, the specific sum required to compensate plaintiff for its injury — is not an element of a fraud claim.

Punitive Damages: The trial court’s entry of a total default on liability also would have required the Fourth District to affirm the punitive-damages award even if it had reversed the compensatory award. In Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989), the Supreme Court held that the necessary prerequisite for punitive damages is not an award of compensatory or nominal damages, but rather a “finding of liability.” Id. at 454-56. The Fourth District distinguished Ault on the ground that CPH’s failure either to obtain a total default on liability or properly to prove the amount of compensatory damages was tantamount to a failure to prove the “fact of damage” and thus a failure to establish liability. If the trial court had entered a default as to all elements of liability, including the “fact of damage,” Ault would control, and CPH could recover punitive damages. See, e.g., Russin v. Richard F. Greminger, P.A., 563 So. 2d 1089, 1089 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (finding liability and affirming punitive damages without compensatory damages).

4. Shifting the Burden of Proof on Damages: What is the legal authority for a trial court to alter the burden of proof and require Morgan Stanley to prove negative causation? See Tr. 67-70.

Under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.380(b)(2), sanctions for willful litigation misconduct can extend beyond the liability phase of a proceeding and into the remedial phase. See, e.g., Delta Info. Servs., Inc. v. Joseph R. Jannach M.D. & Assocs., 569 So. 2d 1353, 1354 n.4, 1355 (Fla. 3d DCA 1990) (barring certain damages evidence, as a sanction).

Requiring a defendant to prove “negative causation” — that is, to show that something other than fraud caused a decline in the value of the plaintiff’s stock — is not a novel idea, but one that is grounded in both Florida and federal securities law. See E.F. Hutton & Co. v. Rousseff, 537 So. 2d 978, 978-81 (Fla. 1989) (plaintiff not required to prove loss causation under FLA. STAT. §§ 517.211(4), 517.301); see also 15 U.S.C. § 77k(e); Akerman v. Oryx Communications, Inc., 810 F.2d 336, 340-43 (2d Cir. 1987); In re WorldCom, Inc. Sec. Litig., No. 02 Civ. 3288, 2005 WL 375314, at *5-*6 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 17, 2005). It would have been an appropriate additional sanction in this case.

CONCLUSION

CPH respectfully asks this Court to rule that CPH has raised a colorable entitlement to relief from the judgment.

Counsel for Defendant

Also present: Barry Schwartz
Steven Fasman

1 same law firm the law firm of Jenner and Block
2 is Mr. Sam Hirsch. And our corporate
3 representatives today are the same as those
4 introduced to you earlier. We have Mr. Steven
5 Fasman with us and also Mr. Schwartz.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

7 MR. ROGOW: Bruce Rogow and Joe Ianno for
8 Morgan Stanley.

9 THE COURT: Okay. How would counsel suggest
10 that the time be allocated in this three-hour
11 allotment of time for this hearing as between 12 the three matters that I've outlined, which were 13 set forth in the Court's April 9th order?

14 And I'll hear from both of you.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. Your Honor, I
16 think clearly the matter of most substance and 17 requiring the greatest attention on the part of 18 the Court is the matter with regard to the Rule
19 1.540(b) motion.

20 And my suggestion to Your Honor is that we 21 allocate a full two hours of the three-hour time
22 to that issue.

23 I really think that the matters with regard
24 to costs can be dealt with rather summarily.

25 We'll begin with a concession with regard to one

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Be seated.

3 We're here today pursuant to the Court's
4 order specially setting hearing dated April 9th,
5 2008 in the matter of Coleman Holdings, Inc.
6 versus Morgan Stanley and Company, Inc., case
7 number 2003 CA 005045. Three hours have been
8 reserved for the following matters. Defendant's
9 entitlement to trial and appellate fees and 10 costs. Whether Plaintiff's motion for new trial
11 is legally sufficient. And, if so, whether 12 plaintiff shall be permitted to conduct
13 discovery. And the scope of any discovery
14 regarding Plaintiff's motion for new trial. And 15 a status conference on Plaintiff's petition for 16 show cause order regarding Morgan Stanley's
17 criminal contempt of court.

18 So if I could please ask all counsel who are 19 here to state their appearance for the record.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Good afternoon, again, Your
21 Honor. Jack Scarola on behalf of the Plaintiff, 22 Coleman (Parent) Holding Company. With me at 23 counsel table are Mr. Gerald Solovy and Mr. Ron 24 Marmer. Also present in the courtroom from the

1 aspect of the cost motion. And I also think
2 that because we're only dealing with scheduling
3 issues with regard to the criminal contempt that 4 that can probably be handled rather quickly as 5 well.

6 My suggestion in terms of the order in which 7 these matters be taken is that because there are 8 many lawyers present in the courtroom who are 9 only here for purposes of the status conference
10 with regard to the criminal contempt issues that 11 it might make sense, for their convenience, to 12 deal with that issue first.

13 I would then suggest that we move on to the 14 Rule 1.540 motion and leave the cost issues to 15 last. And the reason why I think that's 16 appropriate is because I believe that a
17 substantial portion of the argument that relates
18 to the Rule 1.540 motion is relevant to the cost
19 motion, whereas the converse is really not true.

20 So I think that it makes most sense to deal
21 with them in that order and with that time
22 allotment.

23 THE COURT: Thank you.

24 Mr. Rogow.

25 MR. ROGOW: And I think we should follow the

1 Court's scheduling order. And I know I can
2 speak on behalf of the lawyers for the
3 individuals, because we have met, and they have 4 no objection to being here during the course of 5 the other proceedings.

6 But I think the first thing is entitlement
7 to costs. That's a logical step to take first.
8 Then move to the 1.540. I do agree that
9 probably will take most of the time. And I
10 think we can get through the cost issue very 11 quickly, because I think it is pretty simple.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Well, if you're 13 representing that on behalf of those who are 14 here only for the third issue, which is the 15 status conference only as to the motion for the 16 criminal contempt, that they are willing --
17 ready, willing and able to stay, then I will 18 trust that representation and, therefore, will 19 not move that to the front of the hearing.

20 I will then, with all due respect to both
21 points of view, proceed in the order then that 22 was set forth in the Court's order and hear the 23 argument first by the Defendant's counsel as to 24 entitlement to the trial and appellate fees.
25 There were three motions. There was Defendant's

1 amended motion to tax trial costs as to the
2 issue of entitlement. There was Defendant's
3 amended motion to tax appellate costs for the 4 main appeal as to the issue of entitlement. And 5 Defendant's motion to tax appellate costs for 6 cost appeal as to the issue of entitlement.

7 Do you want to argue all three at once and
8 then allow for a response and then rebuttal?

9 MR. ROGOW: I do, Your Honor. And may I ask
10 since there is a concession that I've just 11 heard, it might be helpful if I knew what the 12 concession was and that might save some time.

13 MR. SCAROLA: I agree, Your Honor. I'll be 14 happy to address that first if I could.

15 Just to inform the Court, by agreement of 16 the parties and pursuant to Your Honor's
17 scheduling order, issues relating to costs have 18 been bifurcated, both with regard to trial costs
19 and appellate costs, as you may remember.

20 We are dealing only with entitlement today.
21 And we will defer until after discovery is taken
22 with regard to any recoverable costs a final
23 determination as to the amount of costs to be 24 recovered.

25 The amount of taxable costs recoverable by

1 Morgan Stanley as prevailing party at both
2 levels is reserved for a later determination.
3 In dealing with the issue with regard to
4 entitlement it's our position that there is a
5 different standard that applies to appellate
6 costs than to trial costs. Our concession
7 relates to appellate costs.

8 And based upon the extensive research
9 reflected in the memoranda that have been 10 exchanged between the parties and provided to 11 Your Honor, we are reluctantly obliged to 12 concede that Morgan Stanley is entitled to 13 recover some amount of appellate costs. And so
14 with regard to that issue, we concede Morgan
15 Stanley's entitlement.

16 I don't want to mislead either opposing 17 counsel or the Court with regard to the scope of 18 that concession. We will intend to argue -- we 19 do intend to argue at the time of the later
20 proceedings that the only entitlement they have 21 under the unusual circumstances of this case,
22 and considering both Florida and federal case
23 law, the only entitlement that they have is to a
24 nominal recovery.

25 That's not an issue for today, but we do

1 concede that issue that is before the Court.
2 Morgan Stanley is entitled to recover appellate
3 costs.

4 THE COURT: As to both the -- let's see
5 here, the appellate costs for the main appeal --
6 both of -- there were two motions.

7 MR. SCAROLA: There are two motions, Your
8 Honor. One relates to taxable appellate costs.
9 The other relates to taxable trial costs. The 10 concession is with regard to appellate costs
11 only.

12 It is our position that the Court has 13 discretion to deny costs in their entirety and,
14 indeed, even to tax costs against the prevailing
15 party with regard to trial costs. But I'll 16 reserve my argument in that regard until after 17 we have heard from defense counsel.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

19 So then you'll be arguing the amended motion
20 to tax trial costs for the main appeal?

21 MR. IANNO: No.

22 MR. ROGOW: No. As I understand the 23 concession, Mr. Scarola has conceded that we are 24 entitled to appeal costs for the main appeal and 25 for the cost appeal. What he is reserving is

1 the issue of what those costs should be.

2 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct, Your Honor.

3 So the contested issue now is the 4 Defendant's entitlement to the recovery of 5 taxable costs incurred in the trial court.

6 THE COURT: Right:

7 MR. SCAROLA: Appellate court issues are off
8 the table. Trial court issues are to be 9 discussed.

10 THE COURT: Right. That's what I just said.
11 As to the trial court costs, that's what you're 12 arguing?

13 MR. ROGOW: That's the only issue.

14 THE COURT: Exactly. Yes.

15 MR. ROGOW: And we think that issue is very 16 clear, too, under 57.041, Your Honor, that the 17 statute says, "The party recovering judgment
18 shall recover all his or her legal costs and 19 charges, which shall be included in the 20 judgment."

21 And as a result of this Court's judgment
22 entered in January, based upon the mandate of 23 the Fourth DCA, we now have a judgment in our 24 favor. And we are entitled to the trial costs.
25 So the only issue that we're talking about is

1 THE COURT: Thank you.

2 Response.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 Your Honor, it is obvious that the language
5 of 57.041, subsection 1, appears to be mandatory
6 because of the use of the word "shall."

7 "The party recovering judgment shall recover
8 all of his or her legal costs and charges which 9 shall be included in the judgment." However,
10 what opposing counsel has failed to acknowledge 11 is that in amending the uniform guidelines for 12 taxation of costs, the Florida Supreme Court
13 expressly ruled that, and I am quoting from the 14 Court's opinion, "The appropriate assessment of 15 costs in any particular proceeding remains
16 within the discretion of the trial court."

17 The Fourth DCA has addressed this issue and 18 stated that they follow the, "Well established
19 principle that the taxation of costs is 20 traditionally within the discretion of the trial
21 court."

22 That's the Deleuw Kather and Company case,
23 D-E-L-E-U-W, Kather and Company, a Fourth DCA
24 decision in 1995.

25 There's another relevant Fourth DCA

1 entitlement, as I understand it from
2 Mr. Scarola's concession.

3 So our argument is a simple statutory
4 argument. The case law which we've set forth in 5 our memorandum, the Oriental Imports case in 6 1990 talks very clearly about this. "57.041
7 mandates that every party who recovers a
8 judgment in a legal proceeding is entitled as a
9 matter of right to recover lawful court costs
10 and a trial judge has no discretion under the 11 statute to deny court costs to the party
12 recovering the judgment."

13 The judgment is your judgment in January
14 2008. We are the prevailing party. We are 15 entitled under 57.041 to have costs.

16 THE COURT: Okay, now, when you say costs,
17 are you also talking about attorneys' fees?

18 MR. ROGOW: No, just costs.

19 THE COURT: Just costs.

20 MR. ROGOW: Regular costs set forth in the 21 rules regarding what costs are recoverable. But 22 that is a question for later on when we have the 23 discussion with Mr. Scarola, if the Court finds 24 that we are, as I believe it should, entitled to 25 our trial costs.

1 decision, it's the Schumacher case. And I'm not
2 providing Your Honor with complete citations
3 because they're all in the materials that have 4 been provided to the Court already.

5 Schumacher was a 1982 Fourth DCA opinion.
6 The Court there said, "Regardless of the 7 apparently mandatory language of the statute,
8 however, the requirement that costs be related
9 to a useful and meaningful purpose is not 10 altered."

11 In Wilkins, an even earlier Fourth DCA case,
12 the Fourth District said, "Although the language
13 of the present statute appears mandatory on the 14 trial judge, rather than discretionary, as its 15 predecessor, nevertheless the significance of 16 cost being related to a useful and meaningful
17 purpose is not altered."

18 The cases cited by Morgan Stanley, Your
19 Honor, simply are not on point. In their brief
20 they rely upon the Connell decision, a Fourth
21 DCA decision, but Connell was dealing with an 22 issue as to whether 57.041 dealt with 23 arbitration proceedings. This is clearly not an 24 arbitration.

25 The Drag Stream case relied upon by the

1 defense was a case in which the Court held that
2 the Plaintiff's claim that the Defendant was not
3 entitled to costs was denied because it was
4 untimely. Other language in that opinion that 5 is quoted by the defense is outside the holding
6 and is strictly dicta.

7 The Oriental Imports case is one that also
8 recognizes that "The determination of the amount 9 and type of costs that are appropriate for the 10 action in which they were incurred is the task
11 of the trial court." And that, again, is a
12 direct quote.

13 It's our position that the Court clearly
14 does have discretion with regard to an award of 15 costs. And it's for that reason that we 16 suggested to Your Honor that the argument with 17 regard to this cost issue be deferred until 18 after Your Honor has not only heard argument
19 with regard to the Rule 1.540 motion, but 20 considered all of the facts ultimately developed
21 in discovery in relation to that motion.

22 There are a number of federal court
23 decisions that we believe are persuasive with 24 regard to these issues because of the similarity
25 between the federal rules and statutes with

1 misconduct, to further reward that party beyond
2 the reward that it has already received by
3 virtue of a judgment in its favor as a
4 consequence of that fraud, by allowing it the 5 recovery of millions of dollars from the victim
6 of those frauds would be entirely unjust.

7 Our suggestion to Your Honor is that you
8 take this matter under advisement pending the 9 arguments on the Rule 1.540(b) motion, pending
10 Your Honor's complete review of the facts
11 developed with respect to that motion and make
12 the determination after that has been done.

13 Obviously, if this Court were to decide that 14 it was appropriate to vacate the underlying 15 judgment, then Morgan Stanley is no longer the 16 prevailing party. And the award of prevailing 17 party taxable costs would need to await the 18 outcome of the subsequent proceedings of the 19 later trial.

20 It is not disputed in the submissions to the 21 Court that even if Morgan Stanley were to be 22 awarded trial costs at this point in time and 23 the judgment in Morgan Stanley's favor were to 24 be vacated and it does not ultimately prevail in 25 the underlying action, Morgan Stanley would be

1 regard to the recovery of costs and the Florida
2 rules upon which -- which are modeled on those
3 federal rules. And there are a number of 4 federal cases where litigation misconduct has 5 led appellate courts not only -- excuse me, has 6 led trial courts and confirmed by appellate
7 courts not only to reduce the recovery of 8 taxable costs, but to deny the recovery of 9 taxable costs and in some circumstances even to 10 tax costs against the prevailing party.

11 I'm not going to take the time to go through 12 each of those. They are referenced very clearly 13 in the submission that we have provided to Your
14 Honor.

15 And it is our suggestion that because of the 16 extraordinary nature of the misconduct in which
17 Morgan Stanley engaged and the fact that Morgan
18 Stanley procured its favorable judgment through 19 fraud on the court that it would compound the 20 injustice that has occurred thus far to award
21 the party that has been found guilty of an 22 egregious underlying fraud, the party that has 23 not contested the fact and, indeed, has 24 acknowledged the fact that it was responsible
25 for extraordinarily egregious litigation

1 obliged to pay back all of the costs that it had
2 recovered and be responsible for compensating
3 the Plaintiff for all of its taxable costs from 4 the beginning of the litigation to the final
5 conclusion of the litigation.

6 In light of those facts, it really makes no
7 sense to proceed with a determination as to the 8 amount of costs or entitlement to costs until 9 after Your Honor has had an opportunity to 10 consider and rule on the 1.540(b) motion.

11 That's the relief that we request today. We 12 request that Your Honor defer ruling. And we 13 suggest that a deferral at least until you have
14 had an opportunity to consider the 1.540
15 submission so that Your Honor may appropriately
16 exercise your discretion by considering the 17 level of misconduct in which Morgan Stanley has 18 engaged, which the case law, again, points out
19 to be a relevant factor in making a
20 determination as to how equitably to balance the 21 burden of costs incurred at the trial court
22 level. We suggest that that's the way Your 23 Honor ought to proceed.

24 Thank you very much.

25 THE COURT: Thank you.

1 Reply.
 2 MR. ROGOW: Your Honor, when Morgan Stanley
 3 lost its trial judgment, costs were assessed
 4 against it. And we had to bond those costs.
 5 And it went up on appeal. They have lost. A
 6 judgment has now been entered against them. And 7 under the statute "shall" means "shall."
 8 There's no other way to read it. And so Morgan
 9 Stanley is entitled to costs right now as it
 10 result of the statutory language of "shall."
 11 The Federal Rule is quite different, 54(d)
 12 allows some discretion in the trial court,
 13 that's not this case at all.
 14 We're not talking about the amount. The 15 amount and type is different from entitlement.
 16 And Mr. Scarola has conflated these concepts a 17 bit in his discussion. And when he offers the 18 Deleuw case, which is number 5 in his booklet of 19 cases to make it a little easier for the Court
 20 to just flip to it, the Deleuw case talks about 21 "Appellant does not argue that Plaintiff did not
 22 incur these costs, but rather there should be a
 23 hard and fast rule that costs are assessed from 24 the same percentage as fault because that would 25 be consistent with 76881."

1 the Court has discretion in determining which of
 2 the costs will be incorporated in the final cost
 3 judgment, but it does not take from the Court
 4 the obligation to decide entitlement to costs
 5 once a judgment has been entered.
 6 THE COURT: Okay. Just a couple of 7 questions procedurally.
 8 First of all, with respect to the two
 9 motions that the Plaintiff has represented in 10 the nature of the concession, could you prepare 11 a proposed order or orders on that?
 12 MR. SCAROLA: We'd be happy to do that, Your 13 Honor, certainly.
 14 THE COURT: With respect to a hearing on 15 amount, we'll talk first about the two that have 16 been conceded as to entitlement.
 17 Does Plaintiff wish to file a supplemental,
 18 or did you intend to file a supplemental 19 memorandum that would specifically address the 20 costs that are being sought? I think they were 21 outlined in some detail in the motion, but the 22 memo by the Plaintiff didn't go to the 23 particular costs. So would that be something
 24 you would be anticipating doing prior to a
 25 hearing?

1 Deleuw says nothing about the Court having
 2 discretion to deny costs and deny entitlement to 3 costs. We, obviously, agree that the Court will 4 have the final say about the costs that are
 5 sought and whether or not they're appropriately
 6 sought, but that's not the issue that's before
 7 the Court.
 8 And this notion of waiting until you decide
 9 the 1,540 is kind of an interesting concept,
 10 because what it does is it completely ignores
 11 the fact that there's a judgment outstanding now
 12 in favor of Morgan Stanley and the plain,
 13 statutory language of "shall be entitled to 14 costs," and that's all we're talking about.
 15 We're not arguing amount. We're not talking
 16 which costs are recoverable. We're not talking 17 which costs are reasonably related to the 18 litigation. All we're talking about is 19 entitlement.
 20 And the suggestion that the Court delay the 21 entitlement ruling has no precedent at all in 22 Florida. In fact, there's no case that has been 23 cited that suggests anything other than the fact
 24 that there shall be an entitlement to costs.
 25 And the Supreme Court rule talks about of course

1 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. But what was
 2 contemplated and still is contemplated is that
 3 it will be necessary to take some discovery
 4 before we can submit a legal memorandum to Your
 5 Honor. There are issues that need to be 6 resolved by way of discovery before we're in a 7 position to present that information to the
 8 Court.
 9 THE COURT: Do both sides agree? Does
 10 defense agree as well that discovery is 11 contemplated in anticipation of the hearing on 12 the amount of fees?
 13 MR. ROGOW: I can't agree, because I have no
 14 idea what he's talking about with regard to the 15 discovery. So I'm certainly open to discussing
 16 this with Mr. Scarola --
 17 THE COURT: Sorry to interrupt. Such 18 discussions have not taken place yet then?
 19 MR. SCAROLA: They have not, Your Honor.
 20 THE COURT: Would it be something that
 21 counsel could talk about and see if you can come
 22 to terms on a proposed briefing, discovery
 23 schedule that would then reveal to the Court at 24 what point you would be prepared to come to 25 court for a hearing and, of course, how much

1 time would be needed? And if there is any
2 intervention that you need from the Court, you
3 can presumably come before the Court on a short
4 hearing and try to work that out.

5 Now, I would say that it would be useful, as 6 long as you're commencing those discussions, at 7 least to address the issue as well, recognizing 8 of course that the Court has not ruled on the 9 entitlement issue as relates to the trial costs,
10 but nevertheless, as long as you're engaging in 11 the discussion relating to the appellate costs,
12 I would ask that you do that as well and 13 contemplate that in your proposed schedule. It
14 can be extracted if it's not something that the 15 Court is ordering, but it will be there if the 16 Court does grant the motion as to entitlement of 17 the trial cost.

18 MR. SCAROLA: We'd be happy to do that, Your
19 Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay, I will leave it in your 21 hands. I'll wait to get something back, then
22 we'll know where you proceed as to the next
23 phase of this issue.

24 Okay, so is that everything that -- and you
25 can contemplate as well whether defense wants to

1 itself is instructive, because it focuses
2 attention on the purpose of this rule. 1.540(b)
3 is derived from and modelled on Federal Rule
4 60(b). And Moore's Federal Practice describes
5 the purpose of 60(b) in a way that is entirely
6 applicable to our consideration of our purpose
7 here today. It says that the purpose of the 8 rule is to provide relief for judgments that 9 were unfairly obtained, not those that are 10 factually inaccurate.

11 And we cannot, by virtue of the mandate that 12 has been issued in this case, challenge the 13 factual accuracy of the appellate court's
14 findings. And we are not attempting to do that.

15 Moore's goes on to say that the rule is an 16 escape valve to protect the fairness and 17 integrity of litigation.

18 And I suggest that it is very important
19 during the course of our discussions this
20 afternoon to keep the purpose of Rule 1.540(b)
21 very clearly in front of us.

22 We are seeking to protect justice. We are 23 seeking to assure a fair result and we are 24 seeking to safeguard the integrity of the 25 judicial process.

1 file any kind of a reply in a supplemental memo
2 pointing out which costs are being objected to.
3 So I'll, again, trust that that would be
4 encompassed in a proposed order that you can
5 submit to the Court either if it's agreed to 6 through correspondence with the Court or
7 otherwise on a short hearing.

8 Is there anything more that the Court needs
9 to hear today on the cost issue?

10 MR. ROGOW: No.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Let me move this aside.
12 We'll proceed next with the issue of whether 13 the Plaintiff's verified motion to vacate the 14 judgment and grant a new trial on damages is 15 legally sufficient.

16 And I will hear from Plaintiff's counsel
17 first.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
19 Honor.

20 Your Honor, with the Court's permission,
21 Mara Ponzi Hatfield is going to be assisting me
22 because we have some visual aids that I hope
23 will be of some assistance to the Court.

24 Your Honor, we are before the Court today on 25 a Rule 1.540(b)(3) motion. And the language

1 And we suggest that if we keep those
2 objectives in mind that there's only one
3 conclusion that can be reached with regard to 4 this motion ultimately. And that the conclusion
5 that we are called upon to reach today, that is,
6 whether there is a colorable claim for relief
7 under 1.540(b), that that conclusion is a very
8 easy conclusion to draw.

9 The purpose of today's hearing is limited.
10 We're here to determine only whether Coleman
11 (Parent) Holding has raised a colorable claim
12 for relief. If we have, if we have raised a
13 colorable claim for relief, then Coleman
14 (Parent) is entitled to conduct discovery
15 regarding the allegations that Morgan Stanley
16 committed a fraud on the court and we are 17 entitled subsequently to an evidentiary hearing
18 on those matters.

19 This is not a hearing with regard to our
20 entitlement to the ultimate relief, but only a 21 hearing with regard to our entitlement to 22 further discovery and a hearing as to whether we 23 will be able to obtain that ultimate relief.

24 The Fourth District Court of Appeal has 25 expressly held that discovery and a hearing are

1 required. It is mandatory if the Rule 1.540(b)
2 motion raises a colorable entitlement.

3 Now, the meaning of colorable entitlement
4 does not appear to be contested. The language in
5 the submissions to Your Honor is a little bit
6 different in describing what colorable
7 entitlement means, but the bottom line test is 8 basically the same, although also expressed in 9 slightly different language.

10 The test is: Do the moving papers lay out a 11 prima facie case of fraud? If they do, we have 12 made our colorable claim and we are then 13 entitled to the discovery and hearing that we 14 ultimately seek.

15 THE COURT: Let me ask you a question on 16 that point.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Surely.

18 THE COURT: You refer to the Dynasty case
19 and you also cite in your memo on page 38 the, I
20 think it's the Schleger versus Dabelsky case.
21 And the question I have is the seminal case of 22 Flemenbaum versus Flemenbaum at 636 So.2d 579,
23 Fourth DCA 1994, which appears to require that 24 the movant, in addition to pleading fraud with 25 specificity, explain why the fraud, if it

1 the court. And the source of that
2 misrepresentation is also significant. The fact
3 that the misrepresentations that are the primary
4 focus of our discussion this afternoon are 5 misrepresentations that were made by officers of 6 the court is an important factor that I'll deal
7 with in my presentation to Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Okay, and I have questions about 9 those issues as well. But I just wanted to make
10 sure when you were talking about colorable
11 entitlement that seemed to be a good point. Let 12 me see if I had any other questions relating to 13 that standard. Let me just look for a moment.

14 Okay, I think you'll get into it, but if you
15 don't, I have the follow-up questions which 16 really go to, you know, you'll discuss those 17 line of cases that seem to require prejudice and 18 some I think in the federal circuit that don't 19 require prejudice. As to shows that require 20 prejudice, I am interested to hear more fully 21 how Plaintiff was prejudiced, carrying it
22 through to its logical end knowing what we know
23 now about why the Fourth DCA did what it did.

24 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, Your Honor has 25 anticipated a significant portion of our

1 exists, would entitle the movant to have the
2 judgment set aside.

3 So my question is: Do you see -- you didn't
4 cite Flemenbaum, I don't believe, in your memo.
5 Do you understand there to be a difference
6 between the cases that you cited and, for
7 example, the Flemenbaum case?

8 MR. SCAROLA: I don't think there is a
9 difference, Your Honor. And we acknowledge that 10 in order to meet the burden that we have at this
11 stage of the proceedings, part of our colorable
12 entitlement obligation is, or part of our 13 obligation to make out a colorable claim is to 14 make out a claim not only that there were 15 fraudulent misrepresentations made, but that the 16 nature of the fraudulent misrepresentations are 17 such that we should be relieved of the 18 consequences of those fraudulent
19 representations.

20 Now, I say that, but there is also a very 21 important distinction when the nature of the 22 fraud is fraud on the Court. Because a
23 presumption arises under those circumstances
24 that there is prejudice as a consequence of any 25 material misrepresentation that has been made to

1 argument. We do, indeed, believe that it is not
2 our obligation to show that the fraud was
3 outcome determinative to show that we were
4 prejudiced by the fraud, but nonetheless, we,
5 even if the Court were to find that such a
6 burden exists are confident that we could
7 satisfy it. And I will get to that during my
8 presentation.

9 The elements of a common law fraud, Your 10 Honor, are well known to the Court. There must 11 be a material misrepresentation made with intent
12 to induce reliance, which in fact is relied upon
13 to the detriment of the victim. And here,
14 because we are talking about fraud on the court,
15 we are really talking about the Court itself,
16 the judicial system as the victim of the 17 fraudulent misrepresentations on which we are 18 going to focus. Although Coleman (Parent)
19 Holding has been a victim as well.

20 As we'll later point out, these elements are 21 modified flightily slightly on the context of 22 the fraud on the court because materiality and 23 prejudice are presumed to exist when the 24 integrity of the judicial system has been 25 assaulted.

1 I want to begin with a brief overview of
 2 just some of the fraud that we have alleged in 3 our motion and point out the fact that we are 4 dealing with a verified pleading. What we have 5 before the Court are allegations that have been
 6 verified. They are indeed very specific. And I
 7 may not take the time to go through even those 8 few that I've sampled here in the outline, but 9 let me talk about some of them at least.

10 On December 17, 2003 Morgan Stanley lied to 11 the Court stating that all of its pre-2000
 12 e-mail backup tapes had been erased. That 13 statement was absolutely false. And we know it
 14 to be absolutely false as a result of subsequent 15 concessions made, not voluntarily, but after 16 extensive discovery disclosed the falsity of 17 those representations.

18 Morgan Stanley made those December '03
 19 fraudulent statements to persuade the Court to 20 deny then pending discovery motions. And,
 21 indeed, they were successful. The Court's 22 decision was altered as a consequence of the 23 misrepresentations that were made at that time.

24 In February of 2004 Morgan Stanley's
 25 corporate representative lied under oath at a

1 this is discovery that was obtained post
 2 verdict, Mr. Doyle inappropriately attempted to
 3 have this certification signed by a college
 4 student who performed data entry functions and 5 who really had no idea what was going on.
 6 Another Morgan Stanley employee intervened and 7 said, you can't have him sign that. I'll sign
 8 it. But what he was given to sign he refused to 9 sign, because it contained false statements that 10 he was unwilling to swear to. Nonetheless, we 11 know, as a consequence of post-verdict
 12 discovery, we know that others were willing to 13 swear and did swear to those same false
 14 statements.

15 Those misrepresentations in June of 2004
 16 enabled Morgan Stanley to avoid the search and 17 disclosure of millions of pages of electronic 18 data.

19 Morgan Stanley made at least six admittedly 20 fraudulent statements from late March to May of 21 2005 to successfully persuade the Court either
 22 to alter its jury instructions or to bar certain
 23 demonstrative exhibits during the trial's
 24 punitive damage phase. Again, the fraudulent
 25 misrepresentations, unknown to be false at the

1 deposition, testifying that Morgan Stanley's
 2 e-mail archive did not contain e-mail from the 3 1990s, the relevant time period during which the 4 underlying transaction regarding Sunbeam and
 5 Coleman (Parent) Holding took place, the period
 6 of time during which Morgan Stanley was serving
 7 as the investment banker with regard to this
 8 transaction on Sunbeam's behalf.

9 Morgan Stanley admitted that that sworn 10 deposition testimony was false a year later at 11 the February 14, 2005 evidentiary hearing that 12 was focusing upon Morgan Stanley's misconduct.
 13 But that admission came only after it had 14 obviously been caught in the web of its own
 15 deceptions.

16 On June 23, 2004 Morgan Stanley falsely
 17 certified that it had found and produced all
 18 relevant e-mails pursuant to an express order
 19 requiring that certification. Obtaining the 20 certification itself was a significant problem.
 21 But, ultimately, when the certification was
 22 made, Morgan Stanley says, you've got everything
 23 we have. We've searched. You've got it all.

24 Later discovery revealed that Morgan
 25 Stanley's inhouse lawyer James F. Doyle, and

1 time of trial, successfully altered the course
 2 of the proceedings at trial and enabled Morgan
 3 Stanley to obtain relief that it otherwise would 4 not have obtained had the Court not been 5 deceived.

6 In May of 2005 is when the Court did not
 7 give the jury the litigation misconduct
 8 instruction that Coleman (Parent) Holding had 9 requested, because although some Morgan Stanley
 10 employees were discovered to have known about 11 e-mail on the Brooklyn tapes, the Court was not
 12 persuaded that Morgan Stanley's inhouse lawyers
 13 knew in June of 2004 that the Brooklyn tapes
 14 contained e-mail.

15 Now, let me begin by telling the Court that 16 I may assume, because of the fact that we have 17 been living with these circumstances for a long
 18 time, that Your Honor will recall from the 19 submissions that have been made to the Court
 20 more than you actually do recall.

21 I know that Your Honor is careful in terms
 22 of your advanced preparation that these
 23 materials have been read, but if I start moving
 24 too fast and start talking about Brooklyn tapes
 25 and you don't know what I'm talking about,

1 please don't hesitate to stop me so I can make
2 sure that these comments are understood in 3 context.

4 It was in May of 2005 that the Court did not
5 allow Coleman (Parent) to use the demonstrative
6 exhibit it wanted to use in its closing
7 argument. And it was for the same reason,
8 because the Court expressly stated that she was
9 not satisfied that Morgan Stanley's inhouse
10 lawyers had any knowledge with regard to the 11 misrepresentations that had been made concerning
12 the presence of e-mail on these late-found
13 tapes.

14 On June 6, 2005, just 11 days before Morgan
15 Stanley files its first notice withdrawing a
16 lengthy list of false statements, Morgan Stanley
17 filed a post-trial motion repeating its false
18 assertions as to when its inhouse counsel
19 learned of e-mail on the tapes.

20 That's just 11 days before the retraction of 21 statements that had been going on for months and 22 months and months, during which Morgan Stanley
23 was repeatedly professing the innocence of its 24 inhouse legal staff.

25 Morgan Stanley made that fraudulent

1 Is that what you're attempting to tell the
2 Court? And Morgan Stanley refused to directly
3 respond to the Court's inquiries.

4 For six more months that ambiguity remained.
5 Until the notice was filed in December of '05 --
6 excuse me -- December of '06.

7 In December of '06, 18 months later, after 8 the verdict has been rendered, after the 9 judgment is in, after the appellate briefs have 10 been submitted, after oral argument on the 11 appellate briefs, for the very first time Morgan
12 Stanley files another notice, which it claims to 13 be filing in order to resolve ambiguity in the 14 June 17, '05 notice. And that notice says, the 15 law division was aware prior to July of '04. It
16 does not say when prior to July of '04. It
17 significantly does not state whether in June of 18 '04, when the false certification by Morgan
19 Stanley was filed, its law division knew that 20 that certification was indeed false. And as we 21 stand here today we still don't know with 22 certainty, although reasonable inferences
23 clearly suggest, that Morgan Stanley's refusal
24 to be specific is because of the enormous
25 implications involved in acknowledging outright

1 statement on June 6th, 2005 in an attempt to
2 persuade the Court to grant its post trial
3 motion challenging the jury verdict. And it was 4 only after this attempt was unsuccessful that
5 Morgan Stanley retracted its lies.

6 However, it not only failed to tell the 7 Court what the truth was, it steadfastly refused
8 to tell the Court what the truth was.

9 If Your Honor remembers, there is a whole
10 series of statements in which Morgan Stanley
11 repeatedly takes the position that its inhouse
12 legal staff was unaware of the existence of 13 e-mail on the Brooklyn tapes, and a series of 14 8-millimeters tapes that were also later
15 disclosed to exist, that the inhouse lawyers
16 were unaware of the existence of e-mails on 17 those tapes until October and November of 2005
18 respectively -- 2004. Thank you.

19 That remained their position until the 20 filing of the June 2005 notice. When that 21 notice was filed, the story then became that the 22 law division was aware in July of '04. The 23 trial court expressly focused on that language
24 and wanted to know, what does that mean? Does
25 that mean that you first learned in July of '04?

1 that the law division knew in June of '04, when
2 the false certification was filed, that the
3 certification was indeed false.

4 In November of '05 -- I'm going to skip
5 ahead to there -- the Court acknowledged that
6 its findings of fact in its remedial orders
7 could have been different had the June 17, 2005
8 notice and the questions that that notice
9 triggered surfaced three months earlier in March
10 of '05 when the Court was considering the issue
11 of appropriate sanctions.

12 The June 17, '05 notice that Morgan Stanley
13 filed was misleading in several respects,
14 especially in the use of the ambiguous phrase
15 "In July of 2004" to mean, we now know, in or 16 before July of 2004.

17 While we believe that the case law clearly
18 supports our position that we have no obligation
19 in the context of a Rule 1.540(b)(3) motion
20 based on fraud on the court to prove that Morgan
21 Stanley's fraud was outcome determinative, this 22 carefully considered, written statement by the 23 trial court that was entered in response to our
24 then and still pending motion for rule to show
25 cause why Morgan Stanley and various inhouse

1 lawyers should not be held in contempt, the
 2 statement by Judge Maass that she would decline
 3 at that point to consider the implications of 4 Morgan Stanley's new revelations because they
 5 could change and add to the sanctions that had 6 previously been imposed by the Court when the 7 Court had been misled. That written
 8 acknowledgment from Judge Maass satisfies as 9 clearly and unequivocally as can reasonably be 10 expected our burden to demonstrate that the 11 Court was indeed influenced by these lies and 12 that the outcome would have been different had 13 the Court been fully informed of the true
 14 circumstances. And that's a subject that I'll 15 revisit shortly.

16 THE COURT: You're referring to the order on 17 Coleman's verified petition for a show cause
 18 order?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: And which language in that order
 21 are you referring to?

22 MR. SCAROLA: It's specifically quoted a
 23 little bit later in my presentation.

24 THE COURT: Okay. That's fine. I have the 25 order here.

1 or more of the motion's essential allegations.

2 Or, secondly, they can show as a matter of
 3 law that relief from the judgment would be
 4 unjust even if the alleged facts are true.

5 Morgan Stanley has not raised a factual
 6 challenge.

7 The brief, the memorandum that it filed in 8 opposition to Morgan Stanley -- excuse me, to 9 Coleman's motion is not verified. No affidavits
 10 and no documentary evidence has been presented
 11 to the Court.

12 Indeed, no facts are even challenged by way
 13 of argument. Morgan Stanley has effectively
 14 conceded its egregious misconduct, just as the 15 earlier less complete, substantially less
 16 complete picture of Morgan Stanley's misconduct
 17 was conceded before the appellate court.

18 We now have a significantly clearer picture
 19 of the nature and scope of the misconduct in 20 which Morgan Stanley, including in particular
 21 its inhouse lawyers engaged, but we still don't 22 have the whole picture. It is better, but it is 23 not yet everything.

24 For purposes of this hearing, nonetheless,
 25 it is presumed as alleged as follows.

1 MR. SCAROLA: I might point out at this
 2 point also, Your Honor, that it was in October
 3 of '05 that the affidavit of Arthur Reil that we
 4 are discussing was filed where Mr. Reil talks
 5 about the fact that an effort was made to have 6 this college student intern sign the 7 certification. He intervened and precluded
 8 that. But it's also in that same affidavit
 9 where Mr. Reil discloses for the first time that 10 there were misrepresentations with regard to the 11 lack of knowledge of inhouse counsel with regard
 12 to the existence of e-mail on the backup tapes
 13 that he had been asked to swear to. And he 14 refused to. He said, that's not accurate. And 15 that's going to become a very significant point
 16 in terms of the ultimate determination as to 17 when inhouse counsel actually was made aware of 18 the existence of e-mail on those backup tapes.

19 Having reviewed just some of the verified
 20 allegations of fraud, I want to focus on the 21 possible defenses at this stage of the 22 proceeding.

23 Morgan Stanley can defeat a claim of 24 colorable entitlement in either of two ways.
 25 One, they can disprove as a matter of fact one

1 Morgan Stanley and its inhouse counsel
 2 flatly and repeatedly lied to the Court
 3 regarding inhouse counsel's knowledge of the 4 existence of undisclosed e-mails. The full
 5 extent to which Morgan Stanley deceived the 6 Court has yet to be disclosed. And that is why
 7 discovery is necessary in this case.

8 The known lies were relevant and material to 9 the Court's response to Morgan Stanley's
 10 egregious litigation misconduct. It influenced
 11 decisions of the Court throughout the litigation
 12 on multiple occasions during the course of the 13 discovery phase of the case, specifically with 14 regard to the nature of the sanctions that the 15 Court was asked to impose, specifically with 16 regard to the sanctions that the Court
 17 ultimately determined to impose. And the 18 influence on the Court as a consequence of these 19 misrepresentations has been clearly established
 20 based upon the unopposed allegations in the 21 motion. The lies repeatedly influenced the 22 Court's decisions in ways that were favorable to 23 Morgan Stanley and were unquestionably adverse 24 to Coleman (Parent) Holding.

25 The Court expressly acknowledged that

1 post-verdict disclosures of additional
 2 deceptions by Morgan Stanley could warrant the 3 imposition of additional sanctions against 4 Morgan Stanley. And this is the language to 5 which I had previously referred, Your Honor. It
 6 appears at page 7 of Judge Maass' contempt order
 7 where the Court expressly states, New
 8 information, quote, could add to the judicial
 9 response to Morgan Stanley's litigation
 10 misconduct.

11 And it is on that basis, because the Court
 12 recognized the significance of the 13 misrepresentations that had been made and the 14 fact that it could, indeed, bolster the 15 necessary response to Morgan Stanley's
 16 misconduct that the Court expressly declined to 17 consider any further evidence of Morgan
 18 Stanley's misconduct at that stage.

19 The colorable entitlement defenses that 20 Morgan Stanley has raised are not factual, but 21 they are confined solely to legal issues.

22 Morgan Stanley attempts to show that relief
 23 from judgment against Coleman would be unjust
 24 even if all the alleged facts are true. And 25 their arguments in that regard fall into three

1 categories.

2 First they argue that CPH's motion fails to
 3 allege that the Morgan Stanley
 4 misrepresentations disclosed post trial were
 5 material and were relied upon by the Court.

6 Second, they argue, that the motion is
 7 foreclosed by the Fourth DCA's mandate.

8 And, lastly, they argue that CPH has waived
 9 any entitlement to additional sanctions.

10 Every one of those arguments, we will show
 11 to the Court, is contrary to clearly established
 12 precedent and not one of them has any analogous
 13 case law support, not a single case supporting a
 14 single one of those arguments.

15 First defense, lack of materiality and 16 prejudice. Our response to that is, as I have 17 already mentioned to the Court, that when a 18 judgment is challenged based upon fraud on the 19 court, prejudice is presumed as a matter of law.
 20 But even if we were obliged to prove prejudice,
 21 the un rebutted factual allegations established
 22 that Morgan Stanley's misrepresentations were 23 material and clearly prejudicial.

24 THE COURT: This is where I'll ask the 25 question I have.

1 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

2 THE COURT: The nature of the fraud that is
 3 presented in the motion speaks to attorney
 4 misconduct. There appear to be no Florida cases
 5 that would define attorney misconduct as fraud
 6 upon the court, fraud on the court. Do you
 7 agree with that?

8 MR. SCAROLA: There is at least one case
 9 that I think is instructive, Your Honor. And 10 that case is Andrews versus Palmas DeMajorca.
 11 It's a Fifth DCA decision. And it's one that I
 12 was just about to get to. Because it is in that 13 case that the Fifth District described fraud on 14 the court as fraud that one defiles the court
 15 itself or, two -- and this is where I think the 16 answer to your Your Honor's question is -- fraud
 17 that is perpetrated by officers of the court who 18 calculate to interfere with the judicial 19 system's ability impartially to adjudicate the 20 matter.

21 So I think we do have some appellate court
 22 guidance in Florida. I acknowledge that the 23 more helpful cases are the cases that we have 24 cited. And I think there are seven of them.
 25 And we'll get to review at least a few of those

1 from other jurisdictions including, principally,
 2 the federal courts including the U.S. Supreme
 3 Court.

4 THE COURT: There seems to be a split, is
 5 there not, as to whether prejudice is required
 6 with a showing or not in those cases that dealt
 7 with attorney misconduct and perhaps --

8 MR. SCAROLA: To the contrary, Your Honor,
 9 not a single case that either side has 10 apparently been able to find, because none is 11 cited in the defense brief and none was revealed
 12 to us, not a single case involving fraud on the 13 court ever reaches the conclusion that a showing 14 of prejudice is necessary in that context. The 15 defense has cited cases where there is a
 16 discussion of a necessity to show prejudice, but 17 none of those cases is a case that involves 18 fraud on the Court.

19 THE COURT: What about the line of cases in 20 Florida, I believe Parker, if I'm remembering
 21 correctly, and Declair, which seem to talk about 22 the distinction between extrinsic and intrinsic.
 23 Fraud upon the Court is extrinsic. There seems 24 to be a distinction that's brought out in the 25 Parker case and the Declair case as the

1 difference between intrinsic and extrinsic.
2 What do you -- and why would this type of 3 fraud not fit more squarely, as defined by the 4 Florida courts, as intrinsic fraud? And if it
5 is, what relevance is that? What significance
6 does that have?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Let me answer your question
8 with a confession of a substantial degree of 9 ignorance. My attempt to try to understand,
10 from the review of the cases, the distinction
11 between intrinsic and extrinsic fraud tied my 12 mind in knots.

13 I was not able, Your Honor, to find a
14 coherent pattern in the cases that distinguished
15 between intrinsic and extrinsic fraud. And so I
16 was satisfied to fall back upon the language of 17 Rule 1.540(b)(3) which basically says, it
18 doesn't make any difference whether it's 19 intrinsic or extrinsic fraud. And then to look 20 to the cases that draw a distinction not between 21 intrinsic and extrinsic fraud, but between fraud
22 on the party and fraud on the court. And I
23 think that's where the focus really needs to be.

24 It is an important distinction and one that 25 makes logical sense as to whether the

1 perpetrator of the fraud, or in this case the
2 perpetrators of the fraud, were officers of the
3 court.

4 Officers of the court are entrusted with a
5 responsibility to safeguard the integrity of the 6 judicial process. It is anticipated that
7 litigants themselves may seek to bend the rules,
8 may intentionally break the rules, but the 9 system relies upon officers of the court, the 10 lawyers involved in the process, to safeguard
11 the integrity of the process itself.

12 When those guardians of the system seek to 13 fulfill their responsibility to safeguard the 14 integrity of the system and join in the assault
15 upon the system, that's the circumstance in 16 which prejudice is and must be presumed.
17 Because we don't know how far the implications
18 of that abandonment of their responsibility has 19 taken them.

20 Once we demonstrate that they are no longer
21 serving their appropriate function as guardians,
22 but have now become assailants against the 23 system, that's all we need to show. And the 24 U.S. Supreme Court has told us that. The Ninth
25 Circuit has said that repeatedly. The Fifth

1 Circuit has said that. And it makes sense.

2 Nonetheless, we think that we can in this
3 case and have in this case demonstrated that
4 there has been actual outcome-determinative
5 prejudice. And we point to the language in 6 Judge Maass' contempt order to demonstrate that.
7 But keep in mind what was going on here. Judge
8 Maass is faced with an incredible record of 9 litigation misconduct that went far beyond
10 issues as to whether e-mail tapes had been 11 appropriately searched for, whether they had 12 been identified, whether disclosures were made
13 when they were supposed to be made, whether we 14 ever knew all the backup tapes that contained
15 e-mail and what the contents of any of those 16 many millions of pages of internal
17 communications within Morgan Stanley were.

18 THE COURT: Is any of the -- I didn't see in 19 any of the briefing that the content of the 20 e-mails was at the heart of the motion for new 21 trial as much as it was the alleged failure to 22 be forthcoming and, therefore, the misconduct of 23 the attorneys; is that correct?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. We never got 25 to the point of being able to find out what the

1 content was. The misconduct was such that the 2 tapes remained unexamined right up through the 3 time of trial.

4 THE COURT: So no argument is being put
5 forth that the e-mails could have said certain
6 things that would have been outcome
7 determinative?

8 MR. SCAROLA: No, no, Your Honor, that's not
9 correct. The e-mails clearly could have said
10 many things that were outcome determinative.
11 There could have been concessions in the e-mails
12 with regard to the valuation of Sunbeam and the 13 valuation of Coleman (Parent) Holding and a 14 comparison of the valuations. There could have 15 been admissions in those e-mails with regard to 16 the impact of the accounting fraud in which
17 Sunbeam had engaged and was aided by Morgan
18 Stanley that would have drawn a causal
19 connection between the subsequent failure of 20 Sunbeam and the accounting fraud that had taken
21 place.

22 There are all sorts of things that could
23 have and very likely would have been included in 24 those internal communications under the existing
25 circumstances.

1 THE COURT: The status of these e-mails
2 today are to the best of your knowledge what?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Unknown.

4 THE COURT: So you don't know whether they
5 exist or they don't exist?

6 MR. SCAROLA: As a consequence of the fraud,
7 of which the Court was a victim, the Court could 8 never make a determination as to whether the 9 e-mail sources had all been identified or hadn't
10 been identified, had been searched or hadn't
11 been searched, did contain e-mail or didn't 12 contain e-mail, did contain e-mail from the 13 relevant time period or didn't contain e-mail
14 from the relevant time period. Those were all 15 matters that the Court was never able to 16 determine because it could not get straight
17 answers.

18 The Court knew what it did not know, but it
19 never knew the truth. And this is where we get 20 to the outcome determinative portion of our 21 argument. And I'll skip right ahead to that if 22 I may.

23 What Judge Maass decided to do, faced with 24 the overwhelming evidence of misconduct that she 25 had, but at that point not aware that there had

1 levelling the playing field, but she had no idea
2 of the extent to which the playing field had
3 been imbalanced by the participation in this
4 fraudulent conduct by Morgan Stanley's inhouse
5 legal staff.

6 Had she known that, had she known that, she
7 has told us herself that the implications are 8 that it would have added to her response against 9 Morgan Stanley. It would have to. If the 10 imbalance is greater than what she perceived it
11 to be, she needs to do something more to correct
12 that imbalance in the scales, to level the 13 playing field, if it is more imbalanced, more
14 unlevel than she had perceived it to be to begin
15 with.

16 Most significantly, what Morgan Stanley
17 accomplished by lying about the innocence of its 18 inhouse legal staff, the bottom line of what it
19 accomplished was to defeat Coleman (Parent)
20 Holding's motion for a complete default on 21 liability.

22 A complete default on liability would have 23 included a judicial determination as a matter of 24 law of the fact of damage.

25 One of the elements of liability, as the

1 been any involvement by inhouse counsel, and
2 accepting Morgan Stanley's repeated
3 representations that drew a sharp line
4 distinction between alleged negligence on the 5 part of information technology staffers, on the 6 one hand, and total innocence on the part of 7 inhouse counsel who knew nothing about this,
8 they were ignorant, they were innocent. Faced
9 with that, what the Court decided to do was not 10 to punish Morgan Stanley, but to level the 11 playing field, to impose what Judge Maass
12 herself repeatedly characterized as the least 13 egregious -- or the least severe response to the 14 facts as known to the Court. I'm not going to 15 punish Morgan Stanley, but I must level the 16 playing field. And the order that I am crafting
17 is intended to level the playing field.

18 What we now know is that what Judge Maass
19 attempted to do was impossible. Because you
20 can't level the playing field, you can't add
21 more weight on one side to balance the scales
22 unless you know how severely imbalanced they are 23 to begin with. You don't know how much bad
24 weight is placed on this side.

25 So Judge Maass thought that she was

1 Fourth DCA has clearly told us in this case, was
2 the fact of damage. Had the fact of damage been
3 established by the granting of a complete
4 default, had that occurred, the judgment would 5 have had to have been affirmed at least with 6 regard to nominal damages, which would have
7 supported a recovery of punitive damages at the 8 very least.

9 THE COURT: All right. Let me make -- as I
10 understand the Fourth DCA opinion, it went to 11 the theory that the expert utilized in proving 12 the amount of damages and the failure to -- a
13 lot of papers here -- but the failure to utilize
14 I believe it was an event study.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Correct, for the first time in 16 Florida's judicial history, a tort feisor was 17 relieved of the general common law principles of 18 causation, and the Plaintiff was obliged to 19 prove not only that some of its damages were 20 caused by the tort feisor, but that all of its 21 damages were caused by the tort feisor.

22 THE COURT: So if a default judgment as to 23 damages was, hypothetically, contemplated or 24 would have been contemplated by the judge in the 25 face of this information, the fact of damages,

1 how is it that the Plaintiff -- what is the
2 Plaintiff's argument as to why the strategy and
3 theory employed by its expert in putting forth
4 amount of damages would have been different such
5 that the Fourth would not have done what it did?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I have two responses to Your
7 Honor's question. The first is that even if it
8 were not different, even had the Plaintiff
9 pursued exactly the same damage strategy with 10 the express approval of the trial court, because 11 clearly the damage theory was a subject of 12 extensive pretrial argument. And it was in 13 accordance with the Court's pretrial rulings
14 that this damage theory was advanced.

15 So even if we had advanced exactly the same
16 damage theory, had there been a complete default
17 with regard to liability issues, the fact of 18 damage would have been established as a matter
19 of law. That means that even if we adduced no
20 proof as to the amount, we are entitled to one
21 dollar, a token amount, a peppercorn in damages
22 as a consequence of the intentional violation of 23 our rights once there is a finding that some 24 damage has occurred.

25 THE COURT: What case law do you point to

1 MR. SCAROLA: The amount.

2 THE COURT: -- damages, the amount. But I
3 have not seen, if you can point it out, the 4 distinction between the fact of damages and the 5 amount of damages.

6 MR. SCAROLA: It is an issue that we have 7 dealt with in the memorandum, Your Honor. And 8 I'll try to point the Court to the specific 9 pages. I'm sure that the staff behind me is 10 scurrying as we speak to be able to identify it.

11 THE COURT: And on that issue of, if that's 12 the case, that even if the Fourth were to --
13 well, and the Fourth did what it did in finding 14 the presentation by the expert to be
15 inappropriate that nevertheless there must be a 16 determination of a nominal amount of damages as 17 opposed to no damages, which is what the Court
18 said in this instance.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Surely. I don't want to lose
20 sight in focusing upon this argument, to the 21 extent we have, that our position is we need not 22 show any prejudice.

23 THE COURT: Well, that brings me to another
24 question, which is -- and it kind of dovetails
25 with the intrinsic and extrinsic and does it

1 to, first, show that a form of default judgment
2 goes beyond a finding of liability, a default
3 judgment as to liability, but is contemplated as 4 to the fact of damage?

5 And, secondly, what legal authority is there
6 as to assuming there was such a finding by the 7 trial court of a default or an imposition of a
8 default judgment as to the fact of damage as 9 well as liability that even if the Fourth were 10 to find the theory and strategy employed was 11 inappropriate, that nevertheless there, by law,
12 must be a determination of a nominal amount of 13 damages? Is there a legal authority for those 14 two principles?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there are cases
16 that are cited in our memorandum with regard to 17 those issues. And, I'm sorry, but I don't 18 recall them off the top of my head. When I have 19 an opportunity to address the Court with some 20 brief rebuttal, I'll try to have those available
21 to Your Honor. I just can't respond right now.

22 THE COURT: Because I'm familiar with the 23 body of law that speaks to default judgments.
24 And if it's an unliquidated amount of money,
25 there is always the issue to having establish --

1 really make a difference or not and what do the 2 different courts say about the finding of 3 prejudice, but doesn't it all come back to
4 Flemenbaum and what I call or consider the, this
5 third prong of Flemenbaum, there's the stating 6 the fraud with specificity and particularity and 7 then there's this language, in addition to 8 specifying the fraud, the motion should explain
9 why the fraud, if it exists, would entitle the
10 movant to have the judgment set aside.

11 And that language has been cited and that 12 case has been cited, you know, repeatedly since 13 it was decided in 1994, actually as recently as 14 yesterday there was an opinion that came out
15 citing Flemenbaum in another circuit.

16 So I guess prejudice or no prejudice as it
17 relates to fraud on the Court or fraud in 18 general or fraud as to CPH coming back to that 19 prong of Flemenbaum.

20 MR. SCAROLA: And our response is that that 21 prong of Flemenbaum is satisfied when there is a 22 demonstrated fraud on the court. Because the 23 integrity of the system is so important that 24 when you have demonstrated that the nature of 25 the fraud is an attack on the integrity of the

1 Court, you have given rise to a presumption that
 2 there has been prejudice. And that's exactly
 3 what the U.S. Supreme Court said in the 4 Hazel-Atlas Glass Company case. They said that
 5 a litigant who attempts to defraud the Court
 6 cannot deny the effectiveness of its fraud after 7 the fact.

8 The multiple federal cases that we've cited
 9 to Your Honor specifically state, prejudice is 10 not an element of fraud on the court. And 11 Flemenbaum, my recollection is, is not a fraud
 12 on the court case. It is talking about fraud
 13 generally, but not specifically dealing with 14 fraud in the context of fraud on the court.

15 Those federal cases also say that the 16 inquiry as to whether a judgment should be set
 17 aside for fraud on the court focuses not on 18 prejudice, but rather on whether the alleged 19 fraud harms the integrity of the judicial 20 process.

21 And I don't think there can be any question
 22 when we look at the specified litany of 23 misconduct on Morgan Stanley's part and the 24 impact that it had throughout these proceedings,
 25 particularly with regard to its having been able

1 determinations. And we know that's the case
 2 because when she found out she had been misled
 3 in that regard, she clearly acknowledged the 4 fact that this makes a big difference to me.

5 The trial court's November 10, 2005 order in 6 which Judge Maass declined to rule on the 7 pending criminal contempt motions, as CPH had
 8 expressly requested, clearly recognizes in a way
 9 that relieves us of any obligation to try to 10 speculate about how Judge Maass -- how important
 11 Judge Maass thought these matters were, because 12 she says that these revelations could alter the 13 current record of what Morgan Stanley knew and 14 when it knew it and could add to the judicial
 15 response to Morgan Stanley's litigation
 16 misconduct. There's only one direction in which 17 to go and that direction was in the direction of 18 a complete default.

19 Under Rule 1.380(b)(2) there are three 20 purposes that may be served by the imposition of 21 discovery sanctions. Judge Maass focused on one
 22 and one only and that was levelling the playing 23 field.

24 Morgan Stanley has not been punished and
 25 deterred, they have been rewarded.

1 to avoid the entry of a complete default, I
 2 don't think there's any question about the fact
 3 that we've got to conclude that this was a
 4 highly successful assault on the integrity of 5 the judicial process.

6 The three cases that Morgan Stanley cites,
 7 there are three Florida cases that they cite.
 8 And not one of them involves allegations of 9 fraud on the court. That's an important
 10 distinction. And as I said earlier, it's a
 11 distinction that I suggest makes logical sense.

12 I'm going to provide the Court with an
 13 outline that I hope will be helpful to you.

14 This is what we have described as a sampling
 15 of Morgan Stanley's now admitted
 16 misrepresentations to the Court. And I don't 17 think that it's possible to go through this to 18 any extent at all and not recognize how material
 19 Morgan Stanley itself understood the distinction
 20 between non-lawyer misconduct and lawyer
 21 misconduct to be.

22 It is an argument that they made over and 23 over and over again. It is an argument that 24 they made very successfully to the trial court.
 25 It clearly had an influence on Judge Maass'

1 The integrity of the judicial system has not
 2 been vindicated, it stands as of now severely
 3 crippled.

4 This motion gives the Court the opportunity
 5 to appropriately punish Morgan Stanley and to 6 vindicate the Court's integrity, to do justice
 7 under circumstances where as of now a great
 8 injustice has been done and remains uncorrected.

9 The Court had the full authority to impose a
 10 total default. And we suggest that when this
 11 judgment is vacated, pursuant to the provisions
 12 of Rule 1.540(b)(3), that that would be 13 appropriate relief. But we're not there yet and 14 that's not an issue that we yet need to deal
 15 with.

16 Morgan Stanley's second defense -- we've 17 been dealing with the first defense. Their 18 second defense is that CPH's motion is
 19 foreclosed by the Fourth DCA's mandate.

20 Our response to that is that the fact that a
 21 case has been the subject of an appeal does not
 22 alter the trial court's authority to grant Rule
 23 1.540(b) motion.

24 There are three cases that we have cited to 25 Your Honor, two of those are Fourth DCA cases.

1 They are Native Hammock, Molinos and Analyte
2 Diagnostics.

3 And it is the Molinos case and the Analyte
4 Diagnostics case that I think are most
5 instructive in terms of responding to this
6 argument by Morgan Stanley.

7 I'm not going to go through the facts of 8 those cases except to say that the Fourth DCA
9 has clearly indicated in facts very similar to 10 those before Your Honor right now that the fact
11 that an appellate court has affirmed a judgment
12 in favor of a Defendant, or has reversed a 13 Plaintiff's judgment and directed the entry of 14 judgment in favor of the Defendant does not in 15 any way preclude the consideration of a motion
16 based upon fraud pursuant to Rule 1.540.

17 The law of the case doctrine upon which
18 Morgan Stanley attempts to rely applies only 19 where the issue was actually argued and decided,
20 not where it merely could have been argued and 21 decided, so said the Florida Supreme Court in 22 its decision in the Juliano case in 2001. And 23 that is a principle that the Fourth DCA has 24 expressly cited to in arriving at the conclusion
25 that the issuance of a mandate does not preclude

1 consideration of Rule 1.540 relief.

2 The last argument that Morgan Stanley makes
3 is one of waiver. And we respond in two ways.
4 We could not waive that which we lacked the 5 ability to pursue. And waiver is an equitable
6 defense and it requires clean hands.

7 Morgan Stanley does not have clean hands.

8 Coleman had no reason, ability or obligation
9 to act sooner than it did to address Morgan
10 Stanley's fraud until the reversal of the 11 favorable judgment that Coleman had received.

12 It appeared that Morgan Stanley's fraud on 13 the court, while successful in avoiding a 14 complete liability default, had not been
15 successful in evading an adverse judgment.

16 As Molinos and Analyte, the two Fourth DCA
17 cases that I referenced, demonstrate, the Fourth
18 District would not have addressed fraud issues
19 that had not been presented to the trial court.
20 Factual findings needed to be made at the trial
21 court level before the Fourth district would 22 deal with issues relating to allegations of 23 fraud.

24 As Molinos further demonstrates, the Fourth
25 DCA might very well have declined in this case,

1 as it expressly did in Molinos, to relinquish
2 jurisdiction back to the trial court to consider
3 issues with regard to allegations of fraud, even 4 if the Fourth DCA had been asked to do so. That 5 happened in Molinos, the Fourth DCA declined to 6 relinquish jurisdiction.

7 The unsuccessful litigant at that point,
8 after an adverse judgment was entered against
9 it, filed a Rule 1.540 motion. The trial court
10 said, no, sorry, you're precluded by the 11 issuance of the mandate. The Fourth DCA said,
12 oh, no, that's not the case. We did not deal
13 with that issue, even though it was presented in 14 that circumstance to the appellate court in the 15 briefs submitted by the parties. Fourth DCA
16 said, we did not deal with that issue, it wasn't
17 dealt with by the trial court. The trial court
18 does have the authority and the obligation to 19 deal with the Rule 1.540 motion allegations.

20 As the trial court's order on the criminal
21 contempt motion proves, this trial court was not
22 prepared to disturb the appellate record as it
23 existed until the appeal was concluded.

24 So we are here before Your Honor doing
25 exactly what the Fourth DCA told us we ought to

1 do, following the guidance of Molinos and
2 Analyte. We are before the trial court asking
3 the trial court to make the findings necessary
4 to determine our entitlement to relief.

5 This is a case in which Morgan Stanley's
6 hands are very dirty. The magnitude of its 7 litigation misconduct is rivaled only by the 8 magnitude of the misconduct in which it engaged
9 in the underlying, massive underlying Sunbeam
10 fraud.

11 The June 17, 2005 retraction notice was 12 delayed until a month after the trial was 13 concluded. It's vague. It's ambiguous. It's 14 woefully incomplete. It's actively misleading.
15 It fails to include any details as to who knew
16 what, when it was learned, how it was learned,
17 whether, why and to what extent disclosures of 18 the misrepresentations it acknowledges was 19 delayed.

20 The December 21, 2006 notification is little
21 better. It's characterized as a clarification.
22 It's filed six months after the appeal was 23 argued. And it does very little to correct the 24 deficiencies in the June 2005 notice and does
25 nothing to tell anyone what the truth is, only

1 to attempt to shield Morgan Stanley from the
2 consequences of some of the lies in which it had
3 been caught.

4 In conclusion, Your Honor, the main focus of
5 Morgan Stanley's defense against the imposition
6 of a complete default on liability, which we 7 contend would have included a default finding on 8 the fact of damage, was to distinguish between 9 the allegedly negligent, simply negligent acts
10 of the IT staff and the professed lack of 11 knowledge, innocence and diligence on the part
12 of Morgan Stanley's inhouse legal staff.

13 As Morgan Stanley's trial counsel described 14 it, the innocence of the lawyers was the 15 headline of Morgan Stanley's efforts to resist
16 the imposition of a complete default that had 17 been requested.

18 That entire theme, separating inhouse
19 counsel from the negligence of the IT staff, was 20 built on a series of what we now know were flat
21 out lies. The real headline is that those who 22 were charged with protecting the integrity of 23 the system had joined in the assault on the 24 system.

25 The outcome of this case clearly would have

1 mentioned earlier and you said maybe some staff
2 are looking into it in response to my question
3 about perhaps a default judgment as to liability
4 and the fact of damages. Here you speak about
5 altering the burden of proof as to damages.

6 MR. SCAROLA: There are two --

7 THE COURT: Is that a different concept?

8 MR. SCAROLA: It is a different concept,
9 Your Honor. There are two different things that 10 could have happened. A complete default could 11 have been entered in which the fact of damage
12 was established. Or the court could have
13 reversed the burden of proof and required Morgan
14 Stanley to prove non-causation, required Morgan
15 Stanley to demonstrate that the damages that 16 Coleman suffered were not attributable to Morgan
17 Stanley's involvement in the fraud.

18 THE COURT: And the question I had was: Do
19 you have any legal authority for any court that 20 has altered that burden of proof as to damages?

21 MR. SCAROLA: I know that such authority
22 exists. I don't remember whether we've included
23 it in our moving papers. But I do remember that
24 one of the issues that was expressly addressed
25 before Judge Maass was a reversal of the burden

1 been different had the Court known about the
2 full extent and nature of Morgan Stanley's
3 misconduct. But whether it would have made a
4 difference to Judge Maass or not, and she's told
5 us it would have, but whether it would or not,
6 it makes a difference to this Court, it makes a
7 difference that the process that has taken place
8 up to this point in time was so grossly infected
9 with misconduct that it cannot reasonably be 10 said to anyone that Coleman (Parent) Holding has 11 had its fair day in court.

12 Give us the opportunity to conduct
13 additional discovery and we will demonstrate to 14 Your Honor that the egregiousness of Morgan
15 Stanley's conduct is even far worse than what we 16 now know it to be and didn't know it to be 17 before.

18 Thank you very much, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Two clarifying questions before
20 you sit down. On page 36 of your memo you say
21 that it would have been appropriate for the 22 Court to have imposed a total default as to 23 liability and to have altered the burden of 24 proof as to damages. Are you saying something
25 different there than you said in court? You

1 of proof. Indeed, the first order that Judge
2 Maass entered, the first of the two sanction
3 orders, was an order that basically reversed the 4 burden of proof. It was the second order that
5 established specified facts as uncontestable.
6 But initially Judge Maass simply reversed the 7 burden of proof.

8 THE COURT: Are you saying there was an
9 order that she entered?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. Not with 11 regard -- it did not specifically deal with the 12 damage issue. It was limited to other issues of 13 liability. The Court entered a first response
14 to Morgan Stanley's misconduct.

15 Again, these disclosures came in 16 progression. At one point in time, based upon 17 the information then available to the Court, the 18 Court concluded that the appropriate response
19 was, in effect, to reverse the burden of proof.
20 And there's clearly case law that allows the 21 Court to do that.

22 And, subsequently, after additional
23 disclosures were made of further misconduct on 24 Morgan Stanley's part, the Court took the 25 further step not simply of reversing the burden

1 of proof, but establishing certain facts as
2 deemed established that the jury was required to
3 accept, without the necessity of proof or the 4 ability to contest them.

5 THE COURT: Then when you speak about
6 negative causation then on page 44 of your memo,
7 are you -- is that the same as what you speak
8 about as altering the burden of proof as to 9 damages?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, yes.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much.

12 MR. SCAROLA: You're welcome. Thank you. I
13 appreciate your attention, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: I would ask, do you want a break
15 before you go into your response?

16 MR. ROGOW: I'm ready.

17 THE COURT: How about our court reporter?

18 COURT REPORTER: I'm fine.

19 MR. ROGOW: I just need to gather a few
20 things here, Your Honor.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, if I may, I have 22 for both opposing counsel and the Court a copy
23 of the visual aids that we have provided, which 24 I'll give Your Honor.

25 MR. ROGOW: Your Honor, this is the case you

1 of finality. These are extraordinary remedies
2 and so the showing of colorable entitlement is
3 critical to a court's decision. And what does
4 that mean? It means affecting the judgment.

5 When we talk about affecting the judgment,
6 it's the judgment of this Court and basically
7 what they're saying is, because this Court
8 followed what the Fourth DCA's mandate required
9 it to do. There was no right to a second bite
10 at the apple. It's meant that the proving of 11 damages was deficient. And now we have a
12 judgment.

13 And they're saying, basically, and you heard
14 at the end of his comments, that it would have 15 been different; we wouldn't have had to prove 16 damages. Well, that's certainly not so. As 17 Your Honor pointed out, there is an obligation,
18 even if a total default were entered, there's an 19 obligation to prove damages. And the Fourth DCA
20 found that they failed in their method of 21 proving damages and that was the end of the 22 case.

23 So when we talk about affecting the 24 judgment, we're talking about whether any of 25 these things that they're talking about, the

1 were talking about yesterday from the Third
2 District, the Hinson versus Hinson case.

3 THE COURT: Right, I think I have that.

4 MR. ROGOW: I've just given copies to the 5 other side, too. So there's another copy.

6 The case that mentions Flemenbaum.

7 THE COURT: Yes, that's the -- right, out of 8 the Third District, 2008.

9 MR. ROGOW: Let me start with a comment that 10 Mr. Scarola made that I think is really at the 11 heart of what we're talking about and some of 12 your Your Honor's questions, I think, address
13 this issue.

14 And that's the question of what is a
15 colorable entitlement? And when Your Honor
16 referred to Flemenbaum, Flemenbaum, of course,
17 has a language with regard to, in addition to 18 specifying the fraud, the motion is to explain
19 why the fraud, if it exists, would entitle the
20 movant to have the judgment set aside.

21 And the judgment in this case, of course, is 22 the judgment that you entered in January based 23 upon the mandate of the Fourth District Court of 24 Appeal. And when we look at the 1.540(b), I
25 think we also have to be cognizant of the notion

1 long litany of misdeeds that they've ascribed to
2 Morgan Stanley, whether or not accepting all of
3 those as true, as we do for the purpose of this 4 motion, whether or not that could affect the 5 judgment, the fact that they failed to use a
6 method for establishing damages that was 7 required.

8 Case number 28 in their collection of cases,
9 Robinson versus Wyland uses the language that 10 I've mentioned to the Court. The motion must 11 show that the fraud affected the judgment. And 12 Robinson versus Wyland actually says it twice at 13 page 777, I think it is, the case is 936 So.2d
14 777, a Fifth DCA case, September 2006. Under 15 1.540 if you plead fraud or misrepresentation
16 with particularity, that's fine. And you have 17 to show how that fraud or misrepresentation
18 affected the judgment. And if it affected the 19 judgment, then the trial court is required to 20 conduct an evidentiary hearing.

21 Later on in the same paragraph the Court
22 writes, "The motion filed by Robinson
23 sufficiently alleges fraud and demonstrates how 24 it affected the judgment, thereby satisfying the 25 requirement for an evidentiary hearing under

1 Rule 1.530."

2 So the answer to the question of what
3 colorable entitlement means is it means
4 affecting the judgment.

5 And there's another case Ashland Oil versus 6 Picard, a 1974 case from the Third District in 7 which the same kind of statement is made, it's 8 at headnote 3 in the body of the case, "We have 9 carefully considered the briefs and arguments of 10 counsel and have concluded that the appellants
11 have failed to make a prima facia showing of 12 fraud which affected the judgment in the case."

13 So I'm trying to give substance to this more
14 amorphous concept of affecting the judgment.

15 And Mr. Scarola said, if there is no
16 colorable claim, there is no entitlement to 17 discovery. And so the thrust of our argument is 18 that there is no colorable claim, because 19 nothing that they have complained about in this 20 case affected the judgment, affected what the 21 first -- what the Fourth DCA said.

22 And if you take a look at the decision in
23 Morgan Stanley, the language is very clear.
24 "Because there was no proof presented at trial
25 on the correct measure of damages, the trial

1 things in the e-mails that might have been
2 helpful to them in the damage case, but helpful
3 or not isn't the standard here. The question
4 is: When they put on proof, even if there were
5 things in the e-mails that said, gee, we know
6 that they weren't worth anything, that Sunbeam
7 wasn't worth anything, they still have an 8 obligation to come forward with some measure of 9 proof of the damages at the time of the 10 transaction.

11 So really no matter what might have been in 12 the e-mails, it did not change the decision, it
13 could not change the decision that they made
14 about how they were going to prove it. They 15 started with zero. And even if we had e-mails
16 that were helpful to them with regard to what 17 Sunbeam was worth, they still had to put on 18 damage evidence. And they chose to put on 19 damage evidence that was completely faulty in 20 terms of what the Fourth DCA required.

21 So there's nothing in there. And certainly 22 when, because that's really, if you take a look 23 at papers that CPH has filed, what they're
24 saying is the issue is: What did the inhouse
25 lawyers know and when did they know it? That is

1 court should have granted Morgan Stanley's
2 motion for directed verdict. We, therefore,
3 reverse the final judgment for compensatory
4 damages and remand for entry of a judgment for
5 Morgan Stanley."

6 And so what the Court has done has said that 7 at the end of the Plaintiff's case where they 8 chose to put on the method of damage proof that
9 they wanted to put on, at the end of that case,
10 the directed verdict should have been granted,
11 because they failed to provide the proper
12 measure of damages under the law.

13 THE COURT: So what about, hypothetically,
14 if there was something contained on the e-mail
15 that went to issues relating to damages. And 16 based on that, the Plaintiff made a different
17 decision as to how it would have its expert
18 present damages?

19 MR. ROGOW: They instructed their expert to 20 assume no value at the beginning. Nothing that 21 these e-mails would have related to could have 22 changed the decision that they made. They made
23 the decision to go with zero damages. They had 24 an obligation to show damages. Even if, and I
25 heard Mr. Scarola say, there might have been

1 something different from what the question is
2 that Your Honor asked me. Their whole thrust
3 this afternoon is: What did the inhouse lawyers
4 know and when did they know it? And the simple
5 answer to that is it doesn't make any difference
6 with regard to the way that they decided to 7 prove their damage case.

8 And Mr. Scarola said the test is: Do the 9 moving papers layout a prima facia case of 10 fraud? And that is short, too, in terms of its 11 analysis. The question is a prima facie case of 12 fraud affecting the judgment in order to get to 13 the kind of discovery that they want to do.

14 He talks about it altering the course of 15 proceedings; what you really heard from him is 16 that Judge Maass might have done something else.
17 That's what he's talking about. It would have 18 been a different sanction. And the different
19 sanction that he's talking about is a different 20 sanction of default. That's seemingly the 21 ultimate kind of sanction that could be imposed.

22 And as the Court pointed out, even if it was 23 a total default, even if Morgan Stanley had 24 never even answered the complaint, they would 25 have had to prove damages. And their method of

1 proving damages was faulty.
 2 But let me get back to this affecting the
 3 judgment. Because it really is what this case
 4 is all about, whether or not accepting these 5 papers as true, all the allegations as true is 6 kind of like a motion to dismiss a complaint.
 7 In a motion to dismiss a complaint, you accept
 8 all the allegations as true. The question is:
 9 Does it state a cause of action? Does it state
 10 a claim upon which relief can be granted?
 11 Actually, it's even a heightened inquiry here, I
 12 think, because of the finality of the judgment.
 13 When you take a look at each one of the 14 cases that they have cited in their papers, and 15 I'm going to go down through them and refer 16 again to the number in their book, because it is 17 helpful, and you mentioned one of these before,
 18 or two of them, and they're the first two that I
 19 have DeClaire versus Johanna from the Florida
 20 Supreme Court. A false financial affidavit and 21 the net worth went to the issue that was being 22 tried. So that affects the judgment.
 23 And Palmas DeMajorca, number 4. There there
 24 was a forged and altered check. And that, too,
 25 was fraud that affected the judgment.

1 the Court, that's the kind of misconduct.
 2 Venture Industries, which is a 60(b) case, a
 3 different result would have occurred. A
 4 different result would have occurred because of 5 the allegations, because there was falsified
 6 information in a financial statement.
 7 And their two biggest cases which Your Honor
 8 mentioned, Dynasty Express and Schleger, number
 9 8 in their reply book and number 21 in their 10 reply book.
 11 In Dynasty the doctor lied about whether or 12 not he was going to continue practicing
 13 medicine. And based upon that lie, he obtained
 14 a judgment. So that lie affected the judgment.
 15 Schleger is the same thing. She defeated
 16 the jurisdiction of the courts in a custody
 17 support case by saying that she lived in New 18 York, there was no jurisdiction in Florida.
 19 Fourth DCA said she lied about that, it affected
 20 the judgment.
 21 Another case, number 32, Southern Bell. A
 22 woman lied about her eye injury and she got
 23 moneys from Southern Bell based upon the fraud.
 24 Every one of the cases that they have cited
 25 involves a situation where the specific fraud

1 They cited, and this is an out of state
 2 case, Chewning versus The Ford Motor Company, a
 3 South Carolina Supreme Court case. Ford's
 4 attorneys hired an expert to testify falsely
 5 regarding Broncos. Affected the judgment,
 6 affected the presentation of evidence at trial.
 7 Number 27, Humphrey, another case that they
 8 cited. Company vice-president lied about gun
 9 tests. It went on and on.
 10 Hazel-Atlas, the one Supreme Court that was 11 mentioned in passing, I think, by Mr. Scarola.
 12 There the lawyers lied about securing the 13 patent. They had somebody do a phony document
 14 in order to secure a patent and then brought a 15 patent infringement case and even lied to the 16 Court of Appeals. And the Supreme Court
 17 ultimately said, we're not going to tolerate
 18 this. But that affected the judgment. The 19 whole case was built upon the fraud that had 20 been obtained by the lawyers' misconduct.
 21 And you go through all of those cases,
 22 number 3, Anderson versus Cryovac, suppressed
 23 report of contamination in wells in Boston where 24 there was contamination because of a tannery.
 25 Report suppressed, that's the kind of fraud upon

1 that they're talking about affected the
 2 judgment. The judgment would not have occurred
 3 but for the fraud.
 4 And what they're saying here is that Morgan
 5 Stanley's inhouse counsel knew before June 2004
 6 or before July 2004, but there's nothing, based
 7 on that, that would have affected the judgment.
 8 They're really talking about a super
 9 sanction. That's the default that they're 10 talking about. Even the notion of shifting the 11 burden of proof. And Mr. Scarola is right that 12 there was a shifting with regard only to the 13 liability. There was no shifting or anything
 14 like that with regard to damages.
 15 So he wants a total default. And he's 16 saying that if there had been a total default,
 17 then he wouldn't have lost the case in the 18 Fourth DCA. That's really the heart of what 19 he's saying.
 20 First of all, it's highly speculative in
 21 terms of this discussion about what Judge Maass
 22 might have done, what Judge Maass would have 23 done or what Judge Maass should have done. I
 24 don't think that's the perspective that this 25 Court should use in looking at this.

1 I think you have to look at it and say based
 2 upon the papers that you have in front of you,
 3 would this have affected the judgment? The fact
 4 that Morgan Stanley's lawyers knew before July
 5 2004 about the missing e-mails. If there had
 6 been, as I said earlier, if there had been a
 7 complete failure to answer and a total default
 8 entered, it still requires a trial on damages.
 9 Talucci versus Matthew, which we've cited, a
 10 960 So 2d where the Court said right here in the 11 Fourth DCA, "For more than a century the law in 12 Florida is that a defaulted defendant has the 13 right to contest the amount of unliquidated
 14 damages. They would have had to put on evidence
 15 of damages."
 16 And, oddly enough, in the Morgan Stanley
 17 decision itself the Court writes, It is 18 fundamental that, quote, actual damages and the 19 measure thereof are essential as a matter of law
 20 in establishing a claim of fraud. And it has a 21 whole host of cites. It's at headnote 89. And 22 then the last sentence in that paragraph is,
 23 "Thus to prevail in an action for fraud, a
 24 plaintiff must prove its actual loss or injury
 25 from acting in reliance on the false

1 them from using the right measure of damages,
 2 precluded them from using the right measure of
 3 damages.
 4 They cite three cases to try to back into
 5 the notion that somehow or other they could have
 6 gotten away without having to put on any damage
 7 evidence. There's number 29, number 11 and 8 number 18 in their book, Rose, Delta Information
 9 and the Harlass case.
 10 And the two of those cases, Rose and Delta
 11 Information, dealt with accounting situations
 12 where the production that was necessary for the 13 accounting was not produced by the party. But 14 even there in the Rose case the Plaintiff still 15 had to prove its damages. The Defendant
 16 couldn't contest it, but the Plaintiff still had 17 to prove it.
 18 And Delta Information is an accounting case
 19 also.
 20 And the first case they cite, I think, in 21 that portion of their argument, in their motion,
 22 the Harlass case, which dealt with comparative
 23 negligence and the issue was whether or not you
 24 could preclude a defaulted defendant from 25 showing comparative negligence. But that is not

1 representation."
 2 So at that moment they had the obligation to
 3 put on evidence that was sufficient under the 4 law to establish actual damage. This is not
 5 about some notion of presuming some kind of 6 damage.
 7 And even if, and by the way, the Morgan
 8 Stanley decision even addresses that, it says
 9 that "Even if CPH established the fact," and 10 that is at headnote 10 and 11, "Even if CPH
 11 established the fact of some unquantified
 12 damage, which, theoretically, could have 13 supported a nominal damage award, this is not
 14 enough to justify a punitive damage award in a 15 fraud case. Punitive damages cannot be based on 16 nominal damages alone in a fraud case."
 17 The bottom line is that the Morgan Stanley
 18 opinion itself really sounds the death knell for 19 the argument that they're making here.
 20 So what are the cases that they have cited
 21 for the notion that somehow or other they could
 22 get over the obligation to have proven damages
 23 correctly? And that I think is the key to this.
 24 They've got to be able to show to the Court that
 25 there was some fraudulent conduct that precluded

1 this question, because even in that case the
 2 Court said that the Plaintiff still has to prove
 3 damages. There is no Florida case that they can 4 produce to show that there is a way for the 5 Plaintiff in a fraud case to avoid putting on 6 the proper measure of proof for damages.
 7 So when we come to the issue of did it
 8 affect the judgment, not strategies, not 9 choices, not changes, is there something; every 10 case that they have pointed to involved conduct
 11 that absolutely affected the judgment. You
 12 could look at that conduct, if it were true,
 13 then the judgment was affected. But that's not 14 what they're saying here.
 15 The question they're asking, and Mr. Scarola
 16 has said it many times this afternoon, he 17 said -- he asked, did it alter the course of the 18 proceedings? Maybe it altered the course of the 19 proceedings in their mind about what Judge Maass
 20 would have done, but it didn't alter the course
 21 of proceedings with regard to the method of 22 proving damages. That's what you talk about.
 23 If you're going to talk about altering the 24 course of the proceedings, the question to ask
 25 is: Did it alter the course of proceedings with

1 regard to your choice about proving damages?

2 Mr. Scarola said, the lies influence the
3 decisions of the Court specifically with regard
4 to the sanctions. But even if the ultimate
5 sanction was given, the default sanction was 6 given, then they still had to go on and prove
7 damages.

8 So you cannot have a default of damages.
9 Had the fact of damage been established
10 properly, this would be a much different case.
11 But the fact of damage was not properly
12 established. And the judgment was entered as a 13 result of that. So there is no default as to 14 the damages under Florida law.

15 Now, what else have they talked about?
16 They've talked about this notion of shifting the 17 burden, negative causation. The Court asked,
18 are there any cases? And there isn't. The only 19 cases they've cited are federal cases under 20 federal securities statute.

21 So this notion, which is their last gasp
22 effort to show that something different could
23 have happened, has no bases in Florida law.

24 Their next to last gasp effort, maybe we 25 would have gotten a total default also. Still

1 leaves them holding the duty to prove damages,
2 which they simply didn't do. And the Fourth DCA
3 made that clear.

4 I'm not arguing law of the case. I don't
5 see this as law of the case. I don't think that
6 this is really foreclosed by the Fourth DCA
7 opinion, but I think there is a waiver issue
8 here. And I think talking about the waiver
9 issue is very helpful. Because it ties into the 10 timing. And I've given the Court a timeline. I
11 think I -- did I pass the Court the timeline of 12 chronology? I think I gave the Court the case,
13 but not the timeline.

14 THE COURT: If you have a copy and want to 15 give it to me.

16 MR. ROGOW: Here's what's interesting about
17 this. There's the June notice that you heard so
18 much about from Mr. Scarola, the June 17, 2005
19 notice. So at that point they get this notice,
20 which had a lot of specificity about what 21 statements were being retracted. It's after the 22 trial, but the judgment hasn't been entered yet.
23 They don't do anything about that then. They 24 don't say, judge, we should have a super
25 sanction at this point now that we have this

1 June 17 notice that backs away from all the
2 prior statements.

3 The notice of appeal is filed by Morgan
4 Stanley. They don't cross appeal. Should they 5 have cross appealed? You know, if I were in 6 their position and thought that I should have
7 gotten a bigger sanction, a better sanction, a
8 default sanction because of the June 17 notice,
9 I probably would have filed a notice of cross
10 appeal. Do they have to? I'm not so sure that 11 they have to, but they didn't. And that part is 12 undisputed.

13 The briefing is done.

14 The argument occurs June 28, 2006, almost 15 two years ago.

16 And then 12-21-2006 we filed a second notice
17 with the Fourth DCA, the notice that Mr. Scarola
18 talked about clarifying the prior one, that was 19 prior to July 2004 that inhouse counsel knew.
20 And the question really in my mind is, so what?
21 The first notice said they knew in July, the 22 second notice they said knew about it prior to 23 that. So what, in terms of affecting the 24 judgment in this case.

25 They don't do anything in response to that

1 notice except embrace it. They file a notice to 2 the Court. We filed that notice on 12-21 with 3 the DCA and with the Circuit Court. And what do
4 they say to the DCA? They say, well, this just
5 confirms that the sanctions that were imposed
6 were properly imposed. They don't say to the 7 DCA, oh, now we have this new notice in December
8 that says, well, prior to July 2004 inhouse
9 counsel knew. They don't say, relinquish
10 jurisdiction, send it back, maybe we need to do
11 something more now that we know this new fact.
12 Nothing except really to embrace it and use it
13 as an argument in favor of affirming the 14 decision.

15 In fact, it's interesting, if one reads
16 their brief, their answer brief at pages 11 to 17 16, they have gone through the whole litany of 18 misconduct and, in fact, they mention the June
19 notice at pages 11 and pages 15 of their answer
20 brief as examples of how poorly, how badly
21 Morgan Stanley had acted.

22 So there's nothing new here. They knew the 23 June 17. Now they've got the 12-21 notice. The 24 Court has already heard the arguments in the 25 case. There's no decision. They do nothing but

1 embrace it.
 2 Then the decision comes down in March 2006.
 3 And when the decision comes down, they move for 4 rehearing, rehearing en banc certification. Not
 5 a word is said about the June notice, about the 6 December notice. They're not saying, oh, wow.
 7 They do say, how can you let Morgan Stanley get 8 away with this and not give us a new trial, but 9 they don't say a word about the June and the 10 December notice.

11 And let me focus on the December notice,
 12 because that is -- that is there in front of the 13 DCA. So they make no mention of it.

14 Now, does that constitute waiver as a matter
 15 of law? Again, just like I talked about, I'm 16 not going to rest my argument on waiver, because
 17 I think they fail in terms of the colorable
 18 entitlement to begin with, but I think it sets
 19 the stage for how we look at it. This is a last 20 gasp effort, a late night concept that came to 21 them at some point when they realized, because 22 even they went to the Florida Supreme Court,
 23 they didn't say anything in the Florida Supreme
 24 Court either about maybe it should go back.
 25 They didn't ask the DCA for relinquishment of

1 put on evidence of the value on the date of the 2 transaction. And no matter what else is out
 3 there, they utterly failed to do that.
 4 And having failed to do that, and then
 5 having lost in the Fourth DCA with an order that
 6 judgment gets entered for us, because they tried
 7 their case on their basis and they lost it,
 8 nothing that they have alleged now gives them a
 9 right to seek to undo the judgment that this
 10 Court entered based upon the Fourth DCA mandate.

11 So our position, Mr. Scarola is right, we're 12 not saying it's unjust. We're not -- he's given 13 three arguments, I think, that he thinks we 14 made. We're making a strictly legal argument.
 15 Accepting all of the allegations as true, all of 16 the facts of their verified petition as true,
 17 nothing in that shows that it would have
 18 affected the judgment on the unique
 19 circumstances of this case and the Fourth DCA
 20 decision about their utter failure. And every 21 case they've cited goes to something that 22 happened that affected the judgment.

23 THE COURT: Is it your position that fraud
 24 on the court and fraud on the court argument, I
 25 guess you really hadn't spoken to that, but to

1 jurisdiction, they didn't ask the DCA for
 2 rehearing or rehearing en banc based upon the
 3 December and the June notices, nothing.
 4 Complete silence with regard to that.

5 And now they come back here and they say,
 6 ah-ha, we think we have a colorable entitlement.
 7 It is creative. I give them credit for that.
 8 But it does not comply with the strict legal
 9 requirement that colorable entitlement means it
 10 affected the judgment. Not that it might, not
 11 that it could have, not that it might have done
 12 something different. And the only issue and 13 they say, I think, at pages 12 and 14 of their 14 motion, is it's all about what they think might 15 have happened had Judge Maass known. And 16 Mr. Scarola has mentioned the two comments she 17 made that it might add to the judicial response.
 18 You know, there are other judicial responses
 19 other than what they're suggesting. When she 20 says it might add to the judicial response, that 21 doesn't mean that she would have given them the 22 super sanction or anything else along that line.

23 But the bottom line is that no matter what,
 24 the best sanction they could get, the default,
 25 they're still left having to get up to bat and

1 the extent that that is one of the arguments
 2 they're making, that that is still subject to
 3 the same analysis of whether it would result or 4 lead to any relief from the judgment, or should
 5 it be analyzed differently?

6 MR. ROGOW: Judge, it still has to affect 7 the judgment, fraud on the court, it would still
 8 have to affect the judgment. There are other 9 sanctions available. Of course, they have their 10 contempt motion pending for what they say were 11 misrepresentations to the Court. And there's 12 the possibility of referring lawyers to the Bar
 13 if it is lawyer misrepresentation or lawyer
 14 misconduct.

15 But I don't care what you call it, how you
 16 describe it, unless they can, in their
 17 complaint, on their pleading show how it
 18 affected the judgment, the judgment entered
 19 against them because of their failure to have 20 proven damages by the proper method of damages,
 21 there is no relief they can get.

22 I'm not admitting any of the terrible things
 23 that they've said, but I am accepting them for 24 the purpose of this 1.540(b) motion, which as I
 25 said at the beginning, has to be decided -- and

1 I'm troubled by this, the looseness of colorable
 2 entitlement. Because when I first saw it I kept
 3 wondering, what is it? What does it mean? It
 4 doesn't say very much. But then when I found
 5 these cases that talk about affecting judgment,
 6 then it all made sense.

7 When you look at the cases, really almost
 8 each one, and I'm looking at another one of 9 their cases which talks about hampering the 10 presentation of the parties' claim. Well,
 11 nothing hampered the presentation of their claim
 12 for damages. It was their choice to put on 13 damages that way. Nothing that we did
 14 interfered with the choice that they made in 15 choosing to prove damages the way they did.

16 And in the DeClaire case it talks about
 17 fraud, as this Court has defined extrinsic
 18 fraud, and DeClaire does talk about the 19 extrinsic/intrinsic issue that Your Honor
 20 raised, as the prevention of an unsuccessful
 21 party from presenting his case by fraud or 22 deception.

23 Nothing prevented them from presenting their
 24 case. Their error was their choice, to present
 25 their case in a wrong way, in a way that was

1 But this case does not meet that standard.
 2 And for those reasons, the motion for 1.540
 3 should be denied and there should be no
 4 entitlement to discovery in the case.

5 THE COURT: Thank you.
 6 Did you want to make a reply?
 7 MR. SCAROLA: I would like to, Your Honor,
 8 but I'd like a short recess before we do.
 9 THE COURT: How long do you need?
 10 MR. SCAROLA: Ten minutes.
 11 THE COURT: Go into a 10-minute recess,
 12 resume at 3:15.
 13 (A recess was taken.)
 14 THE COURT: You may proceed.
 15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, defense counsel
 16 wants to ignore in its argument, as the 17 Defendant did in its submission to the Court,
 18 the distinction that the case law recognizes
 19 with regard to fraud on the court. And it is 20 not a distinction that exists only in the case
 21 law. If Your Honor looks at the language of 22 1.540(b)(3) itself, if you look at the last
 23 sentence, the rule itself recognizes that there
 24 is a difference with respect to fraud on the 25 court.

1 fatal to their whole claim.
 2 So no matter how you call this fraud, and
 3 when you talk about prejudice, prejudice equals
 4 affecting the judgment. That's got to be the 5 only way to define prejudice under 1.540(b) or 6 under colorable entitlement, because otherwise,
 7 you'd have cases that were finalized, over, done,
 8 tried and people would make some allegations
 9 about there's some misconduct somewhere along
 10 the way, I want an opportunity to do discovery.
 11 You don't get discovery unless you show
 12 colorable entitlement.

13 It's just like a civil action with a
 14 complaint, nobody says, Your Honor, I know my 15 complaint fails to state a cause of action, but 16 give me a chance to do some discovery and maybe
 17 I can make it better. It doesn't work that way.

18 And the case that Your Honor saw from
 19 yesterday that I just presented to the Court,
 20 Mr. Scarola, same thing, fraud in the heart of 21 the case. A fraudulent affidavit I think it was 22 in that family law case. And that affected the 23 judgment. And so, therefore, in that situation
 24 there was a, quote, colorable entitlement, and,
 25 therefore, there was a right to have a hearing.

1 This rule does not limit the power of the 2 Court to set aside a judgment or decree for
 3 fraud upon the court. We cited seven cases that
 4 very clearly stand for the proposition that no
 5 prejudice need be shown in the context of a
 6 motion to set aside a judgment based upon fraud
 7 on the court. Those cases were ignored in the 8 responsive memorandum filed by the defense. No
 9 effort to distinguish them. No argument against 10 them. No argument addressing the principle for 11 which they stand, the principles on which they 12 are based, and that is that an assault on the 13 integrity of the judicial system cannot be 14 countenanced. And once it is established,
 15 prejudice is presumed.

16 A typical circumstance addressed in 17 discussions of fraud on the court would be the 18 bribery of a judge or the bribery of a juror.
 19 Could anybody seriously argue that a Defendant
 20 who is caught bribing a judge or juror can 21 defend against a motion for a new trial to set
 22 aside the judgment that was fraudulently
 23 procured through that bribery by saying, hey,
 24 listen, we'd have won anyway, no harm, no foul,
 25 you can't show any prejudice. And the answer

1 is, no, that kind of argument could not
2 reasonably be made.

3 And that's the basis upon which, the
4 foundation of, those unrebutted cases that
5 clearly establish the principle that where there
6 is fraud on the Court, prejudice need not be 7 shown.

8 Mr. Rogow says, quote, fraud on the court
9 still has to affect the judgment. Where's the 10 case that says fraud on the court still has to 11 affect the judgment? The answer is, it's not in 12 the memorandum. And the answer is, we haven't 13 heard about it during the course of this
14 argument. And the answer is, it doesn't exist.
15 It isn't there. The cases that do exist, every 16 case that discusses fraud on the court and 17 whether it includes a requirement, an element
18 that prejudice be demonstrated holds that it
19 need not be demonstrated.

20 Their brief studiously avoids addressing
21 that issue. And the unsupported oral argument
22 does not overcome what the cases clearly say,
23 the well-reasoned cases clearly say.

24 Flemenbaum says that part of our prima facie
25 case is to show why the movant -- why the fraud

1 What might those e-mails have said? Well, there
2 could have been one Morgan Stanley executive who
3 sent an e-mail to another Morgan Stanley
4 executive. And that e-mail could have said, you
5 know, if we participate in this Sunbeam fraud,
6 the way we are being asked to participate in
7 this Sunbeam fraud, we are going to cause
8 Coleman half a billion dollars in damages at 9 least. Are you really sure you want to do this?

10 One e-mail might very well have said, boy,
11 did we pull one over on them. When that stock
12 was transferred, it was worthless. The 13 accounting fraud that old Al Dunlap had pulled 14 off had destroyed the value of this company and 15 they never even knew it.

16 Those admissions on the part of Morgan
17 Stanley's executives would have satisfied every 18 possible causation burden that anyone could have 19 imagined to have existed. And they would have 20 been the central focus of the Plaintiff's damage
21 proof under any imagined circumstances.

22 Our choice was to have those e-mails. We
23 didn't get them because Morgan Stanley lied
24 about their non-existence. They did everything
25 they could to try to hide them and successfully

1 would entitle the movant to have the judgment
2 set aside. And there is a clear answer to that
3 question. The fraud entitles the movant to have 4 the judgment set aside in this case because the 5 fraud is fraud on the court. Because this fraud
6 was perpetrated by officers of the court.
7 Because in this case those circumstances give 8 rise to an unrebuttable presumption of 9 prejudice. But whether rebuttable or
10 unrebuttable, no effort has been made to rebut
11 it under the circumstances of this case.

12 But let's deal with the hypothetical
13 circumstance that we are obliged to demonstrate 14 prejudice. Mr. Rogow says that we made the 15 choice, we chose how to present our damages.
16 The choice we made was a choice for a complete
17 default. We were fraudulently deprived of the 18 benefits of that choice.

19 Our first choice was to have all of the 20 relevant e-mail. We were fraudulently deprived
21 of the benefit of that choice.

22 And what difference did that make? Well, it
23 doesn't take a whole lot of imagination to 24 hypothesize what it was that Morgan Stanley was 25 willing to lie in order to avoid disclosing.

1 hid them long enough so that we never got them.
2 Still don't have them today. Don't know what
3 all the e-mails say.

4 Those were our choices. Were we then
5 compelled to make other choices? Yes. And with 6 the guidance of the Court, did we make a wrong
7 choice in the opinion of the Fourth District
8 Court of Appeal? Yes, we did. But if we had 9 those e-mails, that choice never would have 10 mattered.

11 If we had a complete default, we would at 12 the very least, because all of the elements of 13 liability would have been established, we would 14 at the very least have been entitled to a new 15 trial on damages and not have suffered the 16 complete reversal that we did suffer.

17 How do we know that? Morgan Stanley said
18 so. Their argument before the Fourth DCA was,
19 because there was no entry of a complete
20 default, the burden rested upon the Plaintiff to 21 prove the fact of damage. They failed to do
22 that. Their argument before the Florida Supreme 23 Court was, because Coleman failed to get a
24 complete default, did not get a complete
25 default, they failed to prove an essential

1 element of liability and, therefore, they are
 2 not entitled to a new trial.

3 Those were the arguments upon which they
 4 prevailed. How can they stand before this Court
 5 at this time and say, it really wouldn't have
 6 made any difference if they had gotten a
 7 complete default. They argued exactly contrary
 8 to that before the appellate courts of this 9 state.

10 Ballard versus Pelaia, P-E-L-A-I-A, Florida
 11 Supreme Court decision, 1954, held that a new 12 trial on damages is required where injury and 13 liability were established, but proof of damages
 14 was found to be deficient on appeal. Under that 15 standard, had we had a complete default, we 16 would have been entitled at the very least to a
 17 new trial.

18 Mercer versus Rain is the main case allowing 19 a total default on liability for discovery
 20 misconduct.

21 We cited pages 42 and 43 of our verified
 22 motion, the Delta Information Services case and 23 the Rose versus Clinton case. Those are the 24 cases that allow discovery sanctions to go
 25 beyond liability issues and to affect damage

1 entitled to had the Court known the full truth,
 2 it is impossible to read Judge Maass' order on
 3 the motion for contempt and to conclude that
 4 Coleman (Parent) was not prejudiced by the 5 total, complete disregard for the truth by the 6 assault upon the system in which Morgan
 7 Stanley's own inhouse lawyers were active
 8 participants.

9 The integrity of this system requires a
 10 response. What that response should be is not a 11 question for today. But unless we get to phase
 12 two, there can be no response. The only way
 13 that this Court is empowered to appropriately
 14 address in the context of this litigation what
 15 Morgan Stanley did to procure the result it
 16 procured, what Morgan Stanley did to assault the 17 system in the way in which the system has been 18 insulted, assaulted is to make the determination
 19 that is clearly required, that there is a
 20 colorable claim presented by our moving papers
 21 and that we are entitled to take discovery and 22 find out what the whole truth is, who knew what,
 23 when and why did they not disclose it to the 24 Court, why did they persist, instead, in 25 repeatedly deceiving the Court?

1 issues also.

2 The fact of damage as established in the 3 Morgan Stanley opinion itself, the appellate
 4 decision in this case, the fact of damage is an
 5 element of liability. And the Florida Supreme 6 Court, contrary to the arguments made by 7 opposing counsel, the Florida Supreme Court in 8 Ault versus Lohr, 538 So.2d 454, 1989, Florida
 9 Supreme Court is the case that expressly holds
 10 that you get nominal and punitive damages even 11 if you don't properly prove the amount of 12 damages so long as you have proven all of the 13 elements of liability.

14 I asked the Court at the beginning of this 15 argument to remain focused on the purpose of 16 this rule. The purpose of this rule is to avoid 17 injustice and to protect the integrity of the 18 judicial system. It is impossible to review the 19 chronology of events that the Defendants
 20 themselves have provided to Your Honor, to 21 review the list of admitted fraudulent
 22 representations, to examine the response that
 23 the Court made, after having been deceived time
 24 after time after time and granting to Morgan
 25 Stanley concessions that they were clearly not

1 This ought not to be the end of the line.
 2 This ought to be the beginning of the
 3 vindication of this judicial system.

4 Thank you very much, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Thank you. Okay. We'll move to 6 the third matter.

7 And if there are others who need to come
 8 forward, feel free to do so as it relates to the 9 third matter, which is the verified motion for a
 10 show cause order regarding Morgan Stanley's
 11 criminal contempt of court.

12 The motion appears to be directed at or to 13 Morgan Stanley and Company, Incorporated; Donald 14 G. Kempf, Junior; James P. Cusick; Sue Mi Lee;
 15 and James F. Doyle.

16 Now, I have received and reviewed the 17 verified petition. The purpose of today's 18 hearing is not to address the merits of the 19 petition, but rather to conduct a status
 20 conference. Correct?

21 MR. ROGOW: Correct, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: As I had noted, there were three 23 issues that were raised or presented at the 24 March 18th hearing. Number one, whether there
 25 was a sufficient basis to issue an order to show

1 cause. Number two, assuming that the Court
2 finds probable cause and issues an order to show
3 cause, who will serve as the prosecuting
4 attorney. And then to schedule a hearing on the 5 merits.

6 Counsel for Morgan Stanley had noted that it
7 had not, that is Morgan Stanley had not
8 responded yet to the verified motion and at 9 least indicated at that hearing that it would
10 need 30 days to respond to the motion.

11 I have some questions that relate to how we 12 go forward from here, but I'm happy to hear from 13 counsel first. And perhaps you agree on a
14 procedure that should be followed from this 15 point forward, given the posture of the matter,
16 which is simply that the Court has before it
17 this petition. And really nothing more at this 18 point. Unless something has been filed and I'm 19 not aware of it.

20 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe that there
21 have been any new filings since the last
22 hearing, Your Honor.

23 And if I may begin by making a practical
24 suggestion to the Court.

25 As I hope is apparent from the argument that

1 after Your Honor has made the determination as 2 to whether we will be going forward with
3 discovery on the Rule 1.540 motion.

4 If we are going to go forward, we do the 5 work of whomever the prosecutor -- whoever the 6 prosecutor may be. Your Honor may decide that 7 you choose to appoint us. You may decide that 8 you are going to appoint some third party. And,
9 of course, the Court has the discretion, if you
10 choose to, although it's hard for me to imagine
11 that it's a choice you would want to make, to 12 proceed unassisted by a prosecuting authority.

13 But it makes most sense to let us do the 14 work, to let us generate whatever we are able to 15 generate at our expense, to hand over the 16 results of that work either to Your Honor or to 17 a third party, if that's who's going to be doing
18 the work, and let them decide what, if anything,
19 they choose to do with it. You know, they may 20 decide it's not helpful to them. They may 21 decide that nothing else needs to be done. But 22 to try to bring somebody in at this point who is 23 unacquainted with the lengthy and detailed 24 history of this matter and impose upon them the 25 burden of attempting to conduct discovery in

1 Your Honor has already heard and the materials
2 that have been submitted with regard to the Rule
3 1.540(b) motion, while there is much known in 4 regard to the misconduct that forms the basis
5 for the contempt motion, there is much left yet
6 to be discovered.

7 If Your Honor were to make the determination
8 that a colorable claim has been stated in 9 connection with the Rule 1.540 motion, then
10 clearly the responsibility for conducting the 11 further discovery to which we are entitled under 12 the law rests with us. We need to provide the 13 manpower. We need to finance the effort. And 14 we know from past experience that it will be 15 both a substantial and costly effort, but we are 16 fully prepared to do all that is necessary in 17 order to be sure that the whole truth is 18 uncovered.

19 There is substantial overlap, if not a
20 complete identity, between the issues that we 21 will be exploring in the context of the Rule
22 1.540 motion and the issues that will be
23 presented with regard to the contempt motion.

24 I suggest that it makes sense to defer
25 ruling with regard to the contempt motion until

1 support of a criminal prosecution just doesn't
2 seem to make much practical sense.

3 I don't believe that anybody is prejudiced
4 by that delay. And it may wind up being an
5 extremely short delay if Your Honor were to 6 decide that there is no discovery going forward
7 on the 1.540 motion. But if there is discovery
8 going forward on that motion, it seems to me it
9 would make the most sense to let us do it and 10 conserve the resources that would otherwise be 11 expended in that process. And to then make a 12 determination as to what happens from that point
13 forward.

14 So that's our suggestion. And I don't 15 believe that there would be any prejudice to any 16 of the respondents on this motion by proceeding
17 in that fashion, but I'll obviously let them
18 address that themselves.

19 MR. ROGOW: I'm the authorized
20 representative for the individuals and their 21 lawyers.

22 I think deferral makes sense, but not for 23 the reason that Mr. Scarola has given. Because 24 if the Court denies the 1.540(b) discovery, then 25 we're back to where we are right now, what do we

Page 110

1 do with that? I think it's all right if we want
2 to wait to get a ruling from Your Honor, as I
3 presume Your Honor will take some time and make
4 the ruling on this issue one way or the other.
5 So if Your Honor decides that there is no
6 colorable entitlement, therefore, no discovery,
7 then we're back where we are this afternoon,
8 what do we do with the pending petition?

9 And the pending petition, I don't know if
10 Mr. Scarola has thought about this, but I don't 11 know if there will be any supplementing that 12 would be done to that. If the Court denied 13 their 1.540 attempt to get discovery, would we 14 then be ready to move forward for a hearing on 15 whether or not the petition is legally
16 sufficient? I don't know what Mr. Scarola's
17 position is on that.

18 MR. SCAROLA: If Your Honor were to deny us
19 discovery with regard to the 1.540 motion, I do
20 not anticipate amending the presently pending
21 motion for contempt. I think that we would need 22 to address the adequacy of that motion on the 23 basis of what has already been presented to the 24 Court.

25 If we are permitted discovery, it may very

Page 111

1 well alter the nature of the motion itself. It
2 may be supplemented by virtue of whatever new
3 information we learn.

4 MR. ROGOW: So I think our position --

5 MR. SCAROLA: Or withdrawn for that matter.
6 While I think that's highly unlikely, discovery,
7 at least in theory, in the pending 1.540 motion
8 could result in a decision to withdraw the 9 motion.

10 MR. ROGOW: So I think our position would be
11 that if the Court denies the 1.540 discovery,
12 then all the Court would need to do would be to 13 set a date for oral argument on the pending
14 papers that have been filed with regard to 15 whether or not it states enough to show probable
16 cause to issue an order to show cause.

17 THE COURT: Would the Defendant be -- or -- 18 would the parties named in the petition intend
19 to file responses to the petition?

20 MR. ROGOW: I think they've already filed
21 responses. My recollection is that it has been 22 briefed.

23 THE COURT: That was my question. It has
24 been briefed?

25 MR. SCAROLA: Nothing new has been filed

Page 112

1 since the last hearing, which I thought was the
2 Court's question, but there has been responses
3 filed.

4 THE COURT: By each individual as well as by
5 Morgan Stanley?

6 MR. ROGOW: It was a joint submission, as I
7 recall.

8 Individual? It was individual.

9 THE COURT: So I would look for five
10 responses, Morgan Stanley and the four
11 individuals?

12 MR. ROGOW: They're already there.

13 THE COURT: I have everything else in front
14 of me, but that's actually not something I have 15 in front of me, so I apologize for not having 16 that.

17 MR. ROGOW: Mr. Marmer has an outline of 18 this.

19 MR. MARMER: Your Honor, in addition to the 20 verified petition, there was an opposition filed
21 by Morgan Stanley, also individual responses
22 filed by Mr. Cusick, Mr. Doyle, Mr. Kempf and 23 Ms. Lee.

24 We then filed a verified reply brief.

25 We then filed an affidavit of Arthur Reil.

Page 113

1 We then filed a second affidavit of Arthur
2 Riel.

3 Then Morgan Stanley filed a further
4 opposition to our petition.

5 Mr. Cusick, Mr. Kempf, Mr. Doyle and Ms. Lee
6 filed additional memoranda regarding our 7 verified petition.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I am reminded by 9 Mr. Solovy, appropriately, that there may be one
10 significant supplement to the motion and that is 11 the inclusion of the December withdrawal notice
12 or clarification or whatever they want to call
13 it, which was not, obviously, in existence at 14 the time the initial pleadings were filed. With 15 that sole exception, at least at this point, I
16 don't anticipate any other supplement.

17 MR. MARMER: So there's a substantial amount
18 of briefing. And maybe it would make sense,
19 obviously, at some point to assemble a notebook.

20 THE COURT: Right, maybe I'm spoiled.

21 Because you've assembled everything else. I
22 didn't have an assembled package on that, so I
23 guess I drew a conclusion that perhaps it wasn't
24 there, because I have come to rely upon what you
25 have provided me rather than going first to the

1 214 volumes that I think exist in the case.
 2 Okay. So that answers that.
 3 So then the next question would be, given
 4 it's fully briefed with the exception of perhaps
 5 a supplement, and if and when we were to get to 6 a stage of a hearing, have you given thought to 7 how much time you would need for that hearing?
 8 Or would you want the opportunity to participate
 9 in another hearing to schedule that hearing?
 10 MR. ROGOW: I think that we could do by 11 telephone, especially with the out-of-town
 12 counsel. I would presume an hour, hour and a 13 half would be sufficient, by my advice, probably 14 an hour, but I know sometimes these things go on 15 a little longer.
 16 MR. SCAROLA: I would think, Your Honor,
 17 that we may need a little longer than that. I
 18 assume we're really talking about the probable
 19 cause.
 20 THE COURT: I was going to seek
 21 clarification. That's what I'm assuming. You
 22 have your petition. The standard is probable 23 cause. And while I don't see that a hearing is 24 required, if the parties want a hearing, then
 25 I'm certainly amenable to having a hearing on it

1 those --
 2 THE COURT: I can take care of the orders,
 3 but just given the service list just would like
 4 to have a set or two or three perhaps of the 5 full range of envelopes.
 6 And is it fair to say that as to some orders
 7 that don't apply to certain persons they should 8 or should not be copied? I know everybody was 9 copied on this hearing because there were those 10 other than the primary parties who were 11 involved, mainly the individuals. There will be 12 certain orders coming out of the Court based on 13 this hearing today that I suppose don't
 14 necessarily apply to the individuals. Is there
 15 a preference as to whether they're included?
 16 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, with regard to 17 both the motion to tax costs and the Rule
 18 1.540(b) motion, I think that if Your Honor were 19 to provide copies of your orders to Mr. Ianno
 20 and to me, we'll take care of making sure that 21 all parties interested in those issues are 22 appropriately notified. Make it a little bit
 23 easier for the Court.
 24 THE COURT: So I'll rely upon those 25 envelopes that you give me. And while the

1 to understand the positions through the oral
 2 argument in addition to reading the submissions,
 3 which I surely will have read before that
 4 hearing should we get to that date. And from 5 that hearing, the Court would make its
 6 determination as to whether it is going to issue
 7 an order to show cause. And, if so, to whom or 8 to what and on what basis, which would be
 9 outlined. And then there would be procedures,
 10 of course, that would flow from that stage,
 11 which we presumably could address at that 12 juncture.
 13 MR. SCAROLA: It seems, surprisingly, that
 14 we are in agreement that that's not something
 15 that we should reach now, but we should wait
 16 until after Your Honor has made a determination
 17 on today's substantive issues. And then
 18 re-address those issues with the Court in the 19 context of whatever decision Your Honor has 20 made.
 21 THE COURT: Okay. Well, there is one thing
 22 I'm going to ask for and that is envelopes. Did
 23 anybody come with a set of envelopes that I
 24 could take?
 25 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor, but we'll have

1 service list might be more extensive, it's with
 2 the understanding that if the envelopes don't
 3 include those individuals and they feel that
 4 they should be included, that you will mail
 5 copies to them.
 6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.
 7 THE COURT: And so I will expect that a
 8 proposed order from both of you, possibly agreed
 9 upon, but if not, you'll come back on a short
 10 hearing, UMC or something of that nature, to 11 address your schedule as it relates to the 12 amount of the reasonableness of the costs, the 13 amount of the costs as to at least the two 14 appellate matters, but I think you're going to 15 include the trial matter as well, costs as to 16 trial so at least you've done that work in the 17 event that the Court grants the motion for 18 entitlement. If it doesn't, we can easily work
 19 to remove that. And that will project out,
 20 presumably, when we would have a hearing based 21 on what you put forth as far as your schedule.
 22 MR. ROGOW: We agree. As long as we're
 23 meeting, we might as well cover all three areas.
 24 THE COURT: I agree. If you want to put it
 25 in two different orders or if you want to put it

1 in one, whatever you think easiest. So the next
2 time I will hear from you will be with that
3 information.

4 Is there anything further that anyone needs
5 to address today?

6 MR. ROGOW: That's it, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Well, thank you very much for
8 your presentations and preparation and patience
9 through a very long afternoon.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

vs.

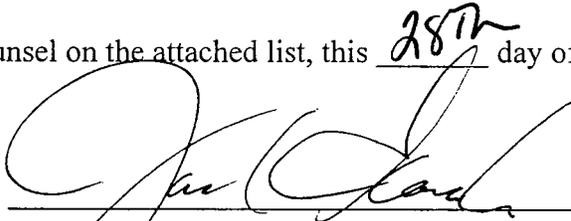

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant,

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO SUBMIT POST-HEARING BRIEF

Plaintiff, COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC., moves this Honorable Court for leave to submit the attached post-hearing brief and in support would show that issues arose during the course of the hearing on Plaintiff's motion pursuant to Rule 1.540(b) which Plaintiff is concerned were not adequately addressed in either the previously submitted memoranda or the oral presentations of counsel. Given the significance of the issues involved, a thorough assessment and analysis is essential to serve the ends of justice.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing has been furnished by e-mail and Federal Express to all counsel on the attached list, this 28th day of May, 2008.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING, INC.,

CASE NO: 2003 CA-005045 AJ

Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY'S RESPONSE TO CPH'S POST-HEARING BRIEF

CPH's Motion to Vacate the Judgment should be denied. CPH's Post-Hearing Brief does not support the relief it seeks. Nothing it asserts affected the judgment.

1. Intrinsic and Extrinsic Fraud

The distinction is irrelevant here because Rule 1.540(b)(3) speaks of "fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic)" The definition of each type is set forth in Greenwich Association, Inc. v. Greenwich Apartments, Inc., 2008 WL 942663 at *2 (Fla. 3d DCA May 15, 2008). Extrinsic fraud "occurs where a party is prevented from 'trying an issue before the court and the prevention itself becomes a collateral issue to the cause.'" Id. (internal citation omitted). Intrinsic fraud is "the presentation of misleading information on an issue before the court that was tried or could have been tried." Id. (internal citation omitted).

Neither species is presented here. After the March 2005 sanction order, the only issues tried, or which could have been tried, were reliance and damages. Morgan Stanley's statements relating to what in-house counsel knew, and when they knew, about e-mail back-up tapes did not prevent CPH from presenting evidence of its reliance or its damages under the correct measure of damages. CPH purposely used the wrong measure of damages and, as the Fourth District said: “CPH cannot complain about rulings that it urged the [trial] court to make in accordance with its damages theory.” Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124, 1131 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007).

Thus, under Rule 1.540(b)(3), CPH’s “fraud” allegations do not support relief, however denominated. Most telling is Greenwich’s citation to Alexander v. First Nat’l Bank of Titusville, 275 So. 2d 272, 274 (Fla. 4th DCA 1973) for the principle that the power to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court “must be narrowly applied” in order to not “frustrate the law’s policy favoring the termination of litigation and finality of judgments.” Greenwich, 2008 WL 942663 at *2.

CPH’s view that “fraud on the court” relieves it of the need to show “‘prejudice,’ that is, that the fraud affected the judgment” (CPH Post-Hearing Brief, p. 2), is incorrect. See e.g. Robinson v. Weiland, 936 So. 2d 777, 781 (Fla. 5th DCA 2006); Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d 579, 580 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994). “Affecting the judgment” is the sine qua non for colorable entitlement to 1.540(b)(3) relief, and CPH has failed to meet that standard.

2. Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum

CPH’s attempt to distinguish Flemenbaum by saying it is “not a case about fraud on the court” (CPH Post-Hearing Brief, p. 2) misses the point of the case. Flemenbaum requires a showing of fraud affecting the judgment even if the claim is styled “fraud on the court.” Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 581 (denying evidentiary hearing when alleged fraud had “no effect on the final judgment.”). Nor is Flemenbaum distinguishable on the grounds that it involved intrinsic fraud. The court was addressing “1.540(b)(3) fraud,” which, as we have pointed out, draws no distinction between intrinsic or extrinsic fraud.

CPH's attempt to finesse Flemenbaum is without merit, as is its attempt to evade the Hinson v. Hinson, 2008 WL 2120835 (Fla. 3d DCA May 21, 2008) recognition that affecting the judgment (by submitting fraudulent financial affidavits) is essential to showing colorable entitlement.

3. and 4. Total Default on Liability and Shifting the Burden on Damages

CPH continues to speculate regarding what Judge Maass might have done differently in sanctioning Morgan Stanley. But the purpose of Rule 1.540(b)(3) is to grant relief from a judgment obtained by fraud, and this judgment was not obtained or affected by the alleged false statements during discovery regarding Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel's knowledge about back-up tapes.

CPH asserts that Judge Maass could have entered a total default judgment, including the fact of damages. But under any default construct, CPH still had to prove the amount of those damages under the correct measure of damages for the theory it elected to pursue, and that is what the Fourth District held CPH did not do.¹ The cases cited by CPH for the proposition that it is entitled to a new trial on damages are the same type of cases that CPH argued on appeal established conflict on that point with Morgan Stanley and Teca. CPH's argument was rejected then and should be rejected now.

And, as to punitive damages, CPH ignores the Fourth District's statement that "[e]ven if CPH established the fact of some unquantified damage (which theoretically could have supported a nominal damage award), this is not enough to justify a punitive damage award in a fraud case."

¹ Morgan Stanley has not "contradicted itself" nor is it seeking to have it "both ways." CPH Post-Hearing Brief, pp. 4-5. Morgan Stanley's position throughout the appeal was that CPH's failure to prove damages by the proper measure was fatal. The Fourth District agreed and the Florida Supreme Court denied review.

Morgan Stanley, 955 So. 2d at 1132 (emphasis in original). CPH's reliance now on Ault v. Lohr, 538 So. 2d 454 (Fla. 1989) and Russin v. Greminger, P.A., 563 So. 2d 1089 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) is of no avail since both those cases were a basis for rehearing which was denied, and Ault was the foundation for CPH's failed attempt to secure Florida Supreme Court review.

CPH's post-hearing argument for shifting the burden of proof/negative causation adds nothing to its earlier submissions. No Florida case supports negative causation in a common law fraud case. CPH's cases involve specific statutory claims under federal or state law. CPH did not sue on any statutory claims and never sought negative causation as a sanction. Indeed, it accepted the severe sanctions imposed on Morgan Stanley, never sought on appeal or rehearing or rehearing en banc to strengthen those sanctions, willingly went to trial with the benefit of a sanction order that relieved Morgan Stanley of the obligation to continue to search for e-mails, and relied upon the December 2006 notice filed in the Fourth District and in this Court as a reason for affirming the sanctions that had been imposed. There is no basis for CPH's attack upon this Court's January 2008 judgment.

CONCLUSION

Nothing CPH has now offered changes the outcome. The Motion to Vacate the Judgment should be denied.

By:
(Circuit Court Seal) SHERI PAIGE Deputy Clerk

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

CIVIL DIVISION "AJ"
CASE NO.: 502003CA005045XXXXMB

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S AMENDED MOTION TO TAX TRIAL COURT COSTS AS TO THE ISSUE OF ENTITLEMENT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court on May 22, 2008 on Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s ("MS") Amended Motion to Tax Trial Court Costs ("Motion"). This Court, having reviewed the case file, considered memoranda of law, heard argument of counsel and being otherwise advised in the premises, finds:

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

1. On June 23, 2005, a Final Judgment was entered in favor of Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"). On June 27, 2005, MS timely appealed this Final Judgment.
2. On March 21, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeal reversed the Final Judgment, and remanded the case with instructions for this Court to enter judgment in favor of MS. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007).
3. On April 20, 2007, CPH filed motions for rehearing, rehearing en banc, clarification, and certification in the Fourth District Court of Appeal. These motions were denied on June 4, 2007.

4. On June 22, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeal issued its mandate in the Main Appeal returning jurisdiction to this Court.

5. On March 18, 2008, this Court entered a Final Judgment in MS's favor pursuant to the Fourth District Court of Appeal's mandate and reserved jurisdiction to award costs to MS. Based upon this Final Judgment, MS is the prevailing party in this action.

6. MS has filed affidavits in support of its Motion that itemize the trial costs it seeks to recover.

7. CPH first argues that this Court should defer ruling on the issue of MS's entitlement to trial costs pending the outcome of CPH's Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.540(b) ("Rule 1.540(b)") motion because "it is not known whether [MS] will ultimately prevail." Secondly, CPH argues that MS is not entitled to recover costs based on the undisturbed findings, with the exception of damages, that MS conspired to commit securities fraud and MS's litigation misconduct. In response, MS maintains that there is no precedent in Florida law for undertaking such deferral and that while this Court may have discretion in determining the amount of MS's recoverable trial costs, this Court has no discretion as to the issue of MS's entitlement to trial costs.

LEGAL CONCLUSIONS

8. Rule 1.540(b) states that "[a] motion under this subdivision does not affect the finality of a judgment or decree or suspend its operation." Accordingly, CPH's pending Rule 1.540(b) motion for relief from final judgment does not affect the finality of this Court's March 18, 2008 Final Judgment entered pursuant to the Fourth District Court of Appeal's mandate. Thus, this Court cannot defer ruling on MS's entitlement to trial costs on the basis that CPH might succeed on its Rule 1.540(b) motion.

9. Section 57.041 of the Florida Statutes, provides that the “party recovering judgment shall recover all his or her legal costs and charges which shall be included in the judgment.” § 57.041(1), Fla. Stat. (2007) (emphasis added). The mandatory language of this statutory provision requires the trial court to award costs to the prevailing party in a civil action. Id.; see also Wyatt v. Milner Document Prods., Inc., 932 So. 2d 487, 490 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006) (a determination of entitlement to costs under section 57.041 is governed by the “prevailing party” standard; the ‘prevailing party for purposes of taxing costs is the party who prevailed on the significant issues below’) (citing cases); Oriental Imports, Inc. v. Allin, 559 So. 2d 442, 443 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990) (section 57.041 mandates that every party who recovers a judgment in a legal proceeding is entitled as a matter of right to recover lawful court costs and a trial court has no “discretion to deny recovery of costs to the prevailing party”). It is undeniable that MS is the prevailing party in this case because the Fourth District Court of Appeal mandated that judgment be entered in its favor and a Final Judgment has been so entered.

10. While a trial court has discretion in awarding some categories of costs such as whether certain costs incurred were reasonable and necessary, the trial court does not have discretion to deny recovery of costs to a prevailing party. Oriental Imports, 559 So. 2d at 443 (“The determination of the amount and type of costs that are appropriate . . . is the task of the trial court rather than the initial determination of whether the successful litigant is entitled to costs”). CPH’s arguments that a reduction in MS’s recoverable costs is warranted based upon the undisturbed portion of the underlying securities fraud case and MS’s litigation misconduct are premature, as they are irrelevant for evaluating MS’s entitlement to trial costs. Those arguments can only be considered when this Court determines the reasonableness of such costs at a later date.

11. CPH relies on federal cases, and acknowledges a dearth of Florida cases, which generally stand for the proposition that a party may be denied costs if it would be inequitable under the circumstances to place the burden of costs on the aggrieved party. See, e.g., USM Corp. v. SPS Techs., Inc., 102 F.R.D. 167 (N.D. Ill. 1984); Remington Prods., Inc. v. North American Philips Corp., 763 F. Supp. 683 (D. Conn. 1991); McFarland v. Gregory, 425 F.2d 443 (2d Cir. 1970); Sheets v. Yamaha Motors Corp., U.S.A., 891 F.2d 533 (5th Cir. 1990). Conversely, one Florida case has stated that because section 57.041 absolutely entitles the prevailing party to receive costs, the trial court properly disregarded a claim of inequity. Dragstrem v. Butts, 340 So. 2d 416 (Fla. 1st DCA 1979).

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs is GRANTED as to the issue of entitlement. This Court reserves ruling on the reasonable amount of trial costs incurred and recoverable by MS pending an evidentiary hearing.

CORPORATE DEPOSITION TOPICS

All terms in the following corporate deposition topics shall be defined according to the definitions set forth in Exhibit B hereto.

1. The bond securing the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on November 22, 2005, in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

2. Any amount billed, paid, or refunded, or any consideration of any kind exchanged, in connection with such a bond, and the identity of any party involved in such a transaction.

3. Any amount billed, paid, or refunded, or any consideration of any kind exchanged, relating to the bond discussed in the Surety Bond Report attached hereto as Exhibit 1, and the identity of any party involved in such a transaction.

4. Any inquiry made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to Safeco relating to securing the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on June 23, 2005, or the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on November 22, 2005, in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

5. Any communication between Safeco and Morgan Stanley or its representatives relating to securing either of those judgments.

6. Any and all alternatives considered, offered, or investigated as a means of securing any judgment entered or expected to be entered in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

7. Any document produced by Safeco in response to the document requests set forth in Exhibit B.

DOCUMENTS

1. All documents relating to a bond securing a judgment against Morgan Stanley in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.), including but not limited to documents relating to:
 - a. the amount charged in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - b. the amount paid in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - c. the identity of the payor and the recipient of any such payment;
 - d. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by Safeco in connection with an escrow account, bond, or other form of security relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
 - f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from Safeco of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account, bond, or other form of security relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment.
2. All documents relating to any communication between Morgan Stanley and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Safeco, relating to:
 - a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;

- b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - c. the Main Appeal Bond; or
 - d. the Escrow Account.
3. All documents relating to the release, discharge, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, or cancellation was effected.
4. All documents relating to the consideration, offer, or investigation of any means by which to secure any judgment entered or expected to be entered in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope, or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from May 8, 2003, to the present, and shall include all documents and information that relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated, or received prior or subsequent to that period. You shall supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;

b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and

- c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents that were a source of information used in preparing the Costs Motions.
2. All documents relating to payment of or any reimbursement for payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motions, including but not limited to invoices, canceled checks, wire confirmations, bank statements, receipts, ledger entries, and accounting records.
3. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of premiums, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- d. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Escrow Account;
- e. any amount held in the Escrow Account;

- f. any request or demand by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley, the Bank of New York, or any other person or entity for the creation of an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- g. any discussion or analysis of such a request or demand;
- h. any communication concerning and any description or discussion of how the costs associated with the Escrow Account were calculated or derived;
- i. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by any financial institution or other entity in connection with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- j. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any financial institution or other entity of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment; or
- k. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate.

6. All documents relating to any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and E.G. Bowman Co., Inc., The Bank of New York, Safeco Insurance Co., or AIG, relating to:

- a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
 - b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - c. the Main Appeal Bond; or
 - d. the Escrow Account.
7. All documents relating to the release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was effected.
8. All documents relating to any consideration or analysis by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of forms or sources of security for the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment other than the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account.
9. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of mediation, including but not limited to:
- a. the amount and nature of mediation costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
 - b. the amount and nature of mediation costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.
10. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of expert fees, excluding copies of expert reports and expert deposition transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of expert fees charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of expert fees paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity relating to the amount, nature, or payment of expert fees;
- d. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to expert depositions;
- e. the purpose for which any such expert deposition was used in this Action;
- f. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to the preparation of a court-ordered report; or
- g. the purpose for which any such court-ordered report was used in this Action.

11. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of hearing and trial transcripts, excluding copies of such transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

12. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of deposition transcripts and videotapes, excluding copies of such transcripts and videotapes, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

13. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of discovery imaging and coding or document production and management, excluding copies of the documents that were imaged, coded, produced, or managed, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Compulit, relating to the amount, nature, or payment of discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs;

- d. whether any of the documents as to which such costs were incurred were actually filed with the court in the Action;
- e. whether, for each document as to which such costs were incurred, such document was actually produced to CPH;
- f. whether any of the claimed discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs constituted the actual cost of copies obtained in discovery;
- g. whether there were discounts, based on volume or otherwise, available to or used by Morgan Stanley or its lawyers or law firms relating to discovery imaging or coding or document production and management (including but not limited to copying of documents); or
- h. whether any effort was made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to determine whether lower prices for the discovery- or document-related tasks for which costs are claimed were available from vendors other than those who were used to carry out the tasks.

14. All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, relating to costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to electronic discovery, including but not limited to costs relating to any search for electronically stored documents, any review or production of such documents, or any outside experts or consultants involved in any tasks relating to electronic discovery.

15. All documents relating to any effort to obtain, the results of any effort to obtain, or the receipt of any economic benefit, consideration, or other advantage of any kind in exchange for agreeing to or having agreed to do business with any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

16. All documents relating to any gift received by Morgan Stanley from any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

17. All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, that may tend to support or refute the assertion in the Costs Motions and supporting affidavits that the claimed costs were reasonable and necessary to the defense of the Action.

DEFINITIONS

1. "The Bank of New York" means The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation or any of its subsidiaries, divisions, parents, predecessors, successors, present and former employees, representatives, agents, attorneys, accountants, advisors, or all other persons acting or purporting to act on its behalf.

2. "Communication" means the transmittal of information, opinion, question, or other form of data exchange by letter, memorandum, facsimile, e-mail, orally, or otherwise.

3. "Costs Appeal Bond" means the bond securing the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on November 22, 2005, in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

4. "Costs Judgment" means the judgment entered in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.), on November 22, 2005.

5. "Documents" means documents whether fixed in tangible medium or electronically stored. The word "documents" shall include, by way of example and not by way of limitation, all of the following: papers, correspondence, trade letters, envelopes, memoranda, telegrams, cables, notes, messages, reports, studies, press releases, comparisons, books, accounts, checks, audio and video recordings and transcriptions thereof, pleadings, testimony, articles, bulletins, pamphlets, brochures, magazines, questionnaires, surveys, charts, newspapers, calendars, desk calendars, pocket calendars, lists, logs, publications, notices, diagrams, instructions, diaries, minutes for meetings, corporate minutes, orders, resolutions, agendas, memorials or notes of oral communications, whether by telephone or face-to-face, contracts, agreements, drafts of or proposed contracts or agreements, memoranda of understanding, letters of intent, computer tapes, computer drives or memories, computer diskettes or disks, e-mail, CD-ROMs, or any other tangible thing on which any handwriting, typing, printing, photostatic, electronic, or other form of communication or information is recorded or reproduced, together with all notations on any of the foregoing, all originals, file copies, or other unique copies of the foregoing, and all versions or drafts thereof, whether used or not. "Documents" includes all non-identical copies of all electronic data as well as application metadata and system metadata.

6. "Escrow Account" means the escrow account at The Bank of New York established in connection with securing the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on June 23, 2005, in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

7. "Main Appeal Bond" means the bond securing the judgment entered against Morgan Stanley on June 23, 2005, in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

8. "Main Judgment" means the judgment entered in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.), on June 23, 2005.

9. "Morgan Stanley" means Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., or any of its subsidiaries, divisions, parents, predecessors, successors, present and former employees, representatives, agents, attorneys, accountants, advisors, or all other persons acting or purporting to act on its behalf.

10. "Relating" means reflecting, concerning, referring to, describing, evidencing, relating to, or constituting.

11. "You" or "Your" means The Bank of New York and/or any of its subsidiaries, divisions, parents, predecessors, successors, present or former employees, representatives, agents, attorneys, accountants, advisors, or anyone acting or purporting to act on its behalf.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other as kept should not be separated.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope, or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from May 1, 2005, to the present, and shall include all documents and information that relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated, or received prior or subsequent to that period. You shall supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;

b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and

c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

1. All documents relating to a bond securing a judgment against Morgan Stanley in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.), including but not limited to documents relating to:
 - a. the amount charged in connection with the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account;
 - b. the amount paid in connection with the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account;
 - c. any commission charged or paid in connection with the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account;
 - d. the identity of the payor and the recipient of any payment made in connection with the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account;
 - e. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account;
 - f. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or E.G. Bowman relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company, financial institution, or other person or entity in connection with an escrow account, bond, or other form of security relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;

- g. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or E.G. Bowman of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account, bond, or other form of security relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment.
- h. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or E.G. Bowman of any such quote or estimate.
2. All documents relating to any communication, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and E.G. Bowman or any communication between E.G. Bowman and AIG, Safeco Insurance Co., or The Bank of New York, relating to:
- a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
 - b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
 - c. the Main Appeal Bond; or
 - d. the Escrow Account.
3. All documents relating to the release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was effected.
4. All documents relating to the consideration, offer, or investigation of any means by which to secure any judgment entered or expected to be entered in Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., CA 03-5045 (Fl.).

DEFINITIONS

1. "Communication" means the transmittal of information, opinion, question, or other form of data exchange by letter, memorandum, facsimile, e-mail, orally, or otherwise.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other as kept should not be separated.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope, or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from May 1, 2005, to the present, and shall include all documents and information that relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated, or received prior or subsequent to that period. You shall supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and
- c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Defendant.

CLERK
CIRCUIT COURT
PALM BEACH COUNTY, FL

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S RESPONSE TO COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S REQUESTS FOR
PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated (“Morgan Stanley”), by and through its undersigned attorneys, pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.350, hereby responds to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.’s (“CPH’s”) Requests For Production of Documents as follows:

By making these responses, Morgan Stanley does not concede that the information sought or provided is relevant to the subject matter of this or any action or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley’s responses are made intending to preserve and preserving:

- (a) The right to object, on any grounds, to the use of the responses in any subsequent proceedings in this or any action;
- (b) The right to object to introduction into evidence of these responses or documents provided in response to the Requests; and
- (c) The right to object, on any grounds at any time, to other requests or discovery demands involving documents produced in response to the Requests.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests including, without limitation, the instructions and definitions therein, to the extent they purport to impose on Morgan Stanley obligations beyond those imposed by the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, and any other applicable law or rule.

2. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek documents and/or information that are not within Morgan Stanley's possession, custody or control; that are already available to CPH; that are available from public, court, or agency records, or otherwise in the public domain and accessible to all parties.

3. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek identification and disclosure of information that is irrelevant, immaterial, or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

4. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are oppressive, overbroad, unreasonably cumulative, duplicative, and unduly burdensome, particularly to the extent that they seek "all" documents relating to a particular subject matter.

5. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek the disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product doctrine, or any other privilege or protection from disclosure. Morgan Stanley hereby claims such privileges and protections to the extent implicated by each Request and excludes privileged and protected information from its responses to the Requests. Inadvertent production of any such information shall not constitute a waiver of any privilege or protection from disclosure as to that information or any related information. As set forth in this Response, Morgan Stanley objects to the overbroad nature of these requests especially since the only issue before the Court is the amount of taxable costs to be awarded to Morgan Stanley. Pursuant to the Fourth District's decision in Gosman v. Luzinski, 937 So. 2d 293 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), Morgan Stanley hereby requests an extension of thirty (30) days to prepare its privilege log from the date on which the Court, if necessary, resolves Morgan Stanley's other objections to the Requests. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged communications between Morgan Stanley's attorneys (including both its in-house counsel and outside counsel) and Morgan Stanley employees that may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs. In fact, the parties previously agreed, and the Court ordered, that the parties were "not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involved privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transaction at issue in this case." 9/4/2003 Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time to Prepare Privilege Log. Morgan Stanley also objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged materials such as work product created by in-house counsel or outside counsel while preparing the cost motions. Such materials may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs, but are clearly protected by the work product doctrine. To require a privilege log of these categories of materials would be unduly burdensome and harassing, especially in the context of the narrow issue before the Court, and would necessarily reveal the work product of counsel for Morgan Stanley.

6. Morgan Stanley objects to the definitions of the terms "Morgan Stanley," "You," and "Your" contained in the Requests to the extent they purport to define an entity other than Morgan Stanley and/or purport to impose obligations on Morgan Stanley beyond providing information that is in the possession, custody, or control of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley further objects to the definitions of these terms to the extent they purport to refer to actions taken by "any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf" that were not taken at the direction of Morgan Stanley.

7. The responses to the Requests shall not be construed in any way as an admission that any definition provided by CPH is either factually correct or legally binding upon Morgan Stanley, or as a waiver of any of Morgan Stanley's objections.

8. Morgan Stanley's Specific Responses and Objections to the individual Requests shall be deemed to incorporate, and shall not be deemed a waiver of, these General Objections.

9. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they are compound, phrased disjunctively or conjunctively, and include subparts in such a manner that they are unduly burdensome, confusing, or cannot be reasonably answered.

10. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they seek information that is not known or reasonably available to Morgan Stanley.

11. Morgan Stanley's objection to a Request or agreement to produce responsive documents in response to a Request is not and should not be construed as an admission that any particular information or category of information exists.

12. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek a legal theory or conclusion or seek documents relating to Morgan Stanley's entitlement to, as opposed to the reasonableness of, its trial costs. See J. Robin L. Rosenberg's 6/11/08 Order granting Morgan Stanley's Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs as to the issue of entitlement and reserving ruling on the issue of reasonableness.

13. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are harassing in the context of the narrow issue before the Court and seek information that is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence relevant to the cost motions presently pending before the Court. Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to support the amount of costs that Morgan Stanley is entitled to recover in this action as the prevailing party. CPH's attempt in the Requests to obtain every piece of paper that "relates" to the claimed costs is overbroad and harassing.

14. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent that they do not contain any time period limitation. With respect to requests seeking communications concerning the determination of the premiums and costs associated with the Main Appeal Bond, the Cost Appeal Bond and the Escrow Account, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between January 1, 2005 and June 30, 2005. With respect to trial costs, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between May 8, 2003 and March 31, 2006.

RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1

All documents that were a source of information used in preparing the Costs Motions.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it is overbroad. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that were used to substantiate the individual line item costs contained in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

All documents relating to payment of or any reimbursement for payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motion, including but not limited to invoices, canceled checks, wire confirmations, bank statements, receipts, ledger entries, and accounting records.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices, checks or check stubs, and wire transfer confirmations sufficient to show payments made by Morgan Stanley or its counsel for costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions. Coleman's attempt to obtain categories of documents like "ledger entries" and "accounting records" is not only vague, ambiguous, and overbroad, but also goes well beyond a reasonable calculation of what is necessary to contest the claimed costs. To the extent that this request seeks further categories of documents, it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of premiums, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of premiums charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- b. the amount of premiums paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund in premiums in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker relating to the cost or amount of premiums quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker from any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity of the cost or amount of premiums associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment; or

- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the bond premiums claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices and wire transfer information sufficient to show the cost of the bond premiums, the payment of the bond premiums, and the refund of certain bond premiums. However, Morgan Stanley objects to producing “all” documents “relating” to the bond premiums because it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley with overbroad requests that will force Morgan Stanley to incur additional costs. Further, Morgan Stanley has undertaken a reasonable investigation regarding non-privileged documents sufficient to show its efforts to obtain a supersedeas bond in this matter and will produce the documents it has located after a reasonable search.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley’s claim for taxation of the cost of broker commissions, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of broker commissions charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley’s behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;

- b. the amount of broker commissions paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund of broker commissions in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of broker commissions quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company or agency or any other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any insurance company or agency or any other entity of the cost or amount of broker commissions associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate; or
- h. all communications and all documents referencing communications relating to discounts, rebates, refunds, trade-offs, barters, or other exchange of consideration of any kind concerning commissions, bond premiums, or any other payment sent or received in relation to the Costs Judgment, the Main Judgment, the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Escrow Account, or any other bond, escrow account, or other security for the payment of the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan

Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the broker commissions claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and EG Bowman discussing or referring to the supersedeas bonds filed in this action. Coleman's attempt to obtain a broader range of documents is simply a fishing expedition designed to harass Morgan Stanley and add to the costs of this limited cost proceeding.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Escrow Account;
- b. the amount paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Escrow Account;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Escrow Account;
- e. any amount held in the Escrow Account;
- f. any request or demand by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley, the Bank of New York, or any other person or entity for the creation of an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- g. any discussion or analysis of such a request or demand;

- h. any communication concerning and any description or discussion of how the costs associated with the Escrow Account were calculated or derived;
- i. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by any financial institution or other entity in connection with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeals Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- j. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any financial institution or other entity of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment; or
- k. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the escrow account costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and the Bank of New York relating to the costs of the Escrow Account. Morgan Stanley will also produce documents sufficient to show how the Bank of New York was selected as an escrow agent. However, Coleman's attempt to obtain every piece of paper relating to the Escrow Account is simply overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this limited cost proceeding. The only relevant information about the Escrow Account in this limited cost proceeding is the amount of the fees paid to the Bank of New York so they could manage the Escrow Account required to obtain the supersedeas bond.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

All documents relating to any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and E.G. Bowman Co., Inc., The Bank of New York, Safeco Insurance Co., or AIG, relating to:

- a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
- c. the Main Appeal Bond;
- d. the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce documents constituting communications between the entities referred to in this request that discuss or refer to the determination of the amount of the bond premiums and escrow account fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the affidavits supporting its Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

All documents relating to the release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested a release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

All documents relating to any consideration or analysis by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of forms or sources of security for the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment other than the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of mediation, including but not limited to:

- a. the amount and nature of mediation costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount and nature of mediation costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of mediation costs that Coleman itself claimed when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of mediation costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of expert fees, excluding copies of expert reports and expert deposition transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of expert fees charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of expert fees paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity relating to the amount, nature, or payment of expert fees;
- d. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to expert depositions;
- e. the purpose for which any such expert deposition was used in this Action;
- f. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to the preparation of a court-ordered report; or
- g. the purpose for which any such court-ordered report was used in this Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of the expert costs incurred by Morgan Stanley. After years of litigation, Coleman is well aware of the purpose to which the expert reports and testimony were used by Morgan Stanley. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the amount of expert fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the expert witness invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of hearing and trial transcripts, excluding copies of such transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for all the hearings in this case as well as the trial. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of trial transcripts and hearing transcripts when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of hearing and trial transcript costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the hearing and trial transcript invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of deposition transcripts and videotapes, excluding copies of such transcripts and videotapes, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for the depositions reflected in the materials supporting Morgan Stanley's Cost Motions. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of depositions when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of deposition transcript and videotape costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the deposition invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of discovery imaging and coding or document production and management, excluding copies of the documents that were imaged, coded, produced, or managed, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Compulit, relating to the amount, nature, or payment of discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs;
- d. whether any of the documents as to which such costs were incurred were actually filed with the court in this Action;
- e. whether, for each document as to which such costs were incurred, such document was actually produced to CPH;
- f. whether any of the claimed discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs constituted the action cost of copies obtained in discovery;
- g. whether there were discounts, based on volume or otherwise, available to or used by Morgan Stanley or its lawyers or law firms relating to discovery imaging or coding or document production and management (including but not limited to copying of documents); or
- h. whether any effort was made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to determine whether lower prices for the discovery- or document-related tasks for which costs are claimed were available from vendors other than those who were used to carry out the tasks.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH is aware of what documents it produced and the copying, imaging and coding arrangement with Compulit. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence since Morgan Stanley's claim only seeks to recoup those costs associated with discovery imaging and coding.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of discovery imaging and coding costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the invoices paid by Morgan Stanley for such costs.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, relating to costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to electronic discovery, including but not limited to costs relating to any search for electronically stored documents, any review or production of such documents, or any outside experts or consultants involved in any tasks relating to electronic discovery.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence because Morgan Stanley is not claiming electronic discovery costs in the Cost Motions. To the extent that this Request targets the Compulit costs claimed by Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley objects to it as duplicative of Request 13.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

All documents relating to any effort to obtain, the results of any effort to obtain, or the receipt of any economic benefit, consideration, or other advantage of any kind in exchange for agreeing to or having agreed to do business with any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

All documents relating to any gift received by Morgan Stanley from any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, that may tend to support or refute the assertion in the Costs Motions and supporting affidavits that the claimed costs were reasonable and necessary to the defense of the Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to the extent that this Request seeks a legal theory or conclusion and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. Lastly, Morgan Stanley objects to the term “refute” as vague and ambiguous because it can have very different meanings to CPH and Morgan Stanley in this context.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that Morgan Stanley believes are sufficient to support the costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF DISCOVERY CUT-OFF

Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., by and through its undersigned attorneys, moves this Honorable Court for entry of an Order extending the discovery cut-off on matters relating to the Defendant, Morgan Stanley's, pending motions to tax costs, and in support of this motion, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. would show:

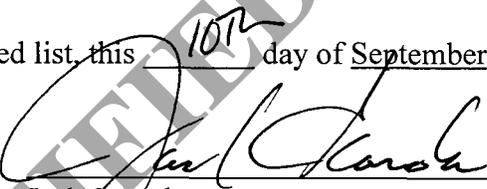

1. the existing discovery cut-off date established pursuant to the agreement of the parties requires the completion of depositions by September 22, 2008;
2. it was intended that document discovery would precede the taking of depositions and extensive document discovery has been conducted; however, disputes have arisen concerning various production requests made by the Plaintiff as more particularly described in Plaintiff's pending Motion to Compel Production of Costs-Related Documents;
3. the Plaintiff anticipates that to conclude the taking of depositions (including out-of-state depositions requiring the issuance of commissions and service of out-of-state subpoenas)

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
Case No.: 2003 CA 005045 AI
Motion for Extension of Discovery Cut-Off

60 days will be needed following the Court's disposition of the referenced Motion to Compel and the completion of production, if any, ordered in response to that motion.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff requests the entry of an Order extending the costs-related discovery cut-off from September 22, 2008 to 60 days following the Defendant's certification that document discovery has been completed including the production of documents, if any, that may be ordered produced in response to Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Costs-Related Documents.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing has been furnished by Fax and U.S. Mail to all Counsel on the attached list, this 10th day of September, 2008.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL
PRODUCTION OF COSTS-RELATED DOCUMENTS

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, respectfully requests that this Court enter an order directing Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") to produce all documents responsive to CPH's request for production concerning Morgan Stanley's motions to tax appellate and trial costs. In support of this motion, CPH states as follows:

Introduction & Background

1. This motion has been necessitated by Morgan Stanley's refusal to produce documents that are directly relevant to the $11+ million in appellate and trial costs Morgan Stanley currently seeks. As discussed in detail below, in response to CPH's requests for documents concerning the amount and reasonableness of those costs, Morgan Stanley has declared that it will produce only those documents that it unilaterally deems "sufficient" to prove its costs, and it essentially refuses to provide a meaningful privilege log. For the reasons set forth below, however, Morgan Stanley's responses to CPH's discovery are far from "sufficient."

2. By way of background, CPH sued Morgan Stanley for its participation in the largest stock fraud in Florida history. The trial court found that during the course of the litigation Morgan Stanley "deliberately and contumaciously violated numerous discovery orders," made false statements to the Court and to CPH, coached witnesses, and caused CPH incurable prejudice. See Ex. 1, March 23, 2005 Order at 16. Among other things, the Court found that Morgan Stanley knowingly submitted false certifications of compliance with CPH's document requests, failed to conduct a "good faith search" for electronic documents, submitted a declaration "intended to mislead CPH and the Court" about its discovery conduct, "improperly withheld" documents required to be produced, made false representations to the Court regarding its document management system, and routinely asserted unfounded privilege claims. (Id. at 5, 9, 13, 15-16.) The Fourth District left all of those conclusions regarding Morgan Stanley's blatant discovery misconduct undisturbed. In addition, as explained in detail in the verified Rule 1.540 motion that CPH filed with this Court on March 25, 2008, revelations of Morgan Stanley's lack of candor with the Court continued after the trial, when it was revealed that Morgan Stanley's in-house legal department was directly involved in the discovery misconduct.

3. Against that backdrop, it becomes obvious why CPH resists Morgan Stanley's current attempt to manipulate the discovery needed to test its request to recover more than $11 million in alleged costs from CPH, the established victim of Morgan Stanley's fraud and egregious litigation misconduct. Those costs consist of the following:

- Morgan Stanley seeks $9.1 million on the main appeal, including $8.8 million in a category that Morgan Stanley entitles "bond premiums," which according to Morgan Stanley are "gross premium[s]" that include "broker commissions." Am. Aff. of Joseph Ianno, Jr. in Supp. of Def. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Am. Mot. to Tax Appellate Costs ¶ 4 ("Ianno Aff. re Main Appeal"). It also includes more than $300,000 in a category that Morgan Stanley entitles "bond costs," which consists entirely of what Morgan Stanley describes as "fees for required escrow account." Id.
- With respect to the costs appeal, Morgan Stanley seeks $6,600. That amount includes $6,009 in so-called "bond premiums" – i.e., "gross premium[s]" that include "broker commissions." Aff. of Joseph Ianno, Jr. in Supp. of Def. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Mot. to Tax Appellate Costs Relating to Cost Appeal ¶ 4 ("Ianno Aff. re Costs Appeal").
- With respect to the trial, Morgan Stanley seeks more than $2 million. That amount includes more than $591,000 in expert witness fees; nearly $784,000 for "imaging and coding for discovery materials”; nearly $88,000 in costs associated with mediation; $147,000 for deposition transcripts and videotapes; and $400,000 for hearing and trial transcripts. See Aff. of Theresa A. Pilosi in Supp. of Def. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.’s Am. Mot. to Tax Trial Costs (“Piloski Aff.”); Aff. of Joseph Ianno, Jr. in Supp. of Def. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.’s Am. Mot. to Tax Trial Costs (“Ianno Aff. re Trial Costs”); Aff. of Thomas A. Clare, P.C. in Supp. of Def. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.’s Am. Mot. to Tax Trial Costs (“Clare Aff.”).

4. To allow CPH discovery into the necessity and the reasonableness of the aforementioned $11+ million in alleged costs, this Court entered an Order on June 27, 2008 permitting CPH to serve written discovery and to take depositions concerning those issues. The Court ordered CPH to serve all such written discovery by July 25, 2008, and to complete all depositions by September 22, 2008. See June 27, 2008 Order. Because Morgan Stanley has refused to provide the discovery sought, CPH also has filed a motion to extend the cost discovery cutoff.

5. Pursuant to the Court’s Order, on July 25, 2008, CPH served Morgan Stanley with its Request for Production of Documents, seeking 17 categories of documents relating to Morgan Stanley’s alleged costs. See CPH’s Request for Production, attached hereto as Exhibit 2. In response, on August 22, 2008, Morgan Stanley served its written response to those requests. As discussed more fully below, however, Morgan Stanley’s responses are riddled with objections and effective refusals to provide documents relating to the reasonableness of its asserted costs. See Morgan Stanley’s Response to Requests for Production, attached hereto as Exhibit 3. In short, following an exhaustive list of general and specific objections to just about every request, Morgan Stanley essentially advises that it will produce documents “sufficient to show” matters related to each item of inquiry. While such a qualified response would be unacceptable in any case, given Morgan Stanley’s extensive history of established litigation misconduct in this action, Morgan Stanley’s declaration that it will produce what it unilaterally deems to be “sufficient” is particularly troubling. Further, Morgan Stanley’s self-appointment as the sole arbiter of the sufficiency of its own production is even less comforting in light of the fact that Morgan Stanley, as discussed below, also is refusing to proffer any meaningful privilege log. The Court already has found that Morgan Stanley “routinely assert[ed] unfounded privilege claims,” and, because of that history, Morgan Stanley should not be permitted to withhold allegedly privileged documents without logging them. See Ex. 1 at 16.

Morgan Stanley’s Discovery Responses Are Deficient

6. Under established Florida law, a prevailing party may be reimbursed only for those costs that were “necessary and reasonable.” See Am. Med. Int’l, Inc. v. Scheller, 484 So. 2d 593, 594 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985); see also Fla. Power & Light Co. v. Polackwich, 705 So. 2d 23, 25 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997) (“trial court’s decision on issues involved in a motion to tax appellate costs is largely discretionary”). On the record thus far before this Court, however, Morgan Stanley has not established that its $11+ million in asserted taxable costs were necessary or reasonable, and, instead of providing full discovery into that information, Morgan Stanley is stonewalling. Set forth below is a brief summary of Morgan Stanley’s deficient discovery responses.

7. Morgan Stanley’s Responses To CPH’s Request For Production Nos. 3-7 Concerning Bond Costs Are Deficient: CPH’s Request for Production Nos. 3-7 seek documents concerning the $9+ million in bond fees, broker commissions, and escrow fees that Morgan Stanley allegedly incurred in connection with its procurement of the supersedeas appeal bond and the costs appeal bond. In particular, those requests call for information regarding other bond alternatives that were available to Morgan Stanley, the costs associated with those alternate arrangements, and why Morgan Stanley elected the bond structure for which it now seeks reimbursement. In its written responses to CPH's requests, however, Morgan Stanley essentially declares that instead of producing all responsive materials, it will produce only what Morgan Stanley believes is "sufficient." For instance:

- In response to Request No. 3 seeking documents concerning the bond premiums, Morgan Stanley states that it "objects to producing 'all' documents 'relating' to the bond premiums because it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley with overbroad requests," and instead, Morgan Stanley declares that it will produce "documents sufficient to show its efforts to obtain a supersedeas bond" and "sufficient to show the cost of the bond premiums, the payment of the bond premiums, and the refund of certain bond premiums." See Morgan Stanley Response to Request For Production at 7.
- In response to Request No. 4 regarding the broker commissions, Morgan Stanley states that it "will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the broker commissions claimed by Morgan Stanley," as well as its communications with E.G. Bowman regarding the bonds, but that "Coleman's attempt to obtain a broader range of documents simply is a fishing expedition designed to harass Morgan Stanley and add to the costs of this limited costs proceeding." Id. at 9.
- In response to Request No. 5 relating to the escrow account fees, Morgan Stanley states that it "will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the escrow account costs," and will produce its communications with The Bank of New York, as well as documents "sufficient to show how the Bank of New York was selected as escrow agent," but that "Coleman's attempt to obtain every piece of paper relating to the Escrow Account is simply overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this limited cost proceeding." Id. at 10-11.
- Request No. 6 seeks all communications between Morgan Stanley and non-parties relating to methods to secure the judgment, but Morgan Stanley is limiting its production to communications between it and E.G. Bowman Co., Inc., The Bank of New York, Safeco Insurance Co., and AIG "that discuss or refer to the determination of the amount of the bond premiums and escrow account fees." Id. at 11. In other words, Morgan Stanley not only is refusing to provide communications with additional non-parties relating to its investigation of alternative -- and perhaps less costly -- methods of securing the judgment, but Morgan Stanley also is limiting its production of third-party communications concerning the bond structure to include only those documents that relate to the costs of the bonds it ultimately obtained.
- Request No. 7 seeks all documents relating to the cancellation of the bonds and the closing of the escrow account, but Morgan Stanley agrees to produce only "documents sufficient to show" the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested a release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the bonds and escrow account and "documents sufficient to show" the date that the request was effected. Id. at 12.

Accordingly, as shown above and in Morgan Stanley's attached discovery responses, Morgan Stanley improperly is limiting its document production to include only those materials that Morgan Stanley unilaterally deems "sufficient to show" that its $9+ million in bond costs were necessary, and it is entirely unwilling to produce documents that would shed light on whether such costs were reasonable. Significantly, Morgan Stanley is refusing to provide all documents relating to its investigation and analyses, if any, of other bond alternatives, even though no proper investigation of reasonableness would be complete without them.

8. Morgan Stanley should not be the only litigant in Florida permitted to pick and choose among its records, and thereafter produce only those materials that it believes support its version of events. That is particularly true in light of Morgan Stanley's established history of failing to produce responsive documents that are damaging to its case. By way of example taken from the underlying proceedings, with respect to CPH's prior request for personnel records, the Court ordered Morgan Stanley to produce documents referring to the truthfulness or moral turpitude of certain key employees, including a managing director named Bill Strong. Ex. 1 at 14-15. In response to that order, Morgan Stanley produced some internal evaluations, but failed to produce documents in its possession relating to criminal charges that were brought against Mr. Strong. Id. When CPH independently uncovered evidence of the indictment, Morgan Stanley argued that the documents concerning the criminal proceedings against Mr. Strong were not responsive to the Court's order because they were not physically contained in his "personnel file." Id. In sanctioning Morgan Stanley for its failure to produce those records, the Court noted that Morgan Stanley's excuse for not producing those damaging files was "about as convincing as its argument that, since it has a corporate directive not to keep drafts of documents once they are in final form, document drafts cannot be business records exempt from hearsay" Id.

Therefore, given Morgan Stanley's propensity to withhold critical documents, this Court should order Morgan Stanley to produce the requested materials concerning the bond structure, why it chose that structure, the associated costs, and the alternative structures that it rejected.

9. Morgan Stanley's Responses To CPH Request For Production Nos. 9-13 Concerning Trial Costs Are Deficient: Just as it does in response to CPH's requests concerning the bond costs, Morgan Stanley also is refusing to provide its records relating to its $2+ million in alleged trial costs. In particular, Morgan Stanley will not provide all documents supporting its transcript and videotaping costs, mediation costs, document production expenses, and expert fees. Instead, as set forth below, Morgan Stanley agrees to provide only those documents that Morgan Stanley unilaterally deems to be "sufficient to show" these costs:

- In response to Request No. 9 concerning mediation costs, Morgan Stanley states that it will produce documents "sufficient to show" the amount of those costs, but Morgan Stanley refuses to produce documents regarding the nature of those costs. Id. at 13.
- In response to Request No. 10 relating to the amount and nature of the claimed expert fees, Morgan Stanley agrees to provide only documents "sufficient to show the amount of the expert fees," and therefore is refusing to produce materials concerning the nature of those expenses. Id. at 14-15.
- In response to Request No. 11 seeking documents concerning the hearing and trial transcript costs, Morgan Stanley states that it will produce only documents "sufficient to show" the amount of the hearing and trial transcript invoices, but Morgan Stanley refuses to produce its records regarding payment of those invoices. Id. at 15.
- In response to Request No. 12 relating to the costs of the deposition transcripts and videos, Morgan Stanley limits its response to documents "sufficient to show" the amount of those costs "in the form of the deposition invoices," and therefore Morgan Stanley refuses to produce its records regarding payment of those invoices. Id. at 16.
- In response to Request No. 13 concerning the claimed costs for copying, imaging, and coding its document productions, Morgan Stanley refuses to produce records relating to whether those materials actually were produced to CPH, and will provide documents only "sufficient to show" the amount of the claimed discovery imaging and coding costs. Id. at 17.

Morgan Stanley should be ordered to produce all requested documents concerning its claimed trial costs, and not just those that Morgan Stanley unilaterally deems “sufficient” to show the amount of its alleged costs. CPH should not be required to accept Morgan Stanley’s selection of what documents to produce, particularly in light of Morgan Stanley’s established history of discovery misconduct with respect to its document productions in this case, including instances where the Court found that Morgan Stanley improperly withheld documents required by Court orders to be produced (Ex. 1 at 13). Accordingly, this Court should order full compliance with Request for Production Nos. 9-13.

10. Morgan Stanley’s Response To CPH Request For Production No. 17 Is Deficient: Request for Production No. 17 seeks documents that “support or refute [Morgan Stanley’s] assertion” that its claimed costs were “reasonable and necessary.” In response to that request, Morgan Stanley proffers several objections, and then agrees to provide only those documents that “are sufficient to support the costs itemized in the affidavits.” Id. at 20. The obvious import of that response is that if Morgan Stanley has documents indicating that the claimed costs were not necessary or reasonable, Morgan Stanley will not produce them. Given Morgan Stanley’s aforementioned proclamations that it will produce only documents “sufficient to show” the amount of its costs, Morgan Stanley’s objection to Request for Production No. 17 is particularly troubling. If Morgan Stanley possesses documents indicating that its claimed costs were either not necessary or not reasonable, then Morgan Stanley should be ordered to produce them. If Morgan Stanley does not have such documents, then Morgan Stanley should just say so. By proffering objection after objection followed by qualified responses, Morgan Stanley once again appears to be hiding something. This Court should order full compliance with Request No. 17.

11. Morgan Stanley's General Objections Taint Its Responses To All Of The Requests: In addition to Morgan Stanley's agreement to provide only documents that Morgan Stanley deems "sufficient," Morgan Stanley also makes all of its responses "subject to" its expansive General Objections. Because of that, CPH is unsure what documents, if any, are being withheld on the basis of those General Objections. For instance, Morgan Stanley objects generally to producing documents that it unilaterally deems "irrelevant, immaterial, or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." See General Objection No. 3. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to the requests "to the extent they are oppressive, overbroad . . . and unduly burdensome, particularly to the extent that they seek 'all' documents relating to a particular subject matter." See General Objection No. 4. Although such objections, in other circumstances, might be understood as simply preserving arguments, CPH cannot accept that ambiguity here. In this very case, Morgan Stanley has been found to have withheld documents that the Court ordered Morgan Stanley to produce. See, e.g., Ex. 1 at 13, 15-16. Accordingly, because of those and the other General Objections proffered by Morgan Stanley, CPH cannot determine if Morgan Stanley has produced all of the documents responsive to its requests. Therefore, CPH respectfully requests that this Court order Morgan Stanley to identify each and every document that it withholds pursuant to its General Objections.

12. Morgan Stanley Improperly Objects To Providing Privilege Log: In its General Objection No. 5, Morgan Stanley refuses to provide a complete privilege log. Specifically, Morgan Stanley asserts:

Morgan Stanley objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged communications between Morgan Stanley's attorneys (including both its in-house counsel and outside counsel) and Morgan Stanley employees that may 'relate' in some way to the claimed costs. In fact, the parties previously agreed, and the Court ordered, that the parties were 'not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involved privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transaction at issue in this case.’ 9/4/2003 Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time to Prepare Privilege Log. Morgan Stanley also objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged materials such as work product created by in-house counsel or outside counsel while preparing the cost motions.

Id. at 3. In refusing to provide a complete privilege log relating to its costs production, Morgan Stanley improperly is relying on an order that governed merits discovery, and that was entered long before Morgan Stanley’s litigation misconduct was revealed. As further explained below, Morgan Stanley’s reliance on the September 4, 2003 Agreed Order is misplaced and improper.

13. First, the September 4, 2003 Agreed Order was entered long before both the Court and CPH learned of Morgan Stanley’s extensive discovery misconduct, including Morgan Stanley’s routine assertion of unfounded privilege claims. See, e.g., March 10, 2005 Order Following In Camera Inspection (Strong), attached hereto as Exhibit 4; see also March 23, 2005 Order, attached hereto as Exhibit 1 at 16 (Morgan Stanley “routinely assert[ed] unfounded privileged claims”). Indeed, with respect to the Bill Strong indictment documents discussed above, Morgan Stanley’s discovery misconduct was not limited to its initial failure to produce those materials. In fact, once the existence of those documents was discovered by CPH, and Morgan Stanley subsequently was ordered to produce them, Morgan Stanley improperly asserted privilege as to at least 460 of them: the Court found that Morgan Stanley “produced over 260 documents dealing with the Strong investigation over which it had previously claimed privilege once the Court announced its intention to conduct an in camera review; [and] the Court found another 200 documents were not privileged after conducting its review.” See Ex. 1 at 16. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley’s history of abusing claims of privilege demonstrates why Morgan Stanley must be required to submit a complete privilege log.

14. Second, the September 4, 2003 Agreed Order concerned merits discovery in the underlying case. Unlike that situation, the discovery here is limited to Morgan Stanley's asserted costs incurred in the underlying case, and necessarily involves communications relating to this litigation. Morgan Stanley should not be permitted to invoke an order that should have no application in this setting.

15. Third, Morgan Stanley's lawyers were themselves involved in incurring the asserted costs that Morgan Stanley seeks. Indeed, in response to CPH's Rule 1.310 Notice of Deposition to Morgan Stanley requesting testimony on 14 specific topics relating to Morgan Stanley's costs motions, Morgan Stanley has designated two of its outside counsel to provide corporate representative testimony on all but three of those topics. See Ex. 5, Morgan Stanley's Rule 1.310 designations. As those corporate representative designations confirm, the lawyers often will be at the center of many relevant communications. That fact alone demonstrates the necessity of a privilege log here. Thus, CPH respectfully requests that this Court order Morgan Stanley to produce a privilege log describing every document withheld on the basis of any privilege.

16. In sum, Morgan Stanley has proved time and time again in this very litigation that it cannot be trusted to participate in discovery in good faith, and thus it should not be permitted to produce only what it deems to be "sufficient" to prove that its costs were necessary and reasonable. Moreover, given Morgan Stanley's established history of improperly asserting privilege, this Court should require Morgan Stanley to produce a full and complete privilege log.

17. Counsel for CPH contacted counsel for Morgan Stanley in an attempt to resolve this discovery dispute without a hearing, but was unable to do so.

WHEREFORE, CPH respectfully requests that this Court direct Morgan Stanley: (1) to produce all documents responsive to Request Nos. 3-7, 9-13, and 17; (2) to identify any responsive documents that are being withheld on the basis of Morgan Stanley's General Objections; and (3) to produce a log of all responsive documents withheld from the production on the basis of any privilege.

IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

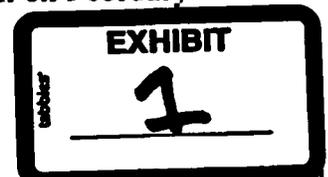

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

ORDER ON CPH'S RENEWED MOTION FOR ENTRY OF DEFAULT JUDGMENT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court March 14 and 15, 2005, on CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment, with both parties well represented by counsel.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"), has sued Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), for aiding and abetting and conspiring with Sunbeam to perpetrate a fraud. Early in the case, CPH was concerned that MS & Co. was not thoroughly looking for emails responsive to its discovery requests. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered an Agreed Order ("Agreed Order") that required MS & Co. to search its oldest full backup tapes for emails subject to certain parameters and certify compliance. MS & Co. certified compliance with the Agreed Order on June 23, 2004. On November 17, 2004, CPH learned that MS & Co. had found some backup tapes that had not been searched. On January 26, 2005 it served its Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Motion"), claiming that MS & Co.'s violation of the Agreed Order, coupled with its systematic overwriting of emails after 12 months, justified an adverse inference against it. The Court ordered certain limited discovery. Responses to that discovery prompted CPH to orally amend its Adverse Inference Motion to seek more severe sanctions.

The Court held an evidentiary hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion on February

14, 2005. On March 1, 2005 it issued its Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destruction of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order ("Adverse Inference Order"). In its current Motion, CPH argues that it has since learned that the discovery abuses addressed in the Adverse Inference Motion and Order represent only a sampling of discovery abuses perpetrated by MS & Co. and that the abuses have continued, unabated. It claims that these abuses, when taken as a whole, infect the entire case. To understand CPH's argument, it is necessary to go back to the beginning.

This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which CPH sold its 82% interest in the Coleman Company, Inc., to Sunbeam Corporation. MS & Co. served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000.00 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the cash portion of the deal.

CPH's Complaint¹ alleged claims against MS & Co. arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy, and sought damages of at least $485 million.

On May 12, 2003, MS & Co. was served with the Complaint and CPH's First Request for Production of Documents ("Request"). The Request sought, in essence, all documents connected with the Sunbeam deal. "Documents" was broadly defined, and specifically included items electronically stored. Concerned that, out of more than 8,000 pages of documents produced, it had received only a handful of emails, CPH on October 29, 2003, served its Motion to Compel Concerning E-Mails. That motion sought an order requiring MS & Co. to make a full investigation for email messages, including a search of magnetic tapes and hard drives; produce within 10 days all emails located; and produce a Rule 1.310 witness.

¹On February 17, 2005, CPH served its First Amended Complaint, which dropped the claims against MS & Co. for fraudulent and negligent misrepresentation, leaving only the aiding and abetting and conspiracy claims.

within 20 days "to describe the search that was conducted, identify any gaps in Morgan Stanley's production, and explain the reasons for any gaps."

In its Opposition to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel served November 4, 2003, MS & Co. argued that CPH wanted "this Court to order a massive safari into the remote corners of MS & Co.'s email backup systems" and represented that "(t)he restoration efforts demanded by CPH would cost at least hundreds of thousands of dollars and require several months to complete (emphasis in original). MS & Co. argued that CPH's "true" motive was to "harass and burden MS & Co. with unnecessary and costly discovery demands and attempt to smear MS & Co. with out-of-context recitations from other proceedings" because "CPH concedes that MS & Co. is only able to restore email from backup tapes from January 2000 and later - more than a year and a half after the events that allegedly gave rise to CPH's claims," (emphasis in original).

CPH's "concession" was based on representations like the kind made to it by MS & Co.'s counsel in a March 11, 2004 letter that suggested "(t)he burden on Morgan Stanley from . . . a wholesale restoration [of email back up tapes], both in terms of dollars and manpower would be enormous. Regardless of who performs the initial restoration, it would require hundreds (perhaps thousands) of attorney-hours to review millions of irrelevant and non-responsive e-mails . . ." ²

In response to CPH's Motion to Compel, the parties agreed to reciprocal corporate

²Complaints about MS & Co.'s tactics are not new. See Ex. 196 [February 26, 2004, letter from EEOC to Hon. Ronald L. Ellis in EEOC/Schieffelin v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., et al., 01-CV-8421 (RMB) (RLE) (S.D.N.Y.): "(w)hen EEOC received [Morgan Stanley's] January 27, 2004 Responses to EEOC's Fifth Requests for Production of Documents which did not contain any e-mails, the parties communicated further. At that time, Morgan Stanley took the position that searching for e-mails would be burdensome both in regards to expense and the time it would take to respond. While the parties were in the process of attempting to work out these disputes, EEOC for the first time learned that [Morgan Stanley has] an easy, systematic ability to search for relevant documents. In a February 16, 2004, conversation with an IT representative of [Morgan Stanley], EEOC learned that [Morgan Stanley has] an e-mail system, which, while not yet fully comprehensive, was easily searchable on February 18, 2004, the close of discovery . . . which is certain to produce discoverable information highly relevant to EEOC's and Plaintiff-Intervenor's claims . . . After disclosing their state-of-the-art system to EEOC, [Morgan Stanley] dropped [its] assertion that the process was too expensive, but maintained that they refuse to search for e-mails because it is burdensome for attorneys to review large numbers of documents prior to production.")

depositions on the email issue. CPH deposed Robert Saunders on February 10, 2004.³ After completion of the corporate representative depositions, and unable to obtain MS & Co.'s agreement to a mutual email restoration protocol, CPH served its Motion for Permission to have Third Party Retrieve Morgan Stanley E-Mail and Other Responsive Documents, proposing that a third party vendor be given access to both parties' email systems for restoration at each party's expense. At the hearing on that Motion, CPH offered to split the expenses evenly. MS & Co. refused.

MS & Co.'s continued assertions that the email searches could be conducted only at enormous cost and would be fruitless because there were not backup tapes with email from 1997 and 1998 were confirmed to the Court by MS & Co.'s counsel, Thomas Clare of Kirkland & Ellis, at a hearing held March 19, 2004:

Mr. Scarola: Electronic records of e-mails that have been exchanged.

The Court: Do we agree that there has been such a request outstanding?

Mr. Clare: There has been a request outstanding.

The Court: And have you all objected?

Mr. Clare: From the beginning.

The Court: And what's the basis of the objection?

Mr. Clare: We objected to the breadth of the request that they're making. And to answer Your Honor's question directly – and the burden that is associated with it – that given the particular e-mail back-up tapes that are in existence five, six years after the fact of these transactions, that the scope of the e-mail request that they are seeking is improperly and unduly burdensome given the enormous costs that would be required, given the fact that the time period for which we have back-up tapes post dates the events by several years.

Unable to resolve the email issue, on April 9, 2004, CPH served its Motion to Compel ³Saunders provided misleading information in his deposition. See footnote 12, infra.

Concerning E-Mails and Other Electronic Documents. On the eve of the hearing on CPH's Motion to Compel, the parties reached an accommodation, and on April 16, 2004 the Court entered the Agreed Order. Under the Agreed Order, MS & Co. was required to (1) search the oldest full backup tape for each of 36 MS & Co. employees involved in the Sunbeam transaction; (2) review emails dated from February 15, 1998, through April 15, 1998, and emails containing any of 29 specified search terms such as "Sunbeam" and "Coleman" regardless of their date; (3) produce by May 14, 2004, all nonprivileged emails responsive to CPH's document requests; (4) give CPH a privilege log; and (5) certify its full compliance with the Agreed Order.

As required by the Agreed Order, MS & Co. produced about 1,300 pages of emails on May 14, 2004. It did not, however, certify compliance with the Agreed Order. After prompting by CPH, on June 23, 2004, MS & Co. served a certificate of compliance signed by Arthur Riel, an Executive Director and manager of its Law/Compliance IT Group.⁴

CPH got its first indication that the Agreed Order may have been violated in the late fall of 2004.

On November 17, 2004, Clare wrote Michael Brody of Jenner & Block, CPH's outside counsel, that MS & Co. had "discovered additional e-mail backup tapes . . ."; that "(t)he data on some of [the] newly discovered tapes has been restored;" that "we have re-run the searches described in [the Agreed Order]"; that "some responsive e-mails have been located as a result of that process"; and that "(w)e will produce the responsive documents to you as soon as the production is finalized."

On December 14, 2004, Brody wrote Clare back:

in [your November 17, 2004 letter], you state that Morgan Stanley located additional email backup tapes, and that you

⁴Though CPH would not learn for months that the certificate was false, and even then the magnitude of MS & Co.'s misrepresentations would not be admitted, MS & Co. personnel, including in-house counsel, knew the certification of compliance was false when made.

would be producing documents soon. Within two days of that letter, you produced some emails to us. In your November 17, 2004 letter, however, you also indicated that "some of the backup tapes are still being restored." Have those backup tapes been restored? Have you found additional responsive emails? If so, when will Morgan Stanley produce those emails? How is it that the tapes were only recently located?

On December 17, 2004, Clare wrote back, telling Brody "(n)o additional responsive e-mails have been located since our November production."⁵

Brody wrote back to Clare December 30, 2004, noting the deficiencies in Clare's correspondence:

You do not inform us whether the review of the recently-located backup tapes still is ongoing. Please confirm that all email backup tapes from the relevant time period have been reviewed and all responsive emails have been produced. If the review still is proceeding, please let us know when the review will be completed.

Clare wrote back on January 11, 2005, telling Brody that the "restoration of e-mail backup tapes is ongoing. Restoration of the next set of backup tapes is estimated to be completed at the end of January. We intend to re-run the searches described in the agreed order at that time."

Concerned about Clare's lack of candor, on January 19, 2005 Brody wrote again:

I write in response to your January 11, 2005 letter concerning e-mails back-up tapes. Unfortunately, your letter raises more questions than it answers. As I requested in my December 14, 2004 letter, please explain the circumstances under which Morgan Stanley located these backup tapes and advise us of the date on which the tapes were located.

⁵Not only does this letter fail to answer Brody's legitimate questions, it implies that MS &Co. was still processing and reviewing emails from the newly found tapes. As we now know, though, no additional information was migrated to the archives between approximately August 18, 2004 and January 15, 2005. Of course "no additional responsive e-mails [would have been] located."

041104

Further, please explain your statement that "the next set of backup tapes" is scheduled to be restored "at the end of January." How many tapes will be restored by the end of January? When exactly in January will Morgan Stanley complete the process of restoring and searching these tapes for responsive documents? Are there other backup tapes that are not yet in the process of being restored? If so, please advise us of (a) the number of tapes that are not yet in the process of being restored; (b) the time period of the data contained on those tapes; and (c) Morgan Stanley's timetable for restoring and searching those tapes. In addition, please explain why those tapes are not yet in the process of being restored. Please also explain why Morgan Stanley cannot complete the restoration and searching of all remaining backup tapes before "the end of January." As you know, our trial is scheduled to begin on February 22, 2005.

We look forward your complete response to these questions no later than January 21, 2005 so that we can bring this matter to the Court's attention, if necessary.

Conforming to what was by now his usual stonewall tactic, Clare responded by letter dated January 21, 2005:

I write in response to your January 19, 2005 letter regarding Morgan Stanley's production of e-mails restored from backup tapes.

Morgan Stanley completed its initial production of restored e-mail messages on May 14, 2005. The May 2004 production was conducted in accordance with the agreed-upon order governing, and the searches that resulted in that production encompassed data from all of the backup tapes known to exist at the time. Subsequent to the May 2004 production, additional tapes were found in various locations at Morgan Stanley. The discovered tapes were not clearly labeled as to their contents, were not found in locations where e-mail backup tapes customarily were stored, and many of the tapes were in a different format than other e-mail backup tapes. In November 2004, once it was determined at least some of the discovered tapes contained recoverable e-mail data, Morgan Stanley re-ran the searches described in the agreed-upon order. Those searches resulted in Morgan Stanley's November 2004 production.

Morgan Stanley's efforts to restore the backup tapes discovered after the May 2004 production are ongoing. It is a time-consuming and painstaking process and, given the absence of clear labels or other index information for the backup tapes, there is no way for Morgan Stanley to know or accurately predict the type or time period of data that might be recovered from tapes that have yet to be restored. While Morgan Stanley cannot accurately estimate when all of the tapes will be restored or whether any recoverable data will be found on the remaining tapes, we understand from Morgan Stanley that, when the agreed-upon searches are run again at the end of January, those searches will include approximately one terabyte of additional data restored since the prior production.

On January 26, 2005, CPH served its Adverse Inference Motion, seeking sanctions based on MS & Co.'s disclosure of the newly found tapes. Hearing was scheduled for February 14, 2005. In preparation for that hearing, on February 3, 2005 the Court ordered MS & Co. to produce by noon on February 8, 2005 "(i) all documents to be referred to or relied on by any of the witnesses in his or her testimony; and (ii) all documents within MS & Co.'s care, custody, or control, addressing or related to the additional email backup tapes, including matters relating to the time or manner in which they were discovered; by whom they were discovered; who else learned of their discovery and when; and the manner and timetable by which they were to be restored and made searchable, including any correspondence to or from outside or prospective outside vendors."

later than May of 2004; the undisclosed discovery of the 738 8-millimeter backup tapes in 2002; the presence of unsearched data in the staging area; the discovery of 169 DLT tapes in January 2005; the discovery of more than 200 additional tapes on February 11 and 12, 2005; the discovery of a script error that had prevented MS & Co. from locating responsive email attachments; and discovery of another script error that had infected the ability to gather emails from Lotus Notes platform users.

In response to these deficiencies, the Court issued the Adverse Inference Order. That Order reversed the burden of proof on the aiding and abetting and conspiracy elements and included a statement of evidence of MS & Co.'s efforts to hide its emails to be read to the jury, as relevant to both its consciousness of guilt and the appropriateness of punitive damages. It specifically provided that "MS & Co. shall continue to use its best efforts to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and . . . February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search."⁶

It is now clear why MS & Co. was so unwilling to provide CPH with basic information about how and when the tapes were found or when production would be complete. First, candor would have required MS & Co. to admit that it had not done a good faith search for the oldest full backup tapes, and that Riel's certificate of compliance was false. Some unsearched tapes had been found by 2002; others had been found no later than May, 2004. Together, over 2,000 tapes had been found which were not searched prior to the May production. It is untrue that the tapes were "not in locations where e-mail backup tapes customarily were stored."

⁶Concerned that MS & Co. had been less than candid with both CPH and the Court, on February 4, 2004, the Court entered its Order on Coleman (Parent) Holding's ore tenus Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Backup Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search, ordering MS & Co. to pay for a third party vendor to check its compliance with the Agreed Order. The Court previously found that the two scripts errors testified to by Allison Gorman at the February 14, 2005, hearing would not have been discovered or revealed without the threat that the third-party vendor would discover the errors. Given Ms. Gorman's testimony at the March 14, 2005, hearing, though, it now appears MS & Co. knew about the errors before the appointment of the third-party vendor. Consequently, the errors were only revealed, but not discovered, in response to the February 4, 2004, Order.

Second, MS & Co. desperately wanted to hide an active SEC inquiry into its email retention practices.^{7 8 9 10} Finally, MS & Co. did not want to admit the existence of the historical email archive, which would expose the false representations it had made to the Court and used to induce CPH to agree to entry of the Agreed Order.^{11 12}

⁷On December 17, 2003, CPH served its Third Request for Production seeking "(a)ll materials and documents submitted to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), received from the SEC, or reflecting communications with the SEC in connection with any investigation, inquiry, or examination concerning or relating to Morgan Stanley's policies and/or procedures with regard to the retention, storage, deletion, and/or back-up of electronic mail (emails) . . ." On October 12, 2004, CPH served its Request for Supplemental Documents seeking to bring MS & Co.'s document production current, requesting "(a)ll documents not previously provided by MS & Co. that are responsive to any Request for Production of Documents that CPH previously has served upon MS & Co. in the litigation, including documents obtained by MS & Co. or its counsel after the date of MS & Co.'s prior productions." No SEC documents were produced in response to either request; no privilege log was generated. On other privilege logs generated in response to court orders, MS & Co. did not show the SEC on the distribution portion of the log. See March 9, 2005 Order Following in Camera Inspection (Riel/SEC Documents) footnotes 1, 2. See also, footnote 15, infra. Kirland & Ellis, outside counsel for MS & Co. in this litigation, represents MS & Co. in the SEC's inquiry into its email retention practices.

⁸MS & Co. manipulated the unhinging of the SEC's email investigation from the IPO litigation in January, 2005, to conceal the email issues as long as possible.

⁹It is now apparent that MS & Co. chose deliberately to keep its affidavits concerning the informal SEC inquiry submitted to support its privilege claims vague, despite two requests from the Court seeking specific information. See February 28, 2005 Order (Release of Exhibits).

¹⁰See February 25, 2005 Order on Morgan Stanley's Objections to Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc.'s Notice to Produce at Hearing and Motion for Protective Order and March 4, 2005 Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production.

¹¹While MS & Co. contends that its representations to the Court that it would cost "hundreds of thousands of dollars" to search the backup tapes and that there was no pre-2000 backup tapes were not false, they were deliberately misleading: MS & Co. never had an intention to search the back up tapes to respond to the requests and some of the year 2000 backup tapes backed up email back to 1997.

In 2001, MS & Co. decided to create the email archive. By June 2003, it had decided that the archive should have two components. First, MS & Co. wanted to create an archive that captured and stored email as it was generated. Second, MS & Co. wanted to add historical data to the archive. That task involved searching for all email backup tapes containing historical emails; sending those tapes to an outside processor; loading the processed tapes into a staging area; and migrating the stored data from the staging area onto the archive. As we now know, archive searches are quick and inexpensive. They do not cost "hundreds of thousands of dollars" or "take several months." The restrictions imposed by the Agreed Order were not needed.

¹²On February 10, 2004, Robert Saunders, an executive director of IT for MS & Co., was deposed. He testified that in January, 2003, MS & Co. had put into effect the email archive system. When specifically asked whether the new email archive system would include prior backups or only going forward backups, he testified that "(t)he way it was built was for going forward backup." He was next asked whether "(w)ith respect to backup dated January 2001 and previously, does Morgan Stanley have any new capabilities to restore and search e-mail?" After counsel interposed a vagueness objection, he answered "(t)here are no new capabilities to search that e-mail." That testimony was so misleading as to be false. As Saunders well knew, since he was on the team responsible, the "live" email capture portion of the archive was already operational. The migration of the historical data to the archive was expected to be completed by April of 2004, just two months after his deposition.

MS & Co.'s wrongful conduct has continued unabated.¹³ Since the February 14, 2005, hearing, it has come to light that:

- Only two whole and four partial tapes from the Brooklyn tapes had been migrated to the archive and were thus searched for the November, 2004, production. MS & Co. sought to hide this information to create the impression that all the produced documents came from the Brooklyn tapes, rather than reveal that the production came from material that had migrated from the staging area to the archive since the May, 2004, production or some other, as yet undisclosed, source.¹⁴
- Contrary to MS & Co.'s counsel's November 17, 2004, letter to CPH, none of the November, 2004 production came from the "newly found" tapes. MS & Co. carefully crafted its responses to inquiries about the November, 2004, production to avoid both disclosure of the existence of the archive and outright lying.
- The scripts MS & Co. used to process emails into its archive caused the bodies of some messages to be truncated. MS & Co. discovered this problem on February 13, 2005, but did not tell the Court about it until March 14, 2005.
- A migration issue caused about 5% of email harvested by NDCI from the backup tapes not to be captured in the archive, based on testing of a representative sample of tapes. MS & Co. told the SEC about this problem on February 24, 2005, but failed to tell CPH or the Court.
- As of June 7, 2004, only 120 out of 143 SDLT tapes had been processed into the archive.
- An analysis requested by the SEC showed that, based on a representative sample, 10% of backup tapes were overwritten after January, 2001.

¹³MS & Co. sought to use the entry of the Adverse Inference Order as a shield against further inquiry into its email abuses, arguing that the matter was closed by the Adverse Inference Order. It previously used this tactic with the SEC, arguing that the December 3, 2003 Cease and Desist Order shielded it from other sanctions for email retention failures. See Ex. 14 [February 10, 2005 letter from outside counsel for MS & Co. to SEC]

¹⁴MS & Co. argued at the March 14 and 15, 2005 hearing that there were only 13 unique, new emails contained in the November 2004 production when compared to the May 2004 production. Nine of those emails, however, were originally given to MS& Co.'s lawyers for responsiveness review by the IT staff for the May 2004 production. No explanation of why they were not produced in May was offered. This is particularly concerning given the large number of documents Ms. Gorman testified the search parameters found compared with the relatively small number found responsive and produced after review by counsel.

- A software error caused blind carbon copies not to be captured in the archive process. MS & Co. told the SEC about this problem on February 24, 2005. MS & Co. did not tell CPH or the Court.
- A software error caused the searches to be hyper case-sensitive, resulting in a failure to capture all emails. MS & Co. knew of the problem as of December, 2004, but did not tell CPH or the Court. The problem was not purportedly fixed until March, 2005.
- A script error caused the archive to have problems pulling group email in Lotus Notes.
- MS & Co. provided sworn testimony at the February 14, 2005, hearing that it had located 600 gigabytes of data, while contemporaneously telling the SEC it had located a terabyte of data. A gigabyte represents 20,000 to 100,000 pages. Incredibly, MS & Co.'s witness on this point, Allison Gorman, testified on March 14, 2005, that it was simply a "terminology" issue that she did not choose to correct because it could cause "confusion."
- CPH requested MS & Co. to produce responses it had made to third-parties in civil, criminal, or administrative proceedings describing limitations on MS & Co.'s ability to produce emails and all notices in such proceedings that MS & Co. had newly discovered backup tapes containing email. MS & Co. objected, arguing that there were over 300 separate proceedings, involving over 70 outside law firms, and that the cost of compliance would be too great. On March 2, 2005, the Court ordered the production, after shortening the time period involved, and required production within 12 hours after counsel's review of each item for responsiveness but, in any event, within 10 days. At the time MS & Co. objected to CPH's request as unduly burdensome, it knew of its Wells submission to the SEC made on February 10, 2005. Kirkland and Ellis, co-counsel here, was co-counsel for MS & Co. in that SEC proceeding. Consequently, it appears MS & Co.'s real concern was not that expressed to the Court, but was based on its realization that compliance would reveal the existence of the SEC inquiry into its email retention policy and MS & Co.'s efforts to keep the existence of that investigation secret. MS & Co. violated the Court's March 2, 2005, Order on Morgan Stanley's Responses and Objections to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Notice to Produce at Hearing requiring it to disclose items responsive to CPH's Request for Production within 12 hours of review for responsiveness by waiting days, not hours, to produce the Wells submission.

- MS & Co.'s failure to produce or log the SEC documents violated the Court's February 3, 2005, Order.¹⁵
- James Doyle's, the Executive Director of MS & Co.'s Law Division, declaration that he did not learn of additional unsearched backup tapes until the end of October, 2004, was intended to mislead CPH and the Court. Obviously, MS & Co. sought to create the implication in the declaration that no one in the Law Division knew of the backup tapes before then. Instead, both Soo-Mi Lee, Doyle's associate, and James Cusick, Doyle's superior, knew of the tapes no later than June 7, 2004.
- In-house counsel for MS & Co. knew as of June 7, 2004, that nearly a third of the restored backup tapes did not contain email, implying they may have been recycled in violation of the December 3, 2002 Cease and Desist Order. They did not tell CPH or the Court.
- MS & Co.'s searches looked for only two types of emails. There are other types of emails that were not included in the searches. CPH did not learn of this deficiency until March 13, 2005.
- MS & Co. improperly failed to produce 125 documents required to be produced by the Court's February 3, 2005, Order Specially Setting Hearing which required limited discovery be made in connection with the February 14, 2005, hearing on the Adverse Inference Motion.
- MS & Co. improperly withheld 13 documents required to be produced by the Court's March 4, 2005, Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production.
- An additional 282 tapes were found on February 23 and 25, 2005; CPH was not told of the discovery until March 13, 2005.
- An additional 3,536 tapes were discovered on February 23, 2005, in a security room.
- An additional 2,718 tapes were found at Recall, MS & Co.'s third party off-site storage vendor, on March 3, 2005.
- An additional 389 tapes were found March 2 through March 5, 2005. CPH was not told

¹⁵The Court previously rejected MS & Co.'s argument that the January 14, 2005, email exchange between its outside and in-house counsel was not required to be produced under the February 3, 2005, Order Specially Setting Hearing because it referred to the "documents issue" and not specifically to the backup tapes. See March 16, 2005 Order on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Disqualify Plaintiff's Counsel Searcy, Denney, Scarola, Barnhart & Shipley, P.A. and Jenner & Block, LLC. MS & Co.'s insistence on a narrow interpretation of the February 3, 2005, Order is not particularly sympathetic, when the only reason that Order confined production to the backup tape issue was because MS & Co. had failed to notify the Court of the other deficiencies in its certificate of compliance.

until March 13, 2005.

- On March 4, 2005, the Court entered its Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production, which ordered MS & Co. to produce by 3:00 p.m. on March 7, 2005, all items within its care, custody, or control dealing with the Riel/SEC investigation, other than documents representing communications between or among MS & Co. inside and outside counsel that were not copied to anyone other than counsel. MS & Co. sought to discredit Riel and thus distance itself from the false June 23, 2004 certificate of compliance; in doing so, it sought to hide Riel's whistle blower status and the existence of an SEC investigation into whether MS & Co. employees sought kick backs from third party vendors; whether MS & Co. employees were improperly pressured into dealing with third-party vendors who may provide business to MS & Co.; and whether MS & Co. continued to overwrite backup tapes contrary to the SEC's December 3, 2002, Cease and Desist Order.
- A script error prevented the insertion of some emails into the archive. MS & Co. produced over 4,600 pages of emails on March 21, 2005, some of which it suggested may have been located on correction of the error; alternatively, it suggested the emails may have been located by NDCI as part of its efforts to verify MS & Co.'s searches.

MS & Co.'s discovery abuses have not been confined to its email production.

William Strong is a MS & Co. managing director and was one of the principal players for it in the Sunbeam deal. He took credit for the fees generated. On May 9, 2003, CPH requested a copy of "(a)ll documents concerning employment contracts, performance evaluations, and/or personnel files (including without limitation any documents that describe or discuss [his] training, experience, competence, and accomplishments) . . ." MS & Co. asserted that the requested documents were not relevant and that production "would unnecessarily infringe on the privacy interests of [Strong]." On March 15, 2004, the Court ordered MS & Co. to produce "(a)ll references (positive or negative) to [Strong's] truthfulness, veracity, or moral turpitude." Some portions of Strong's evaluations were produced in response to that order. Those evaluations noted Strong's colleagues' reservations about his candor and ethics. Two of his evaluators, Joseph Perella and Tarek Abdel-Meguid, were deposed, when some relatively vague testimony about the bases for those conclusions was offered. It now appears Strong was facing criminal prosecution in Italy for complicity in bribery while he was working on the Sunbeam transaction, which his evaluators knew, and that MS & Co. purposely

withheld that information from CPH and the Court.¹⁶

Even once CPH independently discovered evidence of Strong's indictment in Italy, MS & Co. sought to shield its files from discovery. It claimed that virtually all of the documents it had were privileged under joint defense agreements in place between it, Strong, and Saloman Brothers, Strong's employer at the time of the incident. As the Court's March 10, 2005 Order Following In Camera Inspection (Strong) details, the documents MS & Co. relied on to support that position, and sought to prevent CPH from obtaining, reflect no such agreement.

The other discovery abuses and misrepresentations by MS & Co. other than those involving its email production practices are outlined in CPH's Chronology of Discovery Abuses by Defendant served March 1, 2005, and would take a volume to recite. They include:

- failing to provide the information retained by MS & Co.'s internal document management system pertaining to MS & Co.'s work for Sunbeam; falsely representing to the Court that no useful information was contained in that information; and producing a Rule 1.310 representative who had made an insufficient inquiry into authenticity, business record status, and authorship of documents; see February 28, 2005 Order on CPH's Motion to Deem Certain Documents Admissible and for Sanctions due to Morgan Stanley's Disregard of Court Order;
- when faced with contempt proceedings for violating the Stipulated Confidentiality Order by providing a copy of a settlement agreement between CPH and Arthur Andersen to other counsel, representing to the Court that the law firm of Kellogg, Huber was retained to handle the "Andersen aspects" of this litigation because of a conflict between Andersen and Kirkland & Ellis; Mark Hansen, a partner at Kellogg, Huber, testified that his firm was hired as co-counsel for all aspects of the case;
- providing answers to interrogatories signed by a corporate representative who performed insufficient verification of the responses;

¹⁶MS & Co. originally argued that documents concerning the Italian proceedings were not in Strong's "personnel file" and so were not required to be produced in response to CPH's initial request. MS & Co.'s practice of filing damaging information about an employee other than in his personnel file and then claiming it was not included in the request is about as convincing as its argument that, since it has a corporate directive not to keep drafts of documents once they are in final form, document drafts cannot be business records exempt from hearsay because they are not "kept in the course of a regularly conducted business activity." See Fla. Stat. §90.803 (6) (a). In any event, there was no excuse for not producing its records of the Italian proceedings once the Court's March 15, 2004 Order was entered.

- routinely asserting unfounded privilege claims,¹⁷ and
- failing to timely comply with the Court's orders; for example, MS & Co. did not produce Strong's 1994 Performance Evaluation until the afternoon of March 15, 2005, though it was obviously included in the Court's March 15, 2004 Order. The failure cannot be excused as oversight since, when CPH specifically asked for the 1994 evaluation in the spring of 2004, MS & Co.'s counsel said it was withheld as non-responsive; see, also, Ex. 197, 198.

In sum, MS & Co. has deliberately and contumaciously violated numerous discovery orders, including the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order; February 3, 2005 Order Specially Setting Hearing; and the March 4, 2005 Order on Plaintiff's ore tenus Motion to Compel Additional Production. At the February 14, 2005, hearing on CPH's Adverse Inference Motion, it chose to hide information about its violations and coach witnesses to avoid any mention of additional, undisclosed problems with its compliance with the Agreed Order. Implicit in the requirement that MS & Co. certify compliance with the Agreed Order was the requirement to disclose impediments to its ability to so certify. As outlined in this Order, MS & Co. employees, and not just counsel, have participated in the discovery abuses. The prejudice to CPH from these failings cannot be cured. Even if all the script errors have been located and corrected, and MS & Co. has failed to show they have, and even if all of the email backup tapes have now been located, and MS & Co. has failed to show they have, the searches cannot be completed in time. The other discovery abuses outlined call into doubt all of MS & Co.'s discovery responses. The judicial system cannot function this way. Based on the foregoing and on the Court's March 1, 2005 Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that CPH's Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment is Granted, in part. See Robinson v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 887 So. 2d 328 (Fla. 2004); Mercer v. Raine, 443 So. 2d 944 (Fla. 1983); Precision Tune Auto Care, Inc. v.

¹⁷For example, MS & Co. produced over 260 documents dealing with the Strong investigation over which it had previously claimed privilege once the Court announced its intention to conduct an in camera review; the Court found another 200 documents were not privileged after conducting its review, by its March 10, 2005 Order.

A copy of a redacted Amended Complaint is attached as Exhibit A. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Court shall read to the jury a Statement similar to that attached as Exhibit A to the Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.’s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley’s Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley’s Noncompliance with the Court’s April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, but incorporating the relevant additional findings of this Order, and the jury will be instructed that it may consider those facts in determining whether MS & Co. sought to conceal its offensive conduct when determining whether an award of punitive damages is appropriate. See General Motors Corp. v. McGee, 837 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002), rev. den. 851 So. 2d 728 (Fla. 2003). Counsel are each invited to submit proposed Statements. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that CPH shall be entitled to an award of reasonable fees and costs incurred as a result of the Renewed Motion for Entry of Default Judgment and the violations of Court orders recited herein. The amount shall be determined at an evidentiary hearing following trial. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that MS & Co. is relieved of any future obligation to comply with the April 16, 2004 Agreed Order and the February 4, 2005 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Participate in Search of Additional E-Mail Back-Up Tapes or Appoint Third Party to Conduct Search. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the pro hac vice admission of Thomas Clare is revoked. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the portions of CPH's Motion for Correction and Clarification of Order on CPH's Motion for Adverse Inference that seek to amend the body of that Order to correct clerical and spelling errors, as agreed to by counsel, is Granted, and the corrections deemed made to the body of the Amended Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Adverse Inference Instruction Due to Morgan Stanley's Destructions of E-Mails and Morgan Stanley's Noncompliance with the Court's April 16, 2004 Agreed Order, by interlineation. In all other respects the remainder of the Motion for Correction and Clarification is declared moot.

In April 1997, Morgan Stanley began serving as Sunbeam's investment banker. Morgan Stanley originally attempted to find someone to buy Sunbeam. When Morgan Stanley was unable to find a buyer, Morgan Stanley developed a strategy for Sunbeam to use its fraudulently-inflated stock to acquire a large company that Sunbeam would own and operate. Then, trading on Morgan Stanley's relationships with CPH's senior officers, Morgan Stanley found

Coleman for Sunbeam. At the time of the sale to Sunbeam, Coleman was a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the worldwide outdoor recreation market, with annual revenues in excess of $1 billion.

on shares

After Sunbeam announced plans to acquire Coleman, Morgan Stanley agreed to underwrite a $750 million debenture offering for Sunbeam. Sunbeam needed the proceeds of that debenture offering to complete the acquisition of Coleman. As Sunbeam's investment banker and as the sole underwriter for the $750 million debenture offering, Morgan Stanley received detailed and specific information concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and performance. Morgan Stanley received information that directly contradicted Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's assertions to CPH that Sunbeam had undergone a successful turnaround and that its financial performance had dramatically improved. By no later than March 18, 1998, Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were only 50% of January and February 1997 sales, and Morgan Stanley also knew that the shortfall was caused by Sunbeam's practice of accelerating sales which otherwise would have occurred in 1998 in order to boost Sunbeam's income in 1997. Although Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam previously had advised CPH that Sunbeam's sales were running ahead of analysts' expectations for the first quarter, Morgan Stanley decided not to correct those material misrepresentations. Instead, in March 1998, Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam in concealing the problems with Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") directly or indirectly owned 44,067,520 shares — or approximately 82% — of Coleman prior to the transactions at issue. On March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired CPH's interest in Coleman. Sunbeam paid for the Coleman shares with 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam common stock and other consideration.

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") is a highly sophisticated investment banking firm that provides a wide range of financial and securities services. Among other things, Morgan Stanley provides advice on mergers and acquisitions and raises capital in the equity and debt markets. Morgan Stanley served as Sunbeam's investment banker and as the underwriter of securities issued by Sunbeam in connection with the events at issue herein.

Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam") was a publicly-traded company headquartered in Delray Beach, Florida. Sunbeam designed and manufactured small household appliances and outdoor consumer products, which it marketed under the Sunbeam and Oster brand names. Sunbeam filed a bankruptcy petition under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in February 2001.

Albert Dunlap ("Dunlap") was the Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam from July 1996 until June 1998 when he was terminated by Sunbeam's Board of Directors.

Russell Kersh ("Kersh") was the Executive Vice President of Sunbeam from July 1996 until June 1998 when he was terminated by Sunbeam's Board of Directors.

Arthur Andersen LLP ("Andersen") provided outside accounting services to Sunbeam through its West Palm Beach, Florida office. Andersen auditors provided information concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and earnings to Morgan Stanley.

Sunbeam designed and manufactured outdoor and household consumer products, which it marketed under the Sunbeam and Oster brand names. Sunbeam's products included small kitchen appliances, humidifiers, electric blankets, and grills. Many of the country's leading retail stores, including Wal-Mart, Target, and Home Depot, were among Sunbeam's major customers.

Despite Sunbeam's well-known brands and strong customer base, its financial performance was disappointing. In 1994, Sunbeam earned $1.30 per share. In 1995, Sunbeam's earnings declined to $0.61 per share. In 1996, Sunbeam's earnings continued to suffer. On March 22, 1996, Sunbeam issued an early warning that its first quarter earnings would be well under analysts' expectations and down from first quarter 1995. Shortly after issuing the March 22 earnings warning, Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer and two of Sunbeam's directors announced their resignations. Less than a week later, Sunbeam announced that its first quarter 1996 earnings had plunged 42% from first quarter 1995 levels. Sunbeam also announced that its second quarter 1996 earnings would be lower than its second quarter 1995 earnings.

Sunbeam's disappointing earnings caused its stock price to plummet. During 1995, the price at which Sunbeam's stock traded fell 40%, from a high of $25-1/2. In 1996, Sunbeam's stock price continued to decline until it reached a low of $12-1/4 in July.

041512

On July 18, 1996, Sunbeam's board of directors hired Albert Dunlap as Sunbeam's new Chief Executive Officer. Based upon brief terms as Chief Executive Officer of other publicly traded companies, including Scott Paper Company ("Scott Paper"), Dunlap was viewed as a "turnaround specialist" — that is, someone who could take a poorly performing company and significantly increase its value by "turning around" its financial performance. Because Dunlap touted the benefits from firing large numbers of employees and closing large numbers of plants, Dunlap became widely known as "Chainsaw Al." Dunlap lived in Boca Raton, Florida, and one of his first tasks at Sunbeam was to consolidate the company's six headquarters into one located in Delray Beach, Florida.

Immediately after joining Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Kersh as Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer. Kersh had teamed with Dunlap for over 15 years, serving as a senior executive with Dunlap at other companies, including Scott Paper. Dunlap also brought in several other hand-picked executives to make up his senior management team.

Dunlap and his senior management team entered into employment agreements with Sunbeam. Under those agreements, Dunlap and his senior management team stood to make tens of millions of dollars if they were able to boost Sunbeam's apparent value and then sell Sunbeam to another company at a premium.

In order to convince other companies that they should want to purchase Sunbeam, Dunlap needed to improve Sunbeam's reported financial performance quickly and dramatically. It was, of course, no small task to transform Sunbeam from a poorly performing company, with weak sales and declining profits, into a strong company with growing sales and soaring profits. In fact, as the world later learned, Dunlap did not achieve that change in Sunbeam's fortunes. Instead, Dunlap created the illusion of a dramatic turnaround at Sunbeam by engaging in what SEC officials subsequently described as a "case study" in financial fraud.

Dunlap had a three-step plan at Sunbeam. In the first step, Dunlap overstated Sunbeam's financial problems so that Sunbeam appeared to be in worse shape than it really was. After making Sunbeam look worse, Dunlap moved to step two, where he made Sunbeam look more valuable than it really was by inflating Sunbeam's sales and engaging in other earnings manipulations. In step three, Dunlap planned to sell Sunbeam to another company before it became apparent that the "improved" results were fictional. By doing so, Dunlap would make tens of millions of dollars and would be free to blame his successor for any subsequent problems.

Dunlap began implementing his strategy soon after his arrival at Sunbeam in 1996. Claiming to be engaged in a clean-up of Sunbeam's financial problems, Dunlap recorded artificially high reserves and booked expenses that should not have been recorded until later periods. Both of those actions made Sunbeam's financial condition appear worse than it really was, thus lowering the benchmark for measuring Sunbeam's performance in future years.

The overstated reserves also provided Dunlap a means by which he could inflate Sunbeam's future results during the second step of his plan. Dunlap later could "re-evaluate" and release millions of dollars from the overstated reserves to boost income in later periods. The income from released reserves contributed to the illusion of a rapid turnaround in Sunbeam's performance. Using inflated reserves to enhance income in future periods is a fraudulent practice and overstated reserves are commonly called "cookie jar" reserves.

After making Sunbeam look worse than it really was in 1996, Dunlap manipulated Sunbeam's sales and expenses in 1997 to create the false appearance of quarter after quarter improvement in financial performance. For example, Dunlap caused Sunbeam to inflate its sales by engaging in phony "bill and hold" sales. Under this practice, Sunbeam recognized revenues from "sales," even though customers did not actually pay for or even take delivery of the products, which continued to sit in Sunbeam's own warehouses. Although Sunbeam recorded the "bill and hold" sales as if they were current sales, they were, in reality, simply sales stolen from future quarters. In 1997, phony "bill and hold" sales added approximately $29 million in sales and $4.5 million in income.

Throughout 1997, Sunbeam also engaged in a sales practice known as "channel stuffing" — accelerating sales that otherwise would occur in a later period, sometimes by offering steep discounts or other extraordinary customer inducements. On the grand scale employed by Sunbeam, channel stuffing inevitably leads to major sales shortfalls in later periods when "stuffed" customers simply stop buying. Sunbeam's senior sales officer referred to Sunbeam's unsustainable practice of inflating performance through accelerated sales as the "doom loop."

Dunlap further "enhanced" Sunbeam's income in 1997 by causing Sunbeam to record a "profit" of $10 million from a sham sale of its warranty and spare parts business. Dunlap also made Sunbeam appear to be more successful than it really was by reaching into the "cookie jar," reversing inflated reserves, and recording $35 million as income. Sunbeam's 1997 profit margins also looked better than they really were because Dunlap already had recorded millions of dollars of 1997 expenses in 1996.

In October 1997, Dunlap announced that Sunbeam's "turnaround" was complete. Compared to the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam's third quarter 1997 performance was remarkable. In the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam had reported a loss of $18.1 million. In the third quarter of 1997, however, Sunbeam reported earnings of $34.5 million — an extraordinary turnaround from substantial losses to hefty profits. Sunbeam's combined results for the first three quarters showed dramatic improvement as well. Sunbeam reported that its profits for the first nine months were up tenfold over the same period the year before — from $6.5 million in 1996 to $67.7 million in 1997. Sunbeam's reversal of fortune caused a spectacular increase in the price of its stock. In July 1996, when Dunlap was hired, Sunbeam's shares traded at $12-1/4. By October 1997, Sunbeam's shares had risen to $49-13/16.

With steps one and two successfully completed, Dunlap was more than eager to complete the final step of his scheme: to sell Sunbeam to another company and collect tens of millions of dollars for himself before the outside world could learn the truth about Sunbeam's phony "turnaround." To accomplish that third and final step, Dunlap needed an investment banking firm

When Dunlap announced in early 1997 that he would begin interviewing investment bankers, Morgan Stanley immediately began pursuing the job. Although Morgan Stanley had no previous relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's senior executives, William Strong, had worked closely with Dunlap on other large transactions between 1986 and 1993, when Strong was employed by Salomon Brothers.

Morgan Stanley knew that it was competing with other investment bankers, including Mark Davis, for Dunlap's business. Davis was the head of the mergers and acquisitions department at Chase Securities and had worked previously with Strong at Salomon Brothers. Davis had a very strong relationship with Dunlap, and Davis had served as Dunlap's investment advisor on numerous transactions, including Dunlap's sale of Scott Paper. Shortly after arriving at Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Davis to handle the sale of Sunbeam's furniture business.

Morgan Stanley put together a team headed by its Vice Chairman, Bruce Fiedorek, and Strong. Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley's personnel traveled to Sunbeam's offices in Delray Beach, Florida to study Sunbeam and woo Dunlap. After months of uncompensated work, in September 1997, Morgan Stanley finally persuaded Dunlap to name Morgan Stanley as Sunbeam's exclusive investment banker. Dunlap instructed Morgan Stanley to find a buyer for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley knew that if it failed to deliver a major transaction, Morgan Stanley would not be compensated for the extensive work it had performed for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley also knew that Davis and Chase Securities were standing by — ready and willing to reclaim their position as Dunlap's investment banker of choice.

Throughout the fall of 1997, Morgan Stanley aggressively searched for a buyer for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley put together extensive and detailed materials to use in marketing Sunbeam to potential buyers. Morgan Stanley pitched the transaction to more than 10 companies — including Gillette, Colgate, Sara Lee, Rubbermaid, Whirlpool, and Black & Decker — that Morgan Stanley hoped might have an interest in acquiring Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley, however, was not able to find a buyer.

As 1998 approached, the pressure on Dunlap increased. Dunlap was aware that Sunbeam would be unable to sustain the appearance of a successful turnaround in 1998 because Sunbeam had stolen sales from 1998 to boost 1997's numbers and the "cookie jar" reserves had been depleted. Dunlap needed a way to conceal Sunbeam's phony turnaround until a buyer could be found. Morgan Stanley provided the solution to Dunlap's problem.

Morgan Stanley knew that its failure to find a buyer for Sunbeam could prove fatal to the relationship it had worked so hard to establish with Dunlap. As the pressure on Dunlap increased, the pressure on Morgan Stanley increased as well. Although Morgan Stanley was not able to find a buyer for Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley responded with a plan that would allow Dunlap to conceal his fraud. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam acquire other companies, using Sunbeam's stock, which was fraudulently inflated, as the "currency" that would be used to pay for the acquisitions.

Morgan Stanley's strategy was doubly deceptive. First, Morgan Stanley's acquisition strategy would allow Dunlap to consolidate Sunbeam's results with those of the newly-acquired companies. That would help Dunlap camouflage Sunbeam's results and make it difficult to detect any shortfall in Sunbeam's performance. Dunlap simply could label any problems that were detected as attributable to the poor performance of the acquired companies or as a temporary "blip" caused by the distraction of integrating the acquired companies with Sunbeam. Second, Morgan Stanley's strategy would allow Dunlap to take new massive restructuring charges (purportedly relating to the acquisitions) and thus create more "cookie jar" reserves that could be tapped to bolster the future earnings of the combined companies.

041518

Morgan Stanley identified Coleman as one of the key potential acquisition targets. CPH owned 82% of Coleman's stock. Morgan Stanley searched the ranks of its investment bankers to locate those with the best access to CPH. Drawing on relationships between some of Morgan Stanley's investment bankers and senior CPH officers, Morgan Stanley set about trying to persuade CPH to sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam — and, most importantly, to accept Sunbeam stock as consideration.

Morgan Stanley laid the groundwork for a meeting to take place in December 1997 in Palm Beach, Florida between Dunlap and Kersh and representatives of CPH. In advance of the Palm Beach meeting, Morgan Stanley provided materials to Sunbeam to prepare Sunbeam for the meeting. Morgan Stanley also met with Kersh and other Sunbeam personnel to prepare for the Palm Beach meeting. However, Dunlap nearly scuttled Morgan Stanley's carefully crafted plan at the outset. During the December 1997 Palm Beach meeting, when CPH rejected Dunlap's initial all-stock offer, Dunlap became so angry that he cursed and ranted at the CPH representatives and stormed out.

Dunlap's tantrum appeared to kill any chance that CPH would sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley, however, worked to revive the discussions. Drawing again on Morgan Stanley's relationships with CPH officers, Morgan Stanley was able to restart the discussions with CPH with the promise that Dunlap would be kept away from the negotiating table. Thereafter, Morgan Stanley, through Managing Directors Strong, James Stynes, and Robert Kitts, led the discussions with CPH on Sunbeam's behalf.

011519

Morgan Stanley knew that it had to persuade CPH not only to sell Coleman, but also to accept Sunbeam stock — ultimately, 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock — as a major part of the purchase price. During the course of negotiations, Morgan Stanley prepared and provided CPH with false financial and business information about Sunbeam designed to create the appearance that Sunbeam was prospering and that Sunbeam's stock had great value. For example, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with false 1996 and 1997 sales and revenue figures, as well as false projections that Sunbeam could not expect to achieve. Together, in face-to-face discussions, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam assured CPH that (a) Sunbeam would meet or exceed its first quarter 1998 earnings estimates; (b) analysts' 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct; and (c) Sunbeam's plan to earn $2.20 per share in 1998 was easily achievable and probably low. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam also falsely assured CPH that Sunbeam's "early buy" sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues. However, the "early buy" program was one of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs — and the devastating effects of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs already had begun to materialize at Sunbeam. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were down drastically, although those results were not disclosed to CPH or the public. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together specifically advised CPH that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "tracking fine" and running ahead of analysts' estimates.

041520

On February 27, 1998, Sunbeam's Board of Directors met at Morgan Stanley's offices to consider the purchase of Coleman, as negotiated by Morgan Stanley.

At the February 27, 1998 meeting, Morgan Stanley made an extensive presentation to Sunbeam's Board concerning the proposed transaction. Numerous Morgan Stanley representatives, including Managing Directors Strong, Kitts, Stynes, Ruth Porat, and Vikram Pandit, attended the meeting.

Morgan Stanley presented Sunbeam's board with Morgan Stanley's opinion on the value of Coleman. Using a discounted cash flow analysis, which Morgan Stanley represented was the best gauge of stand-alone economic value and the best method of capturing the unique value of Coleman, Morgan Stanley valued CPH's Coleman stock at a range of $31.06 to $53.24 per Coleman share. CPH's 44,067,520 Coleman shares were worth, therefore, between $1.369 billion and $2.346 billion.

Following Morgan Stanley's presentation, Sunbeam's Board of Directors voted to acquire Coleman on the very favorable terms that Morgan Stanley had negotiated.

Morgan Stanley spent the following weekend developing Sunbeam's public relations strategy to announce the Coleman transaction. Morgan Stanley scripted the points for Dunlap to make in a conference call with analysts. Morgan Stanley also crafted a list of "key media messages" for Dunlap to use in his communications with the press. On Sunday, March 1, 1998, Morgan Stanley spoke with a reporter for the Wall Street Journal to inform him that Sunbeam would announce its acquisition of Coleman the following morning.

Sunbeam announced its acquisition of Coleman on Monday, March 2, 1998, prior to the opening of the financial markets. Consistent with Morgan Stanley's valuation, investors viewed Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman — and the price that Sunbeam had paid — very favorably. The day before the acquisition was announced, Sunbeam's stock closed at $41-3/4. In the days following Sunbeam's announcement of the transaction, Sunbeam's stock rose approximately 25%, to a high of $52.

Dunlap knew that Sunbeam needed to raise funds to pay the cash portion of the acquisition consideration. Dunlap also knew that Sunbeam needed cash to purchase two other smaller companies in addition to Coleman. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam raise funds through a $500 million offering of convertible subordinated debentures. To assure the offering's success, Morgan Stanley lent its name to the offering. Indeed, Morgan Stanley agreed to serve as the sole underwriter for the offering.

The money raised from the sale of the debentures was used by Sunbeam to complete the acquisition of Coleman.

Unbeknownst to CPH or the public, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a small fraction of the financial community's expectations for the quarter. If Dunlap could consolidate Sunbeam's sales with Coleman's sales, Dunlap knew that he could obscure Sunbeam's actual first quarter sales. As a result, Dunlap was especially anxious to complete the acquisition of Coleman before Sunbeam announced its first quarter 1998 sales. Indeed, the success of the scheme depended upon Sunbeam's ability to complete the Coleman acquisition before Sunbeam's first quarter results were announced. To satisfy Dunlap's objectives, Morgan Stanley moved up the launch date of the offering.

The debentures were marketed to investors at a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls arranged by Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley prepared and distributed a memorandum for its sales force to use in marketing the debentures to investors. Morgan Stanley also developed the script for Dunlap and Kersh to deliver during the road show. In those materials, Morgan Stanley misrepresented Sunbeam's financial performance and emphasized Dunlap's purported "turnaround" accomplishments.

Morgan Stanley launched the debenture offering with a research analyst presentation to the Morgan Stanley sales force. As part of Morgan Stanley's growing relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's top-rated research analysts planned to initiate equity coverage of Sunbeam. That Morgan Stanley analyst had modeled values for Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman that were higher than even Sunbeam's management had predicted.

Although Morgan Stanley initially planned to sell $500 million worth of debentures, Morgan Stanley's efforts were so successful that the size of the offering was increased to $750 million on March 19, 1998 — the day of the last road show. The debentures were sold to investors nationwide, including investors based in Florida.

As Sunbeam's investment banker and the sole underwriter for the debenture offering, Morgan Stanley had a duty to investigate Sunbeam's finances and business operations.

Morgan Stanley, which had been working hand-in-hand with Sunbeam for almost a year and had traveled to Sunbeam's Florida offices, repeatedly asserted that it had satisfied that duty.

Strong, who was one of the senior Morgan Stanley investment bankers involved, has admitted in sworn testimony that he may have had more than 100 telephone conversations with Dunlap and Kersh (whose offices were in Sunbeam's Delray Beach headquarters) and that Strong was "sure" that he would have been apprised of Sunbeam's financial performance during the first two months of 1998.

With the $750 million debenture offering and the Coleman transaction set to close at the end of March 1998, Sunbeam's Florida-based outside auditors were shocked that Morgan Stanley had not asked them about Sunbeam's financial performance for first quarter 1998. Sunbeam's auditors were alarmed because Sunbeam's first quarter results were a disaster, but Dunlap, Kersh, and Morgan Stanley were telling CPH and the investing public, that Sunbeam's turnaround was a success, that Sunbeam's sales for the first quarter of 1998 were ahead of the expectations of outside financial analysts, and that Sunbeam was poised for record sales.

On March 17, Sunbeam's auditors forced the issue. From their Florida offices, Sunbeam's auditors sent Morgan Stanley a letter reporting that Sunbeam's net sales through January 1998 were down 60% — $28 million in January 1998, as compared to $73 million in January 1997. The March 17 letter explained that the decline was "primarily due to the . . . new early buy program for grills which accelerated grill sales into the fourth quarter of fiscal 1997."

The next day, Morgan Stanley was faxed a schedule from Sunbeam's Florida office that showed that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 net sales totaled $72 million, an amount that was 50% lower than Sunbeam's January and February 1997 net sales of $143.5 million.

Based on information that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley had disseminated, Wall Street analysts were anticipating that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 net sales would be in the range of $285 million to $295 million. Sales in that range would have been approximately 15% higher than first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales, however, totaled barely 25% of $285 million. As Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the sales drop-off was caused by Sunbeam's sales acceleration program. The information put into Morgan Stanley's hands on March 17 and March 18 showed that Morgan Stanley's and Sunbeam's assertions to CPH and other investors were false. Contrary to what Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented, Sunbeam had not undergone a successful turnaround, Sunbeam's financial performance had not dramatically improved, and Sunbeam's performance in 1998 was not better than Wall Street analysts' expectations. It was imperative, therefore, that the truth be kept from CPH until the Coleman transaction closed at the end of March 1998.

Morgan Stanley did not disclose Sunbeam's disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not insist that Sunbeam disclose its disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not correct any of the false and misleading statements it and Sunbeam had made to CPH about Sunbeam's business or performance, and Morgan Stanley did not suspend any of the critical transactions that were scheduled to close in the next two weeks. Instead, with Morgan Stanley's knowledge and assistance, Sunbeam prepared and issued a false press release on March 19, 1998 that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true condition.

The March 19, 1998 press release stated: "Sunbeam Corporation . . . said today that it is possible that its net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates for $285 million to $295 million, but net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. . . . The shortfall from analysts' estimates, if any, would be due to changes in inventory management and order patterns at certain of the Company's major retail customers. The Company further stated that based on the strength of its new product offerings and powerful brand names, it remains highly confident about the overall sales outlook for its products for the entire year."

As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the March 19, 1998 press release was false, misleading, and failed to disclose material information. The March 19, 1998 press release failed to disclose Sunbeam's actual January and February 1998 sales or the true reasons for the poor results. Instead, the press release held out the false possibility that Sunbeam still could achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and suggested that, if any shortfall occurred, that shortfall would be due to the fact that certain retailers had decided to defer first quarter purchases to the second quarter.

The press release also assured that Sunbeam at least would exceed first quarter 1997 net sales of $253.4 million.

Based on information that Morgan Stanley had in its hands on March 18, 1998, it was obvious that Sunbeam would not achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales would be below its first quarter 1997 numbers. To simply meet 1997 first quarter sales, Sunbeam needed sales of $123.3 million over the 12 remaining days of the quarter — an average of $10.28 million per day. Sales of $10.28 million per day would be 306% more than the average per day sales in March 1997, and 281% more than the average per day sales for the first 17 days of March 1998. Furthermore, Morgan Stanley knew that the shortfall from analysts' estimates was not caused by retailers' deciding to defer purchases from the first quarter of 1998 to the second quarter, as the press release indicated. Rather, as Sunbeam's outside auditors had advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the collapse in first quarter sales was caused by Sunbeam's acceleration of 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997.

After Sunbeam's false press release was issued, Morgan Stanley stood arm-in-arm with Sunbeam while Dunlap and Kersh told CPH, analysts, and investors that the March 19, 1998 release was a purely cautionary statement because some first quarter 1998 sales might simply "spillover" into the second quarter and that Sunbeam still believed that it actually would meet analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million in first quarter 1998 sales.

Morgan Stanley knew that a full and truthful disclosure of Sunbeam's first quarter sales would doom the debenture offering, which was scheduled to close on March 25, 1998,

As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the written contract between CPH and Sunbeam gave CPH the express legal right to refuse to close the sale if there was a material adverse change in Sunbeam's "business, results of operation or financial condition."

Furthermore, if the transactions did not close, Morgan Stanley would not be paid its $10.28 million fee for the Coleman acquisition or its $22.5 million fee for underwriting the subordinated debenture offering. Morgan Stanley also knew that Sunbeam would promptly replace Morgan Stanley with another investment banking firm – such as the Chase Securities team led by Mark Davis.

041527

Sunbeam's outside auditors already had made it perfectly clear to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a disaster,

One of Sunbeam's senior outside auditors, Lawrence Bornstein, has testified under oath that on March 19, 1998, he told Morgan Stanley's John Tyree that the statement in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release — that Sunbeam would at least exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million — was not credible: "Just do the math . . . they've done a million dollars in sales the first 70 days of the year and now they need to do $10 million worth of sales for the next . . . I think it was 11 days . . . I mean, something ridiculous." Bornstein also told Tyree: "I've been to every shipping dock domestically, I've been to Hattiesburg, I've been to Neosho, I've been to Mexico City, and I don't think these guys can physically ship this much stuff."

Morgan Stanley knew that the March 19 press release was false and misleading. Despite that knowledge and Bornstein's explicit statements, Morgan Stanley continued with its preparations to close the debenture offering on March 25, 1998 and the Coleman acquisition on March 30, 1998.

As part of those preparations, on March 24, 1998, Morgan Stanley's Tyree spoke by telephone with Sunbeam's Kersh, who was located in Sunbeam's Delray Beach offices, to obtain an updated report concerning Sunbeam's first quarter performance. By the time of that March 24, 1998 call, Sunbeam had fallen even further behind first quarter 1997 sales. As of March 18, 1998, Sunbeam needed to achieve average sales of $10.28 million per day, over 12 days, to reach first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's sales between March 18 and March 24, 1998 had averaged only $6.81 million per day — well short of the $10.28 million per day that Sunbeam needed to achieve. Sunbeam's March 18 through March 24, 1998 sales were further proof that Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release was false and that Sunbeam would not achieve first quarter 1998 sales in excess of first quarter 1997 sales.

Morgan Stanley also knew no later than March 25, 1998, if not much earlier, that Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were going to miss Wall Street analysts' earnings expectations, which were in the range of $0.28 to $0.31 per share (excluding one-time charges). Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley on March 25 that Sunbeam had suffered a $41.19 million loss during the first two months of 1998, including a one-time charge of $30.2 million. Even excluding that one-time charge, Sunbeam's loss for the first two months was $0.13 per share. To achieve first quarter 1998 operating earnings of $0.28 per share, which were at the low end of analyst expectations, Sunbeam needed to realize a profit of $35.5 million during March 1998 alone. A net profit of $35.5 million in March was 500% more than Sunbeam's net profit for the entire first quarter of 1997. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings fell far short of Wall Street's expectations. Sunbeam's first quarter earnings were material,

041529

Having directly participated in misleading CPH Morgan Stanley had a duty to disclose the true facts before the closing of the debenture offering and the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley also could have required Sunbeam to postpone the closings of those transactions until the necessary disclosures were made. Morgan Stanley did neither. Instead, Morgan Stanley marched forward and closed the $750 million debenture offering on March 25, 1998, which was needed to close the Coleman transaction, and assisted Sunbeam in closing the acquisition of Coleman on March 30, 1998.

Morgan Stanley received $22.5 million for the subordinated debenture offering and $10.28 million for the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley would have received nothing if the transactions had failed to close.

On April 3, 1998 — just four days after the Coleman transaction closed — Sunbeam announced that sales for the first quarter of 1998 would be approximately 5% below the $253.4 million in sales that Sunbeam reported in the first quarter of 1997. In other words, Sunbeam was expecting sales in the range of $240 million. That sales shortfall was shocking news, particularly in view of assurances provided by Sunbeam both in and after its March 19, 1998 press release that $285 million to $295 million of sales was still a real possibility. The April 3, 1998 press release also disclosed that Sunbeam expected to show a loss for the quarter, although the release did not disclose the magnitude of the loss or how much of the loss was attributable to operating earnings as opposed to one-time charges. Sunbeam's news stunned . . . the market. On April 3rd, Sunbeam's stock price dropped 25% — from $45-9/16 to $34-3/8.

... Sunbeam's actual first quarter 1998 performance was even worse than Sunbeam disclosed on April 3, 1998. The April 3, 1998 release indicated that Sunbeam's first quarter sales were in the range of $240 million. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter sales were $224.5

million. Sunbeam obscured the true shortfall by extending its quarter from March 29 to March 31, 1998 — thereby adding two more days of Sunbeam sales. Sunbeam also failed to disclose that it had included two days of Coleman sales after the Coleman transaction closed on March 30. Further, Sunbeam inflated first quarter 1998 sales with $29 million of new phony “bill and hold” sales.

75. Just as Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 sales had been a disaster, so, too, were Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 earnings. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented to CPH that Sunbeam would achieve or exceed analyst first quarter 1998 earnings estimates. At the time of that representation, the consensus among analysts was that Sunbeam would enjoy first quarter 1998 earnings of $0.33 per share. However, on May 9, 1998, Sunbeam disclosed that it would record a first quarter loss of $0.09 per share (excluding one-time charges) — more than $0.40 per share lower than CPH had been told to expect.

Within weeks, Dunlap’s fraudulent scheme began to unravel. In June 1998, after a number of news articles critical of Sunbeam’s practices, Sunbeam’s Board of Directors launched an internal investigation. That investigation led quickly to the firing of Dunlap and Kersh, and, subsequently, to a restatement of Sunbeam’s financial statements for 1996, 1997, and the first quarter of 1998.

76. As detailed above, Morgan Stanley participated in a scheme to mislead CPH and others and cover up the massive fraud at Sunbeam until Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam could close the purchase of Coleman. Morgan Stanley provided CPH with false information concerning Sunbeam’s 1996 and 1997 financial performance, its business operations, and the value of Sunbeam’s stock. Morgan Stanley also actively assisted Sunbeam in concealing Sunbeam’s disastrous first quarter 1998 sales and earnings and the true reasons for Sunbeam's poor performance.

Morgan Stanley knew that its statements to CPH were materially false and misleading and omitted the true facts.

Morgan Stanley intended that CPH rely on Morgan Stanley's representations concerning Sunbeam.

As detailed above, Dunlap engaged in a fraudulent scheme to inflate the price of Sunbeam's stock by improperly manipulating Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 performance, by falsely asserting that Sunbeam had successfully "turned around," and by concealing the collapse of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and earnings and the reasons for Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance.

86 As detailed above, Morgan Stanley knew of Dunlap's fraudulent scheme and helped to conceal it until after Sunbeam could close the purchase of Coleman.

041532

As detailed above, Morgan Stanley provided substantial assistance to Dunlap and Sunbeam, including: concealing Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales collapse; assisting with the false March 19, 1998 press release; arranging road shows and meetings with prospective debenture purchasers at which Morgan Stanley, Dunlap, and others made false statements concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; preparing and disseminating the preliminary and final offering memoranda for the subordinated debenture offering, both of which contained false information concerning Sunbeam's financial condition and business operations; providing CPH with false financial and business information concerning Sunbeam; scripting Dunlap's false public statements concerning Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman;

and underwriting the $750 million convertible debenture offering, proceeds from which were used to fund Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman.

- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity relating to the amount, nature, or payment of expert fees;
- d. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to expert depositions;
- e. the purpose for which any such expert deposition was used in this Action;
- f. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to the preparation of a court-ordered report; or
- g. the purpose for which any such court-ordered report was used in this Action.

11. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of hearing and trial transcripts, excluding copies of such transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

12. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of deposition transcripts and videotapes, excluding copies of such transcripts and videotapes, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

13. All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of discovery imaging and coding or document production and management, excluding copies of the documents that were imaged, coded, produced, or managed, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Compulit, relating to the amount, nature, or payment of discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs;

- d. whether any of the documents as to which such costs were incurred were actually filed with the court in the Action;
- e. whether, for each document as to which such costs were incurred, such document was actually produced to CPH;
- f. whether any of the claimed discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs constituted the actual cost of copies obtained in discovery;
- g. whether there were discounts, based on volume or otherwise, available to or used by Morgan Stanley or its lawyers or law firms relating to discovery imaging or coding or document production and management (including but not limited to copying of documents); or
- h. whether any effort was made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to determine whether lower prices for the discovery- or document-related tasks for which costs are claimed were available from vendors other than those who were used to carry out the tasks.

14. All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, relating to costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to electronic discovery, including but not limited to costs relating to any search for electronically stored documents, any review or production of such documents, or any outside experts or consultants involved in any tasks relating to electronic discovery.

15. All documents relating to any effort to obtain, the results of any effort to obtain, or the receipt of any economic benefit, consideration, or other advantage of any kind in exchange for agreeing to or having agreed to do business with any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

16. All documents relating to any gift received by Morgan Stanley from any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

17. All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, that may tend to support or refute the assertion in the Costs Motions and supporting affidavits that the claimed costs were reasonable and necessary to the defense of the Action.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE 15TH
JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN AND FOR
PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

CASE NO.: CA 03-5045 (AJ)

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S RESPONSE TO COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S REQUESTS FOR
PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.350, hereby responds to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH's") Requests For Production of Documents as follows:

By making these responses, Morgan Stanley does not concede that the information sought or provided is relevant to the subject matter of this or any action or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley's responses are made intending to preserve and preserving:

- (a) The right to object, on any grounds, to the use of the responses in any subsequent proceedings in this or any action;
- (b) The right to object to introduction into evidence of these responses or documents provided in response to the Requests; and
- (c) The right to object, on any grounds at any time, to other requests or discovery demands involving documents produced in response to the Requests.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests including, without limitation, the instructions and definitions therein, to the extent they purport to impose on Morgan Stanley obligations beyond those imposed by the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, and any other applicable law or rule.
2. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek documents and/or information that are not within Morgan Stanley's possession, custody or control; that are already available to CPH; that are available from public, court, or agency records, or otherwise in the public domain and accessible to all parties.
3. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek identification and disclosure of information that is irrelevant, immaterial, or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.
4. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are oppressive, overbroad, unreasonably cumulative, duplicative, and unduly burdensome, particularly to the extent that they seek "all" documents relating to a particular subject matter.
5. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek the disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product doctrine, or any other privilege or protection from disclosure. Morgan Stanley hereby claims such privileges and protections to the extent implicated by each Request and excludes privileged and protected information from its responses to the Requests. Inadvertent production of any such information shall not constitute a waiver of any privilege or protection from disclosure as to that information or any related information. As set forth in this Response, Morgan Stanley objects to the overbroad nature of these requests especially since the only issue before the Court is the amount of taxable costs to be awarded to Morgan Stanley. Pursuant to the Fourth District's decision in Gosman v. Luzinski, 937 So. 2d 293 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), Morgan Stanley hereby requests an extension of thirty (30) days to prepare its privilege log from the date on which the Court, if necessary, resolves Morgan Stanley's other objections to the Requests. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged communications between Morgan Stanley's attorneys (including both its in-house counsel and outside counsel) and Morgan Stanley employees that may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs. In fact, the parties previously agreed, and the Court ordered, that the parties were "not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involved privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transaction at issue in this case." 9/4/2003 Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time to Prepare Privilege Log. Morgan Stanley also objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged materials such as work product created by in-house counsel or outside counsel while preparing the cost motions. Such materials may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs, but are clearly protected by the work product doctrine. To require a privilege log of these categories of materials would be unduly burdensome and harassing, especially in the context of the narrow issue before the Court, and would necessarily reveal the work product of counsel for Morgan Stanley.

6. Morgan Stanley objects to the definitions of the terms "Morgan Stanley," "You," and "Your" contained in the Requests to the extent they purport to define an entity other than Morgan Stanley and/or purport to impose obligations on Morgan Stanley beyond providing information that is in the possession, custody, or control of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley further objects to the definitions of these terms to the extent they purport to refer to actions taken by "any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf" that were not taken at the direction of Morgan Stanley.

7. The responses to the Requests shall not be construed in any way as an admission that any definition provided by CPH is either factually correct or legally binding upon Morgan Stanley, or as a waiver of any of Morgan Stanley's objections.

8. Morgan Stanley's Specific Responses and Objections to the individual Requests shall be deemed to incorporate, and shall not be deemed a waiver of, these General Objections.

9. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they are compound, phrased disjunctively or conjunctively, and include subparts in such a manner that they are unduly burdensome, confusing, or cannot be reasonably answered.

10. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they seek information that is not known or reasonably available to Morgan Stanley.

11. Morgan Stanley's objection to a Request or agreement to produce responsive documents in response to a Request is not and should not be construed as an admission that any particular information or category of information exists.

12. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek a legal theory or conclusion or seek documents relating to Morgan Stanley's entitlement to, as opposed to the reasonableness of, its trial costs. See J. Robin L. Rosenberg's 6/11/08 Order granting Morgan Stanley's Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs as to the issue of entitlement and reserving ruling on the issue of reasonableness.

13. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are harassing in the context of the narrow issue before the Court and seek information that is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence relevant to the cost motions presently pending before the Court. Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to support the amount of costs that Morgan Stanley is entitled to recover in this action as the prevailing party. CPH's attempt in the Requests to obtain every piece of paper that "relates" to the claimed costs is overbroad and harassing.

14. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent that they do not contain any time period limitation. With respect to requests seeking communications concerning the determination of the premiums and costs associated with the Main Appeal Bond, the Cost Appeal Bond and the Escrow Account, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between January 1, 2005 and June 30, 2005. With respect to trial costs, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between May 8, 2003 and March 31, 2006.

RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1

All documents that were a source of information used in preparing the Costs Motions.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it is overbroad. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that were used to substantiate the individual line item costs contained in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

All documents relating to payment of or any reimbursement for payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motion, including but not limited to invoices, canceled checks, wire confirmations, bank statements, receipts, ledger entries, and accounting records.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices, checks or check stubs, and wire transfer confirmations sufficient to show payments made by Morgan Stanley or its counsel for costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions. Coleman's attempt to obtain categories of documents like "ledger entries" and "accounting records" is not only vague, ambiguous, and overbroad, but also goes well beyond a reasonable calculation of what is necessary to contest the claimed costs. To the extent that this request seeks further categories of documents, it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of premiums, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of premiums charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- b. the amount of premiums paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund in premiums in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker relating to the cost or amount of premiums quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker from any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity of the cost or amount of premiums associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment; or

- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the bond premiums claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices and wire transfer information sufficient to show the cost of the bond premiums, the payment of the bond premiums, and the refund of certain bond premiums. However, Morgan Stanley objects to producing "all" documents "relating" to the bond premiums because it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley with overbroad requests that will force Morgan Stanley to incur additional costs. Further, Morgan Stanley has undertaken a reasonable investigation regarding non-privileged documents sufficient to show its efforts to obtain a supersedeas bond in this matter and will produce the documents it has located after a reasonable search.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of broker commissions, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of broker commissions charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;

- b. the amount of broker commissions paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund of broker commissions in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of broker commissions quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company or agency or any other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any insurance company or agency or any other entity of the cost or amount of broker commissions associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate; or
- h. all communications and all documents referencing communications relating to discounts, rebates, refunds, trade-offs, barbers, or other exchange of consideration of any kind concerning commissions, bond premiums, or any other payment sent or received in relation to the Costs Judgment, the Main Judgment, the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Escrow Account, or any other bond, escrow account, or other security for the payment of the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan

Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the broker commissions claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and EG Bowman discussing or referring to the supersedeas bonds filed in this action. Coleman's attempt to obtain a broader range of documents is simply a fishing expedition designed to harass Morgan Stanley and add to the costs of this limited cost proceeding.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Escrow Account;
- b. the amount paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Escrow Account;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Escrow Account;
- e. any amount held in the Escrow Account;
- f. any request or demand by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley, the Bank of New York, or any other person or entity for the creation of an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- g. any discussion or analysis of such a request or demand;

- h. any communication concerning and any description or discussion of how the costs associated with the Escrow Account were calculated or derived;
- i. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by any financial institution or other entity in connection with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeals Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- j. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any financial institution or other entity of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment; or
- k. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the escrow account costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and the Bank of New York relating to the costs of the Escrow Account. Morgan Stanley will also produce documents sufficient to show how the Bank of New York was selected as an escrow agent. However, Coleman's attempt to obtain every piece of paper relating to the Escrow Account is simply overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this limited cost proceeding. The only relevant information about the Escrow Account in this limited cost proceeding is the amount of the fees paid to the Bank of New York so they could manage the Escrow Account required to obtain the supersedeas bond.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

All documents relating to any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and E.G. Bowman Co., Inc., The Bank of New York, Safeco Insurance Co., or AIG, relating to:

- a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
- c. the Main Appeal Bond;
- d. the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce documents constituting communications between the entities referred to in this request that discuss or refer to the determination of the amount of the bond premiums and escrow account fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the affidavits supporting its Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

All documents relating to the release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested a release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

All documents relating to any consideration or analysis by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of forms or sources of security for the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment other than the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of mediation, including but not limited to:

- a. the amount and nature of mediation costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount and nature of mediation costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of mediation costs that Coleman itself claimed when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of mediation costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of expert fees, excluding copies of expert reports and expert deposition transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of expert fees charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of expert fees paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity relating to the amount, nature, or payment of expert fees;
- d. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to expert depositions;
- e. the purpose for which any such expert deposition was used in this Action;
- f. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to the preparation of a court-ordered report; or
- g. the purpose for which any such court-ordered report was used in this Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of the expert costs incurred by Morgan Stanley. After years of litigation, Coleman is well aware of the purpose to which the expert reports and testimony were used by Morgan Stanley. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the amount of expert fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the expert witness invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of hearing and trial transcripts, excluding copies of such transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for all the hearings in this case as well as the trial. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of trial transcripts and hearing transcripts when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of hearing and trial transcript costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the hearing and trial transcript invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of deposition transcripts and videotapes, excluding copies of such transcripts and videotapes, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for the depositions reflected in the materials supporting Morgan Stanley's Cost Motions. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of depositions when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of deposition transcript and videotape costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the deposition invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of discovery imaging and coding or document production and management, excluding copies of the documents that were imaged, coded, produced, or managed, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Compulit, relating to the amount, nature, or payment of discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs;
- d. whether any of the documents as to which such costs were incurred were actually filed with the court in this Action;
- e. whether, for each document as to which such costs were incurred, such document was actually produced to CPH;
- f. whether any of the claimed discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs constituted the action cost of copies obtained in discovery;
- g. whether there were discounts, based on volume or otherwise, available to or used by Morgan Stanley or its lawyers or law firms relating to discovery imaging or coding or document production and management (including but not limited to copying of documents); or
- h. whether any effort was made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to determine whether lower prices for the discovery- or document-related tasks for which costs are claimed were available from vendors other than those who were used to carry out the tasks.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH is aware of what documents it produced and the copying, imaging and coding arrangement with Compulit. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence since Morgan Stanley's claim only seeks to recoup those costs associated with discovery imaging and coding.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of discovery imaging and coding costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the invoices paid by Morgan Stanley for such costs.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, relating to costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to electronic discovery, including but not limited to costs relating to any search for electronically stored documents, any review or production of such documents, or any outside experts or consultants involved in any tasks relating to electronic discovery.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence because Morgan Stanley is not claiming electronic discovery costs in the Cost Motions. To the extent that this Request targets the Compulit costs claimed by Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley objects to it as duplicative of Request 13.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

All documents relating to any effort to obtain, the results of any effort to obtain, or the receipt of any economic benefit, consideration, or other advantage of any kind in exchange for agreeing to or having agreed to do business with any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

All documents relating to any gift received by Morgan Stanley from any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, that may tend to support or refute the assertion in the Costs Motions and supporting affidavits that the claimed costs were reasonable and necessary to the defense of the Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to the extent that this Request seeks a legal theory or conclusion and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. Lastly, Morgan Stanley objects to the term "refute" as vague and ambiguous because it can have very different meanings to CPH and Morgan Stanley in this context.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that Morgan Stanley believes are sufficient to support the costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY,
FLORIDA

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

FILED
05 MAR 10 AM 11:29
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT CIVIL 9
PALM BEACH COUNTY, FL

ORDER FOLLOWING IN CAMERA INSPECTION (STRONG)

THIS CAUSE came before the Court, in Chambers, on MS & Co.'s filings pursuant to the Court's February 23, 2005 Order for In Camera Inspection and on Plaintiff's Motion for Order Declaring Attorney-Client Privilege Waived for Certain Documents Relating to William Strong, and following hearing on March 7, 2005.

William H. Strong played an important role for MS & Co. in the transaction under review here. In 1992 he was employed by Soloman Brothers International Limited ("SBIL"). He left SBIL and moved to MS & Co. in 1993. By 1995 there were potential legal proceedings in Italy against both Mr. Strong and SBIL relating to a proposed life insurance joint venture between Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi and Societa Assicurazioni Industriali Sp A. CPH seeks access to documents withheld by MS & Co. as privileged related to those proceedings, documents the Court has previously found should have been disclosed under its March, 2004 order requiring MS & Co. to produce documents containing references to Strong's, as well as other MS & Co. employees', truthfulness, veracity, and moral turpitude. MS & Co. contends that it received or prepared the documents in its possession as a result of its participation in a common defense with SBIL. CPH refutes that contention.

036452

Communications between MS & Co. and its counsel are subject to an attorney-client

1554

privilege, unless waived by publication to third parties or dissemination beyond those in the corporate structure with a need to know. See Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co. v. Deasan, 632 So. 2d 1377 (Fla. 1994). Further, communications between counsel for SBIL or Strong and MS & Co. may be protected by a work-product privilege if part of a common defense or interest.

The relationships between SBIL, Strong, and MS & Co. are reflected in three letters. A review of those letters reveals that most information was shared with MS & Co. for MS & Co.'s business, not legal, purposes.

On April 20, 1995, Royce Miller, for SBIL, wrote Monroe Sonnenborn, for MS & Co., confirming that Solomon would indemnify Strong for his defense, within certain parameters. The letter specifically noted that "(i)f you believe that Morgan Stanley requires separate legal representation on this matter, we believe that it would be appropriate for Morgan Stanley to pay the expenses of such representation." Thus, SBIL knew that MS & Co. and Strong's interests were distinct. The letter closed, (f)inally, we believe that it is likely that [Mr. Strong's] and Morgan Stanley will have access to confidential information relating to Solomon Brothers' consideration of the proposed ENI/SAI joint venture and the defense strategies of other potential defendants and therefore believe that it would be appropriate to put a confidential agreement in place.

Thus, MS & Co. and SBIL agreed to confidentiality. The letter did not attempt to predicate the duty of confidentiality on a common defense theory; indeed, nowhere in the letter does it imply that SBIL believed it shared a common litigation interest with MS & Co.

On May 11, 1995, Monroe Sonneborn, for MS & Co., wrote SBIL. That letter acknowledges a common legal interest between Strong and SBIL; it does not reference any common legal interest between MS & Co. and either Strong or SBIL. The letter, which was counter-signed by Strong, includes MS & Co.'s agreement to hold information it receives confidential. MS & Co.'s business, not legal, purpose in receiving confidential information is established by the letter's terms: MS & Co. was permitted to use the confidential information "to brief senior management concerning the Milan Proceedings;" Soloman agreed it would not make any disclosures for the purpose of harming Strong or MS & Co.'s reputation; and "Strong and Morgan Stanley may also discuss confidential information with Morgan Stanley public relations personnel, who shall not distribute, refer to or comment on such confidential information without the consent of both our legal departments."

Also on May 11, 1995, John P. Cooney, Jr., of Davis, Polk and Wardwell, as "Counsel for William H. Strong", wrote David W. Mayhew of Clifford Chance representing SBIL memorializing their agreement to exchange "confidential attorney client privileged and work product materials" and hold it in confidence "for the limited and restricted purpose of assisting Mr. Strong and SBIL in preparing for possible litigation." The letter agreement further required "Mr. Strong and SBIL . . . to return all documents, notes, memoranda or other records of this information . . ." Though Mr. Cooney by affidavit avers he was representing both Strong and MS & Co. in the matter, his legal bills were paid by SBIL. MS & Co. knew, however, by virtue of the April 20, 1995 Miller letter that SBIL expected MS & Co. to pay its own legal bills. Further, his May 11, 1995 letter to Mayhew confirms his belief that Strong, not MS & Co., was his client for purposes of a joint defense agreement with SBIL.

These letters reflect the obvious: MS & Co. had no common legal interest with Strong or SBIL in the defense of the Italian proceedings. Indeed, the proceedings could have no legal effect on MS & Co. until they were concluded. It did, however, have a business interest. MS & Co. did have a legal interest in monitoring and understanding the Italian proceedings, so that it could determine the timing and contents of regulatory filings. Obviously, though, that was not an interest shared by SBIL. Consequently, the Court has attempted, to the extent possible, to isolate work-product and attorney-client privileged communications created or made to advise MS & Co. of the status and timing of the Italian proceedings, provided that information was not published outside the group of attorneys representing MS & Co. for this limited purpose.

Based on the foregoing, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that MS & Co.'s objections are sustained, in part, and overruled, in part. The Court concludes that those items attached as Exhibit 1 are not privileged. The sealed items reviewed shall not be unsealed or released from the Clerk's custody absent further Order of this or an appellate court.

DONE AND ORDERED in West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida this 10th day of March, 2005.

ORDER FINDING THAT PLAINTIFF HAS NOT RAISED
A COLORABLE ENTITLEMENT TO RULE 1.540(B) RELIEF
AND DENYING PLAINTIFF'S VERIFIED MOTION TO VACATE
THE JUDGMENT AND GRANT A NEW TRIAL ON DAMAGES

THIS CAUSE came before the Court on May 22, 2008 on a Verified Motion to Vacate the Judgment and Grant a New Trial on Damages ("Motion") filed by Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"). This Court, having reviewed the case file, considered memoranda of law, heard argument of counsel and being otherwise advised in the premises, finds:

I. INTRODUCTION

The Motion, filed by CPH on March 18, 2008, invokes Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.540 ("Rule 1.540") and asks the Court to vacate the final judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS"), enter a default judgment as to all elements of CPH's liability claims, and order a new trial on damages. The parties agreed that, as a preliminary matter, the Court must first determine if CPH has raised a colorable entitlement to Rule 1.540(b) relief. For reasons discussed more fully infra, this Court finds that CPH is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing because the Motion alleges matters that, even if true, have no effect on the new final judgment and, thus, CPH has failed to raise a colorable entitlement to Rule 1.540 relief.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Discovery Phase of CPH's Lawsuit Against MS

CPH sued MS for conspiring with Sunbeam Corporation to perpetrate a securities fraud in connection with Sunbeam's purchase of CPH's interest in the Coleman Company, Inc. During discovery, CPH became concerned that MS was not adequately searching for e-mails responsive to its discovery requests. On April 16, 2004, the Court entered an Agreed Order requiring MS to produce certain electronic discovery and certify compliance. On May 14, 2004, MS produced about 1,300 pages of e-mails, but did not certify compliance until June 23, 2004. The certificate of compliance was signed by Arthur Riel, Executive Director of MS's information technology group. It was not until over four months later, on November 17, 2004, that CPH learned MS had violated the Agreed Order upon discovering that MS knew of hundreds of backup tapes in a MS-owned Brooklyn warehouse containing e-mails that MS had not yet searched or produced to CPH.

B. Pre-Trial Remedial Rulings Based On MS Discovery Abuses

I. March 1, 2005 Order Imposing Adverse-Inference Jury Instruction

In response to MS's failures to comply with court-ordered discovery, CPH filed a motion asking the Court to instruct the jury that MS's non-compliance with discovery orders could give rise to an adverse inference that the contents of the missing e-mails would be harmful to MS's defense ("Adverse Inference Motion"). In support of MS's opposition to the Adverse Inference Motion, MS filed a declaration of James F. Doyle, Executive Director of MS's Law Division, which averred that at "the end of October 2004, I learned that additional e-mail backup tapes had been located within [MS], and that data on those tapes had not been restored or searched prior to [MS's] May 14, 2004 e-mail production."

On March 1, 2005, the Court granted CPH's Adverse Inference Motion after finding that MS "and its counsels' lack of candor [had] frustrated the Court and opposing counsel's ability to be fully and timely informed." (3/1/05 Order, at 9.) The Court cited MS's numerous failures to conduct proper discovery as having been done "knowingly, deliberately, and in bad faith," such that sanctions were warranted in the form of (1) requiring MS to bear the burden of proving to the jury that it lacked knowledge of the fraud and did not aid and abet or conspire to defraud CPH, and (2) reading to the jury a statement of evidence concerning MS's efforts to hide its e-mails. (Id. at 10, 14.) The Court further ordered MS to "continue to use its best efforts to comply with" the court-ordered discovery. (Id. at 13.)

2. March 23, 2005 Entry of Partial Default Order

On March 15, 2005, CPH moved for further sanctions based on continued discovery abuses by MS after learning that MS had not been candid with CPH or the Court at the evidentiary hearing on CPH's Adverse Inference Motion. After outlining MS's discovery abuses that, in the Court's words, would "take a volume to recite," the Court found that MS had "deliberately and contumaciously violated numerous discovery orders." (3/23/05 Order, at 11-16.) Among the violations cited by the Court was MS's failure to timely notify CPH and the Court that its Certificate of Compliance was false because 1,423 tapes found in a MS-owned Brooklyn store room ("Brooklyn Tapes") and 738 8-millimeter backup tapes ("8-Millimeter Tapes") had not been searched at the time of MS's certified compliance. Based on this, the Court built on its prior March 1, 2005 order by entering a partial default against MS and ordering that several portions of CPH's Amended Complaint be read into evidence at trial and deemed established for all purposes. (Id. at 17.) By virtue of this order, CPH bore only the burden of proving the elements of reliance and damages at trial, which were held to be "independent of the

[MS] e-mails.” (Id. at 12.)

Further, the Court stated that the adverse inference instruction could be amended to include the newly established evidence, i.e. a description of MS’s e-mail misconduct. The jury would be instructed that “it may consider those facts in determining whether [MS] sought to conceal their offensive conduct when determining whether an award of punitive damages is appropriate.” (Id.) The Court described its purpose in imposing these additional sanctions as “level[ing] the playing field” and justified the scope of its sanctions by explaining that “the sanctions chosen are the most conservative available to the Court to address the spoliation of evidence and willful violation of the Agreed Order.” (Id. at 11-12.)

C. Discovery-Misconduct Statement To Be Used By Jury In Determining The Propriety Of Punitive Damages

In mid-May 2005, the Court held a hearing to finalize the exact wording and content of the Discovery-Misconduct Statement. A disagreement arose as to what knowledge regarding the “newly discovered” backup tapes should be attributed to MS’s in-house legal team; more specifically, if the jury should be instructed that MS’s in-house legal team merely knew of the existence of the tapes (MS’s position), or if they knew that the tapes contained e-mails (CPH’s position). MS filed Offers of Proof by four members of MS’s in-house legal team generally asserting that each first learned there was e-mail on the Brooklyn Tapes in late October 2004 and that there was e-mail on the 8-Millimeter Tapes in November 2004. Based on these Offers of Proof, the court instructed the jury that MS’s in-house legal team did not know there was e-mail on the tapes until October 2004.

D. Final Verdict and Judgment for CPH

After trial, the jury returned a verdict in CPH’s favor for $604,334,000 in compensatory damages and $850,000,000 in punitive damages. On June 23, 2005, the Court rendered a Final Judgment for CPH based on the verdicts, and on June 27, 2005, MS served its Notice of Appeal.

E. Post-Verdict Notices Filed By MS

1. June 17, 2005 Notice and Subsequent Criminal Contempt Proceedings

On June 17, 2005, after the jury rendered its verdict, but before MS served its Notice of Appeal, MS filed a brief, four-page "Notice." The Notice retracted several statements previously made by MS's in-house legal team members about their knowledge of the e-mails. The Notice asserted that as "a result of a review of e-mails discovered by a new e-mail search, Morgan Stanley has determined that the offers of proof and related statements should be corrected to state that the Law Division was aware in July 2004 that some of the Brooklyn Tapes contained e-mail and that certain 8-mm tapes existed." Accordingly, MS expressly retracted, withdrew, and corrected any and all statements (i.e. not limited to those expressly mentioned in the Notice), written or oral, made or submitted on its behalf, to the contrary.

2. December 21, 2006 Notice

MS later filed a second "Notice" that purported to resolve any ambiguity concerning the meaning of the first "Notice." Specifically, while the first Notice states that MS's in-house legal team knew that the Brooklyn and 8²Millimeter Tapes contained e-mails in July 2004, the second Notice states that "[MS's] Law Division was aware of the existence of the referenced e-mail back-up tapes and the presence of e-mail on some of those tapes prior to July 2004." (emphasis added). The brief two-page second Notice offered no explanation of this new change in information.

F. Fourth District Court of Appeal Ruling

On appeal, the Fourth District reversed "both the compensatory and punitive damage awards and remand[ed] this cause with directions to enter judgment for [MS]." Morgan Stanley

& Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124, 1133 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007). In reaching this conclusion, the Fourth District focused exclusively on CPH's failure to prove a correct measure of its amount of damages, finding it to be a dispositive issue warranting reversal. Id. at 1126. Specifically, the Fourth District found that CPH failed to meet its burden of proving the actual, "fraud-free" value of the Sunbeam stock at the time of purchase, as required by settled Florida law. Id. at 1131. The Fourth District faulted CPH for not having its expert conduct an event study to account for certain non-fraud related factors that may have contributed to the stock's decline. Id. The Fourth District further concluded that because CPH failed to prove any legally cognizable damage resulting from the alleged fraud, the punitive damages award could not stand. Id. at 1132-33.

The Fourth District reversed the judgment for CPH on the sole ground that CPH had failed to present legally sufficient proof of damages. Finding that the damages error had resulted from CPH's choice of damages theory, the Fourth District expressly denied CPH a new trial, and issued a mandate directing this Court to enter judgment in favor of MS. The Fourth District denied CPH's request for rehearing and the Florida Supreme Court denied review. This Court entered final judgment in favor of MS.

G. CPH's Motion to Vacate the Final Judgment

In its Motion, CPH asks the Court to vacate the final judgment of dismissal in favor of MS, enter a total default as to all elements of CPH's claims, and order a new trial on damages. (CPH Mot. 1.) The Motion asserts that it is properly brought under Rule 1.540 because MS perpetrated both a fraud upon the Court and a fraud upon CPH.

First, CPH asserts that the Motion was timely filed within one year from the date this Court entered the new final judgment pursuant to the Fourth District's mandate.

Second, CPH argues that “[b]ecause this case involves a fraud upon the Court, the law does not require that actual prejudice be established.” CPH claims that MS and its attorneys committed a fraud upon the Court by telling the Court in pleadings, arguments, offers of proof, and sworn statements that its in-house legal team did not know of unsearched and unproduced e-mails until late October 2004, after the June 23, 2004 certification of compliance. CPH supports this claim by referring to the two Notices filed by MS after the jury rendered its verdict. According to CPH, these Notices showed that MS’s in-house legal team “knew of unsearched emails, and thus knew that the June 23, 2004, certification was false, at the time the certification was made.” CPH claims that MS’s assertions about what knowledge its in-house legal team had regarding discovery misconduct, when the Court was determining which sanctions to impose, constituted fraud upon the court. CPH asserts that such fraud upon the court warrants relief under Rule 1.540 without a showing of prejudice. After noting that Florida courts have not yet addressed a situation identical to this case, CPH relied on a series of out-of-state and federal cases in which judgments have been set aside based on fraud upon the court.

Third, CPH argues that even if proof of prejudice were required, MS perpetrated a fraud that prejudicially affected CPH’s ability to fully and fairly present its case. According to CPH, had the Court known about the extent of MS’s noncompliance with its discovery order, it may have imposed greater sanctions up to and including a total default as to liability and a shifting of the burden of proof as to damages. CPH further asserts that had it known the extent of MS’s alleged fraud, it would have sought a remedial order with respect to damages. CPH also claims that MS’s alleged fraud impacted the jury’s deliberations because the Court required CPH to change its closing presentation based on MS’s representations that its in-house legal team did not know the unsearched Brooklyn tapes had e-mail until October 2004. Since MS’s post-verdict notices revealed that this information was not true, CPH argues that MS improperly impacted what the jury heard, which offers additional proof of prejudice.

Fourth, CPH asserts that because it has presented a colorable entitlement to relief, it should be afforded permissible discovery prior to the evidentiary hearing.

Fifth and lastly, CPH maintains that this Court should vacate its new final judgment in MS's favor and instead (1) enter a complete default on all elements of liability, including reliance and the fact of damage, (2) shift the burden of proof on damages, and (3) order a new trial on compensatory and punitive damages. It argues that such action can be taken under the Court's authority to act based on a party's willful and contumacious discovery misconduct. CPH argues that this Court should place the burden on MS to prove what portion of the Sunbeam's stock collapse can be attributed to non-fraud-related causes.

H. MS's Opposition to CPH's Motion

In its Opposition to Motion to Vacate the Judgment and Grant a New Trial ("Opposition"), MS claims that new trial proceedings under Rule 1.540(b) are only appropriate in a narrow set of circumstances, none of which apply in the instant case.

First, MS states that CPH's request to retry its damages case is foreclosed by the Fourth District's decision and mandate. MS argues that CPH is attempting to circumvent the appellate decision by filing this Rule 1.540(b) motion and that the law of the case doctrine should apply.

Second, MS argues that CPH's "new evidence" is not "new" and does not justify the extraordinary relief CPH seeks because the contents of the June 2005 and December 2006 Notices did not materially alter the facts which CPH and the Court relied on in sanctioning MS. MS asserts that since CPH cannot show that the information in the Notices would have produced a different sanction or judgment that would have cured its flawed presentation of damages at trial, CPH cannot demonstrate a prima facie case of fraud under Rule 1.540(b).

As a first sub-issue, MS asserts that there is no basis for finding that a damages default would have been imposed based on the contents of the Notices. MS points to the fact that the trial judge, during post-trial criminal contempt proceedings, stated that she was not sure the June 2005 Notice told her anything that she had not already found. Further, the default order specifically referenced misconduct by MS's in-house legal team and the litigation misconduct statement read to the jury likewise referred to such misconduct. MS states that the Notices had no bearing on CPH's failure to properly prove damages.

As a second sub-issue, MS asserts that the sanctions that CPH seeks are not obtainable because even if a total default had been entered against CPH, it would have only been to the fact, not the amount, of damages, meaning that MS would have still ultimately prevailed due to CPH's flawed proof of damages.

As a third sub-issue, MS asserts that CPH cannot show that the jury would have rendered a materially different verdict had they known about the contents of the Notices, because the misrepresentations were not relevant to the jury's deliberations on compensable damages. MS argues that it would have been error for the jury to consider the misconduct in determining anything except punitive damages.

As a fourth sub-issue, MS asserts that CPH is not entitled to further discovery or an evidentiary hearing based on the Fourth District's clear mandate for this court to enter final judgment in MS's favor. MS states that CPH's Motion is not facially sufficient to establish grounds for relief, and that CPH lost because it failed to prove its amount of damages, not because of MS's failure to produce all of the emails.

Third, MS argues that CPH waived its ability to seek further sanctions. MS claims that CPH “held back” its arguments regarding the basis for its 1.540(b) argument because it wanted to wait and see how the Fourth District case was decided (i.e., if the case was affirmed, then CPH would not have sought a new trial). To support its argument, MS sets forth four different scenarios: CPH could have (1) sought to renew its sanctions motion prior to MS’s appeal; (2) cross-appealed on grounds that the Court’s sanctions decision was too lenient; (3) asked the Fourth District for a new trial on damages; and (4) moved the Fourth District to relinquish jurisdiction for this Court to develop a record regarding the Notices.

I. CPH’s Reply Brief

In its Reply Brief, CPH first notes that MS never addressed CPH’s fraud upon the court claims. CPH maintains that by its silence, MS concedes that it committed fraud upon the Court, and that prejudice need not be shown as a matter of law. Second, CPH re-asserts that even if a showing of prejudice were required, the prejudice is manifest in this case in that the substantive fraud by MS materially misled the Court and CPH. CPH alleges that MS’s conduct caused it to avoid the more severe sanction of total default as to all elements of liability, including the fact of damage. CPH goes on to explain that if the Court had entered total default against MS, then the Fourth District could not have ruled as it did. Thus, CPH concludes, it has clearly demonstrated a colorable claim of prejudice. Third, CPH argues that MS’s procedural arguments lack merit and that its Rule 1.540(b) motion is both timely and proper. CPH asserts that MS erred in attempting to apply the law of the case doctrine because the Fourth District never considered and ruled on MS’s litigation misconduct and, instead, decided the case on other dispositive grounds. Fourth, CPH denies waiving its right to further sanctions by not first taking various other actions. CPH contends that it either lacked the ability or was not required to take such actions. Fifth, CPH restates that it has presented a colorable entitlement to relief and, as such, it is also entitled to further discovery in order to uncover the extent of MS's bad acts.

III. LEGAL ANALYSIS

Rule 1.540(b) governs post-judgment relief from a final judgment and lists five categories of substantive grounds that can be used to support an order vacating a final judgment. One such ground is based upon a showing of "fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party." Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b)(3).

A. An Evidentiary Hearing on CPH's Motion is Not Required Because CPH Has Failed to Raise a Colorable Entitlement to Rule 1.540(b) Relief

A trial court has broad discretion in evaluating a Rule 1.540(b) motion seeking relief from final judgment. Crowley v. Crowley, 678 So. 2d 435, 438 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996). Such motion should not be summarily dismissed without an evidentiary hearing unless its allegations and accompanying affidavits fail to allege a colorable entitlement to relief. Schleger v. Stebelsky, 957 So. 2d 71, 73 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007); Dynasty Exp. Corp. v. Weiss, 675 So. 2d 235, 239 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996); Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 437-38.

To warrant an evidentiary hearing, a Rule 1.540(b) motion must 1) be filed within a reasonable time and within one year of the final judgment, 2) plead fraud with particularity, and 3) explain why the fraud, if it exists, would entitle the movant to have the judgment set aside. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b); Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d 579 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994). The purpose of requiring such motion to plead fraud with specificity is to permit the court to determine if the movant "has made a prima facie showing which would justify relief from judgment," and is not merely rehashing matters explored at trial. Id. at 580. If a motion does not set forth a basis for relief on its face, then an evidentiary hearing is unnecessary, the time and expense of needless litigation is avoided, and the policy of preserving the finality of judgments is enhanced. Id. at 579.

While CPH's Motion is timely and pleads fraud with particularity, the major point of contention is whether CPH has explained why it is entitled to have the new final judgment set aside. Specifically, CPH asserts that it has explained its entitlement by characterizing MS's alleged misconduct as fraud upon the court and, thus, that it need not show how such conduct prejudiced the final judgment. After a careful evaluation of Florida's jurisprudence addressing "fraud upon the court," this Court disagrees with CPH's assertions as this Order will discuss in detail.

1. CPH's Motion is Timely and Properly Brought At This Time

Generally, the one-year time limit for filing Rule 1.540(b) motions begins to run from the entry of a final judgment, not from resolution of an appeal from judgment. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b); see also Molinos v. E.I. Dupont De Nemours & Co., 947 So. 2d 521, 524 (4th DCA 2006). If, however, a prior judgment that is favorable to one party is reversed on appeal, that party may file a Rule 1.540(b) motion within one year from the date the new judgment was entered pursuant to the appellate court's mandate. Molinos, 947 So. 2d at 525. That is clearly what occurred in this case.

In Molinos, trial court judgments in the plaintiffs' favor were reversed on appeal. Id. at 523. The plaintiffs then sought Rule 1.540(b) relief from the new judgment based on newly discovered evidence. Id. The trial court denied plaintiffs' Rule 1.540(b) motions as untimely because they were filed more than one year after the original judgments had been entered. Id. at 524. As a matter of first impression, the Fourth District reversed, holding that the Rule 1.540(b) motions were timely because the relevant judgments "were those entered after [the defendant's] successful appeals." Id. at 525. The Fourth District explained that the new judgments caused a substantive change in the parties' legal rights and obligations which, by the prior judgments, had been settled with finality. Id. (quoting Simon v. Navon, 116 F.3d 1, 3 (1st Cir. 1997)). Thus, the plaintiffs' time to file their Rule 1.540(b) motions ran from the date the new judgments were entered. Id.

Molinos is directly on point. Molinos makes clear that CPH's Motion is timely because it is this Court's new final judgment from which CPH is seeking Rule 1.540(b) relief. CPH filed the Motion within days of the new final judgment entered by this Court pursuant to the Fourth District's mandate, well within the one year time limit as described in Rule 1.540 and Molinos.

MS seeks to avoid this conclusion by claiming that CPH should or could have taken other actions such as 1) seeking renewed sanctions at trial and before MS's appeal, 2) cross-appealing on grounds that the trial court's sanctions were too lenient, or 3) asking the Fourth District to relinquish jurisdiction upon first learning of the Notices. These arguments are unpersuasive because CPH either lacked the ability or was not required to take such actions. CPH could not have sought additional sanctions or relief at the trial court level because the Notices containing the new information were not filed until after the trial was over. Further, CPH was not required to cross-appeal because cross-appeals are not required unless the appellee seeks to modify the judgment to obtain greater relief than that afforded by the trial court. Credit Indus. Co. v. Remark Chem. Co., 67 So. 2d 540, 540-41 (Fla. 1953). Here, it was unnecessary for CPH to cross-appeal because the original judgment was favorable to CPH and, thus, CPH had no need to seek a modified judgment. Lastly, no legal authority suggests that CPH was required to ask the Fourth District to relinquish jurisdiction after learning of the December 2006 Notice filed by MS as a prerequisite to filing its Motion. Rather, CPH followed the proper procedure endorsed in Molinos by filing its Motion within days of this Court's new final judgment.

2. CPH's Motion Pleads Fraud With Particularity

Fraud must be pled with particularity. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.120(b) (allegations of fraud must “be stated with such particularity as the circumstances may permit”); Thompson v. Bank of New York, 862 So. 2d 768, 770 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (where fraud exists, “it is not so subtle a concept that it cannot be described with precision”). This same requirement applies to a motion for relief under Rule 1.540(b), which must clearly and concisely set forth the essential facts that constitute fraud and not mere legal conclusions. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 580. The reason for this requirement is to allow the court an opportunity to determine whether the movant “has made a prima facie showing which would justify relief from judgment.” Id. As observed in Flemenbaum, the term “fraud” is often loosely used by a party that is displeased with the opposing party’s conduct or simply unhappy with the results. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 580; see also Regalado v. Cabezas, 959 So. 2d 282, 286 (Fla. 3d DCA 2007); Quittner v. Quittner, 725 So. 2d 1168, 1169 (Fla. 3d DCA 1998).

The elements of fraud are: (1) a false statement concerning a material fact; (2) knowledge by the person making the statement that the representation is false; (3) the intent by the person making the statement that the representation will induce another to act on it; and (4) reliance on the representation to the injury of the other party. Hollywood Lakes Country Club, Inc. v. Cmty. Ass'n Servs., Inc., 770 So. 2d 716, 718 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000).

CPH’s Motion thoroughly alleges how and why MS misrepresented the fact of when its legal team learned about the e-mails. CPH points to the post-verdict Notices MS filed as evidence that it knew that this fact was misrepresented during litigation and at trial, and argues that MS made these misrepresentations to purposely deceive CPH as well as the Court. CPH further alleges it relied on these misrepresentations in drafting its closing arguments. As such, this case does not fall into the category of cases where litigants loosely use the term “fraud” without supporting their claim with facts. Conversely, CPH has amply pointed out facts in support of its fraud claim. In sum, CPH’s Motion sufficiently pleads fraud with particularity.

3. CPH Failed to Explain Why MS’s Alleged Conduct Entitles CPH to Have the Judgment Set Aside

Since CPH timely filed its Motion and pled fraud with particularity, the only remaining issue is whether CPH clearly explained why MS’s alleged conduct, if true, entitles it to have the final judgment set aside, which is the final threshold requirement to obtaining an evidentiary hearing. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 580. An evidentiary hearing is unnecessary if a Rule 1.540(b) motion merely undertakes to rehash matters previously litigated at trial or raises inconsequential “de minimis” matters. Id.; cf. Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 438.

Flemenbaum involved an ex-husband’s “pro se motion for new trial based upon fraud upon the court under Rule 1.540,” which alleged that his ex-wife lied about cohabitating with another man at trial. Id. The trial court did not afford the husband an evidentiary hearing. Id. On appeal, the Fourth District affirmed after finding that the husband’s motion did not state facts that constituted fraud and, instead, sought to rehash matters fully explored at trial and “raised de minimis matters which had no effect on the final judgment.” Id. The court cited examples of sufficiently pled Rule 1.540(b) motions that invoked the evidentiary hearing requirement. See, e.g., Stella v. Stella, 418 So. 2d 1029 (Fla. 4th DCA 1982) (if proven, wife’s assertions that husband had testified that a statue was worth $100, while knowing that its true value was $35,000, would have changed the court’s equitable distribution and, thus, entitled wife to an evidentiary hearing); Ross v. Bandi, 566 So. 2d 55 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (evidentiary hearing required where husband alleged that he learned of an IRS tax lien after the final hearing, which rendered his interest in a corporation worthless).

In Crowley, a husband was entitled to an evidentiary hearing on his Rule 1.540(b) motion seeking relief from a dissolution judgment. Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 438. The husband's motion, filed one week after the entry of the dissolution judgment, claimed entitlement to relief based upon "fraud...committed by [his] wife and her counsel on the Court;" specifically, the motion claimed that the wife and her counsel had lied by omission about the fact that, unknown to the husband, he would soon be terminated from his job, which would dramatically change his financial condition and, in turn, the final judgment. Id. at 437-38. The Fourth District noted that, in contrast to Flemenbaum, the husband's motion was not "a mere undertaking to 'rehash' matters previously litigated at trial or an effort to raise inconsequential 'de minimis' matters." Id. at 438. Instead, "the core of the husband's motion, if true, would undermine the very foundation upon which the dissolution judgment and order were built." Id.

In this case, CPH's Motion delves into MS's discovery misconduct, a topic that was extensively explored and affirmatively and unambiguously addressed by the Court at trial. For example and as noted in the Court's March 23, 2005 order granting partial default, the Court expressly considered MS's failure to timely notify CPH and the Court that its Certificate of Compliance was false. The only additional revelation raised in the post-verdict Notices is the date on which MS's in-house counsel knew that certain backup tapes contained e-mails that may have been responsive to CPH's discovery requests. While the Court does not consider the discovery abuses and misconduct by MS, up to and including the alleged misconduct perpetrated by its legal team, as de minimis when viewed through the lens of attorney professionalism, when viewed through the lens of a Rule 1.540(b) motion, it cannot be said that the additional attorney conduct revealed by the Notices affected the new final judgment, especially considering the rationale behind the Fourth District's mandate, i.e. CPH's failure to prove damages at trial. In this strict sense, the conduct revealed by the Notices fits squarely within Flemenbaum's de minimis language.¹

Even considering as true all of CPH's allegations regarding MS's in-house legal team's knowledge, i.e., that the undisclosed backup tapes had potentially responsive e-mails, CPH is not entitled to have the new final judgment set aside. The Fourth District resolved the appeal in MS's favor on one sole ground – CPH failed to adequately prove its damages at trial. Any information about what MS's in-house legal team knew or did not know about e-mails on the backup tapes has no bearing whatsoever on this legal conclusion. Unlike Stella, Ross, and Crowley where the parties' assertions, if true, would have altered the final judgments from which relief was sought, CPH's assertions, even if true, would not have altered the legal course leading to the issuance of the new final judgment.

CPH sets forth two theories that unsuccessfully attempt to refute this conclusion. First, CPH argues that, had the Court known about MS's fraud, it would have affected the resolution of the sanctions motions. This argument assumes the Court would have meted out sanctions even more severe than the partial default in the first place; second, it assumes that the Court would have entered a total default against MS on all elements including reliance and damages; and third, it assumes that the Court would have "altered the burden of proof as to damages," which would have affected what the Fourth District reviewed on appeal. Building assumption upon assumption in such a manner has not been the basis of any successful Rule 1.540 motion in other cases this Court has reviewed.

¹ A Rule 1.540(b) motion is not the appropriate vehicle for handling attorney misconduct that does not prejudice the final judgment, as is the case here. Rather, such misconduct is more appropriately vindicated via criminal contempt proceedings and/or grievances filed with the Florida Bar. See generally Pugliese v. Pugliese, 347 So. 2d 422, 424 (Fla. 1977); Smith v. State, 954 So. 2d 1191 (3d DCA 2007) (defining purpose of criminal contempt as being "to punish assaults or aspersions upon the authority and dignity of the court or judge"). Indeed, CPH has already filed a motion for criminal contempt in this case.

There is no legal precedent supporting CPH's claim that the Court would or could have ordered MS to disprove the amount of damages. Indeed,

[i]t is well settled in Florida that a default judgment only admits to a plaintiff's entitlement to liquidated damages. 'Damages are liquidated when the proper amount to be awarded can be determined with exactness from the cause of action as pleaded, i.e., from a pleaded agreement between parties, by an arithmetical calculation or by application of definite rules of law...However, damages are not liquidated if the ascertainment of their exact sum requires the taking of testimony to ascertain facts upon which to base a value judgment.'

U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. C&C Beauty Sales, Inc. 674 So. 2d 169, 171 (Fla. 3d DCA 1996) (citations omitted). This securities fraud case clearly involves unliquidated damages. The Fourth District reversed due to insufficient expert testimony proving the "benefit of the bargain" amount of damages. Even if the Court had had the benefit of the information in the Notices, a trial on the amount of damages was inevitable. The best case scenario for CPH would have been a default as to reliance and the fact of damages. Thus, the relief CPH asserts it would have received had the Court known this information is without any legal basis.

As a second theory, CPH argues that MS's alleged misconduct affected the jury's deliberations. Any effect was rendered moot. The only relevant import that MS's newly revealed conduct could have had would have been to alter the Discovery Misconduct Statement used by the jury for the sole purpose of determining the propriety of awarding punitive damages. Such a change has no impact on the issue of compensatory damages, which is a prerequisite to any award of punitive damages as found by the Fourth District on appeal. See Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007).

At the hearing, CPH articulated an argument that had the Court entered a total default, it would have established the fact of damages and would, thus, have entitled CPH to an award of nominal damages. In turn, an award of nominal damages would have entitled CPH to an award of punitive damages. In addition to being highly speculative, this argument directly contradicts the Fourth District's express findings in the appeal of this case:

Even if CPH established the fact of some unquantified damage (which theoretically could have supported a nominal damage award), this is not enough to justify a punitive damage in a fraud case. Punitive damages for fraud cannot be based on nominal damages alone.

Morgan Stanley, 955 So. 2d at 1132-33. Thus, this second theory also lacks merit.

In sum, the new final judgment entered in favor of MS followed a clear mandate from the Fourth District accompanied by an opinion explaining that CPH failed to prove its compensatory damages. The Fourth District found that CPH's strategy included instructing its damages expert to assume a "zero" value on the date of closing. Id. at 1127. It is inconceivable how the newly found information in the Notices would have affected this choice of strategy for proving damages; whatever information MS's in-house legal counsel told CPH and the Court, deceitful or not, was ultimately irrelevant as to this choice.

B. CPH's Fraud Upon the Court Claims Should Be Evaluated Under the Flemenbaum Framework

While this Court finds that an evidentiary hearing is not warranted under Florida law, CPH has raised arguments invoking out-of-state and federal cases finding that certain attorney misconduct can constitute "fraud upon the court," such that there is no requirement of showing that the misconduct prejudiced the outcome as a prerequisite to relief from final judgment. In light of Florida's jurisprudence addressing "fraud upon the court," Flemenbaum, and policy considerations, this Court finds it unnecessary to rely on extrajurisdictional authority.

1. MS's Alleged Misconduct is "Intrinsic Fraud" Under Current Florida Law

Florida jurisprudence defining "fraud upon the court" arises from the distinction between a Rule 1.540 motion and an independent action. There are two distinctions between these two actions. First, a Rule 1.540(b) motion must be brought within one year of the final judgment, whereas an independent action for fraud may be brought at any time. Parker v. Parker, 950 So. 2d 388, 391 (Fla. 2007). Second, a Rule 1.540 motion may allege intrinsic or extrinsic fraud, whereas an independent action may only allege extrinsic fraud. Id.

Significantly, “fraud upon the court” is defined as being only extrinsic fraud. DeClaire v. Yohanan, 453 So. 2d 375, 377 (Fla. 1984) superseded by rule on other grounds, see Lefler v. Lefler, 776 So. 2d 319, n. 1 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001)² (noting the need to distinguish extrinsic from intrinsic fraud because “only extrinsic fraud may constitute fraud on the court”). Florida courts maintain that while “fraud on the court is a somewhat elusive concept,” it should not be given too broad of an application in order to avoid frequent attacks by independent actions and to preserve finality of judgments. DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 379 (citing Alexander v. First Nat’l Bank of Titusville, 275 So.2d 272, 274 (Fla. 4th DCA 1973)).

In Parker, the Florida Supreme Court explained the distinction between extrinsic and intrinsic fraud as follows:

In essence, extrinsic fraud is conduct which prevents a party from trying an issue before the court, and the prevention itself becomes a collateral issue to the cause; whereas intrinsic fraud is the presentation of misleading information on an issue before the court that was tried or could have been tried.

Parker, 950 So. 2d at 391. Extrinsic fraud is the prevention of an unsuccessful party from presenting his or her case, by fraud or deception practiced by his adversary, keeping an opponent away from court, falsely promising a compromise, ignorance of the adversary about the existence of the suit or the plaintiff’s acts, fraudulent representation of a party without his or her consent, and connivance in his or her defeat. Id. at 391 (citing Fair v. Tampa Elec. Co., 27 So. 2d 514, 515 (Fla. 1946)). In other words, extrinsic fraud occurs where a defendant has somehow been prevented from participating in a cause. Id.

On the other hand, intrinsic fraud is fraudulent conduct arising within a proceeding and pertaining to issues in the case that have or could have been tried. Id. For example, when a judgment is obtained upon false testimony or a fraudulent instrument and the parties were heard, the evidence submitted to and received consideration by the court, then it may be said that the matter has been actually tried, or was so in issue that it might have been tried. Id. (citing Johnson v. Wells, 73 So. 188, 191 (Fla. 1916)).

The Parker court affirmed the Fourth District's reasoning and conclusion that a wife's false misrepresentation regarding paternity was intrinsic fraud because it "concerned an issue that could have been raised in the dissolution proceedings, rather than an issue collateral to those proceedings." Id. at 392-93 (emphasis in original). CPH alleges that MS "committed fraud on the Court...by repeatedly telling the Court, in pleadings, arguments, offers of proof, and sworn statements, that its in-house lawyers were not aware of the existence of unsearched and unproduced emails...until 'late October 2004[,]'" which was after its June 2004 certification of compliance. (CPH Mot. 27.) Consistent with Parker's definition of intrinsic fraud, CPH alleges MS's conduct resulted in a final judgment premised upon false information submitted to and considered by the Court. Like Parker, such alleged false misrepresentations constituted issues that could have been raised in the trial proceedings, rather than an issue collateral to those proceedings. Indeed, the Court unambiguously considered and addressed sanctionable discovery misconduct at trial in entering the partial default. Thus, it can be said that such matters were tried or were so in issue that they might have been tried. MS's alleged actions therefore constitute intrinsic fraud under Florida law and cannot be categorized as “fraud upon the court.” See DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 377 (Fla. 1984) (“only extrinsic fraud may constitute fraud on the court”).

In DeClaire, the Florida Supreme Court explained the procedural significance of the substantive distinction between extrinsic and intrinsic fraud as follows:

The concept of fraud on the court has historically been limited in its application to ensure the finality of judgments and to avoid frequent attacks against final judgments. Prior to the adoption of Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.540(b), only what was defined as “extrinsic fraud” could, in reality, form the basis for relief from a judgment. Further, such relief could be obtained only by an independent action in equity. There was no practical basis for relief from a judgment obtained by intrinsic fraud.

DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 377-78 (citations omitted). The DeClaire Court also cautioned:

It should be clearly understood that rule 1.540(b) broadened the grounds upon which a final judgment could be attacked, but created a one-year limitations period within which such an attack must be made. The rule does not change the existing definitions of intrinsic and extrinsic fraud or change the type of conduct which constitutes fraud on the court.

Id. at 379 (emphasis added).

Turning next to policy considerations, the Florida Supreme Court has clearly delineated the inherent dangers of broadening the definition of “fraud upon the court” in order to effectuate the policy favoring preservation of the finality of judgments. DeClaire, 453 So. 2d at 378 (the “concept of fraud on the court has historically been limited in its application to ensure the finality of judgments and to avoid frequent attacks against final judgments”); Alexander, 275 So.2d at 274 (a broad application of fraud upon the court would frustrate the law's policy favoring the termination of litigation and finality of judgments). These cases suggest that maintaining the intrinsic/extrinsic distinction for independent actions is key to effecting such policy considerations by cautioning that a court's power to set aside judgments for fraud upon the court must be narrowly applied so as to further the law's policy favoring the termination of litigation and finality of judgments. See id.

CPH cites one Florida case, Andrews v. Palmas De Majorca Condo., 898 So. 2d 1066 (Fla. 5th DCA 2005), in support of its argument that MS committed fraud upon the court. In Andrews, a condominium association sued two owners for failure to pay assessments. Id. at 1067. The association prevailed after concluding that the owners acquiesced to the assessment by tendering a check for $1,000. Id. The owners appealed. Id. After filing an initial brief, the owners asked the Fifth District to relinquish jurisdiction based on “newly discovered evidence demonstrat[ing] fraud, misrepresentation and misconduct” by the association during trial. Id. The owners claimed that they discovered a copy of the check with the words “Under Protest,” and alleged that the association had altered the original check to remove these words. Id. The owners alleged that this conduct constituted fraud on the court warranting relief under Rule 1.540(b). Id. at 1068. The Fifth District temporarily relinquished jurisdiction based on their accusations to allow the owners to seek relief under Rule 1.540(b). Id.

Prior to the hearing on the Rule 1.540(b) motion, the owners’ counsel withdrew the motion and stated that he could not ethically present the “newly discovered” check. Id. Further investigation showed that the owners had written “Under Protest” on a copy of the check after trial. Id. In turn, the association moved for sanctions based on the owners’ “fraud upon the court,” which the trial court granted. Id. at 1069. When jurisdiction returned to the Fifth District, the association moved to dismiss the appeal as a sanction under Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.410, based on “fraud upon the court.” Id. The Fifth District dismissed the appeal with prejudice after concluding that the owners’ “perpetrated a fraud upon this Court in filing their Motion for Relief from Judgment which attempted to use falsified evidence to vacate the Final Judgment entered against them.” Id. In reaching this conclusion, the Fifth District relied exclusively on a definition of fraud on the court set forth by the First Circuit federal case of Aoude v. Mobil Oil Corp., 892 F.2d 1115, 1118 (1st Cir. 1989). Id.

Andrews is inapposite to the instant case. Andrews involved an interpretation of “fraud upon the court” within the context of a motion for dismissal. The Fifth District granted the motion to dismiss as a sanction pursuant to Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.410 for the Andrews’ misconduct. Although a Rule 1.540(b) motion was in the Andrews procedural history, the alleged “fraud upon the court” was not analyzed in that context. Conversely, this case requires the interpretation of “fraud upon the court” in the context of a Rule 1.540(b) motion. Such interpretation is amply provided for in the Florida Supreme Court cases of Parker and DeClaire. It is unnecessary to rely on a Fifth District case relying on a First Circuit federal case when there is binding case law defining fraud upon the court, as discussed supra.

CPH also has cited federal and out-of-state cases for the proposition that litigation misconduct involving attorneys, as opposed to witnesses and parties, is especially egregious conduct rising to the level of fraud on the court. See, e.g., Chewing v. Ford Motor Co., 579 S.E.2d 605 (S.C. 2003); Synanon Foundation, Inc. v. Bernstein, 502 A.2d 1254 (D.C. 1985); Pumphrey v. K.W. Thompson Tool Co., 62 F.3d 1128 (9th Cir. 1995). CPH further relies on extrajurisdictional cases for the proposition that a showing of prejudice is not required to evaluating a claim of fraud on the court. See, e.g., Chewing, 579 S.E.2d at 611 n.7; Pumphrey, 62 F.3d at 1132-33; Dixon v. C.I.R., 316 F.3d 1041, 1046 (9th Cir. 2003); In re Intermagnetics America, Inc., 926 F.2d 912 (9th Cir. 1991). Based on these cases, CPH asserts that MS committed fraud upon the court and that CPH is not required to prove they were prejudiced by MS’s actions.

A common thread running through these non-Florida cases is the revelation of detailed, orchestrated efforts by attorneys to conceal information going to the substance of the entire litigation. For instance, Chewning involved a party's claims that opposing counsel paid an expert for untruthful testimony favorable to his client regarding the products liability claims litigated in the case. The court concluded that subornation of perjury or the intentional concealment of documents by counsel constitutes "extrinsic fraud" that allows a judgment to be set aside for fraud upon the court because such conduct precludes the opposing party from "having his day in court." Chewning, 579 S.E.2d at 610-611.

Synanon involved numerous perjurious and false statements by a real estate buyer's executives and counsel in order to prevent seller's discovery of certain archived tapes that were relevant to the litigated issues. The Synanon court affirmed the trial court's pre-trial dismissal of the real estate buyer's complaint after finding that counsel's conduct amounted to a fraud on the court. Synanon, 502 A.2d at 1264. Specifically, the evidence was found to reveal a carefully planned scheme designed to deceive the court, which was the type of misconduct warranting dismissal of the complaint. Id. at 1263.

Pumphrey involved a wrongful death action against a gun manufacturer after a man was killed by a dropped gun. At trial, the manufacturer relied on a video showing that the gun in question did not fire when dropped in testing. Pumphrey, 62 F.3d at 1129. A jury found the decedent contributorily negligent. Id. In a later, unrelated lawsuit against the same manufacturer, a second video was produced during discovery showing the same gun fired when dropped during testing. Id. As it turned out, the second video was made on the same day as the video shown in the prior action, but it was never produced in that action. Id. The trial court set aside the prior verdict and ordered a new trial under the federal rule counterpart to Florida's Rule 1.540(b) after finding that the manufacturer's in-house counsel had committed fraud on the court. Id. The appellate court affirmed this conclusion after finding that undisputed facts revealed that in-house counsel “engaged in a scheme to defraud the jury, the court, and [the opposing party], through the use of misleading, inaccurate, and incomplete responses to discovery requests[,]” which constituted ample evidence of fraud upon the court. Id. at 1132.

As a preliminary matter, this Court notes a circuit split of authority as to whether prejudice is a necessary element of fraud on the Court. Compare Dixon v. C.I.R., 316 F.3d at 1046 (9th Cir. 2003), rev’g T.C. Memo.1999-101 (fraud on the court occurs regardless of whether the opposing party is prejudiced), with Drobny v. C.I.R., 113 F.3d 670 (7th Cir.1997), aff’g T.C. Memo.1995-209 (proof of fraud on the court requires a showing that the alleged misconduct actually affected the outcome of the case to the taxpayer's detriment, i.e. prejudice need be shown).

Florida courts have not yet addressed whether misconduct which would otherwise be intrinsic fraud becomes extrinsic fraud when it is committed by an attorney, as was held in Chewning. Even if this Court accepts CPH’s argument that attorney misconduct is fraud on the court, it declines to follow the Ninth Circuit’s reasoning that prejudice is not required. This Court finds the Seventh Circuit’s reasoning in Drobny compelling:

We are of the opinion that the petitioners were required to demonstrate, not only that the respondent engaged in conduct that was intended to mislead the court, but-of paramount importance-that the actual conduct affected the outcome of their case.

Drobny, 113 F. 3d at 678. The court further stated:

We disagree with the Drobny’s argument that a “fraud upon the court” can occur even if the allegedly improper conduct does not affect the outcome of the court’s deliberations. Under the common law of fraud, a misrepresentation in and of itself (i.e., one that is not relied upon to the detriment of the defrauded party) is not actionable. In Illinois, for example, “the elements of common law fraud are: (1) a false statement of material fact; (2) by one who knows or believes it to be false; (3) made with the intent to induce action by another in reliance on the statement;

(4) action by the other in reliance on the truthfulness of the statement; and (5) injury to the other resulting from that reliance.”

Id. at 678 n.14 (emphasis in original). This Court notes that the elements of fraud in Illinois are substantially similar to those in Florida. See Hollywood Lakes, 770 So. 2d at 718. As described supra, CPH cannot show that it was injured by relying on MS's alleged false statements. Significantly, the Fourth District case of Crowley highlights the necessity that the alleged fraud “undermine the very foundation upon which [the final judgment] and order” are built. As such, the Crowley analysis, which binds this court, comports more fully with that set forth in Drobny. For this reason, it is unnecessary to choose between following Drobny or Dixon, because the Fourth District has already adequately addressed this issue in Crowley.

In sum, there is no indication that fraud and fraud upon the court claims in a Rule 1.540(b) motion are to be evaluated differently. Rule 1.540(b) specifically contemplates “fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic),” and consequently encompasses fraud upon the court since it is well-established that it is extrinsic fraud. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b)(3); see DeClaire v. Yohanan, 453 So. 2d 375, 377 (Fla. 1984). As an example, Crowley involved a claim that a party and her attorney committed fraud upon the court, and that case was evaluated under the Flemenbaum framework. Similarly, this case, which involves claims of fraud upon the court, likewise must be examined under Flemenbaum. As no Florida court has carved out an exception to the established Flemenbaum requirements for application to Rule 1.540 claims of fraud upon the court, this Court follows Flemenbaum and its progeny.

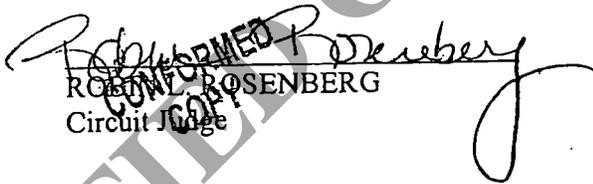

C. CPH is Not Entitled to Discovery

If the allegations in a moving party's motion “raise a colorable entitlement to Rule

1.540(b) relief, a formal evidentiary hearing on the motion, as well as permissible discovery prior to the hearing, is required.” Dynasty, 675 So. 2d at 239 (citing Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Welden, 483 So. 2d 487, 489 (Fla. 1st DCA 1986)). Since CPH has failed to allege a colorable entitlement to relief under Flemenbaum, it is not entitled to a formal evidentiary hearing, and consequently is not entitled to any discovery.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED and ADJUDGED that CPH’s Motion is DENIED.

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

DEFENDANT MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S
OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF COST-RELATED DOCUMENTS

INTRODUCTION

CPH claims its Motion to Compel “has been necessitated by Morgan Stanley’s refusal to produce documents that are directly relevant to the $11+ million in appellate and trial costs Morgan Stanley currently seeks.” (Motion at 1). Not so. Morgan Stanley has produced over 7,500 pages of documents that are directly relevant to the reasonableness and necessity of those costs and establish that they were incurred and paid.

The only relevant inquiry here is whether the trial and appellate costs are “reasonable” and “necessary.” CPH agrees. (Motion at 3, citing Am. Med. Int’l, Inc. v. Scheller, 484 So. 2d 593, 594 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985)). Morgan Stanley has objected to the demand for additional materials that are not probative of what is “reasonable and necessary.” CPH’s overbroad requests for “All documents . . . including but not limited to . . .” (CPH Request for Production (Ex. 2 to CPH Motion to Compel)) has caused the dispute. CPH literally seeks the irrelevant minutiae of things like e-mails confirming a court reporter’s attendance, notes authorizing the payment of an invoice, accounting records tracking payment and ledgering to internal accounts, etc. -- documents that have nothing to do with reasonableness and necessity. But thousands of pages already produced by Morgan Stanley are responsive and they establish both necessity and reasonableness.

There is some irony in CPH's submission. CPH insisted upon the supersedeas bond, necessitating the expenses that generated over $9 million in appellate costs. Most of Morgan Stanley's trial costs mirror the trial costs sought by CPH when it was the prevailing party. See Ex. A (chart comparing trial costs). The major difference relates to document production and imaging costs. That difference stems from Morgan Stanley having to image and create bibliographic "coding" for a substantial portion of CPH's document production, leading to over $500,000 in "coding" costs. A significant portion of Morgan Stanley's production to CPH was electronic and included bibliographic "metadata." In the expert witness category, Morgan Stanley's claim is $200,000 less than CPH's. See Ex. A. The total difference in the CPH/Morgan Stanley trial costs motions is $702,418.06. Thus the trial costs at issue are really in one or two categories.

We do not question CPH's right to documents relating to the necessity and reasonableness of costs, but its overbroad approach is troubling. Morgan Stanley's responses to CPH's discovery requests were proper and provided the documents relevant to, and leading to, admissible evidence of the reasonableness and necessity of the claimed costs.

ARGUMENT

Courts in Florida and other jurisdictions have recognized that categorical requests for "all documents" may be unreasonable. See, e.g., Cherenfant v. Nationwide Credit,

Inc., 2004 WL 5313965, at *7 (S.D. Fla. May 10, 2004) (finding request that called for “all documents that refer, relate or pertain to” the number of individuals employed by Defendant would pose an undue burden on Defendant “when all that is relevant is a numerical figure”); In re Urethane Antitrust Litig., 2008 WL 110896, at *1 (D. Kan. Jan. 8, 2008) (holding that “A request that seeks all documents ‘pertaining to’ or ‘concerning’ a broad range of items ‘requires the respondent either to guess or move through mental gymnastics . . . to determine which of many pieces of paper may conceivably contain some detail, either obvious or hidden, within the scope of the request.’” (internal citation omitted)).

Rather than say why it needs “all documents” relating to costs, CPH misstates the substance of Morgan Stanley’s responses and ignores its comprehensive production of documents.

I. Morgan Stanley Has Produced Documents Concerning The Reasonableness and Necessity of Its Bond Costs, Including Documents Regarding Potential Alternatives

The appellate supersedeas bond was necessary because CPH rejected Morgan Stanley’s request that it waive the bond requirement and attempted to attach Morgan Stanley’s assets following entry of judgment. CPH’s challenge to the sufficiency of the discovery responses regarding the reasonableness of the nearly $9 million bond costs is marked by misstatements.

First, CPH wrongly asserts that Morgan Stanley is “entirely unwilling to produce documents that would shed light on whether such costs were reasonable . . . [by] refusing to provide all documents relating to its investigation and analyses, if any, of other bond alternatives” (Motion at 6). In fact, Morgan Stanley confirmed to CPH, prior to the filing of its Motion to Compel, that it had agreed to produce, and in fact had already produced, documents relating to potential alternative bond arrangements.

In response to CPH's Request for Production No. 8 for "documents relating to any consideration or analysis by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of forms or sources of security for the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment other than the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account," Morgan Stanley agreed to "make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents responsive to [that] Request." See Ex. B (Morgan Stanley's Response to CPH's Requests for Production at 12-13 (emphasis supplied)). Similarly, Morgan Stanley agreed to produce "communications between [Morgan Stanley and its insurance broker] EG Bowman discussing or referring to the supersedeas bonds." Id. at 9 (Response to Request for Production No. 4). Thus, in at least two responses, Morgan Stanley agreed to produce documents relating to alternative security arrangements. That is confirmed by the documents produced, which include: (1) surety proposals and surveys of the market's capacity to bond CPH's judgment; (2) emails between E.G. Bowman and AIG, Liberty Mutual, Chubb, St. Paul/Travelers and Safeco regarding the surety providers' proposals to insure the supersedeas bond; (3) meeting notices demonstrating that Morgan Stanley consulted with numerous providers before ultimately choosing AIG; (4) internal Morgan Stanley emails regarding available escrow agents, including the Bank of New York and JPMorgan Chase; (5) internal Morgan Stanley communications concerning other options such as utilizing a letter of credit, collateral pool or cash reserves. See Exs. C-G.

Second, Morgan Stanley's bond-related expense responses were not improperly limited by its use of "sufficient to show." For example, Morgan Stanley provided the documents showing the amount it claimed for bond premiums, broker commissions, and escrow fees, as well as the timing of the release of the bond and escrow accounts and the documents reflecting payment. See Ex. B at 5-7, 9, 10, 12 (Responses to Request Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, and 7). That all relates to the actual amount and payment of bond-related costs and is “sufficient to show” the information that allows CPH to assess the reasonableness and necessity of those costs. Accounting documents, internal tracking records and escrow transaction memos do not relate to reasonableness and necessity.

The few “sufficient to show” responses pose no real limitation on Morgan Stanley’s overall response. See Ex. B at 7 (Morgan Stanley Response to Request for Production No. 3, stating that it will produce, among other things, “documents sufficient to show its efforts to obtain a supersedeas bond in this matter”); id. at 10 (Morgan Stanley’s Response to Request for Production No. 5, stating that it would produce documents “sufficient to show how the Bank of New York was selected as an escrow agent.”). Because Morgan Stanley agreed, in its Response to Request for Production No. 8, discussed above, to make a reasonable effort to identify and produce documents relating to any “consideration or analysis . . . of forms or sources of security” other than the bonds and escrow account ultimately utilized (id. at 12-13), CPH has, or will have, the necessary documents. CPH has received voluminous documents relating to deliberations and communications with third parties concerning alternative security arrangements, as well as those concerning the security Morgan Stanley actually obtained.

There is no principled basis to claim that Morgan Stanley has improperly withheld documents concerning that issue and the demand for additional documents in response to Requests for Production Nos. 3-7 should be denied.

II. Morgan Stanley Has Produced Responsive Documents Concerning The Reasonableness and Necessity of Its Trial Costs, Most of Which Mirror Costs Previously Claimed by CPH

The demands for “all” documents concerning trial costs are devoid of merit. Documents reflecting requests to secure transcription and copying services, correspondence transmitting invoices, records tracking invoices or payments, and queries regarding payment status are irrelevant to reasonableness or necessity. And in order to collect and produce “all” such materials, Morgan Stanley would have to search the records of dozens of outside attorneys, paralegals, and accounting employees. The documents already produced show the trial costs, their payment and their obvious necessity.

First, CPH contends that Morgan Stanley has refused to produce documents concerning the “nature” of mediation costs and expert witness fees because it has agreed to produce only documents “sufficient to show” the amount of those costs. (Motion at 7 (discussing Request for Production Nos. 9 and 10)). Morgan Stanley has produced invoices regarding both categories of expenses, see Exs. H, I (selected invoices), and CPH knows the “nature” of the charges because CPH participated in mediation, shared the expenses equally, and sought to recover nearly the identical amount in mediation costs from Morgan Stanley. See Ex. A.

Similarly, CPH knows the nature of Morgan Stanley’s expert witness fees. In addition to having received the expert invoices identifying the fees, see Ex. I, CPH received expert reports from and deposed Morgan Stanley’s experts. CPH does not identify any particular expert cost for which it needs additional information. Indeed, CPH sought almost $200,000 more in expert witness fees than Morgan Stanley is now seeking. See Ex. A.

Second, CPH incorrectly claims that Morgan Stanley has refused to produce records regarding the payment of trial and deposition transcript expenses because it has limited its responses to documents “sufficient to show” the amount of those costs. (Motion at 7 (discussing Request for Production Nos. 11 and 12)). Morgan Stanley has produced hundreds of pages of payment confirmations for such expenses, including copies of checks and accounting records confirming payment. See Ex. J (selected payment records for deposition and trial transcripts). The contention that there is a refusal to produce shows a failure to review Morgan Stanley’s production, or disregard for what was actually produced. In either case, CPH is wrong to assert that such documents were withheld, and fails to show why “all documents,” even those that have nothing to do with reasonableness or necessity, are required.

Finally, CPH complains that Morgan Stanley has refused to produce records relating to whether costs for “copying, imaging, and coding” documents related to “materials actually . . . produced to CPH.” (Motion at 7 (discussing Request for Production No. 13)). Wrong again. The copying, imaging and coding costs relate to the processing of documents produced by CPH and third parties. And CPH has knowledge of its own and third party document productions, and the format in which CPH chose to produce its documents. It knows that some costs were incurred pursuant to an agreement early in the litigation to share certain photocopying costs through a joint vendor. See Ex. K (Compulit cost sharing agreement). Thus, while claiming it requires “all” documents regarding Morgan Stanley’s trial costs, CPH provides no reason for “all” and fails to acknowledge the thousands of pages of documents it has received. CPH's demand for the production of "all documents" in response to Requests for Production Nos. 9-13 should also be denied.

III. Morgan Stanley Is Not Hiding Documents

CPH says that that Morgan Stanley "appears to be hiding something[,] again invoking the "sufficient to show" response. (Motion at 8 (discussing Request for Production No. 17)). There is no "hiding." Morgan Stanley has searched to identify documents regarding the reasonableness and necessity of the incurred costs and has produced thousands of pages of such documents. CPH's overbroad discovery requests should not create manufactured discovery disputes, especially where the parties shared trial experience and the similarity of costs support the necessity and reasonableness of Morgan Stanley's costs.

IV. Morgan Stanley's General Objections Are Appropriate

CPH's position that all of Morgan Stanley's responses are "taint[ed]" by its "General Objections" is also without basis. (Motion at 9). Where Morgan Stanley responded to a specific request for production "subject to" its General Objections it has, in each instance, specified the scope of its response. CPH does not claim any actual confusion as a result of this formulation. Indeed, prior to CPH filing its Motion to Compel, Morgan Stanley offered to clarify any perceived ambiguity, stating in a letter: "[t]o the extent there are specific responses where CPH believes it needs clarification as to the scope, we are happy to address such inquires." CPH did not seek any clarification.

CPH's position now is at odds with its own discovery practice of offering "Initial Objections" and then responding "Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections.” See, e.g., Ex. L (CPH’s May 12, 2004 Responses and Objections to Morgan Stanley’s Seventh Request for Production of Documents). As CPH concedes, both by its own practice and its motion, this is a common (and proper) approach to preserving objections to document requests. (Motion at 9).

Having failed to identify any actual “ambiguity” created by Morgan Stanley’s assertion of General Objections, and having failed to seek clarification as the spirit of the rules require, CPH has no basis to insist that Morgan Stanley identify categories of documents that it has declined to search for and produce.

V. Morgan Stanley Is Not Required to Produce A Privilege Log for Clearly Privileged Communications At This Point

CPH’s complaint that Morgan Stanley does not intend to identify in its privilege log “clearly privileged communications,” is at odds both with CPH’s prior practice and a prior order of the Court. But to begin with, any discussion of a privilege log is premature.

A party is required to file a log only if the information is “otherwise discoverable.” Where a party claims that the production of the documents is burdensome and harassing, such as was done here, the scope of the discovery is at issue. Until the court rules on the request, the party responding to the discovery does not know what will fall into the category of discoverable documents

Once the objection is ruled upon and the court determines what information is “otherwise discoverable,” then the party must file a privilege log reciting which documents are privileged.

Gosman v. Luzinski, 937 So. 2d 293, 296 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006); see also Life Care Centers of America v. Reese, 948 So. 2d 830, 833 (Fla. 5th DCA 2007) (quoting Gosman).

Beyond that, CPH's prior discovery responses routinely included an "Initial Objection" that excluded outside counsel for CPH from Morgan Stanley's definitions, enabling CPH to limit the scope of its privilege logs so as to exclude material from its counsel. See e.g., Ex. M (CPH's April 9, 2004 Objections to Morgan Stanley's Sixth Request for Production of Documents). Indeed, the parties previously agreed, with the Court's consent, that the types of clearly privileged communications Morgan Stanley has identified would not be included in privilege logs. See Ex. N (Sept. 4, 2003 Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time to Prepare Privilege Log).

Morgan Stanley's position is particularly appropriate given the limited scope of the matter now before the Court and CPH's overbroad discovery requests which encompass unquestionably privileged material. For example, under CPH's "all documents" regime, Morgan Stanley would have to log a host of privileged communications with and among its counsel relating to the process, timing and necessity of securing a bond. Those privileged communications are not probative because the necessity and timing for securing a bond cannot be disputed by CPH.

CONCLUSION

The issues are simple. Were the costs reasonable? Were they necessary? Were they paid? Morgan Stanley agreed to provide, and has provided, the documents that address those issues. The Court should deny CPH's Motion to Compel Production of Cost-Related Documents.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE 15TH
JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN AND FOR
PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

CASE NO.: CA 03-5045 (AJ)

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,
Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S RESPONSE TO COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S REQUESTS FOR
PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.350, hereby responds to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH's") Requests For Production of Documents as follows:

By making these responses, Morgan Stanley does not concede that the information sought or provided is relevant to the subject matter of this or any action or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley's responses are made intending to preserve and preserving:

- (a) The right to object, on any grounds, to the use of the responses in any subsequent proceedings in this or any action;
- (b) The right to object to introduction into evidence of these responses or documents provided in response to the Requests; and
- (c) The right to object, on any grounds at any time, to other requests or discovery demands involving documents produced in response to the Requests.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests including, without limitation, the instructions and definitions therein, to the extent they purport to impose on Morgan Stanley obligations beyond those imposed by the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, and any other applicable law or rule.

2. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek documents and/or information that are not within Morgan Stanley's possession, custody or control; that are already available to CPH; that are available from public, court, or agency records, or otherwise in the public domain and accessible to all parties.

3. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek identification and disclosure of information that is irrelevant, immaterial, or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

4. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are oppressive, overbroad, unreasonably cumulative, duplicative, and unduly burdensome, particularly to the extent that they seek "all" documents relating to a particular subject matter.

5. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek the disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product doctrine, or any other privilege or protection from disclosure. Morgan Stanley hereby claims such privileges and protections to the extent implicated by each Request and excludes privileged and protected information from its responses to the Requests. Inadvertent production of any such information shall not constitute a waiver of any privilege or protection from disclosure as to that information or any related information. As set forth in this Response, Morgan Stanley objects to the overbroad nature of these requests especially since the only issue before the Court is the amount of taxable costs to be awarded to Morgan Stanley. Pursuant to the Fourth District's decision in Gosman v. Luzinski, 937 So. 2d 293 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006), Morgan Stanley hereby requests an extension of thirty (30) days to prepare its privilege log from the date on which the Court, if necessary, resolves Morgan Stanley's other objections to the Requests. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged communications between Morgan Stanley's attorneys (including both its in-house counsel and outside counsel) and Morgan Stanley employees that may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs. In fact, the parties previously agreed, and the Court ordered, that the parties were "not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involved privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transaction at issue in this case." 9/4/2003 Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time to Prepare Privilege Log. Morgan Stanley also objects to the production of a privilege log for clearly privileged materials such as work product created by in-house counsel or outside counsel while preparing the cost motions. Such materials may "relate" in some way to the claimed costs, but are clearly protected by the work product doctrine. To require a privilege log of these categories of materials would be unduly burdensome and harassing, especially in the context of the narrow issue before the Court, and would necessarily reveal the work product of counsel for Morgan Stanley.

6. Morgan Stanley objects to the definitions of the terms "Morgan Stanley," "You," and "Your" contained in the Requests to the extent they purport to define an entity other than Morgan Stanley and/or purport to impose obligations on Morgan Stanley beyond providing information that is in the possession, custody, or control of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley further objects to the definitions of these terms to the extent they purport to refer to actions taken by "any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf" that were not taken at the direction of Morgan Stanley.

7. The responses to the Requests shall not be construed in any way as an admission that any definition provided by CPH is either factually correct or legally binding upon Morgan Stanley, or as a waiver of any of Morgan Stanley's objections.

8. Morgan Stanley's Specific Responses and Objections to the individual Requests shall be deemed to incorporate, and shall not be deemed a waiver of, these General Objections.

9. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they are compound, phrased disjunctively or conjunctively, and include subparts in such a manner that they are unduly burdensome, confusing, or cannot be reasonably answered.

10. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests, definitions, and instructions to the extent they seek information that is not known or reasonably available to Morgan Stanley.

11. Morgan Stanley's objection to a Request or agreement to produce responsive documents in response to a Request is not and should not be construed as an admission that any particular information or category of information exists.

12. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they seek a legal theory or conclusion or seek documents relating to Morgan Stanley's entitlement to, as opposed to the reasonableness of, its trial costs. See J. Robin L. Rosenberg's 6/11/08 Order granting Morgan Stanley's Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs as to the issue of entitlement and reserving ruling on the issue of reasonableness.

13. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent they are harassing in the context of the narrow issue before the Court and seek information that is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence relevant to the cost motions presently pending before the Court. Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to support the amount of costs that Morgan Stanley is entitled to recover in this action as the prevailing party. CPH's attempt in the Requests to obtain every piece of paper that "relates" to the claimed costs is overbroad and harassing.

14. Morgan Stanley objects to the Requests to the extent that they do not contain any time period limitation. With respect to requests seeking communications concerning the determination of the premiums and costs associated with the Main Appeal Bond, the Cost Appeal Bond and the Escrow Account, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between January 1, 2005 and June 30, 2005. With respect to trial costs, Morgan Stanley will conduct a reasonable search for responsive (as limited by the specific responses and objections below) non-privileged communications sent or received between May 8, 2003 and March 31, 2006.

RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1

All documents that were a source of information used in preparing the Costs Motions.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 1:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it is overbroad. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that were used to substantiate the individual line item costs contained in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

All documents relating to payment of or any reimbursement for payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motion, including but not limited to invoices, canceled checks, wire confirmations, bank statements, receipts, ledger entries, and accounting records.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 2:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the payment of the costs detailed in the Costs Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices, checks or check stubs, and wire transfer confirmations sufficient to show payments made by Morgan Stanley or its counsel for costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions. Coleman's attempt to obtain categories of documents like "ledger entries" and "accounting records" is not only vague, ambiguous, and overbroad, but also goes well beyond a reasonable calculation of what is necessary to contest the claimed costs. To the extent that this request seeks further categories of documents, it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of premiums, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of premiums charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- b. the amount of premiums paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund in premiums in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker relating to the cost or amount of premiums quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker from any insurance company, financial institution, or other entity of the cost or amount of premiums associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment; or

- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley or any insurance broker of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 3:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the bond premiums claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Specifically, Morgan Stanley will produce invoices and wire transfer information sufficient to show the cost of the bond premiums, the payment of the bond premiums, and the refund of certain bond premiums. However, Morgan Stanley objects to producing "all" documents "relating" to the bond premiums because it is simply an attempt to harass Morgan Stanley with overbroad requests that will force Morgan Stanley to incur additional costs. Further, Morgan Stanley has undertaken a reasonable investigation regarding non-privileged documents sufficient to show its efforts to obtain a supersedeas bond in this matter and will produce the documents it has located after a reasonable search.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of broker commissions, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of broker commissions charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;

- b. the amount of broker commissions paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any refund of broker commissions in connection with the Costs Appeal Bond or the Main Appeal Bond;
- e. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of broker commissions quoted, estimated, or charged by any insurance company or agency or any other entity in connection with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- f. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any insurance company or agency or any other entity of the cost or amount of broker commissions associated with a bond or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- g. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate; or
- h. all communications and all documents referencing communications relating to discounts, rebates, refunds, trade-offs, barbers, or other exchange of consideration of any kind concerning commissions, bond premiums, or any other payment sent or received in relation to the Costs Judgment, the Main Judgment, the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Escrow Account, or any other bond, escrow account, or other security for the payment of the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 4:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan

Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the broker commissions claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and EG Bowman discussing or referring to the supersedeas bonds filed in this action. Coleman's attempt to obtain a broader range of documents is simply a fishing expedition designed to harass Morgan Stanley and add to the costs of this limited cost proceeding.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount charged to Morgan Stanley, or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf, in connection with the Escrow Account;
- b. the amount paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley in connection with the Escrow Account;
- c. the identity of each payor and each recipient of any such payment;
- d. any discount, rebate, refund, trade-off, barter, or other exchange of consideration of any kind in connection with the Escrow Account;
- e. any amount held in the Escrow Account;
- f. any request or demand by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley, the Bank of New York, or any other person or entity for the creation of an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- g. any discussion or analysis of such a request or demand;

- h. any communication concerning and any description or discussion of how the costs associated with the Escrow Account were calculated or derived;
- i. any inquiry or investigation undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley relating to the cost or amount of fees quoted, estimated, or charged by any financial institution or other entity in connection with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeals Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment;
- j. any quote or estimate received by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley from any financial institution or other entity of the cost or amount of fees associated with an escrow account relating to the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, the Costs Judgment, or the Main Judgment; or
- k. any comparison or other analysis undertaken by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of any such quote or estimate.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 5:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of the escrow account costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions. Further, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce communications between it and the Bank of New York relating to the costs of the Escrow Account. Morgan Stanley will also produce documents sufficient to show how the Bank of New York was selected as an escrow agent. However, Coleman's attempt to obtain every piece of paper relating to the Escrow Account is simply overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this limited cost proceeding. The only relevant information about the Escrow Account in this limited cost proceeding is the amount of the fees paid to the Bank of New York so they could manage the Escrow Account required to obtain the supersedeas bond.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

All documents relating to any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and E.G. Bowman Co., Inc., The Bank of New York, Safeco Insurance Co., or AIG, relating to:

- a. a bond, escrow account, or other form of security relating to the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment;
- b. the Costs Appeal Bond;
- c. the Main Appeal Bond;
- d. the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 6:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce documents constituting communications between the entities referred to in this request that discuss or refer to the determination of the amount of the bond premiums and escrow account fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the affidavits supporting its Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

All documents relating to the release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account, including but not limited to documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 7:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the date on which Morgan Stanley first requested a release, discharge, closing, or cancellation of the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account and documents sufficient to show the date on which such release, discharge, closing, or cancellation was affected.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

All documents relating to any consideration or analysis by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley of forms or sources of security for the Costs Judgment or the Main Judgment other than the Costs Appeal Bond, the Main Appeal Bond, or the Escrow Account.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 8:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of mediation, including but not limited to:

- a. the amount and nature of mediation costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount and nature of mediation costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 9:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of mediation costs that Coleman itself claimed when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of mediation costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of expert fees, excluding copies of expert reports and expert deposition transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of expert fees charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of expert fees paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity relating to the amount, nature, or payment of expert fees;
- d. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to expert depositions;
- e. the purpose for which any such expert deposition was used in this Action;
- f. whether any of the expert fees for which costs are claimed by Morgan Stanley are attributable to the preparation of a court-ordered report; or
- g. the purpose for which any such court-ordered report was used in this Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 10:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH regarding the "nature" of the expert costs incurred by Morgan Stanley. After years of litigation, Coleman is well aware of the purpose to which the expert reports and testimony were used by Morgan Stanley. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents

sufficient to show the amount of expert fees claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the expert witness invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of hearing and trial transcripts, excluding copies of such transcripts, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs charged to Morgan Stanley or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of hearing or trial transcript costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 11:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for all the hearings in this case as well as the trial. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of trial transcripts and hearing transcripts when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of hearing and trial transcript costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the hearing and trial transcript invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of deposition transcripts and videotapes, excluding copies of such transcripts and videotapes, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf; or
- b. the amount of deposition transcript or videotape costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 12:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH was present for the depositions reflected in the materials supporting Morgan Stanley's Cost Motions. In fact, CPH sought recovery for the costs of depositions when it was the prevailing party. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of deposition transcript and videotape costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the deposition invoices paid on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

All documents relating to Morgan Stanley's claim for taxation of the cost of discovery imaging and coding or document production and management, excluding copies of the documents that were imaged, coded, produced, or managed, and including but not limited to documents relating to:

- a. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs charged to Morgan Stanley or to any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf;
- b. the amount and nature of the discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs paid by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley;
- c. any communication between Morgan Stanley (or any person or entity acting on Morgan Stanley's behalf) and any other person or entity, including but not limited to any communication between Morgan Stanley and Compulit, relating to the amount, nature, or payment of discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs;
- d. whether any of the documents as to which such costs were incurred were actually filed with the court in this Action;
- e. whether, for each document as to which such costs were incurred, such document was actually produced to CPH;
- f. whether any of the claimed discovery imaging or coding or document production and management costs constituted the action cost of copies obtained in discovery;
- g. whether there were discounts, based on volume or otherwise, available to or used by Morgan Stanley or its lawyers or law firms relating to discovery imaging or coding or document production and management (including but not limited to copying of documents); or
- h. whether any effort was made by or on behalf of Morgan Stanley to determine whether lower prices for the discovery- or document-related tasks for which costs are claimed were available from vendors other than those who were used to carry out the tasks.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 13:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. CPH is aware of what documents it produced and the copying, imaging and coding arrangement with Compulit. Further, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence since Morgan Stanley's claim only seeks to recoup those costs associated with discovery imaging and coding.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents sufficient to show the amount of discovery imaging and coding costs claimed by Morgan Stanley in the Cost Motions in the form of the invoices paid by Morgan Stanley for such costs.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, relating to costs claimed by Morgan Stanley relating to electronic discovery, including but not limited to costs relating to any search for electronically stored documents, any review or production of such documents, or any outside experts or consultants involved in any tasks relating to electronic discovery.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 14:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks irrelevant documents not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence because Morgan Stanley is not claiming electronic discovery costs in the Cost Motions. To the extent that this Request targets the Compulit costs claimed by Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley objects to it as duplicative of Request 13.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

All documents relating to any effort to obtain, the results of any effort to obtain, or the receipt of any economic benefit, consideration, or other advantage of any kind in exchange for agreeing to or having agreed to do business with any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 15:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

All documents relating to any gift received by Morgan Stanley from any person or entity to whom payment was made for which Morgan Stanley now seeks reimbursement in the form of a costs award.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 16:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley responds that it is not aware of any documents that are responsive to this Request.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

All documents, excluding copies of deposition transcripts, deposition videotapes, trial transcripts, and documents produced or obtained in prior discovery in the Action, that may tend to support or refute the assertion in the Costs Motions and supporting affidavits that the claimed costs were reasonable and necessary to the defense of the Action.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION NO. 17:

Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Morgan Stanley further objects to the extent that this Request seeks a legal theory or conclusion and to the extent it seeks information that is already available to CPH. In addition, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent it requires the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and/or the attorney work product doctrine. Lastly, Morgan Stanley objects to the term "refute" as vague and ambiguous because it can have very different meanings to CPH and Morgan Stanley in this context.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections and the General Objections, Morgan Stanley will make reasonable efforts to identify and produce non-privileged documents that Morgan Stanley believes are sufficient to support the costs itemized in the affidavits filed in support of the Cost Motions.

Subject: Morgan Stanley - Large Appeal Bond

Myrna,

Per our phone conversation, we are prepared to write 1) a $750mm stand-alone, sole surety appeal bond (no co-surety or reinsurance arrangement) fully collateralized with an escrow type arrangement through Smith Barney. There are no set-up fees and there are investment elections such as a Smith Barney Money Market Fund, U.S. Treasuries or Government Agencies as well as two other options. Rate will be $3/m net. 2) As an alternative, we are also willing to write a $150mm sole surety appeal bond (again, no co-surety or reinsurance arrangement) fully collateralized in the form of a Letter of Credit. The Letter of Credit format is attached and it must be drawn on an approved bank acceptable to the St. Paul Travelers. Rate will be $2.50/m net. If this option is elected, you will need to let us know ahead of time which bank MS is planning to use. If the Smith Barney route is preferred, we will put MS in touch with the Smith Barney representative.

<<ILOC-TRAVELERS (S-2428)02-05.doc>>

This, of course, is subject to a completed General Contract of Indemnity (Form B) to which MS made some changes via an Addendum. Our legal department has reviewed these changes and has accepted items 1, 2 and 6. However, they would like items 3 and 4 removed and the following wording in item 5 removed "and 12 and the last sentence of paragraph 7". In other words, item 5 should be modified as follows: "The second sentence of the Paragraph 2(b) in the "Representations of Fact" and Paragraphs 4(a)(1), 4(a)(2), 4 (b), 10 in the "Promises and Agreements" of the Agreement are deleted. As a further condition to agreeing to remove paragraph 10 from the Promises and Agreement section of the GCI-B (which item 5 in the Addendum does) we must receive 100% collateral in the form of an acceptable Letter of Credit. A copy of the GCI-B and the Addendum are attached for easy referencing.

<<MS Addendum to GCI-B and GCI-B.pdf>>

Please discuss these options with MS and let us know which is preferred.

I want to take this opportunity to personally thank you and MS for your patience while this was being reviewed by senior management.

Zakia, Christina, Lorna,

Below for your review is another option offered by AIG for the above.

Another option Morgan Stanley should consider is placing the collateral in escrow. We traditionally use The Bank of New York as our escrow agent. There would be a general fee which Morgan Stanley would pay directly to the escrow agent and a management fee paid to AIG (management fee would be based on a % of assets held in trust). However, this may better suit Morgan Stanley's needs due to the size of the obligation.

Attached is a sample escrow agreement.

Dear Ms. Gaskin:

Thank you for considering the services of AIG Surety with respects to the captioned potential bond.

In our discussions you informed that the principal, Morgan Stanley, is testing the surety marketplace to see if there is enough capacity to underwrite a $4 billion obligation. The short answer is, in theory, yes there is sufficient capacity, however the obligation would require a minimum of 100% in collateral. The collateral required would be in the form of an irrevocable letter of credit. Deviations from this form of collateral may cause the collateral requirement to exceed 100% of the bonded obligation.

Prior to the approval or issuance of any bond, a full underwriting review would need to be conducted. This review would include, but may not be limited to, a financial review and credit worthiness review of the principal, a review of the associated court documents, an acceptable bond form, etc.

Kevin M. Maroney

Myrna:

As we discussed, in the past, for companies with very strong credit profiles, we've been able to offer capacity up to $1BB for an appeal bond, on a fully collateralized basis. We advise you of this simply to give you an idea of what Liberty could be capable of. In the specific case of Morgan Stanley, we'd of course need to perform our standard underwriting, assess the company's overall current position, and have a meeting, before we could commit to being able to provide any capacity.

If you have any questions, please call me. Also, please advise whether we should move forward to begin our underwriting process.

Thank you.

Myrna,

I spoke with my H.O about capacity and rate. While it's hard to say exactly where we will end up (which is why I have been reluctant to speak on this issue), we do want to provide whatever guidance we can. That said, we can imagine our comfort level may be in the area of $200mm with a rate range of maybe $5/m to 7.50 /m. This will depend on overall size of the obligation and other issues.

As for indemnity, we are reluctant to do a separate indemnity for this bond. We already have a valid one that would apply to this bond and we feel that a second one would confuse our indemnity picture. What exactly is it about the one we have in effect that concerns them on this large obligation?

Myrna,

I have attached a Confidentiality Agreement that we have executed in the past. If we were able to sign anything, it would be this form or something similar. Please pass this on to Morgan Stanley for their review. We are willing to offer approximately $300,000,000 without collateral, a higher amount with collateral. As far as rate, that is something we would consider after reviewing the case and obligation. In the past we have supported similar type obligations for A rated customers using a $3-4 rate (uncollateralized).

Thanks,

Hello Myrna,

I have scheduled meetings with the insurers as follows:

Monday, April 25th, 2p.m. – 750 7th Avenue, 33rd Floor, Conference Room A

- 3- Liberty - attending- Kimberly Ostrin and Craig Gortner
- 4- Chubb- conference call- Michael Simmons and Chris Parker
- 5- Travellers- attending Richard Garone and Bernadette Gonsalves-Leitch
- 4- Safeco - attending Vito Sancillia
- ACE - still awaiting a response
- 2- Hartford - conference call John MacDonald
- 6- Zurich

Wednesday, April 27th, 3p.m. – 750 7th Avenue, 29th Floor, Conference Room 1
AIG

Although we prefer the insurers to attend in person, should anyone find themselves unable to do so, the call in numbers for these meetings are:

866-367-6769 (National)
646-441-1005 (International)
866335 - Passcode

Please note, AIG will be the only insurer to attend the Wednesday meeting. All other insurers will be attending the Monday meeting. For security purposes, can you kindly send me a list of the individuals who will be attending both meetings. Besides yourself, please feel free to invite Donna Payne should you find it necessary for her to be there. Also, it may be a good idea, for the Monday meeting, if you could arrive at least a half hour early, so we can have a mini meeting before the big meeting.

Please feel free to call me with any questions.

Myrna,

As per our telephone conversation this afternoon, can you kindly arrange a sit down meeting with the Underwriters who have given us quotations for the Florida surety bond. This meeting will consist of a presentation by Alan Scheurer, Treasurer, on Morgan Stanley's financial condition, and to answer any questions the insurers may have. If possible, please have them forward their list of questions to you by Friday so Mr. Scheurer will be able to address them at the meeting.

Mr. Scheurer is available between noon and four, so 2p.m. may be a good time for the meeting. Of course, should this time be difficult, we do have the flexibility of choosing a time in the noon to four time frame.

Can you also please send me the names of the underwriters, their insurance company and location? Besides needing this information for security purposes when they attend the meeting, I will need this information to set up a conference line should anyone be unable to attend in person. As this matter is urgent, I would appreciate it if you can give me some indication as to the insurers availability by early afternoon on Friday.

You may recall from my email on Friday that JPMC had sent over a litigation escrow agreement. I now understand from Eduardo that a direct agreement negotiated with the Plaintiff could be a possibility once a judgment is determined so I wanted to circulate their agreement to this group for comment.

Separately, I heard from JPMC today that the fees they would charge on such an arrangement would be as low as zero. Under a straight cash deposit option, they would pay us a rate of Effective Fed Funds minus 3 basis points as they are able to generate an acceptable spread gain with this setup. No other fees would apply. If we deposited securities instead of cash, an escrow account fee would apply but is likely to be in the 2 to 3 bps range.

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Regards,

Kevin

LITIGATION ESCROW AGREEMENT

Escrow Agreement dated as of the effective date (the "Effective Date") set forth on schedule 1 attached hereto ("Schedule 1") by and among the Plaintiff identified on Schedule 1 (the "Plaintiff"), the Defendant identified on Schedule 1 (the "Defendant") and JPMorgan Chase Bank, as escrow agent hereunder (the "Escrow Agent").

WHEREAS, the Plaintiff and the Defendant pursuant to [Describe Litigation] have agreed to deposit in escrow certain funds and wish such deposit to be subject to the terms and conditions set forth herein.

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and of the mutual covenants hereinafter set forth, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. Appointment. The Plaintiff and Defendant hereby appoint the Escrow Agent as their escrow agent for the purposes set forth herein, and the Escrow Agent hereby accepts such appointment under the terms and conditions set forth herein.

2. Escrow Fund. Simultaneous with the execution and delivery of this Escrow Agreement, the Defendant is depositing with the Escrow Agent the sum indicated as the escrow deposit on Schedule 1 (the "Escrow Deposit"). The Escrow Agent shall hold the Escrow Deposit and, subject to the terms and conditions hereof, shall invest and reinvest the Escrow Deposit and the proceeds thereof (the "Escrow Fund") as directed in Section 3.

3. Investment of Escrow Fund. During the term of this Escrow Agreement, the Escrow Fund shall be invested and reinvested by the Escrow Agent in the investment indicated on Schedule 1 or such other investments as shall be directed in writing by the Plaintiff and the Defendant and as shall be acceptable to the Escrow Agent. All investment orders involving U.S. Treasury obligations, commercial paper and other direct investments will be executed through JPMorgan Fleming Asset Management (JPMFAM), in the investment management division of JPMorgan Chase. Subject to principles of best execution, transactions are effected on behalf of the Escrow Fund through broker-dealers selected by JPMFAM. In this regard, JPMFAM seeks to attain the best overall result for the Escrow Fund, taking into consideration quality of service and reliability. An agency fee will be assessed in connection with each transaction. Periodic statements will be provided to Plaintiff and Defendant reflecting transactions executed on behalf of the Escrow Fund. The Plaintiff and Defendant, upon written request, will receive a statement of transaction details upon completion of any securities transaction in the Escrow Fund without any additional cost. The Escrow Agent shall have the right to liquidate any investments held in order to provide funds necessary to make required payments under this Escrow Agreement. The Escrow Agent shall have no liability for any loss sustained as a result of any investment in an investment indicated on Schedule 1 or any investment made pursuant to the instructions of the parties hereto or as a result of any liquidation of any investment prior to its maturity or for the failure of the parties to give the Escrow Agent instructions to invest or reinvest the Escrow Fund.

4. Disposition and Termination. The Escrow Agent shall deliver the Escrow Fund upon, and pursuant to, either:
i. An court order certified by counsel to the presenting party to be final and non-appealable, or
ii. The joint written instructions of Plaintiff and Defendant.

Upon delivery of the Escrow Fund by the Escrow Agent, this Escrow Agreement shall terminate, subject to the provisions of Section 8.

5. Escrow Agent. The Escrow Agent undertakes to perform only such duties as are expressly set forth herein and no duties shall be implied. The Escrow Agent shall have no liability under and no duty to inquire as to the provisions of any agreement other than this Escrow Agreement. The Escrow Agent may rely upon and shall not be liable for acting or refraining from acting upon any written notice, instruction or request furnished to it hereunder and believed by it to be genuine and to have been signed or presented by the proper party or parties. The Escrow Agent shall be under no duty to inquire into or investigate the validity, accuracy or content of any such document. The Escrow Agent shall have no duty to solicit any payments which may be due it or the Escrow Fund. The Escrow

Agent shall not be liable for any action taken or omitted by it in good faith except to the extent that a court of competent jurisdiction determines that the Escrow Agent's gross negligence or willful misconduct was the primary cause of any loss to the Plaintiff or Defendant. The Escrow Agent may execute any of its powers and perform any of its duties hereunder directly or through agents or attorneys (and shall be liable only for the careful selection of any such agent or attorney) and may consult with counsel, accountants and other skilled persons to be selected and retained by it. The Escrow Agent shall not be liable for anything done, suffered or omitted in good faith by it in accordance with the advice or opinion of any such counsel, accountants or other skilled persons. In the event that the Escrow Agent shall be uncertain as to its duties or rights hereunder or shall receive instructions, claims or demands from any party hereto which, in its opinion, conflict with any of the provisions of this Escrow Agreement, it shall be entitled to refrain from taking any action and its sole obligation shall be to keep safely all property held in escrow until it shall be directed otherwise in writing by all of the other parties hereto or by a final order or judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. Anything in this Escrow Agreement to the contrary notwithstanding, in no event shall the Escrow Agent be liable for special, indirect or consequential loss or damage of any kind whatsoever (including but not limited to lost profits), even if the Escrow Agent has been advised of the likelihood of such loss or damage and regardless of the form of action.

6. Succession. The Escrow Agent may resign and be discharged from its duties or obligations hereunder by giving 10 days advance notice in writing of such resignation to the other parties hereto specifying a date when such resignation shall take effect. The Escrow Agent shall have the right to withhold an amount equal to any amount due and owing to the Escrow Agent, plus any costs and expenses the Escrow Agent shall reasonably believe may be incurred by the Escrow Agent in connection with the termination of the Escrow Agreement. Any corporation or association into which the Escrow Agent may be merged or converted or with which it may be consolidated, or any corporation or association to which all or substantially all the escrow business of the Escrow Agent's corporate trust line of business may be transferred, shall be the Escrow Agent under this Escrow Agreement without further act.

7. Fees. The Plaintiff and Defendant agree jointly and severally to (i) pay the Escrow Agent upon execution of this Escrow Agreement and from time to time thereafter reasonable compensation for the services to be rendered hereunder, which unless otherwise agreed in writing shall be as described in Schedule 1 attached hereto, and (ii) pay or reimburse the Escrow Agent upon request for all expenses, disbursements and advances, including reasonable attorney's fees and expenses, incurred or made by it in connection with the preparation, execution, performance, delivery, modification and termination of this Escrow Agreement.

8. Indemnity. The Plaintiff and the Defendant shall jointly and severally indemnify, defend and save harmless the Escrow Agent and its directors, officers, agents and employees (the "indemnitees") from all loss, liability or expense (including the fees and expenses of in house or outside counsel) arising out of or in connection with (i) the Escrow Agent's execution and performance of this Escrow Agreement, except in the case of any indemnitee to the extent that such loss, liability or expense is due to the gross negligence or willful misconduct of such indemnitee, or (ii) its following any instructions or other directions from the Plaintiff or the Defendant, except to the extent that its following any such instruction or direction is expressly forbidden by the terms hereof. The parties hereto acknowledge that the foregoing indemnities shall survive the resignation or removal of the Escrow Agent or the termination of this Escrow Agreement. The parties hereby grant the Escrow Agent a lien on, right of set-off against and security interest in the Escrow Fund for the payment of any claim for indemnification, compensation, expenses and amounts due hereunder.

9. TINs. The Plaintiff and the Defendant each represent that its correct Taxpayer Identification Number ("TIN") assigned by the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") or any other taxing authority is set forth in Schedule 1. Upon execution of this Agreement, the Plaintiff and Defendant shall provide the Escrow Agent with a fully executed W-8 or W-9 IRS form, which shall include the Plaintiff's and Defendant's TIN. In addition, all interest or other income earned under the Escrow Agreement shall be allocated and/or paid as directed in a joint written direction of the Plaintiff and the Defendant and reported by the recipient to the Internal Revenue Service or any other taxing authority. Notwithstanding such written directions, Escrow Agent shall report and, as required withhold any taxes as it determines may be required by any law or regulation in effect at the time of the distribution. In the absence of timely direction, all proceeds of the Escrow Fund shall be retained in the Escrow Fund and reinvested from time to time by the Escrow Agent as provided in Section 3. In the event that any earnings remain undistributed at the end of any calendar year, Escrow Agent shall report to the Internal Revenue Service or such other authority such earnings as it deems appropriate or as required by any applicable law or regulation or, to the extent consistent therewith, as directed in writing by the Plaintiff and the Defendant. In addition, Escrow Agent shall withhold any taxes it deems appropriate and shall remit such taxes to the appropriate authorities.

10. Notices. All communications hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed to be duly given and received:

- (i) upon delivery if delivered personally or upon confirmed transmittal if by facsimile;
- (ii) on the next Business Day (as hereinafter defined) if sent by overnight courier; or
- (iii) four (4) Business Days after mailing if mailed by prepaid registered mail, return receipt requested, to the appropriate notice address set forth on Schedule 1 or at such other address as any party hereto may have furnished to the other parties in writing by registered mail, return receipt requested.

Notwithstanding the above, in the case of communications delivered to the Escrow Agent pursuant to (ii) and (iii) of this Section 10, such communications shall be deemed to have been given on the date received by the Escrow Agent. In the event that the Escrow Agent, in its sole discretion, shall determine that an emergency exists, the Escrow Agent may use such other means of communication as the Escrow Agent deems appropriate. "Business Day" shall mean any day other than a Saturday, Sunday or any other day on which the Escrow Agent located at the notice address set forth on Schedule 1 is authorized or required by law or executive order to remain closed.

11. Security Procedures. In the event funds transfer instructions are given (other than in writing at the time of execution of this Escrow Agreement, as indicated in Schedule 1 attached hereto), whether in writing, by telecopier or otherwise, the Escrow Agent is authorized to seek confirmation of such instructions by telephone call-back to the person or persons designated on schedule 2 hereto ("Schedule 2"), and the Escrow Agent may rely upon the confirmation of anyone purporting to be the person or persons so designated. The persons and telephone numbers for call-backs may be changed only in a writing actually received and acknowledged by the Escrow Agent. If the Escrow Agent is unable to contact any of the authorized representatives identified in Schedule 2, the Escrow Agent is hereby authorized to seek confirmation of such instructions by telephone call-back to any one or more of your executive officers, ("Executive Officers"), which shall include the titles of _____, as the Escrow Agent may select. Such "Executive Officer" shall deliver to the Escrow Agent a fully executed Incumbency Certificate, and the Escrow Agent may rely upon the confirmation of anyone purporting to be any such officer. The Escrow Agent and the beneficiary's bank in any funds transfer may rely solely upon any account numbers or similar identifying numbers provided by the Plaintiff or the Defendant to identify (i) the beneficiary, (ii) the beneficiary's bank, or (iii) an intermediary bank. The Escrow Agent may apply any of the escrowed funds for any payment order it executes using any such identifying number, even when its use may result in a person other than the beneficiary being paid, or the transfer of funds to a bank other than the beneficiary's bank or an intermediary bank designated. The parties to this Escrow Agreement acknowledge that these security procedures are commercially reasonable.

12. Miscellaneous. The provisions of this Escrow Agreement may be waived, altered, amended or supplemented, in whole or in part, only by a writing signed by all of the parties hereto. Neither this Escrow Agreement nor any right or interest hereunder may be assigned in whole or in part by any party, except as provided in Section 6, without the prior consent of the other parties. This Escrow Agreement shall be governed by and construed under the laws of the State of New York. Each party hereto irrevocably waives any objection on the grounds of venue, forum non-conveniens or any similar grounds and irrevocably consents to service of process by mail or in any other manner permitted by applicable law and consents to the jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of New York. The parties further hereby waive any right to a trial by jury with respect to any lawsuit or judicial proceeding arising or relating to this Escrow Agreement. No party to this Escrow Agreement is liable to any other party for losses due to, or if it is unable to perform its obligations under the terms of this Escrow Agreement because of, acts of God, fire, floods, strikes, equipment or transmission failure, or other causes reasonably beyond its control. This Escrow Agreement may be executed in one or more counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

fyi...Zakia just called and confirmed that the AIG escrow fees of 7-10 bps (or lower) do include fees for BONY so we would not be subjected to anything additional. Also, she mentioned that AIG could work with any large escrow agent but prefers to work with BONY. Given these two pieces of information, I don't see a need to solicit comments on JPMC's escrow agreement at this time.

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Regards,

Kevin

Subject: Escrow Update

Zakia,

When you speak to AIG today, can you also ask them whether they would be willing to use an alternate Escrow Agent to BONY (JPMorgan Chase, for example)? Perhaps they already work with JPMC as well.

Would you also be able to find out if the fees in AIG's agreement (currently the 7-10 bps) cover them as well as BONY or if we would be subject to additional charges from BONY for collateral and custody services?

The reason that we ask is that in speaking to JPMC yesterday, they quoted an Escrow

Agent rate of 5 bps (and I think they would go lower) which would cover all custody services, reporting, etc. They sent us a copy of their standard litigation escrow agreement but I will not circulate it for comments unless we find that it is a viable alternative. It doesn't contemplate using AIG (or any other insurance company) so it probably won't work but perhaps we can use their fee information to help get a better price with AIG / BONY.

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Thank you.

Kevin

Subject: Request for expected rates

Christine,

It was good to speak with you today. I am taking the liberty of responding to your questions to Andrea directly, since she is out of the office till noon and I am leaving for a lunch at 11:45am today. Since I expect you are under some time pressure, I wanted to give you some feedback.

First, the expect rates before fees are not impacted by size, since all the markets we are investing in are very liquid. Therefore it does not matter if it is 1 or 4 billion.

Second, however, fees are impacted by size and the product. The fees we quoted you were for $4 billion of standard escrow cash, which is almost always limited to repo, overnight or treasury bills. As you move into smaller size, and into assignments with longer average maturities and complexity, the fees will go up because you are moving from passive cash to active fixed income management. Still we will be very competitive, and the fees we quote will include the costs of the bank's escrow facility, plus custody of the account. I will cover fees at the end of this email.

Third, to return to the basic question from yesterday, we have reviewed the "Qualified Assets" section of the escrow and feel that since 90 day CP, auction rates securities, AAA asset backs under 10 years and some other paper is allowed, we are confident that a portfolio combined of 1 to 3 month paper will yield 3.10% to 3.20% before fees. This will significantly outperform any AAA rated money market fund which has essentially the same average maturity, which is likely in the 2.75% to 2.90% range. This is our recommended solution for your situation, whether you manage it internally or externally.

Next, with regards to the longer assignments, here you are hampered by both the AA minimum rating on corporates and the 10 year maximum maturity. This essentially eliminates most corporate bonds, mortgage backed and longer asset backs from consideration. Given that the yield curve is so flat, corporate spreads for AAA and AA so tight and rates likely to rise both in the shorter and longer end, we would not recommend these options unless you expect a long litigation and or appeal. Following are some rates against various benchmarks, and figure you would be in the middle of each range before fees for the ML 1-3 and 1-5, and closer to the gov only indices for the LB intermediate and total because of the limits on A and BBB rated corporates, mortgages and longer dated asset backs.

A portfolio with a 6 month average maturity, which we call Enhanced Cash, would be 3.30% to 3.35% based on your guidelines.

A portfolio managed against the ML 1-3 gov and gov/corp index has a yield between 3.52% and 3.65% with an average duration between 1.60 and 1.65 years.

A portfolio managed against the ML 1-5 gov and gov/corp index has a yield between 3.61% and 3.80% with an average duration around 2.3 years.

A portfolio managed against the LB intermediate gov and gov/corp index has a yield between 3.88% and 4.13% with an average duration around 3.35 years.

A portfolio managed against the LB gov and gov/corp index has a yield between 3.98% and 4.32% with an average duration around 4.90 to 5.30 years.

Again, because of the limits on A and BBB rated corporates, mortgages and longer dated asset backs.

As for fees, here is the sliding scale we used to give you the fees on 4bp. We would honor this for any size over half a billion for the 3 month STMM or 6 month Enhanced Cash portfolio. These fees would cover the Escrow account as well. Fees for fixed income assignments against the ML or LB indices would be higher.

I hope this is acceptable. Good luck.

Hi Jeanne...

As an FYI, Kevin, Eduardo and I circled round to try and get our hand around what there is to do. Jacqueline was out but we hope to get the attached questions to her/Alan ASAP to get moving on the issues. I just wanted you to see where our minds are after meeting to talk about the escrow account.

At a certain point an all parties meeting will make most sense b/c we (me, Kevin, Eduardo) are missing pieces of information. We are also concerned about bringing others into the loop unless we are given the ok to do so (e.g. - FID ops).

Attached please find a draft template for tracking potential costs.

In looking at costing out the three options (cash, LC, escrow) here are the open questions that I had noted from our meeting this morning (did I miss any points we discussed)?

Collateral Pool

- Assuming that a collateral pool will be established no matter which option is chosen, will we have right of daily substitution? "Term" collateral will be more expensive and harder to source.
- What structure will it take on? Reverse repo? Outright purchase of the securities?
 - Who/what group will manage the interest rate and P&L risk?
- Is the pool to be in MS&Co's name?
- What is the duration, possible amount of pool?
- Has FID already been looking at options here? Pricing/ hedging?
- Have to take cost of sourcing collateral into account across the LC/Escrow options.

Letter of Credit

- We are assuming that these will be secured.
- Amount/Tenor?
- What amounts/costs have been quoted so far by each bank? BONY, Citi, JPMC? Are there any additional bank costs that need to be accounted for (e.g., cost in opening an account with the bank)?

5/2/2005

- What structure will the banks expect (how will they take collateral) - tri-party?
 - Aside from existing LC reimbursement agreements we have in place with these banks, do they require any additional documentation - e.g., tri-party agreement, pledge agreement?
 - Will Treasury's LC desk manage the LC as they do all other LCs? Who/what groups pays for it?

Escrow Arrangement (AIG)

- Any room for negotiation? Locking up collateral might be an issue for us. Is there any possibility of daily right of substitution?
- Can we confirm proposed haircuts with FID (pg 5)?
- Who/what group will manage this escrow account? FID/Treasury?
- Is AIG's "administrative services fee" (pg 15) incremental to whatever they charge us on the supersedes bond itself?
- What is BONY's proposed fee?

Cash

- If cash is pledged/deposited, what will the bank pay us?

Coleman Options

- Treasury, Risk and Insurance and Legal are close to finalizing the negotiations on the Escrow Agreement with AIG and BONY
- Per the Legal department, as the jury has found the Firm guilty in the compensatory stage, the punitive damage stage is commencing
- Once the final compensatory and punitive damages are determined, Legal may be able to negotiate a "collateral" alternative directly with Perelman whereby the Firm may not need to post a supersedeas bond thereby eliminating the 25 bps fee
 - For example the Firm may be able to directly pledge an escrow account to Perelman
 - There is no indication or guarantee that the Plaintiff would be amenable to this

Current Status / Decisions made to Date

- AIG would be issuing a supersedeas bond on Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's behalf
- AIG is the only insurance company that can provide sufficient capacity for a potential $4 billion plus judgment
- To secure their position, AIG is requiring that Morgan Stanley collateralize their exposure through assets pledged in an escrow account
 - As a result, placing securities or cash with an escrow agent (likely BONY) is the working alternative
 - Under the proposed Escrow Agreement, maturities over one year require over-collateralization
 - The lack of certainty on the duration of the obligation and the potential impact to P&L associated with an early unwind (or transfer to trading book) of this collateral appear to make the zero to one year maturity range most appropriate

Alternatives

- Morgan Stanley to deposit cash in Institutional Money Market Mutual Funds
 - Deposit in multiple Money Market Mutual Funds – each Fund would require AIG approval
 - Standard 20-25bp management fee applicable
- Morgan Stanley to deposit cash in a "unique" BONY managed account
 - Similar yield to Institutional Money Market Fund
 - Substantially cheaper fee structure (2bps)
- Morgan Stanley to manage a pool of qualified securities
 - Fee negotiations with BONY currently ongoing

- What structure will the banks expect (how will they take collateral) - tri-party?
 - Aside from existing LC reimbursement agreements we have in place with these banks, do they require any additional documentation - e.g., tri-party agreement, pledge agreement?
 - Will Treasury's LC desk manage the LC as they do all other LCs? Who/what groups pays for it?

Escrow Arrangement (AIG)

- Any room for negotiation? Locking up collateral might be an issue for us. Is there any possibility of daily right of substitution?
- Can we confirm proposed haircuts with FID (pg 5)?
- Who/what group will manage this escrow account? FID/Treasury?
- Is AIG's "administrative services fee" (pg 15) incremental to whatever they charge us on the supersedes bond itself?
- What is BONY's proposed fee?

Cash

- If cash is pledged/deposited, what will the bank pay us?
- Where does the cash need to go?
- Who/what group moves the cash?
- Does Treasury raise the amount, or is it taken from our existing Liquidity Reserve and down streamed to MS&Co? If it is taken from the LR, what would Treasury's plans be to restore the amount?
- Who/what group "pays" for this?

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated

Dear Jim:

The mediator is requesting a retainer from each side of $48,935. This is based on his total budget for the mediation, which is between $70,900 and $97,870. Each side is being assessed 50 percent of the higher amount. The mediator said he would not exceed the higher estimate without the prior approval of the clients. The retainer has to be paid by January 17, 2005. I am enclosing a complete copy of the Agreement with MarksADR, LLC for your files.

Please call me if you have any questions.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

Lawrence P. Bemis

MEMORANDUM

TO: Lawrence Bemis, Esquire
Jerold Solovy, Esquire

CC: Deirdre Connell, Esquire
Thomas Yannucci, Esquire

FROM: Tammy Nantz, Case Assistant for Jonathan Marks and Bill Baten

DATE: December 16, 2004

RE: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
Budget memo, Mediation agreement and Retainer Invoice

Thank you for asking MarksADR to help resolve your dispute.

In this memo, I provide you with a budget for the mediation process up to and including the January 27-28, 2005 mediation session. Should further work be agreed on, I will provide you with an additional budget. In addition, enclosed is our standard mediation agreement, along with a proposed schedule, retainer invoice and a Rate Summary Sheet for each Mediator.

Because this case involves pre-mediation meetings with Bill Baten and a mediation session in Washington, D.C., we will bill at the following rates:

- $4,500 per day for pre-mediation meetings with Bill Baten.
- $4,500 per day for mediation session with Bill Baten.
- $7,500 per day for mediation session with Jonathan Marks.
- $375 per hour for Bill Baten's preparation and/or follow-up work.
- $475 per hour for Jonathan Marks' preparation and/or follow-up work.

Without having a better sense of the amount of case materials Jonathan and Bill will need to review, it's hard to be precise about the amount of time that they will need properly to prepare and conduct the mediation up until January 28, 2005. Therefore, we have estimated the following in budgeting for this case:

- Initial preparation: Review of mediation submissions and other background materials and separate confidential meetings with counsel prior to the mediation dates.
 - Jonathan Marks: 20 to 40 hours at $475 per hour.
 - Bill Baten: 60 to 100 hours at $375 per hour.
- Pre-mediation meetings and mediation session:
 - Jonathan Marks- 2 days at $7,500 per day.
 - Bill Baten- 4 days at $4,500 per day.
- Case management fee: Six percent (6%) of the Mediators' professional services.
- Expenses: travel, hotel, meals, etc. - $2,000 - $3,000.

Based on these numbers, we can estimate that the total budget for this mediation up until January 28, 2005 including professional fees, out of pocket expenses, and case management fees will be between $70,900 and $97,870.

Based on this budget, attached please find a $48,935 retainer invoice for each party. We will not exceed this amount without prior approval.

We would appreciate prompt payment. Please sign and return the last page of the Mediation Agreement to indicate your agreement to our budget.

Any additional fees or expenses not covered by the retainer will be billed at a later time. Any unused retainer amount will be promptly refunded.

If I may be of further assistance, please call me at 301-907-4715.

For your records, Jonathan's cell number is 202-413-9812 and his home number is 301-263-9810. Please call Jonathan at either one these numbers if you can't reach him at the office.

MARKSADR, LLC'S MEDIATION AGREEMENT

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.

1. Purpose

The purpose of the mediation is to attempt to arrive at a mutually acceptable resolution of the dispute in a cooperative and informal, rather than a legal and formal, manner.

2. Mediation Process

The Mediators will:

- Review written information submitted by the Parties.
- Have private, confidential conversations with the participants to develop information about the Parties' contentions and objectives.
- Conduct a mediation session with representatives of the Parties and their counsel.

To facilitate a resolution, the Mediators and the Parties and their Counsel will work to ensure that each Party appreciates the strengths and weaknesses of each side's factual and legal contentions. Both in the exchange of information and opinions, and in the evaluation of that information, each Party will have the opportunity and responsibility candidly to disclose to the Mediators the facts, theories, and opinions on which it intends to rely with regard to the matters in dispute.

In addition, the mediation process will focus on the interests and objectives of the Parties and possible solutions that the Parties believe would be fair, equitable, and mutually beneficial. Accordingly, each Party will be asked to work with the Mediators in considering and evaluating solutions that would satisfy its own interests and those of the other Party.

The mediation session will be attended by representatives of the Parties with full settlement authority and by Counsel. The Parties will follow the recommendation of the Mediators regarding the agenda most likely to resolve the dispute. During the session, the Mediators may have joint and separate meetings with the Parties and their Counsel. Private meetings will be confidential. If a Party informs the Mediators that information is conveyed by the Party to the Mediators in confidence, the Mediators will not disclose the information.

At the discretion of the Mediators or upon the request of the Parties, the Mediators will provide an evaluation of the Parties' cases and of the likely resolution of the dispute if not settled. The Parties agree that the Mediators are not acting as an attorney or providing legal advice on behalf of any Party.

If necessary and if such discussions seem likely to be useful, the Parties will make themselves available for further discussions or meetings after the mediation session.

MS_COSTMTN 01743

16div-032146

3. Confidentiality

This entire mediation process is an off-the-record compromise negotiation. All offers, promises, conduct and statements, whether oral or written made in the course of the mediation by any of the Parties, their agents, employees, experts and attorneys, and by the Mediators' and MARKSADR, LLC employees, who are the Parties' joint agents and Mediators' for purposes of these compromise negotiations, are confidential and off-the-record. Such offers, promises, conduct, and statements will not be disclosed to third parties, except persons associated with the participants in the process (e.g., a Party's agent, employee, attorney, or immediate family member), and are privileged and inadmissible for any purpose, including impeachment. If this matter does not settle in mediation, the parties may report to a court that mediation has been unsuccessfully attempted under the auspices of MarksADR, LLC, but no party may provide any details or otherwise disclose what happened in the mediation. However, evidence previously disclosed or known to a Party, or that is otherwise admissible or discoverable shall not be rendered confidential, inadmissible or not discoverable solely as a result of its use in the mediation.

4. Disqualification of Mediator and Exclusion of Liability

The Parties agree not to call the Mediators or any MARKSADR, LLC employee as a witness or as an expert in any pending or subsequent litigation or arbitration involving the Parties and relating in any way to the dispute which is the subject of the mediation. The Parties and MARKSADR, LLC agree that the Mediators and any MARKSADR, LLC employee will be disqualified as a witness or as an expert in any pending or subsequent proceeding relating to the dispute which is the subject of the mediation. The Parties agree to defend the Mediators and MARKSADR, LLC from any subpoenas from outside parties arising out of this Agreement or mediation. The Parties agree that neither MARKSADR, LLC nor any Mediator it provides is a necessary Party in any arbitral or judicial proceedings relating to the mediation or to the subject matter of the mediation. Neither MARKSADR, LLC nor its employees or agents, including the Mediators shall be liable to any Party for any act or omission in connection with any mediation conducted under this Agreement.

5. Miscellaneous

This is a voluntary, non-binding mediation process. The parties agree to participate in good faith in the entire mediation process, but any Party may terminate its participation for any reason by written notification to MARKSADR, LLC and the other Parties.

The Parties agree to comply with the schedule in Attachment A to this Agreement. The Parties agree to pay MARKSADR, LLC as set forth in Attachment B to this Agreement.

Professional Fees (generally divided by the parties)

Professional fees include:

- Case convening
- Preparation
- Pre-mediation and pre-arbitration conferences
- Mediation and arbitration sessions
- Follow-up

William Baten's professional fees are agreed to on a case-by-case basis, taking account of the nature and stakes of the case, as well as required time and travel commitments.

- In most cases, fees are based on the actual time required, measured on a daily and hourly basis, and based on an agreed budget.
- In some cases, fees are based on an agreed "project fee," or on a combination of a project fee and daily and hourly fees, plus actual expenses.

Where fees are set based on level of effort, the following charges apply:

- For mediation and arbitration sessions, as well as pre-mediation and pre-arbitration conferences: $4,500 per day.
- For preparation and follow-up: $375 per hour.
- For one-day mediations outside of Washington, D.C., actual travel time is billed at $375 per hour. For mediations outside of Washington, D.C. lasting two or more days, travel time is usually included in the daily rate.
- Actual expenses are billed at cost.

Case Management Fee (generally divided by the parties)

The Case Management Fee covers certain costs associated with the mediation or arbitration, including:

- Case scheduling and administration
- Document handling, copying and fax
- Use of MARKSADR, LLC conference facilities.
- Regular telephone usage

Case Management Fee for William Baten's cases: 6% of total professional fees.

Cancellation and Payment Policies

Cancellation and Rescheduling

- If mediation or arbitration sessions are canceled more than 30 days before a session, professional fees are fully refundable, except where preparation or other professional time has already been incurred.
- The parties are charged for booked time in cases canceled less than 30 days before the session unless the time can be rescheduled for another matter. Otherwise the daily fee per scheduled mediation or arbitration day will be billed.
- No rescheduling fee will be charged if the sessions are rescheduled up to 30 days before the date of the session; a rescheduling fee of 50% of the applicable fee will be charged if sessions are rescheduled within 30 days of the session, unless the time can be rescheduled for another matter. Fee will be paid by Party or Parties requesting rescheduling.
- If a booked mediation or arbitration session is completed in less than the booked time, the actual time reserved but not used by the parties will be billed unless the time can be used to work on another matter.
- All fees are due and payable upon receipt of retainer invoice and must be paid in advance of the mediation session or arbitration hearing.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Zhonette:

As we discussed, we propose that Morgan Stanley & Company and CPH share certain costs involved in the production of documents in Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., No. CA 03-005045 AJ (Fla. 15th Jud. Cir.), and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., No. 03 CA-005165 AG (Fla. 15th Jud. Cir.). We propose the following:

1. Documents produced by Jenner & Block, LLC in paper form only.

Compulit, under a joint contract with (1) Morgan Stanley & Co.; and (2) Jenner & Block, LLC ("J&B") or Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. will pick up the documents J&B has produced in paper form, assign a production number and confidential designation, and image the documents. Compulit will produce two identical sets of copies of the images and will provide one set of images to Kirkland & Ellis LLP ("K&E") in Washington, D.C., and a second set of images to J&B in Chicago, Illinois simultaneously. Compulit will reassemble the original documents in the manner in which they were produced and will return the documents to J&B in the same files and boxes in which they were produced. The parties will enter into a separate contract with Compulit, which contract will more fully describe the services Compulit will perform. Compulit will perform its services on a schedule that is acceptable to the parties. Compulit will issue separate bills to J&B and Morgan Stanley. With the exception of delivery and pickup charges, the costs of Compulit's services will be split equally.

2. Documents that have been imaged.

J&B production. J&B has produced documents to K&E that have already been imaged. K&E wishes to obtain copies of those images, which J&B agrees to provide. For those documents that K&E obtains in image form, Morgan Stanley will pay J&B $0.08 per page. The payment will be made within 15 days of delivery of the images. Morgan Stanley may set-off against this cost any amount due Morgan Stanley as a result of providing imaged documents to J&B or CPH. In addition, Morgan Stanley will pay the costs associated with duplicating any media containing document images.

K&E production. K&E has produced documents to J&B in paper form that have been imaged. J&B wishes to obtain copies of those images, which K&E agrees to provide. For those documents that J&B obtains in image form, J&B or CPH will pay K&E $0.08 per page. The payment will be made within 15 days of delivery of the images. J&B or CPH may set-off this cost against the amount due J&B as a result of providing imaged documents to K&E. In addition, J&B or CPH will pay the costs associated with duplicating any media containing document images.

Each party will simultaneously provide to the other party disks containing the images described in this section. The parties agree that if the disks or other media are duplicated by one of the law firms, the cost charged for that law firm's duplication of the disks or other media will not exceed the cost of performing that service as charged by a vendor selected by the receiving party.

3. Electronic documents.

The parties have produced and will produce to each other various documents that exist in electronic form. Before using any of these electronic documents in this litigation, other than for purposes that are purely internal to the parties, the parties agree that they will assign production numbers to the electronic document consisting of the number assigned to the electronic medium followed by the file name of the document as found on the electronic medium.

Please indicate your agreement to this proposal by signing and returning this document to me.

Sincerely,

Michael T. Brody

Defendants.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S SEVENTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.350, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") Seventh Request for Production of Documents ("Requests for Production"):

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH objects to the Requests for Production, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon CPH any requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the requirements of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order. For example, CPH will not comply with Instructions Nos. 3, 4, 5,

6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 16 or Definitions No. 6 to the extent that they purport to impose on CPH obligations that are not required by Florida rules and case law. CPH will comply with the applicable rules and law.

2. CPH objects to the Requests for Production to the extent that they seek the production of any documents or information protected from discovery by reason of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule. CPH reserves the right to assert any and all privileges to which CPH is entitled under the law. CPH will provide a log of documents withheld from production on the basis of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule.

3. CPH objects to the definition of "Coleman Transaction" because Morgan Stanley's definition mischaracterizes the transaction that closed on March 30, 1998 and because the definition is vague and ambiguous to the extent it includes "all related communications, agreements, and transactions." CPH will construe the term "Coleman Transaction" to mean the transaction by which CPH transferred its interest in The Coleman Company to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam").

4. CPH objects to the extent that any Request for Production seeks documents that are in the public domain and accessible to all parties. In responding to the Requests for Production, CPH will produce publicly available documents to the extent that copies exist in CPH's files of otherwise non-public information responsive to these requests.

5. CPH objects to the definitions of "CPH" and "MAFCO" to the extent they include CPH's and MAFCO's counsel in this litigation. CPH interprets these definitions to exclude Jenner & Block LLP and Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley P.A., and their respective attorneys.

6. By stating that CPH will produce documents responsive to a particular document request, CPH does not represent that any such documents exist. Rather, CPH is responding that to the extent such documents are located, they will be produced.

7. By stating that CPH will produce responsive documents, CPH does not concede the relevance of any of the produced documents to the subject matter of this litigation or to the admissibility of those documents at trial.

8. CPH's objections and responses are based on a good-faith search for documents within CPH's possession, custody, and control. CPH expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

9. CPH responds to Morgan Stanley's document requests without waiving the Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION

1. All documents concerning any sale, transfer, pledge, agreement or other disposition of Sunbeam stock by CPH, MAFCO or any of their affiliates, as described in Article VII, Section 7.1 of the Agreement and Plan of Merger among Sunbeam Corporation, Laser Acquisition Corp., CLN Holdings Inc. and CPH dated as of February 27, 1998 and any amendments thereto.

RESPONSE: Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections, CPH will produce documents responsive to this request.

2. All documents concerning the MAFCO Tax Sharing Agreement.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, burdensome, and not reasonably calculated to call for the discovery of admissible evidence. Documents relating to MAFCO's tax sharing agreement are not relevant to the issues in this case and their production would require the disclosure of highly confidential information that has no bearing on the issues in this case. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections, CPH will produce the tax sharing agreement and SEC filings relating to that agreement.

3. All documents listed on the Holdings Disclosure Schedule, and all documents relating to the agreements, contracts, arrangements, payable, obligations and understandings reflected on the Holdings Disclosure Schedule.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, burdensome, and not reasonably calculated to call for the discovery of admissible evidence. In particular, CPH objects to the production of the following categories of documents because their production would be burdensome and the documents neither are relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence: retirement plans; pension plans; medical and insurance plans; data processing services documents; documents relating to the repurchase of option shares and option exercise; and documents that are in the public domain and which are equally available to Morgan Stanley. In addition, for the reasons stated above in response to Request No. 2, CPH objects to the production of confidential IRS audit-related materials. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, CPH will produce documents responsive to this request except as specified in this objection.

4. All drafts and executed copies of the Confidentiality Agreements.

RESPONSE: Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections, CPH will produce documents responsive to this request.

RESPONSE AND OBJECTIONS TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S SIXTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS TO PLAINTIFF

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.350, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") Sixth Request for Production of Documents to Plaintiff ("Requests for Production"):

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH objects to the Requests for Production, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon CPH any requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the requirements of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order. For example, CPH will not comply with Instructions Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 16 or Definitions No. 9 to the extent that they purport to impose on CPH obligations that are not required by Florida rules and case law. CPH will comply with the applicable rules and law.

2. CPH objects to the Requests for Production to the extent that they seek the production of any documents or information protected from discovery by reason of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule. CPH reserves the right to assert any and all privileges to which CPH is entitled under the law. CPH will provide a log of documents withheld from production on the basis of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule.

3. CPH objects to the definition of "Coleman Transaction" because Morgan Stanley's definition mischaracterizes the transaction that closed on March 30, 1998 and because the definition is vague and ambiguous to the extent it includes "all related communications, agreements, and transactions." CPH will construe the term "Coleman Transaction" to mean the transaction by which CPH transferred its interest in The Coleman Company to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam").

4. CPH objects to the extent that any Request for Production seeks documents that are in the public domain and accessible to all parties. In responding to the Requests for Production, CPH will produce publicly available documents to the extent that copies exist in CPH's files of otherwise non-public information responsive to these requests.

5. CPH objects to the definition of "CPH" to the extent it includes CPH's counsel in this litigation. CPH interprets these definitions to exclude Jenner & Block LLP and Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley P.A., and their respective attorneys.

6. By stating that CPH will produce documents responsive to a particular document request, CPH does not represent that any such documents exist. Rather, CPH is responding that to the extent such documents are located, they will be produced.

7. By stating that CPH will produce responsive documents, CPH does not concede the relevance of any of the produced documents to the subject matter of this litigation or to the admissibility of those documents at trial.

8. CPH's objections and responses are based on a good-faith search for documents within CPH's possession, custody, and control. CPH expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

9. CPH responds to Morgan Stanley's document requests without waiving the Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

DOCUMENTS TO BE PRODUCED

1. All documents that evidence the recognition of revenue or loss of CPH, MAFCO or affiliate company, and the tax treatment or consequences thereof from the sale of Coleman common stock to Sunbeam, including any recognition of revenue concerning the settlement with Sunbeam.

ANSWER: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, burdensome, and not reasonably calculated to call for the discovery of admissible evidence. Documents showing the recognition of revenue or loss by CPH, Mafco, or any affiliated companies, or the tax treatment and consequences thereof, are not relevant issues in this case and their production would require the disclosure of highly confidential information that has no bearing on the issues in this case. Moreover, CPH has not placed its tax treatment of the Coleman Transaction at issue, and Morgan Stanley has failed to show that documents relating to CPH's tax treatment of the Coleman Transaction are likely to provide information that is unavailable from other sources.

2. All documents concerning Scott Paper, including internal or third party analysis of its financial performance and acquisition by Kimberly-Clark.

ANSWER: Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections, CPH will produce documents responsive to this request.

3. All documents concerning Albert Dunlap, including documents referring to his professional employment history.

ANSWER: Subject to and without waiving the foregoing initial objections, CPH will produce documents responsive to this request.

4. All documents concerning the issuance of private placement notes by Revlon Escrow Corporation in February 1998.

ANSWER: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, burdensome, and not reasonably calculated to call for the discovery of admissible evidence. CPH further notes that Morgan Stanley has taken the position in this case that documents relating to transactions other than the Coleman Transaction are not relevant and need not be produced.

5. All documents concerning any transaction contemplated or consummated between October 1, 1997 and March 30, 1998 by or among CPH, MAFCO, or any subsidiary or affiliate regarding Aames Financial Corporation, Bushnell, Day International, Golden State Bancorp, Gucci, Panavision, Timber REITs, or any other transaction contemplated or consummated between October 1, 1997 and March 30, 1998 where the value of consideration offered or received was expected to, or did, exceed $5 million.

ANSWER: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, burdensome, and not reasonably calculated to call for the discovery of admissible evidence. CPH further notes that Morgan Stanley has taken the position in this case that documents relating to transactions other than the Coleman Transaction are not relevant and need not be produced.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing has been served by facsimile and mail to all counsel on the attached Service List, this 9th day of April, 2004.

AGREED ORDER REGARDING ENLARGEMENT
OF TIME TO PREPARE PRIVILEGE LOG

THIS CAUSE, having come before the Court on the agreement of the parties, and the Court having reviewed the pleadings on file and otherwise being fully advised in the premises, it is hereby

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. This Order shall apply to all current and future document discovery requests served by the parties in this action.
2. Upon review of the document requests served by the parties in this action, certain documents may be within the scope of the request that are protected by the attorney-client or work product privileges.
3. If any documents are withheld from production on the basis of privilege, the Court orders that each party provide a privilege log listing those documents pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(b)(5). The parties have indicated that they expect to produce documents on a "rolling" basis. Accordingly, the privilege log also shall be provided on a rolling basis within thirty (30) days after each portion of the party's production of documents from which the documents have been withheld on the basis of privilege. For any production of documents made prior to the date of this Order, the producing party shall provide the privilege log within thirty (30) days after the entry of this Order.

4. To the extent privilege logs were created in connection with other proceedings, the parties may use those privilege logs in this action, supplementing those logs as necessary to identify each individual document withheld on the basis of privilege.

5. The privilege log shall include, without limitation, any otherwise responsive documents that were created by the parties' lawyers in connection with the underlying transactions.

6. The parties are not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involve privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transactions at issue in this case. For purposes of this paragraph, such litigation shall include, without limitation, this action and antecedent litigation involving the same transactions.

ORDER ON COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL
PRODUCTION OF COSTS-RELATED DOCUMENTS

THIS CAUSE having come to be considered upon Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Compel Costs-Related Documents, it is hereby

ORDERED and ADJUDGED:

1. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s motion is granted in its entirety.
2. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. will produce all non-privileged documents that are responsive to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s July 25, 2008 Requests for Production Nos. 3-7, 9-13, and 17 on or before March 24, 2009.
3. For each document produced in response to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s July 25, 2008 Requests for Production of Documents, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. shall identify the individual Request for Production, and, if applicable, each sub-part of each request, to which each document relates. This applies both to future productions, as well as retroactively to prior costs-related productions. Such identifications shall be made on or before March 24, 2009.
4. On or before March 24, 2009, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. will produce a full and complete privilege log of all documents withheld from production on the basis of privilege.

5. All discovery relating to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s pending costs motions shall be completed by May 29, 2009.

FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING, INC.,

CASE NO: 2003 CA-005045 AJ

Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S, NOTICE
OF VOLUNTARY WITHDRAWAL OF ALL COST CLAIMS
AND MOTION TO VACATE AS MOOT COURT'S ORDER
OF JANUARY 14, 2009

A. The Withdrawal of the Costs Motions

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated voluntarily withdraws the three cost motions presently pending before this Court: (1) the April 1, 2008 Amended Motion to Tax Appellate Costs for Main Appeal (4th DCA Case No. 4D05-2606); (2) the April 1, 2008 Motion to Tax Appellate Costs relating to Cost Appeal (4th DCA Case No. 4D05-4756); (3) the April 1, 2008 Amended Motion to Tax Trial Costs.

Morgan Stanley withdraws each of those cost motions and no longer seeks any costs for the two appeals or the trial proceedings. The withdrawal of the cost motions is prompted by CPH's January 27, 2009 Response to Defendant's Request for Admission. The Request to Admit (Exhibit A) sought to determine whether Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. (CPH) had assets sufficient to satisfy a cost judgment. That information was sought because the extraordinary effort and expense of litigating the cost motions would be meaningless if there were no assets to satisfy the ultimate judgment.

CPH's Response to the request to admit was:

The request seeks information that is not reasonably related to lead to admissible evidence. Accordingly, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. Objects. Without waiving its objection, Coleman Parent Holdings, Inc. states that it has an unliquidated chose in action which it expects to have a value far in excess of $10 million.

Exhibit B (emphasis supplied).

A "chose in action" is "[t]he right to bring an action to recover a debt, money, or thing." Black's Law Dictionary, Pocket Edition (1996). Morgan Stanley can only guess what the chose in action may be, but it is apparent that whatever the action may be, and whoever may be the subject of the chose in action, CPH has no present, or reasonably foreseeable asset that makes it worthwhile for Morgan Stanley to pursue the effort and expense necessary to obtain a cost judgment against CPH. Therefore Morgan Stanley withdraws any claim for costs for its two successful appeals (4D05-2606 and 4D05-4756) and for the judgment entered in its favor in this Court – Case No. 2003CA005045-AJ.

B. The Motion to Vacate the January 14, 2009 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel Production

This Court entered its Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel Production of Costs-Related Documents on January 14, 2009 (Exhibit C). That Order created a time schedule for discovery on the costs motions, stating that "[a]ll discovery relating to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s pending costs motions shall be completed by May 29, 2009." Exhibit C, p. 2.

Since the pending costs motions have been withdrawn by the filing of this Notice of

Voluntary Withdrawal, there is no need for discovery on those motions and the January 14, 2009 Order should be vacated as moot, relieving both parties of any duties or obligations set forth in that Order.

CONCLUSION

The Court should vacate its January 14, 2009 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel Production of Costs-Related Documents and, given the Final Judgment entered on March 18, 2008, order that the case be closed.

AGREED ORDER VACATING
JANUARY 14, 2009 ORDER AND CLOSING CASE

This matter came before the Court on Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Notice of Voluntary Withdrawal of All Cost Claims And Motion to Vacate as Moot, Court's Order of January 14, 2009.

On March 18, 2008, the Court previously entered Final Judgment in favor of Morgan Stanley in this matter. In doing so, the Court expressly reserved jurisdiction to consider Morgan Stanley's claims for costs and Plaintiff's pending Verified Petition for a Show Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court. Since the date of that Final Judgment, Morgan Stanley has withdrawn all of its claims for costs and Plaintiff has appealed this Court's September 2, 2008 Order on Plaintiff's Verified Motion to Vacate the Judgment and Grant a New Trial on Damages. Accordingly, the Court hereby modifies its March 18, 2008 Final Judgment Order and reserves jurisdiction to consider: (1) Plaintiff's Verified Petition for Show Cause Order Regarding Morgan Stanley's Criminal Contempt of Court; and (2) any further proceedings relating to or following Plaintiff's appeal to the Fourth District Court of Appeal of the September 2, 2008 Order on Plaintiff's Verified Motion to Vacate the Judgment and Grant a New Trial on Damages.

With regard to the January 14, 2009 Order, the Court acknowledges Morgan Stanley's right to withdraw its pending cost motions and it is hereby ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Court's January 14, 2009 Order on Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion to Compel Production of Costs-Related Documents is vacated as moot and both parties discharged from any obligations under that Order.

No. 4D08-4022

[October 7, 2009]

TAYLOR, J.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. (CPH) appeals the trial court's order denying its motion to set aside judgment under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.540(b). The judgment that CPH sought to set aside was entered in favor of Morgan Stanley, pursuant to our mandate in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007). In that appeal, we reversed compensatory and punitive damage awards for CPH because CPH had failed to present legally sufficient proof of damages at trial. In its Rule 1.540(b) motion, CPH sought a new trial based upon its claim that Morgan Stanley committed a fraud upon the court in discovery sanction hearings held before trial. We affirm the order denying the motion.

This case arose from an alleged conspiracy between defendant Morgan Stanley and the now-defunct Sunbeam Corp. CPH purchased Sunbeam, allegedly in reliance on misrepresentations of Sunbeam's investment banker, Morgan Stanley. Sunbeam went bankrupt within about two years and CPH sued Morgan Stanley for fraudulent conspiracy to misrepresent Sunbeam's financial health at the time of sale. See Morgan Stanley, 955 So. 2d at 1125-26.

Before trial, the trial court entered a partial default against Morgan Stanley as a sanction for discovery misconduct in responding to requests for e-mails about the transaction.¹ Morgan Stanley kept old e-mails on certain backup tapes stored at various locations. The trial court held extensive hearings regarding Morgan Stanley's non-compliance with discovery orders for e-mail production, as well as misrepresentations by Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel concerning when they learned that e-mails existed on certain back-up tapes. Ultimately, the court entered a partial default against Morgan Stanley on all elements of CPH's claim except reliance and damages. It also ordered that portions of CPH's Amended Complaints be read into evidence and deemed established facts. Thus, CPH needed to prove only that it relied on the established misrepresentations and to prove its damages. The jury awarded CPH nearly $1.5 billion in compensatory and punitive damages.

We reversed the award solely because CPH failed to prove its damages. CPH failed to establish the actual fraud-free value of Sunbeam on the date of purchase, in accordance with settled Florida law. We further held that CPH's failure to establish actual damage, which is an essential element of fraud, rendered the punitive damage award invalid. Because the law in our district does not allow a "second bite at the apple" to prove damages, we reversed and ordered judgment for the defendant. Morgan Stanley, 955 So. 2d at 1131. The Florida Supreme Court denied review. Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc., 973 So. 2d 1120 (Fla. Dec. 12, 2007) (Table).

In its motion brought under Rule 1.540(b), CPH requested the trial court to set aside the judgment and grant a new trial on damages. It alleged that Morgan Stanley perpetrated a fraud upon the court, which was revealed during post-verdict notices filed by Morgan Stanley. The notices purported to correct earlier representations made by Morgan Stanley during discovery sanction hearings regarding when its in-house lawyers first knew about the existence of e-mails stored on backup tapes. CPH asserted that this discovery misconduct constituted a fraud on the court, entitling it to have the judgment set aside without having to show any prejudice.

The trial court denied the Rule 1.540(b) motion. In a thorough, detailed, and well-reasoned order, the trial court ruled that an evidentiary hearing was not required because the motion failed to show colorable entitlement to relief under Rule 1.540(b). We agree with the trial court and quote extensively from its order below:

Rule 1.540(b) governs post-judgment relief from a final judgment and lists five categories of substantive grounds that can be used to support an order vacating a final judgment. One such ground is based upon a showing of "fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party." Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b)(3).

A trial court has broad discretion in evaluating a Rule 1.540(b) motion seeking relief from final judgment. Crowley v. Crowley, 678 So. 2d 435, 438 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996). Such motion should not be summarily dismissed without an evidentiary hearing unless its allegations and accompanying affidavits fail to allege a colorable entitlement to relief. Schlegar v. Stebelsky, 957 So. 2d 71, 73 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007); Dynasty Exp. Corp. v. Weiss, 675 So. 2d 235, 239 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996); Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 437-38.

To warrant an evidentiary hearing, a Rule 1.540(b) motion must ... 2) plead fraud with particularity, and 3) explain why the fraud, if it exists, would entitle the movant to have the judgment set aside. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.540(b); Flemenbaum v. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d 579 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994). The purpose of requiring such motion to plead fraud with specificity is to permit the court to determine if the movant "has made a prima facie showing which would justify relief from judgment," and is not merely rehashing matters explored at trial. Id. at 580. If a motion does not set forth a basis for relief on its face, then an evidentiary hearing is unnecessary, the time and expense of needless litigation is avoided, and the policy of preserving the finality of judgments is enhanced. Id. at 579.

Since CPH timely filed its Motion and pled fraud with particularity, the only remaining issue is whether CPH clearly explained why MS's alleged conduct, if true, entitles it to have the final judgment set aside, which is the final threshold requirement to obtaining an evidentiary hearing. Flemenbaum, 636 So. 2d at 580. An evidentiary hearing is unnecessary if a Rule 1.540(b) motion merely undertakes to rehash matters previously litigated at trial or raises inconsequential "de minimis" matters. Id.; cf. Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 438.

Flemenbaum involved an ex-husband's "pro se motion for new trial based upon fraud upon the court under Rule 1.540," which alleged that his ex-wife lied about cohabitating with another man at trial. Id. The trial court did not afford the husband an evidentiary hearing. Id. On appeal, the Fourth District affirmed after finding that the husband's motion did not state facts that constituted fraud and, instead, sought to rehash matters fully explored at trial and "raised de minimis matters which had no effect on the final judgment." Id. The court cited examples of sufficiently pled Rule 1.540(b) motions that invoked the evidentiary hearing requirement. See, e.g., Stella v. Stella, 418 So. 2d 1029 (Fla. 4th DCA 1982) (if proven, wife's assertions that husband had testified that a statue was worth $100, while knowing that its true value was $35,000, would have changed the court's equitable distribution and, thus, entitled wife to an evidentiary hearing); Ross v. Bandi, 566 So. 2d 55 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (evidentiary hearing required where husband alleged that he learned of an IRS tax lien after the final hearing, which rendered his interest in a corporation worthless).

In Crowley, a husband was entitled to an evidentiary hearing on his Rule 1.540(b) motion seeking relief from a dissolution judgment. Crowley, 678 So. 2d at 438. The husband's motion, filed one week after the entry of the dissolution judgment, claimed entitlement to relief based upon "fraud ... committed by [his] wife and her counsel on the Court;" specifically, the motion claimed that the wife and her counsel had lied by omission about the fact that, unknown to the husband, he would soon be terminated from his job, which would dramatically change his financial condition and, in turn, the final judgment. Id. at 437-38. The Fourth District noted that, in contrast to Flemenbaum, the husband's motion was not "a mere undertaking to 'rehash' matters previously litigated at trial or an effort to raise inconsequential 'de minimis' matters." Id. at 438. Instead, "the core of the husband's motion, if true, would undermine the very foundation upon which the dissolution judgment and order were built." Id.

In this case, CPH's motion delves into MS's discovery misconduct, a topic that was extensively explored and affirmatively, unambiguously addressed by the Court at trial. For example and as noted in the Court's March 23, 2005 order granting partial default, the Court expressly considered MS's failure to timely notify CPH and the Court that its Certificate of Compliance was false. The only additional revelation raised in the post-verdict notices is the date on which MS's in-house counsel knew that certain backup tapes contained e-mails that may have been responsive to CPH's discovery requests. While the Court does not consider the discovery abuses and misconduct by MS, up to and including the alleged misconduct perpetrated by its legal team as de minimis when viewed through the lens of attorney professionalism, when viewed through the lens of a Rule 1.540(h) motion, it cannot be said that the additional attorney conduct revealed by the notices affected the new final judgment, especially considering the rationale behind the Fourth District's mandate, i.e. CPH's failure to prove damages at trial. In this strict sense, the conduct revealed by the notices fits squarely within Flemenbaum's de minimis language... .

Even considering as true all of CPH's allegations regarding MS's in-house legal team's knowledge, i.e., that the undisclosed backup tapes had potentially responsive e-mails, CPH is not entitled to have the new final judgment set aside. The Fourth District resolved the appeal in MS's favor on one sole ground — CPH failed to adequately prove its damages at trial. Any information about what MS's in-house legal team knew or did not know about e-mails on the backup tapes has no bearing whatsoever on this legal conclusion. Unlike Stella, Ross, and Crowley where the parties' assertions, if true, would have altered the final judgments from which relief was sought, CPH's assertions, even if true, would not have altered the legal course leading to the issuance of the new final judgment.

CPH sets forth two theories that unsuccessfully attempt to refute this conclusion. First, CPH argues that, had the Court known about MS's fraud, it would have affected the resolution of the sanctions motions. This argument assumes the Court would have meted out sanctions even more severe than the partial default in the first place; second, it assumes that the Court would have entered a total default against MS on all elements including reliance and damages; and third, it assumes that the Court would have "altered the burden of proof as to damages," which would have affected what the Fourth District reviewed on appeal. Building assumption upon assumption in such a manner has not been the basis of any successful Rule 1.540 motion in other cases this Court has reviewed.

There is no legal precedent supporting CPH's claim that the Court would or could have ordered MS to disprove the amount of damages. Indeed,

[ilt is well settled in Florida that a default judgment only admits to a plaintiffs entitlement to liquidated damages. "Damages are liquidated when the proper amount to be awarded can be determined with exactness from the cause of action as pleaded, i.e., from a pleaded agreement between parties, by an arithmetical calculation or by application of definite rules of law ... However, damages are not liquidated if the ascertainment of their exact sum requires the taking of testimony to ascertain facts upon which to base a value judgment.”

U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. C & C Beauty Sales, Inc., 674 So. 2d 169, 171 (Fla. 3d DCA 1996) (citations omitted). This securities fraud case clearly involves unliquidated damages. The Fourth District reversed due to insufficient expert testimony proving the "benefit of the bargain" amount of damages. Even if the Court had had the benefit of the information in the notices, a trial on the amount of damages was inevitable. The best case scenario for CPU would have been a default as to reliance and the fact of damages. Thus, the relief CPH asserts it would have received had the Court known this information is without any legal basis.

As a second theory, CPH argues that MS's alleged misconduct affected the jury's deliberations. Any effect was rendered moot. The only relevant import that MS's newly revealed conduct could have had would have been to alter the Discovery Misconduct Statement used by the jury for the sole purpose of determining the propriety of awarding punitive damages. Such a change has no impact on the issue of compensatory damages, which is a prerequisite to any award of punitive damages as found by the Fourth District on appeal. See Morgan Stanley & Co, Inc. v. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., 955 So. 2d 1124 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007).

At the hearing, CPH articulated an argument that had the Court entered a total default, it would have established the fact of damages and would, thus, have entitled CPH to an award of nominal damages. In turn an award of nominal damages would have entitled CPH to an award of punitive damages. In addition to being highly speculative, this argument directly contradicts the Fourth District's express findings in the appeal of this case:

Even if CPH established the fact of some unquantified damage (which theoretically could have supported a nominal damage award), this is not enough to justify a punitive damage in a fraud case. Punitive damages for fraud cannot be based on nominal damages alone.

Morgan Stanley, 955 So. 2d at 1132-33. Thus, this second theory also lacks merit.

In sum, the new final judgment entered in favor of MS followed a clear mandate from the Fourth District accompanied by an opinion explaining that CPH failed to prove its compensatory damages. The Fourth District found that CPH's strategy included instructing its damages expert to assume a "zero" value on the date of closing. Id. at 1127. It is inconceivable how the newly found information in the notices would have affected this choice of strategy for proving damages; whatever information MS's in-house legal counsel told CPH and the Court, deceitful or not, was ultimately irrelevant as to this choice.

Essentially, the trial court ruled that the alleged fraud, even if true, did not affect the outcome because it had no bearing upon CPH's failure to prove damages by the proper legal measure. The court rejected CPH's argument that it was not required to show prejudice because Morgan Stanley's in-house lawyers committed a fraud on the court.

In Parker v. Parker, 950 So. 2d 388, 392 (Fla. 2007), the Florida Supreme Court discussed fraud as a basis for relief from judgment and used the terms "fraud on the court" and "extrinsic fraud" interchangeably. The court distinguished extrinsic fraud from intrinsic fraud, quoting from its opinion in DeClaire v. Yohanon, 453 So. 2d 375, 377 (Fla. 1984):

In essence, extrinsic fraud is conduct which prevents a party from trying an issue before the court, and the prevention itself becomes a collateral issue to the cause; whereas intrinsic fraud is the presentation of misleading information on an issue before the court that was tried or could have been tried.

950 So. 2d at 391-92. DeClaire explained that only what was defined as "extrinsic fraud" could be considered "fraud on the court."

The trial court determined that the discovery misconduct committed by Morgan Stanley's in-counsel constituted intrinsic fraud under Florida law, rather than extrinsic fraud or "fraud upon the court." Finding that the discovery misconduct did not prevent CPH from participating in the cause and trying issues before the court, the court stated: "Indeed, the court unambiguously considered and addressed sanctionable discovery misconduct at trial in entering the partial default. Thus, it can be said that such matters were tried or were so in issue that they might have been tried."

In the final analysis, however, the court concluded that the intrinsic/extrinsic distinction was not significant, because a fraud claim of any type brought under Rule 1.540(b) is subject to the Flemenbaum requirement to show the effect of the fraud on the final judgment.

CPH relied mainly on federal cases for its argument that litigation misconduct involving attorneys, as opposed to witnesses and parties, constitutes fraud of the court, for which no showing of prejudice is necessary. See Dixon v. Comm’r of Internal Revenue, 316 F.3d 1041, 1046 (9th Cir. 2003) (declaring that, “[f]raud on the court occurs when the misconduct harms the integrity of the judicial process, regardless of whether the opposing party is prejudiced.”).

However, the trial court, noting a split of authority among the federal circuits, sided with the Seventh Circuit’s reasoning that prejudice is required. See Drobny v. Comm’r of Internal Revenue, 113 F.3d 670, 678 (7th Cir. 1997). There, the court stated:

We are of the opinion that the petitioners were required to demonstrate, not only that the respondent engaged in conduct that was intended to mislead the court, but – of paramount importance – that the actual conduct affected the outcome of their case. ... We do not agree with the petitioner’s argument that a final judgment of the Tax Court should be subject to attack (possibly, as in this case, many years later) when the allegedly improper conduct had no effect on the outcome of the decision. The rule of finality lends stability to our legal system, and it is especially important in this litigious era when adversely affected parties seize upon almost any opportunity to prolong litigation.

The Seventh Circuit’s position is more consistent with Florida policy considerations favoring the finality of judgments and with Florida law requiring a prejudicial effect on the outcome of a case. Without doubt, the public interest in the fairness and integrity of the judicial process in an important policy concern. But, as the trial court pointed out in its order, “[a] Rule 1.540(b) motion is not the appropriate vehicle for handling attorney misconduct that does not prejudice the final judgment ... Rather, such misconduct is more appropriately vindicated via criminal contempt proceedings and/or grievances filed with the Florida Bar.” Because the trial court correctly determined that CPH was unable to show that the fraud affected the outcome of the case, it did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for relief from judgment.

Affirmed.
