INFORMATION STATEMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 14(F) OF THE SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934, AS AMENDED, AND RULE 14F-1 THEREUNDER

This Information Statement is being mailed on or about March 18, 1998 to holders of record as of March 18, 1998 of shares of Common Stock, par value $.01 per share ('Company Common Stock' or 'Coleman Common Stock'), of The Coleman Company, Inc., a Delaware corporation (the 'Company' or 'Coleman'), in connection with (i) the election of persons designated by Sunbeam Corporation, a Delaware corporation ('Sunbeam'), as directors of the Company otherwise than at a meeting of the stockholders of the Company and (ii) the resignation of the current directors of the Company, in each case, pursuant to an Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 27, 1998 (the 'Holdings Merger Agreement'), among Sunbeam, Laser Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam ('LAC'), Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., a Delaware corporation ('Parent Holdings'), and CLN Holdings Inc., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of Parent Holdings ('CLN Holdings'). CLN Holdings is an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of Mafco Holdings Inc., a corporation wholly owned by Ronald O. Perelman ('Mafco'), and is the indirect beneficial owner of 44,067,520 shares of Company Common Stock, representing approximately 82.4% of the total number of outstanding shares.

Pursuant to the Holdings Merger Agreement, LAC will be merged with CLN Holdings (the 'Holdings Merger'). In the Holdings Merger, all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of CLN Holdings will be converted into the right to receive (i) 14,099,749 fully paid nonassessable shares of common stock, par value $.01 per share, of Sunbeam ('Sunbeam Common Stock') and (ii) $159,956,756 in cash, without interest thereon. As a result of the Holdings Merger, CLN Holdings will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam and Sunbeam will become the indirect owner of approximately 82.4% of the outstanding Company Common Stock.

At the same time that it entered into the Holdings Merger Agreement, Sunbeam also entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 27, 1998 (the 'Company Merger Agreement'), with the Company and Camper Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam ('CAC'). Pursuant to the Company Merger Agreement, following the consummation of the Holdings Merger, CAC will be merged with the Company (the 'Company Merger'). In the Company Merger, each outstanding share of Company Common Stock (other than shares held indirectly by Sunbeam including through Coleman Worldwide Corporation ('Coleman Worldwide') and dissenting shares, if any) will be converted into the right to receive (i) 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam Common Stock and (ii) $6.44 in cash, without interest thereon. Upon consummation of the Company Merger, the Company will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam.

Consummation of the Holdings Merger is subject to the expiration of the applicable waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, as amended, and the satisfaction of certain other customary conditions.

It is currently anticipated that the Holdings Merger will be completed later this month or early next month. Consummation of the Company Merger is subject to the completion of the Holdings Merger and the filing of certain definitive documents required in connection therewith with the Securities and Exchange Commission. It is anticipated that the Company Merger will be consummated later this Spring. Neither the Holdings Merger nor the Company Merger is conditioned upon approval of Sunbeam's or the Company's stockholders.

Additional information with respect to the Holdings Merger and the Company Merger and the shares of Sunbeam Common Stock to be received by the Company's stockholders in the Company Merger will be contained in an Information Statement and Prospectus to be mailed to all holders of Company Common Stock prior to the consummation of the Company Merger.

Pursuant to the Holdings Merger Agreement, all current members of the Company's board of directors will remain as directors until the consummation of the Holdings Merger, at which time they will resign from their positions as directors of the Company, and up to six individuals designated by Sunbeam will become directors of

REPORT ON EXECUTIVE COMPENSATION BY THE COMPENSATION COMMITTEE

The Compensation Committee is comprised entirely of directors who are not officers or employees of the Company. The Compensation Committee is composed of Messrs. Robinson (Chairman), Drapkin and Slovin, and Ms. Jordan. The Compensation Committee is responsible for:

- o Reviewing and approving the salary and annual incentive compensation of the Company's executive officers;
- o Reviewing, approving or modifying performance standards against which annual incentive compensation awards will be made for executive officers;
- o Reviewing, approving or modifying annual incentive compensation awards for executive officers;
- o Reviewing, approving or modifying stock option awards for all employees, including executive officers;
- o Reviewing, approving or modifying supplemental benefit or compensation plans which are available to designated executives;
- o Reviewing and recommending to the Board of Directors changes to current executive officer benefit plans or the adoption of new executive compensation programs requiring shareholder approval; and
- o Reviewing and acting as appropriate on any other issues relating to executive compensation and brought to the Compensation Committee by the Chairman for its consideration.

COMPENSATION PHILOSOPHY

In 1994, the compensation philosophy for the Company was developed and adopted. The philosophy includes the following principles:

- o Support the achievement of the Company's desired financial performance and return to shareholders;
- o Provide compensation that will attract and retain the required high level talent; and
- o Align executive officers' interests with the Company's success by linking both annual incentive compensation and long-term incentive compensation, in the form of stock option and/or stock appreciation rights awards, with the Company's success in achieving performance goals.

The executive compensation philosophy for the Company, as approved and adopted by the Compensation Committee, provides for an overall level of potential compensation opportunity that, if aggressive financial goals are achieved and superior shareholder returns are realized, will be at a 75th percentile level of competitiveness with consumer products companies of comparable size. To determine pay level opportunities, the Compensation Committee consulted with outside consultants and with the Company's officer responsible for human resources.

The Compensation Committee intends, over time, to set salaries in a manner consistent with the foregoing. Annual incentive and stock option opportunities are intended to be set above predicted competitive norms. Actual individual compensation levels may be greater or lesser than median competitive levels, based upon annual and long-term Company performance. The Compensation Committee, at its discretion, sets executive compensation at levels which it judges are justified by external, internal and other circumstances.

COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL TAX LEGISLATION

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 added Section 162(m) to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the 'Code'), which generally precludes the Company and other public companies from taking a tax deduction for compensation over $1 million which is not 'performance-based' and is paid, or otherwise taxable, to executives named in the Summary Compensation Table and employed by the Company at the end of the applicable tax year. The Company attempts to preserve as much deduction as possible without undercutting the compensation objectives set forth above. Each director on the Compensation Committee is an 'outside director' within the meaning of Section 162(m) of the Code.

BASE COMPENSATION

During 1997, the base compensation of each executive officer was reviewed and compared to median levels of competitiveness for similarly sized consumer products companies. The Company has adopted the practice of base compensation increases for executive officers based on an annual review of the executive performance and to adjust compensation to keep it approximately to the standard described above.

ANNUAL CASH INCENTIVE COMPENSATION

The Chief Executive Officer was paid a bonus based on the targets in the Incentive Plan, even though a certain condition to payment of the target bonus was not satisfied. The other named executive officers who were employed by Coleman at the end of the year were also paid a bonus based on the same criteria. During 1997, no bonus was paid to the former Chief Executive Officer. The bonuses were paid to recognize the substantial progress made in the restructuring of Coleman.

LONG TERM INCENTIVES

In 1997, the Compensation Committee approved option grants to the Chief Executive Officer of 200,000 shares on February 11, 1997, at an exercise price of $12.25 and 300,000 shares on April 14, 1997 at an exercise price of $14.00. It also approved grants totaling in the aggregate 160,000 shares to the other named executive officers employed by the Company at the end of 1997. The Compensation Committee believes that these grants, which were primarily made in the first half of 1997, provide an appropriate link between the interests of executives with those of the Company's shareholders.

OTHER BENEFITS

The Company provides medical and retirement benefits to executive officers that are generally available to Company salaried employees, including participation in medical and dental benefit plans, a qualified 401(k) employee savings plan and a qualified defined benefit retirement plan. In addition, the Company provides certain executive officers and key management employees a nonqualified benefit equalization plan which is designed to make up for benefits that would otherwise be lost due to various tax limitations. The Company's benefit plans are intended to provide a median level of benefits when compared to similarly sized consumer products companies. The Company also provides certain executive officers with certain executive perquisites which may be deemed to be a personal benefit or constitute compensation to such executive officers, including (for example) car allowances and reimbursements, and club membership dues.

The Compensation Committee believes the executive compensation philosophy and programs are appropriate and serve the interests of the shareholders and the Company.

PENSION PLANS

Retirement Plan. The Company participates in the New Coleman Company, Inc. Retirement Plan for Salaried Employees (the 'Salaried Pension Plan') which replaced a prior plan that was terminated on June 30, 1989. Participants in the Salaried Pension Plan include participants under the prior plan and certain salaried exempt employees who are at least 21 years old and have completed at least one year of service with the Company.

Benefits to participants vest fully after five years of Vesting Service (as defined in the Salaried Pension Plan) and such benefits are determined primarily by a formula based on the average of the five consecutive years of greatest compensation earned during the last ten years of the participant's service to the Company, and the number of years of service attained by the individual participant. Such compensation is composed primarily of regular base salary and contributions to qualified deferred compensation plans and does not include amounts paid pursuant to the Company's annual cash incentive compensation plans. Participants make no contributions to the Salaried Pension Plan.

Excess Benefit Plan. The Company participates in the New Coleman Holdings Inc. Excess Benefit Plan (the 'Excess Benefit Plan') for designated employees who are participants in the Salaried Pension Plan and whose retirement income from the Salaried Pension Plan in the form of payment to be made under the Salaried Pension Plan exceeds the maximum permissible under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, as amended, and certain Code provisions. The Excess Benefit Plan supplements the Salaried Pension Plan by providing additional retirement benefits to its participants in excess of the maximum amount permitted under the Salaried Pension Plan, which benefits generally are payable in conjunction with payments made under the Salaried Pension Plan. Benefits payable under the Excess Benefit Plan have been included in the estimated annual benefits payable listed on the table following discussion of the Consolidated Supplemental Retirement Plan. The Excess Benefit Plan was amended and restated effective January 1, 1995 to add a provision allowing annual cash incentive compensation plan payments to designated participants to be included as compensation in the formula used to determine benefits under the Excess Benefit Plan. Thirteen executives participated in this feature of the Excess Benefit Plan during 1997.

Consolidated Supplemental Retirement Plan. In addition to the obligation of the Company under the Salaried Pension Plan and the Excess Benefit Plan, the Company had committed to provide other supplemental retirement benefits solely for Mr. Hammes, including credit for additional years of service and certain other formula changes. Pursuant to an agreement entered into with Mr. Hammes in February 1997, discussed above, Mr. Hammes is no longer a participant in the Consolidated Supplemental Retirement Plan.

The following table shows estimated annual benefits payable under the Salaried Pension Plan and the Excess Benefit Plan, and reflects the straight life benefit form of payment for employees, assumes normal retirement at age 65, and reflects deductions for Social Security and other offset amounts:

Benefits under the Salaried Pension Plan are payable upon normal retirement at age 65, and at age 55 following vested termination, disability, and death. A participant may elect to commence early benefit payments at any time after the participant's 55th birthday or may retire with 30 years of Vesting Service at amounts reduced from those payable upon normal retirement age. As of December 31, 1997, credited years of service for each of the individuals listed on the Summary Compensation Table are as follows: Mr. Levin, 8.7 years; Mr. Ramon, 4.6 years; Mr. Goldman, 4 years; Mr. Stearns, 21.2 years; Mr. McEvoy, 3.8 years; Mr. Hammes, 3.4 years; Mr. van den Bergh, zero years; and Mr. Kaplan, 1.1 years. In accordance with Mr. Hammes' termination of employment agreement (see Employment Agreements and Termination of Employment Arrangements), discussed above, Mr.

Hammes will be entitled to receive a pension of $15,110 per month commencing March 1, 1999.

Pursuant to the Company Merger Agreement, from and after the effective time of the Holdings Merger, Sunbeam has agreed to allow Company employees to participate in Sunbeam benefit plans on substantially the same basis as similarly situated Sunbeam employees, and has also agreed to cause the Company to continue its employee benefit plans for a period of at least six (6) months following such date. Sunbeam has also agreed to give Company employees full credit for purposes of eligibility and vesting of benefits and benefit accrual for service with the Company and its affiliates prior to the effective time of the Holdings Merger, provided, however, that no such crediting of service results in duplication of benefits.

SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS FOR CHANGE IN CONTROL

Upon consummation of the Holdings Merger, Sunbeam will have acquired control of the Company. The total amount of funds and other consideration required by Sunbeam to consummate the Holdings Merger is $159,956,756 in cash and 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam Common Stock (collectively, the 'Holdings Merger Consideration'). Sunbeam expects to obtain the cash portion of the Holdings Merger Consideration from a combination of new revolving and term credit facilities and the issuance of other debt securities that are expected to be issued by Sunbeam concurrently with the closing of the Holdings Merger. Sunbeam has made no decision with respect to repayment or refinancing of such indebtedness and may repay such indebtedness out of its internally generated funds or from proceeds of a subsequent financing. Any decisions with respect to such repayment or refinancing will be made based on a review from time to time of the advisability of particular transactions, as well as on prevailing interest rates and financial and economic conditions.

CERTAIN RELATIONSHIPS AND RELATED TRANSACTIONS

Relationship with MacAndrews & Forbes. Ronald O. Perelman, through MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ('MacAndrews Holdings') which is wholly owned by Mafco (together with MacAndrews Holdings, 'MacAndrews & Forbes'), beneficially owns indirectly approximately 82% of Coleman's Common Stock. Due to its stock ownership, MacAndrews & Forbes controls Coleman and is able to elect the entire board of directors. On February 27, 1998, the Holdings Merger Agreement and the Company Merger Agreement were executed as described in further detail above. As a result of the Holdings Merger, CLN Holdings will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam and Sunbeam will become the indirect owner of approximately 82% of the outstanding Coleman Common Stock. Additionally, upon consummation of the Holdings Merger, all of the current members of Coleman's board of directors will resign from their positions as directors and the five Sunbeam Designees will become directors of the Company.

MacAndrews & Forbes is a diversified holding company with interests in several industries. The principal executive offices of MacAndrews & Forbes are located at 35 East 62nd Street, New York, New York 10021.

Cross-Indemnification Agreement. Coleman and New Coleman Holdings Inc. ('New Coleman Holdings') are parties to a cross-indemnification agreement (the 'Cross-Indemnification Agreement'), pursuant to which Coleman has agreed to indemnify New Coleman Holdings against all liabilities related to the outdoor products business transferred to Coleman, and New Coleman Holdings has agreed to indemnify Coleman and its immediate corporate parent against all liabilities of New Coleman Holdings other than liabilities related to the outdoor products business transferred to Coleman. The liabilities that Coleman will indemnify New Coleman Holdings against include (i) asserted and potential product liability claims arising out of products manufactured or sold by the outdoor products business, and (ii) asserted and potential environmental claims and liabilities related to facilities currently or formerly owned or used by the outdoor products business.

Tax Sharing Agreement. Coleman is included in the consolidated tax group of which Mafco is the common parent and Coleman's tax liability will be included in the consolidated Federal income tax liability of Mafco. Coleman is also included in certain state and local tax returns of Mafco or its affiliates. Coleman participates in a Tax Sharing Agreement (the 'Tax Sharing Agreement') pursuant to which it pays to Coleman Worldwide amounts equal to the taxes that Coleman would otherwise have to pay if it were to file separate Federal, state or local income tax returns (including any amounts determined to be due as a result of a redetermination of the tax liability of Mafco arising from an audit or otherwise). Under Federal law, Coleman is subject to liability for the consolidated Federal income tax liabilities of the consolidated group of which Mafco is the common parent, for any taxable period during which Coleman or a subsidiary is a member of that consolidated group. Mafco has agreed, however, to indemnify Coleman for any such Federal income tax liability (and certain state and local tax liabilities) of Mafco or any of its subsidiaries that Coleman is actually required to pay. Because the payments to be made by Coleman under the Tax Sharing Agreement are determined by the amount of taxes that Coleman would otherwise have to pay if it were to file separate Federal, state or local income tax returns, the Tax Sharing Agreement will benefit Mafco to the extent that Mafco can offset the taxable income generated by Coleman against losses and tax credits generated by Mafco and its other subsidiaries.

Following the consummation of the Holdings Merger, Coleman will no longer be included in the Mafco consolidated tax group. The Tax Sharing Agreement will be terminated on the date of the Holdings Merger. The Holdings Merger Agreement provides for certain tax indemnities and tax sharing payments with respect to Mafco, Coleman and their respective affiliates.

Insurance Programs. Coleman is insured under policies maintained by MacAndrews & Forbes or its affiliates, including health and life insurance, workers compensation, and liability insurance. The Company's expense represents its expected costs for self-insured retentions and premiums for excess coverage insurance. For 1997, such expense, including the Company's allocable share of premiums for such insurance, was approximately $13.3 million. Management believes that the terms for such insurance are at least as favorable as terms that could be obtained by the Company were it separately insured.

Services Provided by and to Other Affiliates. From time to time, Coleman purchases from affiliates, at negotiated rates, specialized accounting and other services. Coleman also provides at negotiated rates specialized accounting services and other services to an affiliate. The net expense for such services was approximately $400,000 during 1997. Coleman believes that the terms of such arrangements are at least as favorable to Coleman as those it could have negotiated with nonaffiliated parties. In addition, certain employees of the Company have been paid by MacAndrews & Forbes or other affiliates of the Company, and the Company reimburses such affiliates for the compensation expense for such employees.

Purchases of Inactive Subsidiaries. During the first quarter of 1997, Coleman purchased an inactive subsidiary from an affiliate for approximately $1.0 million, plus a portion of certain tax benefits to the extent such benefits are realized by Coleman. During the fourth quarter of 1997, Coleman purchased an inactive subsidiary from an affiliate for which the Company agreed to pay 50% of the tax benefits realized by Coleman when and if such benefits are realized.

Coleman expects to realize certain tax benefits from the tax losses of such subsidiaries.

Office Lease. Coleman subleases its office space in New York City from an affiliate. The rent paid by Coleman represents the allocable portion, based on the space leased, of the rent paid by the affiliate to its third party landlord. The expense for such rent during 1997 was approximately $158,000. Coleman believes that the terms of the sublease are at least as favorable to Coleman as those it could have negotiated with nonaffiliated parties.

Pension Plans. New Coleman Holdings maintains pension and other retirement plans in various forms covering employees of Coleman who meet eligibility requirements. New Coleman Holdings also has an unfunded excess benefit plan covering certain of Coleman's U.S. employees whose benefits under the plans described above are limited by provisions of the Code. Coleman pays to New Coleman Holdings its allocable costs of maintaining such plans for Coleman's employees. As part of the consummation of the Holdings Merger, such pension and other benefits plans will be assigned to and assumed by Coleman.

Other Arrangements. At the beginning of 1995, Mr. McEvoy, an Executive Vice President of Coleman, had a noninterest-bearing loan from Coleman in the amount of $63,333. At the end of 1997, the principal balance of the loan was $0.

During 1997, Coleman purchased licensing services from an affiliate, for which it paid approximately $650,000.

During 1997, Coleman sold products to an affiliate, for which it received approximately $900,000.

During 1997, Coleman used an airplane owned by a corporation of which a director of Coleman is a stockholder, for which Coleman paid approximately $158,000.

During 1997, a subsidiary of Coleman paid approximately $254,000 for warehouse space leased from a real estate partnership in which Mr. Goldman, an Executive Vice President of Coleman, and three other immediate family members of Mr. Goldman's are partners. A manufacturing business owned by Mr. Goldman's father contracted with Coleman's subsidiary for the manufacture of goods sold to the subsidiary, for which the subsidiary paid approximately $2.6 million during 1997. Pursuant to the agreement by which Coleman acquired the Eastpak business, Mr. Goldman is entitled to certain additional payments from Coleman upon Eastpak achieving certain operating targets. In accordance with such agreement, a final additional payment of $12.0 million was paid to Mr. Goldman for 1997 financial performance.

SUMMARY

The following information does not purport to be complete and is qualified in its entirety by the more detailed financial and other information appearing elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum and in the documents incorporated by reference herein. The offering of the Debentures is referred to herein as the "Offering." For a discussion of certain important factors that should be considered by prospective purchasers of the Debentures, see "Risk Factors" beginning on page 12.

THE COMPANY

The Company is a leading designer, manufacturer and marketer of branded consumer products. The Company's primary business is the manufacture, marketing and distribution of durable household consumer products through mass merchandisers, home centers and other channels (such as Wal-Mart, Kmart and Home Depot) in the United States and internationally. The Company also sells its products to commercial end users such as hotels and other institutions. Sunbeam products enjoy a long-standing reputation for quality, and a majority of the Company's sales are from products which hold the number one or two market share in their respective product categories. In 1997, the Company's net sales were approximately $1,168 million.

The Company's five product categories are: (1) Appliances (mixers, blenders, food steamers, bread makers, rice cookers, coffee makers, toasters, irons and garment steamers); (2) Health at Home (vaporizers, humidifiers, air cleaners, water filters, massagers and scales); (3) Personal Care and Comfort (shower massagers, hair clippers and trimmers, electric warming blankets); (4) Outdoor Cooking (electric, gas and charcoal grills and grill accessories); and (5) Away From Home (clippers and related products for professional beauty, barber and veterinarian trade and sales of products to commercial and institutional channels). The International Group is responsible for sales (primarily of small appliances, personal care, grills and comfort products, professional clippers and related products) in all countries other than the United States.

The Company has a management team with extensive consumer products experience and proven expertise in cost containment and operational improvement. On February 20, 1998, each of the Company's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Mr. Dunlap; the Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer, Mr. Kersh; and the Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, Mr. Fannin, signed new three year employment contracts with the Company which include substantial equity-based compensation.

Competitive Strengths

Sunbeam competes in markets with well-established United States and foreign companies on the basis of various strengths, depending on the country, product category and distribution channels. The Company believes that it is well-positioned to pursue continued growth as a result of these competitive strengths, which include the following:

Market Leadership. The majority of Sunbeam sales are from products in which the Company holds the number one or two market share position. The Company believes that this combination of leading brand-name products and breadth of product offerings makes Sunbeam an attractive vendor to all retailers, particularly those who are consolidating their suppliers.

Brand Name Recognition. The Sunbeam® and Oster® brands have been household names for generations. The Company believes that these brands, along with its other well-known secondary brand names such as Mixmaster®, Osterizer® and Grillmaster®, draw customers into retail stores specifically to purchase products bearing these brand names. During 1997, the Company spent over $56 million, or approximately 5% of its 1997 net sales, for advertising and sales promotion to support brand recognition.

Distribution Network. The Company has one of the premier mass merchant distribution networks serving large national retailers in the United States. The Company also has a strong network of well-established distributors and service organizations in Latin America. The Company supports its customers' needs with strong warehousing and distribution capabilities, a broad, high-quality product portfolio, electronic data interchange and just-in-time product delivery capabilities. The Company markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, department stores, catalogues, Company-owned outlet stores and pet supply retailers, as well as independent distributors and military post exchange outlets.

Strong Position in Consolidating Retail Environment. The consolidation trend in the retail industry has resulted in the emergence and global expansion of large mass merchandisers. These merchandisers demand financially strong, efficient suppliers who offer a broad range of innovative, quality products, have the ability to make timely shipments in large volumes and provide strong customer, promotional and merchandising support. The Company continues to benefit from this trend and believes it has the opportunity to further expand distribution with a number of major retailers while increasing its penetration of existing accounts. In 1997, the Company sold products to virtually all of the top 100 U.S. retailers, including Wal-Mart, Price Costco, Kmart, Target Stores, Home Depot and Sears.

Restructuring and Growth Plan

In the fall of 1996, Sunbeam announced a major restructuring and growth plan under newly appointed Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Albert Dunlap. The restructuring, which was recently completed, included the redefinition of Sunbeam's core products, divestiture of non-core businesses, assembling a new management team, and the closing of 18 factories, 43 warehouses and 5 headquarters offices. The Company also consolidated all purchasing functions, reduced the number of stock keeping units ("SKU's") from approximately 11,400 to 2,000 and outsourced certain of the administrative, manufacturing and distribution activities. These actions led to a reduction of nearly half the work force (approximately 6,000 jobs). In 1997, net sales grew 18.7% and operating margin improved to 17.1% from 0.5% (excluding the impact of special charges) in 1996, with operating margins reaching 20% in the fourth quarter of 1997.

The Acquisitions

Following the successful restructuring of the Company, the management team has extended its strategic focus to identify underperforming companies with strong brand names. The Company intends to capitalize on its proven capability in cost containment and operational improvement by acquiring such companies and their premier brand names, thereby broadening the Sunbeam product offering spectrum and presenting opportunities to eliminate redundant or inefficient operations.

On March 2, 1998, the Company announced that it had entered into separate agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert (collectively, the "Acquisitions"). The Company is acquiring these companies primarily due to their strong and established brand names, the potential opportunity to streamline operations, the diversification they provide to the Company's product base and the potential for revenue and operational synergies. In addition, the Company believes that its existing international geographic marketing and distribution strengths and those of the acquired companies will significantly complement each other. The Company's management team believes that these Acquisitions will give the Company a platform from which to capitalize on the fragmentation and potential consolidation of the durable household consumer products sector.

Coleman. With 1997 net revenues of approximately $1.154 million, Coleman is a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the worldwide outdoor recreation market. Its products have been sold domestically and internationally under the Coleman brand name since the 1920s. Coleman attributes its leading market position to the strength of its brand name, the breadth of products sold, product quality and innovation, marketing, distribution and manufacturing expertise.

- Outdoor Recreation: This product category includes lanterns and stoves, propane and butane fuel, coolers and jugs, recreational soft goods (including tents, sleeping bags, backpacks and duffel bags), outdoor furniture, electric lights, spas and camping accessories. Coleman believes it is the leading worldwide manufacturer of lanterns and stoves for outdoor recreational use and a leading supplier to the worldwide camping and outdoor recreation market of propane and butane cartridges and camping fuel. Coleman's products are marketed under the brand names Coleman®, Camping Gas® and East Pak®.
- Hardware: This product category includes portable generators and air compressors marketed under the Powermate® brand name. Coleman is a leading worldwide manufacturer and distributor of portable generators. These products are distributed predominantly through mass merchandisers and home center chains.

Based on the assumption that all presently exercisable Coleman options will be exercised prior to the closing of the Coleman acquisition, the Company expects to issue and deliver approximately 21.3 million shares of Common Stock (with an aggregate value of approximately $1 billion based on current market prices) and to pay an aggregate of $221 million in cash in connection with the Coleman acquisition. On such basis, the Coleman acquisition is valued at approximately $2.2 billion (including the assumption of approximately $976 million of indebtedness). If none of the presently exercisable Coleman options are exercised prior to closing of the Coleman acquisition, the Company would expect to issue and deliver approximately 19.4 million shares of Common Stock and pay aggregate cash consideration of $261 million in connection with the Coleman acquisition.

Signature Brands. With net sales of approximately $276 million for its fiscal year ended September 28, 1997, Signature Brands is a leading manufacturer of a comprehensive line of consumer and professional products. Signature Brands attributes its leading market position to its strong brand name recognition, distribution in major domestic high volume retail outlets, marketing and sales promotion efforts, electronic data interchange capabilities, merchandise flow systems and established relationships with its retail customers.

- Consumer Products: Signature Brands markets its consumer products under the Mr. Coffee[®], Health o meter[®], Counselor[®] and Borg[®] brand names. Signature Brands produces and markets an extensive line of Mr. Coffee[®] brand automatic drip coffeemakers, espresso/cappuccino makers and iced and hot teamakers. Mr. Coffee, Inc. has been the leading producer of automatic drip coffeemakers in the U.S. since 1975. In addition, Mr. Coffee[®] is the leading brand of basket-type coffee filters in the United States. Other consumer products marketed under the Mr. Coffee[®] brand name include water filtration products, coffeemaker related accessories such as replacement decanters and mug warmers, and other kitchen countertop appliances such as food dehydrators. Signature Brands manufactures a comprehensive line of Health o meter[®] brand analog (mechanical) and digital (electronic) floor scales and waist-high and eye-level scales. Capitalizing on the recently acquired rights to the Borg[®] and Counselor[®] brand names, Signature Brands intends to introduce in 1998 a new line of Borg[®] scales that are distinctly European in design for department and specialty stores. Counselor[®] scales, to be introduced in 1998, will represent opening price point scales for the mass market.
- Professional Products: Professional products include the Pelouze[®] and Health o meter[®] brands of office, foodservice and medical scales and Mr. Coffee[®] brand commercial coffeemakers. Products sold as professional products include analog and digital scales for a full range of medical uses, including traditional balance beam scales, pediatric scales, wheelchair ramp scales, chair and sling scales for non-ambulatory patients, and home healthcare scales. Signature Brands' office products, marketed under the Pelouze[®] brand name, include analog and digital scales designed to provide mailing solutions for small, commercial establishments, home offices and departments within larger companies that process a small to medium volume of letters and packages daily. Pelouze[®] foodservice products include analog and digital portion control scales, thermometers and timers for commercial and non-commercial applications.

The Signature Brands transaction is valued at approximately $253 million, consisting of approximately $84 million in cash and the assumption of approximately $169 million of indebtedness.

First Alert. With 1997 net sales of approximately $187 million, First Alert is the market leader in smoke and carbon monoxide detectors in the United States. First Alert's market position is supported by the strength of the First Alert[®] brand name, which First Alert believes is the most widely recognized consumer brand in the home safety market. First Alert has capitalized on the First Alert[®] brand name and its leading smoke detector market share to develop and market a broad range of residential safety products.

- Smoke Detectors: First Alert's smoke detector product line consists of UL listed photoelectric and ionization smoke detectors. First Alert has the leading U.S. market share for these products. First Alert markets its smoke detectors under three principal brand names: the First Alert[®] premium brand name, which is featured in media and public relations promotional campaigns; the Family Guard[®] brand name, which is marketed as a lower priced, functional alternative for those consumers who are price sensitive; and the BRK[®] brand name, which is sold to the wholesale electrical market.
- Carbon Monoxide Detectors: These products include carbon monoxide detectors, first introduced by First Alert in September 1993, with biomimetic sensors sold under the First Alert[®] and Family Guard[®] brand names. First Alert holds the leading market position in the carbon monoxide detector market.
- Fire Extinguishers: First Alert's disposable fire extinguisher product line was introduced in 1985 to complement its First Alert[®] brand smoke detectors. First Alert currently markets a full range of fire extinguisher products for use by the consumer, including fire extinguishers for use in the kitchen, garage, workshop, automobiles and boats. These products are sold under the Sure Grip® brand name which is one of the leading brand names in the U.S. retail fire extinguisher market.

The First Alert transaction is valued at approximately $178 million, consisting of approximately $133 million in cash and the assumption of approximately $45 million of indebtedness.

Although the Company has entered into separate definitive agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, subject to various customary closing conditions, including the receipt of required regulatory approvals, there can be no assurance that any or all of such transactions will be consummated.

For further information with respect to the effects of the Acquisitions, see "Capitalization," "Unaudited Pro Forma Condensed Financial Statements" and "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Financing Plan

In order to finance the cash portion of the Acquisitions and the repayment of all or substantially all of the outstanding indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, the Company intends to negotiate a new bank credit facility (the "New Credit Facility") and to issue the Debentures offered hereby. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed." For a summary description of the expected terms of the New Credit Facility, see "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

The Company intends to repay all or substantially all of the currently outstanding indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert as promptly as practicable following consummation of each Acquisition, subject to applicable notice provisions and other prepayment terms of the applicable indebtedness. Such repayments are expected to be funded with borrowings under the New Credit Facility and from the net proceeds of the Offering of the Debentures. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed," "Financing Plan and Use of Proceeds" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

The following table sets forth the expected sources and uses of cash in connection with the financing of the Acquisitions:

Sources	Uses
(in millions)
New Credit Facility(a)	Repayment of existing indebtedness(b)
$1,536.9	$1,504.3
Debentures offered hereby	Cash Acquisition consideration(c)
500.0	477.6
	Fees and expenses(d)
	55.0
Total	Total
$2,036.9	$2,036.9

(a) The New Credit Facility is expected to consist of a $1.5 billion term-debt facility, and a $500 million revolving credit facility, only $36.9 million of which is expected to be initially drawn down. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

(b) Represents the repayment of existing indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Signature Brands and First Alert of $202.2 million, $1,077.2 million, $179.9 million and $45.0 million, respectively. Existing indebtedness reflects amounts outstanding as of December 28, 1997, except for indebtedness of CLN Holdings issued at an original issue discount which reflects principal accreted through an assumed repayment date of May 15, 1997. The foregoing amounts include $7.0 million, $100.3 million and $5.5 million of estimated prepayment premiums related to the early retirement of indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings and Signature Brands, respectively. As of the actual date of repayment, the outstanding amount of existing indebtedness to be repaid may be greater than the amount shown above due to increased borrowings to finance working capital requirements. The Company intends to refinance any such additional indebtedness using its unused borrowing capacity under the New Credit Facility. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

(c) Represents the estimated net cash consideration payable (including the cash-out of options) in connection with the Acquisitions in the amounts of $261.1 million, $83.8 million and $132.8 million for Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, respectively.

(d) Represents estimated transaction costs in connection with the Acquisitions and debt refinancing, including financial advisory fees, Initial Purchaser's commissions, bank fees, and legal and accounting fees and expenses.

THE OFFERING

Securities Offered	$1,300,000,000 principal amount at maturity (plus up to an additional $195,000,000 principal amount at maturity if the Initial Purchaser's over-allotment option is exercised in full) of Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures due 2018 (the "Debentures"). There will be no periodic interest payments on the Debentures. See "Description of Debentures—General."
Yield to Maturity of Debentures	% per annum (computed on a semi-annual bond equivalent basis) calculated from March , 1998.
Conversion	The Debentures are convertible, at the option of the holder, at any time after 90 days following the latest date of original issuance thereof and prior to maturity, unless previously redeemed or otherwise purchased by the Company, into Common Stock at the rate of shares per $1,000 principal amount at maturity of the Debentures (the "Conversion Rate"). The Conversion Rate will not be adjusted for accrued Original Issue Discount (as defined), but will be subject to adjustment upon the occurrence of certain events. Upon conversion, the holder will not receive any cash payment representing accrued Original Issue Discount; such accrued Original Issue Discount will be deemed paid by the Common Stock received upon conversion. See "Description of Debentures—Conversion of Debentures."
Subordination	The Debentures will be subordinated in right of payment to all existing and future Senior Indebtedness (as defined) of the Company and effectively subordinated in right of payment to all indebtedness and other liabilities of the Company's subsidiaries. The Debentures will rank pari passu with liabilities owed to trade creditors of the Company. At December 28, 1997, on a pro forma basis after giving effect to the Acquisitions, the Bank Financing, the Offering and the application of the net proceeds therefrom, approximately $1,537 million of Senior Indebtedness and the Company's subsidiaries would have had approximately $731 million of indebtedness and other liabilities outstanding (excluding intercompany liabilities and liabilities of a type not required to be reflected on a balance sheet in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) to which the Debentures would have been effectively subordinated. See "Description of Debentures—Subordination of Debentures."
Original Issue Discount	The Debentures are being issued at an Original Issue Discount for Federal income tax purposes equal to the excess of the stated redemption price at maturity of the Debentures (which is expected to be the principal amount at maturity) over the amount of their issue price (which is expected to be the Issue Price). Prospective purchasers of Debentures should be aware that, although there will be no periodic payments of interest on the Debentures, accrued Original Issue Discount will be included periodically in a holder's gross income for Federal income tax purposes prior to conversion, redemption, other disposition or maturity of such holder's Debentures, whether or not such Debentures are ultimately converted, redeemed, sold (to the Company or otherwise) or paid at maturity. See "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations."

Sinking Fund	None.
Redemption	The Debentures will not be redeemable by the Company prior to March , 2003. On or after such date, the Debentures will be redeemable for cash on at least 30 days' notice, at the option of the Company, in whole at any time or in part from time to time, at redemption prices equal to the Issue Price plus accrued Original Issue Discount to the date of redemption. See "Description of Debentures—Redemption of Debentures at the Option of the Company."
Fundamental Change	The Debentures may be redeemed for cash at the option of the holder if there is a Fundamental Change (as defined) at a price equal to the Issue Price plus accrued Original Issue Discount to the date of redemption, subject to adjustment in certain circumstances. See "Description of Debentures—Redemption at Option of the Holder Upon a Fundamental Change."
Purchase at the Option of the Holder ...	The Company will purchase Debentures at the option of the holder as of March , 2003, March , 2008 and March , 2013, at purchase prices equal to the Issue Price plus accrued Original Issue Discount to such dates. The Company may, at its option, elect to pay any such purchase price in cash or Common Stock, or any combination thereof. See "Description of Debentures—Purchase of Debentures at the Option of the Holder."
Financing Plan and Use of Proceeds ...	The net proceeds from the Offering, together with the Bank Financing, will be used to finance the Acquisitions and related transactions. "See Financing Plan and Use of Proceeds."
Registration Rights	The Company will, for the benefit of the holders, file with the Commission as soon as practicable, but in any event within 90 days after the first date of original issuance of the Debentures, a shelf registration statement (the "Shelf Registration Statement") covering resales of the Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures (the "Registrable Securities"). The Company will use its best efforts to cause the Shelf Registration Statement to become effective as promptly as is practicable, but in any event within 180 days after such first date of original issuance, and to keep the Shelf Registration Statement effective until the earlier of (i) the sale pursuant to the Shelf Registration Statement of all the securities registered thereunder and (ii) the expiration of the holding period applicable to such securities held by non-affiliates of the Company under Rule 144(k) of the Securities Act, or any successor provision, subject to certain permitted exceptions. See "Registration Rights."
Transfer Restrictions	The Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures have not been registered under the Securities Act and are subject to restrictions on transfer. See "Transfer Restrictions."

RISK FACTORS

An investment in the Debentures offered hereby involves a high degree of risk. Prospective investors should carefully consider the following risk factors, in addition to the other information set forth in this Offering Memorandum, in connection with an investment in the Debentures offered hereby.

Substantial Leverage; Ability to Service Indebtedness. Following the Acquisitions, the Bank Financing and the Offering, the Company will be highly leveraged, with indebtedness that is very substantial in relation to its shareholders' equity. After giving pro forma effect to the Acquisitions, the Bank Financing and the Offering, as of December 28, 1997, the Company's aggregate outstanding indebtedness would have been $2,037 million and the Company's shareholders' equity would have been $1,278 million. The Company expects that the New Credit Facility will permit the Company to incur or guarantee additional indebtedness, subject to certain limitations. The Indenture does not restrict the ability of the Company to incur additional Indebtedness. See "Unaudited Pro Forma Condensed Financial Statements," "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources," "The Acquisitions," "Description of Other Indebtedness" and "Description of Debentures."

The Company's high degree of leverage could have important consequences to holders of the Debentures, including but not limited to the following: (i) the Company's ability to obtain additional financing for working capital, capital expenditures, acquisitions or general corporate purposes may be impaired in the future; (ii) a substantial portion of the Company's cash flow from operations must be dedicated to the payment of principal and interest on its indebtedness, thereby reducing the funds available to the Company for its operations and other purposes; (iii) the Company may be substantially more leveraged than certain of its competitors, which may place the Company at a competitive disadvantage; (iv) the Company may be hindered in its ability to adjust rapidly to changing market conditions; and (v) the Company's substantial degree of leverage could make it more vulnerable in the event of a downturn in general economic conditions or its business.

The Company's ability to repay or to refinance its obligations with respect to its indebtedness will depend on its future financial and operating performance, which, in turn, will be subject to prevailing economic and competitive conditions and to financial, business and other factors, many of which are beyond the Company's control. These factors could include operating difficulties, increased operating costs, product pricing pressures, the response of competitors, and delays in implementing strategic projects. The Company's ability to meet its debt service and other obligations will depend in significant part on the extent to which the Company can implement its business strategy and successfully integrate the Acquisitions. There can be no assurance that the Company will be able to implement its strategy fully, that the anticipated results of its strategy will be realized or that the Acquisitions will be successfully integrated.

If the Company's cash flow and capital resources are insufficient to fund its debt service obligations, the Company may be forced to reduce or delay capital expenditures, sell assets, or seek to obtain additional equity capital, or to refinance or restructure its debt. There can be no assurance that the Company's cash flow and capital resources will be sufficient for payment of principal of, and premium, if any, and interest on, its indebtedness in the future, or that any such alternative measures would be successful or would permit the Company to meet its scheduled debt service obligations. In addition, because the Company's obligations under the New Credit Facility will bear interest at floating rates, an increase in interest rates could adversely affect, among other things, the Company's ability to meet its debt service obligations.

Holding Company Structure; Subordination. The Debentures will be exclusively the obligations of Sunbeam Corporation and not of any of its subsidiaries. The Company is a holding company that conducts substantially all of its operations through its subsidiaries. As a holding company, the Company holds no significant assets other than its investments in and advances to its subsidiaries. The Company is, therefore, dependent upon its receipt of sufficient funds from its subsidiaries to meet its own obligations, including its obligation to pay the accreted value of the Debentures upon maturity or earlier redemption or repurchase. The ability of the Company's subsidiaries to pay dividends or to make other payments or advances to the Company will depend on the operating results of its subsidiaries and any restrictions on paying such dividends or making such payments as may be applicable to such subsidiaries, including those expected to be contained in the New Credit Facility.

The Debentures will be unsecured and subordinated in right of payment to all existing and future Senior Indebtedness of the Sunbeam Corporation. As a result of such subordination, in the event of bankruptcy, liquidation or reorganization of the Company and in certain other events, the assets of the Company will be available to pay its obligations with respect to the Debentures only after all Senior Indebtedness has been paid in full, and there may not be sufficient assets remaining to pay amounts due on any or all of the Debentures then outstanding. The Debentures will be expressly subordinated to borrowings under the New Credit Facility and will be also effectively subordinated to all existing and future indebtedness and other liabilities and commitments of the Company's subsidiaries. The Company expects that the New Credit Facility will permit the Company to incur or guarantee additional indebtedness, subject to certain limitations. The Indenture does not prohibit or limit the incurrence of Senior Indebtedness by the Company or the incurrence of other indebtedness and other liabilities by the Company or its subsidiaries, and the incurrence of additional indebtedness and other liabilities by the Company or its subsidiaries could adversely affect the Company's ability to pay its obligations with respect to the Debentures. After giving pro forma effect to the Acquisitions, the Bank Financing and the Offering, as of December 28, 1997 the Company would have had $1,537 million Senior Indebtedness outstanding, and as of the same date the Company's subsidiaries would have had approximately $731 million of indebtedness and other liabilities outstanding (excluding intercompany liabilities and liabilities of a type not required to be reflected on a balance sheet in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) to which the Debentures would have been effectively subordinated. The Company anticipates that from time to time it will incur indebtedness, including Senior Indebtedness, and that it and its subsidiaries will from time to time incur other additional indebtedness and liabilities. See "Description of Debentures—Subordination of Debentures."

The Company expects that borrowings under the New Credit Facility will be, and the Company's and its subsidiaries' future indebtedness may be, secured by liens and other security interests over the assets of the Company's subsidiaries and the Company's equity interests in the Company's subsidiaries. Moreover, the Company expects the New Credit Facility will be guaranteed by each of the Company's wholly-owned U.S. subsidiaries and that such subsidiary guarantees will be secured as described above. The ability of the Company, and therefore the holders of the Debentures to benefit from distributions of assets of the Company's subsidiaries may be limited to the extent that the outstanding shares of any of its subsidiaries and such subsidiary's assets are pledged to secure other debt of the Company or its subsidiaries. Any right of the Company to receive assets of any subsidiary upon such subsidiary's liquidation or reorganization will be structurally subordinated to the claims of that subsidiary's creditors.

Risks Associated with Acquisitions. The Company faces significant risks associated with the recently announced acquisitions of Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert. The Company must, among other things, return these companies to profitable operations; realize synergies from combining these companies with the Company's current operations; integrate the products manufactured by these companies into its existing product lines; consolidate duplicate facilities, systems and personnel; improve the operating efficiencies of such companies; develop new products; and shorten the product development cycle of the acquired companies. This process will require substantial attention from the Company's management team. The diversion of the attention of management from the day-to-day operations of the Company or difficulties encountered in the integration process could have an adverse effect on the Company's business, financial condition and results of operations, which effect could be material. In addition, consummation of the Acquisitions will result in a substantial increase in the size of the Company's operations placing challenges on the Company to effectively use its employees, management, operational and financial resources to manage the expanded operations of the Company. Failure to use such resources effectively could have a material adverse effect on the Company. Other potential risks of the Acquisitions include the presence of unknown liabilities and the possibility of the incurrence of significant charges associated with write-downs of the recorded values of assets acquired or restructurings of the acquired companies. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that the Company will realize the desired benefits of these acquisitions.

Although the Company has entered into separate definitive agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, subject to various customary closing conditions, there can be no assurance that any or all of such transactions will be consummated in a timely manner, if at all.

New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed. The Company has been advised by an affiliate of the Initial Purchaser that, subject to customary qualifications, it is highly confident that under current market and economic conditions the New Credit Facility can be successfully syndicated to financial institutions, and the Company is currently discussing the terms of the New Credit Facility with prospective lenders. While the Company is confident that it will be able to obtain the New Credit Facility on a timely basis to complete the Acquisitions, the Company has no commitments yet from lenders to provide the New Credit Facility. The offering of the Debentures is not conditioned upon the availability of the New Credit Facility and the Acquisitions are not conditioned on the availability of adequate financing. If the Company were unable to secure the New Credit Facility on a timely basis, the Company would be required to secure alternative financing sources to fund the Acquisitions or to delay the closing of the Acquisitions until funds became available.

Risks of International Operations and Expansion. The Company currently manufactures some products and has sales in countries such as Mexico and Venezuela whose economies have been unstable or hyperinflationary in recent years. The economies of other foreign countries important to the Company's expansion plans, including other countries in Latin America and Asia, could suffer similar instability in the future. Such factors as currency devaluation, new tariffs, changes in monetary policies, inflation, governmental instability and similar matters could negatively affect the Company's operations in foreign markets. Although the Company plans to take advantage of recent economic and currency fluctuations in certain Asian countries by increasing the Company's purchase of products from such countries at a lower price, there is no guarantee that such purchasing advantage will be fulfilled or will fully overcome any lost sales opportunities in those same countries. As a result, the economic conditions discussed above or any of these circumstances could have an adverse effect on future financial performance, which effect could be material.

The Company's goal is to substantially increase the amount of business conducted by it outside North America. If the Company fails to achieve anticipated market penetration in areas of the world into which the Company currently expects to expand its sales, such event is likely to have an adverse effect on the Company's future financial performance, which effect could be material. Expansion of the Company's sales in foreign markets depends upon many factors, including economic conditions in foreign countries, the strength of consumer demand in those countries for products which the Company sells (or expects to sell in those markets), the strength of competition from other global consumer product companies and other factors which may negatively affect the Company's anticipated performance in those markets. Although the recent financial instability in Asia has not currently had any material impact on the Company, if such conditions continue and/or worsen they could negatively impact the Company's ability to achieve anticipated sales growth in such countries, the effect of which could be material to the Company's future financial performance.

Risks Associated with New Product Development. The Company's plans to increase its revenues depend on its ability to develop new and innovative products. The Company anticipates that it will be able to rapidly develop and introduce a substantial number of new and innovative products in the future. However, the Company may prove unable to meet its aggressive schedules for future product development. Failure to develop and manufacture new products that achieve market acceptance in the amounts and with the quality required by its customers would likely have an adverse effect on future financial performance, which effect could be material.

Dependence on Key Personnel. The Company depends heavily on the services of its senior management, including Albert J. Dunlap, the Company's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Russell A. Kersh, the Company's Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer, David C. Fannin, the Company's Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, and Donald R. Uzzi, the Company's Executive Vice President, Consumer Products Worldwide. The loss of any member of the Company's senior management, including Mr. Dunlap, Mr. Kersh, Mr. Fannin or Mr. Uzzi, could have an adverse effect on the Company, which effect could be material. On February 20, 1998, each of Mr. Dunlap, Mr. Kersh and Mr. Fannin signed new three year employment contracts with the Company which include substantial equity-based compensation.

Economic Conditions. The Company's performance should be expected to be affected by the strength of the retail economy, primarily in the United States, but also in Canada, Latin America and Asia and, subsequent to the consummation of the acquisition of Coleman, Europe. Weakness in consumer confidence and retail outlets (including the financial weakness or bankruptcy of retail outlets, especially mass merchants) should be expected to adversely impact the Company's future financial results. In addition, the extended credit terms provided by the Company in connection with its "early buy" program increase the Company's risk of collection of related accounts receivable.

Competition. The Company operates in a highly competitive environment with numerous domestic and foreign competitors which are financially strong and capable of competing effectively with the Company in the marketplace. Such competitors may take actions to meet the Company's new product introductions and other initiatives. Some competitors may be willing to accept lower margins and to reduce prices to compete with the Company. As a result, the Company could fail to achieve anticipated sales increases, to realize anticipated price increases, or otherwise fail to meet its anticipated goals. Any of such circumstances would likely have an adverse effect on future financial performance, which effect could be material. The Company's future success will depend to a significant extent upon its ability to remain competitive in the areas of price, quality, marketing, product development, manufacturing, distribution and order processing. There can be no assurance that the Company will be able to compete effectively in all such areas in the future.

The Company anticipates realizing price increases from time to time for certain of its products. The Company operates in a highly competitive industry, and its ability to realize price increases may be limited due to competitive pressures. If there is a material failure to realize anticipated price increases, margins likely will be lower than anticipated by the Company, and this will likely have an adverse effect on future financial performance, which effect could be material.

The Company's profitability may be negatively impacted by under-absorption of manufacturing costs resulting from underutilization of manufacturing capacity if the Company's sales growth is less than anticipated.

No Long Term Contracts with Customers. The Company markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, warehouse clubs, department stores, home centers and hardware stores. Due to the consolidation of the U.S. retail industry, the Company's customer base is relatively concentrated with its largest customer Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. accounting for 21%, and its five largest customers accounting for 36%, of 1997 net sales. The Company's customers, including all of its large retail customers, place orders for products on an as-needed basis and have no long term supply contracts with the Company. As a result, the Company relies on its ability to obtain a continuing flow of new orders from its large, high-volume retailing customers. While the Company has positioned itself to respond to the challenges of its markets by pursuing strategic relationships with large high-volume merchandisers, there can be no assurance that the Company will continue to be able to successfully meet the needs of its customers.

Raw Material Costs. A significant portion of the cost of goods manufactured by the Company in North America is the cost of raw materials and/or components. The Company has implemented changes in its purchasing function which have enabled the Company to purchase materials more efficiently and economically than it has in the past. The future success of the Company's purchasing initiatives may be affected by many factors beyond the Company's control, such as commodity pricing generally and higher prices for the specific materials required by the Company. Although there are numerous suppliers available for the materials and components sourced by the Company, any unanticipated change in suppliers could be disruptive and costly to the Company. In addition, the Company's future initiatives to reduce the cost of materials simply may not achieve savings in amounts comparable to those previously obtained by the Company. A significant failure by the Company to maintain material costs as anticipated would likely have an adverse effect on anticipated future financial performance, which effect could be material.

Dependence on Third-Party Suppliers and Service Providers. The Company currently manufactures approximately 70% of its products. One of the Company's goals for 1998 is to source approximately 50% of the Company's parts and/or products from third parties. The Company's ability to realize sales and operating profits at anticipated levels is dependent upon its ability to timely manufacture, source and deliver products which may be sold for a profit. Labor difficulties, delays in delivery or pricing of raw materials and/or sourced products, scheduling and transportation difficulties, management dislocation and delays in development and manufacture of new products can negatively affect operating profits. Although the Company will use its best efforts to select suppliers for sourced products which are reliable and dependable, the Company's planned increase in the percentage of sourced products will decrease the Company's immediate control of products and, if such suppliers fail to deliver products as anticipated, could have an adverse effect on future financial performance, which effect could be material.

The Company has entered into various arrangements with third parties for the provision of back-office administrative services previously provided with internal resources, including provision of all necessary computer systems. Failure of any of these third-party service providers to perform in accordance with their respective agreements with the Company could result in disruptions of the Company's normal business operations with a consequent impact on sales, collections, cash flow and/or profitability.

Seasonality. Sales of certain of the Company's products can be negatively impacted by unseasonable weather conditions during different seasons and quarters of the year. For instance, the Company's sales of warming blankets were negatively impacted in the fourth quarter of 1997 by moderate temperatures in the northern states. The Company has attempted to levelize production, marketing and other activities related to seasonal products by implementing an "early buy" program; such a program shifts certain of the weather related risks of negative sales impact for such seasonal products to later months of the season and, as result, could have a negative impact on future financial performance.

Litigation. As a consumer goods distributor, the Company's results of operations can be negatively impacted by product liability lawsuits, product recall actions and/or by higher than anticipated rates of warranty returns or other returns of goods. Certain of the product lines to be acquired in the Acquisitions may increase the Company's potential exposure to litigation.

Limitations on Repurchases and Redemptions of Debentures. On March 1, 2003, March 1, 2008 and March 1, 2013 (each, a "Purchase Date"), the Company will become obligated to purchase, at the option of the holder thereof, outstanding Debentures, subject to certain conditions. In addition, upon a Fundamental Change, each holder of the Debentures will have the right, at the holder's option, to require the Company to redeem all or a portion of such holder's Debentures. There can be no assurance that the Company will have sufficient funds to pay the repurchase price on any Purchase Date (in which case, the Company could be required to issue shares of Common Stock to pay the repurchase price at valuations based on then prevailing market prices) or, in the event of a Fundamental Change, the redemption price for all the Debentures tendered by the holders thereof. The New Credit Facility is expected to contain, and future agreements relating to other indebtedness (including Senior Indebtedness) to which the Company becomes a party may contain, restrictions or prohibitions on the repurchase or redemption of the Debentures. It is also expected that the New Credit Facility will prohibit the purchase of the Debentures by the Company in the event of a Fundamental Change, unless and until such time as the indebtedness under the New Credit Facility is paid in full. In addition, it is expected that the New Credit Facility will prohibit the Company's right to purchase Debentures on a Purchase Date for cash, but will not prohibit the purchase of Debentures with Common Stock. If a Purchase Date occurs at a time when the Company is prohibited from repurchasing the Debentures for cash or the Company is prohibited from redeeming the Debentures after the occurrence of a Fundamental Change, the Company could seek the consent of its then existing lenders to repurchase or redeem the Debentures or could attempt to refinance the borrowings that contain such prohibition. If the Company does not obtain such a consent or repay such borrowings, the Company would remain prohibited from repurchasing the Debentures for cash or redeeming the Debentures. In such case, the Company's failure to repurchase or redeem Debentures required to be repurchased or redeemed under the terms of the Indenture would constitute an Event of Default under the Indenture and would likely constitute a default under the New Credit Facility and may also constitute a default under any other indebtedness of the Company outstanding at such time. In addition, it is expected that the occurrence of a Fundamental Change would constitute a default under the New Credit Facility and might constitute a default under other future indebtedness of the Company. In such circumstances, the subordination provisions in the Indenture would likely prohibit or restrict payments to the holders of Debentures. The inability to repay the indebtedness under the New Credit Facility, if accelerated, would have a material adverse effect on the Company and the holders of the Debentures. The term "Fundamental Change" is limited to certain specified transactions and does not include all events that could adversely affect the Company's financial condition or operating results. The requirement that the Company offer to redeem the Debentures upon a Fundamental Change will not necessarily protect holders of the Debentures in the event of a highly leveraged transaction, reorganization, merger or similar transaction involving the Company. See "Description of Debentures - Redemption at Option of the Holder Upon a Fundamental Change."

Proposed Tax Legislation. On February 2, 1998, the Clinton Administration announced a legislative proposal (the "Administration Proposal") generally to defer interest deductions for original issue discount on convertible debt, such as the Debentures, until such interest is paid in cash or other property. Payment would not include the conversion of such debt into equity of the issuer or the payment of an amount which is determined by reference to the value of the Common Stock. The Administration Proposal would be effective for convertible debt issued on or after the date of "first committee action." If enacted in its current form and if "first committee action" is taken with respect to the Administration Proposal on or before the date on which the Debentures are issued, such legislation would apply to the Debentures and the original issue discount accruing in respect of the Debentures would not be deductible by the Company for federal income tax purposes. Nevertheless, it is not possible to predict when or if the Administration Proposal will be enacted, or, if enacted, what form it may take. The federal income tax treatment of holders of Debentures would not be affected by the Administration Proposal if enacted in its current form.

Certain Tax Consequences to the Company. Section 279 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code") limits the deductibility of interest paid or incurred with respect to certain convertible debt incurred to finance the acquisition of stock of another corporation if such debt constitutes "corporate acquisition indebtedness." It is possible that the Internal Revenue Service could take the position that, as a result of the Acquisitions, the Debentures should be treated as "corporate acquisition indebtedness," which position, if sustained, could limit the Company's ability to deduct all or a portion of the original issue discount on the Debentures. Although the issue is not free from doubt, the Company believes that, if challenged, section 279 of the Code should not limit the Company's ability to deduct original issue discount.

Absence of a Public Market. Prior to the Offering, there has been no trading market for the Debentures. Although the Initial Purchaser has advised the Company that it currently intends to make a market in the Debentures, it is not obligated to do so and may discontinue such market making at any time without notice. In addition, such market making activity will be subject to the limits imposed by the Securities Act and the Exchange Act. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that any market for the Debentures will develop or, if one does develop, that it will be maintained. If an active market for the Debentures fails to develop or be sustained, the trading price of the Debentures could be adversely affected.

The Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures have not been registered under the Securities Act and, unless and until so registered, may not be offered or sold except pursuant to an exemption from, or in a transaction not subject to, registration under the Securities Act and applicable state securities laws. See "Registration Rights," "Plan of Distribution" and "Transfer Restrictions."

Initial Ratings Risks. The Company believes it is likely that one or more rating agencies may rate the Debentures. There can be no assurance that any such agency or agencies will rate the Debentures or, if they do, what rating or ratings they will assign to the Debentures. If one or more rating agencies assign the Debentures a rating lower than generally expected by investors, such event would likely have an adverse effect on the market price of the Debentures.

Restrictions on Ability to Pay Dividends. The New Credit Facility is expected to restrict the payment of dividends unless certain financial ratios are achieved. In addition, the Company may in the future issue additional indebtedness which contains similar restrictions.

In addition to the limitations imposed on the payment of dividends by the New Credit Facility and any future agreements governing indebtedness of the Company, under Delaware law the Company is permitted to pay dividends on its capital stock only out of its surplus or, in the event that it has no surplus, out of its net profits for the year in which a dividend is declared or for the immediately preceding fiscal year. Surplus is defined as the excess of a company's total assets over the sum of its total liabilities plus the par value of its outstanding capital stock. In order to pay dividends in cash, the Company must have surplus or net profits equal to the full amount of cash dividend at the time such dividend is declared. In determining the Company's ability to pay dividends, Delaware law permits the board of directors of the Company to revalue the Company's assets and liabilities from time to time to their fair market values in order to create surplus. The Company cannot predict what the value of its assets or the amount of its liabilities will be in the future and, accordingly, there can be no assurance that the Company will be able to pay cash dividends on the Common Stock.

THE ACQUISITIONS

On March 2, 1998, the Company announced the signing of separate definitive agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert. The three transactions are subject to customary conditions, including the receipt of required regulatory approvals, and are expected to close early this spring of 1998.

The Company is acquiring these companies primarily due to their strong and established brand names, the potential opportunity to streamline operations, the diversification they provide to the Company's product base and the potential for revenue and operational synergies. In addition, the Company believes that its existing international geographic marketing and distribution strengths and those of the acquired companies will significantly complement each other. The Company's management team believes that these Acquisitions give the Company a platform from which to capitalize on the fragmentation and potential consolidation of the durable household consumer products sector.

Coleman

With 1997 net revenues of approximately $1.154 million, Coleman is a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the worldwide outdoor recreation market. Its products have been sold domestically and internationally under the Coleman brand name since the 1920s. Counselor® scales, to be introduced in 1998, will represent opening price point scales for the mass market. Sales of consumer scales accounted for approximately 19% of Signature Brands' net sales in fiscal 1997. Signature Brands offers its consumer products through a combination of direct sales and independent manufacturers' representatives to distributors and major retail outlets, including mass merchants, national hardware chains, drugstore chains, catalogue showrooms, warehouse clubs, retail grocery chains, specialty stores, department stores and various mail-order companies.

First Alert

With 1997 net sales of approximately $187 million, First Alert is the market leader in smoke and carbon monoxide detectors in the United States. First Alert's market position is supported by the strength of the First Alert® brand name, which First Alert believes is the most widely recognized consumer brand in the home safety market. First Alert has capitalized on the First Alert® brand name and its leading smoke detector market share to develop and market a broad range of residential safety products. First Alert is also one of the leading participants in the United States retail fire extinguisher market. The markets for residential smoke and carbon monoxide detectors outside the United States are in a much earlier stage of development than the United States. First Alert's market penetration is greatest in the United Kingdom and Canada. First Alert sells its products to mass merchants, home center and hardware chains, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, and electrical wholesale distributors. First Alert also supplies its products to its wholly-owned, non-U.S. subsidiaries and to independent foreign distributors.

- Fire Extinguishers: First Alert's disposable fire extinguisher product line was introduced in 1985 to complement its First Alert® brand smoke detectors. First Alert currently markets a full range of fire extinguisher products for use by the consumer, including fire extinguishers for use in the kitchen, garage, workshop, automobiles and boats. These products are sold under the Sure Grip® brand name which is one of the leading brand names in the U.S. retail fire extinguisher market.

Acquisition Structures and Agreements

The Acquisitions will be accounted for by the Company using the purchase method of accounting.

Coleman. Pursuant to an Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 27, 1998 (the "Holdings Merger Agreement"), among the Company, Laser Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company ("LAC"), Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., a Delaware corporation ("Parent Holdings"), and CLN Holdings Inc., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of Parent Holdings ("CLN Holdings"), LAC will be merged with and into CLN Holdings (the "Holdings Merger"). CLN Holdings is an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of Mafco Holdings, Inc., a corporation wholly owned by Ronald O. Perelman ("Mafco"), and is the indirect beneficial owner of 44,067,520 shares of common stock of Coleman, representing approximately 82.4% of the total number of outstanding shares of common stock of Coleman.

In the Holdings Merger, all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of CLN Holdings will be converted into the right to receive (i) 14,099,749 fully paid and nonassessable shares of Common Stock of the Company and (ii) $159,956,756 in cash, without interest thereon. As a result of the Holdings Merger, CLN Holdings will become a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company and the Company will become the indirect owner of 82.4% of the outstanding common stock of Coleman.

At the same time that it entered into the Holdings Merger Agreement, the Company also entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 27, 1998 (the "Coleman Merger Agreement"), with Coleman and Camper Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company ("CAC"). Pursuant to the Coleman Merger Agreement, following the consummation of the Holdings Merger, CAC will be merged with and into Coleman (the "Coleman Merger"), with Coleman continuing as the surviving corporation. In the Coleman Merger, each outstanding share of Coleman common stock (other than shares held indirectly by the Company and dissenting shares, if any) will be converted into the right to receive (i) 0.5677 of a share of Common Stock of the Company and (ii) $6.44 in cash, without interest thereon. Upon consummation of the Coleman Merger, Coleman will become an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of the Company.

Consummation of the Holdings Merger is subject to the expiration of the applicable waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, as amended (the "HSR Act"), and the satisfaction of certain other customary conditions. It is currently anticipated that the Holdings Merger will be completed in early this spring of 1998. Consummation of the Coleman Merger is subject to the completion of the Holdings Merger and the preparation and filing of definitive documents with the Commission. It is anticipated that the Coleman Merger will be consummated this spring of 1998. Parent Holdings (the direct holder of all outstanding stock of CLN Holdings) and Coleman Worldwide Corporation (the direct holder of 82.4% of the outstanding common stock of Coleman) have approved the Holdings Merger and the Coleman Merger, respectively, and no other stockholder approvals will be required in connection therewith.

Based on the assumption that all presently exercisable Coleman options will be exercised prior to the closing of the Coleman acquisition, the Company expects to issue (and deliver from its treasury) approximately 21.3 million shares of Common Stock (with an aggregate value of approximately $1 billion based on current market prices) and to pay an aggregate of $221 million in cash in connection with the Coleman acquisition. On such basis, the Coleman acquisition is valued at approximately $2.2 billion (including the assumption of approximately $976 million of indebtedness). If none of the presently exercisable Coleman options are exercised prior to closing of the Coleman acquisition, the Company would expect to issue and deliver approximately 19.4 million shares of Common Stock and pay aggregate cash consideration of $261 million in connection with the Coleman acquisition.

Signature Brands. Pursuant to the Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 28, 1998 (the "Signature Brands Merger Agreement"), among the Company, Java Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company ("Java Acquisition"), and Signature Brands, Java Acquisition commenced a tender offer (the "Signature Brands Tender Offer") on March 6, 1998 to acquire all of the outstanding shares of common stock of Signature Brands (the "Signature Brands Common Stock") for $8.25 per share in cash. Java Acquisition's obligation to purchase shares of Signature Brands Common Stock is subject to there being validly tendered and not withdrawn prior to the expiration of the Signature Brands Tender Offer that number of shares which when added to any shares owned by the Company or Java Acquisition represents at least 51% of the outstanding shares of Signature Brands Common Stock (assuming exercise of all outstanding options and warrants) on the date shares are accepted for payment. In addition, Java Acquisition's obligation to purchase shares of Signature Brands Common Stock is conditioned upon the expiration or termination of the applicable waiting period under the HSR Act prior to the expiration of the Signature Brands Tender Offer and certain other customary conditions.

Pursuant to the Signature Brands Merger Agreement, following the expiration of the Signature Brands Tender Offer, which is initially scheduled to expire at midnight on April 2, 1998, unless extended, and any necessary Signature Brands stockholder approval and provided that Java Acquisition has purchased shares of Signature Brands Common Stock in the Signature Brands Tender Offer and certain other customary conditions are met, Java Acquisition will be merged with and into Signature Brands (the "Signature Brands Merger"), with Signature Brands as the surviving corporation. As a result of the Signature Brands Merger, Signature Brands will become a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company and each outstanding share of Signature Brands Common Stock, which is not owned by Signature Brands or any of its subsidiaries or the Company or any of its subsidiaries, other than shares with respect to which dissenter's rights have been exercised and perfected, will be converted into the right to receive $8.25 in cash.

Timing of consummation of the Signature Brands Merger is dependent, among other things, upon whether the Signature Brands Tender Offer is extended beyond its initial expiration date and whether, depending on the number of shares tendered and accepted for payment, Signature Brands stockholder approval of the Signature Brands Merger will be required. It is anticipated, however, that the Signature Brands Merger will be consummated early this spring of 1998.

First Alert. Pursuant to an Agreement and Plan of Merger, dated as of February 28, 1998 (the "First Alert Merger Agreement"), among the Company, Sentinel Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of the Company ("Sentinel Acquisition"), and First Alert, Sentinel Acquisition commenced a tender offer (the "First Alert Tender Offer") on March 6, 1998 to acquire all of the outstanding shares of common stock of First Alert (the "First Alert Common Stock"), for $5.25 per share in cash.

Sentinel Acquisition's obligation to purchase shares of First Alert Common Stock is subject to there being validly tendered and not withdrawn prior to the expiration of the First Alert Tender Offer that number of shares which when added to any shares owned by the Company or Sentinel Acquisition represents at least a majority of the outstanding shares of First Alert Common Stock (assuming exercise of all outstanding options) on the date shares are accepted for payment. In addition, Sentinel Acquisition's obligation to purchase shares of First Alert Common Stock is conditioned upon the expiration or termination of the applicable waiting period under the HSR Act prior to the expiration of the First Alert Tender Offer and certain other customary conditions.

Pursuant to the First Alert Merger Agreement, following the expiration of the First Alert Tender Offer, which is initially scheduled to expire at midnight on April 2, 1998, unless extended, and any necessary First Alert stockholder approval, and provided that Sentinel Acquisition has purchased shares of First Alert Common Stock in the First Alert Tender Offer and certain other customary conditions are met, Sentinel Acquisition will be merged with and into First Alert (the "First Alert Merger"), with First Alert as the surviving corporation. As a result of the First Alert Merger, First Alert will become a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company and each outstanding share of First Alert Common Stock, which is not owned by First Alert or any of its subsidiaries or the Company or any of its subsidiaries, or other than shares with respect to which dissenter's rights have been exercised and perfected, will be converted into the right to receive $5.25 in cash.

Timing of consummation of the First Alert Merger is dependent, among other things, upon whether the First Alert Tender Offer is extended beyond its initial expiration date and whether, depending on the number of shares tendered and accepted for payment, First Alert stockholder approval will be required, which would require the preparation and filing of definitive documents with the Securities and Exchange Commission. It is anticipated, however, that the First Alert Merger will be consummated early this spring of 1998.

Although the Company has entered into separate definitive agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, subject to various customary closing conditions, there can be no assurance that any or all of such transactions will be consummated.

For further information with respect to the effects of the Acquisitions, See "Capitalization," "Unaudited Pro Forma Condensed Financial Statements" and "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

FINANCING PLAN AND USE OF PROCEEDS

The net proceeds from the Offering are expected to be $484.0 ($556.8 if the Initial Purchaser's overallotment option is exercised in full), after deducting discounts and commissions and expenses related to the sale of the Debentures. The net proceeds from the Offering, together with the Bank Financing, will be used to finance the Acquisitions and related transactions.

The Company intends to repay all or substantially all of the currently outstanding indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert as promptly as practicable following consummation of each Acquisition, subject to applicable notice provisions and other prepayment terms of the applicable indebtedness. Such repayments are expected to be funded with borrowings under the New Credit Facility and from the net proceeds of the Offering. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

The following table sets forth the expected sources and uses of cash in connection with the financing of the Acquisitions:

Sources		Uses
(in millions)
New Credit Facility(a)	$1,536.9	Repayment of existing indebtedness(b) ...	$1,504.3
Debentures offered hereby	500.0	Cash Acquisition consideration(c).....	477.6
		Fees and expenses(d)	55.0
Total	$2,036.9	Total	$2,036.9

- (a) The New Credit Facility is expected to consist of a $1.5 billion term debt facility, and a $500 million revolving credit facility, only $36.9 million of which is expected to be initially drawn down. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."
- (b) Represents the repayment of existing indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Signature Brands, and First Alert in the amount of $202.2 million, $1,077.2 million, $179.9 million and $45.0 million, respectively. Existing indebtedness reflects amounts outstanding as of December 28, 1997, except for indebtedness of CLN Holdings issued at an original issue discount which reflects principal accreted through an assumed repayment date of May 15, 1997. The foregoing amounts include $7.0 million, $100.3 million and $5.5 million of estimated prepayment premiums related to the early retirement of indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings and Signature Brands, respectively. As of the actual date of repayment, the outstanding amount of existing indebtedness to be repaid may be greater than the amount shown above due to increased borrowings to finance working capital requirements. The Company intends to refinance any such additional indebtedness using its unused borrowing capacity under the New Credit Facility. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."
- (c) Represents the estimated net cash consideration payable (including the cash-out of options) in connection with the Acquisitions in the amounts of $261.1 million, $83.8 million and $132.7 million for Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert, respectively.

UNAUDITED PRO FORMA CONDENSED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

The following unaudited pro forma condensed balance sheet as of December 28, 1997 was prepared to illustrate the estimated effects of (i) the Acquisitions, accounted for under the purchase method of accounting, (ii) the Bank Financing, (iii) the Offering and (iv) the use of net proceeds from the Offering and from the Bank Financing as described under "Financing Plan and Use of Proceeds" (collectively, the "Pro Forma Transactions"), as if the Pro Forma Transactions had occurred on December 28, 1997. The following unaudited pro forma statement of operations for the year ended December 28, 1997 was prepared to illustrate the estimated effects of the Pro Forma Transactions as if they had occurred as of December 30, 1996.

The fiscal year of the Company ended on December 28, 1997 and the fiscal years of CLN Holdings and First Alert ended on December 31, 1997. The fiscal year of Signature Brands ended on September 28, 1997. The unaudited pro forma condensed financial statements have been derived from the audited financial statements of the Company as of and for the year ended December 28, 1997, the audited financial statements of CLN Holdings and First Alert as of and for the year ended December 31, 1997 and the unaudited financial statements of Signature Brands as of and for the year ended December 31, 1997. The unaudited statement of operations of Signature Brands for the year ended December 31, 1997 has been derived from the audited statement of operations for the year ended September 28, 1997 and the unaudited statements of operations from the three months ended December 31, 1997 and December 31, 1996 in order to present Signature Brands operating results on a basis consistent with the Company's fiscal year.

The pro forma condensed financial statements were prepared utilizing the accounting principles of the respective entities as outlined in each entity's historical financial statements. Certain reclassifications were made to sales, cost of sales and selling, general and administrative expenses as reported in the historical financial statements of CLN Holdings, First Alert and Signature Brands to conform to the classifications of the Company as follows:

	Decrease
	Sales	Cost of Sales	Selling, General and Administrative
	(in thousands)
CLN Holdings	$(71,458)	$(63,886)	$(7,602)
First Alert	(9,902)	(4,760)	(5,142)
Signature Brands	(23,171)	(3,725)	(19,446)

Included in the historical Statement of Operations of CLN Holdings are cash and non-cash restructuring charges totaling $36.4 million and related tax benefits of $13.9 million. These costs have been allocated to cost of goods sold and selling, general and administration expense in the amounts of $19.5 million and $16.9 million, respectively. These costs primarily relate to closing and relocating certain administrative and sales offices, closing several manufacturing facilities, write-down of inventory and fixed assets, as well as severance costs. Additionally, the expense of the early extinguishment of debt of $15.2 million shown on the CLN Holdings' historical statement of operations has been excluded from the unaudited pro forma condensed statement of operations.

The pro forma adjustments are based upon available information and certain assumptions that the Company believes are reasonable under the circumstances. For purposes of developing the unaudited pro forma condensed financial statements, the assets and liabilities of CLN Holdings, First Alert and Signature Brands have been recorded at historical cost. The allocation of purchase price for the Acquisitions is subject to revision when additional information concerning asset and liability valuations is obtained. Adjustments, which could be significant, will be made during the allocation period based on detailed reviews of the fair values of assets acquired and liabilities assumed and could result in a substantial increase in goodwill. The pro forma condensed financial statements do not include a one-time after-tax $30 million first quarter 1998 charge by the Company related to the execution of new employment contracts with the Company's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other senior officers of the Company as further discussed in Note 14 of the Company's audited financial statements for the year ended December 28, 1997 or any adjustments for potential synergies or cost savings as a result of the Acquisitions.

The unaudited pro forma financial statements should be read in conjunction with "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations," the financial statements of each of the Company, CLN Holdings, First Alert and Signature Brands and the notes thereto, and the other financial information included elsewhere or incorporated by reference in this Offering Memorandum. This pro forma financial information is provided for informational purposes only and does not purport to be indicative of the results of operations or financial position which would have been obtained had the Pro Forma Transactions been completed on the dates indicated or the financial condition or results of operations for any future date or period.

In November 1996, the Company initiated a major restructuring and growth plan designed to substantially reduce its cost structure and grow the business in order to restore higher levels of profitability for the Company. By July 1997, the Company completed the major phases of the restructuring plan. The $225.0 million of annualized cost savings anticipated from the restructuring results primarily from the consolidation of administrative functions within the Company, the rationalization of manufacturing and warehouse facilities (including a reduction in the number of production facilities from 26 to 8 and warehouses from 61 to 18), the elimination of over 6,000 positions (including 3,300 from the divestiture of non-core businesses described below and approximately 2,800 other positions), the centralization of the Company's procurement function and re-negotiation of supply contracts resulting in procurement savings for raw materials, components and sourced finished products and the reduction of the Company's product offerings and stock keeping units ("SKU's"). The restructuring and growth plan also included a redefinition of the Company's core product categories and the elimination of those businesses and product lines that did not fit the core categories. Sunbeam's core product categories are Appliances, Health at Home, Personal Care and Comfort, Outdoor Cooking and Away From Home. Product categories and businesses determined to be non-core were divested in 1997, including the Company's furniture business and its time and temperature, decorative bedding and Counselor® and Borg® scale product lines. In addition, the Company sold its textile mill in Biddeford, Maine in 1997.

Net sales from continuing operations for 1997 were $1,168.2 million, an increase of $183.9 million or 18.7% over 1996. Net sales on a normalized basis, after excluding divested product lines which are not classified as discontinued operations (time and temperature products, decorative bedding and Counselor® and Borg® branded scales), increased 22.4% during the year.

Global sales, on a normalized basis, increased during 1997 in all five of the Company's product categories primarily from new product introductions, improved distribution (particularly with the Company's top ten customers), international geographic expansion and improved price realization for certain products. Global sales growth on a normalized basis exceeded 25% in the Appliance, Outdoor Cooking and Away From Home categories with sales increases of 26.8%, 27.2% and 28.6%, respectively. Sales in the Health at Home category increased 10.7% on a normalized basis and sales in the Personal Care and Comfort category increased 3.4% during 1997.

The Company's Appliance category sales increases were driven by new products, such as re-designed blenders and mixers, coffeemakers, irons, deep fryers and toasters, and by increased distribution with large national mass retailers. Sales of Outdoor Cooking products increased in 1997 after three straight years of declines as a result of increased merchandising and advertising programs, new distribution and the introduction of an entirely new line of grills and accessories for the 1998 season that began to ship in the fourth quarter of 1997 under a new "early buy" marketing program that included, among other things, extended credit terms with due dates in the second quarter of 1998. The Company sold approximately $50.0 million of Outdoor Cooking Products under this program in the fourth quarter of 1997. The early buy program for Outdoor Cooking products is designed to improve customer service levels and production efficiencies with more level seasonal production and distribution activities that have historically peaked in the first half of each year and to drive additional retail sell-through of Outdoor Cooking products by reducing the likelihood of retail stock-outs during the important first and second quarter 1998 selling season.

Sales of Personal Care and Comfort products were up over 30% through September 1997, but suffered during the fourth quarter as a result of lower than expected retail sell-through of electric blankets in key northern markets in late 1997 coupled with the inability to service demand for king and queen sized blankets due to shortages of blanket shells. The Company anticipates shifting to a more level production for blankets in 1998 in order to more adequately service the seasonal demand for bedding products. Health at Home category sales increased as a result of new products and improved distribution in the drug channels. Away From Home sales increased in 1997 as a result of new products, including cordless clippers and titanium blades, coupled with increased distribution of commercially rated appliances. Also contributing to the Company's sales growth in 1997 were its new retail outlet stores, of which 22 were open by the end of 1997.

International sales, which represented 21% of total revenues in 1997, grew 31.2% during the year. This sales growth was driven primarily by 54 new 220 volt product introductions and the execution of 25 new international distribution and license agreements. Revenue growth of approximately 34% was achieved both in Mexico and by the Company's Latin American export sales organization, and sales in Venezuela and Canada increased approximately 23% each. European sales fell slightly in 1997, however the Company expects that expanded electric blanket and clipper sales along with the help of additional new distribution agreements will benefit European sales in 1998.

The gross margin percentage for 1997 increased 19.8 percentage points to 28.3%. This increase reflects the results of many cost savings and margin enhancement initiatives undertaken as part of the Company's restructuring plan coupled with the incremental margin attributable to new products and higher revenues associated with the Company's growth plan. The Company initiated a manufacturing refinement program in the second quarter of 1997 targeted at aggressively improving factory productivity at all of its remaining operations, including the Neosho, Missouri Outdoor Cooking Products facility which suffered from poor productivity and operating inefficiencies during the 1997 grill season. The benefits of the refinement program began to favorably impact factory productivity in several factories during the third quarter of 1997. The refinement of the Neosho facility, which was completed prior to the initiation of production for the 1998 grill season in the fourth quarter, included a revised plant layout to improve material flow, increased usage of common parts in the manufacturing process and modifications to the paint system to increase capacity and throughput.

Operating earnings for 1997 were $199.4 million, an increase of $195.0 million over 1996, excluding the impact of the 1996 special charge. As a percentage of sales, the operating margin of 17.1% increased 16.6 percentage points above last year's operating margin, excluding 1996 special charges. The operating margin improvements for 1997 were the result of the improved gross margin discussed above and lower selling, general and administrative ("SG&A") costs in 1997 associated with the consolidation of six divisional and regional headquarters into one corporate headquarters and one administrative operations center, reduced staffing levels, the outsourcing of certain administrative and distribution functions, a reduction in the number of warehouses, and Company wide cost control initiatives. In addition, SG&A during 1996 included incremental compensation costs associated with restricted stock awards and other costs related to the employment of a new senior management team, higher than normal expenditures for market research, packaging and other initiatives related to the launch of the Company's growth plan, and higher bad debt expenses associated with certain of the Company's customers. The cost reduction initiatives and one time items in 1996 coupled with increased sales in 1997 resulted in SG&A decreasing as a percentage of sales from 17.4% in 1996 (excluding the impact of special charges) to 11.2% for 1997.

Interest expense decreased from $13.6 million in 1996 to $11.4 million in 1997 primarily as a result of lower average borrowing levels in 1997 due to improved cash flows.

The effective income tax rate of 35% for 1997 and 1996 for earnings (loss) from continuing operations was lower than the statutory federal and state rates as a result of lower foreign taxes from the utilization of foreign tax credits and loss carryforwards and lower state income taxes as a result of certain state income tax credits.

The Company's diluted earnings per share from continuing operations was $1.41 per share versus a loss per share from continuing operations in 1996 of $2.37. The Company's share base utilized in the diluted earnings per share calculation increased approximately 6% during 1997 as a result of an increase in the number of shares of common stock and common stock equivalents outstanding due to the exercise of stock options and a higher market value of the Company's common stock in 1997.

The Company's discontinued furniture operations, which were sold in March 1997, had revenues of $51.6 million in the first quarter of 1997 prior to the sale and break-even earnings. In 1996, the discontinued furniture operations had net income of $.8 million on revenues of $227.5 million and an estimated loss on disposal of the business of $32.4 million, net of applicable income tax benefits. The sale of the Company's furniture business assets (primarily inventory, property, plant and equipment) was completed in March 1997.

The Company received $69 million in cash and retained accounts receivable related to the furniture business of approximately $50.0 million as of the closing date. The final purchase price for the furniture business was subject to a post-closing adjustment based on the terms of the Asset Purchase Agreement and in the first quarter of 1997, after completion of the sale, the Company recorded an additional loss on disposal of $13.7 million, net of income tax benefits. See discussion of Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs in Note 8 and Discontinued Operations and Assets Held For Sale in Note 9 to the Company's consolidated financial statements for further information regarding the individual components of the 1996 special charge and details of the 1997 activity in the Company's restructuring accrual.

The Company's operating results for 1996 include the effects of a pre-tax special charge of $337.6 million recorded in conjunction with the implementation of its restructuring and growth plan announced in November 1996. Approximately 20% of the charge was for cash items primarily for severance costs and lease and other facility exit costs. The special charge to earnings in 1996 is included in the following categories on the consolidated statement of operations:

	Pre-tax Dollar Amount	After-tax Per Share Amount
	(in millions)
Restructuring, impairment and other costs	$154.9	$(1.21)
Cost of sales	92.3	(0.72)
Selling, general and administrative	42.5	(0.33)
Estimated loss from discontinued operations	47.9	(0.39)
Total	$337.6	$(2.65)

Net sales from continuing operations of $984.2 million for 1996 represents a decrease of $32.7 million, or 3.2%, from 1995. The Company experienced a loss from continuing operations of $196.7 million or $2.37 per share for 1996 versus earnings from continuing operations of $37.6 million or $.45 per share (diluted) in 1995 primarily as a result of the restructuring activities discussed above. The net loss for 1996 was $228.3 million, or $2.75 per share, compared to net earnings of $50.5 million, or $0.61 per share (diluted), for 1995. Excluding the impact of special charge items for 1996, earnings from continuing operations before income taxes decreased from $60.6 million in 1995 to a loss of $12.9 million in 1996.

Domestic sales represented approximately 80% of total sales of the Company in 1996 and decreased $28.5 million or 3.4% from 1995. This sales decline was driven by lower sales of outdoor cooking products, which declined 7.3% and lower sales of bedding products which declined 9.0% from 1995, primarily as a result of lower decorative bedding sales (divested in December 1996). Domestic sales of appliance products were flat with sales increases from new products such as vegetable steamers and toaster ovens being offset by reduced pricing on breadmakers. Sales of other product categories such as health and personal care products and time and temperature products (divested in March 1997) were either flat or declined slightly from 1995 levels.

International sales decreased $4.2 million or 2.2% from 1995 primarily as a result of lower sales in Latin America due to political and/or economic instability in several countries such as Ecuador, Peru, Columbia and Venezuela (which suffered a bolivar devaluation in April 1996), a sales decline of 11.2% in Canada as a result of the bankruptcy filing of the Company's then largest Canadian customer offset by a 55.0% increase in sales in Mexico as a result of a more stable economic environment in 1996.

The Company's gross margin percentage, excluding the impact of special charges, was 17.9% of sales in 1996, down from 20.4% in 1995, primarily from the underabsorption of higher manufacturing costs and excess manufacturing capacity that has been realigned for 1997 and beyond by the Company's restructuring and growth plan cost reduction initiatives.

SG&A expenses, excluding the impact of special charges described above, were 17.6% of sales in 1996 primarily as a result of an inflated cost structure that has been realigned for 1997 and beyond. In addition, a $12.0 million fourth quarter 1996 media advertising campaign and one-time expenditures for market research, new packaging, and other growth plan initiatives resulted in higher than normal SG&A spending in 1996. Also included in 1996 SG&A costs were $7.7 million of compensation expense resulting from restricted stock awards made in connection with the employment of a new senior management team.

Interest expense for 1996 increased from $9.4 million in 1995 to $13.6 million as a result of increased indebtedness of the Company for working capital requirements and non-recurring capitalized interest in 1995 related to the construction of the Hattiesburg manufacturing and distribution center.

The effective income tax rate for 1996 decreased 3 percentage points from 1995 to 35.0% as a result of certain foreign and state operating losses for which no tax benefits were recorded and the non-deductibility of compensation expense related to restricted stock awards.

The Company's discontinued furniture operations had revenues of $227.5 million in 1996, up 22.6% from $185.6 million in 1995. This revenue growth was the result of the acquisition of the Samsonite® furniture business in November 1995. Excluding the impact of this acquisition, furniture business sales declined 2.1%. Earnings from the discontinued furniture operations, net of taxes, declined from $12.9 million in 1995 to $3.8 million in 1996 primarily as a result of lower gross margins from reduced pricing, underabsorption of higher manufacturing costs and higher raw material costs. In addition, SG&A costs increased due to the inclusion of the Samsonite® furniture business, higher distribution and warehousing costs, particularly with resin furniture products and higher bad debt expenses.

Foreign Operations

During 1997 approximately 90% of the Company's business was conducted in U.S. dollars (including both domestic sales, U.S. dollar denominated export sales primarily to certain Latin American markets, Asian sales and the majority of European sales). The Company's exposure to market risk from changes in foreign currency and interest rates is generally insignificant. The Company's non-U.S. dollar denominated sales are made principally by subsidiaries in Mexico, Venezuela and Canada. Venezuela is considered a hyperinflationary economy for accounting purposes for 1995, 1996 and 1997 and Mexico reverted to hyperinflationary status for accounting purposes in 1997; therefore, translation adjustments related to Venezuelan and Mexican net monetary assets are included as a component of net earnings. Such translation adjustments were not material to 1995, 1996 and 1997 operating results.

On a limited basis, the Company selectively uses derivatives (foreign exchange option and forward contracts) to manage foreign exchange exposures that arise in the normal course of business. No derivative contracts are entered into for trading or speculative purposes. The use of derivatives did not have a material impact on the Company's financial results in 1995, 1996 and 1997. See Note 4 to the Company's consolidated financial statements.

Liquidity and Capital Resources

As of December 28, 1997, the Company had cash and cash equivalents of $52.4 million and total debt of $195.2 million. Cash used in operating activities during 1997 was $8.2 million compared to $14.2 million provided by operating activities in 1996. This decrease is primarily attributable to an increase in earnings before non-cash charges in 1997 and the utilization of tax benefits generated from the implementation of the Company's restructuring plan, offset by higher accounts receivable due to increased sales in 1997 and certain seasonal dating terms, increased inventory levels in 1997 necessary to support continued anticipated sales growth and the Company's initiatives to improve customer service levels and 1997 cash expenditures required to implement the restructuring plan. In addition, cash used in operating activities reflects $59 million of proceeds from the sale of trade accounts receivable under the Company's revolving trade accounts receivable securitization program entered into in December 1997 as more fully described in Note 3 to the Company's consolidated financial statements.

Capital spending totaled $58.3 million in 1997 and was primarily for new products, cost reduction and capacity expansion initiatives. Capital spending in 1996 was $75.3 million (including $14.5 million related to the discontinued furniture operations) and was primarily attributable to new product development, cost reduction initiatives and a $5.0 million warehouse expansion financed with a capital lease. Capital spending in 1995 reflected approximately $59.4 million associated with the Hattiesburg facility, $27.4 million related to new product development and $10.8 million attributable to the discontinued furniture business. The remaining 1995 capital spending was related to cost reduction projects, productivity initiatives and environmental compliance including $14.4 million for a powder coat paint system for Outdoor Cooking products. The Company anticipates 1998 capital spending to be approximately 5% of sales and primarily related to new product introductions, capacity additions and certain facility rationalization initiatives.

Cash provided by investing activities also reflects $91.0 million in proceeds from sales of businesses, assets and product categories determined to be non-core to the Company's ongoing operations in conjunction with the 1996 restructuring plan. Cash used in investing activities for 1995 includes the purchase of a portion of the Company's furniture business, which was subsequently divested in full in March 1997.

Cash provided by financing activities totaled $16.4 million in 1997 and reflects net borrowings of $5.0 million under the Company's revolving credit facility, $12.2 million of debt repayments related to the divested furniture operations and other assets sold and $26.6 million in cash proceeds from the exercise of stock options, substantially all by former employees of the Company. In 1996, cash provided by financing activities of $45.3 million was primarily from increased revolving credit facility borrowings to support working capital and capital spending requirements, $11.5 million in new issuances of long-term debt and $4.6 million in proceeds from the sale of treasury shares to certain executives of the Company. In July 1997, the Company reduced the amount of available borrowings under its September 1996 unsecured five year revolving credit facility from $500 million to $250 million.

The Company is a party to various environmental proceedings, substantially all related to previously divested operations. In connection with the Company's restructuring plan a comprehensive review of environmental exposures was undertaken and the Company accelerated its strategy for the resolution and settlement of certain environmental claims. This review and change in strategy resulted in additional environmental reserves being recorded in 1996 as more fully described in Note 12 to the consolidated financial statements. In management's opinion, the ultimate resolution of these environmental matters will not have a material adverse effect upon the Company's financial condition.

On March 2, 1998, the Company announced the signing of definitive agreements to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert which are subject to various customary conditions including regulatory approvals. The Company's ability to complete the Acquisitions, which is expected in the early spring of 1998, is contingent on acquisition debt issuances. In connection with the Acquisitions, the Company plans to refinance existing indebtedness of the acquired companies as well as all or substantially all of its existing long-term debt. The Company expects to finance the cash portion of the Acquisitions and all debt refinancings through a combination of the Bank Financing and the Offering. For additional information regarding the Acquisitions, see Note 14 to the Company's Consolidated Financial Statements of the Company included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

The Company believes its cash flow from operations, existing cash and cash equivalent balances, its receivable securitization program, together with expected available borrowings under the revolving credit portion of the New Credit Facility, will be sufficient to support working capital needs, capital spending, debt service and acquisition related cash requirements for the foreseeable future.

The Company is currently discussing the terms of the New Credit Facility. See "Risk Factors—New Credit Facility Not Yet Committed" and "Description of Other Indebtedness—New Credit Facility."

New Accounting Standards

See Note 1 to the Company's consolidated financial statements for a discussion of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 130, Reporting Comprehensive Income and SFAS No. 131, Disclosures about Segments of an Enterprise and Related Information, both of which are required to be adopted for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. The adoption of these standards will not impact the Company's consolidated results of operations, financial position, or cash flows.

Year 2000

The Company has assessed and continues to assess the impact of the Year 2000 issue on its operations, including the development and implementation of project plans and cost estimates required to make its information systems infrastructure Year 2000 compliant. Based on existing information, the Company believes that anticipated spending necessary to become Year 2000 compliant will not have a material effect on the financial position, cash flows or results of operations of the Company, nor will the Year 2000 issues cause any material adverse effect on the future business operations of the Company.

Subsequent Events

For a discussion of the Acquisitions and the new three year employment contracts between the Company and each of Mr. Dunlap, Mr. Kersh and Mr. Fannin, see Note 14 to the Company's Consolidated Financial Statements included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

BUSINESS

General

The Company is a leading designer, manufacturer and marketer of branded consumer products. The Company's primary business is the manufacture, marketing and distribution of durable household consumer products through mass merchandisers, home centers and other channels (such as Wal-Mart, Kmart and Home Depot) in the United States and internationally. The Company also sells its products to commercial end users such as hotels and other institutions. Sunbeam products enjoy a long-standing reputation for quality, and a majority of the Company's sales are from products which hold the number one or two market share in their respective product categories. In 1997, the Company's net sales were approximately $1,168 million.

The Company's five product categories are: (1) Appliances (mixers, blenders, food steamers, bread makers, rice cookers, coffee makers, toasters, irons and garment steamers); (2) Health at Home (vaporizers, humidifiers, air cleaners, water filters, massagers and scales); (3) Personal Care and Comfort (shower massagers, hair clippers and trimmers, electric warming blankets); (4) Outdoor Cooking (electric, gas and charcoal grills and grill accessories); and (5) Away From Home (clippers and related products for professional beauty, barber and veterinarian trade and sales of products to commercial and institutional channels). The International Group is responsible for sales (primarily of small appliances, personal care, grills and comfort products, professional clippers and related products) in all countries other than the United States.

The Company was organized in 1989 (as Sunbeam-Oster Company, Inc.) and in September 1990, Sunbeam acquired the assets and assumed certain liabilities, through a reorganization, of Allegheny International, Inc. (the "Predecessor"). In August 1992, the Company completed a public offering of 20,000,000 shares of its common stock. In May 1995, the Company changed its name from Sunbeam-Oster Company, Inc. to Sunbeam Corporation.

The Company has a management team with extensive consumer products experience and proven expertise in cost containment and operational improvement. On February 20, 1998, each of the Company's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Mr. Dunlap; the Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer, Mr. Kersh; and the Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, Mr. Fannin, signed new three year employment contracts with the Company which include substantial equity-based compensation. See "Management—New Employment Contracts."

Restructuring and Growth Plan

In the Fall of 1996, under newly elected Chairman, Albert J. Dunlap, the Company announced a major restructuring and growth plan. The restructuring portion of the plan was completed during 1997, resulting in a significant reduction in employees, facilities and costs, all of which is anticipated to generate approximately $225 million in annual savings for the Company. As a part of the restructuring plan, the Company divested its non-core business and assets, including furniture, time and temperature, decorative bedding, gas heaters and logs, Counselor® and Borg® scale business and the Company's Biddeford, Maine textile mill.

The Company's restructuring plan included the closure of 18 factories, 43 warehouses and 5 headquarters, resulting in the consolidation of all corporate offices into a single headquarters office located in Delray Beach, Florida and an operations facility at its Hattiesburg, Mississippi manufacturing and distribution facility. The number of manufacturing facilities has been reduced from twenty-six to eight (four in the US and four international). See "Properties" below.

The Company has also consolidated all purchasing functions, substantially reduced the number of stock keeping units maintained by the Company and outsourced certain administrative, manufacturing and distribution activities.

The Company has developed a comprehensive three year growth plan for its core business. Sunbeam's goal is for revenues to double, reaching $2 billion by 1999, with operating margins improving to 20% of sales. This revenue growth is anticipated to be derived, in large part, by the development of new innovative products and the globalization of the Company. Domestically, the goal is to introduce at least 30 new products each year; during 1997, the Company introduced 35 new domestic products and 54 new international products. In its international business, the Company has a goal to triple international sales to $600 million by 1999. During 1997, the Company entered into 25 new international distribution/license agreements. The Company has also identified new channels of distribution as additional sales growth opportunities, including commercial organizations and "direct to the consumer" channels such as catalogs, the Internet and Sunbeam® factory outlet stores. The foregoing contains certain forward-looking statements that involve risks and uncertainties, see "Forward-Looking Statements" and "Risk Factors" for cautionary remarks concerning these statements.

Both international expansion and new product introductions will be supported by a significant investment in a major new advertising program that is geared to strengthen the Sunbeam®, Oster® and Grillmaster® brands in the marketplace.

Products

The Company's core product categories are as follows:

Appliances

Small kitchen appliances including Mixmaster® stand mixers, hand mixers, Osterizer® blenders, food processors, rice cookers, food steamers, toasters, can openers, coffee makers, bread makers, waffle makers, ice cream makers, frying pans, deep fryers and culinary accessories, are sold primarily under the Sunbeam® and Oster® brand names. The Company holds the number one or two market positions in blenders, mixers and bread makers. The Appliance category also encompasses garment care appliances consisting of irons and steamers. Sales of appliances accounted for approximately 32% of the Company's domestic net sales in 1997.

Health at Home

The Company markets its home health products under the Sunbeam® name and the trademark Health at Home®. These products include heating pads, bath scales, blood pressure and other health-monitoring instruments, massagers, vaporizers, humidifiers and dental care products. Sales of Personal Care and Comfort products accounted for approximately 18% of the Company's domestic net sales in 1997.

Outdoor Cooking

Sunbeam is a leading supplier of outdoor barbecue grills. Sunbeam has the leading market share position in the gas grill industry. Barbecue grills consist of propane, natural gas, electric and charcoal models sold primarily under the Sunbeam® and Grillmaster® brand names. Sales of outdoor cooking products accounted for approximately 34% of the Company's domestic net sales in 1997.

Away from Home

The Company markets a line of professional barber, beauty and animal equipment, including the electric and battery clippers, replacement blades and other grooming accessories sold to both conventional retailers and through professional distributors. In addition, the Company is expanding the market of its appliances, scales and Personal Care and Comfort products to institutional and commercial channels. Sales of Away from Home products described above accounted for approximately 6% of the Company's domestic net sales in 1997.

International

The Company markets a variety of products (primarily small kitchen appliances, Personal Care and Comfort products, grills, professional clippers and related products) outside the U.S. While the Company sells many of the same products domestically and internationally, it also sells products designed specifically to appeal to foreign markets. The Company, through its foreign subsidiaries, has manufacturing facilities in Mexico and Venezuela.

and sales offices in Canada, the United Kingdom, Hong Kong and Australia. The Company's international products are sourced from the Company's United States, Mexican or Venezuelan manufacturing operations or from vendors primarily located in Asia. International sales accounted for approximately 21% of the Company's total net sales in 1997.

To date, the Company's activities outside the United States have been primarily focused in Mexico, Latin America and Canada. The Company enjoys a strong market position in a number of product categories in Latin America. The Oster® brand has the leading market share in small appliances in a number of Latin American countries.

The Company's pending acquisitions of Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert are anticipated to provide new opportunities for international expansion of the Company's activities. See "The Acquisitions."

Competitive Strengths

Sunbeam competes in markets with well-established United States and foreign companies on the basis of various strengths, depending on the country, product category and distribution channels. The Company believes that it is well-positioned to pursue continued growth as a result of these competitive strengths, which include the following:

Market Leadership. The majority of Sunbeam sales are from products in which the Company holds the number one or two market share position. The Company believes that this combination of leading brand-name products and breadth of product offerings makes Sunbeam an attractive vendor to all retailers, particularly those who are consolidating their suppliers.

Brand Name Recognition. The Sunbeam® and Oster® brands have been household names for generations. The Company believes that these brands, along with its other well-known secondary brand names such as Mixmaster®, Osterizer® and Grillmaster®, draw customers into retail stores specifically to purchase products bearing these brand names. During 1997, the Company spent over $56 million, or approximately 5% of its 1997 net sales, for advertising and sales promotion to support brand recognition.

Distribution Network. The Company has one of the premier mass merchant distribution networks serving large national retailers in the United States. The Company also has a strong network of well-established distributors and service organizations in Latin America. The Company supports its customers' needs with strong warehousing and distribution capabilities, a broad, high-quality product portfolio, electronic data interchange and just-in-time product delivery capabilities. The Company markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, department stores, catalogues, Company-owned outlet stores and pet supply retailers, as well as independent distributors and military post exchange outlets.

Strong Position in Consolidating Retail Environment. The consolidation trend in the retail industry has resulted in the emergence and global expansion of large mass merchandisers. These merchandisers demand financially strong, efficient suppliers who offer a broad range of innovative, quality products, have the ability to make timely shipments in large volumes and provide strong customer, promotional and merchandising support. The Company continues to benefit from this trend and believes it has the opportunity to further expand distribution with a number of major retailers while increasing its penetration of existing accounts. In 1997, the Company sold products to virtually all of the top 100 U.S. retailers, including Wal-Mart, Price Costco, Kmart, Target Stores, Home Depot and Sears.

Customers

The rapid growth of large mass merchandisers and warehouse clubs and changes in customer shopping patterns have contributed to a significant consolidation of the U.S. retail industry and formation of dominant multi-category retailers. Sunbeam has positioned itself to respond to the challenges of this changing retail environment by pursuing strategic relationships with large, high-volume merchandisers. The Company markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, department stores, hardware stores, catalogues, television shopping channels, home centers, drug and grocery stores, and pet supply retailers, as well as independent distributors and military post exchange services. The Company's largest customer, Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., accounted for approximately 21% of the sales in 1997.

Retailers are pursuing a number of strategies in their competition to deliver the highest-quality, lowest-cost brand name products. A growing trend among retailers is to purchase on a "just-in-time" basis in order to reduce inventory cost and increase returns on investment. This trend has required increased working capital investments for manufacturers and requires manufacturers to more closely monitor consumer buying patterns as retailers shorten their lead times for orders. Currently, most Sunbeam products sold to U.S. retailers are manufactured at the Company's own facilities in North America. However, one of the Company's goals for 1998 is to "source" approximately 50% of parts and/or products from others, including suppliers in Asia, in order to reduce capital investment in plants while growing sales volume and to improve operating margins. The Company intends to continue to support its retail partners' "just-in-time" inventory strategies through investments in, among other things, improved forecasting systems, more responsive manufacturing and distribution capabilities and electronic communications. Currently, Sunbeam has approximately 90% of its U.S. customer sales on electronic data interchange (EDI) systems.

The amount of backlog orders at any point in time is not a significant factor in the Company's business.

Patents and Trademarks

Sunbeam believes that an integral part of its strength is its ability to capitalize on the Sunbeam[®] and Oster[®] trademarks which are registered in the United States and in numerous foreign countries. Widely recognized throughout North America, South and Central America and Europe, these registered trademarks, along with Osterizer[®], Mixmaster[®], Toast Logic[®], Steammaster[®], Oskar[®], Grillmaster[®] and Blanket with a Brain[®] brands are important to the success of the Company's products. Other important trademarks within Sunbeam include Oster Designer[®] line, Cuddle-Up[®] and AS[®].

Sunbeam holds numerous patents covering a wide variety of products, the loss of any one of which would not have a material adverse effect on the Company's business taken as a whole.

Employees

The Company currently has approximately 3,300 full-time domestic employees and 4,200 international employees. None of the Company's domestic full-time workforce has union representation. Sunbeam has had no material labor-related work stoppages and, in the opinion of management, relations with its employees are generally good.

Seasonality

On a consolidated basis, Sunbeam sales do not exhibit substantial seasonality. However, sales of outdoor cooking products are strong in the first half of the year, while sales of appliances and Personal Care and Comfort products are strongest in the second half of the year. In addition, sales of an number of Company's products, including warming blankets, vaporizers, humidifiers and grills may be impacted by unseasonable weather conditions. During 1997, the Company initiated early buy programs for highly seasonal products such as grill and warming blankets in order to more levelize promotion and distribution activities.

Raw Materials

The raw materials used in the manufacture of the Company's products are available from numerous suppliers in quantities sufficient to meet normal requirements. The Company's primary raw materials include aluminum, steel, resin, copper, and corrugated cardboard for cartons.

Environmental Matters

The Company's operations, like those of comparable businesses, are subject to certain federal, state, local and foreign environmental laws and regulations in addition to laws and regulations regarding labeling and packaging of products and the sale of products containing certain environmentally sensitive materials ("Environmental Laws"). The Company believes it is in substantial compliance with all Environmental Laws which are applicable to its operations. Compliance with Environmental Laws involves certain continuing costs; however, such costs of ongoing compliance have not resulted, and are not anticipated to result, in a material increase in the Company's capital expenditures or to have a material adverse effect on the Company's results of operations, financial condition or competitive position.

In addition to ongoing environmental compliance at its operations, the Company also is actively engaged in certain environmental remediation activities relating primarily to divested operations. As of December 31, 1997, the Company had been identified by the United States Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") or a state environmental agency as a potentially responsible party ("PRP") in connection with seven (7) sites subject to the federal Superfund law and two (2) sites subject to state Superfund laws comparable to the federal law (collectively the "Environmental Sites"), exclusive of sites at which the Company has been designated (or expects to be designated) as a de minimis (less than 1%) participant.

The Superfund Act, and related state environmental remediation laws, generally authorize governmental authorities to remediate a Superfund site and to assess the costs against the PRPs or to order PRPs to remediate the site at their expense. Liability under the Superfund Law is joint and several and is imposed on a strict basis, without regard to degree of negligence or culpability. As a result, the Company recognizes its responsibility to determine whether other PRPs at a Superfund site are financially capable of paying their respective shares of the ultimate cost of remediation of the site. Whenever the Company has determined that a particular PRP is not financially responsible, it has assumed for purposes of establishing reserve amounts that such PRP will not pay its respective share of the costs of remediation. To minimize the Company's potential liability with respect to the Environmental Sites, the Company has actively participated in steering committees and other groups of PRPs established with respect to such sites. The Company currently is engaged in active remediation activities at nine (9) sites, four (4) of which are among the Environmental Sites referred to above, and five (5) of which have not been designated as Superfund sites under federal or state law.

In addition, the Company is engaged in environmental remediation activities at a site located in Newburgh Heights, Ohio, where a subsidiary formerly conducted operations. The Company has been actively cooperating with the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission and state regulatory authorities in developing and implementing a plan for remediation of this site; which remediation is anticipated to be substantially completed in 1998.

The Company's costs for environmental remediation activities have not had a material adverse effect on the Company's results of operations, financial conditions or competitive position. The Company has established reserves to cover the anticipated probable costs of remediation, based upon periodic review of all sites for which the Company has, or may have, remediation responsibility. As of December 28, 1997, the amount of such reserves was approximately four percent (4%) of the Company's total liabilities as set forth in the consolidated financial statements. Such environmental reserves do not anticipate any offsets for potential insurance recoveries from certain of the Company's liability insurance carriers which the Company continues to pursue.

Due to uncertainty over the remedial measures to be adopted at some sites, the possibility of changes in Environmental Laws, and the fact that joint and several liability with the right of contribution is possible at federal and state Superfund sites, the Company's ultimate future liability with respect to sites at which remediation has not been completed may vary from the amounts reserved at fiscal year end 1997. In addition, the Company may be required to incur costs relating to remediation of other properties currently or previously owned or leased, including the properties to be acquired in the Acquisitions, as well as properties at which the Company and each of Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert have disposed of waste. However, the Company believes, based on existing information, that the costs of completing the environmental remediation of all sites for which the Company has a remediation responsibility have been adequately reserved and that the ultimate resolution of these matters will not have a material adverse effect upon the Company's financial condition.

In December 1996, the Company reached a negotiated settlement with the EPA with regard to a notice of violation concerning the construction and operation of two paint lines at the Company's Neosho, MO facility prior to obtaining the necessary permits for construction and operation. The negotiated settlement amount of $829,825 was agreed upon in connection with the Company's implementation of the "supplemental environmental project" which consisted of the Company's installation of nominal emission powder coating lines to replace solvent paint lines. In October 1997, the Company executed a Consent Decree documenting the settlement and is awaiting the EPA's execution of the Consent Decree; the Company anticipates formal resolution of this matter by the second quarter of 1998.

The Company is not a party to any other administrative or judicial proceedings to which a governmental authority is a party and which involves potential monetary sanctions, exclusive of interest and costs, of $100,000 or more.

In addition, the Company has 17 United States and 5 Canadian retail outlet stores under lease totaling 103,000 square feet.

The Company believes that its existing facilities will adequately provide sufficient suitable capacity to implement its operating plans.

Legal Proceedings

The Company and its subsidiaries are involved in various lawsuits arising from time to time which the Company considers to be ordinary routine litigation incidental to its business. In the opinion of the Company, the resolution of these matters, and of certain matters relating to prior operations of the Company's predecessor, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a material adverse effect upon the financial position or results of operations of the Company. The Company has established reserves for pending litigation which the Company considers to be adequate to cover loss contingencies determined by the Company associated with such proceedings.

See "—Environmental Matters" for a description of certain legal proceedings related to environmental matters.

DESCRIPTION OF OTHER INDEBTEDNESS

New Credit Facility

The Company is currently negotiating the terms of the New Credit Facility with a group of banks which the Company expects will provide for borrowings by the Company or one or more of its subsidiaries in the aggregate principal amount of $2.0 billion. The New Credit Facility is being arranged by an affiliate of the Initial Purchaser who has advised the Company that it is, subject to customary qualifications, highly confident that under current market and economic conditions a $2.0 billion credit facility can be successfully syndicated to financial institutions. It is expected that the facility will provide for one or more term loans in the aggregate principal amount of $1.5 billion which, together with the net proceeds of the Offering, will be used to finance the cash portion of the Acquisitions (see "Financing Plan and Use of Proceeds") and a $500 million revolving credit facility which will be available for general corporate purposes. It is expected that the term borrowings under the New Credit Facility will mature based on an amortization schedule to be negotiated, subject to certain mandatory earlier repayments customary for facilities of a similar nature, and that the revolving credit borrowings will mature seven years from the closing date of the New Credit Facility. It is expected that interest will accrue, at the Company's option, at LIBOR plus a spread margin to be negotiated or at the Agent's (as defined below) Base Rate (generally the higher of the Agent's prime rate or the Federal Funds Rate plus 1/2 of 1%) plus a spread to be negotiated. The Company does not yet have commitments from lenders to provide the New Credit Facility and, in any event, the New Credit Facility is subject to the negotiation and execution of definitive documentation and other customary conditions.

Securities and Guarantees. Borrowings under the New Credit Facility may be secured by (i) a pledge of the stock of each of the Company's subsidiaries and (ii) security interests in substantially all of the assets of the Company and its subsidiaries. The Company expects the New Credit Facility will be guaranteed by each of the Company's wholly-owned U.S. subsidiaries and that such subsidiary guarantees will be secured as described above. To the extent borrowings are made by any subsidiaries of the Company, the obligations of such subsidiaries will be guaranteed by the Company.

Covenants. The Company expects that the definitive New Credit Facility will contain various covenants customary for facilities of this type, including (among others) covenants restricting the incurrence of indebtedness, the payment of dividends and other restricted payments, the incurrence of liens, dispositions of assets, mergers and acquisitions, capital expenditures and loans and investments. In addition, it is expected that the New Credit Facility will require the Company to maintain various financial ratios, including a maximum leverage ratio, a minimum interest coverage ratio and a maximum fixed charge coverage ratio.

Defaults. The Company expects that the New Credit Facility will provide for events of default customary for transactions of this type, including nonpayment, misrepresentation, breach of covenant, cross-defaults, bankruptcy, ERISA, judgments and change of ownership and control (including for this purpose a Fundamental Change.)

Other Debt

The Company intends to repay all or substantially all of the currently outstanding indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert as promptly as practicable following consummation of each Acquisition, subject to applicable notice provisions and other prepayment terms of the applicable indebtedness. Until such indebtedness is repaid, the Company will continue to be subject to the covenants and restrictions and limitations contained in the terms of such indebtedness. For additional information concerning outstanding indebtedness of the Company, CLN Holdings, Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert see the consolidated financial statements set forth elsewhere herein.

DESCRIPTION OF DEBENTURES

The Debentures are to be issued under an indenture to be dated as of March 1, 1998 (the "Indenture"), between the Company and The Bank of New York, as trustee (the "Trustee"). A copy of the form of Indenture will be available from the Trustee upon request by a registered holder of the Debentures. The following summary of certain provisions of the Debentures and the Indenture does not purport to be complete and is subject to, and is qualified in its entirety by reference to, all the provisions of the Debentures and the Indenture including the definitions therein of certain terms that are not otherwise defined in this Offering Memorandum. Wherever particular provisions or defined terms of the Indenture (or of the form of Debenture which is a part thereof) are referred to, such provisions or defined terms are incorporated herein by reference. As used in this "Description of Debentures," the "Company" refers to Sunbeam Corporation only and does not, unless the context otherwise indicates, include its subsidiaries.

Holders of the Debentures will also have the benefit of a Registration Rights Agreement between the Company and the Initial Purchaser. Under the Registration Rights Agreement, the Company will agree to file the Shelf Registration Statement with the Commission covering resales of the Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion thereof. See "Registration Rights."

General

The Debentures will be unsecured general obligations of the Company subordinate in right of payment to the New Credit Facility and certain other secured obligations of the Company as described under "Subordination of Debentures" and convertible into Common Stock as described under "Conversion of Debentures." The Debentures will be limited to $1,495,000,000 aggregate principal amount at maturity (including $195,000,000 aggregate principal amount at maturity if the Initial Purchaser's over-allotment option is exercised in full) and will mature on March 1, 2018.

The Indenture does not contain any financial covenants or restrictions on the payment of dividends, the incurrence of indebtedness, including Senior Indebtedness (as defined below under "Subordination of Debentures"), or the issuance or repurchase of securities of the Company. The Indenture contains no covenants or other provisions to afford protection to holders of the Debentures in the event of a highly leveraged transaction or a change in control of the Company except to the extent described under "Redemption at Option of the Holder Upon a Fundamental Change."

The Debentures are being issued at a substantial discount from their stated redemption price at maturity. For U.S. federal income tax purposes, the excess of the stated redemption price at maturity of each Debenture over its issue price (which is expected to be the Issue Price) constitutes Original Issue Discount ("OID"). See "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations." Maturity, conversion, purchase by the Company at the option of a holder or redemption of a Debenture will cause Original Issue Discount and interest, if any, to cease to accrue on such Debenture, under the terms and subject to the conditions of the Indenture. The Company may not reissue a Debenture that has matured or been converted, purchased by the Company at the option of a holder, redeemed or otherwise canceled (except for registration of transfer, exchange or replacement thereof).

The principal amount at maturity of each Debenture will be payable at the office or agency of the paying agent, initially the Trustee, in the Borough of Manhattan, The City of New York, or any other office of the paying agent maintained for such purpose. Debentures may be presented for conversion into Common Stock at the office of the conversion agent and Debentures in definitive form may be presented for exchange for other Debentures or registration of transfer at the office of the registrar, each such agent initially being the Trustee. The Company will not charge a service charge for any registration of transfer or exchange of Debentures; however, the Company may require payment by a holder of a sum sufficient to cover any tax, assessment or other governmental charge payable in connection therewith.

Form, Denomination and Registration

The Debentures will be issued in fully registered form, without coupons, in denominations of $1,000 principal amount at maturity and whole multiples thereof.

Global Debenture; Book-Entry Form. Debentures held by "qualified institutional buyers," as defined in Rule 144A under the Securities Act ("QIBs"), will be evidenced by a global Debenture (the "Global Debenture"), which will be deposited with, or on behalf of, The Depository Trust Company, New York, New York ("DTC") and registered in the name of Cede & Co. ("Cede"), as DTC's nominee. Except as set forth below, the Global Debenture may be transferred, in whole or in part, only to another nominee of DTC or to a successor of DTC or its nominee.

QIBs may hold their interests in the Global Debenture directly through DTC, or indirectly through organizations which are participants in DTC (the "Participants"). Transfers between Participants will be effected in the ordinary way in accordance with DTC rules. The laws of some states require that certain persons take physical delivery of securities in definitive form. Consequently, the ability to transfer beneficial interests in the Global Debenture to such persons may be limited.

QIBs who are not Participants may beneficially own interests in the Global Debenture held by DTC only through Participants or certain banks, brokers, dealers, trust companies and other parties that clear through or maintain a custodial relationship with a Participant, either directly or indirectly ("Indirect Participants"). So long as Cede, as the nominee of DTC, is the registered owner of the Global Debenture, Cede for all purposes will be considered the sole holder of the Global Debenture. Except as provided below, owners of beneficial interests in the Global Debenture will not be entitled to have certificates registered in their names, will not receive or be entitled to receive physical delivery of certificates in definitive form, and will not be considered the holders thereof.

Payment of the redemption price and the purchase price of the Global Debenture as well as any Liquidated Damages (as defined) due on the Global Debenture arising out of the Company's failure to meet its obligations under the Registration Rights Agreement will be made to Cede, the nominee for DTC, as the registered owner of the Global Debenture by wire transfer of immediately available funds. Neither the Company, the Trustee nor any paying agent will have any responsibility or liability for any aspect of the records relating to or payments made on account of beneficial ownership interests in the Global Debenture or for maintaining, supervising or reviewing any records relating to such beneficial ownership interests.

The Company has been informed by DTC that, with respect to payment of Liquidated Damages (if any) on and the redemption price or the purchase price of the Global Debenture, DTC's practice is to credit Participants' accounts on the payment date therefor with payments in amounts proportionate to their respective beneficial interests in the Debentures represented by the Global Debenture as shown on the records of DTC (adjusted as necessary so that such payments are made with respect to whole Debentures only), unless DTC has reason to believe that it will not receive payment on such payment date. Payments by Participants to owners of beneficial interests in Debentures represented by the Global Debenture held through such Participants will be the responsibility of such Participants, as is now the case with securities held for the accounts of customers registered in "street name."

Holders who desire to convert their Debentures into Common Stock should contact their brokers or other Participants or Indirect Participants to obtain information on procedures, including proper forms and cut-off times, for submitting such request.

Because DTC can only act on behalf of Participants, who in turn act on behalf of Indirect Participants and certain banks, the ability of a person having a beneficial interest in the Debentures represented by the Global Debenture to pledge such interest to persons or entities that do not participate in the DTC system, or otherwise take actions in respect of such interest, may be affected by the lack of a physical certificate evidencing such interest.

Neither the Company nor the Trustee (or any registrar, paying agent or conversion agent under the Indenture) will have any responsibility for the performance by DTC or its Participants or Indirect Participants of their respective obligations under the rules and procedures governing their operations. DTC has advised the Company that it will take any action permitted to be taken by a holder of Debentures (including, without limitation, the presentation of Debentures for conversion as described below) only at the direction of one or more Participants to whose account with DTC interests in the Global Debenture are credited and only in respect of the principal amount of the Debentures represented by the Global Debenture as to which such Participant or Participants has or have given such direction.

DTC has advised the Company as follows: DTC is a limited purpose trust company organized under the laws of the State of New York, a member of the Federal Reserve System, a "clearing corporation" within the meaning of the Uniform Commercial Code and a "clearing agency" registered pursuant to the provisions of Section 17A of the Exchange Act. DTC was created to hold securities for its Participants and to facilitate the clearance and settlement of securities transactions between Participants through electronic book-entry changes to accounts of its Participants, thereby eliminating the need for physical movement of certificates. Participants include securities brokers and dealers, banks, trust companies and clearing corporations and may include certain other organizations such as the Initial Purchaser. Certain of such Participants (or their representatives), together with other entities, own DTC. Indirect access to the DTC system is available to others such as banks, brokers, dealers and trust companies that clear through, or maintain a custodial relationship with a Participant, either directly or indirectly.

Although DTC has agreed to the foregoing procedures in order to facilitate transfers of interests in the Global Debenture among participants of DTC, DTC is under no obligation to perform or continue to perform such procedures, and such procedures may be discontinued at any time. If DTC is at any time unwilling or unable to continue as depository and a successor depository is not appointed by the Company within 90 days, the Company will cause Debentures to be issued in definitive form in exchange for the Global Debenture.

Conveyance of notices and other communications by DTC to Participants, by Participants to Indirect Participants and Indirect Participants to beneficial owners will be governed by arrangements among them, subject to any statutory or regulatory requirements that may be in effect from time to time. Redemption notices shall be sent to Cede. If less than all of the Debentures are being redeemed, DTC will reduce the amount of the interest of each Participant in such Debentures in accordance with its procedures.

Certificated Debentures. Debentures sold to investors that are not QIBs will be issued in definitive registered form and may not be represented by the Global Debenture. QIBs may request that any Debentures they hold in definitive registered form be exchanged for interests in the Global Debenture. Certificated Debentures may be issued in exchange for Debentures represented by the Global Debenture if a depository is unwilling or unable to continue as a depository for the Global Debenture as set forth above under "Global Debenture; Book-Entry Form."

Restrictions on Transfer; Legends. The Debentures will be subject to certain transfer restrictions as described below under "Transfer Restrictions" and certificates evidencing the Debentures will bear a legend to such effect.

Conversion of Debentures

A holder of a Debenture may convert it into Common Stock of the Company at any time after 90 days following the latest date of original issuance of the Debentures through the close of business on March 31, 2018; provided that if a Debenture is called for redemption, the holder may convert it only until the close of business on the last trading day prior to the Redemption Date unless the Company defaults in the payment of the redemption price. A Debenture in respect of which a holder has delivered a Purchase Notice exercising the option of such holder to require the Company to purchase such Debenture may be converted only if such notice is withdrawn in accordance with the terms of the Indenture. Similarly, a Debenture in respect of which a holder is exercising its option to require redemption upon a Fundamental Change may be converted only if such holder withdraws its election to exercise its option in accordance with the terms of the Indenture. A holder may convert such holder's Debentures in part so long as such part is $1,000 principal amount at maturity or a whole multiple thereof.

The initial Conversion Rate is _____ shares of Common Stock per $1,000 principal amount at maturity of Debentures, subject to adjustment upon the occurrence of certain events, as described below. A holder entitled to a fractional share of Common Stock shall receive cash equal to the then current market value of such fractional share.

On conversion of a Debenture, a holder will not receive any cash payment representing accrued Original Issue Discount. The Company's delivery to the holder of the fixed number of shares of Common Stock into which the Debenture is convertible (together with the cash payment, if any, in lieu of fractional Common Stock) will be deemed to satisfy the Company's obligation to pay the principal amount of the Debenture including the accrued Original Issue Discount attributable to the period from the Issue Date to the Conversion Date. The accrued Original Issue Discount is deemed to be paid in full rather than canceled, extinguished or forfeited. The Conversion Rate will not be adjusted at any time during the term of the Debentures for such accrued Original Issue Discount.

To convert a certificated Debenture into Common Stock, a holder must (i) complete and manually sign the conversion notice on the back of the Debenture (or complete and manually sign a facsimile thereof) and deliver such notice to the conversion agent, (ii) surrender the Debenture to the conversion agent, (iii) if required, furnish appropriate endorsements and transfer documents, and (iv) if required, pay all transfer or similar taxes. The procedure for converting a Global Debenture is described above under "Form, Denomination and Registration—Global Debenture; Book-Entry Form." Pursuant to the Indenture, the date on which all of the foregoing requirements have been satisfied is the Conversion Date.

The Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures has not been registered under the Securities Act and is subject to certain restrictions on transfer. See "Registration Rights" and "Transfer Restrictions."

The Conversion Rate is subject to adjustment under formulae as set forth in the Indenture in certain events, including: (i) the issuance of Common Stock of the Company as a dividend or distribution on the Common Stock; (ii) certain subdivisions and combinations of the Common Stock; (iii) the issuance to all holders of Common Stock of certain rights or warrants to purchase Common Stock; (iv) the distribution to all holders of Common Stock of capital stock (other than Common Stock), of evidences of indebtedness of the Company or of assets (including securities (other than Common Stock), but excluding those rights and warrants referred to in clause (iii) above or paid in cash); (v) distributions consisting of cash, excluding any quarterly cash dividend on the Common Stock to the extent that the aggregate cash dividend per share of Common Stock in any quarter does not exceed the greater of (x) the amount per share of Common Stock of the next preceding quarterly cash dividend on the Common Stock to the extent that such preceding quarterly dividend did not require an adjustment of the Conversion Rate pursuant to this clause (v) (as adjusted to reflect subdivisions or combinations of the Common Stock), and (y) 3.75 percent of the average of the last reported sales price of the Common Stock during the ten trading days immediately prior to the date of declaration of such dividend, and excluding any dividend or distribution in connection with the liquidation, dissolution or winding up of the Company; (vi) payment in respect of a tender offer or exchange offer by the Company or any Subsidiary of the Company for the Common Stock to the extent that the cash and value of any other consideration included in such payment per share of Common Stock exceeds the Current Market Price (as defined) per share of Common Stock on the trading day next succeeding the last date on which tenders or exchanges may be made pursuant to such tender or exchange offer; and (vii) payment in respect of a tender offer or exchange offer by a person other than the Company or any Subsidiary (as defined) of the Company in which, as of the closing date of the offer, the Board of Directors is not recommending rejection of the offer. If an adjustment is required to be made as set forth in clause (v) above as a result of a distribution that is a quarterly dividend, such adjustment would be based upon the amount by which such distribution exceeds the amount of the quarterly cash dividend permitted to be excluded pursuant to clause (v) above. If an adjustment is required to be made as set forth in clause (v) above as a result of a distribution that is not a quarterly dividend, such adjustment would be based upon the full amount of the distribution. The adjustment referred to in clause (vii) above will only be made if the tender offer or exchange offer is for an amount that increases the offeror's ownership of Common Stock to more than 25% of the total shares of Common Stock outstanding, and if the cash and value of any other consideration included in such payment per share of Common Stock exceeds the Current Market Price per share of Common Stock on the business day next succeeding the last date on which tenders or exchanges may be made pursuant to such tender or exchange offer. The adjustment referred to in clause (vii) above will generally not be made, however, if as of the closing of such offer, the offering documents with respect to such offer disclose a plan or an intention to cause the Company to engage in a consolidation or merger of the Company or a sale of all or substantially all of the Company's assets.

No adjustment in the Conversion Rate will be required unless such adjustment would require a change of at least 1% in the rate then in effect; provided that any adjustment that would otherwise be required to be made shall be carried forward and taken into account in any subsequent adjustment. Except as stated above, the Conversion Rate will not be adjusted for the issuance of Common Stock or any securities convertible into or exchangeable for Common Stock or carrying the right to purchase any of the foregoing.

In the case of (i) any reclassification of the Common Stock, or (ii) a consolidation or merger involving the Company or a sale or conveyance to another corporation of the property and assets of the Company as an entirety or substantially as an entirety, in each case as a result of which holders of Common Stock shall be entitled to receive stock, securities, other property or assets (including cash) with respect to or in exchange for such Common Stock, the holders of the Debentures then outstanding will be entitled thereafter to convert such Debentures into the kind and amount of shares of stock, securities or other property or assets (including cash) which they would have owned or been entitled to receive upon such reclassification, consolidation, merger, sale or conveyance had such Debentures been converted immediately prior to such reclassification, consolidation, merger, sale or conveyance assuming that a holder of Debentures would not have exercised any rights of election as to the stock, securities or other property or assets (including cash) receivable in connection therewith.

In the event of a taxable distribution to holders of Common Stock or in certain other circumstances requiring an adjustment to the Conversion Rate, the holders of Debentures may, in certain circumstances, be deemed to have received a distribution subject to United States income tax as a dividend; in certain other circumstances, the absence of such an adjustment may result in a taxable dividend to the holders of Common Stock. See "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations."

The Company from time to time may, to the extent permitted by law, increase the Conversion Rate by any amount for any period of at least 20 days, in which case the Company shall give at least 15 days' notice of such increase, if the Company's Board of Directors has made a determination that such increase would be in the best interests of the Company, which determination shall be conclusive. The Company may, at its option, make such increases in the Conversion Rate, in addition to those set forth above, as the Board of Directors deems advisable to avoid or diminish any income tax to holders of Common Stock resulting from any dividend or distribution of stock (or rights to acquire stock) or from any event treated as such for income tax purposes. See "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations."

Redemption of Debentures at the Option of the Company

No sinking fund is provided for the Debentures. Prior to March , 2003, the Debentures will not be redeemable at the option of the Company. Beginning on March , 2003, the Company may (subject to applicable contractual restrictions including under agreements governing Senior Indebtedness) redeem the Debentures for cash as a whole at any time, or from time to time in part, upon not less than 30 days' nor more than 60 days' notice of redemption given by mail to holders of Debentures. The Debentures will be redeemable in whole multiples of $1,000 principal amount at maturity.

The table below shows Redemption Prices of a Debenture per $1,000 principal amount at maturity thereof, at March , 2003 and at each March , thereafter prior to maturity and at maturity on March , 2018, which prices reflect the accrued Original Issue Discount calculated to each such date. The Redemption Price of a Debenture redeemed between such dates would include an additional amount reflecting the additional Original Issue Discount accrued since the next preceding date in the table to the actual Redemption Date.

If less than all of the outstanding Debentures held in certificated form are to be redeemed, the Trustee shall select the Debentures held in such form to be redeemed in principal amounts at maturity of $1,000 or whole multiples thereof by lot, pro rata or by another method the Trustee considers fair and appropriate (as long as such method is not prohibited by the rules of any stock exchange on which the Debentures are then listed, if any). If a portion of a holder's certificated Debentures is selected for partial redemption and such holder converts a portion of such certificated Debentures, such converted portion shall be deemed to be the portion selected for redemption. Debentures registered in the name of DTC or its nominee will be redeemed pro rata as described under "—Form, Denomination and Registration—Global Debenture; Book-Entry Form."

Redemption at Option of the Holder Upon a Fundamental Change

If a Fundamental Change (as defined) occurs at any time prior to March 31, 2018, each holder of Debentures shall have the right, at the holder's option, to require the Company to redeem any or all of such holder's Debentures on the date (the "Repurchase Date") that is 45 days after the date of the Company's notice of such Fundamental Change. The Debentures will be redeemable in whole multiples of $1,000 principal amount at maturity at their accreted value on the Repurchase Date.

The Company shall redeem such Debentures at a price equal to the Issue Price plus accrued Original Issue Discount to, but excluding, the Repurchase Date, provided that if the Applicable Price (as defined) in connection with the Fundamental Change is less than the Reference Market Price (as defined), the Company shall redeem such Debentures at a price equal to the foregoing Redemption Price multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing the Applicable Price by the Reference Market Price.

The Company shall mail to all holders of record of the Debentures a notice of the occurrence of a Fundamental Change and of the redemption right arising as a result thereof on or before the tenth day after the occurrence of such Fundamental Change. The Company shall deliver to the Trustee a copy of such notice. To exercise the redemption right, holders of Debentures must deliver, on or before the 30th day after the date of the Company's notice of a Fundamental Change (the "Fundamental Change Expiration Time"), the Debentures to be so redeemed, duly endorsed for transfer, together with the form entitled "Option to Elect Redemption Upon a Fundamental Change" on the reverse thereof duly completed, to the Company (or an agent designated by the Company for such purpose). Payment for Notes surrendered for redemption (and not withdrawn) prior to the Fundamental Change Expiration Time will be made promptly following the Repurchase Date.

The term "Fundamental Change" means the occurrence of any transaction or event in connection with which all or substantially all of the Common Stock shall be exchanged for, converted into, acquired for or constitute solely the right to receive consideration (whether by means of an exchange offer, liquidation, tender offer, consolidation, merger, combination, reclassification, recapitalization or otherwise) which is not all or substantially all common stock of a company listed (or, upon consummation of or immediately following such transaction or event, which will be listed) on a United States national securities exchange or approved for quotation on the Nasdaq National Market or any similar United States system of automated dissemination of quotations of securities prices.

The term "Applicable Price" means (i) in the event of a Fundamental Change in which the holders of the Common Stock receive only cash, the amount of cash received by the holder of one share of Common Stock and (ii) in the event of any other Fundamental Change, the average of the reported last sale price for the Common Stock during the ten trading days prior to the record date for the determination of the holders of Common Stock entitled to receive cash, securities, property or other assets in connection with such Fundamental Change, or, if there is no such record date, the date upon which the holders of the Common Stock shall have the right to receive such cash, securities, property or other assets in connection with the Fundamental Change.

The term "Reference Market Price" shall initially mean $ (which is equal to 66 2/3% of the last sale price of the Common Stock as reflected on the cover page of this Offering Memorandum) and in the event of any adjustment to the Conversion Rate pursuant to the provisions of the Indenture, the Reference Market Price shall also be adjusted so that the Reference Market Price shall be equal to the initial Reference Market Price multiplied by a fraction the numerator of which is the Conversion Rate specified on the cover of this Offering Memorandum (without regard to any adjustment thereto) and the denominator of which is the Conversion Rate following such adjustment.

The Company will comply with the provisions of Rule 13e-4 and any other tender offer rules under the Exchange Act which may then be applicable in connection with the redemption rights of Debenture holders in the event of a Fundamental Change.

The redemption rights of the holders of Debentures could discourage a potential acquiror of the Company. The Fundamental Change redemption feature, however, is not the result of management's knowledge of any specific effort to obtain control of the Company by means of a merger, tender offer, solicitation or otherwise, or part of a plan by management to adopt a series of anti-takeover provisions.

The term "Fundamental Change" is limited to certain specified transactions and may not include other events that might adversely affect the financial condition of the Company, nor would the requirement that the Company offer to repurchase the Debentures upon a Fundamental Change necessarily afford the holders of the Debentures protection in the event of a highly leveraged transaction, reorganization, merger or similar transaction involving the Company.

No Debentures may be redeemed at the option of holders upon a Fundamental Change if there has occurred and is continuing an Event of Default described under "—Events of Default; Notice and Waiver" below (other than a default in the payment of the Fundamental Change Redemption Price with respect to such Debentures). In the event of a Fundamental Change and exercise by holders of the Debentures of their associated rights to require the Company to redeem all or a portion of their Debentures, there can be no assurance that the Company would have sufficient funds to pay the redemption price for all the Debentures tendered by the holders thereof. The Company expects that the New Credit Facility will provide, and any future credit agreements (including an extension of the New Credit Facility) or other agreements relating to indebtedness (including Senior Indebtedness) to which the Company becomes a party also may provide, that a Fundamental Change would constitute an event of default thereunder permitting the lenders thereunder to accelerate the maturity thereof and thereby cause the subordination provisions in the Indenture to apply, preventing redemption of the Debentures until Senior Indebtedness thereunder is paid in full. Any such provisions could restrict or prohibit the redemption of the Debentures. If the Company is prohibited from redeeming the Debentures upon the occurrence of a Fundamental Change, the Company could seek the consent of its then existing lenders to redeem the Debentures or could attempt to refinance the borrowings that contain such prohibition. If the Company does not obtain such a consent or repay such borrowings, the Company would remain prohibited from redeeming the Debentures. In such case, the Company's failure to redeem Debentures required to be redeemed under the terms of the Indenture would constitute an Event of Default under the Indenture and would likely constitute a default under the terms of any other indebtedness of the Company outstanding at such time, including Senior Indebtedness. In such circumstances, or if a Fundamental Change would in and of itself constitute an event of default under agreements governing Senior Indebtedness then outstanding, the subordination provisions in the Indenture would prohibit or restrict payments to the holders of Debentures.

Purchase of Debentures at the Option of the Holder

On March , 2003, March , 2008 and March , 2013 (each, a "Purchase Date"), the Company will become obligated to purchase, at the option of the holder thereof, any outstanding Debenture for which a written Purchase Notice has been delivered by the holder to the office of the paying agent (initially the Trustee) at any time from the opening of business on the date that is 20 Business Days (as defined) prior to such Purchase Date until the close of business on such Purchase Date and for which such Purchase Notice has not been withdrawn, subject to certain additional conditions.

The Purchase Notice shall state (i) the certificate numbers of the Debentures to be delivered by the holder thereof for purchase by the Company; (ii) the portion of the principal amount at maturity of Debentures to be purchased, which portion must be $1,000 or a whole multiple thereof; (iii) that such Debentures are to be purchased by the Company pursuant to the applicable provisions of the Debentures; and (iv) in the event the Company elects, pursuant to the Company Notice (as defined), to pay the Purchase Price to be paid as of such Purchase Date in Common Stock, in whole or in part, but such Purchase Price is ultimately to be paid to such holder entirely in cash because any of the conditions to payment of the Purchase Price (or portion thereof) in Common Stock is not satisfied by the Purchase Date, as described below, whether such holder elects (x) to withdraw such Purchase Notice as to some or all of the Debentures to which it relates (stating the principal amount at maturity and certificate numbers of the Debentures as to which such withdrawal shall relate), or (y) to receive cash in respect of the entire Purchase Price for all Debentures subject to such Purchase Notice. If the holder fails to indicate, in the Purchase Notice and in any written notice of withdrawal relating to such Purchase Notice, such holder's choice with respect to the election described in clause (iv) above, such holder shall be deemed to have elected to receive cash in respect of the entire Purchase Price for all Debentures subject to such Purchase Notice in such circumstances. For a discussion of the tax treatment of a holder receiving cash or Common Stock pursuant to its election to tender its Debentures to the Company on a Purchase Date, see "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations."

Any Purchase Notice may be withdrawn by the holder by a written notice of withdrawal delivered to the paying agent prior to the close of business on the Purchase Date. The notice of withdrawal shall state the principal amount at maturity and the certificate numbers of the Debentures as to which the withdrawal notice relates and the principal amount at maturity, if any, which remains subject to the Purchase Notice.

The Purchase Price payable in respect of a Debenture shall be equal to the Issue Price plus accrued Original Issue Discount to the Purchase Date. The table below shows the Purchase Prices of a Debenture as of the specified Purchase Dates. The Company may elect to pay the Purchase Price payable as of any Purchase Date in cash or Common Stock or any combination thereof.

Purchase Date	Purchase Price
March , 2003	$
March , 2013

If the Company elects to pay the Purchase Price, in whole or in part, in Common Stock, the number of shares to be delivered in respect of the portion of the Purchase Price to be paid in Common Stock shall be equal to such portion of the Purchase Price divided by the Market Price (as defined) of the Common Stock. However, no fractional shares of Common Stock will be delivered upon any purchase by the Company of Debentures through the delivery of Common Stock in payment, in whole or in part, of the Purchase Price. Instead, the Company will pay cash based on the Market Price for all fractional shares of Common Stock.

The Company will give notice (the "Company Notice") not less than 20 Business Days prior to the Purchase Date (the "Company Notice Date") to all holders at their addresses shown in the register of the registrar (and to beneficial owners as required by applicable law) stating, among other things, whether the Company will pay the Purchase Price of the Debentures in cash or Common Stock, or any combination thereof (specifying the percentage of each) and, if the Company elects to pay in Common Stock, in whole or in part, the method of calculating the Market Price of the Common Stock.

The "Market Price" means the average of the Sale Prices (as defined) of the Common Stock for the five trading day period ending on the third Business Day prior to the applicable Purchase Date (if the third Business Day prior to the applicable Purchase Date is a trading day or, if it is not a trading day, then on the last trading day prior to such third Business Day), appropriately adjusted to take into account the occurrence during the period commencing on the first of such trading days during such five trading day period and ending on such Purchase Date of certain events that would result in an adjustment of the Conversion Rate under the Indenture with respect to the Common Stock. The "Sale Price" of the Common Stock on any date means the closing per share sale price (or if no closing sale price is reported, the average bid and ask prices or, if more than one in either case, the average of the average bid and average ask prices) on such date as reported in the composite transactions for the principal United States securities exchange on which the Common Stock is traded or, if the Common Stock is not listed on a United States national or regional stock exchange, as reported by the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation System. Because the Market Price of the Common Stock is determined prior to the applicable Purchase Date, holders of Debentures bear the market risk with respect to the value of the Common Stock to be received from the date of determination of such Market Price to such Purchase Date. The Company may elect to pay the Purchase Price in Common Stock only if the information necessary to calculate the Market Price is reported in a daily newspaper of national circulation.

Upon any distribution of assets of the Company upon any dissolution, winding up, voluntary or involuntary bankruptcy, insolvency, liquidation, reorganization, receivership or similar proceeding relating to the Company or its property, an assignment for the benefit of creditors or any marshaling of the Company's assets or liabilities, the holders of Senior Indebtedness will be entitled to receive payment in full, in cash or other payment satisfactory to the holders of Senior Indebtedness, of all obligations due in respect of such Senior Indebtedness before the holders of Debentures will be entitled to receive any payment of the principal amount at maturity, Issue Price, accrued Original Issue Discount, Redemption Price, Purchase Price, Fundamental Change Redemption Price, interest, if any, Liquidated Damages, if any, or any other payment in respect of the Debentures (a "Payment on the Debentures"), and until all obligations with respect to Senior Indebtedness are paid in full in cash or other payment satisfactory to the holders of Senior Indebtedness, any Payment on the Debentures to which the holders of Debentures would be entitled shall be made to the holders of Senior Indebtedness. By reason of the subordination, in the event of the Company's dissolution, winding up, bankruptcy, insolvency, liquidation, reorganization, receivership or similar proceeding relating to the Company or its property, an assignment for the benefit of creditors or any marshaling of the Company's assets or liabilities, holders of Senior Indebtedness may receive more, ratably, and the holders of Debentures may receive less, ratably, than the other creditors of the Company.

In the event that the Debentures are declared due and payable prior to their stated maturity by reason of the occurrence of an Event of Default, then the Company is obligated to notify promptly holders of Senior Indebtedness of such acceleration. The Company may not pay monies owed pursuant to the Debentures until 120 days have passed after such acceleration occurs and may thereafter pay the Debentures if the terms of the Indenture otherwise permit payment at that time.

The Company also may not make any Payment on the Debentures if (i) a default in any payment obligations in respect of Senior Indebtedness occurs and is continuing, without regard to any applicable period of grace (whether at maturity or at a date fixed for payment or by declaration or otherwise) (each a "payment default") or (ii) any other default occurs and is continuing with respect to Designated Senior Indebtedness that permits holders of the Designated Senior Indebtedness as to which such default relates to accelerate its maturity and the Trustee receives a notice of such default (a "Payment Blockage Notice") from the Company or from a representative for any issue of Designated Senior Indebtedness. Payments on the Debentures may and shall be resumed (a) in case of a payment default, the earlier of the date on which such default is cured or waived in accordance with the terms of the governing instrument or ceases to exist and (b) in case of a nonpayment default, the earlier of the date on which such nonpayment default is cured or waived in accordance with the terms of the governing instrument or ceases to exist or 179 days after the date on which the applicable Payment Blockage Notice is received by the Trustee if the terms of the Indenture otherwise permit payment at that time. No new period of payment blockage may be commenced pursuant to a Payment Blockage Notice unless and until 365 days have elapsed since the initial effectiveness of the immediately prior Payment Blockage Notice. No nonpayment default that existed or was continuing on the date of delivery of any Payment Blockage Notice to the Trustee shall be, or shall be made, the basis for a subsequent Payment Blockage Notice unless such default shall have been cured or waived for a period of not less than 90 days (it being acknowledged that (x) any action of the Company or any of its subsidiaries occurring subsequent to delivery of a Payment Blockage Notice that would give rise to any event of default pursuant to any provision of Senior Indebtedness under which an event of default previously existed (or was continuing at the time of delivery of such Payment Blockage Notice) shall constitute a new event of default for this purpose and (y) any breach of a financial covenant giving rise to a nonpayment default for a period ending subsequent to the date of delivery of the respective Payment Blockage Notice shall constitute a new event of default for this purpose).

The term "Senior Indebtedness" means the principal of, premium, if any, interest (including all interest accruing subsequent to, or which would accrue but for, the commencement of any bankruptcy or similar proceeding, whether or not a claim for post-petition interest is allowable as a claim in any such proceeding), original issue discount, rent and end of term payments payable on or in connection with, and, to the extent not included in the foregoing, all amounts payable as fees, costs, expenses, liquidated damages, indemnities, repurchase and other put obligations and other amounts to the extent accrued or due on or in connection with, Secured Indebtedness (as defined) of the Company, whether outstanding on the date of the Indenture or thereafter created, incurred, assumed, guaranteed or in effect guaranteed by the Company (including all deferrals, renewals, extensions or refundings of, or amendments, modifications or supplements to, the foregoing). Notwithstanding the foregoing, the term Senior Indebtedness shall not include (i) Indebtedness of the Company to any subsidiary of the Company, a majority of the voting stock of which is owned, directly or indirectly, by the Company, (ii) accounts payable or other indebtedness to trade creditors created or assumed by the Company in the ordinary course of business and (iii) any particular Indebtedness in which the instrument creating or evidencing the same or the assumption or guarantee thereof expressly provides that such Indebtedness shall not be senior in right of payment to, or is pari passu with, or is subordinated or junior to, the Debentures.

The term "Indebtedness" means, with respect to any Person (as defined) and without duplication: (a) all indebtedness, obligations and other liabilities (contingent or otherwise) of such Person for borrowed money (including obligations of the Company in respect of overdrafts, foreign exchange contracts, currency exchange agreements, interest rate protection agreements, and any loans or advances, whether or not evidenced by notes or similar instruments) or evidenced by bonds, debentures, notes or similar instruments (whether or not the recourse of the lender is to the whole of the assets of such Person or to only a portion thereof); (b) all reimbursement obligations and other liabilities (contingent or otherwise) of such Person with respect to letters of credit, bank guarantees, bankers' acceptances or similar facilities; (c) all obligations and liabilities (contingent or otherwise) in respect of leases of such Person (i) required, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, to be accounted for as capitalized lease obligations on the balance sheet of such Person, or (ii) required, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, to be accounted for as an operating lease, provided either (A) such operating lease requires, at the end of the term thereof, that such Person make any payment other than accrued periodic rent in the event that such Person does not acquire the leased real property and related fixtures subject to such lease or (B) such Person has an option to acquire the leased real property and related fixtures, whether such option is exercisable at any time or under specified circumstances; (d) all obligations of such Person (contingent or otherwise) with respect to an interest rate swap, cap or collar agreement or other similar instrument or agreement or foreign currency hedge or exchange agreement or other similar instrument or agreement; (e) all direct or indirect guaranties or similar agreements by such Person in respect of, and obligations or liabilities (contingent or otherwise) of such Person to purchase or otherwise acquire or otherwise assure a creditor against loss in respect of, indebtedness, obligations or liabilities of another Person of the kind described in clauses (a) through (d); (f) any indebtedness or other obligations described in clauses (a) through (d) secured by any mortgage, pledge, lien or other encumbrance existing on property which is owned or held by such Person, regardless of whether the indebtedness or other obligation secured thereby shall have been assumed by such Person; and (g) any and all deferrals, renewals, extensions and refundings of, or amendments, modifications or supplements to, any indebtedness, obligation or liability of the kind described in clauses (a) through (f).

The term "Designated Senior Indebtedness" means (i) Senior Indebtedness incurred under the New Credit Facility or (ii) any other particular Senior Indebtedness in which the instrument creating or evidencing the same or the assumption or guarantee thereof (or related agreements or documents to which the Company is a party) expressly provides that such Senior Indebtedness shall be "Designated Senior Indebtedness" for purposes of the Indenture; provided that such instrument, agreement or other document may place limitations and conditions on the right of such Senior Indebtedness to exercise the rights of Designated Senior Indebtedness.

The term "Secured Indebtedness" means, with respect to any Person, Indebtedness of such Person secured by any mortgage, pledge, lien or other encumbrance existing on the property or assets which is owned or held by such Person.

The Debentures are obligations exclusively of the Company. Since the operations of the Company are conducted through subsidiaries, the cash flow and the consequent ability to service debt, including the Debentures, are dependent upon the earnings of its subsidiaries and the distribution of those earnings to, or upon loans or other payments of funds by those subsidiaries to, the Company. The subsidiaries are separate and distinct legal entities and have no obligation, contingent or otherwise, to pay any amount pursuant to the Debentures or to make any funds available therefor, whether by dividends, loans or other payments. In addition, the payment of dividends and making of loans and advances to the Company by its subsidiaries are subject to statutory or contractual restrictions, including those expected under the New Credit Facility, are contingent upon the earnings of those subsidiaries and are subject to various business considerations.

Any right of the Company to receive assets of any of its subsidiaries upon their liquidation or reorganization (and the consequent right of the holders of the Debentures to participate in those assets) will be effectively subordinated to the claims of that subsidiary's creditors (including trade creditors), except to the extent that the Company is itself recognized as a creditor of such subsidiary, in which case the claims of the Company would still be subordinate to any security interests in the assets of such subsidiary and any indebtedness of such subsidiary senior to that held by the Company.

At December 28, 1997, on a pro forma basis after giving effect to the Acquisitions, the Bank Financing, the Offering and the application of the net proceeds therefrom, approximately $1.537 million of Senior Indebtedness and the Company's subsidiaries would have had approximately $731 million of indebtedness and other liabilities outstanding (excluding intercompany liabilities and liabilities of a type not required to be reflected on a balance sheet in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) to which the Debentures would have been effectively subordinated. The Debentures rank pari passu with all outstanding indebtedness and other liabilities of the Company, including trade payables. Upon the consummation of the Offering, the Company will have no outstanding indebtedness or other liabilities other than trade payables. The Indenture will not limit the amount of additional indebtedness, including Senior Indebtedness, which the Company can create, incur, assume or guarantee, nor will the Indenture limit the amount of indebtedness which any subsidiary can create, incur, assume or guarantee.

In the event that, notwithstanding the foregoing, the Trustee or any holder of the Debentures receives any payment or distribution of assets of the Company of any kind in contravention of any of the subordination provisions of the Indenture, whether in cash, property or securities, including, without limitation, by way of set-off or otherwise, in respect of the Debentures before all Senior Indebtedness is paid in full in cash or other payment satisfactory to the holders of Senior Indebtedness, then such payment or distribution will be held by the recipient in trust for the benefit of holders of Senior Indebtedness or their representatives to the extent necessary to make payment in full in cash or other payment satisfactory to the holders of Senior Indebtedness of all Senior Indebtedness remaining unpaid, after giving effect to any concurrent payment or distribution, or provision therefor, to or for the holders of Senior Indebtedness.

The Company is obligated to pay reasonable compensation to the Trustee and to indemnify the Trustee against certain losses, liabilities or expenses incurred by it in connection with its duties relating to the Debentures. The Trustee's claims for such payments will generally be senior to those of holders of the Debentures in respect of all funds collected or held by the Trustee.

Events of Default; Notice and Waiver

The Indenture provides that, if an Event of Default specified therein shall have occurred and be continuing, either the Trustee or the holders of not less than 25% in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the Debentures then outstanding may declare the Issue Price of the Debentures plus the Original Issue Discount on the Debentures and any liquidated damages under the Registration Rights Agreement accrued to the date of such declaration to be immediately due and payable, but if the Company shall cure all defaults (except the nonpayment of Issue Price and accrued Original Issue Discount which shall have become due by acceleration) and certain other conditions are met, such declaration may be annulled and past defaults may be waived by the holders of a majority in principal amount at maturity of the Debentures then outstanding. In the case of certain events of bankruptcy or insolvency, the Issue Price of the Debentures plus the Original Issue Discount accrued thereon to the occurrence of such event shall automatically become and be immediately due and payable. Under certain circumstances, the holders of a majority in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the outstanding Debentures may rescind any such acceleration with respect to the Debentures and its consequences. Interest shall accrue at the rate of % per annum and be payable on demand upon a default in the payment of the Issue Price, accrued Original Issue Discount, accrued liquidated damages, if any, or any Redemption Price, Purchase Price or Fundamental Change Redemption Price to the extent that payment of such interest shall be legally enforceable.

Under the Indenture, Events of Default are defined as: (i) default in payment of the principal amount at maturity, Issue Price, accrued Original Issue Discount, accrued Liquidated Damages, if any, Redemption Price, Purchase Price or Fundamental Change Redemption Price with respect to any Debenture when such becomes due and payable (whether or not payment is prohibited by the subordination provisions of the Indenture), provided that in the case of any failure to pay Liquidated Damages, such failure continues for a period of 30 days; (ii) failure by the Company to comply with any of its other agreements in the Debentures or the Indenture upon the receipt by the Company of notice of such default by the Trustee or by holders of not less than 25% in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the Debentures then outstanding and the Company's failure to cure such default within 60 days after receipt by the Company of such notice; or (iii) certain events of bankruptcy or insolvency.

The Trustee shall give notice to holders of the Debentures of any continuing default known to the Trustee within 90 days after the occurrence thereof, provided that the Trustee may withhold such notice if it determines in good faith that withholding the notice is in the interests of the holders.

The holders of a majority in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the outstanding Debentures may direct the time, method and place of conducting any proceeding for any remedy available to the Trustee or exercising any trust or power conferred on the Trustee; provided that such direction shall not be in conflict with any law or the Indenture and subject to certain other limitations. Before proceeding to exercise any right or power under the Indenture at the direction of such holders, the Trustee shall be entitled to receive from such holders reasonable security or indemnity satisfactory to it against the costs, expenses and liabilities which might be incurred by it in complying with any such direction. No holder of any Debenture will have any right to pursue any remedy with respect to the Indenture or the Debentures, unless (i) such holder shall have previously given the Trustee written notice of a continuing Event of Default; (ii) the holders of at least 25% in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the outstanding Debentures shall have made a written request to the Trustee to pursue such remedy; (iii) such holder or holders have offered to the Trustee reasonable indemnity satisfactory to the Trustee; (iv) the holders of a majority in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the outstanding Debentures have not given the Trustee a direction inconsistent with such request within 60 days after receipt of such request; and (v) the Trustee shall have failed to comply with the request within such 60-day period.

In the event that the Debentures are declared due and payable prior to their stated maturity by reason of the occurrence of an Event of Default, then the Company is obligated to notify promptly holders of Senior Indebtedness of such acceleration. The Company may not pay monies owed pursuant to the Debentures until 120 days have passed after such acceleration occurs and may thereafter pay the Debentures if the terms of the Indenture otherwise permit payment at that time.

However, the right of any holder (x) to receive payment of the principal amount at maturity, Issue Price, accrued Original Issue Discount, Redemption Price, Purchase Price, Fundamental Change Redemption Price and any interest in respect of a default in the payment of any such amounts on a Debenture, on or after the due date expressed in such Debenture, (y) to institute suit for the enforcement of any such payments or conversion or (z) to convert Debentures shall not be impaired or adversely affected without such holder's consent. The holders of at least a majority in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the outstanding Debentures may waive an existing default and its consequences, other than (i) any default in any payment on the Debentures, (ii) any default with respect to the conversion rights of the Debentures or (iii) any default in respect of certain covenants or provisions in the Indenture which may not be modified without the consent of the holder of each Debenture as described in "Modification" below. The Company will be required to furnish to the Trustee annually a statement as to any default by the Company in the performance and observance of its obligations under the Indenture.

Mergers and Sales of Assets by the Company

The Company may not consolidate with or merge into any other person or convey, transfer or lease its properties and assets substantially as an entirety to another person, unless, among other items, (i) the resulting, surviving or transferee person (if other than the Company) is organized and existing under the laws of the United States, any state thereof or the District of Columbia, (ii) such successor person assumes all obligations of the Company under the Debentures and the Indenture and (iii) the Company or such successor person shall not immediately thereafter be in default under the Indenture. Upon the assumption of the Company's obligations by such person in such circumstances, subject to certain exceptions, the Company shall be discharged from all obligations under the Debentures and the Indenture. Certain such transactions which would constitute a Fundamental Change would permit each holder to require the Company to redeem the Debentures of such holder as described under "Redemption at Option of the Holder Upon a Fundamental Change."

Modification

Modification and amendment of the Indenture or the Debentures may be effected by the Company and the Trustee with the consent of the holders of not less than a majority in aggregate principal amount at maturity of the Debentures then outstanding. Notwithstanding the foregoing, no such amendment may, without the consent of each holder affected thereby: (i) reduce the principal amount at maturity, Issue Price, Purchase Price, Fundamental Change Redemption Price or Redemption Price, or extend the stated maturity of any Debenture or alter the manner or rate of accrual of Original Issue Discount or interest, or make any Debenture payable in money or securities other than that stated in the Debenture; (ii) make any change to the principal amount at maturity of Debentures whose holders must consent to an amendment or any waiver under the Indenture or modify the Indenture provisions relating to such amendments or waivers; (iii) make any change that adversely affects the right to convert any Debenture or the right to require the Company to purchase a Debenture or the right to require the Company to redeem a Debenture upon a Fundamental Change; (iv) modify the provisions of the Indenture relating to the subordination of the Debentures in a manner adverse to the holders of the Debentures in any material respect; or (v) impair the right to institute suit for the enforcement of any payment with respect to, or conversion of, the Debentures. The Indenture also provides for certain modifications of its terms without the consent of the holders. No amendment may be made to the subordination provisions of the Indenture that adversely affects the rights of any holder of Senior Indebtedness then outstanding, unless the holders of such Senior Indebtedness (as required pursuant to the terms of such Senior Indebtedness) consent to such change.

Limitations of Claims in Bankruptcy

If a bankruptcy proceeding is commenced in respect of the Company, the claim of the holder of a Debenture is, under Title 11 of the United States Code, limited to the Issue Price of the Debenture plus that portion of the Original Issue Discount that has accrued from the date of issue to the commencement of the proceeding. In addition, the Debentures will be subordinated in right of payment to Senior Indebtedness to the extent set forth in the Indenture and effectively subordinated to the indebtedness and other obligations of the Company's subsidiaries. See "Subordination of Debentures" above.

Taxation of Debentures

See "Certain United States Federal Income Tax Considerations" for a discussion of certain tax considerations relevant to a holder of Debentures.

Rule 144A Information Requirement

The Company has agreed to furnish to the holders or beneficial holders of the Debentures or Common Stock issued upon conversion thereof and prospective purchasers of the Debentures or such Common Stock designated by such holders, upon their request, the information required to be delivered pursuant to Rule 144A(d)(4) under the Securities Act until such time as such securities are no longer "restricted securities" within the meaning of Rule 144 under the Securities Act (assuming such securities have not been owned by an affiliate of the Company).

Information Concerning the Trustee

The Bank of New York, as Trustee under the Indenture, has been appointed by the Company as paying agent, conversion agent, registrar and custodian with regard to the Debentures. The Indenture provides that, except during the continuance of an Event of Default, the Trustee thereunder will exercise such rights and powers vested in it under the Indenture and use the same degree of care and skill in its exercise as a prudent person would exercise under the circumstances in the conduct of such person's own affairs.

The Indenture and provisions of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, as amended ("TIA"), incorporated by reference therein contain limitations on the rights of the Trustee thereunder, should it become a creditor of the Company, to obtain payment of certain claims in certain cases or to realize on certain property received by it in respect of any such claims, as security or otherwise. The Trustee is permitted to engage in other transactions; provided, however, that if it acquires any conflicting interest (within the meaning of the TIA) it must eliminate such conflicting interest or resign.

REGISTRATION RIGHTS

A copy of the Registration Rights Agreement will be available from the Trustee upon request by a registered holder of the Debentures. The following summary of certain provisions of the Registration Rights Agreement does not purport to be complete and is subject to, and is qualified in its entirety by reference to, all the provisions of the Registration Rights Agreement, including the definitions of certain terms that are not otherwise defined in this Offering Memorandum. The Company will enter into a registration rights agreement with the Initial Purchaser (the "Registration Rights Agreement") pursuant to which the Company, at its expense, will, for the benefit of the holders, file with the Commission the Shelf Registration Statement covering resale of the Registrable Securities as soon as practicable, but in any event within 90 days after the first date of original issuance of the Debentures. The Company will use its best efforts to cause the Shelf Registration Statement to become effective as promptly as is practicable, but in any event within 180 days of such first date of original issuance and to keep the Shelf Registration Statement effective until the earlier of (i) the sale pursuant to the Shelf Registration Statement of all the securities registered thereunder and (ii) the expiration of the holding period applicable to such securities held by persons that are not affiliates of the Company under Rule 144(k) under the Securities Act, or any successor provision, subject to certain permitted exceptions. The Company will be permitted to suspend the use of the prospectus that is a part of the Shelf Registration Statement under certain circumstances relating to pending corporate developments, public filings with the Commission and similar events for a period not to exceed 30 days in any three-month period or not to exceed an aggregate of 90 days in any 12-month period; provided, however, that the Company will be permitted to suspend the use of the prospectus for a period not to exceed 60 days in any 3-month period or 90 days in any 12-month period under certain circumstances relating to probable acquisitions, acquisitions, financings or similar transactions. The Company will agree to pay predetermined liquidated damages as described herein ("Liquidated Damages") to holders of Debentures and holders of Common Stock issued upon conversion of the Debentures if the Shelf Registration Statement is not timely filed or made effective or if the prospectus is unavailable for periods in excess of those permitted above. Such Liquidated Damages shall accrue until such failure to file or become effective or unavailability is cured, (i) in respect of any Debenture, at a rate per annum equal to 0.25% for the first 90 day period after the occurrence of such event and 0.5% thereafter on the Issue Price of the Debenture plus accrued Original Issue Discount thereon and, (ii) in respect of each share of Common Stock, at a rate per annum equal to 0.25% for the first 90 day period and 0.5% thereafter on the then applicable conversion price for a share of Common Stock which equals the Issue Price of $1,000 principal amount at maturity of Debentures plus accrued Original Issue Discount thereon divided by the Conversion Rate in effect. A holder who sells Debentures and Common Stock issued upon conversion of the Debentures pursuant to the Shelf Registration Statement generally will be required to be named as a selling stockholder in the related prospectus, deliver a prospectus to purchasers of such Debentures and/or Common Stock issued upon conversion thereof and be bound by certain provisions of the Registration Rights Agreement that are applicable to such holder (including certain indemnification provisions). The Company will pay all expenses of the Shelf Registration Statement, provide to each registered holder copies of such prospectus, notify each registered holder when the Shelf Registration Statement has become effective and take certain other actions as are required to permit, subject to the foregoing, unrestricted resales of the Debentures and the Common Stock issued upon conversion of the Debentures. The plan of distribution of the Shelf Registration Statement will permit resales of Registrable Securities by selling security holders through brokers and dealers.

Attached to this Offering Memorandum as Appendix B is a notice and questionnaire (the "Questionnaire") to be completed and delivered by a holder to the Company at least three business days prior to any intended distribution of Registrable Securities pursuant to the Shelf Registration Statement. Holders are required to complete and deliver the Questionnaire prior to the effectiveness of the Shelf Registration Statement so that such holders may be named as selling stockholders in the related prospectus at the time of effectiveness. Upon receipt of such a completed Questionnaire, together with such other information as may be reasonably requested by the Company, from a holder following the effectiveness of the Shelf Registration Statement, the Company will, as promptly as practicable but in any event within five business days of such receipt, file such amendments to the Shelf Registration Statement or supplements to the related prospectus as are necessary to permit such holder to deliver such prospectus to purchasers of Registrable Securities (subject to the Company's right to suspend the use of the prospectus as described above). The Company has agreed to pay Liquidated Damages in the amount set forth above to such holder if the Company fails to make such filing in the time required or, if such filing is a post-effective amendment to the Shelf Registration Statement required to be declared effective under the Securities Act, if such amendment is not declared effective within 45 days of the filing thereof. Any holder that does not complete and deliver a Questionnaire or provide such other information will not be named as a selling stockholder in the prospectus and therefore will not be permitted to sell any Registrable Securities pursuant to the Shelf Registration Statement.

DESCRIPTION OF CAPITAL STOCK

The Company's authorized capital stock consists of 200,000,000 shares of Common Stock, par value $.01 per share and 2,000,000 shares of preferred stock, par value $.01 per share.

Common Stock

As of February 27, 1998, there were 86,457,201 shares of Common Stock outstanding. Each share of Common Stock has one vote on all matters upon which stockholders are entitled or permitted to vote, including the election of directors. There are no cumulative voting rights. Shares of Common Stock would participate ratably in any distribution of assets in a liquidation, dissolution or winding up of the Company, subject to prior distribution rights of any shares of preferred stock then outstanding. The Common Stock has no preemptive rights or conversion rights nor are there any redemption or sinking fund provisions applicable to the Common Stock. Holders of Common Stock are entitled to participate in dividends as and when declared by the Company's Board of Directors out of funds legally available therefor. The Company's ability to pay cash dividends is subject to certain restrictions. The Company expects that the New Credit Facility will contain limitations on the ability of the Company to pay dividends. The Company's Proxy Statement for its next annual meeting which is scheduled for May 13, 1998, includes an amendment to the Company's Restated Certificate of Incorporation increasing the total number of authorized shares of Common Stock to 500,000,000 shares from 200,000,000 shares.

The transfer agent and registrar for the Common Stock is The Bank of New York.

Preferred Stock

There are no shares of preferred stock currently outstanding. The Certificate of Incorporation provides that the Board of Directors of the Company may authorize the issuance of one or more series of preferred stock having such rights, including voting, conversion and redemption rights, and such preferences, including dividend and liquidation preferences, as the Board may determine without any further action by the stockholders of the Company.

Delaware General Corporation Law Section 203

Section 203 of the Delaware General Corporation Law (the "DGCL") prohibits certain transactions between a Delaware corporation and an "interested stockholder," which is defined as a person who, together with any affiliate and/or associates of such person, beneficially owns, directly or indirectly, 15% or more of the outstanding voting shares of a Delaware corporation. This provision prohibits certain business combinations (defined broadly to include mergers, consolidations, sales or other dispositions of assets having an aggregate value in excess of 10% of the consolidated assets of the corporation or the aggregate value of all of the outstanding capital stock of the corporation, and certain transactions that would increase the interested stockholder's proportionate share ownership in the corporation) between an interested stockholder and a corporation for a period of three years after the date the interested stockholder acquired its stock, unless (i) the business combination is approved by the corporation's board of directors prior to the date the interested stockholder acquired shares, (ii) the interested stockholder acquired at least 85% of the voting stock of the corporation in the transaction in which it became an interested stockholder or (iii) the business combination is approved by a majority of the board of directors and by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the votes entitled to be cast by disinterested stockholders at an annual or special meeting. Any future election to opt out of Section 203 can be effected only by an amendment to the Certificate of Incorporation or the Bylaws. Any such election would not be effective until 12 months after the adoption of such amendment and would not apply to a business combination with any interested stockholder who became such on or prior to the date of adoption.

CERTAIN UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS

The following is a summary of certain material U.S. federal income tax considerations relating to the purchase, ownership and disposition of the Debentures and Common Stock to a holder of a Debenture or Common Stock that is, for U.S. federal income tax purposes, (i) a citizen or resident of the United States, (ii) a corporation, partnership or other entity created or organized in or under the laws of the United States or any political subdivision thereof, (iii) an estate, the income of which is subject to United States federal income taxation regardless of its source, or (iv) a trust, the administration of which is subject to the primary supervision of a court within the United States and which has one or more United States persons with authority to control all substantial decisions. This summary is based on laws, regulations, rulings and decisions now in effect, all of which are subject to change, possibly with retroactive effect. There can be no assurance that the Internal Revenue Service (the "IRS") will not challenge one or more of the tax consequences described herein, and the Company has not obtained, nor does it intend to obtain, a ruling from the IRS or an opinion of counsel as to any U.S. federal income tax consequences relating to the Debentures.

This summary deals only with holders of Debentures who purchase the Debentures pursuant to the Offering and hold the Debentures and any Common Stock into which the Debentures are converted as capital assets. This summary does not address tax considerations applicable to investors that may be subject to special tax rules (including, without limitation, banks, insurance companies, tax-exempt entities, regulated investment companies, common trust funds, dealers in securities, or persons who hold Debentures or Common Stock as part of a hedge conversion or constructive sale transaction, straddle or other risk reduction transaction). This discussion also does not address the tax consequences arising under the laws of any foreign, state or local jurisdiction.

INVESTORS CONSIDERING THE PURCHASE OF A DEBENTURE SHOULD CONSULT THEIR OWN TAX ADVISORS AS TO THE PARTICULAR TAX CONSEQUENCES TO THEM OF ACQUIRING, HOLDING, CONVERTING OR OTHERWISE DISPOSING OF THE DEBENTURES AND COMMON STOCK, INCLUDING THE EFFECT AND THE APPLICABILITY OF STATE, LOCAL OR FOREIGN TAX LAWS.

Original Issue Discount on the Debentures. The Debentures are being issued at a substantial discount from their stated redemption price at maturity. For U.S. federal income tax purposes, the excess of the stated redemption price at maturity of each Debenture over its issue price (which is expected to be the Issue Price) constitutes Original Issue Discount ("OID"). The issue price of the Debentures will equal the initial price at which a substantial amount of the Debentures is sold for cash (other than to bond houses, brokers or similar persons or organizations acting in the capacity of underwriters, placement agents or wholesalers), and the stated redemption price at maturity of a Debenture will be the sum of all payments due under the Debenture (which is expected to be the principal amount at maturity).

For each taxable year of a U.S. Holder, the amount of OID that must be included in gross income in respect of a Debenture will be the sum of the daily portions of OID for each day during such taxable year (or any portion thereof) in which such U.S. Holder held the Debentures. Such daily portions are determined by allocating to each day in an accrual period a pro rata portion of the OID allocable to the accrual period. The amount of OID allocated to any accrual period generally will equal the product of the Debenture's "adjusted issue price" at the beginning of such accrual period multiplied by its yield to maturity (determined on the basis of compounding at the close of each accrual period and properly adjusted for the length of the accrual period). The "adjusted issue price" of a Debenture at the beginning of an accrual period will equal the issue price of the Debentures, as defined above, increased by previously accrued OID from prior accrual periods, and reduced by payments, if any, made on such Debenture on or before the first day of the accrual period.

There are several circumstances under which the Company could make a payment on a Debenture which might have to be taken into account under Treasury Regulations and could affect the amount or timing of OID included in income, including (as described under "Description of Debentures") the obligation of the Company to purchase Debentures upon the occurrence of a Fundamental Change. According to Treasury Regulations, the possibility of any such event will not be treated as affecting the amount of OID required to be includable in income by a holder (or the timing of such inclusion) if the likelihood of such event occurring as of the date the debt obligations are issued, is remote. The Company intends to report on the basis that the likelihood of any change in the yield on the Debentures is remote.

Sale, Exchange or Retirement of the Debentures. A holder's tax basis for determining gain or loss on the sale or other disposition of a Debenture will generally equal the holder's cost of the Debenture increased by any accrued OID includable in such holder's gross income and reduced by payments, if any. Except as described in the next paragraph, upon the sale, exchange or retirement of a Debenture, a holder will recognize gain or loss equal to the difference between the amount realized on the sale or other disposition of the Debenture and the holder's tax basis in such Debenture. Gain or loss realized on the sale, exchange or retirement of a Debenture will generally be capital gain or loss and will be long-term capital gain or loss if the Debenture is held for more than one year.

If a holder elects to exercise its option to cause the Company to purchase its Debentures on a Purchase Date and the Company issues Common Stock in satisfaction of all of the Purchase Price, the exchange of the Debentures for Common Stock should generally not be a taxable event (except with respect to cash received in lieu of a fractional share). A holder's tax basis in the Common Stock received in such exchange of a Debenture should be the same as the holder's tax basis in the Debenture at the time of the conversion (except for any tax basis allocable to a fractional share) and the holding period for the Common Stock received in such exchange should include the holding period of the Debenture exchanged. If the Purchase Price is paid with a combination of Common Stock and cash, gain (but not loss) realized by the holder should be recognized, but only to the extent of the cash received (including cash received in lieu of a fractional share). A holder's tax basis in the Common Stock received should be the same as such holder's tax basis in the Debenture at the time of the conversion (except for any portion allocable to a fractional share of Common Stock), increased by the amount of gain recognized (other than with respect to a fractional share) and decreased by the amount of any cash received (except cash received in lieu of a fractional share). The holding period for Common Stock received in the exchange should include the holding period of the Debenture tendered to the Company in exchange therefor. The receipt of cash in lieu of a fractional share of Common Stock should generally result in capital gain or loss, measured by the difference between the amount of cash received for the fractional share and the holder's tax basis in the fractional share interest.

Conversion of Debentures. A holder's conversion of a Debenture into Common Stock will generally not be a taxable event (except with respect to cash received in lieu of a fractional share). A tax basis in the Common Stock received on conversion of a Debenture will be the same as the holder's tax basis in the Debenture at the time of conversion (except for any tax basis allocable to a fractional share) and the holding period for the Common Stock received on conversion will include the holding period of the Debenture converted, except that it is possible that the Internal Revenue Service may argue that the holding period of the Common Stock allocable to OID will commence on the date of the conversion and a holder would be required to hold such Common Stock for more than twelve months before long-term capital gain (or loss) treatment could be obtained upon a sale of such Common Stock. The receipt of cash in lieu of a fractional share of Common Stock should generally result in capital gain or loss (measured by the difference between the cash received for the fractional share interest and the holder's tax basis in the fractional share interest).

Dividends; Adjustment of Conversion Price. Dividends, if any, paid on the Common Stock generally will be includable in the income of a holder as ordinary income to the extent of the Company's current or accumulated earnings and profits.

If at any time the Company makes a distribution of property to shareholders that would be taxable to such shareholders as a dividend for federal income tax purposes (for example, distributions of evidences of indebtedness or assets of the Company, but generally not stock dividends or rights to subscribe for Common Stock) and, pursuant to the anti-dilution provisions of the Indenture, the Conversion Rate of the Debentures is increased, such increase may be deemed to be the payment of a taxable dividend to holders of Debentures. If the Conversion Rate is increased at the discretion of the Company or in certain other circumstances, such increase may also be deemed to be the payment of a taxable dividend to holders of Debentures. Moreover, in certain other circumstances, the absence of such an adjustment to the Conversion Rate of the Debentures may result in a taxable dividend to holders of the Common Stock.

Sale of Common Stock. Upon the sale or exchange of Common Stock, holders generally will recognize capital gain or capital loss equal to the difference between the amount realized on such sale or exchange and the holder's adjusted tax basis in such shares.

PLAN OF DISTRIBUTION

Under the terms and subject to the conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement between the Company and Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated (the "Initial Purchaser") dated March 1, 1998 (the "Purchase Agreement"), the Initial Purchaser has agreed to purchase, and the Company has agreed to sell to the Initial Purchaser, \$1,300,000,000, aggregate principal amount at maturity of Debentures at a purchase price of $\frac{1}{2}$ % of the principal amount at maturity thereof. After the initial offering of the Debentures, the offering price and other selling terms may from time to time be varied by the Initial Purchaser.

The Purchase Agreement provides that the obligation of the Initial Purchaser to pay for and accept delivery of the Debentures is subject to approval of certain legal matters by its counsel and to certain other conditions. The Initial Purchaser is obligated to take and pay for all of the Debentures offered hereby if any are taken (other than the Debentures covered by the overallotment option described below).

The Company has granted to the Initial Purchaser an option, exercisable within 30 days of the date of the Purchase Agreement, to purchase up to an additional $195,000,000 aggregate principal amount at maturity of the Debentures solely for the purpose of covering over-allotments, if any.

The Purchase Agreement provides that the Company will indemnify the Initial Purchaser against certain liabilities, including liabilities under the Securities Act.

The Company has been advised by the Initial Purchaser that the Initial Purchaser proposes to resell the Debentures initially at the price set forth on the cover page hereof to "qualified institutional buyers" (as defined in Rule 144A under the Securities Act) in reliance on Rule 144A under the Securities Act and to a limited number of other institutional "accredited investors" within the meaning of Rule 501(a)(1), (2), (3) or (7) under the Securities Act, that agree in writing to comply with the transfer restrictions and other conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement. See "Transfer Restrictions."

The Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures have not been registered under the Securities Act and may not be offered or sold within the United States or to, or for the account or benefit of, U.S. persons except as described in the immediately preceding paragraph.

The Debentures are expected to be eligible for trading in The Portal Market. The Initial Purchaser has advised the Company that it presently intends to make a market in the Debentures as permitted by applicable laws and regulations. The Initial Purchaser is not obligated, however, to make a market in the Debentures and any such market making may be discontinued at any time at the sole discretion of the Initial Purchaser. Accordingly, no assurance can be given as to the liquidity of, or trading markets for, the Debentures.

The Company and the directors and executive officers named under "Security Ownership of Management" will agree that they will not (a) offer, pledge, sell, contract to sell, sell any option or contract to purchase, purchase any option or contract to sell, grant any option, right or warrant to purchase, lend, or otherwise transfer or dispose of, directly or indirectly, any shares of Common Stock or any securities convertible into or exercisable or exchangeable for Common Stock, or (b) enter into any swap or other arrangement that transfers, in whole or in part, any of the economic consequences of ownership of the Common Stock, whether any such transaction described in clause (a) or (b) above is to be settled by delivery of Common Stock or such other securities, in cash or otherwise, for a 90-day period after the date of this Offering Memorandum, without the prior written consent of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, other than (i) the Debentures offered hereby, (ii) the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures, (iii) securities of the Company (and the agreement to provide such securities) as full or partial consideration in connection with any future acquisitions or strategic investments by the Company or securities of the Company issuable upon exercise or conversion of the foregoing securities; provided that the market value of such securities does not exceed $500 million in the aggregate, (iv) options granted or stock issued upon the exercise of outstanding stock options or otherwise pursuant to the Company's stock option or employee stock purchase plans and (v) in connection with the acquisition of Coleman.

In order to facilitate the offering of the Debentures and the Common Stock, the Initial Purchaser may engage in transactions that stabilize, maintain or otherwise affect the price of the Debentures or the Common Stock. Specifically, the Initial Purchaser may over-allot in connection with the offering, creating a short position in the Debentures for its own account. In addition, to cover over-allotments or stabilize the price of the Debentures and the Common Stock, the Initial Purchaser may bid for, and purchase, the Debentures or shares of the Common Stock in the open market. Finally, the Initial Purchaser may reclaim selling concessions allowed to dealers for distributing the Debentures in the offering, if the Initial Purchaser repurchases previously distributed Debentures in transactions to cover short positions established by the Initial Purchaser, in stabilization transactions or otherwise. Any of these activities may stabilize or maintain the market price of the Debentures or the Common Stock above independent market levels. The Initial Purchaser is not required to engage in these activities, and may discontinue any of these activities at any time.

The Initial Purchaser has performed various investment banking and other services for the Company in the past, and may do so from time to time in the future. In particular, the Initial Purchaser is acting as the Company's financial advisor in connection with the Acquisitions. In addition, an affiliate of the Initial Purchaser is arranging the New Credit Facility and expects to be a lender thereunder.

TRANSFER RESTRICTIONS

The Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures have not been registered under the Securities Act. The Debentures and Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures may not be offered or sold within the United States or to, or for the account or benefit of, U.S. persons, except (i) in compliance with the registration requirements of the Securities Act and all other applicable securities laws, or (ii) pursuant to an exemption from, or in a transaction not subject to, the registration requirements of the Securities Act and any other applicable securities laws. Accordingly, the Debentures are being offered and sold only (1) to "qualified institutional buyers" (as defined in Rule 144A under the Securities Act) ("QIBs") in compliance with Rule 144A and (2) to a limited number of other institutional "accredited investors" (as defined in Rule 501(a)(1), (2), (3) or (7) under the Securities Act) ("Institutional Accredited Investors") that, prior to their purchases of Debentures, deliver to the Initial Purchaser a letter attached hereto as Appendix A, which contains certain representations and agreements.

Each purchaser of Debentures will be deemed to (1) represent that it is purchasing the Debentures for its own account or an account with respect to which it exercises sole investment discretion and that it or such account is a QIB, or an institutional accredited investor, (2) acknowledge that the Debentures and the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures have not been registered under the Securities Act, and may not be offered or sold within the United States or to, or for the account or benefit of, U.S. persons except as set forth below, (3) agree that if it should resell or otherwise transfer the Debentures or the Common Stock issuable upon conversion of the Debentures within the period prior to the expiration of the holding period applicable to sales thereof under Rule 144(k) under the Securities Act (or any successor provision), it will do so within the United States or to, or for the account or benefit of, U.S. persons only (a) to the Company or any subsidiary thereof, (b) to a QIB in compliance with Rule 144A, (c) to an institutional accredited investor that, prior to such transfer, furnishes to the Trustee, as registrar for the Debentures (or in the case of the Common Stock, the transfer agent for the Common Stock (the "Transfer Agent")), a signed letter containing certain representations and agreements relating to the restrictions on transfer of the Debentures (or the Common Stock, as the case may be) (the form of which letter can be obtained from the Trustee for the Debentures or the Transfer Agent for the Common Stock), (d) pursuant to an exemption from registration provided by Rule 144 under the Securities Act (if available) or (e) pursuant to a registration statement which has been declared effective under the Securities Act (and which continues to be effective at the time of such transfer), and (4) agree that it will give each person to whom it transfers such Debentures or Common Stock issuable on conversion of the Debentures notice of any restrictions on transfer of such Debentures and such Common Stock. Each institutional accredited investor (other than a QIB) that is an original purchaser of the Debentures will be required to sign an agreement to the foregoing effect in the form attached hereto as Appendix A. In the case of any certificated Debentures, prior to any proposed transfer of Debentures within the period prior to the expiration of the holding period applicable to sales thereof under Rule 144(k) under the Securities Act (or any successor provision), the holders thereof must check the appropriate box set forth on the certificate representing the Debentures relating to the manner of such transfer and submit the certificate representing the Debentures to the Trustee. If (i) such transfer is to an institutional accredited investor or (ii) any holder proposes to transfer Common Stock issued upon conversion of Debentures in either case prior to the expiration of the holding period applicable to sales thereof under Rule 144(k) under the Securities Act (or any successor provision), the holder (or beneficial holder, as the case may be) will be required to furnish to the Trustee (or, in the case of the Common Stock, the Transfer Agent) such certifications, legal opinions or other information as it may reasonably require to confirm that the proposed transfer is being made pursuant to an exemption from, or in a transaction not subject to, the registration requirements of the Securities Act.

Each certificate representing a Debenture will bear the following legend (unless such Debenture has been sold pursuant to a registration statement that has been declared effective under the Securities Act):

REPORT OF INDEPENDENT CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

To the Board of Directors and Shareholders of Sunbeam Corporation:

We have audited the accompanying consolidated balance sheets of Sunbeam Corporation (a Delaware corporation) and subsidiaries as of December 29, 1996 and December 28, 1997 and the related consolidated statements of operations, shareholders' equity and cash flows for each of the three fiscal years in the period ended December 28, 1997. These consolidated financial statements are the responsibility of the Company's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries as of December 29, 1996 and December 28, 1997, and the results of its operations and its cash flows for each of the three fiscal years in the period ended December 28, 1997 in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

SUNBEAM CORPORATION AND SUBSIDIARIES
NOTES TO CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies

Organization

Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam" or the "Company") is a leading manufacturer and marketer of branded consumer products. The Sunbeam® and Oster® brands have been household names for generations, and the Company is a market share leader in many of its product categories.

The Company markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, department stores, catalogs, television shopping channels, Company-owned outlet stores, hardware stores, home centers, drug and grocery stores, pet supply retailers, as well as independent distributors and the military. The Company also sells its products to commercial end users such as hotels and other institutions.

Approximately 79% of total Company sales are generated in the United States. The remaining sales are generated primarily in Latin America, Mexico, Canada, Europe and Asia.

Principles of Consolidation

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of the Company and all majority-owned subsidiaries that it controls. All material intercompany balances and transactions have been eliminated.

Presentation of Fiscal Periods

The Company's fiscal year ends on the Sunday nearest December 31. Fiscal years 1997, 1996 and 1995 ended on December 28, 1997, December 29, 1996, and December 31, 1995 respectively, which encompassed 52-week periods.

Use of Estimates

The preparation of the consolidated financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the amounts reported in the consolidated financial statements and accompanying notes. Actual results could differ from those estimates. Significant accounting estimates include the establishment of the allowance for doubtful accounts, reserves for product warranty, product liability, excess and obsolete inventory, litigation and environmental exposures.

Concentrations of Credit Risk

Substantially all of the Company's trade receivables are due from retailers and distributors located throughout the United States, Latin America and Canada. Approximately 36% of the Company's sales in 1997 were to its five largest customers. The Company establishes its credit policies based on an ongoing evaluation of its customers' creditworthiness and competitive market conditions and establishes its allowance for doubtful accounts based on an assessment of exposures to credit losses at each balance sheet date. The Company believes its allowance for doubtful accounts is sufficient based on the credit exposures outstanding at December 28, 1997. However, certain retailers filed for bankruptcy protection in the last several years and it is possible that additional credit losses could be incurred if the trends of retail consolidation continue.

Inventories

Inventories are stated at the lower of cost or market with cost being determined principally by the first-in, first-out method.

Property, Plant and Equipment

Property, plant and equipment is stated at cost. The Company provides for depreciation using primarily the straight-line method in amounts that allocate the cost of property, plant and equipment over the following useful lives:

Buildings and improvements	20 to 40 years
Machinery, equipment and tooling	3 to 15 years
Furniture and fixtures	3 to 10 years

Leasehold improvements are amortized on a straight-line basis over the shorter of its estimated useful life or the term of the lease.

Long-lived Assets

The Company accounts for long-lived assets pursuant to Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 121, Accounting for the Impairment of Long-lived Assets and for Long-lived Assets to Be Disposed Of. See Notes 8 and 9 for a discussion of asset impairment charges in 1996.

Capitalized Interest

Interest costs for the construction of certain long-term assets are capitalized and amortized over the related assets' estimated useful lives. Total interest costs during 1997 and 1996 amounted to $12.3 million and $14.0 million respectively, of which $.9 million and $.4 million respectively, was capitalized into the construction cost of the long-term assets.

Amortization Periods

Trademarks and trade names are being amortized on a straight-line basis over 40 years.

Revenue Recognition

The Company recognizes revenues from product sales principally at the time of shipment to customers. In limited circumstances, at the customers request the Company may sell seasonal product on a bill and hold basis provided that the goods are completed, packaged and ready for shipment, such goods are segregated and the risks of ownership and legal title have passed to the customer. The amount of such bill and hold sales at December 29, 1997 was approximately 3% of consolidated revenues.

Net sales is comprised of gross sales less provisions for expected customer returns, discounts, promotional allowances and cooperative advertising.

Warranty Costs

The Company provides for warranty costs in amounts it estimates will be needed to cover future warranty obligations for products sold during the year. Estimates of warranty costs are periodically reviewed and adjusted, when necessary, to consider actual experience.

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

Advertising Costs

Media advertising costs included in "Selling, General and Administrative Expense," are expensed as incurred. Co-operative advertising costs are expensed ratably over the year in relation to revenues.

Foreign Currency Translation

The assets and liabilities of subsidiaries, other than those operating in highly inflationary environments, are translated into U.S. dollars at year-end exchange rates, with resulting translation gains and losses accumulated in a separate component of shareholders' equity. Income and expense items are converted into U.S. dollars at average rates of exchange prevailing during the year.

For subsidiaries operating in highly inflationary environments, (Venezuela and Mexico) inventories and property, plant and equipment are translated at the rate of exchange on the date the assets were acquired, while other assets and liabilities are translated at year-end exchange rates. Translation adjustments for those operations are included in "Other (income) expense, net" on the Accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations.

Stock-Based Compensation Plans

SFAS No. 123, Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation allows either adoption of a fair value method for accounting for stock-based compensation plans or continuation of accounting under Accounting Principles Board ("APB") Opinion No. 25, Accounting for Stock Issued to Employees, and related interpretations with supplemental disclosures.

The Company has chosen to account for its stock options using the intrinsic value based method prescribed in APB Opinion No. 25 and, accordingly, does not recognize compensation expense for stock option grants made at an exercise price equal to or in excess of the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant. Pro forma net income and earnings per share amounts as if the fair value method had been adopted are presented in Note 5 herein. SFAS No. 123 does not impact the Company's results of operations, financial position or cash flows.

Earnings Per Share of Common Stock

In 1997, the Company adopted SFAS No. 128, Earnings Per Share. Basic earnings per common share calculations are determined by dividing earnings available to common shareholders by the weighted average number of shares of common stock. Diluted earnings per share are determined by dividing earnings available to common shareholders by the weighted average number of shares of common stock and dilutive common stock equivalents outstanding (all related to outstanding stock options and restricted stock discussed in Note 5). The Company's reported primary earnings per share for 1995 has been restated to comply with the requirements of SFAS No. 128. SFAS No. 128 had no impact on the Company's reported loss per share for 1996 and no impact on the diluted earnings per share reported in 1995. The effect of this accounting change on previously reported earnings per share (EPS) for 1995 was as follows:

Earnings per share from continuing operations
Primary EPS as reported		$0.45
Effect of SFAS No. 128		0.01
Basic EPS as restated		0.46
Earnings per share

Reclassification

Certain prior year amounts have been reclassified to conform with the 1997 presentation.

New Accounting Standards

In June 1997, the Financial Accounting Standards Board ("FASB") issued SFAS No. 130, Reporting Comprehensive Income. SFAS No. 130 establishes standards for reporting and display of comprehensive income and its components in the financial statements. SFAS No. 130 is effective for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. Reclassification of financial statements for earlier periods provided for comparative purposes is required. The Company is in the process of determining its preferred format. The adoption of SFAS No. 130 will have no impact on the Company's consolidated results of operations, financial position or cash flows.

In June 1997, the FASB issued SFAS No. 131, Disclosures about Segments of an Enterprise and Related Information. SFAS No. 131 establishes standards for the way that public business enterprises report information about operating segments in annual financial statements and requires that those enterprises report selected information about operating segments in interim financial reports issued to shareholders. It also establishes standards for related disclosures about products and services, geographic areas, and major customers. SFAS No. 131 is effective for financial statements for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. Financial statement disclosures for prior periods are required to be restated. The Company is in the process of evaluating the disclosure requirements. The adoption of SFAS No. 131 will have no impact on consolidated results of operations, financial position or cash flow.

2. Shareholders' Equity

The Company has 200,000,000 shares of $.01 par value common stock authorized. At December 28, 1997 there were 9,404,068 shares of common stock reserved for issuance upon the exercise of outstanding stock options.

In June 1995, the Company retired 7,376,395 shares of common stock held in treasury, and such shares were returned to the status of authorized but unissued shares. As a result, $103.7 million assigned to treasury stock has been eliminated with a corresponding decrease to common stock, paid-in capital and retained earnings. In 1995, the Company repurchased 905,600 shares of its common stock at a total cost of $13.1 million.

In July 1996, the Company sold 321,786 shares of common stock for total proceeds of approximately $4.4 million, and granted 1,100,000 shares of restricted stock in connection with the employment of a new Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and certain other officers of the Company. Compensation expense attributable to the restricted stock awards is being amortized to expense beginning in 1996 over the periods in which the restrictions lapse (which in the case of 333,333 shares, was immediately upon the date of grant, in the case of 666,667 shares, is equally over two years from the date of grant and in the case of the remaining restricted shares, is equally over three years from the dates of grant).

On February 20, 1998 the Company entered into new three-year employment agreements with its Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other senior officers of the Company. These agreements replaced previous employment agreements entered into in July 1996 that were scheduled to expire in July 1999. Refer to Note 11 for additional information regarding the new employment contracts, including the acceleration of vesting of restricted stock grants discussed above.

3. Credit Facilities and Long-Term Debt

In 1994, the Mississippi Business Finance Corporation ("MBFC") issued $75 million of 7.85% Industrial Development Revenue Notes (the "Notes") maturing serially in eleven equal annual installments beginning June 1999 to certain institutional investors through a private placement. The MBFC loaned the proceeds of the Notes to a subsidiary of the Company under a non-recourse loan agreement (the "Hattiesburg Loan") restricting the use of such funds to the acquisition, design, construction and equipping of the Hattiesburg, Mississippi manufacturing and distribution center. The Notes are guaranteed by the Company and the Hattiesburg Loan is secured by the Hattiesburg facility.

In September 1996 (as subsequently amended), the Company entered into a $500 million syndicated unsecured five year revolving credit facility (the "Credit Agreement") which replaced a previous credit facility of $500 million. In July 1997, the Company reduced the amount of available borrowings under the facility to $250 million. Under the Credit Agreement, the Company can borrow under a competitive bid option, or at a spread above LIBOR (currently .5%) or at a bank base rate. In addition, the Company pays an annual facility fee (currently .25%). The Credit Agreement contains certain financial covenants.

During 1997, the Company repaid $12.2 million of long-term borrowings related to the divested furniture operations and other assets sold.

The aggregate annual principal payments on long-term debt, excluding amounts outstanding under the Credit Agreement, due in each of the years 1998-2002, are $7.7 million, $7.5 million, $7.6 million, $7.6 million and $7.7 million, respectively.

3. Credit Facilities and Long-Term Debt—(Continued)

Long-term debt at the end of each fiscal year consists of the following (in thousands):

	1997	1996
Revolving credit facility, weighted average interest rate of 5.99% and 5.60% for 1997, and for 1996, respectively	$110,000	$105,000
Hattiesburg industrial revenue bond due 2009, fixed interest rate of 7.85%	75,000	75,000
Other long-term borrowings, due through 2012, weighted average interest rate of 3.92% and 4.95%, at December 28, 1997 and December 29, 1996, respectively	10,248	22,036
	$195,248	$202,036

In December 1997, the Company entered into a revolving trade accounts receivable securitization program to sell without recourse, through a wholly-owned subsidiary, certain trade accounts receivable. The maximum amount of receivables that can be sold through this program is $70 million. At December 28, 1997, the Company had received approximately $59 million from the sale of trade accounts receivable. The proceeds from the sale were used to reduce borrowings under the Company's revolving credit facility. Costs of the program, which primarily consist of the purchaser's financing cost of issuing commercial paper backed by the receivables, totaled $2 million during 1997, and have been classified as interest expense in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations. The Company, as agent for the purchaser of the receivables, retains collection and administrative responsibilities for the purchased receivables.

4. Financial Instruments

Fair Value of Financial Instruments

The carrying amounts of the Company's financial instruments as of December 28, 1997 approximate market values based upon the following methods and assumptions:

Cash and Cash Equivalents—The carrying amount of cash and cash equivalents is assumed to approximate fair value as cash equivalents include all highly liquid, short-term investments with original maturities of three months or less.

Short and Long Term Debt—The carrying value of the Company's various debt outstanding as of December 28, 1997 approximates market. The fair value of the Company's fixed rate debt is estimated using discounted cash flow analysis, based upon the market yield of public debt securities of comparable credit quality and maturity. The carrying value of the Company's variable rate debt is assumed to approximate market based upon periodic adjustments of the interest rate to the current market rate in accordance with the terms of the debt agreements.

Letters of Credit—The Company utilizes stand-by letters of credit to back certain financing instruments and insurance policies and commercial letters of credit guaranteeing various international trade activities. The contract amounts of the letters of credit approximate their fair value.

Derivative Financial Instruments

The Company selectively uses derivatives to manage interest rate and foreign exchange exposures that arise in the normal course of business. The use of derivatives did not have a material impact on the Company's results of operations in 1997, 1996 and 1995. No derivatives are entered into for trading or speculative purposes. Foreign exchange option and forward contracts are used to hedge a portion of the Company's underlying exposures denominated in foreign currency. Although the market value of derivative contracts at any single point in time will vary with changes in interest and/or foreign exchange rates, the difference between the carrying value and fair value of such contracts at December 29, 1996 and December 31, 1995 is not considered to be material, either individually or in the aggregate. The Company had no derivative financial instruments outstanding at December 28, 1997. The Company enters into derivative contracts with counterparties that it believes to be creditworthy. The Company does not enter into any leveraged derivative transactions.

As of December 28, 1996, $10.0 million of the Company's outstanding floating rate debt was subject to interest rate swap agreements.

In order to mitigate the transaction exposures that may arise from changes in foreign exchange rates, the Company purchases foreign currency option contracts to hedge anticipated transactions. The option contracts typically expire within one year. Any realized gains on options are not deferred but are recognized in income in the period when the hedged exposure is recognized. The Company purchased options with a notional value of $16.6 million in 1997, $18.2 million in 1996 and $11.7 million in 1995. Options with notional value of $17.9 million, $25.4 million and $3.2 million expired in 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively. The Company held purchased option contracts with a notional value of $1.4 million at December 29, 1996.

5. Employee Stock Options and Awards

The Company has one stock-based compensation plan, the Amended and Restated Sunbeam Corporation Stock Option Plan (the "Plan"). Under the Plan, all employees are eligible for grants of options to purchase up to an aggregate of 11,300,000 shares of the Company's common stock at an exercise price equal to or in excess of the fair market value of the stock on the date of grant. The term of each option commences on the date of grant and expires on the tenth anniversary of the date of grant. Options generally become exercisable over a three to five year period.

The Plan also provides for the grant of restricted stock awards of up to 200,000 shares, in the aggregate, to employees and non-employee directors. See Note 2 for a discussion of restricted stock awards made outside the Plan.

In July 1996, options to purchase an aggregate of 3,000,000 shares (of which 2,750,000 options were outstanding at December 28, 1997) were granted outside of the Plan at exercise prices equal to the fair market value of the Company's common stock on the dates of grant in connection with the employment of a new Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and certain other executive officers of the Company. These outstanding options have terms of ten years and, with respect to options for 2,500,000 shares, are exercisable in three annual installments beginning July 17, 1996. Options for the remaining 250,000 shares still outstanding are exercisable in three annual installments beginning on the first anniversary of the July 22, 1996 grant date. On February 20, 1998 the vesting provisions of the options granted outside the plan were accelerated as further described in Note 14.

The Company applies APB Opinion No. 25 and related interpretations in accounting for its stock options. Accordingly, no compensation cost has been recognized for outstanding stock options. Had compensation cost for the Company's outstanding stock options been determined based on the fair value at the grant dates for those options consistent with SFAS No. 123, the Company's net earnings (loss) and diluted earnings (loss) per share would have been reduced to the pro forma amounts indicated below (in thousands except per share amounts):

6. Employee Benefit Plans

Retirement Plans

The Company sponsors several defined benefit pension plans covering eligible U.S. salaried and hourly employees. Benefit accruals under such plans covering all U.S. salaried employees were frozen, effective December 31, 1990. Therefore no credit in the pension formula is given for service or compensation after that date. However, employees continue to earn service toward vesting in their interest in the frozen plans as of December 31, 1990. Employees of non-U.S. subsidiaries generally receive retirement benefits from Company sponsored plans or from statutory plans administered by governmental agencies in their countries.

The funded status of the Company's U.S. defined benefit pension plans at the end of each fiscal year follows (in thousands):

	1997	1996
Actuarial present value of benefit obligations:

The Company funds its pension plans in amounts consistent with applicable laws and regulations. Pension plan assets include corporate and U.S. government bonds and cash equivalents.

The assets, liabilities and pension costs of the Company's non-U.S. defined benefit retirement plans are not material to the consolidated financial statements.

Other Postretirement Benefits

The Company provides health care and life insurance benefits to certain former employees who retired from the Company prior to March 31, 1991. The Company has consistently followed a policy of funding the cost of postretirement health care and life insurance benefits on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Effective July 1993, various amendments to the Company's postretirement benefits program were adopted. The amendments included increases in retiree contribution levels for certain retiree groups and the discontinuation of medical and/or life insurance coverage for certain retirees who qualify for Medicare. These amendments resulted in an unrecognized reduction in prior service cost which is being amortized over future years.

The following table presents the funded status reconciled with the amounts recognized in the Company's consolidated balance sheet at the end of each fiscal year (in thousands):

The assumed health care cost trend rate used in measuring the accumulated postretirement benefit obligation is 8.8% for 1998 and is assumed to decrease gradually to 6% by 2003 and remain at that level thereafter. A one percentage point increase in the assumed health care cost trend rate for each year would increase the accumulated postretirement benefit obligation as of December 28, 1997 and the net periodic postretirement benefit cost for 1997 by approximately 8%. The weighted average discount rate used in determining the accumulated postretirement benefit obligation was 7.25% at December 28, 1997 and December 29, 1996.

Defined Contribution Plans

The Company sponsors defined contribution profit sharing plans covering eligible employees. Company contributions to these plans include employer matching contributions as well as discretionary profit sharing contributions depending on the performance of the Company, in an amount up to 10% of eligible compensation. The Company provided $1.8 million in 1997, $1.7 million in 1996 and $4.1 million in 1995 for its defined contribution plans.

Non-cash Transactions

In connection with a warehouse expansion related to the electric blanket business, the Company entered into a $5 million capital lease obligation in 1996.

8. Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs

In November 1996, the Company announced the details of its restructuring and growth plan. The cost reduction phase of the plan included the consolidation of administrative functions within the Company, the rationalization of manufacturing and warehouse facilities, the centralization of the Company's procurement function, and reduction of the Company's product offerings and stock keeping units ("SKU's"). The Company also announced plans to divest several lines of business which it determined are not core for Sunbeam (see Note 9).

In connection with the restructuring plan, the Company consolidated six divisional and regional headquarters functions into a single worldwide corporate headquarters in Delray Beach, Florida and outsourced certain back-office activities resulting in a 50% reduction in total back-office/administrative headcount. Overall, the restructuring plan calls for a reduction in the number of production facilities from 26 to 8 and the elimination of over 6,000 positions from the Company's workforce, including 3,300 from the disposition of non-core business operations and the elimination of approximately 2,800 other positions. The Company completed the major phases of the restructuring plan by January 1997.

In conjunction with the implementation of the restructuring and growth plan, the Company recorded a pre-tax special charge to earnings of approximately $337.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. This amount is allocated as follows in the accompanying Consolidated Statement of Operations: $154.9 million to Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs as further described below; $92.3 million to Cost of Goods Sold related principally to inventory write-downs from the reduction in SKU's and costs of inventory liquidation programs; $42.5 million to Selling, General and Administrative expenses principally for increases in environmental and litigation reserves (see Note 12) and other reserve categories; and the estimated pre-tax loss on the divestiture of the Company's furniture business of approximately $47.9 million. During the first quarter of 1997, upon completion of the sale, the Company provided for additional losses on the disposal of the furniture business of $13.7 million, net of applicable income tax benefits as a result of lower than anticipated sales proceeds.

Amounts included in Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs in 1996 in the accompanying Consolidated Statement of Operations include cash items such as severance and other employee costs of $43.0 million, lease obligations and other exit costs associated with facility closures of $12.6 million, $7.5 million of start-up costs on back-office outsourcing initiatives and other costs related to the implementation of the restructuring and growth plan. Non-cash Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs in 1996 include $91.8 million related to asset write-downs to net realizable value for disposals of excess facilities and equipment and non-core product lines, write-offs of redundant computer systems from the administrative back-office consolidations and outsourcing initiatives and intangible, packaging and other asset write-downs related to exited product lines and SKU reductions. The following table sets forth the details and the cumulative activity in the restructuring accrual as of December 28, 1997 (in millions):

	Accrual Balance at December 29, 1996	Cash Reductions	Non-Cash Reductions	Accrual Balance at December 28, 1997

Closure and consolidation of facilities and related exit costs	26.9	24.8	—	2.1
Total	$63.8	$43.4	$9.5	$10.9

9. Discontinued Operations and Other Assets Held For Sale

As part of the restructuring plan and redefinition of its core businesses, the Company also announced the divestiture of the furniture business, by a sale of assets. In February 1997, the Company entered into an agreement to sell the business to U.S. Industries, Inc. which was completed on March 17, 1997. In connection with the sale of these assets (primarily inventory, property, plant and equipment), the Company received $69 million in cash. The Company retained accounts receivable related to the furniture business of approximately $50.0 million as of the closing date.

In connection with the furniture divestiture, the Company recorded a provision for estimated losses to be incurred on the sale of $32.4 million in 1996, net of applicable income tax benefits and an additional loss of $13.7 million, net of applicable income tax benefits in the first quarter of 1997 as a result of lower than anticipated sales proceeds. Earnings from the discontinued furniture business were $.8 million in 1996 and $12.9 million in 1995, net of applicable income taxes of $.5 million and $7.9 million, respectively. Earnings from the discontinued furniture business in 1997 were not material. Revenues for the discontinued furniture business were $51.6 million in 1997, $227.5 million in 1996 and $185.6 million in 1995. These revenues are not included in net sales as reported in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations.

In addition to the furniture business divestiture, the Company also completed the sale of other non-core product lines and assets in 1997 as part of its restructuring plan, including time and temperature products, Counselor® and Borg® scales and a textile facility. Losses incurred on the disposal of these assets, which consist primarily of write-downs of assets to net realizable value, are included in Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs in 1996 in the Consolidated Statements of Operations as described in Note 8.

10. Income Taxes—(Continued)

Deferred U.S. income taxes are not provided on the undistributed earnings of foreign subsidiaries, since such earnings are considered to be permanently reinvested. At December 28, 1997, the cumulative amount of undistributed earnings of foreign subsidiaries on which U.S. federal income taxes have not been provided was approximately $51.5 million. Determination of the amount of unrecognized deferred U.S. income tax liability is not practical because of the complexities associated with its hypothetical calculation; however, unrecognized foreign tax credit carryovers would be available to reduce some portion of the U.S. liability.

11. Customer and Geographic Data

Classes of products which contributed more than 10% to consolidated sales were outdoor home use durable products and indoor home use durable products. Sales of outdoor home use durable products amounted to $325.8 million in 1997, $256.9 million in 1996 and $269.0 million in 1995. Sales of indoor home use durable products were $769.6 million in 1997, $680.7 million in 1996 and $688.3 million in 1995.

The Company's largest customer accounted for approximately 21% of consolidated net sales in 1997 and 19% in 1996 and 1995.

The Company's operations are conducted in the United States and international markets, principally in Latin America, Canada and Mexico. Information about the Company's domestic and international operations for each fiscal year is as follows (in thousands):

12. Commitments and Contingencies

Environmental Matters

The Company's operations, like those of comparable businesses, are subject to certain federal, state, local and foreign environmental laws and regulations. As of December 28, 1997, the Company had been identified as a potentially responsible party ("PRP") in connection with seven sites subject to the federal Superfund law and two sites subject to state Superfund laws comparable to the federal law (collectively the "Environmental Sites"), exclusive of sites at which the Company has been designated (or expects to be designated) as a de minimis (less than 1%) participant. Substantially all of these sites relate to divested operations of the Company.

The Company currently is engaged in active remediation activities at nine sites, four of which are among the Environmental Sites referred to above, and five of which have not been designated as Superfund sites under federal or state law. In addition, the Company is engaged in environmental remediation activities at a site in Newburgh Heights, Ohio, where a subsidiary formerly conducted operations. The Company has been actively cooperating with the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission and state regulatory authorities in developing a plan for remediation of this site; which remediation is expected to be substantially completed during 1998.

The Company has established reserves, in accordance with SFAS No. 5, Accounting for Contingencies, to cover the anticipated probable costs of remediation, based upon periodic reviews of all sites for which the Company has, or may have remediation responsibility. As of December 28, 1997, the amount of such reserves was less than 5% of the Company's total liabilities as set forth in the consolidated financial statements. Liability under the Superfund law is joint and several and is imposed on a strict basis, without regard to degree of negligence or culpability. As a result, the Company recognizes its responsibility to determine whether other PRP's at a Superfund site are financially capable of paying their respective shares of the ultimate cost of remediation of the site. Whenever the Company has determined that a particular PRP is not financially responsible, it has assumed for purposes of establishing reserve amounts that such PRP will not pay its respective share of the costs of remediation. To minimize the Company's potential liability with respect to the Environmental Sites, the Company has actively participated in steering committees and other groups of PRP's established with respect to such sites. The Company continues to pursue the recovery of some environmental remediation costs from certain of its liability insurance carriers; however, such potential recoveries have not been offset against potential liabilities and have not been considered in determining the Company's environmental reserves.

Due to uncertainty over remedial measures to be adopted at some sites, the possibility of changes in environmental laws and regulations and the fact that joint and several liability with the right of contribution is possible at federal and state Superfund sites, the Company's ultimate future liability with respect to sites at which remediation has not been completed may vary from the amounts reserved as of December 28, 1997. In connection with the Company's restructuring plan, in the fourth quarter of 1996 a comprehensive review of all environmental exposures was performed, and the Company accelerated its strategy for the resolution and settlement of certain environmental claims. As a result, the Company recorded additional environmental reserves of approximately $9.0 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. The Company believes, based on existing information, that the costs of completing environmental remediation of all sites for which the Company has a remediation responsibility have been adequately reserved, and that the ultimate resolution of these matters will not have a material adverse effect upon the Company's financial condition.

Leases

The Company rents certain facilities, equipment and retail stores under operating leases. Rental expense for operating leases amounted to $7.4 million in 1997, $8.0 million for 1996 and $8.6 million for 1995. The minimum future rentals due under noncancelable operating leases as of December 28, 1997 aggregated $30.9 million. The amounts payable in each of the years 1998-2002 and thereafter are $4.8 million, $4.6 million, $4.2 million, $3.9 million, $3.4 million and $10.0 million, respectively.

Certain Debt Obligations

Responsibility for servicing certain debt obligations of the Company's predecessor were assumed by third parties in connection with the acquisition of former businesses, although the Company's predecessor remained the primary obligor in accordance with the respective loan documents. Such obligations, which amounted to approximately $19.0 million at December 28, 1997, and the corresponding receivables from the third parties, are not included in the consolidated balance sheets since these transactions occurred prior to the issuance of SFAS No. 76, Extinguishment of Debt. Management believes that the third parties will continue to meet their obligations pursuant to the assumption agreements.

Letters of credit aggregating $28.6 million were outstanding as of December 28, 1997.

Litigation

The Company is involved in various lawsuits arising from time to time in the ordinary course of business and/or related to divested operations of the Company. The Company has established reserves, in accordance with SFAS No. 5, Accounting for Contingencies, to cover the anticipated probable costs of litigation matters, based upon periodic reviews of all cases.

The Company believes, based on existing information, that anticipated probable costs of litigation matters have been adequately reserved, and that the ultimate resolution of these matters will not have a material adverse effect upon the Company's financial condition.

Product Liability Matters

The Company is party to various personal injury and property damage lawsuits relating to its products and incidental to its business. Annually, the Company sets its product liability insurance program based on the Company's current and historical claims experience and the availability and cost of insurance. The Company's program for 1997 was comprised of a self-insurance retention of $1 million per occurrence.

Cumulative amounts estimated to be payable by the Company with respect to pending and potential claims for all years in which the Company is liable under its self-insurance retention have been accrued as liabilities. Such accrued liabilities are necessarily based on estimates (which include actuarial determinations made by independent actuarial consultants as to liability exposure, taking into account prior experience, numbers of claims and other relevant factors); thus, the Company's ultimate liability may exceed or be less than the amounts accrued. The methods of making such estimates and establishing the resulting liability are reviewed continually and any adjustments resulting therefrom are reflected in current operating results.

Historically, product liability awards have rarely exceeded the Company's individual per occurrence self-insured retention. There can be no assurance, however, that the Company's future product liability experience will be consistent with its past experience. Based on existing information, the Company believes that the ultimate conclusion of the various pending product liability claims and lawsuits of the Company, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a materially adverse effect on the financial position or results of operations of the Company.

14. Subsequent Events—(Continued)

The new employment agreement for the Company's Chairman provides for, among other items, the acceleration of vesting of 200,000 shares of restricted stock and the forfeiture of the remaining 133,333 shares of unvested restricted stock granted under the July 1996 agreement as further described in Note 2, a new equity grant of 300,000 shares of unrestricted stock, a new grant of a ten-year option to purchase 3,750,000 shares of the Company's common stock with an exercise price equal to the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant and exercisable in three equal annual installments beginning on the date of grant and the acceleration of vesting of 833,333 outstanding stock options granted under the July 1996 agreement as further described in Note 5. In addition, the new employment agreement with the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer provides for tax gross-ups with respect to any tax assessed on the equity grant and acceleration of vesting of restricted stock.

The new employment agreements with the two other senior officers provide for, among other items, the grant of a total of 180,000 shares of restricted stock that vest in four equal annual installments beginning the date of grant, the acceleration of vesting of 44,000 shares of restricted stock and the forfeiture of the remaining 29,332 shares of unvested restricted stock granted under the July 1996 agreements, new grants of ten-year options to purchase a total of 1,875,000 shares of the Company's common stock with an exercise price equal to the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant and exercisable in four equal annual installments beginning on the date of grant and the acceleration of vesting of 383,334 outstanding stock options granted under the July 1996 agreements. In addition, the new employment agreements provide for tax gross-ups with respect to any tax assessed on the restricted stock grants and acceleration of vesting of restricted stock.

Compensation expense attributed to the equity grant, the acceleration of vesting of restricted stock and the related tax gross-ups will be recognized in the first quarter of 1998 and compensation expense related to the new restricted stock grants and related tax gross-ups will be amortized to expense beginning in the first quarter of 1998 over the period in which the restrictions lapse. Total after-tax compensation expense to be recognized in the first quarter of 1998 related to these items is expected to be approximately $30.0 million.

Pending Acquisitions

On March 2, 1998, the Company announced the signing of three definitive agreements to acquire The Coleman Company, Inc., Signature Brands USA, Inc. and First Alert, Inc. Completion of the acquisitions, which is expected in the second quarter of 1998, is contingent on customary conditions, including regulatory approvals, and acquisition financings. Each of the acquisitions will be accounted for under the purchase method, whereby the purchase price will be allocated to the underlying assets acquired and liabilities assumed based upon their estimated fair values.

The acquisition of The Coleman Company, Inc., the global leader in outdoor recreational and hardware products is valued at approximately $2.0 billion, consisting of the Company's common stock valued at approximately $811 million, cash of approximately $260 million and assumed debt. Shareholders of The Coleman Company, Inc. will receive $6.44 in cash and .5677 shares of the Company's stock for each share of Coleman stock.

The acquisition of Signature Brands USA, Inc., the North American leader in coffeemakers marketed under the Mr. Coffee® brand and a leader in consumer health products marketed under the Health o Meter® brand is valued at approximately $250 million, consisting of cash of $8.25 per share of Signature Brand common stock and the assumption of existing debt.

The acquisition of First Alert, Inc., the worldwide leader in residential safety equipment, including smoke detectors and carbon monoxide detectors is valued at approximately $175 million, consisting of cash of $5.25 per share of First Alert common stock and the assumption of existing debt.

The Company plans on refinancing all or substantially all of the assumed debt of the acquired companies concurrent with the transactions closings.

1. Significant Accounting Policies

Background:

CLN Holdings Inc. (formerly known as Coleman Escrow Corp. ("CLN Holdings")), is a holding company formed in May 1997 in connection with the offering of Senior Secured First Priority Discount Notes due 2001 (the "Old First Priority Notes") and Senior Secured Second Priority Discount Notes due 2001 (the "Old Second Priority Notes" and together with the Old First Priority Notes, the "Old Escrow Notes") to hold all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Holdings Inc. ("Coleman Holdings"). Coleman Holdings was a holding company formed in July 1993 in connection with the offering of Senior Secured Discount Notes due 1998 (the "Holdings Notes") to hold all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide Corporation ("Coleman Worldwide"). On July 15, 1997, Coleman Holdings was merged into CLN Holdings. Coleman Worldwide is a holding company formed in March 1993 in connection with the offering of Liquid Yield Option™ Notes due 2013 (the "LYONs™"). Coleman Worldwide also holds 44,067,520 shares of the common stock of The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman" or the "Company") which represents approximately 82% of the outstanding Coleman common stock as of December 31, 1997. CLN Holdings and Coleman Worldwide are holding companies with no business operations of their own. In connection with an initial public offering ("IPO"), Coleman was formed in December 1991 to succeed to the assets and liabilities of the outdoor products business of New Coleman Holdings Inc. ("Holdings") an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Mafco Holdings Inc. ("Mafco"). Holdings (then named The Coleman Company, Inc.) was acquired in 1989 by MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MacAndrews Holdings", and together with Mafco, "MacAndrews & Forbes"), a corporation wholly owned through Mafco by Ronald O. Perelman. Coleman is a subsidiary of Coleman Worldwide Corporation which is an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Holdings. In March 1992, the Company completed an IPO of its common stock.

Principles of Consolidation:

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of CLN Holdings and its subsidiaries after elimination of all material intercompany accounts and transactions.

Cash and Cash Equivalents:

All highly liquid investments with a maturity of three months or less at the date of purchase are considered to be cash equivalents. The Company's cash equivalents consist primarily of investments in money market funds and commercial paper. The Company's cash equivalents are generally held until maturity and are carried at cost, which approximates fair value.

Inventories:

Inventories are stated at the lower of cost or market. Cost is determined by the first-in, first-out method.

Property, Plant and Equipment:

Property, plant and equipment is recorded at cost and depreciated on a straight-line basis over the estimated useful lives of such assets as follows: land improvements, 5 to 25 years; buildings and building improvements, 7 to 45 years; and machinery and equipment, 3 to 15 years. Leasehold improvements are amortized over their estimated useful lives or the terms of the leases, whichever is shorter. Repairs and maintenance are charged to operations as incurred, and significant expenditures for additions and improvements are capitalized.

(In thousands, except share data)

1. Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

Intangible Assets:

Intangible assets primarily represent goodwill which is being amortized on a straight-line basis over periods not in excess of 40 years. The carrying amount of goodwill is reviewed if facts and circumstances suggest it may be impaired. If this review indicates goodwill will not be recoverable over the remaining amortization period, as determined based on the estimated undiscounted cash flows of the entity acquired, the carrying amount of the goodwill is reduced to estimated fair value based on market value or discounted cash flows, as appropriate. Accumulated amortization aggregated $48,148 and $39,520 at December 31, 1997 and 1996, respectively.

Revenue Recognition:

The Company recognizes revenues at the time title passes to the customer. Net revenues comprise gross revenues less provisions for estimated customer returns and allowances.

Research and Development:

Research and development expenditures are expensed as incurred. The amounts charged against operations for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995 were $11,871, $11,082, and $6,548, respectively.

Advertising and Promotion Expense:

Production costs of future media advertising are deferred until the advertising occurs. All other advertising and promotion costs are expensed when incurred. The amounts charged against operations for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995 were $53,408, $58,823, and $37,544, respectively.

Insurance Programs:

The Company obtains insurance coverage for catastrophic exposures as well as those risks required to be insured by law or contract. It is the policy of the Company to retain a significant portion of certain losses related primarily to workers' compensation, employee health benefits, physical loss and property, and product and vehicle liability. Provisions for losses expected under these programs are recorded based upon the Company's estimates of the aggregate liability for claims incurred.

Foreign Currency Translation:

Assets and liabilities of foreign operations are generally translated into United States dollars at the rates of exchange in effect at the balance sheet date. Income and expense items are generally translated at the weighted average exchange rates prevailing during each period presented. Gains and losses resulting from foreign currency transactions are included in the results of operations. Gains and losses resulting from translation of financial statements of foreign subsidiaries and branches operating in non-highly inflationary economies are recorded as a component of stockholder's equity. Foreign subsidiaries and branches operating in highly inflationary economies translate nonmonetary assets and liabilities at historical rates and include translation adjustments in the results of operations.

Derivative Financial Instruments:

The Company uses derivative financial instruments to reduce interest rate and foreign exchange exposures. The Company maintains a control environment which includes policies and procedures for risk assessment and for the approval, reporting and monitoring of derivative financial instrument activities. The Company does not hold or issue derivative financial instruments for trading purposes.

Amounts to be received or paid under interest rate swap and cap contracts designated as hedges are recognized over the life of the contracts as adjustments to interest expense. Gains and losses on terminations of interest rate swap and cap contracts designated as hedges are deferred and amortized as adjustments to interest expense over the remaining life of the terminated contracts. Unrealized gains and losses on outstanding interest rate contracts designated as hedges are not recognized.

Foreign currency forward contracts are marked to market and gains and losses on foreign currency forward contracts to hedge firm foreign currency commitments are deferred and accounted for as part of the related foreign currency transaction. Gains and losses on all other forward contracts to hedge third-party and intercompany transactions are recorded in operations as foreign exchange gains and losses. Gains and losses on purchased foreign currency option contracts are deferred and recognized as adjustments to cost of sales upon the sale of the related inventory to the third-party customers.

Credit Risk:

Financial instruments which potentially subject the Company to concentrations of credit risk consist primarily of trade receivables and derivative financial instruments. Credit risk on trade receivables is minimized as a result of the large and diversified nature of the Company's worldwide customer base. Although the Company has one significant customer (See Note 15), there have been no credit losses related to this customer. With respect to its derivative contracts, the Company is also subject to credit risk of non-performance by counterparties and its maximum potential loss may exceed the amount recognized in the financial statements. The Company controls its exposure to credit risk through credit approvals, credit limits and monitoring procedures. Collateral is generally not required for the Company's financial instruments.

Fair Value of Financial Instruments:

The following methods and assumptions were used by CLN Holdings in estimating its fair value disclosures for financial instruments:

Cash and cash equivalents: The carrying amount reported in the balance sheet for cash and cash equivalents approximates its fair value.

Long- and short-term debt: The carrying amounts of CLN Holdings' borrowings under its foreign bank lines of credit, revolving credit agreement and other variable rate debt approximate their fair value. The fair value of the Company's senior notes issues (see Note 9) are estimated using discounted cash flow analysis based on the Company's estimated current borrowing rate for similar types of borrowing arrangements. The fair value of the publicly traded LYONs debt and Escrow Notes is based on quoted market prices.

Foreign currency exchange contracts: The fair values of CLN Holdings' foreign currency contracts are estimated based on quoted market prices of comparable contracts, adjusted through interpolation where necessary for maturity differences.

The carrying amounts and fair values of CLN Holdings' financial instruments are as follows:

	December 31, 1997		December 31, 1996
	Carrying Amount of Asset/ (Liability)	Fair Value of Asset/ (Liability)	Carrying Amount of Asset/ (Liability)	Fair Value of Asset/ (Liability)

Stock-Based Compensation:

Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 123, "Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation," encourages, but does not require companies to record compensation cost for stock-based employee compensation plans at fair value. The Company has chosen to account for stock-based compensation plans using the intrinsic value method prescribed in Accounting Principles Board ("APB") Opinion No. 25, "Accounting for Stock Issued to Employees," and related Interpretations. Accordingly, compensation cost for stock options is measured as the excess, if any, of the quoted market price of Coleman's stock at the date of the grant over the amount an employee must pay to acquire the stock.

Reclassifications:

Certain prior year amounts in the financial statements have been reclassified to conform to the current year presentation.

Use of Estimates:

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the amounts reported in the financial statements and accompanying notes. Actual results could differ materially from those estimates.

Recently Issued Accounting Standards:

In June 1997, the Financial Accounting Standards Board (the "FASB") issued SFAS No. 130 "Reporting Comprehensive Income". SFAS No. 130 establishes standards for reporting and display of comprehensive income and its components in the financial statements. SFAS No. 130 is effective for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. Reclassification of financial statements for earlier periods provided for comparative purposes is required.

In June 1997, the FASB issued SFAS No. 131, "Disclosures about Segments of an Enterprise and Related Information". SFAS No. 131 establishes standards for the way public business enterprises report information about operating segments in annual financial statements and requires those enterprises report selected information about operating segments in interim financial reports. It also establishes standards for related disclosures about products and services, geographic areas, and major customers. SFAS No. 131 is effective for financial statements for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. Financial statement disclosures for prior periods are required to be restated.

In February 1998, the FASB issued SFAS No. 132, "Employers' Disclosures about Pensions and Other Postretirement Benefits". SFAS No. 132 revises employers' disclosures about pension and other postretirement benefits to the extent practicable. It also requires additional information on changes in the benefit obligations and fair value of plan assets and eliminates certain other disclosures. SFAS No. 132 is effective for financial statements for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1997. Financial statement disclosures for prior periods are required to be restated.

CLN Holdings has not yet determined the impact of adoption of these standards; however, the adoption of these standards will have no impact on CLN Holdings' consolidated results of operations, financial position or cash flows.

2. Acquisitions and Divestitures

On November 2, 1994, the Company purchased substantially all the assets of Eastpak, Inc. and all the capital stock of M.G. Industries, Inc. (collectively, "Eastpak"), a leading designer, manufacturer and distributor of branded daypacks, sports bags and related products. The Company also entered into an agreement with the predecessor owner of Eastpak to make additional payments based upon the achievement of certain annual sales levels of Eastpak products and other products substantially similar to the Eastpak products during the years ended December 31, 1995, 1996, and 1997. A total of $23,000 was earned by the predecessor owner of Eastpak under the terms of this agreement. This amount has been recorded as additional goodwill.

During 1995, the Company purchased all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Sierra Corporation of Fort Smith, Inc., a manufacturer of portable outdoor and recreational folding furniture and accessories, and substantially all of the assets of Active Technologies, Inc. ("ATI"), a manufacturer of technologically advanced lightweight generators and battery charging equipment. The aggregate purchase price for these acquisitions was $19,516 including fees and expenses. These acquisitions were accounted for using the purchase method of accounting. The purchase price and expenses associated with these acquisitions exceeded the fair value of net assets acquired by $11,186 and the excess has been assigned to goodwill and is being amortized over 20 to 30 years on the straight-line method. In connection with the ATI purchase, the Company may also be required to make payments to the predecessor owner of ATI of up to $18,750 based on the Company's sales of ATI related products and royalties received by the Company for licensing arrangements related to ATI patents. As of December 31, 1997, the amounts recorded, as additional goodwill, under the terms of this agreement have been immaterial. The results of operations of these companies on a pro forma basis as if their acquisitions had occurred at the beginning of 1995 individually and in the aggregate were not significant to CLN Holdings.

On January 2, 1996, the Company purchased substantially all the assets and assumed certain liabilities of Seatt Corporation ("Seatt"), a leading designer, manufacturer and distributor of safety and security related electronic products for residential and commercial applications. The Seatt acquisition, which was accounted for under the purchase method, was completed for approximately $65,300 including fees and expenses. The results of operations of Seatt have been included in the consolidated financial statements from the date of acquisition. In connection with the purchase price allocation of the Seatt acquisition, the Company recorded goodwill of approximately $38,800. The Company is amortizing this amount over 40 years on the straight-line method.

On February 18, 1998, the Company announced an agreement was signed for the sale of Coleman Safety & Security Products, Inc., the successor to Seatt, to Ranco Incorporated, a U.S. subsidiary of Siebe plc, a United Kingdom diversified engineering group. The sale price is approximately $105,000 and is subject to adjustment upon closing which is expected to occur by the end of March 1998. Net assets of Coleman Safety & Security at December 31, 1997 were approximately $73,000.

On February 28, 1996, the Company purchased approximately 70% of the outstanding shares of Application des Gaz, S.A. ("ADG" or "Camping Gaz"), a leading manufacturer and distributor of camping appliances in Europe. The Company completed the necessary steps to acquire the remaining 30% of the outstanding shares during the second quarter of 1996. The cost of acquiring all the shares of ADG was approximately $100,000 including fees and expenses.

The acquisition of Camping Gaz was accounted for under the purchase method. In connection with the final allocation of purchase price to the fair values of assets acquired and liabilities assumed, the Company recorded goodwill of approximately $78,900, which is being amortized over 40 years on the straight-line method. At acquisition, the Company recognized liabilities in the amount of $21,898 representing severance and other termination benefits for certain production and administrative employees of Camping Gaz. As of December 31, 1997, the Company had paid termination costs of approximately $13,350 and anticipates all remaining termination costs will be paid during 1998.

The Company has included the results of operations of Camping Gaz in the consolidated financial statements from March 1, 1996, the date on which the Company obtained control of Camping Gaz, and has recognized minority interest related to the remaining shares for the period March 1, 1996 through June 30, 1996.

2. Acquisitions and Divestitures—(Continued)

The following summarized, unaudited pro forma results of operations of CLN Holdings for the years ended December 31, 1996 and 1995 assume the acquisition of Seatt and the acquisition of all the outstanding shares of Camping Gaz occurred as of the beginning of the respective periods. The pro forma results include certain adjustments, primarily reflecting increased amortization and interest expense and a lower income tax provision, and are not necessarily indicative of what the results of operations would have been had the Seatt and Camping Gaz acquisitions occurred at the beginning of the respective periods. Moreover, the pro forma information is not intended to be indicative of future results of operations.

	Year Ended December 31,
	1996	1997
Net revenues	$1,246,370	$1,193,295
(Loss) earnings before extraordinary item	(57,091)	9,996
Net (loss) earnings	(58,335)	9,209

3. Restructuring and Other Charges

During 1997, the Company recorded restructuring charges of $32,791 and certain other charges of $3,628, collectively, (the "1997 Restructuring Charges") and related tax benefits of $13,918. The Company reflected $19,493 of the 1997 Restructuring Charges in cost of sales and reflected $16,926 in selling, general and administrative ("SG&A") expenses. The 1997 Restructuring charges of $36,419 consisted of (i) $15,735 to exit various low margin products, including pressure washers, (ii) $14,943 to close and relocate certain administrative and sales offices, and (iii) $5,741 to close several manufacturing facilities. Most of these activities were substantially complete as of December 31, 1997, and remaining actions are expected to be completed in 1998.

During 1996, the Company recorded restructuring charges of $66,202 and certain other charges of $7,998 (collectively, the "1996 Restructuring Charges") and related net tax benefits of $21,684. The Company reflected $44,005 of the 1996 Restructuring Charges in cost of sales and $30,195 in SG&A. The pre-tax restructuring charges of $66,202 consisted of (i) $29,067 to integrate Camping Gaz and Coleman operations into a global recreation products business, (ii) $19,000 to exit the low end electric pressure washer business, (iii) $14,135 to exit a portion of the Company's battery powered light business and (iv) $4,000 to settle certain litigation with respect to the battery-powered light business. The charges to integrate the Camping Gaz and Coleman operations reflect primarily the cost to dispose of duplicate manufacturing, distribution and administrative facilities and the related severance costs, which actions were substantially completed in 1997 and are expected to be fully completed in 1998. The low end pressure washer and battery powered light businesses were exited by discontinuing the manufacturing and distribution of these products in 1997. The other pre-tax charges of $7,998 related primarily to certain asset write-offs. These charges were incurred in the Company's normal course of business, although the amounts involved were higher than similar charges the Company had recorded in prior years. The provision for income taxes included $21,684 of tax benefits resulting from these restructuring and other charges, net of an increase in the valuation reserve related to certain foreign deferred tax assets and other foreign tax charges totaling $5,595.

3. Restructuring and Other Charges—(Continued)

The components of the combined 1997 Restructuring Charges and 1996 Restructuring Charges and an analysis of the amounts charged against the reserve are outlined in the following table:

The termination costs recognized in 1996 related to approximately 200 employees and the 1997 termination costs related to approximately 525 employees. As of December 31, 1997, $11,362 of termination costs were paid on behalf of the approximately 700 employees who were terminated as of that date.

During 1995, the Company recognized an asset impairment charge of $12,289 related to its Brazilian operations. The Brazilian operations had not performed to the Company's expectations since acquisition of this business in April of 1994, and in the fourth quarter of 1995, the Company initiated actions to reduce the operating losses in Brazil. These actions included replacing management, increasing prices, downsizing the manufacturing operations and reducing SG&A and other expenses. Because of these actions, the Company performed an impairment review and concluded recognition of an asset impairment charge was appropriate. The basis of the fair values used in the computation of the charge were appraisals for property and equipment and estimated discounted cash flows for goodwill. The charge has been included in the statement of operations under the caption "Asset Impairment Charge".

The 2008 Notes are unsecured and are subject to various restrictive covenants including, without limitation, requirements for the maintenance of specified financial ratios and levels of consolidated net worth and certain other provisions limiting the incurrence of additional debt and sale and leaseback transactions under the terms of the note purchase agreement.

- (d) In April 1996, the Company amended its credit agreement to: a) provide a term loan of French Franc 385,125 ($64,894 at December 31, 1997 exchange rates) (the "Term Loan"), b) provide a $275,000 unsecured revolving credit facility line (the "Credit Facility"), c) allow for the Camping Gaz acquisition and d) extend the maturity of the credit agreement (as amended, the "Company Credit Agreement"). In connection with the Company recording the restructuring and other charges as discussed in Note 3 and lower than expected operating results, the Company further amended the Company Credit Agreement in October 1996 and again in March 1997.

The Company Credit Agreement is available to the Company until April 30, 2001. The outstanding loans under the Company Credit Agreement bear interest at either of the following rates, as selected by the Company from time to time: (i) the higher of the agent's base lending rate or the federal funds rate plus .50% or (ii) the London Inter-Bank Offered Rate ("LIBOR") plus a margin ranging from .25% to 2.125% based on the Company's financial performance. If there is a default, the interest rate otherwise in effect will be increased by 2% per annum. The Company Credit Agreement also bears an overall facility fee ranging from .15% to .375% based on the Company's financial performance.

In addition, the Company Credit Agreement provides, subject to certain exceptions, for the net cash proceeds from disposition of assets other than in the ordinary course of business, to be used to prepay any outstanding Term Loan balances with any remaining excess net cash proceeds to be applied to outstanding borrowings under the Credit Facility with a corresponding reduction in the overall amount of the Credit Facility line.

The Company Credit Agreement contains various restrictive covenants including, without limitation, requirements for the maintenance of specified financial ratios, levels of consolidated net worth and profits, and certain other provisions limiting the incurrence of additional debt, purchase or redemption of the Company's common stock, issuance of preferred stock of the Company, and also prohibits the Company from paying any dividends until on or after January 1, 1999 and limits the amount of dividends the Company may pay thereafter. The Company Credit Agreement also contains an event of default upon a change of control of the Company (as defined in the Company Credit Agreement) and other customary events of default. In addition, substantially all of the shares of the Company's common stock owned by Coleman Worldwide are pledged to secure indebtedness of Coleman Worldwide and of its parent, CLN Holdings Inc. The indentures governing this indebtedness contain various covenants including a covenant placing certain limitations on the Company's indebtedness.

- (e) On May 20, 1997, CLN Holdings issued approximately $600,475 in principal amount at maturity of Old First Priority Notes and approximately $131,560 in principal amount at maturity of Old Second Priority Notes resulting in aggregate net proceeds of approximately $455,257 in a private placement offering. The Old First Priority Notes and Old Second Priority Notes were issued at a discount from their principal amount at maturity to yield 11 1/8% and 12 7/8%, respectively, per annum calculated from May 20, 1997. Subsequent to the private placement offering, a registration statement on Form S-1 was filed to exchange the Old First Priority Notes for Senior Secured First Priority Discount Exchange Notes due 2001 (the "First Priority Notes") and to exchange the Old Second Priority Notes for Senior Secured Second Priority Discount Exchange Notes due 2001 (the "Second Priority Notes" and together with the First Priority Notes, the "Escrow Notes"). The indenture governing the Escrow Notes (the "Indenture") requires, subject to certain exceptions, that the retirement of the remaining outstanding LYONs be consummated no later than June 10, 1998. The Indenture requires CLN Holdings to hold, directly or indirectly, a majority of the voting power of the Company at all times, unless and until CLN Holdings exercises its right to substitute U.S. Government obligations for all of the pledged collateral. The Indenture, to which Coleman is not a party, also contains certain covenants that, among other things, generally prohibit the incurrence of additional debt by CLN Holdings and the issuance of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by Coleman Worldwide, and limit (i) the incurrence of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by the Company, (ii) the payment of dividends on the capital stock of CLN Holdings and its subsidiaries and the redemption or repurchase of the capital stock of CLN Holdings, (iii) the sale of assets and subsidiary stock, (iv) transactions with affiliates, (v) the creation of liens on the assets of CLN Holdings and Coleman Worldwide, and (vi) consolidations, mergers and transfers of all or substantially all of CLN Holdings' assets. The foregoing limitations and prohibitions, however, are subject to a number of qualifications. The Escrow Notes also contain customary events of defaults and a put right by the holders at a price specified in the Indenture in the event of a change of control of CLN Holdings (as defined in the Indenture).

Approximately $262,194 of the net proceeds of the Escrow Notes were contributed to Coleman Holdings, then a subsidiary of CLN Holdings, and used by it to redeem, on July 15, 1997, the Discount Notes (as defined below). Coleman Holdings recorded an extraordinary loss of $4,300, net of tax benefits of $2,315, relating to the excess of the redemption price over the accreted value of the Discount Notes and the write-off of deferred charges related to the Discount Notes. Approximately $191,278 of the net proceeds of the Escrow Notes were contributed to Coleman Worldwide and used by it to accept for exchange, $554,053 aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs, including redemption fees and expenses. Coleman Worldwide recorded an extraordinary loss of $10,939, net of tax benefits of $7,076, relating to the excess of the exchange offer price over the accreted value of the LYONs, the write-off of deferred charges related to the LYONs exchanged and redemption fees and expenses. The $7,500 principal amount at maturity of LYONs which remain outstanding are secured by a pledge of 7,692,854 shares of Coleman common stock owned by Coleman Worldwide. The Escrow Notes are secured by a pledge of all the shares of common stock of Coleman Worldwide and guaranteed pursuant to a non-recourse guaranty of Coleman Worldwide (the "Guaranty"), which Guaranty is currently secured by a pledge of 36,374,666 shares of Company common stock and will be secured by the shares currently securing the LYONs upon their redemption.

- (f) On May 27, 1993, Coleman Worldwide issued and sold $500,000 principal amount at maturity of LYONs in an underwritten public offering. On June 7, 1993, an additional $75,000 principal amount at maturity of LYONs was sold upon exercise of the underwriter's overallotment option. During 1997, Coleman Worldwide redeemed $554,053 principal amount at maturity of LYONs as described above. The $7,500 principal amount at maturity of LYONs which remain outstanding are secured by a pledge of 7,692,854 shares of Coleman common stock owned by Coleman Worldwide. There are no periodic payments of interest on the LYONs. The aggregate principal amount of the LYONs represents a yield to maturity of 7.25% per annum (computed on a semi-annual bond equivalent basis) calculated from May 27, 1993. Coleman Worldwide plans to redeem the remaining $7,500 aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs no later than May 27, 1998 with the remaining proceeds from the issuance of the Escrow Notes which are being held in escrow. The LYONs, to which the Company is not a party, provide that it is an Additional Purchase Right Event (as defined below) if, among other things, the amount of debt incurred by the Company exceeds certain limitations. The Indenture governing the LYONs, to which the Company is not a party, provides the holders of LYONs with the option to require Coleman Worldwide to purchase the LYONs at a price specified in the Indenture after the occurrence of certain events ("Additional Purchase Right Events"). Additional Purchase Right Events occur, among other things, upon the Company's Consolidated Debt Ratio (as defined) exceeding 0.75 to 1.0 or the

- (g) On July 22, 1993, Coleman Holdings issued and sold $281,281 principal amount at maturity of Old Notes in a private placement offering. Subsequent to the private placement offering, a registration statement on Form S-1 was filed to exchange the Old Notes for Series B Senior Secured Discount Notes (the "Discount Notes"). During 1997, Coleman Holdings redeemed the Discount Notes as described above.

The aggregate scheduled amounts of long-term debt maturities in the years 1998 through 2002 are $3,026, $78, $12,207, $632,376, and $12,159, respectively.

10. Derivative Financial Instruments

The Company periodically enters into a variety of foreign currency exchange contracts to reduce its foreign currency exposure resulting primarily from firm commitments, intercompany foreign sales transactions expected to occur within the next twelve months, and intercompany accounts receivable and payable.

At December 31, 1997 and December 31, 1996, the Company did not have any outstanding foreign currency exchange contracts related to firm commitments.

During the fourth quarter of 1995, the Company elected to adopt the provisions of the Emerging Issues Task Force Issue No. 95-2, "Determination of What Constitutes a Firm Commitment for Foreign Currency Transactions Not Involving a Third Party" ("EITF 95-2") which narrowed the scope of intercompany foreign currency commitments eligible to be hedged for financial reporting purposes. As a result of this change, the Company increased net income by $3,796 in the fourth quarter of 1995. Prior to the adoption of EITF 95-2, the gains and losses associated with these contracts were accounted for under the deferral method. At December 31, 1997, the Company did not have any outstanding foreign currency forward contracts related to intercompany foreign sales transactions. At December 31, 1996, the Company had forward exchange contracts to sell $8,500 in Canadian dollars maturing on February 28, 1997, for which the Company has recognized a net gain of $40 as a component of cost of sales.

At December 31, 1997, the Company did not have any outstanding option contracts. At December 31, 1996, the Company had outstanding option contracts for the sale of Japanese yen at fixed exchange rates totaling $20,038 for specified periods of time which expired during 1997. Net unrealized gains deferred at December 31, 1996 were $653.

With respect to intercompany accounts receivable and payable, at December 31, 1997, the Company had foreign currency forward contracts to sell $1,580 in foreign currencies, which contracts matured in February 1998, and had deferred a net gain of $128. At December 31, 1996, the Company had foreign currency forward contracts to sell $26,623 and to buy $3,898 in foreign currencies, which contracts matured at various dates in 1997, and had deferred a net gain of $185.

At December 31, 1997, $25,000 of the Company's outstanding long-term debt was subject to an interest rate swap agreement and $25,000 of the Company's outstanding long-term debt was subject to an interest rate cap. Under the interest rate swap agreement, the Company pays the counterparty interest at a fixed rate of 6.115%, and the counterparty pays the Company interest at a variable rate equal to the three month LIBOR for a seven-year period commencing January 2, 1996. The agreement is with a major financial institution which is expected to fully perform under the terms of the agreement, thereby mitigating the credit risk from the transaction. The interest rate cap agreement entitles the Company to receive from a major financial institution the amount, if any, by which the Company's interest payments on $25,000 of its variable rate debt exceed 7.35%. The $509 premium paid for this interest rate cap agreement is included in other assets and was amortized to interest expense over the three-year term of the cap, which commenced January 3, 1995.

11. Taxes

CLN Holdings is included in the consolidated federal and certain consolidated state income tax returns of Mafco and/or its affiliates. CLN Holdings and Mafco and subsidiaries provide taxes as if they were a separate taxpayer. CLN Holdings will pay to Mafco amounts equal to the taxes that CLN Holdings would otherwise have to pay if it were to file separate tax returns for itself. To the extent that CLN Holdings is entitled to a tax benefit from Mafco as a result of its tax losses, such amounts are recorded as a reduction in the provision for income taxes and a distribution to its parent. During 1997 and 1996, respectively, CLN Holdings recorded a benefit of $18,769 and $9,013 for income taxes, and similar amounts were recorded as distributions to its parent. Coleman Worldwide and Mafco are parties to a tax sharing agreement (the "Tax Sharing Agreement"), pursuant to which Coleman Worldwide is required to pay to Mafco amounts equal to the taxes Coleman Worldwide would otherwise have to pay if it were to file separate consolidated federal, state or local income tax returns including only itself and its domestic subsidiaries. Pursuant to the LYONs indenture agreement, at any time the LYONs are outstanding, the amounts Coleman Worldwide would be required to pay to Mafco under the Tax Sharing Agreement, together with any remaining funds paid to Coleman Worldwide by the Company under the tax sharing agreement between Coleman Worldwide and the Company, may not be paid as tax sharing payments, but Coleman Worldwide may advance such funds to Mafco as long as the aggregate amount of such advances at any time does not exceed the issue price plus accrued OID of the LYONs. Such advances are evidenced by noninterest bearing unsecured demand promissory notes (the "Mafco Demand Notes") from Mafco in the amount of $35,395 at December 31, 1997. Following the redemption or retirement in full of the LYONs, expected to occur no later than May 27, 1998, the Mafco Demand Notes shall be canceled automatically without further action of any person, and shall be of no further force or effect whatsoever, and, until the time of such cancellation, no demand or request for payment of any kind shall be made with respect to the Mafco Demand Notes. As a result of the restriction on the payment of the tax sharing amounts, income taxes provided pursuant to the Tax Sharing Agreement are reflected as a non-cash charge. For all periods presented, federal and state income taxes are provided as if Coleman Worldwide filed its own income tax returns. The accompanying consolidated balance sheet includes approximately $13,317 and $18,528 of federal and state income taxes payable to Mafco pursuant to the Tax Sharing Agreement at December 31, 1997 and 1996, respectively.

11. Taxes—(Continued)

The deferred tax account balance at December 31, 1997 differs from the account balance at December 31, 1996 due primarily to the 1997 deferred tax provision, the tax effects of the foreign exchange gain recorded as a component of stockholder's equity, the tax effects of adjustments related to the finalization of the purchase accounting related to the acquisition of Camping Gaz and the deferred tax asset recorded related to the acquisitions in 1997 of inactive companies which were recorded as a capital contribution (see Note 12).

During 1997, CLN Holdings increased the valuation allowance related to certain foreign deferred tax assets due to uncertainties over realization. At December 31, 1997, CLN Holdings had net operating loss carryforwards ("NOL's") of approximately $107,229 for certain foreign income tax purposes. These NOL's expire beginning in 1998.

CLN Holdings has not provided for taxes on undistributed foreign earnings of approximately $20,860 at December 31, 1997, as CLN Holdings intends to permanently reinvest these earnings in the future growth of the business. Determination of the amount of unrecognized deferred U.S. income tax liability is not practicable because of the complexities associated with its hypothetical calculation.

12. Related Party Transactions

Capital Contributions

As of March 31, 1997, the Company purchased an inactive subsidiary from an affiliate for net cash consideration of $1,031, including transaction costs. The Company expects to realize certain foreign tax benefits from this transaction in future years. Under certain circumstances, a portion of these tax benefits will be payable to the affiliate to the extent such tax benefits are realized by the Company. During the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company purchased an inactive subsidiary from an affiliate in a transaction in which the Company expects to realize certain foreign tax benefits in future years and for which the Company agreed to pay 50% of those realized benefits to the affiliate. The Company has recorded a liability to the affiliate in the amount of $219 which represents 50% of the estimated amount of future tax benefits. The Company has accounted for these transactions in a manner similar to a pooling-of-interests due to the Mafco Holdings Inc. common control over each of the parties involved in the transactions. The $2,799 excess value of estimated realizable tax benefits acquired over the total acquisition costs have been accounted for as a capital contribution.

Insurance Programs

The Company participates in certain of Holdings' insurance programs, including health and life insurance, workers compensation, and liability insurance. The Company's expense represents its expected costs for self-insured retentions and premiums for excess coverage insurance. The expense was $13,339, $13,923 and $9,875 for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

Services Agreement

From time to time, Coleman purchases, at negotiated rates, specialized accounting and other services provided by an affiliate. Coleman also provides, at negotiated rates, services to an affiliate. The net expense for such services was $394 during 1997 and was immaterial in prior years.

Management Agreement

The Company provided management services to certain affiliates pursuant to a management agreement through June 30, 1995. The consolidated financial statements reflect the management fees as a reduction in selling, general and administration expenses. For the year ended December 31, 1995, management fees earned by the Company were $2,400.

Licensing Agreement

During 1997, the Company engaged an affiliate of MacAndrews & Forbes to provide licensing services. The Company recorded expenses of $650 related to these services in 1997.

Other

In 1996, the Company entered into an agreement with an affiliate in which the Company realized approximately $1,800 of net tax benefits associated with certain foreign tax net operating loss carryforwards that had not previously been recognized.

The Company purchases and sells products from and to certain affiliates. These amounts are not, in the aggregate, material.

The Company subleases six thousand square feet of office space in New York City from an affiliate pursuant to a month-to-month occupancy memorandum (the "Lease") entered into during 1997. The rent paid by the Company during the year ended December 31, 1997 pursuant to the Lease was $158.

During 1997, Coleman used an airplane owned by a corporation of which a director of Coleman is a stockholder, for which Coleman paid approximately $158.

13. Employee Benefit Plans

Pension Plans

Holdings maintains pension and other retirement plans in various forms covering employees of the Company who meet eligibility requirements. The U.S. salaried retirement plan is a non-contributory defined benefit plan and provides benefits based on a formula of each participant's final average pay and years of service. The U.S. hourly pension plan is a non-contributory defined benefit plan and contains a flat benefit formula. The salaried and hourly plans provide reduced benefits for early retirement and the salaried plan takes into account offsets for Social Security benefits. The Company's policy is to contribute annually the minimum amount required pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, as amended. Under certain circumstances, the Company may make additional contributions to the pension plans up to the maximum deductible amounts for income tax purposes.

Holdings also has an unfunded excess benefit plan covering certain of the Company's U.S. employees whose benefits under the plans described above are limited by provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. The following table reconciles the funded status of the pension plans with the amount recognized in CLN Holdings' consolidated balance sheets as of the dates indicated:

	December 31.
	1997	1996
Actuarial present value of benefit obligation:
Accumulated benefit obligation, including vested benefits of $24,296 and $18,686	$(27,843)	$(21,933)

The weighted-average discount rate used in determining the actuarial present value of the projected benefit obligation was 7.5% as of December 31, 1997 and 1996. The rate of increase in future compensation levels reflected in such determination was 5% as of December 31, 1997 and 1996. The expected long-term rate of return on assets was 9% as of December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995. Plan assets consist primarily of common stock, mutual funds and fixed income securities stated at fair market value, and cash equivalents stated at cost, which approximates fair market value. Unrecognized items are being recognized over the estimated remaining service lives of active employees.

Net pension expense includes the following components:

	Year Ended December 31.

Service cost-benefits attributed to service during the year	$3,081	$3,098	$2,125

Savings Plan:

Holdings maintains an employee savings plan under Section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code. This plan covers substantially all of the Company's full-time U.S. employees and allows employees to contribute up to 10% of their salary to the plan. The Company matches, at a 34% rate, employee contributions of up to 6% of their salary. Amounts charged to expense for matching contributions were $1,401, $1,314, and $1,165 for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

Retiree Health Care and Life Insurance:

The Company, through Holdings, provides certain unfunded health and life insurance benefits for certain retired employees. Approximately 55% of the Company's U.S. employees may become eligible for these benefits if they reach retirement age while working for the Company.

The following table reconciles the funded status of the Company's allocable portion of Holdings' postretirement benefit plans with the amount recognized in CLN Holdings' consolidated balance sheets as of the dates indicated:

	December 31.
	1997	1996
Accumulated postretirement benefit obligation:
Retirees	$ (6,852)	$ (6,682)
Fully eligible active plan participants	(3,308)	(3,015)

Total accumulated postretirement benefit obligation	(20,482)	(20,361)
Unrecognized transition benefit	(3,707)	(3,973)

Unrecognized net gain	(2,415)	(976)
Net postretirement benefit liability	$(27,008)	$(25,802)

Net periodic postretirement benefit expense includes the following components:

	Year Ended December 31.
	1997	1996	1995
Service cost-benefits attributed to service during the year	$ 927	$1,044	$ 756
Interest cost on accumulated postretirement benefit obligation	1,453	1,454	1,352
Amortization of transition benefit and other net gains	(358)	(354)	(455)
Net periodic postretirement benefit expense	$2,022	$2,144	$1,653

The discount rate used in determining the accumulated postretirement benefit obligation ("APBO") was 7.5% as of December 31, 1997 and 1996. At December 31, 1997, the assumed health care cost trend rate used in measuring the APBO was 7.5% starting in 1998 then gradually decreasing to 5% by the year 2003 and remaining at that level thereafter. The health care cost trend rate assumption has a significant effect on the amount of the obligation and periodic benefit expense reported. An increase in the assumed health care cost trend rates by 1% in each year would increase the APBO as of December 31, 1997 by approximately 19% and the service and interest cost components of net periodic postretirement benefit expense by approximately 22%.

The Company adopted The Coleman Company, Inc. 1992 Stock Option Plan (the "1992 Stock Option Plan") in 1992. During 1993, the shareholders approved the 1993 Stock Option Plan (the "1993 Stock Option Plan") and during 1996, the shareholders approved The Coleman Company, Inc. 1996 Stock Option Plan (the "1996 Stock Option Plan"). Under the terms of the 1992 Stock Option Plan, the 1993 Stock Option Plan and the 1996 Stock Option Plan (collectively the "Stock Option Plans"), incentive stock options ("ISOs"), non-qualified stock options ("NQSOs") and stock appreciation rights may be granted to key employees of the Company and any of its affiliates from time to time. Stock options have been granted under the Stock Option Plans with vesting terms and maximum terms of approximately five years and ten years, respectively. The aggregate number of shares of common stock as to which options and rights may be granted under the Stock Option Plans may not exceed 4,700,000.

13. Employee Benefit Plans—(Continued)

As described in Note 1, the Company follows APB Opinion No. 25 in accounting for stock compensation arrangements. Pro forma financial information regarding net income and earnings per share has been determined as if the Company had accounted for its employee stock options under the fair value method of SFAS No. 123. The fair value of ISOs and NQSOs granted during 1997, 1996 and 1995 were estimated at the date of grant using the Black-Scholes option pricing model with the following weighted-average assumptions: risk-free interest rates of 6.53%, 6.11% and 5.91 % for 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively, dividend yield of 0.0%, volatility of the expected market price of the Company's common stock of 31.3%, 20.2% and 30.8% for 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively, and a weighted-average expected life of the option of 7.7, 5.5 and 5.5 years for 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

SFAS No. 123 requires the use of option valuation models, one of which is the Black-Scholes model, that were not developed for use valuing ISOs or NQSOs. Further, these option valuation models require the input of highly subjective assumptions, including the expected stock price volatility. In management's opinion, based on the above, the existing models do not necessarily provide a reliable single measure of the fair value of its ISOs or NQSOs.

The following summarized, unaudited pro forma results of operations assume the estimated fair value of the ISOs and NQSOs granted during the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995 is amortized to expense over the ISOs' and NQSOs' vesting period. SFAS No. 123 does not require disclosure of the effect of any grants of stock based compensation prior to 1995 and, therefore, the pro forma effect of SFAS No. 123 on net earnings is not representative of the pro forma effect on net earnings in future years.

14. Commitments and Contingencies

Leases:

The Company leases manufacturing, administrative and sales facilities and various types of equipment under operating lease agreements expiring through 2007. Rental expense was $15,620, $14,164, and $11,526 for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively. Minimum rental commitments under all noncancellable operating leases with remaining lease terms in excess of one year from December 31, 1997, aggregated $31,506; such commitments for each of the five years subsequent to December 31, 1997 are $7,571, $6,683, $4,622, $2,848, and $3,560, respectively, and $6,222 thereafter.

The Company leases its former corporate office building in Denver, Colorado under agreements which give the Company the right, subject to certain qualifications, to renew or terminate the lease, or purchase the property. Upon termination, the Company has guaranteed the lessor certain residual values.

Environmental Matters:

Gilbert and Mosley Site. As a result of investigations undertaken in 1986, the Kansas Department of Health and Environment ("KDHE") discovered that groundwater in the downtown Wichita area (the "Gilbert and Mosley Site") was contaminated with volatile organic chemicals ("VOCs"). Coleman occupied a facility within the boundaries of the Gilbert and Mosley Site. Subsequent investigations in the area, including investigations in November 1988 by Coleman, indicated the groundwater beneath the Coleman property is contaminated with VOCs. Coleman is in the process of remediating the contamination on its property.

The City of Wichita has entered into a voluntary agreement with KDHE in which the City agreed to investigate and then remediate contamination in the Gilbert and Mosley Site. Coleman has entered into an agreement with KDHE in which Coleman agreed to perform a similar study for the Coleman property and to implement remedial activities at its property. In addition, Coleman entered into an agreement with the City of Wichita in which Coleman agreed to fund its proportionate share of the City's study and remediation of the Gilbert and Mosley site.

Maize Site. Coleman has undertaken a soil and groundwater investigation at its facility in Maize, Kansas (the "Maize Site"). Results indicate that limited VOC contamination is present in the groundwater under and to the southeast of the facility. The data has been reported to the KDHE, and Coleman has entered into an agreement with KDHE to implement appropriate remedial actions. The remediation system has been installed, and Coleman is in the process of remediating the contaminated groundwater.

Northeast Site. In 1990, Coleman undertook a soil and groundwater investigation of its facility in northeast Wichita (the "Northeast Site"). Results indicated the presence of VOCs in the groundwater and soils. Although some of the contamination may be a result of Coleman's operations at the facility, the data also indicated that contamination was migrating onto the Coleman property from up gradient sources. Coleman reported the initial results of its study to KDHE. Coleman has also provided copies of all data to the United States Environmental Protection Agency (the "EPA"), at its request. The EPA has not initiated any actions against the Company with respect to the Northeast Site. An agreement has been entered into with KDHE to undertake additional investigatory activities, and an interim remediation system has been installed.

The Company has not been named as a potentially responsible party ("PRP") by the EPA nor does it have joint and several liability with any other PRP for remediation at any of the above sites.

The Company has adopted an environmental policy designed to ensure the Company operates in full compliance with applicable environmental regulations and, where appropriate, the Company's own internal standards. Coleman has also undertaken an environmental compliance audit program. The Company makes expenditures it believes are necessary to comply with environmental management practices. Environmental expenditures that relate to current operations are expensed or capitalized as appropriate and were not significant in 1997 and are not expected to be significant in the foreseeable future. The Company accrues for losses associated with environmental remediation obligations when such losses are probable and reasonably estimable. Accruals for estimated losses from environmental remediation obligations generally are recognized no later than completion of the remedial feasibility study. Such accruals are adjusted as further information develops or circumstances change. Costs of future expenditures for environmental remediation obligations are not discounted to their present value. Recoveries of environmental remediation costs from other parties are recognized as assets when their receipt is deemed probable.

While it is possible the Company reserves may change in the near term, the Company believes the reserves established for environmental matters are adequate. This belief is based on estimates provided by the state governmental authorities referred to above, results of environmental investigations of the groundwater and soils at the manufacturing facilities operated by Coleman conducted by independent consultants specializing in environmental investigations and remediation and estimates provided by such independent consultants, together with estimates provided by Coleman's environmental engineering staff.

Other:

The Company and Holdings are involved in various claims and legal actions arising in the ordinary course of business. The Company believes the ultimate disposition of these matters is not expected to have a material adverse effect on CLN Holdings' consolidated financial condition or results of operations. The Company has entered into a cross-indemnification agreement with Holdings pursuant to which it will indemnify Holdings against all liabilities related to businesses transferred to the Company, and Holdings will indemnify the Company against all liabilities of Holdings other than liabilities related to the businesses transferred to the Company.

The Company is party to a license agreement which requires payments of minimum guaranteed royalties aggregating to $11,778 at December 31, 1997; such commitments for each of the five years remaining under the agreement subsequent to December 31, 1997 are $1,040, $1,745, $2,434, $3,010 and $3,549, respectively.

19. Impact of Year 2000 (Unaudited)

Some of the Company's older computer programs were written using two digits rather than four to represent the applicable year. As a result, those computer programs recognize a date represented by "00" as the year 1900 rather than the year 2000. This situation, known as the "Year 2000" issue, could cause a system failure or miscalculations causing disruptions of operations, including, among other things, a temporary inability to process transactions, send invoices, or engage in similar normal business activities.

Based on ongoing assessments of the Company's operations, the Company has determined it will be required to modify or replace portions of its computer software so the computer systems will function properly with respect to dates in the year 2000 and thereafter. The Company believes that, in most instances, with minor modifications to existing software, the Year 2000 issue will not pose significant operational problems for its computer systems. The Company has identified one location with significant Year 2000 software issues. Failure to complete a timely conversion of this location to a Year 2000 compliant system could have a material impact on the operations of the Company; however, the Company has begun to replace the software at this location, and such replacement software is expected to be installed prior to December 31, 1999.

The Company has initiated formal communications with some of its significant suppliers and large customers to determine the extent to which the Company's interface systems are vulnerable to those third parties' failure to remediate their own Year 2000 issues. There can be no guarantee that the systems of other companies on which the Company's systems rely will be timely converted and would not have an adverse effect on the Company's systems.

In 1996, the Company began a project to select and install a Company-wide enterprise resource computer software system designed to improve operational efficiency. The selected system is Year 2000 compliant and complete installation of this software system is expected to take three years. The cost of the purchase of the software and installation costs is expected to range from $20,000 to $25,000. The Company will capitalize a significant portion of these costs and does not believe the costs of this project will have a significant impact on the Company's financial condition or results of operations.

The costs of the project and the date on which the Company believes it will be Year 2000 compliant are based on management's best estimates, which were derived utilizing numerous assumptions of future events, including the continued availability of certain resources, third party modification plans and other factors. However, there can be no guarantee that these estimates will be achieved and actual results could differ materially from those anticipated. Specific factors that might cause such material differences include, but are not limited to, the availability and cost of personnel trained in this area, the ability to locate and correct all relevant computer codes, and similar uncertainties.

20. Subsequent Event (Unaudited)

On February 27, 1998, the Company, Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"), and a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam ("Merger Sub"), entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger (the "Coleman Merger Agreement") providing that, among other things, Merger Sub will be merged (the "Coleman Merger") with the Company. Pursuant to the Coleman Merger Agreement, each share of the Company's Common Stock, issued and outstanding immediately prior to the effective time of the Coleman Merger (other than certain shares) will be converted into the right to receive (a) 0.5677 shares of Sunbeam common stock, with cash paid in lieu of fractional shares, and (b) $6.44 in cash, without interest.

Coincident with the execution of the Coleman Merger Agreement, CLN Holdings and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., the parent company of CLN Holdings, entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger (the "Holdings merger Agreement" and with the "Coleman Merger Agreement", collectively the "Merger Agreements"), with Sunbeam and a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam ("Laser Merger Sub"). The Holdings Merger Agreement provides that, among other things, Laser Merger Sub will be merged (the "Holdings Merger") with CLN Holdings. Pursuant to the Holdings Merger Agreement, the shares of CLN Holdings' common stock issued and outstanding immediately prior to the effective time of the Holdings Merger (other than certain shares) will be converted into the right to receive in the aggregate 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam's common stock and $159,957 in cash, without interest.

Following consummation of the Holdings Merger, CLN Holdings will be a direct wholly-owned subsidiary of Sunbeam. Following consummation of the Coleman Merger, the Company will be an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Sunbeam.

The Holdings Merger is subject to the expiration of antitrust waiting periods and certain other customary conditions. The Coleman Merger Agreement is subject to consummation of the Holdings Merger. These transactions will constitute a change in control as defined in the Company Credit Agreement, the Lyons and the Escrow Notes. Per the terms of the Merger Agreements, certain arrangements with related parties may be altered or terminated. In addition, outstanding, unvested stock Company options immediately vest upon consummation of the Holdings Merger.

1. Summary of Significant Accounting Policies

(a) Description of Business

Signature Brands USA, Inc. (the Company) is a holding company which, through its wholly owned subsidiary, Signature Brands, Inc. (Signature Brands), designs, manufactures, markets, and distributes a comprehensive line of consumer and professional products. The Company's consumer products, marketed under the Mr. Coffee® and Health o meter® brand names, include automatic drip coffeemakers, iced and hot teamakers, coffee filters, water filtration products, accessories, and other kitchen countertop appliances as well as bath, kitchen, and gourmet scales and therapeutic devices. Professional products include the Pelouze® and Health o meter® brands of office, foodservice, and medical scales.

(b) Principles of Consolidation

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of the Company and its wholly owned subsidiary. All significant intercompany accounts and transactions are eliminated in consolidation.

(c) Revenue Recognition

The Company recognizes revenue from product sales upon shipment to the customer. Costs or losses estimated to be incurred in connection with product returns and warranties are charged against revenues at the time of sale, based upon consideration of historical experience and information available from customers.

(d) Inventories

Inventories are stated at the lower of cost or market. Cost is determined using the first-in, first-out (FIFO) method.

(e) Property, Plant and Equipment

Property, plant and equipment are stated at cost. The Company calculates depreciation using the straight-line method over the estimated useful lives of the respective assets.

(f) Excess of Cost over Fair Value of Net Assets Acquired

The Company's excess of cost over the fair value of net assets acquired primarily represents the value of its brand names, created by advertising and product performance over many years, and is being amortized on the straight-line basis over a 40-year period. The Company assesses the recoverability of this intangible asset by determining whether the brand name dominance in terms of market share and the national distribution secured can generate sufficient revenues, growth, and cash flow to recover the intangible asset balance over its remaining life. Accumulated amortization amounted to $15,195 and $11,258 at September 28, 1997 and September 29, 1996, respectively.

(g) Deferred Financing and Stock Issuance Costs

Financing costs related to the issuance of debt are capitalized and amortized over the term of the debt. Accumulated amortization of financing costs amounted to $2,606 and $1,750 at September 28, 1997 and September 29, 1996, respectively. Issuance costs related to the sale of common stock reduce paid-in capital.

1. Summary of Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

(h) Income Taxes

The Company accounts for income taxes under the asset and liability method whereby deferred tax assets and liabilities are recognized for the future tax consequences attributable to differences between the financial statement carrying amount of existing assets and liabilities and their respective tax bases. Deferred tax assets and liabilities are measured using the tax rates in effect at the end of the period. The effect on deferred tax assets and liabilities of a change in tax rates is recognized in income in the period that the new tax rate is enacted.

(i) Product Liability Costs

Costs estimated to be incurred with respect to product liability claims are accrued based upon actuarially determined estimates derived from experience factors. The current portion represents product liability costs estimated to be paid within one year.

(j) Net Income (Loss) per Common Share

Net income per common share is calculated by dividing net income by the weighted average of outstanding common stock and common stock equivalents using the treasury stock method, except when the effect of common stock equivalents would be antidilutive or when dilution is less than 3 percent. Net loss per common share is based on the weighted average of outstanding common shares.

(k) Use of Estimates

Generally accepted accounting principles require management to make a number of estimates and assumptions relating to the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and the disclosure of contingent liabilities, at the date of the financial statements, and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the period in preparing these financial statements. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

(l) Stock-Based Compensation

During 1995, the FASB issued Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 123, Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation, which provides a basis for measurement and recognition of all stock-based employee compensation plans. The disclosure requirements of this Statement are effective for fiscal years beginning after December 15, 1995. The Company chose to maintain its current accounting method for stock-based compensation and disclose the pro forma effects on net income and net income per share of the fair market value method, if material, as permitted by the Statement.

(m) Advertising Costs

The Company expenses reimbursement of customers' advertising costs at the time the related revenues are recognized. Advertising expense was $23,450, $20,087 and $18,458 for the years ended September 28, 1997, September 29, 1996 and October 1, 1995, respectively.

2. Name Change

On March 6, 1997, the stockholders of the Company approved an amendment to the Company's Certificate of Incorporation to change the name of the Company to "Signature Brands USA, Inc." In view of the Company's name change, on April 30, 1997, Health o meter, Inc., the Company's operating subsidiary, was merged with and into a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Company, Signature Brands, Inc., an Ohio corporation, formed by the Company solely for the purpose of changing the name of Health o meter, Inc. to "Signature Brands, Inc."

3. Accounting Change

As of September 30, 1996, the Company changed its method of determining the cost of certain inventories from the last-in, first-out (LIFO) method to the first-in, first-out (FIFO) method. Management believes that the change in accounting for inventories is preferable because it will more appropriately measure operating results and inventory value, better match revenues and expenses, and conform all inventories of the Company to the same accounting method.

The change in the method of valuing inventories has been applied retroactively by restating financial statements for prior years. The effect of this restatement was to reduce retained earnings as of September 29, 1996 by $363. The following summarizes the effect of changing the accounting method for certain inventories:

Bank Credit Agreement

Signature Brands' Bank Credit Agreement (the Agreement) includes a $60.0 million revolving credit facility (including an $18.0 million letter of credit subfacility) and a $75.0 million term loan facility. The revolving credit facility includes a charge of 0.5 percent on the unused line and 2.5 percent for letter of credit guarantees.

Signature Brands is required to make prepayments on the term loan and revolving credit facility with a percentage of Excess Cash Flow, as defined, and 100 percent of the proceeds from certain asset sales, issuances of debt and equity securities, and extraordinary items outside the ordinary course of business. There is no required prepayment for fiscal 1998. Signature Brands may also make optional prepayments, in full or in part, on the term loan.

Borrowing availability under the revolving credit facility at September 28, 1997 was $13.6 million after giving effect to outstanding letters of credit of $1.2 million, actual borrowings of $33.7 million, and sufficiency of collateral.

Signature Brands is subject to certain customary affirmative and negative covenants contained in the Agreement. These include, without limitation, covenants that restrict, subject to certain exceptions, incurrence of additional indebtedness; mergers, consolidations, or asset sales; changes in the nature of the business; granting of liens to secure any other indebtedness; and transactions with affiliates. In addition, the Agreement requires that the Company maintain certain specified financial ratios, including minimum interest and fixed charge coverage ratios, maximum leverage ratios, minimum net worth levels, and ceilings on leverage and capital expenditures. At September 28, 1997, the Company was in compliance with such covenants.

In December 1997, the Agreement was amended to increase the term loan facility by $1.0 million and to modify the amortization schedule such that the annual aggregate payments are $5.0 million, $8.75 million, $14.5 million, and $33.0 million during fiscal 1998 through fiscal 2001, respectively. A portion of the annual payment for fiscal 2001 may be accelerated into fiscal 2000 if certain EBITDA levels are not achieved in fiscal 1999. In addition, the revolving credit facility was reduced to $55.0 million, however, because the advance rate on collateral was increased, the Company's availability thereunder should not be materially impacted.

Senior Subordinated Notes

The Senior Subordinated Notes (the Notes) are general obligations of Signature Brands. Signature Brands' payment obligations under the Notes are unconditionally guaranteed by the Company. The Notes and the Company's guaranty are subordinated to the prior payment of the Company's amounts outstanding under the Agreement. The Indenture governing the Notes contains customary provisions restricting mergers, consolidations, or sales of assets; issuances of preferred stock or the incurrence of additional indebtedness; payment of dividends; creation of liens; and transactions with affiliates. Provided that certain financial tests are met, the Indenture does not limit the amount of additional indebtedness that Signature Brands and its subsidiaries may incur.

The Notes are generally not redeemable at the option of the Company until August 15, 1999. Under certain limited circumstances, the Company may be required to use a portion of the proceeds from asset sales to make an offer to purchase a portion of the Notes, at a price of 101 percent of the principal amount thereof, together with accrued and unpaid interest. In addition, in the event of a change in control of the Company, each holder will have the right to require Signature Brands to repurchase its Notes at a price of 101 percent of the principal amount thereof, together with accrued and unpaid interest thereon. Except for the foregoing circumstances, Signature Brands is not required to make mandatory redemption or sinking fund payments with respect to the Notes.

The Agreement currently prohibits the Company from purchasing any Notes prior to the expiration thereof and also provides that certain change in control events with respect to the Company would constitute a default thereunder.

10. Income Taxes

Income tax expense (benefit) for the years ended September 28, 1997, September 29, 1996, and October 1, 1995, respectively, consisted of:

The tax effects of temporary differences that give rise to significant portions of the deferred tax assets and liabilities at September 28, 1997 and September 29, 1996 are as follows:

	1997	1996

taxable income to fully utilize the established net asset. Accordingly, no valuation allowance for the net deferred tax asset has been provided.

11. Lease Commitments

The Company leases various buildings and equipment under leases expiring at various dates. At September 28, 1997, minimum rental commitments under noncancelable leases are as follows:

Fiscal Year Ending
1998	$ 2,031

Thereafter	18,400
	$27,674

Rental expense amounted to approximately $1,630, $1,438, and $1,447, for the years ended September 28, 1997, September 29, 1996, and October 1, 1995, respectively.

12. Contingencies

The Company is involved in various claims and items of litigation. Management believes that the ultimate outcome of such matters will not have a material adverse effect upon the operations or financial position of the Company.

13. Stock Incentive Plans

The Company has five stock-based compensation plans. Options granted under these plans have ten-year terms and generally have graded vesting schedules of either four or five years. Options scheduled over five years require achievement of company-wide performance goals in order for options to vest.

The Company applies APB Opinion 25 (APB 25) in accounting for its stock incentive plans and, accordingly, recognizes compensation costs only to the extent that the market price of shares granted exceeds the exercise price at the grant date. During 1995, the Financial Accounting Standards Board issued Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 123, Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation (SFAS 123), which permits the continued use of APB 25 and requires disclosure of the pro forma effects on net income and net income per share had the fair value method of accounting prescribed under SFAS 123 been used. Under SFAS 123, an option's fair value is estimated at the grant date using an option pricing model, the resulting fair value is then recognized as compensation cost over the vesting period of the related option. In the Company's case these pro forma disclosures are required to be applied only to options granted after October 1, 1995 (fiscal 1996). In estimating fair value, the Company has used the Black-Scholes option pricing model with the following weighted-average assumptions for 1997 and 1996, respectively; risk free interest rate of 6.21 percent and 6.10 percent, expected lives of 4.1 years and 4.7 years, and stock price volatility of 29.3 percent. The weighted average fair value of options granted during 1997 and 1996 was $1.18 and $1.70, respectively. The following chart depicts the pro forma affects on net income of applying the provisions of SFAS 123.

1992 Incentive Stock Option Plan

In February 1992, the Company adopted a new incentive stock plan (1992 Plan). The 1992 Plan provides that incentive stock options and nonqualified stock options may be granted to such officers and key employees as the administrators of the 1992 Plan may select. The 1992 Plan is administered by a committee of the board of directors which selects the participants and determines (i) the type of options; (ii) the vesting schedule of options; (iii) the exercise price (which may not be less than fair market value on the date of grant); and (iv) the duration of the options (which cannot exceed 10 years). A total of 220,000 shares of common stock have been reserved for issuance under the 1992 Plan. No options may be granted under the 1992 Plan after December 31, 2001.

1994 Nonqualified Stock Option Grant

In August 1994, the Company granted an executive officer of the Company 362,353 nonqualified stock options at an exercise price of $2.61 per share in exchange for canceled options of Mr. Coffee. The difference between the aggregate exercise price of such new options and the fair value of the Company's stock was equal to the option spread for the canceled Mr. Coffee options. The options are exercisable immediately, but may not be exercised more than one year after termination or death while in the employ of the Company or more than 10 years from date of grant.

13. Stock Incentive Plans—(Continued)

1995 Stock Option and Incentive Plan

In April 1995, the Company adopted a new stock option and incentive plan (1995 Plan). The 1995 Plan provides authority for the grant of stock options and stock appreciation rights to directors, employees, and consultants by the Compensation Committee (Committee) of the board of directors. The total number of shares of common stock that may be subject to awards granted under the 1995 Plan is equal to 750,000 shares of common stock, subject to certain adjustments. The Committee selects the participants and determines (i) the type of option; (ii) the vesting schedule of options; (iii) the exercise price; and (iv) the duration of the options. No options may be granted under the 1995 Plan after April 27, 2005.

1997 Stock Option and Incentive Plan

In March 1997, the Company adopted a new stock option and incentive plan (1997 Plan). The 1997 Plan provides the Compensation Committee (Committee) of the board of directors the authority to grant stock options and stock appreciation rights to directors, employees, and consultants. The Committee selects the participants and determines (i) the type of award; (ii) the vesting schedule of awards; (iii) the exercise price; and (iv) duration of the award. The total number of shares of common stock that may be subject to awards granted under the 1997 Plan is equal to 270,000 shares of common stock, subject to certain adjustments. 1997 Nonqualified Stock Option Grant

In August 1997, the Company granted an executive officer of the Company 500,000 nonqualified stock options at an exercise price of $3.50 per share. One-half of the options become exercisable on September 30 of each year following the date of grant, but may not be exercised more than ten years from the date of grant.

15. Business and Credit Concentrations

The Company distributes and sells its products through major retail outlets, including discounters/mass merchants, department stores, warehouse clubs, specialty stores, catalog showrooms, mail order catalog companies, and national hardware, drugstore, and retail grocery chains. Approximately 39 percent, 36 percent, and 33 percent of the Company's revenues were from two customers in the years ended September 28, 1997, September 29, 1996, and October 1, 1995, respectively. The largest of these two customers accounted for 27 percent, 23 percent, and 23 percent of the Company's revenues in those same years, respectively.

16. Related Party Transactions

Signature Brands pays a management fee to a related party for certain administrative and professional services performed by the related party. Amounts paid to this related party for management fees, including reimbursed expenses, were $252, $263, and $305 for the years ended September 28, 1997, September 29, 1996, and October 1, 1995, respectively.

17. Financial Instruments

Management has determined that at September 28, 1997 and September 29, 1996, the fair value of financial instruments included in the balance sheets approximated their carrying values. With respect to cash, receivables, payables, and accrued liabilities, this determination was based on the short maturity of the instruments. With respect to debt, the assessment was based on management's judgment as to currently available rates on debt with similar maturities.

SIGNATURE BRANDS USA, INC. AND SUBSIDIARY
NOTES TO CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
(Unaudited)
(Amounts in thousands, except per share data)

1. Basis of Presentation

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of Signature Brands USA, Inc. (the "Company") and its wholly owned subsidiary. All significant intercompany accounts and transactions are eliminated in consolidation.

In the opinion of management, the information furnished herein includes all adjustments of a normal recurring nature that are necessary for a fair presentation of results for the interim periods shown in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. The unaudited interim consolidated financial statements have been prepared using the same accounting principles that were used in preparation of the Company's annual report on Form 10-K for the year ended September 28, 1997, and should be read in conjunction with the consolidated financial statements and notes thereto. Because of the seasonal nature of the small appliance and consumer scale industries, the results of operations for the interim period are not necessarily indicative of results for the full fiscal year.

2. Inventories

The components of inventories are as follows:

	December 28, 1997	September 28, 1997
Raw materials and purchased parts	$10,040	$11,233
Finished goods	27,811	28,374
	$37,851	$39,607

Work-in-process inventories are not significant and are included with raw materials.

3. Earnings per share

The Company adopted Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 128, Earnings per Share ("SFAS No. 128"), in the quarter ended December 28, 1997. SFAS No. 128 requires the Company to disclose two earnings per share amounts, basic and diluted. Basic earnings per share is based on net income available to common stockholders and weighted average common stock outstanding during the period. Diluted earnings per share includes the effect of all dilutive securities which are convertible to common stock of the Company such as stock options and warrants.

Below is a table which reconciles basic earnings per share with diluted earnings per share for the thirteen weeks ended December 28, 1997 and December 29, 1996.

FIRST ALERT, INC. AND SUBSIDIARIES

NOTES TO CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

(All dollar amounts in thousands unless otherwise indicated, except per share data)

Note 1—The Company

Effective July 31, 1992, THL-FA Operating Corp. acquired substantially all the net assets of the BRK Electronics Division and all the issued and outstanding shares of certain non-U.S. subsidiaries of the Fire Safety Group of Pittway Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Predecessor" or the "Division") for approximately $92,500 ("Acquisition"). THL-FA Operating Corp. is a wholly owned subsidiary of THL-FA Holding Corp. THL-FA Operating Corp. subsequently changed its name to BRK Brands, Inc. and THL-FA Holding Corp. subsequently changed its name to First Alert, Inc. ("Company" or "First Alert"). After this acquisition, the Company was owned by Thomas H. Lee Company and related entities, Pittway Intellectual Property Corporation, a subsidiary of Pittway Corporation ("Pittway") and management of the Company. On April 5, 1994, the Company completed an initial public offering ("IPO") of 5,180,000 shares of its common stock. An additional 3,100,000 shares of the Company's common stock were sold by Pittway as part of the same offering.

The Company, through its subsidiaries, manufactures and markets residential safety products including smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, fire extinguishers, motion sensing lighting control devices, timers, fire security safes and chests, fire escape ladders, child safety products and rechargeable flashlights. The Company's manufacturing operations are located in Juarez, Mexico and Aurora, Illinois.

While the Company has a number of customers in the retail and wholesale markets, a significant amount of its net sales are concentrated in three major U.S. national retail chains comprising 13%, 7% and 7% of consolidated net sales for the year ended December 31, 1997; 15%, 7% and 5% for the year ended December 31, 1996 and 13%, 8% and 6% for the year ended December 31, 1995.

Most of the components used in the Company's products are available from multiple sources; however, the Company has elected to purchase integrated circuit components used in the Company's smoke detectors and carbon monoxide detectors, and certain other components used in the Company's products, from single sources. The Company has developed an alternative source of supply for these integrated circuit components. However, there can be no assurance that the Company will be able to continue to obtain these components on a timely basis given the unpredictability of the demand for carbon monoxide detectors. In addition, the biomimetic sensor, which is the key component used in the Company's battery-powered carbon monoxide detector, is obtained by the Company pursuant to a license from Quantum Group, Inc. (Quantum), its sole supplier of this component. Commencing on January 1, 1997, Quantum was permitted to sell its sensors to other customers. There is no alternative supply for the biomimetic sensor. An extended interruption or termination in the supply of any of the components used in the Company's products, or a reduction in their quality or reliability, would have an adverse effect on the Company's business and results of operations.

Cash and Cash Equivalents

Only highly liquid investments with initial maturities of less than three months are considered as cash and cash equivalents. Substantially all of the Company's cash is held by one bank at December 31, 1997. The Company does not believe that as a result of this concentration, it is subject to any unusual credit risk beyond the normal risk associated with commercial banking relationships.

Earnings per Share

In 1997, the Company adopted Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 128 (SFAS 128), "Earnings per Share." This statement establishes standards for computing earnings per share (EPS) and simplifies the standards for computing EPS previously found in APB Opinion No. 15 (APB15), "Earnings per Share." It replaces the presentation of Primary EPS with a presentation of Basic EPS. It also requires dual presentation of Basic and Diluted EPS on the face of the income statement for all entities with complex capital structures. Basic EPS is based on the weighted average number of shares of common stock while Diluted EPS is based on the weighted average number of shares of common stock and dilutive potential shares of common stock outstanding during the periods. In accordance with the requirements of SFAS 128, the Company has restated all EPS data for prior periods.

A reconciliation of both the income and shares used in the calculation of Basic and Diluted EPS are as follows:

	1997	1996	1995
Basic EPS calculation:
Numerator:
Net income (loss)	$(7,836)	$(18,702)	$11,437
Denominator:

Basic EPS	$ (0.32)	$ (0.78)	$ 0.48
Diluted EPS calculation:

Denominator:
Common shares outstanding	24,242	24,119	24,043
Dilutive Options	0	0	788

Stock options were outstanding at December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, as discussed in Note 11.

Translation of Foreign Currencies

The functional currency of the foreign operations included in these financial statements is the U.S. dollar. Translation adjustments and transaction gains and losses are reflected in net income and consisted of a loss of $1,149 in the year ended December 31, 1997, a gain of $733 in the year ended December 31, 1996, and a loss of $39 in the year ended December 31, 1995.

Inventories

Company inventories are valued at the lower of cost, determined on the first-in, first-out (FIFO) basis, or market.

Property, Plant and Equipment

Properties are stated at cost. Depreciation of all assets is computed over their estimated useful lives using the straight-line method for financial reporting and accelerated methods for income tax reporting.

Upon sale or retirement of property, plant and equipment, a gain or loss is recognized. Expenditures for maintenance and repairs are charged to expense.

Useful lives for property, plant and equipment are as follows:

	Years
Buildings	Up to 40
Building improvements	20
Furniture and fixtures	10
Machinery and equipment	10
Tools, jigs and dies	3

Goodwill

Goodwill, representing the difference between the total purchase price and the fair value of assets (tangible and intangible) and liabilities at the date of acquisition, is being amortized on a straight-line basis over 40 years. Amortization expense totalled $638 for each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 1997.

Impairment of Assets

In 1996, the Company adopted Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 121 "Accounting for the Impairment of Long-Lived Assets and for Long-Lived Assets to be Disposed Of." This statement requires that long-lived assets and certain identifiable intangibles be reviewed for impairment whenever events or changes in circumstance indicate that the carrying amount of an asset may not be recoverable. Under provisions of the statement, impairment losses are recognized when expected future cash flows are less than the assets' carrying value.

Patents, Trademarks and Other Intangibles

Patents, trademarks and other intangibles are carried at cost less accumulated amortization, which is calculated on a straight-line basis over the estimated useful lives of the assets, not to exceed 40 years (see Note 5). Amortization expense was $704, $682 and $1,054 for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

Fair Value of Financial Instruments

The carrying values of cash and cash equivalents, accounts receivable and payable and accrued liabilities approximate fair value due to the short-term maturities of these assets and liabilities. The aggregate fair value of the Credit Facility approximates its carrying amount because of the recent and frequent repricing based on market conditions.

Stock Based Compensation

Effective January 1, 1996, the Company adopted the "disclosure method" provisions of Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 123 "Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation." As permitted under this statement, the Company continues to recognize stock-based compensation costs under the intrinsic value based method of accounting as prescribed by Accounting Principles Board Opinion No. 25, "Accounting for Stock Issued to Employees."

Income Taxes

Income taxes of the Company are accounted for using Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 109, "Accounting for Income Taxes."

Advertising and Research and Development Costs

Advertising costs, including advertising allowances granted to customers, are accrued at the date of sale of certain products to reflect advertising commitments made to customers. Research and development costs are charged to expense as incurred. Expense charged to operations for the periods presented were as follows:

	Year Ended December 31.
Advertising and product promotion	$12,796	$22,899	$33,258
Research and development	$ 2,012	$ 3,121	$ 2,866

Use of Estimates

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting periods. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Impact of New Accounting Standards

Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 130 (SFAS 130), "Reporting Comprehensive Income" and Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement No. 131 (SFAS 131), "Disclosures about Segments of an Enterprise and Related Information," were issued in June 1997 and are effective for the Company's fiscal year 1998. SFAS 130 establishes standards for the reporting and display of comprehensive income, which includes net income and changes in equity except those resulting from investments by, or distributions to, stockholders. SFAS 131 establishes standards for disclosures related to business operating segments. The Company is currently evaluating the impact that these statements will have on the consolidated financial statements.

Note 3 — Restructuring Charge

During the fourth quarter of 1996, the Company adopted a plan to revitalize the Company's core product lines of smoke and carbon monoxide detectors and discontinue, reposition or outsource non-performing product lines, right-size and consolidate manufacturing operations, reduce the Company's selling, general and administrative cost structures and aggressively address inventory levels. As a result of this plan, the Company recorded a pre-tax restructuring charge of $4,497 including a provision of $1,998 for inventory write-downs which was appropriately charged to cost of sales, excluding depreciation. The remaining restructuring charge of $2,499 includes $1,789 for the write-down of the net book value of manufacturing equipment for product lines that will be outsourced or eliminated, $410 for severance costs for approximately 600 manufacturing and corporate office employees who were released from employment in the fourth quarter of 1996 and $300 for contractual plant restoration costs. The provision for inventory write-downs relates primarily to inventory for product lines that either have been or will be outsourced or eliminated. The following table sets forth the details of activity for 1997:

	Balance at December 31, 1996	1997 Charges	Balance at December 31, 1997
Manufacturing equipment write-down	$1,789	—	$1,789
Inventory write-down	1,998	$1,283	715
Severance	93	93	—
Plant restoration	300	135	165
Total	$4,180	$1,511	$2,669

Of the 1997 charges, $93 of severance was a cash charge with the remainder being non-cash charges.

During the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company released $1,005 of inventory write-down and plant restoration cost accruals which were determined by the Company's management as no longer being required. The release, reflected as a non-cash charge in the above table, was recorded through cost of sales, excluding depreciation. These accruals were deemed no longer necessary as the Company, in light of market conditions faced in 1997, reassessed its original cost estimates associated with repositioning certain product lines and consolidating its manufacturing operations.

On May 14, 1997, the Company entered into an $80.0 million revolving three-year credit facility (the "Credit Facility") with an agent financial institution, replacing its Former Credit Facility (as defined below). Advances under the Credit Facility are limited to (a) 85% of eligible accounts receivable plus (b) the lesser of 60% of eligible inventory or $35.0 million. During the period of May 1997 through October 1997, $10.0 million in additional borrowing was available and from June 1998 through September 1998, $5.0 million in additional borrowing will be available under the Credit Facility. All obligations under the Credit Facility are secured by first priority liens upon certain of the Company's assets. Amounts outstanding under the Credit Facility bear interest at prime rate plus 1/2% or the London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) plus 2%. The Company is subject to a commitment fee of 0.375% per annum on the unused portion of the Credit Facility less $2.0 million. The Credit Facility agreement contains covenants for, among other things, total liabilities to tangible net worth and fixed charge ratios; maintenance of tangible net worth; and restrictions on additional indebtedness, capital expenditures and payment of dividends.

At December 31, 1997, the Company was not in compliance with the total liabilities to tangible net worth, fixed charge coverage ratio and minimum tangible net worth covenants set forth in the Credit Facility. While a waiver was obtained from the lender for the noncompliance with these covenants at December 31, 1997, it is not expected that the Company will be able to meet the restrictive covenants throughout 1998. Accordingly, the Credit Facility has been classified as a current liability. The Company is currently negotiating the terms of an extension of the Credit Facility, as well as a modification of the restrictive covenants and fully expects that a new agreement with its current lender will be in place by the second quarter of 1998.

At December 31, 1996, under the terms of the Company's former revolving credit facility (the "Former Credit Facility"), the Company was able to borrow up to $77.5 million until January 31, 1997, when the amount available was reduced to $70.0 million. In connection with a September 4, 1996 amendment, the Company granted a security interest in all of its assets which included the stock of wholly owned subsidiaries to secure the obligations to the lenders under the Former Credit Facility. Similarly, Electronica BRK de Mexico S.A. de C.V., a wholly owned subsidiary, agreed to pledge all of its assets to secure repayment of advances under the Former Credit Facility.

Under the Former Credit Facility, the Company was subject to a commitment fee of 0.35% per annum on the unused portion of the Former Credit Facility. The Former Credit Facility carried an interest rate of LIBOR plus 1.5% for amounts up to $70.0 million (LIBOR plus 2.0% for amounts in excess of $70.0 million) on the LIBOR based portion of the Former Credit Facility and the higher of the lender's corporate borrowing rate or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.75% for amounts up to $70.0 million (Federal Funds Rate plus 1.25% for amounts in excess of $70.0 million) on the remaining balance. Additionally the Former Credit Facility contained covenants restricting, among other things, the payment of dividends, the sale of assets, mergers and acquisitions and required maintenance of interest coverage ratios, leverage ratios and a minimum tangible net worth. At December 31, 1996, the Company was not in compliance with the interest coverage ratio and the leverage ratio covenants. On May 14, 1997, proceeds from the Credit Facility were used to fully reduce the Company's indebtedness under the Former Credit Facility.

Note 10—Retirement Plans

The Company has retirement plans covering substantially all U.S. employees of its subsidiaries. No other post-retirement benefits are offered to retirees.

Eligible U.S. employees may participate in the Company's defined contribution plans. Company contributions to the plans are based upon a percentage of the employee contribution and vest over a five-year period commencing with date of employment. Such contributions amounted to $182, $210, and $154 for the years 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

There are two non-contributory defined benefit plans covering substantially all U.S. employees. Benefits are based on years of service and annual compensation as defined by such plans. Employees vest in plan benefits after five years of service.

Pursuant to the terms of the purchase agreement with Pittway, all retirement obligations earned by Company employees through July 31, 1992, were retained by Pittway. Obligations arising subsequent to that date are the responsibility of the Company. Pension costs recorded for the fiscal years 1997, 1996 and 1995 aggregated $307.

Note 11—Stock Options

Following the Acquisition, the Company established the 1992 Time Accelerated Restricted Stock Option Plan ("1992 Plan") under which it is authorized to grant non-qualified options to purchase shares of Company common stock at a price equal to the market value of a share of such stock on the date of grant. Such options vest over a five-year period if certain provisions are met and are generally exercisable once vested, or, in the case of a terminated employee, become exercisable pursuant to the terms of the plan.

During 1994, the Company established the 1994 Stock Option Plan ("1994 Plan") which provides for the grant of options to purchase up to 1,226,666 shares of common stock. During 1997, the Company established the 1997 Stock Option Plan ("1997 Plan") which provides for the grant of options to purchase up to 1,300,000 shares of common stock. The 1994 and 1997 Plans allow for the issuance of incentive stock options and non-qualified options. Options granted under the 1994 and 1997 Plans are generally issued at an exercise price of not less than the current market price and vest over periods determined by the Board of Directors. Under the 1994 and 1997 Plans, no option shall be exercisable after ten years from the date on which it was granted.

During 1996, the Company established the Nonqualified Stock Option Plan for Non-Employee Directors ("Non-Employee Director Plan") which provides for the grant of options for the purchase of an aggregate of 100,000 shares of common stock by all independent directors of the Company. Options to purchase 12,912 shares of common stock at an exercise price of $1.78 per share 6,456 of which have expired and 6,827 shares of common stock at an exercise price of $1.17 per share were granted in 1997 under the Non-Employee Director Plan. Options granted under the Non-Employee Director Plan are generally granted at an exercise price of one half of the market price of a share of common stock at the date of grant and become fully exercisable on the first anniversary of the date of grant. Under the Non-Employee Director Plan, options expire ten years after the date granted.

In February 1997, options for 314,000 shares of common stock were repriced to $3.19 per share, the market price of the Company's common stock on the date of repricing. Of these options, 114,000 shares have a time-based vesting schedule while 200,000 shares were only to become exercisable in the event of a change in control of the Company consummated on or before December 31, 1997. Options for those 314,000 shares were granted apart from any Company stock option plan. The option for 114,000 shares was outstanding at December 31, 1997, while the one for 200,000 shares expired by its terms on December 31, 1997.

In February 1997, 505,200 options under the 1994 Plan were repriced to $3.19 per share, the market price of the Company's common stock on the date of the repricing.

Shares of common stock have been reserved for future issuance under all of the foregoing options.

The Company applies APB Opinion No. 25 and related interpretations in accounting for the aforementioned stock option plans. Accordingly, no compensation cost has been recognized for its fixed stock option plans while compensation expense has been recognized for its compensatory plans. Had compensation cost for the Company's fixed stock option plans been determined based on the fair value based method, as defined in Statement No. ■■■, the Company's net earnings (loss) and earnings (loss) per share would not be significantly different from those reported and consequently pro forma amounts have not been disclosed.

The fair value of each option grant is estimated on the date of grant using the Black-Scholes option pricing model with the following weighted average assumptions used for grants: expected volatility of 27.0% in 1997, 29.3% in 1996 and 28.0% in 1995; expected lives of seven years for 1997, 1996 and 1995 and risk free interest rate of 6.3% in 1997, 6.4% in 1996 and 7.8% in 1995. It has been assumed that no dividends will be paid for the expected term of the options.

Note 12—Lease Commitments

The Company leases certain warehouses, office space and equipment under noncancelable operating leases expiring at various dates through the year 2010. Minimum annual rental commitments under all noncancelable leases for the next five years beginning with 1998 are as follows:

1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	Thereafter
$2,879	$2,852	$2,483	$2,172	$2,165	$11,547

Total rent expense including taxes, insurance and maintenance when included in rent amounted to $3,223, $3,801 and $2,681 for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

Note 13—Contingencies

In November 1994, the Company and certain of its officers and directors were named as defendants in four purported class action lawsuits filed in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division. The plaintiffs in these actions, pursuant to a Court order, filed a consolidated and amended complaint resulting in the consolidation of the four actions. The consolidated case is entitled Gilbert et al. vs. First Alert, Inc. et al. ("Gilbert"). The amended complaint sought compensatory damages, costs and attorneys' fees on behalf of the purchasers of the Company's Common Stock during the period from October 12, 1994 through November 10, 1994. By order dated August 21, 1995, the Court certified the class. Subsequently, the plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint to expand the class period to September 20, 1994 through December 7, 1994, was granted and a second consolidated and amended complaint was filed on January 16, 1996. The new class was certified by the Court. The complaint alleges generally that the Company and other defendants disseminated false and misleading information to the investing public regarding the First Alert® Carbon Monoxide Detector in connection with an anticipated secondary public offering of the Company's Common Stock in late 1994 in violation of various provisions of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and the rules promulgated thereunder. The Registration Statement with respect to the proposed secondary public offering was declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission on November 9, 1994, but was subsequently withdrawn by the Company at the request of the selling stockholders. The public offering was solely to facilitate the sale of shares by certain selling stockholders and the Company would not have received any proceeds therefrom.

The Company vigorously contested all claims and denied liability. Nevertheless, to avoid further expense and the burdens of litigation, in November 1996, the Company agreed to a tentative settlement of the consolidated class actions. An executed settlement agreement was filed with the Court on February 11, 1997 and the Court entered an order on February 25, 1997, giving preliminary approval to the settlement.

Pursuant to the Court's February 25, 1997, order, members of the class had until May 12, 1997, to opt out of the class and until July 28, 1997, to file proofs of claim if they wished to receive a share of the settlement amount. The Court held a hearing on June 20, 1997, to consider the fairness of the settlement and, at that time, the Court approved the settlement.

Under the terms of the settlement agreement, defendants will pay a fixed amount per share to class members, depending on when they bought or sold their shares, with a maximum amount of $3.0 million (including attorney's fees and costs for class counsel) to be paid out in settlement. The majority of the settlement amount is being paid by the Company's directors and officers liability insurance carrier. The pendency of the Gilbert complaint has not had a material effect on the Company's financial results for any period and adequate reserves exist at December 31, 1997, for the Company's share of the settlement amount.

A purported class action entitled Betley et al. vs. First Alert, Inc. et al. ("Betley") was filed in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois on January 3, 1995, against the Company and its wholly owned subsidiary, BRK Brands, Inc., alleging common law fraud, breach of warranties, and a statutory violation of the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act, all related to alleged defects in the original First Alert® Carbon Monoxide Detector (Model FACO) design and the manner in which the detector was marketed. The Company does not believe that the plaintiffs claim any personal injuries or property damage; nor do the plaintiffs claim that their detectors failed to detect dangerous levels of carbon monoxide. Instead, they claim (i) that the Company failed to disclose that the product alarms in non-life threatening conditions (which they state in their complaint to be a "nuisance"), (ii) that the Company falsely proclaims the product resets "automatically" when, in fact, the product can take several hours or days to reset after it has gone into alarm and (iii) that the Company falsely claims that the product met Underwriters Laboratories' listing criteria for residential carbon monoxide detectors in effect at the time the Model FACO was manufactured. The plaintiffs seek a refund of their purchase price, other out-of-pocket expenses, punitive damages, and attorneys' fees. The Company has raised numerous defenses to this claim and will continue to oppose it forcefully.

In February 1997, the Company and its wholly owned subsidiary, BRK Brands, Inc., were named as defendants in a purported class action lawsuit entitled Houlihan et al. vs. First Alert, Inc. et al. ("Houlihan") in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, alleging breach of express warranty and statutory violations of various states' consumer protection statutes due to alleged misrepresentations and product defects involving First Alert® Carbon Monoxide Detectors. The Company does not believe the plaintiff claimed any personal injuries or property damage; nor did he claim specifically that his detector failed to detect dangerous levels of carbon monoxide. Rather, the plaintiff sought "rescissionary damages" and attorneys' fees. The plaintiff's original complaint was stricken by the Court on April 9, 1997, but the Court gave the plaintiff leave to re-plead the case which was done. The Company filed a Motion to Dismiss the amended complaint and that motion was granted on August 22, 1997. The case has now been settled by refunding the plaintiff's purchase price of the detector.

On February 11, 1998, a jury returned a verdict against the Company's BRK Brands, Inc., subsidiary, awarding damages totaling $16.9 million in the case of Mercer et al. vs. BRK Brands, Inc. et al., which was tried in the Iowa District Court for Scott County. The verdict includes $12.5 million of punitive damages. The case alleged negligence, breach of warranty and fraudulent nondisclosure in connection with a BRK[®] Electronics smoke detector that alarmed during a residential fire. The punitive damage award was based upon the jury finding a preponderance of clear, convincing and satisfactory evidence the Company's conduct constituted willful and wanton disregard for the rights or safety of others. Substantially all of the cost of defense and the damages assessed in this case are covered by the Company's insurance. The Company intends to continue to vigorously contest this case by pursuing a number of post-trial motions to overturn the verdict and appealing the decision, if necessary.

In addition to the Gilbert, Betley and Mercer actions, the Company and its subsidiaries, including BRK Brands, Inc., are parties to various product liability and other types of lawsuits and are from time to time subject to investigations by various governmental agencies, including investigations regarding environmental matters. Although the ultimate liabilities, if any, arising out of the Gilbert, Betley, Mercer and other pending legal actions or investigations cannot presently be determined, based on its past experience and assessment of such matters, the Company believes that the outcome of these matters will not have a material adverse effect on the Company's financial position.

Note 14—Related Party Transactions

Certain administrative fees were paid to Thomas H. Lee Company aggregating $214, $195 and $326, for the years ended December 31, 1997, 1996 and 1995, respectively.

The First Alert trademark is owned by the First Alert Trust in which the Company has a 75% beneficial interest. The Company entered into a license agreement with the First Alert Trust and Pittway which permits the Company in perpetuity and on an exclusive, royalty-free basis, to manufacture and market under the First Alert brand name any products other than products which are designed to be monitored by an alarm or building control system or to work in conjunction with a communications panel or other building control system ("Professional Products"). Pittway owns the remaining 25% beneficial interest in the First Alert Trust and is a party to such license agreement with the First Alert Trust under which Pittway has, in perpetuity, an exclusive, royalty-free license to manufacture and market Professional Products under the First Alert Professional[®] and First Alert Professional Security System[®] brand names. Either Pittway or the Company may terminate their further obligations and rights under the license by providing notice to the other party.

Note 17—Subsequent Events

On March 2, 1998, the Company announced that it had entered into a definitive agreement with Sunbeam Corporation (the "Agreement") providing for the acquisition of the Company by Sunbeam in a transaction valued at approximately $175 million including the assumption of existing debt. The consummation of the offer is subject to certain customary conditions, including expiration of the waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvement Act. The Agreement provides that the Company pay a fee of $3.75 million in the event that the acquisition is terminated.

CPH reserves the right to assert any and all privileges to which CPH is entitled under the law.

3. CPH objects to the definitions of "CPH" and "MAFCO" to the extent they include CPH's counsel in this litigation. CPH interprets these definitions to exclude Jenner & Block, LLP and Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley P.A., and their respective attorneys.

4. CPH's response to any interrogatory is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgment that the requested information is relevant or that any persons identified actually possess knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action.

5. CPH's objections and responses are based on a good-faith investigation. CPH expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

6. CPH responds to Morgan Stanley's Interrogatories without waiving the Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of its responses.

FURTHER OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY 1: Identify every instance in which Mafco or CPH engaged or retained Morgan Stanley between January 1, 1993 and March 30, 1998. Your response should identify the nature, subject, and purpose of each such engagement, the transaction or proposed transaction contemplated by each such engagement, and the name(s) of any Morgan Stanley employee or agents retained or consulted by Mafco or CPH.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: CPH objects to this interrogatory as unduly burdensome because it seeks information already in the possession of Morgan Stanley and details concerning "every instance" in which Morgan Stanley was engaged or retained. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("Mafco"), CPH, and their affiliates worked with Morgan Stanley on numerous occasions and in numerous capacities during this multi-year period, which ended more than six years ago. None of these companies keeps records of the sort that would allow for an easy or comprehensive determination of all of the engagements in which Morgan Stanley may have played some role. Thus, the information set forth below is necessarily incomplete and tentative, but CPH has made a reasonable effort to compile this response. CPH's investigation continues. CPH also notes that Interrogatory No. 1 constitutes multiple separate interrogatories. Subject to and notwithstanding its Initial and Further Objections, CPH states that

Morgan Stanley was involved in the following transactions with Mafco, CPH, or affiliated companies:

- In 1985, Morgan Stanley served as advisor to Pantry Pride, Inc. ("Pantry Pride"), a Mafco affiliate, in its acquisition of Revlon, Inc. ("Old Revlon").
- In 1986, Morgan Stanley served as an advisor to Pantry Pride in the sale of Old Revlon's pharmaceutical business to Rorer Group Inc.
- In 1989, Morgan Stanley served as an advisor to The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Old Coleman") during the acquisition by a Mafco affiliate of Old Coleman.
- In 1989, Morgan Stanley served as Old Coleman's financial advisor when Old Coleman reviewed the $460.5 million buyout proposal by former Old Coleman chairman Sheldon Coleman and other members of the Coleman family.
- In 1991, National Health Laboratories Incorporated ("NHL"), an affiliate of Mafco, completed a secondary public offering of its common stock, for which Morgan Stanley served as a co-manager.
- In 1992, National Health Care Group Inc. (an indirect Mafco subsidiary) sold 14 million shares of NHL in a registered offering through Morgan Stanley and other underwriters.
- In 1992, Morgan Stanley served as an underwriter for Old Coleman's February 1992 offering of $100 million in Guaranteed Pass Through Certificates due 2022.
- In 1992, Morgan Stanley served as a joint underwriting manager for the $83 million initial public offering by The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") of its common stock.
- In 1992, Revlon, Inc. ("Revlon") planned but did not complete a $120 million initial public offering of its common stock, which was to be co-managed by Morgan Stanley.
- In 1992, MacAndrews & Forbes Company ("Flavors"), a Mafco affiliate, retained Morgan Stanley and other underwriters in connection with a contemplated, but later withdrawn, initial public offering of its common stock.
- In 1992, Morgan Stanley co-managed an $85 million 12% senior debt offering for Flavors.
- In 1993, Morgan Stanley served as the financial advisor for NHL in connection with its proposed acquisition of Damon Corp.

- In 1993-94, Morgan Stanley served as one of the underwriters for a $125 million senior subordinated notes offering by Marvel III Holdings Inc., a Mafco affiliate.
- In 1994, Morgan Stanley served as the financial advisor and dealer manager for NHL's tender offer for the outstanding shares of Allied Clinical Laboratories Inc.
- In 1994, Morgan Stanley served as the financing agent for $200 million of senior notes issued by NHL Intermediate Holdings Corp. II, a unit of National Health Laboratories Holdings Inc., a Mafco affiliate.
- In 1994, New World Communications Group Incorporated, a Mafco affiliate, arranged for $200 million in financing using Morgan Stanley, as agent.
- In 1995, Toy Biz, Inc. ("Toy Biz"), a Mafco affiliate, and one of its shareholders sold Toy Biz common stock in a $62 million initial public offering co-managed by Morgan Stanley.
- In 1995, a Mafco affiliate and Abex Inc. agreed to merge. Morgan Stanley served as a financial advisor to Mafco in this transaction.
- In 1996, Revlon completed a $180 million initial public offering of its common stock, which was co-managed by Morgan Stanley.
- In 1996, Morgan Stanley led an underwriting group in conjunction with the $48 million sale by Toy Biz and one of its shareholders of shares of Toy Biz common stock.
- In 1996, Consolidated Cigar Holdings Inc. ("Cigar"), a Mafco affiliate, completed a $124 million initial public offering of its common stock, which was co-managed by Morgan Stanley.
- In 1997, Cigar completed a $118 million additional offering of its common stock, which was co-managed by Morgan Stanley.
- In 1997, Mafco Holdings Inc., a Mafco affiliate, completed a "going private" transaction with its affiliate, Mafco Consolidated Group Inc. ("Mafco Consolidated"). Mafco Consolidated retained Morgan Stanley as a financial advisor to represent the minority interest in evaluating and negotiating the Mafco Holdings proposal.

In addition to the transactions listed above, in late 1997 and early 1998, Morgan Stanley (including at least William Reid, Robert Kitts, and Matt Grogan) sought to interest Mafco in a transaction involving Gucci. In early 1998, Morgan Stanley (including at least Mark Perret and Edwin Datson) also sought to interest Mafco in possible European acquisition opportunities.

INTERROGATORY 2: Identify all communications between Coleman, CPH, or Mafco (or any of their attorneys or financial advisors) and Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Morgan Stanley, or Skadden Arps between March 19, 1998 and March 30, 1998 concerning Sunbeam's sales during the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 Press Release, or any of the information contained in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 Press Release.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: Subject to and without waiving its Initial Objections, CPH states that a CPH representative attended Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's "roadshow" presentation for the Senior Subordinated Convertible Debenture offering on March 18, 1998, at which Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley misrepresented and concealed Sunbeam's true condition. Further, after the March 19, 1998 press release was issued, one or more CPH and/or Coleman representatives reached out to and spoke with one or more Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley employees concerning the subject matter of the interrogatory. Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley assured CPH and/or Coleman that Sunbeam would make the sales numbers it previously had projected for the first quarter of 1998 and the full year. Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley also represented that the March 19, 1998 press release had been issued out of an abundance of caution, solely at the behest of legal counsel, due to the debenture offering and not because there was any problem at Sunbeam that imperiled its previous projections. In addition, CPH had a request outstanding throughout this period pursuant to Section 6.8 of the Agreement and Plan of Merger among Sunbeam Corporation, Laser Acquisition Corp., CLN Holdings Inc. and CPH dated as of February 27, 1998 (the "Holdings Merger Agreement") for, among other things, advice of any change or event that would be materially adverse. CPH further states that there were numerous communications between CPH and/or Coleman and Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley during this time period and Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley failed to inform CPH and/or Coleman of Sunbeam's true condition.

INTERROGATORY 3: Identify all inquiries or requests for information that Coleman, CPH, or Mafco (or any of their attorneys or financial advisors) made to Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Morgan Stanley, or Skadden Arps regarding Sunbeam's history, operations, financial performance, or projection that Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Morgan Stanley, or Skadden Arps failed or refused to answer.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has exceeded any conceivable calculation of its 30 permissible interrogatories under Rule 1.340 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure without securing the agreement of plaintiff or a court order. Subject to and without waiving its Initial or Further Objections, CPH states that prior to the March 30, 1998 closing, CPH made the following requests for information from Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley: (i) on or before February 23, 1998, CPH and Coleman representatives requested that Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam provide information about Sunbeam, including Sunbeam's history, operations, financial performance, and projections, but Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam did not provide truthful information to CPH and Coleman in response; (ii) on February 27, 1998, CPH and Coleman requested that Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam advise CPH and Coleman if Sunbeam's operations and/or financial performance changed in a material adverse manner (see § 6.8 of the Holdings Merger Agreement), but Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam did not provide truthful information to CPH and Coleman in response; (iii) a CPH representative attended Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's "roadshow" presentation for the Senior Subordinated Convertible Debenture offering on March 18, 1998, at which Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley misrepresented and concealed Sunbeam's true condition, and (iv) after the March 19, 1998 press release was issued, CPH and Coleman requested that Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam provide information concerning Sunbeam, including Sunbeam's operations, financial information, and projections, but Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam failed to provide truthful information to CPH and Coleman in response.

INTERROGATORY 4: For each of Morgan Stanley's Second, Third, and Fourth Set of Requests for Admission that CPH has denied, in whole or in part, state each fact that supports the denial. If CPH's denial is related to its objection to Morgan Stanley's definition of the term "CPH" in the Requests for Admission, state how CPH's response to the Request for Admission would change if CPH applied Morgan Stanley's definition.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has exceeded any conceivable calculation of its 30 permissible interrogatories under Rule 1.340 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure without securing the agreement of plaintiff or a court order. CPH further objects to Interrogatory No. 4 as overbroad insofar as it seeks identification of "all facts" that support CPH's denial of the requests for admission. CPH also notes that Interrogatory No. 4 constitutes multiple separate interrogatories. Subject to and without waiving its Initial or Further Objections, CPH states the following:

Morgan Stanley's Second Set of Requests for Admission:

- No. 1: CPH did not retain CSFB. Rather, Coleman retained CSFB.
- No. 3: Mafco did not retain CSFB. Rather, Coleman retained CSFB.
- Nos. 4, 5, 11, 12, 17, 21: CSFB did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did with Sunbeam.
- Nos. 9, 10, 13, 14: Wachtell Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did with Sunbeam.
- Nos. 16, 18, 20, 22: Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz performed customary legal services in connection with the Coleman Transaction.
- No. 23: One or more of the pre-March 19, 1998 drafts of the Arthur Andersen comfort letters were communicated to Morgan Stanley on or about March 18, 1998 and pre-March 19, 1998 drafts of the comfort letter have been produced in this litigation.

Morgan Stanley's Third Set of Requests for Admission:

Nos. 9, 13, 17: Coleman did not close the March 30, 1998 Coleman Transaction. Coleman could not have obtained the "comfort letters" described by Section 7.3(b) of the Public Merger Agreement prior to the March 30, 1998 closing of the CPH transaction.

Nos. 10, 14, 18: CLN could not have obtained the "comfort letters" described by Section 7.3(b) of the Public Merger Agreement prior to the March 30, 1998 closing of the CPH transaction.

Nos. 11, 15, 19: CPH could not have obtained the "comfort letters" described by Section 7.3(b) of the Public Merger Agreement prior to the March 30, 1998 closing of the CPH transaction.

No. 12, 16, 20: Mafco did not close the March 30, 1998 Coleman Transaction. Mafco could not have obtained the "comfort letters" described by Section 7.3(b) of the Public Merger Agreement prior to the March 30, 1998 closing of the CPH transaction.

Morgan Stanley's Fourth Set of Requests for Admission:

No. 1: The February 23, 1998 Letter was not drafted by counsel for CPH and was not signed.

No. 2: There is no evidence that the February 23, 1998 Letter is the agreement referred to in those merger agreement provisions.

Nos. 3, 4, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14: In negotiating the merger agreement, CPH requested and Sunbeam agreed to provide information reflecting any material adverse development in Sunbeam's performance or operations. The information referred to in these Requests plainly would have been within the scope of that provision. Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam had an affirmative obligation to notify CPH of any material adverse change and yet Morgan Stanley affirmatively assisted Sunbeam in concealing from and misrepresenting to CPH this information.

No. 5: CPH did not learn that 50% of Sunbeam's sales typically occurred in the last month of the quarter. Rather, CPH reviewed analyst commentary that suggested that in the third quarter of 1997, 50% of Sunbeam's sales occurred in the last month of the quarter.

No. 6: An analyst mentioned possible international sales pipeline filling.

No. 7: Not all Sunbeam Research Analysts decreased their estimates of Sunbeam's 1998 Earnings Per Share.

No. 8: No one told CPH representatives that Sunbeam's February 1998 sales were slow.

No. 15: Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley misrepresented and concealed the true facts concerning Sunbeam during the negotiations with CPH and Coleman.

No. 17: Morgan Stanley participated in the oral presentation of the Long Range Strategic Plan, which also was presented by both Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam in written form.

Nos. 18, 20, 21, 22: The facts known to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley rendered those statements false.

No. 19: CPH lacks information sufficient to answer this request. CPH further states that Morgan Stanley adopted and vouched for the statements by incorporating them into Morgan Stanley's presentation.

No. 23: CPH wanted and accepted Sunbeam's stock on the basis of Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's representations concerning the condition and performance of Sunbeam, but CPH did not affirmatively request it.

No. 25: CPH exercised its rights by obtaining the right in § 6.8 of the Holdings Merger Agreement to receive notice of material adverse changes. Further, among other things, (a) CPH received and reviewed Sunbeam's Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 29, 1997; (b) a CPH representative attended one of the "roadshow" presentations made by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley in connection with its offering of Senior Subordinated Convertible Debentures that were used to finance the acquisition; (c) a CPH representative obtained and reviewed the offering memorandum prepared and distributed by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley in connection with the offering of the debentures; (d) CPH received and reviewed the March 19, 1998 press release drafted by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley; (e) following its receipt of the March 19, 1998 press release, one or more CPH and/or Coleman representatives contacted and spoke with one or more Sunbeam and/or Morgan Stanley representatives concerning the release and Sunbeam's expectations for first quarter 1998.

No. 26: CPH does not have information sufficient to determine whether the handwriting on the identified documents is authentic.

No. 27: CPH does not believe that the documents on Exhibit 2 of the response meet the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(b). As to the remaining documents and all handwriting, CPH denies that or does not have information sufficient to determine whether those documents meet the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(a).

No. 28: CPH did not author the documents or handwriting in question.

INTERROGATORY 5: State the value that CPH and/or Mafco ascribed to the warrants that they received from Sunbeam pursuant to the August 12, 1998 settlement between CPH and Sunbeam, including but not limited to the value that CPH and Mafco placed upon the warrants for tax or accounting purposes and an identification of all persons from CPH, Mafco, or their outside advisors involved in the valuation.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has exceeded any conceivable calculation of its 30 permissible interrogatories under Rule 1.340 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure without securing the agreement of plaintiff or a court order. CPH further objects that the interrogatory is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence to extent that the interrogatory is not limited as to time. CPH further objects that neither the tax treatment nor the accounting treatment of the warrants is a relevant issue in this case. CPH further objects that it has not placed the treatment of the warrants for taxation purposes at issue in this action, and Morgan Stanley has failed to show that it is unable to obtain discovery concerning the value of the warrants from other sources. CPH further objects to this interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information protected by the attorney-client privilege, work product doctrine or the accountant privilege. Moreover, CPH further objects to this interrogatory as vague and ambiguous in its use of the term "value," which is susceptible to different meanings.

Subject to and without waiving its Initial or Further Objections, CPH states that the warrants had no value to CPH when they were received, or at any time thereafter. CPH refers to the November 18, 2004 corporate representative deposition of CPH (Mr. Laurence Winoker), the November 17 and November 18, 2004 deposition of Ronald O. Perelman, and the November 19, 2004 deposition of Howard Gittis for information concerning the economic value ascribed to the warrants by CPH and its management, as well as CPH's treatment of the warrants in CPH's books and records.

INTERROGATORY 6: Identify every potential bidder and/or acquirer for Coleman that discussed a proposed acquisition of Coleman with Mafco, CPH or Coleman between January 1, 1997 and March 30, 1998, including without limitation "the most likely potential bidder" referenced at CPH 0634057 of the 2/25/98 Coleman Board Meeting Minutes. Your response should include the dates, terms and outcome of any such discussions.

FURTHER OBJECTION AND RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has exceeded any conceivable calculation of its 30 permissible interrogatories under Rule 1.340 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure without securing the agreement of plaintiff or a court order. CPH further objects that the interrogatory is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Subject to and without waiving its Initial and Further Objections, CPH states that the "most likely potential bidder" referenced in the February 25, 1998 Coleman Board meeting minutes was Brunswick Corporation. In further response, CPH incorporates by reference the November 19, 2004 deposition testimony of Howard Gittis concerning the contact with Brunswick.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSE
TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S
FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH objects to Defendant's First Set of Interrogatories, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent they purport to impose upon CPH any requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order. For example, CPH will not comply with Instructions Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 to the extent that they purport to impose upon CPH obligations that are not required under Florida law. CPH will comply with the applicable rules and law.
2. CPH objects to defendant's interrogatories to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule.

3. CPH objects to the definition of "CPH," "MAFCO," and "You" to the extent it includes CPH's counsel in this litigation. CPH interprets these definitions to exclude Jenner & Block, LLC and Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley P.A.

4. CPH's response to any interrogatory is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgment that the requested information is relevant or that any persons identified actually possess knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action.

5. CPH's objections and responses are based on a good-faith investigation. CPH expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

6. CPH responds to Morgan Stanley's interrogatories without waiving the Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES AND FURTHER OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Identify all individuals who may have discoverable information relating to the allegations in your Complaint and state, with respect to each, the subjects of the information the [sic] possess.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to Interrogatory No. 1 as vague and overbroad to the extent that it requires CPH to identify "all individuals" with "discoverable information" relating to CPH's complaint, including all individuals who have some knowledge of matters that are not or should not be in dispute. CPH further objects to Interrogatory No. 1 as overbroad and unduly burdensome because it requests that CPH state all information in the possession of each person identified. CPH also notes that Defendant's Interrogatory No. 1 constitutes multiple separate interrogatories. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, Plaintiff believes that, based upon its investigation to date, the following individuals may have knowledge of the facts alleged in Plaintiff's Complaint:

and the depositions that CPH produced to Morgan Stanley on August 14, 2003.

Plaintiff's investigation continues.

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify all Advisors and state, with respect to each, the nature of the services they performed in connection with the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to the definition of "Coleman Transaction" because Morgan Stanley's definition mischaracterizes the transaction that closed on March 30, 1998. CPH will construe the term "Coleman Transaction" to mean the transaction by which CPH transferred its interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). Subject to and without waiving the foregoing Initial Objections and consistent with its interpretation of the term "Coleman Transaction," CPH responds that the following third parties provided advice and/or assistance to CPH in connection with the transaction by which CPH transferred its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam:

ADVISOR	NATURE OF SERVICES
Credit Suisse First Boston	Financial Advisor
Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz	Legal Advisor

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Identify with particularity all misrepresentations by MS & Co. that CPH intends to rely upon at trial and state, with respect to each such statement, the date and time the representation was made; the document, setting or circumstances in which the representation was made; the person(s) who made the representation; the exact wording of the misrepresentation; and all reasons why CPH believes the misrepresentation was false when it was made.

RESPONSE: CPH notes that Interrogatory No. 3 constitutes at least six separate interrogatories. CPH objects to this interrogatory on the grounds that it is premature, particularly given that: (a) Morgan Stanley has made only limited productions of documents in response to CPH's May 9, 2003 First Request for the Production of Documents; (b) Morgan Stanley has indicated that its document production is not complete and has not advised CPH when Morgan Stanley will complete its document production; and (c) Morgan Stanley has yet to produce a single witness in response to CPH's May 9, 2003 Notice of Depositions. Nevertheless, subject to and without waiving these objections and the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH responds that Morgan Stanley's misrepresentations include the following:

On February 23, 1998, Morgan Stanley representatives Messrs. Fuchs, Stynes, and Kitts and Sunbeam representatives Messrs. Kersh, Fannin and Goudis met with Messrs. Levin, Page, Shapiro, Maher and Nesbitt, along with representatives of CSFB, at Morgan Stanley's offices. At that meeting, Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley representatives provided the CPH representatives with "Discussion Materials" (see CP 01908-01985) and Sunbeam's Strategic Plan (see MF 00001-00019). Those two documents contained numerous falsehoods, including misrepresentations about Sunbeam's performance, its supposed "turnaround," its restructuring program, its sales programs, its "channel management" programs, its new products, its "operational improvements," its purported opportunities for growth, and the value of Sunbeam's stock. In addition, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam made the following oral false representations:

- Sunbeam would meet or exceed Wall Street's first quarter 1998 earnings estimates;
- Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were tracking fine;
- Wall Street analysts' 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct;

- They were quite confident that Sunbeam would earn $2.20 per share in 1998;
- Sunbeam was on track for 1998;
- The increase in earnings from 1997 to 1998 was based on cost decreases that already had been accomplished;
- Sunbeam's turnaround was real;
- Sunbeam would have $341 million in grill revenue in 1998;
- Sunbeam's "early buy" sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues;
- The stock portion of the transaction represented consideration worth approximately $600 million;
- Sunbeam's 1998 and 1999 business plan was easily achievable, probably low.
- Sunbeam's new air and water products worked.
- Sunbeam's air and water products would add approximately $100 million in revenue in 1998.

Those representations were false when made. For example, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were well behind the pace of the previous year — they were down 60% in January ($28 million in January 1998, compared to $73 million in January 1997) — and well behind Sunbeam's projections. Morgan Stanley understood that those representations were false no later than March 19, 1998 when it received a letter from Sunbeam's outside accountants, which stated, "[a]lthough the company has not provided us with any financial statements as of any date or for any period subsequent to February 1, 1998, management has provided net sales from December 29, 1997 through March 1, 1998, which were $72,018,000 as compared to $143,499,000 for the corresponding period of the preceding year" and that the reason for the shortfall was that Sunbeam's "early buy" program had accelerated Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales into fourth quarter 1997. (MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0000376-0000382.)

On March 19, 1998, Sunbeam, with Morgan Stanley's knowledge and assistance, prepared and issued a false press release that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true financial condition: "Sunbeam Corporation . . . said today that it is possible that its net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates for $285 million to $295 million, but net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. . . . The shortfall from analysts' estimates, if any, would be due to changes in inventory management and order patterns at certain of the Company's major retail customers. The Company further stated that based on the strength of its new product offerings and powerful brand names, it remains highly confident about the overall sales outlook for its products for the entire year." (MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0016944-0016945.) The March 19, 1998 press release made no disclosure of Sunbeam's earnings for the quarter, which Wall Street analysts had expected to be in the range of $0.30 to $0.33 per share (excluding one-time charges), based upon Sunbeam's disclosures up to that point.

Morgan Stanley knew that this press release was false and misleading. The release failed to disclose the material variance between Sunbeam's actual January and February 1998 sales and the sales needed to render those projections and estimates accurate. Furthermore, the press release failed to disclose the reason for the collapse of Sunbeam's sales and earnings. Morgan Stanley knew when the statement issued that Sunbeam would not meet the $285 million to $295 million in net sales for the first quarter of 1998, which is the result Wall Street analysts had expected and which the March 19 press release said still was a reasonable possibility. Likewise, Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam would not meet the 1997 sales level for the first quarter as Sunbeam would have needed sales of $123.3 million over the 12 remaining days of the quarter in order to reach that result.

After Sunbeam's false press release was issued, Morgan Stanley assisted Dunlap and Kersh in communications with analysts, investors, and CPH that the March 19, 1998 release was a purely cautionary statement because some first quarter 1998 sales might simply "spillover" into the second quarter but that Sunbeam still believed that it actually would meet analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million in first quarter 1998 sales. In fact, Morgan Stanley knew and had been told by Sunbeam's auditors that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 problem was mainly due to sales being "accelerated" into the fourth quarter of 1997, not delayed until later in 1998.

In addition, Morgan Stanley knew no later than March 25, 1998 that Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were going to miss Wall Street analysts' earnings expectations, which had been lowered slightly in the wake of the March 19, 1998 press release to $0.28 to $0.31 per share (excluding one-time charges). By letter dated March 25, Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam had suffered a loss during the first two months of 1998 of $41.19 million, including a one-time charge of $30.2 million. (MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0020799.) Excluding that one-time charge, Sunbeam's loss for the first two months was $0.13 per share. To achieve first quarter operating earnings of $0.28 per share, which was at the low end of analyst expectations, Sunbeam would have needed to realize a profit of $24 million during March 1998, when Sunbeam was frantically attempting to cut deals to close the massive gap between its actual net sales and its public statements. There was no possibility that Sunbeam could do so. Although that information was highly material, it was not disclosed to CPH or the public until after Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH's interest in Coleman closed on March 30, 1998.

CPH further responds to this interrogatory by referring Morgan Stanley to the following documents that contain misrepresentations concerning Sunbeam's performance, its "turnaround," its growth opportunities, the value of Sunbeam's stock, and the value of the consideration CPH was to receive in connection with the transfer of its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam:

Plaintiff's investigation continues.

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Identify all persons involved in developing, preparing, reviewing, or verifying the information reflected on the Schedule of Synergies and state, with respect to each, their [sic] nature of their involvement.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to the term "Schedule of Synergies" on the grounds that it mischaracterizes the document attached as Exhibit A to Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's ("MSSF") Complaint. On its face, Exhibit A to MSSF's Complaint states that it is a list of "IDEAS." By answering this interrogatory CPH does not concede that the document attached as Exhibit A to MSSF's Complaint is a "schedule of synergies." Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH believes that Jerry Levin, Paul Shapiro, and Joseph Page of The Coleman Company, Inc. were involved in preparing Exhibit A attached to MSSF's Complaint.

Plaintiff's investigation continues.

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Identify all transactions since 1993 in which CPH or MAFCO, or any company owned, controlled, or affiliated with CPH or MAFCO, has received stock as any portion of the consideration for the transaction.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this interrogatory on the ground that the time period "since 1993" is over broad and requests information not relevant to this action. CPH further objects to this interrogatory on the ground that it is vague and ambiguous insofar as the terms "controlled," "affiliated" and "stock" are not defined and, therefore, the interrogatory is subject to multiple interpretations. CPH will interpret this interrogatory as follows: (i) "controlled" means ownership of at least 50% of the equity of a company; (ii) "affiliated" means under common control; and (iii) "stock" is understood in its usual sense as shares of a corporation that are a claim on the corporations's earnings and assets in a for-profit business entity. CPH's response to this interrogatory does not include any transactions involving purchases of stock on the open market (e.g., the following types of transactions are excluded from CPH's response: (a) any stock repurchase program by any affiliate of CPH or MAFCO; (b) any stock purchased by an affiliate of CPH or MAFCO for short-term investment purposes; and (c) any purchase of stock that resulted in CPH, MAFCO, or their affiliates owning less than 5% of the outstanding equity of the company). Subject to these objections and the foregoing Initial Objections, and consistent with CPH's interpretation of this interrogatory, CPH identifies the following material transactions:

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSE
AND OBJECTIONS TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC.'S
FOURTH SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280, 1.340, and 1.350, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley") Fourth Set of Interrogatories as follows:

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH incorporates by reference the Initial Objections set forth in its written response to Morgan Stanley's first set of interrogatories.

INTERROGATORY RESPONSE AND FURTHER OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY 1: For each and every alleged misrepresentation identified by you in your response to Interrogatory No. 3 of MS & Co.'s First Set of Interrogatories to CPH, identify with particularity the date and time that you contend MS & Co. knew the alleged representation to be false or misleading, and identify with particularity the event(s), document(s), or circumstance(s) under which you contend MS & Co. obtained that knowledge, including the identity of the person(s) you contend provided and obtained that knowledge.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this interrogatory on the grounds that it is premature as discovery is ongoing in this case. CPH also objects to the extent the interrogatory calls for CPH to describe all of the documents and deposition testimony supporting its claims, which information is equally available to Morgan Stanley. Subject to and without waiving this objection and the Initial Objections, CPH responds that Morgan Stanley learned throughout 1997 and 1998 that certain of Morgan Stanley's representations to CPH, or certain representations made by Sunbeam in Morgan Stanley's presence, concerning Sunbeam's business and financial performance and condition, the value of Sunbeam's stock, and Sunbeam's opportunities for growth were false and misleading. Morgan Stanley has purged its files and failed to produce e-mail records relating to the Sunbeam engagement, which has prejudiced CPH's ability to discover the facts. CPH continues to investigate the dates on which Morgan Stanley personnel knew that Morgan Stanley's representations to CPH were false and misleading, and the events, documents, and circumstances reflecting those misrepresentations. However, discovery in this case reveals the following:

Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley investigated Sunbeam's business and financial condition as Sunbeam's investment advisor, an engagement which ultimately netted Morgan Stanley over $40 million in professional fees. (Morgan Stanley 0080328; 12/4/2003 W. Strong Dep. at 50-51; Morgan Stanley 0047861.) Morgan Stanley personnel, including William Strong, Bruce Fiedorek, James Stynes, Robert Kitts, David McCreery, John Tyree, Andrew Savarie, Tyrone Chang, Ishaan Seth, Alexandre Fuchs, Lilly Rafii, Gene Yoo, Bram Smith, Michael Hart, and Thomas Burchill, traveled to Sunbeam's Delray Beach, Florida offices to study the company, meet with Sunbeam's senior management team, and aggressively search for a buyer for Sunbeam. (CPH Exhibit 84; CPH Exhibit 37.) At the same time, Morgan Stanley employees, including Tyrone Chang, prepared false and misleading presentation materials about Sunbeam's business and financial performance and condition, its supposed "turnaround," its restructuring program, its sales programs, its "channel management" programs, its new products, its "operational improvements," its purported opportunities for growth, and the value of Sunbeam's stock. (CPH Exhibit 9; CPH Exhibit 86.)

Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam's "turnaround" was illusory and that Morgan Stanley's presentation materials were false and misleading. Morgan Stanley's investigation in the summer of 1997 revealed that Al Dunlap's supposed turnaround of Sunbeam was strikingly similar to Dunlap's "restructuring" of Scott Paper in 1995, which Morgan Stanley knew was a "volume-driven plan [to] prop up" the company for sale. (CPH Exhibit 148; CPH Exhibit 81.) Morgan Stanley's September 1997 game plan for finding a buyer specifically stated that there should be no communication with Kimberly-Clark relating to Sunbeam. (CPH Exhibit 69.) Morgan Stanley was unable to find a buyer for Sunbeam in part because of Sunbeam's high stock price. (1/4/2001 W. Strong Dep. at 167-68.) Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam consider acquiring other companies using Sunbeam's stock, which was fraudulently inflated. (12/4/2003 W. Strong Dep. at 96.)

Two of Morgan Stanley's false and misleading presentations, "Discussion Materials" (CPH Ex. 9) and "Sunbeam Long Range Strategic Plan" (CPH 1324756-1324774), were provided to CPH representatives on February 23, 1998. Additionally, Morgan Stanley representatives, including James Stynes, Robert Kitts, Alexandre Fuchs, and Tyrone Chang, along with Sunbeam representatives, made oral misrepresentations to CPH's representatives regarding Sunbeam's business and financial condition. (CPH 1421922-1421931.) These written materials and oral statements misrepresented the true business and financial condition of Sunbeam and falsely described the purported "turnaround" of the company. As a result of actions taken to inflate Sunbeam's 1997 results, by February 23, 1998, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 net sales had declined almost 50% over the same period in 1997, and were significantly below Sunbeam's projections and Wall Street expectations that Sunbeam sales would be substantially higher in the first quarter of 1998 than they had been in 1997. (CPH Exhibit 46; CPH Exhibit 47; CPH Exhibit 17.) Nonetheless, Morgan Stanley never advised CPH's representatives of Sunbeam's dramatically declining sales on February 23, 1998. Instead, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together assured CPH's representatives, among other things, that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were on track and that Sunbeam would meet or exceed Wall Street's first quarter 1998 earnings estimates.

No later than February 28, 1998, Morgan Stanley and other of Sunbeam's advisors began crafting a list of false and misleading responses to "Hard Questions" in advance of the March 2, 1998 announcement of Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH's interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. (2/12/2004 R. Kitts Dep. at 109-118.) A February 28, 1998 draft list of questions and answers contains no statements concerning Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998. (CPH Exhibit 140.) A March 1, 1998 revised draft includes a question inquiring into Sunbeam's first quarter performance, and the following response: "We're happy with our first quarter so far. We're on target. At this point I'm comfortable with the street estimates." (CPH Exhibit 141.) On another copy of the March 1, 1998 draft, someone crossed out the words: "We're on target." (CPH Exhibit 142.) Later that evening, the answer is revised to read: "The core business is healthy. We're in great shape. We expect that our sales will be up double digits over 1997." (CPH Exhibit 143.) Those statements were false and misleading. Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam had serious concerns about its first quarter 1998 performance and was not on target to meet the company's projections. William Strong spoke with Al Dunlap and Russell Kersh two to three times per week in the first quarter of 1998, and had between 50 to 100 telephone conversations with Sunbeam's senior management throughout the engagement. (12/4/2003 W.

Strong Dep. at 225-226; 1/4/2001 W. Strong Dep. at 153-155.) Both Strong and the Morgan Stanley personnel conducting due diligence of Sunbeam were apprised of Sunbeam's sales and earnings in the first quarter of 1998. (12/4/2003 W. Strong Dep. at 245, 250, 252.)

On or about March 17, 1998, Sunbeam's outside auditors sent Morgan Stanley a letter warning that Sunbeam's net sales in the first quarter of 1998 were half of net sales for the same period in 1997, and that the primary reason for the shortfall was that Sunbeam had accelerated first quarter 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997. However, Morgan Stanley again received confirmation of Sunbeam's sales acceleration practices no later than March 12, 1998, when Sunbeam's outside auditors discussed Sunbeam's aggressive revenue recognition practices with Morgan Stanley. (CPH Exhibit 123; CPH Exhibit 28.)

On March 18-19, 1998, Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam with preparing a false and misleading press release that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true business and financial condition. (CPH Exhibit 13; CPH Exhibit 14.) Morgan Stanley knew on these dates that the press release was false and misleading. On March 18, Morgan Stanley held internal conferences in its offices and teleconferences with Sunbeam management concerning Sunbeam's first quarter sales shortfall and the issuance of a press release. (11/14/2003 J. Tyree Dep. at 342-348; 360-377.) Morgan Stanley knew that the press release falsely indicated that Sunbeam might meet Wall Street expectations for first quarter 1998 sales and failed to disclose the material variance between Sunbeam's actual January and February 1998 sales and the Wall Street expectations. In fact, the press release made no reference whatsoever to Sunbeam's performance shortfall in January and February, creating the false impression that sales had been on track and that any shortfall would be due to matters arising later in the quarter. The press release failed to disclose that Sunbeam would fall far short of Wall Street expectations for first quarter 1998 earnings. At this point, Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam's net sales for the period December 29, 1997 through March 1, 1998 were half of Sunbeam's net sales for the corresponding period the preceding year and nowhere near $285 million to $295 million in net sales, which is the result Wall Street analysts had expected and which the March 19, 1998 press release indicated still was a reasonable possibility. Likewise, Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam required sales of approximately $15 million per day until the close of the first quarter on March 29, 1998 just to match first quarter 1997 sales of $253 million, which the March 19, 1998 press release said Sunbeam expected to achieve. (CPH Exhibit 14; CPH Exhibit 16; CPH Exhibit 114; 1/15/2004 L. Bornstein Dep. at 81.)

On March 19, 1998, Larry Bornstein, an experienced audit manager with Sunbeam's outside auditors, questioned John Tyree about the misleading statements contained in the press release. Sunbeam's auditors had played no role in writing or issuing the press release and had not been given an opportunity to review it in advance. Bornstein, who had knowledge of Sunbeam's sales and shipping capabilities, told Tyree that he was very skeptical of Sunbeam's ability to achieve the projections described in the press release, and that he disagreed with the plan to include the misleading press release language into the debenture offering memorandum. (1/15/04 L. Bornstein Dep. at 73-75; CPH Exhibit 10.) After Bornstein learned that, in response to these statements, Tyree directed profanity toward him outside his presence, Bornstein confronted Tyree and warned him that Sunbeam better meet the sales projections as reflected in the press release or else "you're all going to get sued." (1/15/2004 L. Bornstein Dep. at 81.) Bornstein then advised Tyree that he would send auditors to the shipping docks at the close of the quarter to monitor Sunbeam's shipping cut-off procedures. (1/15/2004 L. Bornstein Dep. at 79-82.)

Morgan Stanley also knew no later than March 25, 1998 that Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were significantly lower than Wall Street analysts' earnings expectations, which had been lowered slightly in the wake of the March 19, 1998 press release to $0.28 to $0.31 per share (excluding one-time charges). (CPH Exhibit 112; CPH 1393269; CPH 1059641.) By letter dated March 25, Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam had suffered a loss during the first two months of 1998 of $41.19 million, including a one-time charge of $30.2 million. (CPH Exhibit 112.) Excluding that one-time charge, Sunbeam's loss for the first two months was $0.13 per share. To achieve first quarter operating earnings of $0.28 per share, which was at the low end of analyst expectations, Sunbeam would have needed to realize a profit of approximately $35 million during March 1998, when Sunbeam was frantically attempting to cut deals to close the massive gap between its actual net sales and its public statements. (CPH Exhibit 112; CPH Exhibit 15.) There was no realistic possibility that Sunbeam could do so. Although that information was highly material, it was not disclosed to CPH or the public until after Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH's interest in Coleman closed on March 30, 1998.

CPH's investigation continues.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S FOURTH SET OF INTERROGATORIES

On February 20, 2004, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") served a written response to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley") Fourth Set of Interrogatories. On March 22, 2004, the Court granted in part Morgan Stanley's March 12, 2004 motion to compel and ordered CPH to supplement its February 20, 2004 response. The Court directed CPH to state, if known, the date and time that CPH contends Morgan Stanley knew the alleged misrepresentations in the specific documents or oral statements listed in the Court's March 22, 2004 order were false and/or misleading.

In this Amended Response, CPH incorporates by reference the general and specific objections that it made to Morgan Stanley's Fourth Set of Interrogatories in its written response dated February 20, 2004. CPH also incorporates by reference the objections that it made to the interrogatory, both orally and in writing, in response to Morgan Stanley's motion to compel CPH's response to this interrogatory. Without waiving those objections, and in accordance with the Court's March 22, 2004 order, CPH supplements its response as follows. If no time of day appears in the response, CPH contends that Morgan Stanley knew the representations were false and/or misleading when made, but CPH is unable, at this point in its investigation, to specify the time of day Morgan Stanley knew the misrepresentations were false and/or misleading.

INTERROGATORY 1: For each and every alleged misrepresentation identified by you in your response to Interrogatory No. 3 of MS & Co.'s First Set of Interrogatories to CPH, identify with particularity the date and time that you contend MS & Co. knew the alleged representation to be false or misleading, and identify with particularity the event(s), document(s), or circumstance(s) under which you contend MS & Co. obtained that knowledge, including the identity of the person(s) you contend provided and obtained that knowledge.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE:

(i) The "Discussion Materials" and Strategic Plan furnished February 23, 1998.

Morgan Stanley knew no later than February 23, 1998 that the Discussion Materials and Strategic Plan were false and/or misleading.

(ii) The misrepresentations listed as bullet points in Plaintiff's Response to Interrogatory No. 3 of Defendant's First Set of Interrogatories, namely:

- Sunbeam would meet or exceed Wall Street's first quarter 1998 earnings estimates.
- Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were tracking fine.
- Wall Street analysts' 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct.
- They were quite confident that Sunbeam would earn $2.20 per share in 1998.
- Sunbeam was on track for 1998.
- The increase in earnings from 1997 to 1998 was based on cost decreases that already had been accomplished.

- Sunbeam's turnaround was real.
- Sunbeam would have $341 million in grill revenue in 1998.
- Sunbeam's "early buy" sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues.
- The stock portion of the transaction represented consideration worth approximately $600 million.
- Sunbeam's 1998 and 1999 business plan was easily achievable, probably low.
- Sunbeam's new air and water products worked.
- Sunbeam's air and water products would add approximately $100 million in revenue in 1998.

Morgan Stanley knew no later than February 23, 1998 that the representations were false and/or misleading.

OBJECTIONS TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S FOURTH SET OF REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Rule 1.370 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure and the Court's October 14, 2004 Order, objects and responds to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley's") Fourth Set of Requests for Admission ("Requests for Admission") as follows:

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH objects on the basis that Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission violate Rule 1.370(a) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, as amended by 2003 Florida Court Order 18 and effective January 1, 2004, which limits the number of requests for admission to 30 requests.

2. CPH objects on the basis that Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission are untimely. The Requests for Admission were served by facsimile at 9:32 p.m. on October 25, 2004. Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.080(b)(5), service shall be deemed to have been made on October 26, 2004, which is less than 30 days prior to the deadline of November 24, 2004 for completing fact discovery.

3. CPH objects to the Requests for Admission on the basis that they are vague, ambiguous, overly broad, unduly burdensome, oppressive, abusive, vexatious, and excessively time consuming as written.

4. CPH objects to the Requests for Admission to the extent that they seek information not in CPH's possession, custody, or control.

5. CPH objects to the Requests for Admission to the extent that the definitions, instructions, or the requests themselves incorrectly characterize the facts and evidence to be presented in this case.

6. CPH objects to the Requests for Admission to the extent that they assume, imply, or require any legal conclusions.

7. CPH objects to the definition of "CPH" as ambiguous and overly broad. CPH will construe the term "CPH" to mean Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.

8. CPH objects to the definition of "Coleman Transaction" as vague, ambiguous, and overly broad to the extent that it includes "all related communications, agreements, and financing transactions." CPH will construe the term "Coleman Transaction" to mean the transaction by which CPH transferred its interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. to Sunbeam.

9. CPH objects to the definition of "February 23, 1998 Letter" as a mischaracterization of the evidence and an incorrect reflection of the record. CPH will construe the term "February 23, 1998 Letter" as the letter marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 307.

10. CPH objects to the definition of "February 27, 1998 Company Agreement" as vague, ambiguous, and overly broad to the extent that it includes "all . . . documents related to those Agreements." CPH will construe the term "February 27, 1998 Company Agreement" to mean the Agreement and Plan of Merger dated February 27, 1998 among Sunbeam Corp., Camper Acquisition Corp., and The Coleman Company, Inc.

11. CPH objects to the definition of "Mafco" as ambiguous and overly broad. CPH will construe the term "Mafco" to mean MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

12. CPH responds to these Requests for Admission subject to and without waiving these Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth herein, these Initial Objections into each of its responses.

Request No. 16: Between December 1, 1997 and March 31, 1998, Sunbeam made the only proposal to CPH or Coleman's shareholders to acquire Coleman in whole or in part, whether by purchase of stock or assets.

RESPONSE: Admitted. Answering further, CPH states that it had not solicited any proposal to acquire Coleman; it was content to retain, as of March 1998, its interest in Coleman; and it had no reason to expect that anyone would make a proposal to acquire Coleman, where the 82% owner had not expressed a desire to sell.

Request No. 17: A Sunbeam representative orally presented Sunbeam's Long Range Strategic Plan on February 23, 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH admits that the Long Range Strategic Plan was presented on February 23, 1998 by Sunbeam representatives, as well as Morgan Stanley representatives, in both oral and written form, and otherwise denies this Request.

Request No. 18: Each of the following statements in CPH Exhibit 9 is a statement of subjective opinion:

RESPONSE: CPH has made a reasonable inquiry into the documents in its possession and conducted searches of an electronic database, but has not been able to locate a copy of the Oppenheimer research report dated December 11, 1997. Accordingly, CPH lacks knowledge or information sufficient to answer this request and therefore denies this request. Answering further, CPH states that Morgan Stanley adopted and vouched for the statements contained on pages of CP 026296 and CP 026297 of CPH Exhibit 9.

Request No. 20: Each of the following statements, which CPH alleges were made on February 23, 1998, is a projection of future performance:

- (b) that Sunbeam's 1998 revenues were expected to increase by 34 percent over 1997 levels;
- (c) that Sunbeam's 1999 revenues were expected to increase 25 percent over 1998 levels;
- (d) that Sunbeam's gross was expected to increase by 31 percent in both 1998 and 1999;
- (e) that Sunbeam would "meet or exceed Wall Street's expectations for Sunbeam's earnings estimates" for 1998;
- (f) that "analysts' favorable 1998 earnings estimates of $1.90 to $2.12 per share were low"; or
- (g) that "Sunbeam's plan to earn $2.20 per share in 1998 were easily achievable and probably low."

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that the facts known to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley rendered those statements false.

Request No. 21: A statement made on March 19, 1998 that Sunbeam's net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates is a projection of future performance.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that the facts known to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley rendered this statement false.

Request No. 22: A statement made on March 19, 1998 that Sunbeam's net sales for the first quarter of 1998 are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales is a projection of future performance.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that the facts known to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley rendered this statement false.

Request No. 23: CPH or Mafco requested Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration for CPH's interest in Coleman.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that it wanted and accepted Sunbeam stock based on Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's representations concerning the condition and performance of Sunbeam.

Request No. 24: CPH or Mafco requested expedited Hart-Scott-Rodino approval for the Transaction to allow the Transaction to close before or at the end of the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH admits that MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. requested expedited Hart-Scott-Rodino approval of Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH's interest in The Coleman Company, Inc., but states that it did so at Sunbeam's request.

Request No. 25: Between February 27, 1998 and March 30, 1998 CPH did not exercise its rights, pursuant to section 6.7 of the February 27, 1998 Agreement, to access Sunbeam's books, records, properties, plants, and personnel.

RESPONSE: Denied.

Request No. 26: The documents listed in the attached Exhibits A and B are what they purport to be or are otherwise true and authentic copies of original documents within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.901.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request on the basis that it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, oppressive, abusive, vexatious, and excessively time consuming as written.

Exhibits A and B contain thousands of pages of documents, including documents plainly authored by Morgan Stanley and third parties. However, CPH does not dispute the authenticity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.901 of the documents listed in Exhibits A and B. However, unless specifically stated, CPH denies the authenticity of all handwritten marginalia.

Request No. 27. The documents listed in the attached Exhibits A and B are business records within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request on the basis that it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, oppressive, abusive, vexatious, and excessively time consuming as written. Exhibits A and B contain thousands of pages of documents, including documents plainly authored by Morgan Stanley and third parties. CPH does not dispute that the documents listed in Exhibit 1 attached to this response meet the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(6)(a); however, unless specifically stated, CPH denies that all handwritten marginalia meets the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(6)(a). CPH denies that the documents listed in Exhibit 1 attached to this response meet the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(6)(b). As to the remaining documents listed in Exhibits A and B attached to Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission, CPH denies that or lacks knowledge or information sufficient to determine whether those documents meet the requirements of Florida Evidence Code ¶ 90.803(6).

Request No. 28: CPH authored the documents listed in the attached Exhibit B.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request on the basis that it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, oppressive, abusive, vexatious, and excessively time consuming as written. Exhibit B includes thousands of pages of documents, including documents plainly authored by Morgan

Stanley and third parties. CPH admits that MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., CPH, CLN Holdings, or Coleman Worldwide authored the documents listed in Exhibit 2 attached to this response; however, unless specifically stated, CPH denies that that it authored all handwritten marginalia. CPH denies that it authored the remaining documents listed in Exhibit B to Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission.

IN THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AMENDED
SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY
& CO. INC.'S FIFTH SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.340 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure amends its supplemental response and objection to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley's") Fifth Set of Interrogatories ("Interrogatories") No. 2 as follows:

INTERROGATORY 2: Identify all communications between Coleman, CPH, or Mafco (or any of their attorneys or financial advisors) and Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Morgan Stanley, or Skadden Arps between March 19, 1998 and March 30, 1998 concerning Sunbeam's sales during the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 Press Release, or any of the information contained in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 Press Release.

AMENDED SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE: CPH incorporates the Initial Objections set forth in its November 24, 2004 responses and objections to Morgan Stanley's Fifth Set of Interrogatories. Subject to and without waiving those Initial Objections, CPH supplements its prior interrogatory response concerning the communications between representatives of CPH and Coleman, on the one hand, and representatives of Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley, on the other hand, following the issuance of the March 19, 1998 press release:

Although no witness thus far recalls specifically who from CPH, Coleman, or CSFB spoke directly to Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley following the issuance of the March 19, 1998 press release, numerous witnesses, including Messrs. Perelman, Gittis, Drapkin, Schwartz, Maher, Nesbitt, and Shapiro, each have testified that those discussions concerning the March 19, 1998 release occurred. Those witnesses recall and believe that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley provided assurances about Sunbeam's condition and prospects in the wake of the March 19, 1998 press release. Indeed, Mr. Perelman testified that he personally may have had those discussions. Further, Gordon Rich, the senior Credit Suisse First Boston investment banker working with Coleman on the transaction, died in November 2000 and therefore, CPH has not been able to ascertain whether Mr. Rich had any discussions with Morgan Stanley concerning the March 19, 1998 press release.

In addition to those direct discussions, Mr. Nesbitt and others examined analyst reaction to the March 19, 1998 press release and advised representatives of CPH and Coleman that analysts were reporting the same information that those individuals recall was provided directly to CPH and Coleman by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley. The information provided to CPH and Coleman and repeated by analysts included statements by Sunbeam management that the March 19, 1998 press release had been issued out of an abundance of caution, solely at the behest of legal counsel, because of the debenture offering and not because there was any problem at Sunbeam that cast any doubt on Sunbeam's previous statements concerning sales or earnings.

Further answering, CPH notes that Morgan Stanley has extensively questioned many witnesses on this topic and therefore incorporates by reference all of that deposition testimony including but not limited to the testimony of Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, Donald Drapkin, Barry Schwartz, James Maher, William Nesbitt, and Paul Shapiro.

Investigation continues.

4th Quarter Issues:

- * Jump in Inventories supposedly relates to finished goods that SOC plans to ship in Oct/Nov.
- * Also supposedly a result of initiatives to improve "on-time and complete" delivery record.
- * Note that restructuring accrual balance at September was $20.1M vs $43.7M at year-end 96.
- * Uptick in 3rd quarter receivables supposedly relates to 1/2 of quarter sales being shipped in September.
 - 77% of 3rd quarter sales were on net 60 days or better, 75% of September's sales were on net-30.
- * Another concern has been international pipeline filling.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant.

CONFIDENTIAL - FILE UNDER SEAL

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 3 AND SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NUMBER 5 OF MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, and the Court's October 14, 2004 Order, hereby supplements its responses to Interrogatory No. 3 and No. 5 of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley") First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Identify with particularity all misrepresentations by MS & Co. that CPH intends to rely upon at trial and state, with respect to each such statement, the date and time the representation was made; the document, setting or circumstances in which the representation was made; the person(s) who made the representations; the exact wording of the misrepresentation; and all reasons why CPH believes the misrepresentation was false when it was made.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE: CPH incorporates by reference the Initial Objections set forth in its response to MS& Co.'s First Set of Interrogatories and the Further Objections set forth in response to Interrogatory No. 3. CPH supplements its prior response with the following information:

Morgan Stanley made and substantially assisted Sunbeam in making numerous misrepresentations concerning Sunbeam's "turn-around," condition, and prospects during the roadshows Morgan Stanley that conducted to sell the Sunbeam subordinated debentures that were used to pay for Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. William Nesbitt, a representative of CPH, attended Morgan Stanley's roadshow presentation in New York on March 18, 1998. At that meeting, Mr. Nesbitt was given a set of Morgan Stanley's presentation materials, which he distributed to other CPH representatives, including Howard Gittis. The oral presentation scripted by Morgan Stanley and the written materials prepared and distributed by Morgan Stanley (MS Ex. 193) included the following misrepresentations: the "Dunlap Value Creation Model" chart (pg. 6); Sunbeam completed its restructuring in July 1997 (pg. 6); the "Sunbeam Today" table (pg. 8); Dunlap had been "very successful at turning [Sunbeam] around" (pg. 8); Sunbeam had "record levels of revenues and earnings" (pg. 8); the "Sunbeam Phase II - Refine and Grow" chart (pg. 10); Sunbeam "was successful at accelerating the growth and improvement throughout" 1997 (pg. 10); and Dunlap had "fixed" Sunbeam's underlying business such that Sunbeam had a "strong base from which [Sunbeam could] now grow" (pg. 10). Morgan Stanley knew that these representations were false by at least March 18, 1998 as a result of the information that Morgan Stanley learned in connection with the due diligence it was required to perform in underwriting the sale of Sunbeam's subordinated debentures. That due diligence included Morgan Stanley's discussions with Arthur Andersen and its review of Arthur Andersen's draft comfort letters.

Morgan Stanley made numerous misrepresentations in the red herring and the final offering memorandum for Sunbeam's subordinated debentures. Those materials falsely portrayed Sunbeam as a company that had been successfully turned-around and the final offering memorandum repeated verbatim the text of the false and misleading March 19, 1998 press release in its "recent developments" section. Morgan Stanley knew that those representations were false when made as a result of the information that Morgan Stanley learned in connection with the due diligence it was required to perform in underwriting the sale of Sunbeam's subordinated debentures. That due diligence included Morgan Stanley's discussions with Arthur Andersen and its review of Arthur Andersen's draft comfort letters.

Following the issuance of the March 19, 1998 press release, Morgan Stanley provided false assurances to the public and CPH's representatives concerning Sunbeam's condition and prospects. Morgan Stanley, directly and through Sunbeam, falsely advised financial analysts, CPH and other investors that the March 19, 1998 press release had been issued out of an abundance of caution, solely at the behest of legal counsel, because of the debenture offering and not because there was a problem at Sunbeam that cast any doubt on Sunbeam's previous projections of sales or earnings. Morgan Stanley stood with and vouched for Sunbeam as Sunbeam reassured investors that the only reason that the press release was issued was because of the debt offering, that Sunbeam's retail sales were "strong," and Sunbeam was on track for revenues and earnings. (CPH Ex. 75 at SB 18225). Morgan Stanley knew that those representations were false at the time they were made as a result of information that Morgan Stanley obtained through its due diligence investigation of Sunbeam, including Morgan Stanley's review of Arthur Andersen's draft and final comfort letters and the list of "forecasted" and "potential" orders it received from Donald Uzzi on March 18, 1998.

The March 25, 1998 press release, which touted the closing of the subordinated debenture offering, misrepresented Sunbeam's condition and prospects by failing to alert financial analysts, CPH, and other investors to Sunbeam's worsening condition. Morgan Stanley knew that the March 25, 1998 press release falsely depicted Sunbeam's condition and prospects at the time the March 25, 1998 press release was issued as a result of information that Morgan Stanley obtained through its due diligence investigation of Sunbeam, including Morgan Stanley's review of Arthur Andersen's draft and final March 19, 1998 comfort letters, draft and final March 25, 1998 comfort letters, the list of "forecasted" and "potential" orders it received from Donald Uzzi on March 18, 1998, and the "bring-down" due diligence conference it conducted with Sunbeam.

Further answering, CPH incorporates by reference the following: (a) CPH's original, amended, and supplemental responses to Morgan Stanley's Fourth Set of Interrogatories, No. 1; (b) CPH's Amended Supplement Response to Morgan Stanley's Fifth Set of Interrogatories; (c) CPH's original and supplemental response to Morgan Stanley's Second Set of Interrogatories, No. 6; (d) CPH's Response in Opposition to Morgan Stanley's Motion for Summary Judgment; (e) CPH's Motion to Amend Complaint to Seek Punitive Damages; (f) CPH's Reply in Support of its Motion to Amend Pleadings and Seek Punitive Damages; (g) the depositions of Blaine Fogg, Ruth Porat, Michael Hart, Bram Smith, John Tyree, William Strong, Andrew Savarie, Eugene Yoo, Lawrence Bornstein, Philip Harlow, Dennis Pastrana, William Pruitt, James Lurie, Heather Stack, Alan Dean, Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, Paul Shapiro, Jerry Levin, James Maher, and William Nesbitt and the exhibits used during those depositions; and (h) the term sheets that Morgan Stanley provided to CPH, Coleman, CSFB, and Wachtell.

Investigation continues.

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Identify all transactions since 1993 in which CPH or MAFCO, or any company owned, controlled, or affiliated with CPH or MAFCO, has received stock as any portion of the consideration for the transaction.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE: CPH incorporates by reference the Initial Objections set forth in its response to MS& Co.'s First Set of Interrogatories and the Further Objections set forth in response to Interrogatory No. 5. CPH supplements its prior response with the following additional material transactions:

Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.,
Defendant(s).

CPH'S RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S SECOND SET OF REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys and pursuant to Rule 1.370 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") Second Set of Requests for Admission ("Requests for Admission") dated February 16, 2004:

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH objects to the definition of "CPH" as ambiguous and overly broad. CPH will construe the term "CPH" to mean Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.

2. CPH objects to the definition of "MAFCO" as ambiguous and overly broad. CPH will construe the term "MAFCO" to mean MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

3. CPH objects to Morgan Stanley's use of the term "due-diligence investigation" as vague and ambiguous. CPH further objects to the term insofar as it purports to relate to the standard of care applicable to any investigation addressed in the requests for admission.

4. CPH objects to the term "Accounting Irregularities" as vague and misleading in the context of these requests for admission as it purports to divert attention from Morgan Stanley's direct involvement in the fraud alleged in this case.

5. CPH objects on the basis that Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission violate Rule 1.370(a) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, as amended by 2003 Florida Court Order 18 and effective January 1, 2004, which limits the number of requests for admission to 30 requests. Morgan Stanley previously served 273 requests (excluding subparts) in its First Set of Requests for Admission, and with this Second Set, now has served a total of 296 requests.

6. CPH responds to Morgan Stanley's Requests for Admission subject to and without waiving these Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES AND FURTHER OBJECTIONS

1. CPH retained Credit Suisse First Boston as its exclusive financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that prior to the completion of the Coleman Transaction, CPH owned 82% of the shares of Coleman, which retained Credit Suisse First Boston to act as a financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

2. Coleman retained Credit Suisse First Boston as its exclusive financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

3. MAFCO retained Credit Suisse First Boston as its exclusive financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that MAFCO is the indirect owner of CPH, and prior to the completion of the Coleman Transaction, CPH owned 82% of the shares of Coleman, which retained Credit Suisse First Boston to act as a financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

4. Credit Suisse First Boston had the ability in 1997 and 1998 to conduct a due-diligence investigation sufficient to detect Accounting Irregularities at Sunbeam.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. Answering further, CPH did not retain Credit Suisse First Boston in connection with the Coleman Transaction. CPH further states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did and therefore denies this request.

5. Credit Suisse First Boston had the ability in 1997 and 1998 to conduct a due-diligence investigation sufficient to detect the falsity of the misrepresentations alleged in the Complaint.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. Answering further, CPH did not retain Credit Suisse First Boston in connection with the Coleman Transaction. CPH further states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did and therefore denies this request.

6. CPH retained Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz as its legal advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

7. Coleman retained Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz as its legal advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

8. MAFCO retained Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz as its legal advisor in the Coleman Transaction.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

9. Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz had the ability in 1997 and 1998 to conduct a due-diligence investigation sufficient to detect Accounting Irregularities at Sunbeam.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. Answering further, it is not customary for lawyers to conduct "due diligence" of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. CPH further states that Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did. In all other respects, this request is denied.

10. Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz had the ability in 1997 and 1998 to conduct a due-diligence investigation sufficient to detect the falsity of the misrepresentations alleged in the Complaint.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. Answering further, it is not customary for lawyers to conduct "due diligence" of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. CPH further states that

022578

Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did. In all other respects, this request is denied.

11. Any reasonable due-diligence investigation by Credit Suisse First Boston in the first quarter of 1998 would have been sufficient to detect Accounting Irregularities at Sunbeam.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. CPH further objects to the term “[a]ny reasonable due-diligence investigation” as vague and ambiguous. Answering further, CPH did not retain Credit Suisse First Boston in connection with the Coleman Transaction. CPH further states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did and therefore denies this request.

12. Any reasonable due-diligence investigation by Credit Suisse First Boston in the first quarter of 1998 would have been sufficient to detect the falsity of the misrepresentations alleged in the Complaint.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. CPH further objects to the term “[a]ny reasonable due-diligence investigation” as vague and ambiguous. Answering further, CPH did not retain Credit Suisse First Boston in connection with the Coleman Transaction. CPH further states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did and therefore denies this request.

13. Any reasonable due-diligence investigation by Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz in the first quarter of 1998 would have been sufficient to detect Accounting Irregularities at Sunbeam.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. CPH further objects to the term “[a]ny reasonable due-diligence investigation” as vague and ambiguous. Answering further, it is not customary for lawyers to conduct “due diligence” of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. CPH further states that Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did. In all other respects, this request is denied.

14. Any reasonable due-diligence investigation by Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz in the first quarter of 1998 would have been sufficient to detect the falsity of the misrepresentations alleged in the Complaint.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as an incomplete hypothetical with unstated assumptions. CPH further objects to the term “[a]ny reasonable due-diligence investigation” as vague and ambiguous. Answering further, it is not customary for lawyers to conduct “due diligence” of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. CPH further states that Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did. In all other respects, this request is denied.

15. CPH did not ask Credit Suisse First Boston to perform a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: Admitted. Answering further, CPH states that prior to the completion of the Coleman Transaction, CPH owned 82% of the shares of Coleman, which retained Credit Suisse First Boston to act as a financial advisor for the Coleman Transaction.

16. CPH did not ask Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz to perform a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it is not customary for lawyers to conduct “due diligence” of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. Answering further, CPH denies this request because Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz performed customary legal services in connection with the Coleman Transaction.

17. Coleman did not ask Credit Suisse First Boston to perform a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did.

18. Coleman did not ask Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz to perform a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it is not customary for lawyers to conduct “due diligence” of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. Answering further, CPH denies this request because Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz performed customary legal services in connection with the Coleman Transaction.

20. MAFCO did not ask Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz to perform a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it is not customary for lawyers to conduct "due diligence" of the type conducted by investment bankers, such as Morgan Stanley. Answering further, CPH denies this request because Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz performed customary legal services in connection with the Coleman Transaction.

21. Credit Suisse First Boston did not conduct a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: Denied. Answering further, CPH states that Credit Suisse First Boston did not have the same responsibilities and relationship with Sunbeam as Morgan Stanley did.

22. Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz did not conduct a due-diligence investigation into Sunbeam in the first quarter of 1998.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it is not customary for lawyers to conduct "due diligence" of the type conducted by investment bankers such as Morgan Stanley. Answering further, CPH denies this request because Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz performed customary legal services in connection with the Coleman Transaction.

23. Neither CPH nor its attorneys are in possession of the letter alleged to have been faxed to Morgan Stanley from Arthur Andersen on March 17, 1998, as described in paragraph 56 in CPH's Complaint.

RESPONSE: CPH denies this request because it believes that one or more of the pre-March 19 drafts of the Arthur Andersen comfort letter were communicated to Morgan Stanley on or about March 17, 1998, and pre-March 19 drafts of the comfort letter have been produced in this litigation. Answering further, CPH states that (a) CPH's attorneys have in their possession pre-

March 19 drafts of the Arthur Andersen comfort letter; (b) there has been testimony in this case that drafts of the comfort letter were sent to Morgan Stanley prior to March 19, 1998; and (c) Morgan Stanley's counsel have prepared a chronology in which they reveal that Morgan Stanley's counsel had the draft comfort letter no later than March 18, 1998.

I. Background and Qualifications

1. I am a financial economist and the President of Stanford Consulting Group, Inc., which provides research and consulting services in financial economics and related areas to clients, including government agencies, corporations, and law firms. I have a B.A. degree in physics from Stanford University, an M.S. degree in physics from the University of Washington, an M.B.A. degree from Stanford, and a Ph.D. in finance from Stanford. I have served as a consultant or expert witness in the areas of market efficiency, materiality, causation, and damages in a number of securities actions. My curriculum vitae is attached as Exhibit 1. During the past five years I have provided expert testimony in trial or by deposition in the matters listed in Exhibit 2. My publications are listed in my curriculum vitae (Exhibit 1).

2. The fees charged Plaintiff for this project are the standard hourly rates of employees of Stanford Consulting Group, Inc. My current hourly rate is $550. My compensation is in no way contingent upon the outcome of this litigation.

II. Bases for Opinion

3. I have been retained by counsel for Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("Plaintiff") in this action to provide expert opinions on the losses incurred by Plaintiff when it received 14,099,749 shares of the common stock of Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam") on March 30, 1998 in partial exchange for its 44,067,520 shares, or 82% interest, ("the Exchange") in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman"). Plaintiff entered into the Exchange in reliance upon representations made by Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley"). I understand that Coleman also received consideration in the form of cash and debt relief in this transaction. If called to testify, I will offer my opinions on the losses incurred by Plaintiff.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

4. My opinions are based upon my professional knowledge and experience, as well as on a review of documents and information relevant to this matter, and analysis of data. Documents considered are listed in Exhibit 3. Documents and other materials upon which I have relied as a basis for my opinions are cited in this report and its exhibits; all documents and materials are the type typically relied upon by experts in preparing this type of report. Analyses that are bases for my opinions are described in this report and its exhibits and results of those analyses are contained in this report and its exhibits.

5. The materials I have relied upon include, in general categories: Plaintiff's Complaint and other pleadings, news reports, SEC filings, analysts' reports, daily stock price and volume data, company-specific shareholding data, and daily market and industry index prices. These are the types of materials and data typically relied upon by economists to examine the effects of public information on changes in stock prices and the relationships between changes in stock prices, newly released information, and changes in market and industry effects, as well as testing for evidence of market efficiency.

6. It is my understanding that discovery is continuing in this matter. I may review additional information and documents, including information and documents that may become available through discovery and the reports and depositions of other witnesses or expert witnesses. The opinions offered in this report are subject to refinement or revision based on any additional analysis of the documents and information listed above, as well as new or additional information that may be provided to or obtained by me in the course of this matter. I may be called upon to offer opinions on any opinions rendered by expert witnesses that Morgan Stanley retains that relate to the opinions expressed in this report.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

III. Assumptions

7. In calculating the losses incurred by Plaintiff in this matter, I have been asked to assume (and have assumed) the following:

- a) Sunbeam misrepresented, omitted, and/or failed to correct in its public filings and statements, information regarding Sunbeam's revenues and that Sunbeam's accounting practices were not in compliance with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"); Morgan Stanley was aware that Sunbeam made material misrepresentations to the public and to Plaintiff, and Morgan Stanley also made materially false and misleading statements directly to Plaintiff. Information provided by Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley to Plaintiff that was known by Morgan Stanley to be incorrect—and upon which the Exchange was premised—was materially false and misleading.
- b) Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam's and Morgan Stanley's statements regarding the Sunbeam turnaround in 1997 were false and misleading. Morgan Stanley knew that the public description of Sunbeam's alleged growth and successful turnaround was false. Morgan Stanley knew that Sunbeam pulled 1998 sales into 1997 in order to falsely portray itself as having a successful turnaround in its financial condition. The result was that investors, including Plaintiff, based Sunbeam's expected revenues and projected earnings on false and misleading statements made by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley.

- c) By March 19, 1998, at the latest, Morgan Stanley was on notice from Sunbeam's outside auditor that sales for the first two months of 1998 were approximately $72.0 million compared to $143.5 million in the year-ago period, and compared to analysts' expectations that full-quarter sales would be $285-$295 million; that the auditor primarily attributed the difference in sales to the early buy program which accelerated grill sales into 1997; that Sunbeam's debt was increasing; and that Q1 1998 through March 1 was operating at a loss as compared to a reported profit in the year-ago period. Morgan Stanley understood that disclosure of these facts would jeopardize the upcoming purchase of Coleman.
- d) Morgan Stanley assisted in the preparation and dissemination of the March 19, 1998 press release, which did not disclose the material information known to it, nor cause Sunbeam to do so, either in the press release or in separate communications with Plaintiff, thus misleading Plaintiff and inducing Plaintiff into closing the transaction.

IV. Summary of Opinions and Expected Testimony

A. Materiality and causation

8. Material information is that information which a reasonable investor would want to know in making investment decisions. The price of a share in a public company reflects the information then available in the market about the company. Share price is the present value, on a per-share basis, of the expected future earnings stream of a company that would accrue to the company's shareholders and embodies market expectations about the company's future earnings growth. For the share price to accurately and properly reflect those expectations, the statements to the market by company representatives, directly or indirectly, must be accurate and not misrepresent, omit, or mislead the market on material facts. Additional non-public information may be available to the parties in confidential negotiations such as those between Plaintiff, on one hand, and Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam, on the other hand. Participants in such a financial transaction take all this information—including both public and confidential material—into account in determining whether or not to conclude a deal. Public disclosure at any earlier time of the material information that Plaintiff alleges was misrepresented or omitted would have caused Sunbeam's common stock to trade at lower prices, demonstrating an unbiased assessment of Sunbeam's true value, which should have been disclosed to Plaintiff. Furthermore, Plaintiff could have acted on that knowledge, in refusing to conclude the sale on the proposed terms, even if important information had not been properly disseminated to the public.

022597

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

B. Losses attributable to the alleged misrepresentations and fraud

9. Plaintiff entered into a merger agreement with Sunbeam based on what it could evaluate in the negotiations and learn from the public domain. Once the agreement was signed, Plaintiff was entitled to exit the agreement upon occurrence of a pre-closing material adverse event. Given (as Plaintiff contends) that Sunbeam common stock was trading at artificially inflated prices at the time of the Exchange, and that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley withheld material information from Plaintiff, Morgan Stanley caused Plaintiff to incur monetary losses.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

10. My estimate of losses incurred by Plaintiff is approximately $680 million, excluding prejudgment interest, and approximately $1,090 million, including prejudgment interest. In calculating interest (simple, not compounded), I have used the Statutory Interest Rates pursuant to Section 55.03, Florida Statutes. (See Exhibit 4 for a summary of the calculations. See Exhibit 5 for the statutory interest rates.) My estimate of losses incurred by Plaintiff assuming it could have registered and sold shares in Q1 2000 is approximately $635 million, excluding prejudgment interest, and approximately $1,024 million, including prejudgment interest. (See Exhibit 4.)

11. Plaintiff received certain offsets which should be taken into account. The value of a confidential cash settlement should be subtracted from the losses; the settlement amount including prejudgment interest from the date of that settlement, would be subtracted from the amount of losses including prejudgment interest. Receipt of warrants in August 1998 has been considered, but Plaintiff could not have realized any value through exercise of these warrants.

C. Market efficiency

12. Based on my review of the evidence in this matter and analysis of data specific to Sunbeam and its common stock, I conclude that the market for Sunbeam common stock was open, developed, and efficient during the years 1997 and 1998, which encompass the events at issue in this matter.

V. Summary of Evidence in Support of Opinions

A. Materiality and causation

13. Share price is a function of a company's expected future economic earnings, i.e., the expected future free cash flow to investors. Free cash flow is that cash flow on which there are no other claims—not from suppliers, creditors, employees, government in the form of taxes, or from others—and hence is a return to equity investors for their investment and the risk they have borne. This cash flow can be distributed to equity investors as dividends or special distributions and/or as appreciation in share price realized at sale of the stock. In other words, a company's share price is the present value of future cash flows expected by its equity investors, discounted for risk and the time value of money. If market expectations for a company's future economic earnings change, the company's share price will change. If the expected growth rate of future economic earnings increases, share price increases; if the expected growth rate decreases or becomes negative, share price decreases.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

14. Material information is that information which a reasonable investor would want to know in making investment decisions. Such material information is likely to include: historical and current revenues, expenses, and earnings (as they convey information about future trends) and changes in revenue, expense, and earnings trends. Based on public information from Sunbeam management and Morgan Stanley, the turnaround at Sunbeam was thought by investors to have been successful. The public information regarding Sunbeam's purported successful turnaround would have been used by investors and Plaintiff to evaluate and project Sunbeam's expected future financial condition and financial performance. In addition, Morgan Stanley provided Plaintiff information of the same type in the private forum of confidential negotiations, as evidenced by statements from Morgan Stanley's Discussion Materials about Sunbeam prepared in February 1998. The segment on Investment Rationale states that: "Sunbeam represents an attractive growth story and investment opportunity"; "Sunbeam has undergone a profound transformation since the arrival of new management in July 1996"; and that there is "tremendous intrinsic value in the Company".¹

15. The misrepresentations and omissions made or assisted by Morgan Stanley were material. Misrepresentations and omissions by Sunbeam management and Morgan Stanley concerning revenues and earnings, as well as those concerning prospects for revenues and earnings growth, shaped Plaintiff's, as well as the market's, expectations regarding Sunbeam's future earnings stream and therefore were material in determining the observable public share price. Information about Sunbeam's revenues, earnings, and prospects also would have entered into Plaintiff's consideration of the fairness of the proposed deal. The alleged misrepresentations and omissions regarding Sunbeam's financial position and its reported revenues and earnings, had the effect of inflating the price of Sunbeam's common stock prior to the Exchange. Morgan Stanley was aware of this information, including that sales had been pulled in from later quarters such that reported earnings were not actually representative of Sunbeam's financial position, and that the supposed turnaround was not really a success.

16. Plaintiff could reasonably rely on the prevailing market price as an independent assessment of Sunbeam's value—for which it was exchanging its own valuable asset, a majority ownership of Coleman. However, if material information is hidden from the market, it will not be incorporated into the share price. Instead, the market was pricing what it believed to be the overall result of the business combinations Sunbeam announced when it disclosed the Coleman transaction along with two smaller acquisitions.

B. Losses attributable to the alleged misrepresentations and fraud

17. Plaintiff received 14.1 million Sunbeam shares which it anticipated were worth approximately $48.26 per share based on the average of the closing prices of Sunbeam stock from the date the agreement was announced until the closing date, i.e., March 2, 1998, to March 30, 1998. This value reflects the average market consensus during the period when the market could consider the effects of the proposed transactions. Thus, Plaintiff could reasonably expect that the total value of the shares it would receive in the Exchange was approximately $680 million.

18. It is my understanding that Plaintiff had the right to terminate the proposed Exchange transaction for a material adverse change in Sunbeam's financial condition. It is my understanding that had Morgan Stanley timely informed Plaintiff of the information it had learned from Sunbeam's outside auditor, Plaintiff would have canceled the proposed Exchange transaction. It is my understanding that Plaintiff has not sold any Sunbeam shares to date and that such shares were cancelled or became worthless when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy on February 5, 2001.

19. Plaintiff suffered losses from the transaction it was fraudulently induced to complete. Sunbeam's average closing share price was approximately $48.26 during the period when the public market was aware that the Exchange had been agreed upon. Plaintiff received 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam common stock; thus Plaintiff's loss is approximately $680 million. (See Exhibit 4.)

20. In this matter, I have used Florida statutory interest rates from the time of acquisition, i.e., March 30, 1998, to the present, i.e., December 7, 2004. I expect to update my interest calculations at the time of trial as needed. Aggregate losses with interest are approximately $1,090 million. (See Exhibit 4.)

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

(i) Losses if Stock Could Have Been Sold as of Q1 2000

21. The common stock received in the Exchange had restrictions. According to the Agreement and Plan of Merger among Sunbeam Corporation, Laser Acquisition Corp., CLN Holdings Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., dated February 27, 1998, ("Merger Agreement") Plaintiff could not register and sell its shares immediately after the closing of the Exchange. The schedule, compared to the Effective Time (presumably the March 30, 1998 closing date) was: three months following the Effective Time (June 30, 1998) Plaintiff could sell up to 25% of the shares received; after six months (September 30, 1998) up to 50% could be sold; and after nine months had elapsed (December 31, 1998), there were to be no further restrictions on registering and selling the shares acquired in the Exchange.

22. The shares issued in the Exchange were not registered at the time of the Exchange; according to Sunbeam's 1999 Form S-4/A the SEC registration process would delay the transaction, and it was deemed less disruptive to the integration of the businesses to close quickly. The agreement contemplated a subsequent transaction which would acquire the publicly-traded Coleman shares; this format would enable Sunbeam to acquire control of Coleman as quickly as possible in order to reduce disruption to Coleman's business... The two-step structure would enable Sunbeam to acquire control of Coleman more quickly than in a one-step transaction, since Sunbeam could issue shares of its common stock to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary that owned the shares of Coleman common stock without having to register the Sunbeam shares under the federal securities laws, thereby avoiding the delay inherent in the registration process. ... Sunbeam believed that it was in the best interests of its stockholders that Sunbeam acquire

Coleman for consideration consisting, at least in part, of shares of its common stock. Accordingly, Sunbeam believed that a cash tender offer for all outstanding shares of Coleman common stock, which also would have avoided the registration process, was not an acceptable alternative.²

23. Before the first restriction elapsed on June 30, 1998, Dunlap and other key Sunbeam executives had been fired and certain former Coleman personnel took over Sunbeam executive management duties. On June 25, auditor Arthur Andersen revoked its prior certification of Sunbeam's financial statements. Plaintiff would not have been able to register shares for sale into the public market because Sunbeam's financial statements had been withdrawn. On August 6, 1998, Sunbeam's audit committee announced that restatements certainly would be required for 1997, and also possibly for 1996 and the unaudited first quarter of 1998, and that the restated results should be available by the end of September.

24. Analysts recognized that no suitor was likely to buy all or significant parts of Sunbeam. As one analyst stated:

We Highly Doubt Any Buyers Would Consider A Bid For SOC Prior To Resolution Of The Restatement Of Its Financials, Quantification Of Its Shareholder Lawsuit Liabilities and Determination Of Its Inventory Write-Down – Given the recent news that SOC will now have to restate its financial statements, *we don't believe that any potential suitors would step in to buy the entire company, nor do we believe management is likely to sell individual parts of the company pending resolution of all the pending lawsuits by shareholders.*³ (emphasis in original)

25. Sunbeam noted that as of December 6, 1999, in the last 18 months there had been no "offer or proposal from an unaffiliated person regarding a merger or consolidation involving, or the acquisition of all or any substantial part of the assets of, or the acquisition of securities conferring control of, Sunbeam or Coleman.”⁴

26. On August 12, 1998, Plaintiff entered into a settlement agreement with Sunbeam whereby it ceased pursuing certain legal remedies and agreed to provide certain management services and three of Plaintiff’s executives signed three-year contracts with Sunbeam. The settlement agreement included elimination of restrictions on 75% of the shares Plaintiff received in the Exchange and extending the sales or transfer restrictions on the remaining 25% of shares to three years. However, Plaintiff was required to register its shares in order to sell them to the public.⁵ Plaintiff would not have been able to register the shares after Arthur Andersen’s withdrawal of its approval of Sunbeam’s financial statements.

27. On October 20, 1998, the results of Sunbeam’s restatement were announced for the six quarters from Q4 1996 through Q1 1998, including the existence of “accounting missteps” such as prebooking sales, bill-and-hold transactions, and excessive restructuring charges.

28. After the restatement, Sunbeam was not able to immediately complete its pending registration statements for either the public Coleman shares or for the debentures. Sunbeam received a series of letters from the SEC Division of Corporation Finance concerning its registration statements on Forms S-1 and S-4 from July 8, 1998 to October 27, 1999 to the effect that further statements and clarifications were needed before such filings could be declared effective. On November 8, 1999, the SEC declared the debenture registration statement effective.

29. On December 6, 1999, the registration statement for the Sunbeam shares received by the public shareholders of Coleman stock was declared effective. However, the final acquisition of the Coleman shares held by those shareholders was not completed until January 6, 2000.

30. For purposes of the alternative measure of damages I have assumed that Plaintiff could have registered its shares no earlier than December 6, 1999, and that the registration statement would have been approved by the SEC. If Plaintiff could have sold its Sunbeam shares when the former Coleman public shareholders could do so, i.e., during the first quarter of 2000, at an average price of $4.35 Plaintiff would have received approximately $46 million for 75% of the Sunbeam shares that were not restricted from sale or transfer. Sunbeam declared bankruptcy while the remaining 25% of Plaintiff's shares received in the Exchange remained restricted from sale or transfer.

31. Thus, if losses are to be reduced by amounts that Plaintiff might have received from the sale of its shares as early as was possible by Plaintiff, these reduced losses total approximately $635 million without prejudgment interest and approximately $1,024 million with prejudgment interest.

(ii) Potential Offsets

32. As part of the August 12, 1998 settlement agreement, Plaintiff received 5-year warrants to purchase 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at $7.00 per share. The settlement agreement restricted Plaintiff from transferring or selling 50% of the warrants received for three years. It is my understanding that within days of Plaintiff's receipt of the warrants, other Sunbeam shareholders commenced litigation against Sunbeam claiming that the settlement was unfair to them. In addition, other actions against Sunbeam were also pending. It is my understanding that, notwithstanding the fact that there were no contractual restrictions upon Plaintiff's ability to sell or transfer 50% of the warrants received in the August 1998 settlement, the lack of certified financial statements from Sunbeam and the pending litigation precluded Plaintiff from registering its warrants for sale to the public.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

33. On January 6, 2000, the holders of publicly-traded Coleman shares received warrants expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 4.98 million Sunbeam shares, also at $7.00—those warrants were freely tradable upon issuance, unlike the warrants Plaintiff received.⁶ Sunbeam's share price on January 6, 2000 was $4.125; the warrant exercise price was $7.00, thus the warrants were not in the money at that time nor at any later time.

34. According to the August 12, 1998 agreement, the warrants (and shares of common stock upon exercise of the warrants) Plaintiff received were not registered with the SEC and were subject to certain resale provisions and/or registration requirements. The need to close the warrant transaction rapidly and eliminate legal problems and management uncertainty led to a special situation requiring an NYSE exception:

The settlement normally would have required approval by Sunbeam's stockholders under the rules of the NYSE because of the issuance of the warrant as part of the settlement. However, Sunbeam's audit committee determined that the delay that would be necessary to secure stockholder approval prior to issuing the warrant would:

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

- be lengthy due to the SEC's ongoing investigation of Sunbeam's accounting practices and policies and the need to complete the restatement of Sunbeam's historical financial statements,
- inhibit Sunbeam's ability to reach a settlement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary and to retain and hire essential senior management personnel, and
- seriously jeopardize Sunbeam's financial viability.

Based on these determinations, Sunbeam's audit committee, relying on an exception provided in the applicable NYSE stockholder approval policy, expressly approved Sunbeam's omission to seek stockholder approval. The NYSE accepted Sunbeam's application of the exception.⁷

35. It was not until December 6, 1999 that Sunbeam's registration statement for the public Coleman shareholders was declared effective by the SEC; the acquisition of all the public Coleman shares was completed on January 6, 2000. However, the shares and warrants held by Plaintiff apparently were still not registered at that time.

36. In sum, given the numerous difficulties in transforming its Sunbeam warrants into cash, it is unlikely Plaintiff could have offset any of its claimed losses by attempting to monetize the warrants it received.

37. It is my understanding that there has been a confidential monetary settlement with another party in this matter; the dollar amount of that settlement should be subtracted from the losses I have calculated. From the settlement date of October 10, 2002, the settlement amount should be multiplied by 14.61% to calculate prejudgment interest. Thus, the total offset including prejudgment interest for the cash settlement is the amount of the cash settlement multiplied by 1.1461.

C. Market efficiency

38. Securities prices in efficient markets reflect the market's consensus as to fair value given all publicly available information at the time of purchase or sale. Over the past thirty years, the efficient capital markets hypothesis ("ECMH") has risen to a prominent position in financial and economic theory. In its most commonly-held form – known as "semi-strong" – the ECMH states that the securities markets incorporate all available public information. This hypothesis has been empirically validated in numerous studies.⁸ The ECMH also has stood up against its critics; while anomalies have occurred in financial markets, they are random and do not allow for trading strategies that would create abnormal profits.⁹

39. In an efficient market, market participants can rely on the market price as reflecting all available public information. In other words, the price at which a market participant can buy or sell a security is the market's consensus as to that security's fair value given all of the publicly available information known at the time of purchase or sale. Because a stock's price is a function of a company's expected future cash flows, and those expectations are based on projected future revenues and earnings, any information used by the market to evaluate future revenues and earnings is an important determinant of the market price.

⁸ See, e.g., Eugene F. Fama, "Efficient Capital Markets: A Review of Theory and Empirical Work," Journal of Finance. Volume 25, Issue 2; May, 1970; pages 383-417. In this article, Fama provides an overview of a number of studies supporting the ECMH.

⁹ Eugene F. Fama, "Market Efficiency, Long-Term Returns, and Behavioral Finance," Journal of Financial Economics. Volume 49, 1998, pages 283-306. As Fama states: "Consistent with the market efficiency hypothesis that the anomalies are chance results, apparent overreaction to information is about as common as underreaction, and post-event continuation of pre-event abnormal returns is about as frequent as post-event reversal. Most important, consistent with the market efficiency prediction that apparent anomalies can be due to methodology, most long-term return anomalies tend to disappear with reasonable changes in technique."

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

40. Thus a demonstration that Sunbeam shares trade in an efficient market leads to the presumption that the market price provides a reasonable consensus estimate of the fair value of the entire company less its liabilities (i.e., per-share price multiplied by total shares outstanding). That valuation is a proxy for what Plaintiff could expect to receive on a per-share basis were it to agree to a transaction with Sunbeam. Plaintiff could also look to the market's assessment in order to corroborate its own calculations as it considered under what circumstances it would enter into the Exchange.

41. In order to assess the presence of market efficiency, it is helpful to examine demonstrative factors. The Courts generally accept as evidence of an efficient market the results of a number of statistical findings or criteria for market efficiency. See, e.g., Cammer v. Bloom, 711 F. Supp. 1264 (D.N.J. 1989).

42. The Cammer Court found that for the market for a particular security to be efficient, the following two criteria should be met:

- a) It should trade in an open market in which anyone, or at least a large number of persons, can buy or sell.
- b) It should trade in a developed market which has a relatively high level of activity and frequency, and for which trading information (e.g., price and volume) is widely available. It usually, but not necessarily, has continuity and liquidity (the ability to absorb a reasonable amount of trading with relatively small, smooth price changes).¹⁰

43. A direct empirical test of market efficiency is to examine price responsiveness to the release of new and material information. If the security price responds quickly, the market for the security is efficient. An indirect test of informational efficiency is to examine whether the conditions that facilitate market efficiency exist. Four such conditions are:

¹⁰ Cammer, at 1276, n. 17.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

- a) The market is open and trading is facilitated by professional market makers/specialists.
- b) Information about the company's activities and prospects is readily available.
- c) Some of the shareholders are large institutions that have significant positions.
- d) The market is liquid as measured by empirical proxies for liquidity such as trading frequency, trading volume, and dollar trading volume.

44. Case precedent also exists on the indicators of market efficiency. Specifically, the Cammer Court focused on five factors to be considered in determining whether the market for a particular security is efficient.¹¹ In forming my opinion, I have considered each of the five Cammer factors as applied to the market for Sunbeam common stock.

These five Cammer factors are:

- a) whether the security trades at a high weekly volume;
- b) whether analysts follow and report on the security;
- c) whether the security has market makers;
- d) whether the company is eligible to file SEC Form S-3;¹² and ¹¹ Cammer, at 1286-87.

¹² SEC Form S-3 is a simplified form for registration of securities by companies meeting specified SEC requirements, including reporting under the 1934 Act for at least 12 months. Companies that meet these requirements may incorporate prior SEC filings by reference into current filings, rather than repeating such information, as it is deemed already to be publicly available.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

- e) whether there are empirical facts showing a cause and effect relationship between unexpected corporate events or financial releases and an immediate response in the security's price.

45. The Cammer factors address informational efficiency, i.e., whether the market conditions exist such that, when relevant information about a company is released, the prices of the company's securities can and do change to reflect the new mix of public information. Each of these five factors was applied to the market for Sunbeam common stock. Considering all five factors and other evidence, as described below, it is evident that the market for Sunbeam common stock was efficient during 1997 and 1998.

Cammer Factor 1: Weekly trading volume

46. A market is liquid if investors can trade a large number of shares on demand. The high level of trading activity associated with trading in Sunbeam common stock during 1997 and 1998 indicates that Sunbeam common stock traded in a liquid market. High trading volume generally indicates that there is sufficient interest in the company and its stock that analysts will conduct research and report their analysis to market participants. Liquidity and high trading volume also allows investors to quickly buy and sell shares when their assessments about the value of a company's stock have changed. During 1997 and 1998, the total consolidated reported trading volume of Sunbeam common stock on the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE") was 568,246,474. (See Exhibit 6 for reported prices and volume of Sunbeam common stock.)

47. According to a reference cited by the Cammer Court, "turnover measured by average weekly trading of 2% or more of the outstanding shares would justify a strong presumption that the market for the security is an efficient one; 1% would justify a substantial presumption.”¹³ For Sunbeam, the average weekly reported trading volume for weeks fully contained during the years 1997 and 1998 was 5,432,939 shares.

Sunbeam shares issued and outstanding totaled 84 million at the start of 1997 and 101 million at the end of 1998. (See Exhibit 7 for a summary of Sunbeam common stock weekly trading volume and shares outstanding.) On average, the weekly trading volume was 5.9% of shares outstanding. Thus, Sunbeam’s high weekly turnover volume justifies the presumption that the market for Sunbeam common stock is efficient.

48. The annualized turnover ratio is the annual reported trading volume divided by the number of shares outstanding. In 1997 and 1998, the average annualized turnover ratio was 69% and 76% for the NYSE.¹⁴ Total trading volume of Sunbeam common stock during 1997 and 1998 was 568 million shares, compared to 101 million shares outstanding at the end of 1998. This is an annualized turnover ratio¹⁵ of 281.6%. Thus, Sunbeam’s annualized turnover ratio was significantly larger than the average on the NYSE. (See Exhibit 7.)

49. Given the volume of trading relative to the number of shares outstanding, Sunbeam common stock experienced high weekly trading volumes. Sunbeam’s high trading volume indicates that the market for Sunbeam common stock was efficient.

Cammer Factor 2: The number of securities analysts following and reporting on Sunbeam

¹³ Cammer, at 1293, quoting Bromberg & Lowenfels, 4 Securities Fraud and Commodities Fraud (Aug. 1988).

50. Securities analysts research and report to investors on the financial condition and prospects of a covered company. In conducting their research, analysts typically have greater access to company management than do individual investors. Analysts are conduits to the market for information collected from management from on-site visits, conference calls accompanying key company announcements, and other contacts with senior management. Analysts can channel new information to the market rapidly through their published reports, online reporting services such as First Call, and alerts given to clients and other employees of the same investment firm. Analysts thus facilitate the dissemination of new information to investors and share price reaction to new information.

51. During 1997 and 1998, securities analysts from numerous firms reported on Sunbeam, including: Bear Stearns & Co., Inc.; Buckingham Research Group; CIBC Oppenheimer; Friedman, Billings, Ramsey & Co., Inc.; Goldman Sachs & Co.; McDonald & Co.; Merrill Lynch; Northern Trust Company; PaineWebber; Prudential Securities; Sands Brothers & Co., Ltd.; Standard & Poor's; and UBS Equities.¹⁶

52. During 1997 and 1998, there were at least 86 analyst reports about Sunbeam published and available to investors via one source, Reuters Research. The number of analysts covering Sunbeam and the substantial number of reports supports my opinion that the market for Sunbeam stock was efficient during 1997 and 1998.

Cammer Factor 3: The number of market makers

53. The third Cammer factor applies directly to stocks traded on Nasdaq because that exchange uses market makers to facilitate market efficiency while the NYSE uses ¹⁶ Source: Reuters Research and analyst reports provided by counsel.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

specialists to facilitate an orderly and efficient market for each security traded on the NYSE, such as Sunbeam. Market makers and specialists enable investors to trade almost instantaneously upon the arrival of new relevant information; thereby, new information can be rapidly reflected in securities prices.

54. Sunbeam was listed and traded on the New York Stock Exchange. In general, a security's listing on a national exchange means that financial information about that company is readily available to investors, at a minimum, through the company's SEC filings. Also, listing on the NYSE, AMEX, or Nasdaq means that investors have access to trading prices and volumes throughout the trading day. Rules of the national exchange also mean that investors buy at the lowest ask price and sell at the highest bid price prevailing at the time of their trade. Because a national exchange brings together many thousands (or millions) of investors, trading prices reflect the consensus opinion as to securities' values.

55. A reference cited by the Cammer Court said that "at a minimum, there should be a presumption – probably conditional for class determination – that certain markets are developed and efficient for virtually all the securities traded there: the New York and American Stock Exchanges, the Chicago Board Options Exchange and the NASDAQ National Market System."¹⁷

56. In the Cammer decision, the Court stated:

"...some may concur with [Defendant's] suggestion ... that companies listed on national stock exchanges or companies entitled to issue new securities using SEC

Form S-3 would almost by definition involve stock trading in an 'open and developed' market."¹⁸

57. The NYSE assigns one dealer, known as the specialist, to each security traded on the NYSE. These specialists are independent companies in corporate or partnership structures whose responsibilities require them to maintain a fair, competitive, orderly and efficient market for the securities assigned to them. NYSE is an agency auction market where most trading is conducted by brokers acting on behalf of customers, rather than by dealers trading for their own account. Competitive price discovery at the point of sale results from this dealer interaction. Aided by specialists, the NYSE marketplace provides all customer orders an equal opportunity to interact and receive the best price.¹⁹

58. Presently there are seven firms employing 443 specialists who specialize in more than 2,800 stocks; each specialist usually handles from five to ten listed stocks.²⁰ The last specialist of record for Sunbeam common stock before it was delisted was Walter N. Frank & Co., which was acquired by Goldman Sachs in 2002.

Cammer Factor 4: Whether Sunbeam was eligible to file SEC Form S-3

59. Form S-3 is a simplified registration form that may be used if a company has been subject to Securities Exchange Act of 1934 reporting requirements for more than one year, has filed all documents in a timely manner during the prior twelve months, and has not, since the last audited statements, failed to pay required dividends or sinking funds, nor defaulted on debts or material leases.²¹ Thus, companies that have previously provided what the SEC deems to be sufficient public information may incorporate prior filings by reference into current filings, and need not repeat such information since it is already widely publicly available. Sunbeam filed two Registration Statements on Form S-3 and two Amended Registration Statements on Form S-3/A with the SEC in 1994. Although it has not filed any since then, Sunbeam may have been eligible to file Form S-3 during 1997 and before June 25, 1998 when Sunbeam's outside auditor revoked its prior certification of Sunbeam's financial statements. Documents in this case indicate that at least until June 1998, Sunbeam intended to file a Form S-3 to register the debentures.²²

Cammer Factor 5: Empirical facts showing a cause-and-effect relationship between unexpected corporate events or financial releases and an immediate response in the stock price

60. The ECMH states that the securities markets incorporate all available public information. One way to determine whether prices incorporate relevant publicly available information is to examine statistically significant price changes and examine what information was disclosed about a company's financial condition and prospects prior to these price changes occurring. In the case of Sunbeam, many of the statistically significant price changes were associated with information released by Sunbeam and echoed by analysts after discussions began between Plaintiff and Morgan Stanley in December 1997.

61. There was extensive news coverage of Sunbeam during 1997 and 1998, including reports on Sunbeam's financial condition, its prospects for growth, and its revenues and earnings trends. Articles concerning Sunbeam appeared in major financial news sources such as the Associated Press Newswires, Bloomberg News, Business Week, Chicago Tribune, Dow Jones Business Services, Dow Jones News Service, Financial Post, Los Angeles Times, New York Times, PR Newswire, Reuters News, St. Petersburg Times, and The Wall Street Journal, among others. On most days of 1997 and 1998, there were news articles about Sunbeam or that mentioned Sunbeam.

62. Institutional investors such as pension funds, mutual funds, and investment banks, typically have ready access to minute-to-minute financial news and to online bulletins from analysts such as those disseminated through First Call. Thus, the fact of significant institutional ownership is a signal that knowledgeable investors are closely and rapidly scrutinizing sources of company information and forming investment opinions that affect share price accordingly.

63. There was substantial institutional ownership and trading of Sunbeam common stock throughout 1997 and 1998. According to data provided by Thomson Financial (Exhibit 8A), institutional ownership of Sunbeam common stock ranged between 75% and 89% of Sunbeam's reported shares outstanding from December 31, 1996 through March 31, 1998. Sometime after the March 31, 1998, quarterly reporting date, there was a huge sell-off by institutions, which reduced their holdings to less than one-third of Sunbeam shares by December 31, 1998.²³ There were between 77 and 155 institutional investors that reported holding Sunbeam common stock at quarter-ends during 1997 and

1998. Institutional investors actively traded Sunbeam common stock, as indicated by data from reporting institutions' filings of Form 13F with the SEC. (See Exhibit 8B.)

64. On January 28, 1998, when Sunbeam announced that its fourth quarter 1997 financial results were less than analysts' expectations, due to blanket production issues, the stock dropped 9.5% to $37.625, a statistically significant return.

65. On March 2, 1998, when definitive agreements were announced for Sunbeam to acquire Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, Sunbeam stock price closed at $45.625, up 9.3%, a statistically significant return.

66. After Sunbeam made the announcement on March 19, 1998 that the first quarter 1998 might see sales lower than analysts' estimates, the stock price closed at $45.375, a decline of 9.4%, a statistically significant return.

67. On April 3, 1998, Sunbeam announced that not only would first quarter 1998 sales be less than expected but would be less than the year-ago quarter's sales and declared that 1998 would be a year of consolidation and restructuring. The stock price fell 24.6%, a statistically significant return, to $34.375.

68. On May 11, 1998, actual first-quarter 1998 results were released, which were even worse than the reduced guidance provided on April 3—despite including bill-and-hold sales of $29 million, adding $5 million in sales (excluding Coleman) by lengthening the quarter by a few days (from March 29 to March 31), and including $14.8 million for two days of Coleman sales, March 30 and 31.²⁴ In addition, management sharply lowered the full-year forecast and it became even clearer than before that the successful turnaround story was false. Sunbeam stock price fell to $25.75, a decline of 7.4%, a statistically significant return.

69. On June 25, 1998, Arthur Andersen withdrew its financial statement certification as it reviewed its prior statements in connection with the planned debenture Registration Statement. This action delayed the filing of the debenture Registration Statement until February 4, 1999; it was not declared effective until November 8, 1999.²⁵ Sunbeam stock price fell to $10.44, a decline of 13.0%, a statistically significant return. Though the lack of certified financial statements may make valuation difficult, it does not effect market efficiency per se; if the negative and uncertain news is received, evaluated, and acted upon, that is the cornerstone of market efficiency.

70. All the net changes in Sunbeam share price noted above were statistically significant, as indicated in Exhibit 9. The event study analysis demonstrates that, during 1997 and 1998, unexpected material new information concerning Sunbeam resulted in significant changes in stock price after netting out market effects. (See Exhibit 10 for a summary of information releases on significant dates.) This statistical analysis and the extensive news coverage of Sunbeam indicate that the market for Sunbeam common stock was efficient during 1997 and 1998. If the information provided to the market is inaccurate or fraudulent, the market still takes that information into account; when such information is revealed as incorrect, a re-assessment will take place.

VI. Summary and conclusions

71. As detailed in Section V.C., many factors contribute to my opinion that the market for Sunbeam common stock was efficient throughout 1997 and 1998. The fact of market efficiency does not preclude the information about Sunbeam disseminated to the market by Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley from being false and misleading. Rather, it means that the information disseminated about Sunbeam and its prospects, whether true or false, was reflected in Sunbeam's share price.

72. Plaintiff may have received non-public information in good faith during its negotiations with Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam. It is my understanding that the non-public information was consistent with the public information and, therefore, the public market price provided a reasonable basis upon which to arrive at a deal valuation. Thus, if Plaintiff's allegations are found to be correct, losses suffered by Plaintiff in this transaction are approximately $680 million without prejudgment interest and $1,090 million with prejudgment interest ($635 million without prejudgment interest and $1,024 million with prejudgment interest assuming Plaintiff could have registered and sold shares in Q1 2000), to be offset by the amount of the confidential cash settlement, with prejudgment interest amounts calculated by a multiplier applied from the payment date of the cash settlement.

Appendix: Regression Analysis and Event Study

Regression Analysis

1. Regression analysis is commonly used by economists to determine whether a relationship exists between one variable (in this case, returns on Sunbeam common stock) and one or more independent variables (in this case, returns on a market index and residual returns on an industry index). The results of regression analysis are used to screen out effects of the market and industry on the price of a security, and quantify the remaining effects of company-specific information on a company's share price. This is the method used to determine the predicted returns of Sunbeam common stock on each day from December 1997 (when negotiations among Plaintiff, Morgan Stanley, and Sunbeam commenced) through the end of December 1998.
2. To assess the relationship between the price of Sunbeam common stock and developments in the broad market and in the industry in which Sunbeam competed, the daily returns on Sunbeam share price were regressed against the daily returns on a broad market index for the one-year period between January 2, 1997 and December 31, 1997. A daily return on a stock is the percentage change in the stock's share price from one trading day to the next.
3. The market index used is a market capitalization weighted composite of all stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE"), American Stock Exchange ("Amex"), and Nasdaq (the NYSE/AMEX/Nasdaq composite index, or "NAN").

This broad-based market index is commonly used by economists as a representation of the market. The data are provided by CRSP.²⁶

4. Sunbeam, in its proxy statements, compared itself to an index composed of companies it considered its peers; it also listed several companies in the competition section of its Form 10-K filings. In addition, analysts following Sunbeam listed companies they considered peers, as did both investment bankers in the confidential negotiations. All of these companies named in the sources above were considered in the regression analysis.²⁷ The industry competitor returns were regressed against the market index as the independent variable. Sunbeam daily returns then were regressed as the dependent variable against the market returns and the residual returns of the industry competitors (portions of the daily returns not explained by changes in the market index) as the independent variables, to determine whether they were significantly correlated (i.e., to determine whether after excluding market effects, the competitors' daily residual returns helped to explain the daily returns on Sunbeam). Sunbeam daily returns were not statistically significantly correlated with the daily residual returns of any of the industry competitors deemed reasonably representative of the industry.
5. The results of the regression of Sunbeam's daily returns against daily returns on the market index appear in Exhibit 11. Sunbeam daily returns were statistically significantly correlated with the daily returns of the market index, as indicated by the t-statistics in Exhibit 11. A t-statistic greater than 1.96 or less than -1.96 is statistically significant at the 95% level of confidence. The 95% level of confidence is a measure frequently employed by economists to determine statistical significance.

6. The regression equation from this time period explained the variation in Sunbeam stock returns as measured by the square of the correlation coefficient, or R^2 ,²⁸ and the regression equation was statistically significant, as measured by the F-statistic.²⁹ The final regression analysis and regression equation are provided in Exhibit 11.
7. The regression formula from the regression results was then used to predict daily returns on Sunbeam share prices from December 1997 through December 1998, based on the daily returns on the market in the period. Dates were identified during December 1997 through 1998 on which the actual return on Sunbeam's share price was statistically significantly different from the return predicted based on the market and industry return, at the 95% level of confidence. Dates when Sunbeam's residual returns (residual of market effects in the change in the share price) were statistically significant are inferred to be dates on which material new company-specific information reached investors and caused a significant change in Sunbeam's share price. Those dates are listed in Exhibit 9. The z-score that appears beside each date is an indicator of the magnitude of the difference between Sunbeam's predicted return

Corp., National Presto Industries, Inc., Newell, Oneida Ltd., Royal Appliance Mfg. Co., Rubbermaid Inc., Russell Corp., Salton Inc., Scotts Co., Stanley Works, Tupperware Corp., and Whirlpool Corp.

²⁹ The F-statistic is the result of a statistical test to determine whether a significant relationship exists between the dependent variable and the set of independent variables. Here the F-statistic is significant at

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

(based on market and industry returns) and its actual share price return for that day. A z-score greater than 1.96 or less than -1.96 indicates the day's residual return (the difference between the predicted return based on market returns, and the actual return on that day) is statistically significant at the 95% confidence level.³⁰

8. Expected Sunbeam stock returns are those changes in Sunbeam stock prices due to market factors, i.e., stock prices can and do change when new information or valuation assessments can potentially change the values of all stocks in an economy (market effects). On each day of the period from December 1, 1997 to December 31, 1998, the expected returns for Sunbeam stock are calculated from the regression equation. The difference between the actual Sunbeam stock return and its expected return is a measure of the change in the stock price due to company-specific events. Company-specific events include any news, analyst coverage, oral commentary, or other information that changes market participants' perceptions about the value of a company.

Event Study

9. An event study was used to examine the publicly available company-specific information contemporaneous with significant stock price returns—in other words, to greater than the 95% level of confidence, i.e., there is a greater than 95% probability that there is a statistically significant relationship between Sunbeam stock returns and market returns.

³⁰ The z-score is equal to the residual return (percentage change in share price after accounting for market effects; i.e. the difference between the actual return on the stock for that day and the predicted return based on the regression formula), divided by the standard error of the predicted return on the stock. The standard error of the prediction measures the relative volatility of Sunbeam stock returns compared to the predicted returns on Sunbeam stock. The larger the standard error, the greater the residual return must be in order to be considered statistically different from its predicted return. If the z-statistic is greater than or equal to 1.96 or less than or equal to -1.96, the difference between the two returns is significantly different from zero at the 95% level of confidence, i.e., there is a 95% probability that the difference between the actual return and expected return is not equal to zero, it is not a spurious result, and on that day the Sunbeam stock return incorporates a company-specific effect.

Confidential—Pursuant to Protective Order

determine whether news affecting Sunbeam promptly caused a measurable share price reaction after accounting for general market effects. Several of those events were described in the section relating to Cammer Factor 5; more are summarized in Exhibit 10. All of the net changes in Sunbeam stock prices that were statistically significantly different from expected changes in Sunbeam stock price based on market factors are listed in Exhibit 9.

Preliminary Statement

This unauthorized and spurious lawsuit is nothing more than a hardball tactic by parties who are not entitled to receive, and under the pending plan will not receive, anything from Sunbeam's reorganization. Just recently, the Second Circuit reaffirmed that even if a creditors' committee brings a suit with the debtor's consent, such a suit must be "in the best interest of the bankruptcy estate, and 'necessary and beneficial' to the fair and efficient resolution of the bankruptcy proceedings." In re Commodore Int'l Ltd., __ F.3d __, 2001 WL 897138, at *3 (2d Cir. Aug. 9, 2001) (emphasis added). Here, the Committee's meritless lawsuit against Morgan Stanley -- brought without this Court's permission, without Sunbeam's consent, without any regard to its adverse effect on the estate, and admittedly designed to delay approval of the reorganization plan indefinitely -- should not be permitted to proceed beyond this motion to dismiss.

As will be demonstrated below, the Committee has no authority even to commence this adversary proceeding against Morgan Stanley, purportedly on behalf of the estate, since under the Bankruptcy Code and controlling Second Circuit authority it was required to, but did not, seek and obtain leave of court by motion on notice. The Committee's failure to obtain such leave alone requires summary dismissal of the claims against Morgan Stanley.

If the Court determines that the Committee had or should have authority to bring these claims against Morgan Stanley, they must nevertheless be dismissed for lack of standing. As shown below, the Committee's Amended Complaint asserts what are essentially individual or class claims belonging to the purchasers of the Notes and other creditors in their individual capacities, even though, as the Committee conceded, it lacks standing to assert such claims. And to the extent that any of the claims purports to allege a distinct harm to Sunbeam, as opposed to a harm allegedly suffered by the Noteholders or other creditors, from the alleged wrongful or fraudulent conduct of Sunbeam's former management allegedly aided and abetted by Morgan Stanley, the Committee suing on behalf of the estate lacks standing, since Sunbeam itself would be barred by application of the in pari delicto doctrine from asserting claims against third parties.

Quite apart from the Committee's lack of authority and standing to sue Morgan Stanley in this adversary proceeding, all purported claims against Morgan Stanley must be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, since the Amended Complaint fails to plead facts sufficient to establish any of those claims. In short, not only does the Committee have no right to sue Morgan Stanley on behalf of the estate, it has not even pleaded facts that would amount to an actionable claim against Morgan Stanley by the estate. The Amended Complaint should be dismissed.

Statement of Facts

The relevant facts are summarized in the Statement of Facts in the Memorandum of Law in Support of Motion to Dismiss the Amended Complaint by Defendants Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSF"), First Union National Bank ("FUB"), and Bank of America National Trust and Savings ("BOA," and together with MSF and FUB, the "Lenders"), submitted concurrently with this memorandum, which Statement of Facts is incorporated herein by reference. The Statement of Facts is based upon the allegations of the Amended Complaint, which are accepted as true only for purposes of this motion to dismiss, Granite Partners, L.P. v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 58 F. Supp. 2d 228, 234 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), as well as upon other documents to which reference properly may be made on this motion.*

* The Statement of Facts is principally based upon the allegations of the Amended Complaint. Reference is also made to the Morgan Stanley Retention Agreement, the Morgan Stanley Fairness Opinion, the Note Offering Memorandum, and the deposition testimony of Michael Hart, each of these documents being cited and relied upon in the Amended Complaint (¶¶ 8, 44, 52, 55, 66, 78, 94). Copies of the documents are submitted as exhibits A, B, C and D, respectively, to the Affidavit of Dmitry Joffe, sworn to October 1, 2001 ("Joffe Aff."). These documents may be considered on this motion to dismiss under various theories endorsed in this Circuit, including (i) incorporation by reference, see, e.g., Cowan v. Codelia, 2001 WL 856606, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. July 30, 2001); Pompano-Windy City Partners, Ltd. v. Bear Stearns & Co., 794 F. Supp. 1265, 1281 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); (ii) documents integral to plaintiff's claims, see, e.g., Cortec Indus. Inc. v. Sum Holding L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 48 (2d Cir. 1991); Sable v. Southmark/Envicon Capital Corp., 819 F. Supp. 324, 328 (S.D.N.Y. 1993); and (iii) documents "of which plaintiff had knowledge and relied on in bringing suit," Brass v. American Film Tech., Inc., 987 F.2d 142, 150 (2d Cir. 1993).

The following additional facts are pertinent to the instant claims against Morgan Stanley. Unlike the Lenders, Morgan Stanley is not a claimant in Sunbeam's chapter 11 case, and the Amended Complaint does not allege that Morgan Stanley filed a proof of claim before the Court in this matter. Amended Complaint ¶¶ 20-22.

On March 1, 2001, this Court entered the Final Order Authorizing Debtor in Possession to Enter Into Post-Petition Financing Agreement (the "DIP Order") (attached as Exhibit E to the Joffe Affidavit). The Order provides (Joffe Aff. Exh. E ¶ 17):

Notwithstanding anything herein to the contrary, no . . . "Lender Funds" may be used by the Debtor, any statutory committee or any other person or entity to object to or contest in any manner, or raise any defenses to, the validity, perfection, priority or enforceability of the Pre-Petition Indebtedness or the Lenders' Pre-Petition Liens, or to assert or prosecute any action for preferences, fraudulent conveyances, other avoidance power claims or any other claims or causes of action against any of the Pre-Petition Lenders or any of the Pre-Petition Agents; without limitation of the foregoing, (i) at no time shall any such committee or other person or entity have the right to use Lender Funds to prosecute any such claims, causes of action, objections, contests or defenses (collectively, "Claims and Defenses"), (ii) any such committee or other person or entity shall have the right to assert Claims and Defenses only in an action commenced in this Court on or before the 75th day following the date of entry of this Order (the Creditors' Committee shall have standing to bring such an action without further order of the Court)

The Order defines "Pre-Petition Lenders" and "Pre-Petition Agents" to include the Lenders, but not Morgan Stanley. Joffe Aff. Exh. E ¶¶ C-D.

On July 13, 2001, the Committee commenced this adversary proceeding by filing a complaint (the "Original Complaint") in this court against the Lenders and Morgan Stanley. On August 15, 2000 the Lenders moved, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) and 12(b)(6), to dismiss the claims purported to be asserted against them in the Original Complaint, and by separate motion on that date Morgan Stanley moved, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) and 12(b)(6), to dismiss the claims asserted against it (the "Original Motions"). Morgan Stanley also based its motion on the Committee's failure to have obtained leave of court to assert claims against it on behalf of the estate, in disregard of the requirement in the Second Circuit that such leave be obtained only upon satisfaction of the Commodore Int'l requirements set forth above.

On September 6, 2001, the Committee served the Amended Complaint, which superceded the original Complaint and mooted the defendants' Original Motions to dismiss the Original Complaint. Although the Amended Complaint purports to assert claims against Morgan Stanley, the Committee again failed to seek or obtain leave of court to assert such claims. This motion, as well as a separate motion on behalf of the Lenders to dismiss the claims asserted against them in the Amended Complaint, followed.*

Argument

This memorandum of law is submitted in support of Morgan Stanley's motion to dismiss the Amended Complaint for failure to obtain the requisite leave of court and, if such leave is held to have been granted or unnecessary, under Rules 12(b)(6) and 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

"[T]o survive a motion to dismiss, [plaintiff's] claims must be supported by specific and detailed factual allegations not stated in wholly conclusory terms." Rodriguez v. Basilone, 2001 WL 755389, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. July 5, 2001) (quoting Friedl v. New York, 210 F.3d 79, 85-86 (2d Cir. 2000)). "The court need not credit conclusory statements unsupported by assertions of facts," In re Livent, Inc., 2001 WL 740673, at *23 (S.D.N.Y. June 29, 2001) (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S.

* Along with the Amended Complaint, the Committee served an 85-page document entitled "Plaintiff's Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendants' Motions to Dismiss" ("Comm. Br."). However, since the Committee asserts (and defendants agree) that the Amended Complaint superceded the Original Complaint and rendered the defendants' Original Motions moot, such memorandum, which is devoted to defending the Amended Complaint against a motion addressed to the Original Complaint, is a nullity and should be disregarded, except for the admissions by the Committee contained therein.

 Although the First Claim (for equitable subordination) and the Second Claim (to avoid and recover fraudulent transfers) are by their titles asserted "Against all Defendants," Morgan Stanley is not a claimant in this chapter 11 case so it has no claims to equitably subordinate, and it is not alleged to have received any of the transfers or obligations sought to be avoided. Accordingly, this memorandum will focus exclusively on the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Claims, since relief ostensibly is sought therein against Morgan Stanley. The First and Second Claims, asserted against the other defendants, are addressed in the Lenders' memorandum, as is the Sixth Claim.

265, 286 (1986)), and is "free to disregard legal conclusions, deductions or opinions couched as factual allegations." In re Daley, 222 B.R. 44, 46 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998).

POINT I

THE COMMITTEE HAS NO AUTHORITY OR STANDING TO BRING CLAIMS AGAINST MORGAN STANLEY.

As a threshold matter, the Committee's claims against Morgan Stanley must be dismissed because the Committee clearly lacks authority to bring adversary proceedings against Morgan Stanley, and such authority has not been granted by the Court. The Second Circuit in In re STN Enterprises, 779 F.2d 901, 904 (2d Cir. 1985), stated that creditors' committees have an implied qualified right to initiate adversary proceedings in the name of the debtor only with the approval of the bankruptcy court and when the trustee or debtor in possession unjustifiably has failed to bring such a suit. See also In re Vitreous Steel Prod. Co., 911 F.2d 1223, 1231 (7th Cir. 1990) ("An unsecured creditor has no standing without first obtaining special authorization from the court.").

Substantively, "courts have summarized the principles in In re STN Enters. to require three conditions in order to permit a creditor to sue on behalf of the estate: (1) the claim must be colorable; (2) the intervention must be brought on behalf of the estate; and (3) the trustee or debtor-in-possession has unjustifiably refused to bring the suit or abused its discretion in not suing." In re Ashford Hotels, Ltd., 226 B.R. 797, 803 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998).

And just recently, the Second Circuit in In re Commodore Int'l Ltd., 2001 WL 897138, at *3, confirmed that even if a creditors' committee has the consent of the debtor in possession or trustee, it still must obtain the approval of the bankruptcy court. In order to grant that approval, the bankruptcy court must find "that suit by the committee is (a) in the best interest of the bankruptcy estate, and (b) is 'necessary and beneficial' to the fair and efficient resolution of the bankruptcy proceedings." In Commodore Int'l, the Second Circuit affirmed the dismissal of the committee's suit brought with the debtor's consent, holding that "the Creditors' Committee has not yet gained standing" because the Bankruptcy Court "has not considered whether suit by the Creditors'

Committee . . . is ‘necessary and beneficial’ to the fair and efficient resolution of the bankruptcy proceedings.” Id. at *4.

Procedurally, obtaining the court’s permission requires a “motion on notice followed by an appropriate showing as to why the trustee erred in determining not to bring suit.” In re Daley, 224 B.R. 307, 311 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998). “[T]he court must also examine, on affidavit and other submission, by evidentiary hearing or otherwise, whether an action asserting such claim(s) is likely to benefit the reorganization estate.” In re STN Enters., 779 F.2d at 905. Here, of course, the Committee did not even ask Sunbeam to bring such a suit, nor did it bring a motion on notice seeking such authorization.

The Committee’s claims against Morgan Stanley are brought in clear violation of these substantive and procedural requirements. Instead of complying with the required conditions -- and in a repeated and blatantly transparent attempted end-run around the controlling law -- the Committee asserts that it “has standing to bring the within claims on behalf of the estate pursuant to an order of this Court dated March 3, 2001.” Amended Complaint ¶ 18. As the Committee itself is no doubt aware, the plain language of the DIP Order only deals with defenses to claims by the Lenders or claims against the Lenders (specifically referred to as “Pre-Petition Lenders” and “Pre-Petition Agents”) -- not claims against Morgan Stanley, which is not even mentioned in the DIP Order.* No authority is granted to the Committee to bring claims on behalf of the estate against entities other than the Lenders. See Joffe Aff. Exh. C ¶¶ C-D; ¶ 17. It was never the intention of the DIP Order to allow the Committee to sue entities other than the Lenders without leave of court and, as shown, the express language of the DIP Order so indicates. It cannot be construed to authorize the Committee to sue Morgan Stanley without leave of court.

The Committee asserts (Amended Complaint ¶ 18) that the DIP Order authorizes it to bring claims against Morgan Stanley because “Sunbeam’s claims against Morgan Stanley may be recouped from MSF and thus . . . Morgan Stanley's misconduct raises defenses to Sunbeam's alleged obligations to MSF."* This patent non sequitur is also patent drivel. It completely and deliberately ignores the specific limitation and identification in the DIP Order of the entities against which the Committee is authorized to bring affirmative claims or assert defenses, whether by way of its now abandoned setoff claim contained in the Original Complaint or by way of its newly minted "recoupment" claim. Those target entities do not include Morgan Stanley.

In any event, even if the DIP Order is somehow construed to mean that the debtor has granted its consent to the Committee to pursue claims against Morgan Stanley -- even though such construction is squarely precluded by the express terms of the DIP Order -- the Committee would still have no standing because it has not, and cannot, demonstrate that its suit is both in the best interests of the estate and "necessary and beneficial" to the resolution of the bankruptcy proceedings, as required by Commodore Int'l. Indeed, the Committee's suit is designed to achieve the opposite goal of delaying the resolution of Sunbeam's chapter 11 proceedings by obstructing the expeditious approval of the pending reorganization plan. Moreover, since the Court did not make the findings required by the Second Circuit in that case and its predecessors, the DIP Order would remain ineffective as a purported grant of permission to the Committee to sue Morgan Stanley.

Finally, even if the Committee were to request the Court's permission, its request should be denied because, as shown below, in addition to failing to meet the requirements of Commodore Int'l, the Committee's claims against Morgan Stanley do not -- and cannot -- satisfy the substantive requirements for obtaining such permission. Thus, while professing to sue on behalf of Sunbeam, the Committee in fact asserts claims belonging to Sunbeam's shareholders and Noteholders, which the Committee, as it concedes, has no standing to pursue. Since such standing is constitutional and jurisdictional, a court order cannot grant such standing where none exists. See Points II.C, III.A

and IV.A below. In addition, the Committee does not and cannot state any colorable claims against Morgan Stanley upon which relief can be granted. See Points II, III.B and IV.B below.

In sum, the Committee simply has no authority or power to bring the Third, Fourth, Fifth or Sixth Claims against Morgan Stanley on behalf of the estate. These claims should summarily be dismissed without further inquiry.

POINT II

THE THIRD CLAIM FOR NEGLIGENCE AND GROSS NEGLIGENCE MUST BE DISMISSED.

A. Any liability for negligence is precluded by the terms of Morgan Stanley's Retention Agreement and Fairness Opinion.

The third claim in the Amended Complaint deals primarily with alleged conduct of Morgan Stanley as financial advisor to Sunbeam in connection with the Acquisitions, and asserts that "Morgan Stanley owed a duty to Sunbeam to (i) act with reasonable care in the course of its duties and responsibilities as financial advisor to Sunbeam and (ii) avoid conflicts of interests in the course of its duties advising Sunbeam and Sunbeam's Board of Directors." Amended Complaint ¶ 130.

With respect to Morgan Stanley's duties of care as Sunbeam's advisor, the law is clear that the scope of such professional duties "may be controlled by the terms of [its] contract of employment." 76 N.Y. Jur. 2d, Malpractice § 6 (1989); see also Lama Holding Co. v. Shearman & Sterling, 758 F. Supp. 159, 163-64 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (granting financial advisor's motion to dismiss claims for breach of fiduciary duty and negligence where the retention agreement did not create the duty alleged and did not encompass any alleged fiduciary duty). Here, the plain terms of the Retention Agreement and the Fairness Opinion preclude the Committee's negligence claims against Morgan Stanley. The Retention Agreement expressly provides that "no Indemnified Person [defined as Morgan Stanley and any of its affiliates] shall have any liability to [Sunbeam] for or in connection with the Engagement except for any such liability for losses, claims, damages or liabilities incurred by [Sunbeam] that are finally judicially determined to have resulted from the bad faith or gross negligence of such Indemnified Person." Joffe Aff. Exh. A.

It is well-settled that such clauses absolving a party from its own negligence are enforceable. See, e.g., Colnaghi, U.S.A., Ltd. v. Jewelers Protection Servs., Ltd., 81 N.Y.2d 821, 823 (N.Y. 1993). Therefore, the Retention Agreement unequivocally bars claims by Sunbeam (and, consequently, by the Committee purporting to sue derivatively on behalf of Sunbeam) against Morgan Stanley for negligence.*

The Committee also alleges, by nothing more than a rhetorical flourish, that Morgan Stanley is liable for gross negligence. However, there are no factual allegations in the Amended Complaint, its pejorative adjectives notwithstanding, that would rise to the level required to state a claim for gross negligence. “Gross negligence’ differs in kind, not only degree, from claims of ordinary negligence. It is conduct that evinces a reckless disregard for the rights of others or ‘smacks’ of intentional wrongdoing.” Aphrodite Jewelry, Inc. v. D&W Central Station Alarm Co., 681 N.Y.S.2d 305, 306-07 (N.Y. App. Div. 1998) (dismissing the complaint where “plaintiff did not allege conduct by [defendant] which rises to the level of gross negligence, and the causes of action sounding in tort are barred by the provision of the contract which absolves [defendant] from its own negligence”). Based on the same definition, the court in Tevdorachvili v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 103 F. Supp. 2d 632, 644 (E.D.N.Y. 2000), dismissed a claim for gross negligence, holding that “[t]he difference between ‘negligence’ and ‘gross negligence’ is one of fact, not law, and plaintiff alleges no facts to sustain a cause of action for gross negligence.”

In fact, the Amended Complaint’s conclusory allegation of gross negligence is flatly contradicted by the terms of the Fairness Opinion itself. The Opinion specifically provides that in concluding that the Acquisitions were fair from a financial point of view, Morgan Stanley “assumed and relied upon without independent verification the accuracy and completeness of the information reviewed by us for the purposes of this opinion.” Joffe Aff. Exh. B. Such information included publicly available financial statements and financial projections prepared by the managements of Sunbeam and the Acquired Companies, as well as Coopers & Lybrand's synergy analysis. In particular, the Fairness Opinion states (id.):

* A bankruptcy trustee (or a creditors’ committee standing in a position analogous to that of the trustee) “is subject to all defenses available against the debtor, and must prove all elements that the debtor would be required to prove.” In re Segerstrom, 247 F.3d 218, 224 (5th Cir. 2001); see also Miller v. New York Produce Exchange, 550 F. 2d 762, 768 (2d Cir. 1977) (citing Bank of Marin v. England, 385 U.S. 99, 101 (1966)).

With respect to the financial projections including the estimates of synergies and cost savings expected to be achieved in the Mergers, we have assumed that they have been reasonably prepared on bases reflecting the best currently available estimates and judgments of the future financial performance of the Company. With respect to the potential operational improvements associated with the Mergers we have relied upon the evaluation of both Coopers & Lybrand and the Company. We have not made any independent valuation or appraisal of the assets or liabilities of the Company; however, we have reviewed the valuation of Coopers & Lybrand with respect to operational benefits expected to be achieved in the Mergers, and have relied without independent verification upon such valuations for purposes of this opinion.

Accordingly, it was expressly understood that Morgan Stanley rendered its Fairness Opinion based on financial projections prepared by others without any independent verification. There are no allegations in the Amended Complaint that Morgan Stanley did not in fact rely on Coopers & Lybrand's valuations of potential synergies, or that such reliance evinced a "reckless disregard for the rights of others or 'smacked' of intentional wrongdoing," as required for gross negligence. Instead, the Committee alleges in wholly conclusory fashion that "Morgan Stanley's Fairness Opinion to Sunbeam . . . and its reliance on any synergy analyses in connection therewith were grossly negligent." Amended Complaint ¶ 59. This assertion should be disregarded as unsupported by any facts, contrary to the express terms of Morgan Stanley's scope of engagement, and based on nothing more than an opinion of Sunbeam's current management who, with the clarity of hindsight, found Coopers' synergy analysis to be flawed and unreliable. See Amended Complaint ¶¶ 56-59.

Thus, in In re Reliance Sec. Litig., 135 F. Supp. 2d 480, 516 (D. Del. 2001), the court dismissed claims against a financial advisor for breach of duties in issuing a fairness opinion because plaintiffs did not identify facts to suggest that the advisor did not actually rely on the financial statements and information provided by the company, or that such reliance was reckless: "As the Financial Advisors argued, they did not contract to re-audit [the company's] financial statements and projections. Rather, [the company] asked the financial advisors to make a judgment based on a limited set of data.” Here, too, Morgan Stanley did not contract to re-audit Sunbeam’s or any of the acquired companies’ financial statements or projections, and the Fairness Opinion expressly so advised.

Likewise, the Committee faults Morgan Stanley for “creat[ing] a conflict of interest” in assuming the roles of financial advisor and of underwriter (Amended Complaint ¶ 61) -- despite the fact that any potential conflict was fully disclosed to Sunbeam.* Where an agent disclosed to its principal a conflict of interest, the relevant question becomes “whether the principal was fully informed of every fact material to its interests and whether the principal freely consented in the presence of this knowledge.” 2A N.Y. Jur. 2d, Agency, § 216 (1998); see also Moore v. United States, 950 F.2d 656, 660 (10th Cir. 1991) (in attorney-client context, a conflict of interest claim is waived if client consciously chooses to proceed with counsel despite a known conflict to which client could have objected but chose to disregard); Artache v. Goldin, 570 N.Y.S.2d 238, 239 (N.Y. App. Ct. 1991) (in attorney-client context, counsel’s representation of client found entirely competent where counsel’s potential conflict of interest was fully disclosed to the client and the client chose to continue to be represented by counsel).

There is not a single allegation in the Amended Complaint -- nor could there be -- that Sunbeam was not fully aware of Morgan Stanley’s purportedly “conflicting assignments relating to Sunbeam.” Amended Complaint ¶ 2. Indeed, in its Retention Agreement with Morgan Stanley, Sun-

* The Amended Complaint’s allegations on this point are contradictory: the Amended Complaint initially alleges that “Morgan Stanley agreed to serve as underwriter for the bond offering and to serve as an agent bank for the Bank Facility” -- but then proceeds to describe Morgan Stanley’s purported conflict of interests arising from its role as financial advisor with respect to the Acquisitions and as underwriter of the Notes. Amended Complaint ¶ 61 (emphasis added). The allegation with respect to Morgan Stanley’s serving as an agent bank for the Bank Facility is patently wrong and is flatly contradicted by the Amended Complaint’s more specific allegations that the Bank Facility was in fact entered “among Sunbeam, MSF, as Syndication Agent, BOA, as Documentation Agent, and FUB, as Administrative Agent.” Amended Complaint ¶ 85. See Hirsch v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 72 F.3d 1085, 1095 (2d Cir. 1995) (sustaining dismissal of the complaint where “attenuated allegations” supporting a claim “are contradicted . . . by more specific allegations in the complaint”). And Morgan Stanley’s allegedly conflicting roles with respect to the Acquisitions and the Note Offering were fully disclosed to and expressly authorized by Sunbeam, as discussed in the text following this footnote.

beam expressly authorized Morgan Stanley to assume the roles now contended by the Committee to be conflicting. See Joffe Aff. Exh. A (emphasis added):

During the term of our engagement we will provide you with financial advice and assistance in connection with these transactions [including “the possible acquisition of one or more entities (an ‘Acquisition Transaction’)”] If, in connection with this assignment, Sunbeam effects a repurchase of or a public sale or private placement of equity, preferred or debt securities . . . and Sunbeam requires investment banking services in connection therewith, Sunbeam agrees to offer to retain Morgan Stanley on mutually agreeable terms to assist it with such transaction.

To the extent the purported conflict of interest allegedly caused injuries to the Noteholders of Sunbeam, the Committee has no right, as it concedes, to pursue claims against Morgan Stanley based on such injuries. See Point II.C below. Moreover, Sunbeam fully disclosed its retention of Morgan Stanley prior to the Note Offering in its October 23, 1997 press release. Amended Complaint ¶ 45.

In short, the Committee has failed to allege any legally cognizable breach of duty by Morgan Stanley. The Amended Complaint’s Third Claim thus fails to state a claim for negligence against Morgan Stanley arising out of its role as Sunbeam’s financial advisor and should be dismissed.

B. There is no negligence liability for what is in fact an aiding-and-abetting-a-fraudulent-conveyance claim.

Quite apart from the inadequacy of the pleading, the gravamen of the Committee’s negligence claim is that Morgan Stanley’s advice resulted in Sunbeam’s conveying its property for inadequate consideration while it was insolvent, or as a result of which it was rendered insolvent or unable to pay its debts as they matured. In essence, the Committee alleges that Morgan Stanley, through its alleged negligence, caused Sunbeam to make a fraudulent conveyance and thus aided and abetted such transfers. See Amended Complaint ¶ 135. (“Morgan Stanley knew, should have known or recklessly disregarded the fact that Sunbeam was not receiving fair consideration and/or reasonably equivalent value for the Acquisitions.”) However, under New York law, FDIC v. Porco, 75 N.Y.2d 840, 842 (1990), a non-transferee, such as Morgan Stanley, may not be held liable for damages for a fraudulent transfer unless it has dominion and control over the transferred assets or unless it was a beneficiary of the conveyance. The Amended Complaint here is devoid of any such allegations.

Thus, in Lippe v. Bairnco Corp., 218 B.R. 294, 302-03 (S.D.N.Y. 1988), the court dismissed plaintiffs' claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty, holding that Porco was dispositive of the issue. Citing the complaint's language to the effect that the action was brought to remedy the purportedly fraudulent transactions, the court concluded that "plaintiffs' aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty claim is in fact an aiding and abetting a fraudulent conveyance claim." Here, too, the Committee claims to have brought this adversary proceeding to redress defendants' conduct "in a series of integrated transactions . . . [which] caused Sunbeam's insolvency and ultimate bankruptcy." Amended Complaint ¶ 1. And since the Third Claim essentially alleges that Morgan Stanley's conduct aided Sunbeam to make a fraudulent conveyance (Amended Complaint ¶ 135), it should be likewise dismissed under Porco.

C. The Committee has no claim for negligence against Morgan Stanley based on the alleged harm to Sunbeam's noteholders and shareholders.

In its brief opposing the Original Motions, the Committee conceded that it "cannot sue for any harm caused by Morgan Stanley to creditors," that "the Committee does not rely on any harm to Noteholders and other constituents" and that it "is not suing in that capacity." Comm. Br. 75. The Committee nevertheless purports to bring its Amended Complaint's Third Claim based on alleged injuries to Sunbeam's Noteholders and shareholders allegedly caused by Morgan Stanley's Fairness Opinion. Amended Complaint ¶ 136. In addition to being contrary to the Committee's concession, this claim is squarely precluded by the reasoning of the recent Fifth Circuit decision in Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, where the Fifth Circuit upheld the district court's dismissal, under New York law, of claims brought by option-holders against an investment bank based on the bank's allegedly misleading fairness opinion. See 224 F.3d 496 (5th Cir. 2000).

In Collins, Morgan Stanley Dean Witter was engaged by Allwaste to evaluate the possible sale of Allwaste and to render a fairness opinion. "The [Retention] Agreement provided that Morgan Stanley had 'duties solely to Allwaste' and that any advice or opinion provided by Morgan

Stanley could not be disclosed or referred to publicly without Morgan Stanley's consent." Collins, 224 F.3d at 497. Morgan Stanley's fairness opinion further provided that "it was written 'for the information of the Board of Directors of the Company only and may not be used for any other purpose without [Morgan Stanley's] prior consent'." Id. at 498. Based on these facts, the Fifth Circuit held (id. at 499):

[B]oth the Agreement and the fairness opinion specified that the efforts were undertaken at the behest of and for the benefit of the Board alone. The fairness opinion, meanwhile, expressly negated not only enforcement by but reception to third parties. Under New York law, then, the Board is the only entity that enjoyed the right to sue on the Agreement; the option-holder plaintiffs are precluded from doing so.

The virtually identical facts here likewise require dismissal of the Committee's claims against Morgan Stanley for the alleged injury to the Noteholders and shareholders of Sunbeam purportedly caused by the Fairness Opinion. As in Collins, Morgan Stanley's Retention Agreement provides that Morgan Stanley had "duties solely to Sunbeam" and that "[a]ny advice or opinions provided by Morgan Stanley may not be disclosed or referred to publicly or to any third party except in accordance with [Morgan Stanley's] prior written consent." Joffe Aff. Exh. A. Also as in Collins, Morgan Stanley's Fairness Opinion stated that "[i]t is understood that this letter is for the information of the Board of Directors of [Sunbeam] and may not be used for any other purpose without [Morgan Stanley's] prior written consent." Joffe Aff. Exh. B.

Accordingly, under Collins, Sunbeam's Noteholders and shareholders are precluded from suing Morgan Stanley for injuries allegedly caused by the Fairness Opinion, and so is the Committee to the extent its claim is based on those very injuries. Moreover, as will be demonstrated in Point III.A below, the Committee has no constitutional or jurisdictional standing to sue Morgan Stanley on behalf of Sunbeam's Noteholders and shareholders.

POINT III
THE FOURTH CLAIM FOR AIDING AND ABETTING FRAUD MUST BE DISMISSED.

A. The Committee has no standing to sue Morgan Stanley on behalf of Sunbeam's creditors.

Even if the Committee were somehow to obtain authority to assert claim Four against Morgan Stanley, such claim would nevertheless have to be dismissed for lack of standing. When a creditors' committee attempts to sue derivatively on behalf of the debtor (which is the only type of suit it can bring under STN Enters.), it stands in the shoes of the trustee for the purpose of determining standing. In re Mediators, Inc., 105 F.3d 822, 826 (2d Cir. 1997).

Standing is a constitutional and jurisdictional requirement. If a plaintiff lacks standing to bring a particular claim, it will be dismissed pursuant to a motion made under Rule 12(b)(6). In re Mediators, Inc., 105 F.3d at 823; Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1091; Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc. v. Wagoner, 944 F.2d 114, 117 (2d Cir. 1991). To determine standing, the court must look "to the nature of the wrongs alleged in the complaint without regard to the plaintiff's designation . . . and the nature of the injury for which relief is sought." In re Granite Partners, L.P., 194 B.R. 318, 325 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996) and cases cited therein. The burden of establishing standing rests upon the plaintiff. Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1099.

A committee has no standing to assert claims for alleged injuries to creditors or groups of creditors qua creditors. As the Supreme Court held in Caplin v. Marine Midland Grace Trust Co., 406 U.S. 416, 428 (1972), "nowhere in the statutory scheme is there any suggestion that the trustee in reorganization is to assume the responsibility of suing third parties on behalf of debenture holders." See also Mediators, 105 F.3d at 826 ("[A] trustee has no standing generally to sue third parties on behalf of the estate's creditors, but may only assert claims held by the bankrupt corporation itself.") (quoting Shearson Lehman, 944 F.2d at 118); Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1093 ("The Trustee in bankruptcy has standing to represent only the interests of the debtor corporation. Therefore, he has no standing to assert claims of damage to the defrauded purchasers of securities."); Shearson Lehman, 944 F.2d at 118 ("It is well settled that a bankruptcy trustee has no standing generally to sue third parties on behalf of the estate's creditors, but may only assert claims held by the bankrupt corporation itself."); BRS Assoc. v. Dansker, 246 B.R. 755, 771-72 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2000) ("If the cause of action belongs to the estate, the trustee has exclusive standing to assert it; conversely, if the cause of action belongs solely to shareholders, the trustee has no standing to assert it.").

The Amended Complaint purports to assert two distinct types of injury allegedly caused by Morgan Stanley's supposed aiding and abetting Dunlap's and Kersh's misconduct. The principal type of injury is based on the alleged injury to the purchasers of Notes and Sunbeam's shareholders allegedly caused by Morgan Stanley. See, e.g., Amended Complaint ¶ 145 ("Morgan Stanley's conduct harmed the public generally because (i) the [Note] Offering involved numerous Noteholders with the intent that the Notes would be publicly traded shortly after the initial offering; (ii) Sunbeam's public shareholders relied on Morgan Stanley to conduct itself prudently and without conflicts of interest; and (iii) Morgan Stanley knew that it was advising the Board of Directors, which owed fiduciary duties to the shareholders and the Noteholders. . . . Morgan Stanley's conduct was gross, wanton, and in reckless disregard of the rights of Noteholders . . .").* See also Amended Complaint ¶ 141 ("Sunbeam's Board of Directors relied on representations by Morgan Stanley that . . . the Note Offering would not defraud the purchasers of the Notes.").

Under the Caplin-Shearson Lehman doctrine, the Committee has no standing to pursue claims based on the alleged injury to the Noteholders. In Hirsch, the Second Circuit affirmed a dismissal of the trustee's claims against third-party professionals predicated upon (1) the distribution of misleading private placement memoranda to the purchasers of the debtor's securities, and (2) the provision of deficient professional services to the debtor in connection with a due diligence investigation of the proposed acquisitions.

With respect to the first type of claim, the Second Circuit held: "claims predicated upon the distribution of misleading PPMs to investors in [the debtor] are the property of those investors, and may be asserted only by them and to the exclusion of [the trustee].” Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1094. Under Hirsch, the vast bulk of the Committee’s claims against Morgan Stanley must also be dismissed for lack of standing, since they arise out of the alleged misrepresentations related to the Note Offering. See also Mediators, 105 F.3d at 826 (holding that “a bankruptcy trustee had no standing to sue [a third party] for aiding and abetting the unlawful investment activity of” a bankrupt corporation’s officer because such claims belong to creditors qua creditors); Cumberland Oil Corp. v. Thropp, 791 F.2d 1037, 1042 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 950 (1986); In re Granite Partners, L.P., 194 B.R. at 327; In re M&L Bus. Mach. Co., 136 B.R. 271, 276 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992).

In its brief, the Committee states that it now “agrees” that “the Committee cannot sue for any harm caused by Morgan Stanley to creditors,” that “the Committee does not rely on any harm to Noteholders and other constituents,” and that it “is not suing in that capacity.” Comm. Br. 75. The Committee’s disclaimer is inconsistent with the allegations of the Amended Complaint quoted above and others, which are based almost exclusively upon the supposed fraud perpetrated upon the Noteholders through alleged misrepresentations and omissions in the Note Offering and the omitted and misleading information about Sunbeam’s financial condition that allegedly induced the purchase of the Notes. See Amended Complaint, ¶¶ 141, 145, quoted above. See also id. ¶ 136. But as the law cited above makes clear, and the Committee apparently now concedes, these allegations of its Amended Complaint against Morgan Stanley are a legal nullity.

This conclusion is reinforced by the Amended Complaint’s only allegations of the conduct of Morgan Stanley, which allegedly aided and abetted the alleged fraud, set forth in paragraph 142 of the Amended Complaint. This conduct consists of the following three alleged acts, two of which relate to the Note Offering: “(i) rendering the Fairness Opinion, (ii) proceeding with the Note Offering with knowledge or reckless disregard of the fraudulent accounting practices at Sunbeam, and (iii) reviewing, approving and disseminating the March 19, 1998 press release with knowledge or reckless disregard of the false and materially misleading statements made therein.” As can be seen, items (ii) and (iii) relate directly to the alleged misrepresentations and omissions that the Amended Complaint alleges tainted the Note Offering and injured the purchasers of the Notes. With regard to item (i), rendering of the Fairness Opinion, it is difficult to ascertain how such conduct can be a predicate for the claim of aiding and abetting fraud upon Sunbeam.* Certainly no statement made by Morgan Stanley in the Fairness Opinion is alleged to have aided Dunlap's and Kersh's alleged fraud. In any event, as shown in Point II, the allegations of the Amended Complaint fail to state any claim on behalf of Sunbeam arising from the issuance of the Fairness Opinion.

The other type of harm alleged to have been caused by Morgan Stanley's supposed aiding and abetting Dunlap's and Kersh's misconduct is the alleged secondary injury to Sunbeam itself -- that "Morgan Stanley's conduct caused Sunbeam to be mired in litigation, subject to substantial competitive disadvantages and subject to substantial and burdensome professional fees." Amended Complaint ¶ 144. To the extent that this conclusory and speculative bootstrap allegation could be construed to state an actionable claim on behalf of Sunbeam, but see Point III.B, infra, the Committee, nevertheless, lacks standing to assert it.

Since Dunlap's and Kersh's knowledge and conduct as principal management officers are attributable to Sunbeam, Sunbeam itself, if it had sued, would have been barred by the doctrine of in pari delicto from bringing such a claim against third parties. This type of claim is squarely precluded by the Second Circuit's holding in Mediators, 105 F.3d at 826-27, that a company "has no standing to assert aiding-and-abetting claims against third parties for cooperating in the very misconduct that it had initiated." See also Shearson, 944 F.2d at 120 (a corporation has no claim against a third party for defrauding the corporation with the cooperation of management); Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1094 (the trustee "is precluded from asserting the professional malpractice claims alleged in the complaint because of the debtor's collaboration with the defendants-appellees in promulgating and promoting the [fraudulent] schemes"); In re Granite Partners, 194 B.R. at 327-30 (doctrine of in pari delicto deprived chapter 11 trustee of standing to bring claims against brokers for conspiring with and aiding and abetting debtor's principals in breach of fiduciary duty that resulted in dissipation of debtor's assets, following Shearson); Seidman & Seidman v. Gee, 625 So. 2d 1, 3 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1992) ("Where it is shown, without dispute, that a corporate officer's fraud intended to and did benefit the corporation, to the detriment of outsiders, the fraud is imputed to the corporation and is an absolute defense to the corporation's action against its accounting firm for negligent failure to discover the fraud.").

Here, Dunlap's and Kersh's conduct was taken to advance Sunbeam's interests (as well as their own). Indeed, according to the Amended Complaint, both officers were hired by Sunbeam to engineer a quick restructuring and sell Sunbeam at a premium. And, both men were given incentives to align their financial interests with those of Sunbeam. See, e.g., Amended Complaint ¶ 27 ("Sunbeam's Board of Directors hired Dunlap in July of 1996 to restructure the financially ailing company. Sunbeam hired Dunlap on the basis of his reputation in the hope that he could engineer a quick turnaround and sell Sunbeam at a significant premium to the trading value of Sunbeam's stock."); ¶ 29 ("Dunlap and Kersh entered into lucrative three-year employment agreements that gave them strong financial incentives to raise the stock price and sell Sunbeam.") (emphasis added throughout); see also ¶ 31 ("While Dunlap and Kersh exercised overall control over Sunbeam and all its executives, many other members of senior management undertook primary responsibility for executing different parts of the fraudulent scheme devised by Dunlap and Kersh. Dunlap acted primarily as the spokesman and used his reputation as a specialist in turning around troubled companies to support aggressive promises about future performance and lend credibility to false and misleading announcements of record results."); ¶ 34 ("the price of Sunbeam stock increased precipitously after the announcement of Dunlap's hiring and the restructuring program"); ¶ 46 ("Dunlap reluctantly agreed that the focus of Morgan Stanley's engagement would need to change from selling Sunbeam to finding companies that Sunbeam could acquire in an effort to mask the failing turnaround effort.").

This alignment of interests between Sunbeam and its management bars Sunbeam -- and, consequently, the Committee -- from bringing the instant aiding-and-abetting claim against Morgan Stanley, notwithstanding the Amended Complaint's conclusory assertions that Dunlap's and Kersh's personal interests were "adverse to Sunbeam's best interests." Amended Complaint ¶ 149. See In re Livent, 151 F.Supp.2d 371, 405 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (stating that "a court need not feel constrained to accept as truth conflicting pleadings . . . that are contradicted . . . by statements in the complaint itself"); see also Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1095 (sustaining dismissal of the complaint where "attenuated allegations" supporting a claim "are contradicted . . . by more specific allegations in the complaint"); American Centennial Ins. Co. v. Seguros La Republica, S.A., 1996 WL 304436, at *16 (S.D.N.Y. June 5, 1996) ("Allegations are not well pleaded if they are 'made indefinite or erroneous by other allegations in the same complaint'").

The Committee attempts to avoid the inevitable application of the pari delicto doctrine to the claims it purports to assert derivatively on behalf of Sunbeam against Morgan Stanley by adding the conclusory allegations of paragraph 143 to the Amended Complaint, seeking to invoke the "adverse interest" exception to in pari delicto:

143. In pursuing a fraudulent course of conduct, Dunlap and Kersh acted in a manner that was adverse to the interests of Sunbeam. Dunlap and Kersh were not the "sole actors" with respect to Sunbeam. Rather, there were independent directors at Sunbeam who would have brought Dunlap and Kersh's activities to an abrupt halt had they been properly and timely advised by Morgan Stanley.

The Committee's attempt must fail.

"[T]he adverse interest exception rebuts the usual presumption that the acts and knowledge of an agent acting within the scope of employment are imputed to the principal. . . . The exception is a narrow one and applies only when the agent has 'totally abandoned' the principal's interests." Mediators, 105 F.3d at 827, citing Center v. Hampton Affiliates, 66 N.Y.2d 782, 784 (1985) (emphasis added). The exception does not apply simply because the agent has a conflict of interest or does not act primarily for his own or another's benefit. Granite Partners, 194 B.R. at 331 n.15 (citing cases).

As shown above, the factual non-conclusory allegations of the Amended Complaint fail to satisfy the requirement of the adverse interest exception that the insider wrongdoer[s] "totally abandoned" Sunbeam's interests by the alleged wrongful conduct. Indeed, as shown, if anything, the factual allegations point to just the opposite conclusion -- that Dunlap's and Kersh's conduct was in furtherance of Sunbeam's strategy of enhancing its financial results so that it could be sold at a premium and, failing a sale, subsequently making major acquisitions in order to hide Sunbeam's true financial performance. See Amended Complaint ¶¶ 27, 29, 46. Thus, it cannot seriously be claimed that in doing so they abandoned, let alone "totally abandoned," Sunbeam's interests to serve their own or the interests of another -- the prerequisite for application of the adverse interest exception to in pari delicto.

The additional conclusory allegation of paragraph 143 that "Dunlap and Kersh were not the 'sole actors' with respect to Sunbeam" and that "there were independent directors at Sunbeam who would have brought Dunlap and Kersh's activities to an abrupt halt had they been properly and timely advised by Morgan Stanley" does not serve to salvage the Amended Complaint. Such allegations are insufficient to negate application of in pari delicto. In effect, the Committee is attempting to argue that the application of in pari delicto, as enunciated in Mediators, Shearson and other Second Circuit cases, is limited to the situation where the alleged wrongdoing corporate agent (here Dunlap and Kersh) was the sole shareholder of the corporation or the sole actor or decision maker. This argument is fallacious and contrary to applicable Second Circuit law.

The Committee's argument is fatally flawed because it skips a crucial step -- the determination of whether the adverse interest exception to in pari delicto applies in the first place -- which must be made before there can be a determination of whether the "sole stockholder" or "sole actor" doctrine can be used to overcome the adverse interest exception. In other words, while it is true that "the adverse interest exception does not apply to cases in which the principal is a corporation and the agent is its sole shareholder," Mediators, 105 F.3d at 827, the converse -- the Committee's argument that the adverse interest exception necessarily applies where the principal is not the sole shareholder, actor or decision maker -- does not logically follow and is legally erroneous. Indeed, it has specifically been held that "the application of in pari delicto does not depend on [the alleged wrongdoer's] status as . . . sole shareholder." Granite Partners, 194 B.R. at 331. Accordingly, if in pari delicto is otherwise appropriate (which, of course, includes the inapplicability of the "narrow" adverse interest exception), “the doctrine necessarily applies even if the culpable insider is not the only shareholder.” Id.

B. The Amended Complaint’s allegations fail to state a claim for aiding and abetting fraud.

The Fourth Claim also should be dismissed based on the Committee’s utter failure to state any viable cause of action against Morgan Stanley for aiding and abetting fraud. A claim for aiding and abetting fraud is subject to dismissal under Rules 12(b)(6) and 9(b) unless it states, with the required particularity, each of the following elements: (1) the existence of a primary fraud; (2) defendant’s actual knowledge of the fraud; and (3) defendant’s substantial assistance in the commission of the fraud. See, e.g., Cromer Fin. Ltd. v. Berger, 137 F. Supp. 2d 452, 470 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (citing Wight v. Bankamerica Corp., 219 F.3d 79, 91 (2d Cir. 2000)). As shown below, the Amended Complaint alleges neither Morgan Stanley’s actual knowledge of Dunlap’s and Kersh’s alleged fraud, nor its substantial assistance in the commission of that fraud.

1. The Amended Complaint does not allege Morgan Stanley’s “actual knowledge” of Dunlap’s and Kersh’s alleged fraud.

The Amended Complaint does not contain a single non-conclusory, factual allegation that Morgan Stanley had actual knowledge of Dunlap’s and Kersh’s alleged fraud as required under New York law. See, e.g., Cromer Finance, 137 F. Supp. 2d at 494 (“To satisfy the knowledge requirement of these [aiding and abetting] claims, New York law requires that a defendant have ‘actual knowledge’ of the underlying fraud.”) (citing Wight, 219 F.3d at 91); Kolbeck v. LIT America, Inc., 939 F. Supp. 240, 246 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) aff’d, 152 F.3d 918 (2d Cir. 1998) (“New York courts and federal courts in this district, have required actual knowledge” for imposing aiding and abetting liability); Renner v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2000 WL 781081, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. June 16, 2000) (dismissing an aiding and abetting claim for failure to allege actual knowledge); Ryan v. Hunton & Williams, 2000 WL 1375265, at *8 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 20, 2000).

Nowhere does the Amended Complaint allege facts that would show, if proven, Morgan Stanley’s actual knowledge of the underlying allegedly fraudulent activities of Dunlap and Kersh. At most, the Amended Complaint conclusorily alleges that “Morgan Stanley conducted substantial due diligence at Sunbeam, which afforded it the opportunity to discover” facts that might have indicated Sunbeam’s allegedly “fraudulent accounting practices and deteriorating financial condition.” Amended Complaint ¶ 140 (emphasis added). The Amended Complaint also concludes that Morgan Stanley “knew or recklessly disregarded these facts.” Id.

These conclusory allegations are clearly insufficient to satisfy the pleading requirements for aiding-and-abetting claims. As a threshold matter, the allegations that Morgan Stanley had “the opportunity to discover” facts indicating Sunbeam’s alleged fraud at most might be argued to allege Morgan Stanley’s constructive knowledge -- not the required actual knowledge -- and are thus insufficient as a matter of law. See, e.g., Kolbeck, 939 F. Supp. at 246 (“New York common law, which controls the analysis here, has not adopted a constructive knowledge standard for imposing aiding and abetting liability.”). For example, in dismissing aiding and abetting fraud claims against Chemical Bank in Ryan, the court held: “Allegations that Chemical suspected fraudulent activity . . . do not raise an inference of actual knowledge of Wolas’s fraud.” 2000 WL 1375265, at *9.

Moreover, the Committee has failed to support even these legally insufficient and conclusory allegations of constructive knowledge with any facts. As more fully discussed in Point II.A above, Morgan Stanley’s scope of duties was defined by its agreements with Sunbeam, which allowed Morgan Stanley to rely on financial statements and information provided by Sunbeam, its accountants and consultants, as well as other sources, including information from the acquired companies, without further verification. There are no allegations in the Amended Complaint that Morgan Stanley did not in fact rely on such information provided by Sunbeam, its accountants (Arthur Andersen & Co.), its consultant (Coopers & Lybrand), and other specified sources, or that such reliance was unjustified. Like the financial advisors in In re Reliance Sec. Litig., whose motion to dismiss was granted by the court, Morgan Stanley “did not contract to re-audit [the company’s] financial statements and projections. Rather, [the company] asked [the financial advisor] to make a judgment based on a limited set of data.” 135 F. Supp. 2d at 516.

Likewise, Morgan Stanley’s rendering of the Fairness Opinion pursuant to its Retention Agreement with Sunbeam cannot establish a sufficient basis for inferring the required actual knowledge. Thus, in dismissing fraud claims on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the court in Morin v. Trupin, 711 F. Supp. 97, 110 (S.D.N.Y. 1989), held that “merely alleging that a professional has performed services for other defendants is an insufficient basis for inferring scienter.” And that is precisely what the Committee alleges here: barring the Amended Complaint’s unsubstantiated legal conclusions and rhetorical flourishes, the (few) remaining factual allegations merely establish that (a) Morgan Stanley was engaged by Sunbeam as a financial adviser in connection with the Acquisitions and as an underwriter in connection with the Note Offering (Amended Complaint ¶ 44; Joffe Aff. Exh. A); and (b) pursuant to that engagement, Morgan Stanley rendered its Fairness Opinion relying on financial data and projections prepared by Sunbeam and its accountants and consultants, as it was entitled to do. Amended Complaint ¶¶ 54-55; Joffe Aff. Exh. B. Under Morin, such allegations cannot establish the required “actual knowledge” element as a matter of law. See also Dannenberg v. Dorison, 603 F. Supp. 1238, 1241 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (even though plaintiffs had alleged that defendant law firm had prepared numerous tax opinions for fraudulent tax shelters promoted by the same individuals, the pleading was deficient under Rule 9(b)).

In short, the Committee in essence seeks to impose aiding and abetting liability on Morgan Stanley by alleging in conclusory fashion that Morgan Stanley should and would have unearthed the circumstances indicating fraud had it pursued the alleged “opportunities to discover” that were clearly outside of its agreed scope of engagement. As shown, such allegations are utterly deficient under the controlling law and should be dismissed.

2. The Amended Complaint does not allege Morgan Stanley’s “substantial assistance” in the commission of the alleged fraud.

The Amended Complaint’s allegations of “substantial assistance” purportedly rendered by Morgan Stanley to the commission of the alleged fraud fare no better than its inadequate allegations of “actual knowledge” discussed above, and its inadequate pleading of this requisite element is an additional reason compelling dismissal. Under New York law, “a defendant provides substantial assistance only if it affirmatively assists, helps conceal, or by virtue of failing to act when required to do so enables [the fraud] to proceed.” Ryan, 2000 WL 1375265, at *9 (emphasis added); accord Cromer Fin., 137 F. Supp. 2d at 470 (same); Nigerian Nat'l Petroleum Corp. v. Citibank, 1999 WL 558141, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. July 30, 1999) (same) (citing Diduck v. Kaszycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 974 F.2d 270, 284 (2d Cir. 1992)).

The Amended Complaint's allegations of "substantive assistance" do not even begin to describe any of these well-defined and limited situations: Morgan Stanley is not alleged to have affirmatively assisted Dunlap and Kersh in their allegedly fraudulent activities, to have helped them conceal their alleged fraud, or to have failed to act (and thus enabled the fraud to proceed) when it was required to act.

Thus, the Amended Complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley aided and abetted the alleged fraud by "(i) rendering the Fairness Opinion, (ii) proceeding with the Note Offering with knowledge or reckless disregard of the fraudulent accounting practices at Sunbeam, and (iii) reviewing, approving and disseminating the March 19, 1998 press release with knowledge or reckless disregard of the false and materially misleading statements made therein." Amended Complaint ¶ 142. None of the alleged acts, however, demonstrates any legally cognizable "substantial assistance" for the purposes of aiding and abetting liability.

As discussed above (Point III.B.1), the Fairness Opinion was provided by Morgan Stanley in the ordinary course of its professional service pursuant to its Retention Agreement with Sunbeam. The Fairness Opinion itself expressly stated that Morgan Stanley relied on financial statements and projections prepared by Sunbeam and Sunbeam's accountants, consultants and other specified persons. And the Amended Complaint does not allege any facts that would establish that Morgan Stanley was reckless in its reliance. In its Fairness Opinion, Morgan Stanley only stated that, based on such projections, among other things, the proposed Acquisitions were fair from a financial point of view. And Morgan Stanley made no statements in its Fairness Opinion that are alleged to have rendered substantial assistance to Dunlap's and Kersh's alleged fraudulent scheme.

With respect to Morgan Stanley's conduct in connection with the Note Offering, as shown in Points II.B and II.C, whatever injury that conduct allegedly caused was visited upon the Noteholders, not Sunbeam itself. As shown in Points II.B and II.C, and as the Committee concedes, the Committee has no standing or right to assert any claims against Morgan Stanley based on such injuries.

Further, the Committee's allegations of Morgan Stanley's conduct in connection with the Note Offering also lack the required causal relationship between Morgan Stanley's challenged conduct and Sunbeam's injury. As the Second Circuit held in Bloor v. Carro, Spanbock, Londin, Rodman & Fass, 754 F.2d 57, 62-63 (2d Cir. 1985):

In alleging the requisite "substantial assistance" by the aider and abettor, the complaint must allege that the acts of the aider and abettor proximately caused the harm to the corporation on which the primary liability is predicated [citing authorities]. Allegations of a "but for" causal relationship are insufficient.

Thus, even if the Committee had the right to raise such allegations, it would still fail on the required causation element because it does not and could not show how Morgan Stanley's underwriting of the Notes that raised $750 million for Sunbeam (instead of the projected $500 million, see Amended Complaint ¶ 61) caused any harm to Sunbeam. The Committee's allegations fail to state even a "but for" causal relationship, let alone the required proximate causation. Accordingly, the Committee's claim must be dismissed as a matter of law. See Bloor, 754 F.2d at 63 ("The district court was correct in concluding, as a matter of law, that any injury suffered by [the corporation] as a result of the alleged fraud was not proximately caused by the actions of [the alleged aider and abettor].").

The Amended Complaint's remaining allegation of "substantial assistance" consists of a wholly conclusory allegation regarding Morgan Stanley's actions in connection with the supposedly misleading March 19 release. First, as with the Note Offering, any alleged injury from the press release would have caused to Sunbeam's Noteholders and shareholders -- not to the company itself. Therefore, no matter how the Committee chooses to characterize Morgan Stanley's conduct in connection with the press release, its allegations would not suffice as a matter of law to establish the causation element for aiding and abetting liability. See Bloor, 754 F.2d at 62-63.

Second, the Committee's wholly conclusory allegations with respect to Morgan Stanley's actions in connection with the press release should be disregarded in any event, since they are flatly contradicted by more specific facts alleged elsewhere in the Amended Complaint. See Hirsch, 72 F.3d at 1095 (sustaining dismissal of the complaint where “attenuated allegations” supporting a claim “are contradicted . . . by more specific allegations in the complaint”); American Centennial, 1996 WL 304436, at *16 (“Allegations are not well pleaded if they are ‘made indefinite or erroneous by other allegations in the same complaint’”).

Thus, the Amended Complaint’s own allegations establish beyond doubt that it was only due to Morgan Stanley’s insistence that Sunbeam disclosed the possibility of a sales shortfall by issuing its March 19 press release. The Committee states that when Morgan Stanley learned that Sunbeam was performing below its sales forecasts, “Morgan Stanley insisted that Sunbeam issue a press release about the sales shortfall. The Sunbeam representatives strenuously resisted.” Amended Complaint ¶¶ 69-70. Moreover, even after the Sunbeam representatives provided Morgan Stanley with Sunbeam’s plan to meet forecasts, “Morgan Stanley continued to insist that Sunbeam issue a press release disclosing the possibility of a sales shortfall.” Amended Complaint ¶ 72.* These allegations make crystal clear that it was only due to Morgan Stanley’s insistence that Sunbeam agreed to issue its March 19 press release in the first place. If anything, these specific allegations demonstrate that Morgan Stanley affirmatively resisted -- not assisted -- the alleged fraudulent activities at Sunbeam.

Other allegations in the Amended Complaint similarly refute the notion that Morgan Stanley was in cahoots with Dunlap and Kersh. Thus, Dunlap’s and Kersh’s allegedly fraudulent scheme originally contemplated the sale of Sunbeam, not the acquisitions of other companies. Amended Complaint ¶ 29. Morgan Stanley, on the other hand, allegedly insisted from the very inception of its business relationship with Sunbeam that “a sale would not be viable under the circumstances.” Amended Complaint ¶ 41. As the Committee alleges, “[u]ndeterred, Dunlap and Kersh insisted that Morgan Stanley canvass the market and deliver a quick sale.” Id.

* While the Amended Complaint’s factual allegations make clear that Morgan Stanley learned about (and consequently insisted upon the disclosure of) the potential sales shortfall, the Committee now alleges in a classic non sequitur that Morgan Stanley “knew, should have known or recklessly disregarded” that the press release was allegedly misleading “most significantly . . . because it addressed only sales and not earnings.” Amended Complaint ¶ 73 (emphasis added).

When, after an unsuccessful search, Morgan Stanley confirmed its initial “no sale” view, Dunlap allegedly “became enraged and accused Morgan Stanley of incompetence.” Amended Complaint ¶ 42. Furthermore, Dunlap only “reluctantly agreed” that the focus of Morgan Stanley’s engagement would need to change from selling Sunbeam to finding acquisition candidates. Amended Complaint ¶ 46 (emphasis added). And while the Amended Complaint alleges, upon information and belief, that “Morgan Stanley knew, should have known or recklessly disregarded the fact that Dunlap had directed Morgan Stanley to find acquisition targets as a desperate attempt to hide Sunbeam’s true financial condition to investors [sic]” (¶ 46) — the Amended Complaint characteristically fails to support its empty conclusory rhetoric with any factual allegations that would establish that Dunlap ever confided his alleged desperation and improper motives to Morgan Stanley. Rules 12(b)(6) and 9(b) bar allegations pleaded in such a manner.

POINT IV

THE FIFTH CLAIM FOR AIDING AND ABETTING BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY MUST BE DISMISSED.

A. The Committee has no standing to sue Morgan Stanley on behalf of Sunbeam’s creditors.

The Fifth Claim does not specify the nature of the purported injury allegedly caused by Morgan Stanley’s conduct. However, the Fifth Claim’s allegations of Morgan Stanley’s conduct with respect to aiding and abetting Dunlap’s and Kersh’s alleged breach of their fiduciary duties (Amended Complaint ¶ 151) are precisely the same as those asserted in the Fourth Claim with respect to aiding and abetting their fraudulent conduct (Amended Complaint ¶ 142), and so, presumably, the purported injury must also be the same. Moreover, the conduct alleged to be the breach of Dunlap’s and Kersh’s fiduciary duties is the fraudulent scheme itself. Amended Complaint ¶ 149 (“At all relevant times, Dunlap and Kersh breached their duty of loyalty by devising and implementing the fraudulent scheme.”). Accordingly, to the extent the Committee seeks to bring its Fifth Claim against

Morgan Stanley on behalf of the allegedly injured creditors, including Noteholders, it has no standing for the reasons and authorities discussed in Point III.A. above.

B. The Amended Complaint's allegations fail to state a claim for aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duties.

Under Delaware law,* in order to state a claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty, the plaintiff must allege: (1) the existence of a fiduciary relationship; (2) a breach of the fiduciary's duty; and (3) knowing participation in that breach by the defendant. See, e.g., In re Santa Fe Pac. Corp. Shareholder Litig., 669 A.2d 59, 72 (Del. 1995); Ivanhoe Partners v. Newmont Mining Corp., 535 A.2d 1334, 1344 (Del. 1987). A court may only infer knowing participation "if a fiduciary breaches its duty in an inherently wrongful manner, and the plaintiff alleges specific facts from which that court could reasonably infer knowledge of the breach." Nebenzahl v. Miller, 1996 WL 494913, at * 7 (Del. Ch. Aug. 26, 1996). Moreover, an "aiding and abetting claim must be supported by proof of an understanding between the parties 'with respect to their complicity in any . . . breach of fiduciary duties.'" Golaine v. Edwards, 1999 WL 1271882, at * 10 n. 39 (Del. Ch. Dec. 21, 1999) (citing Carlton Invs v. TLC Beatrice Int'l Holdings, 1995 WL 694397, at *15 (Del. Ch. Nov. 21, 1995)).

Here, the Amended Complaint falls far short of alleging "knowing participation" by Morgan Stanley. The Amended Complaint repeatedly alleges that Morgan Stanley was reckless. See, e.g., Amended Complaint ¶¶ 6, 52, 55, 66, 72, 73. But the Amended Complaint fails to allege specific facts from which it can be inferred that Morgan Stanley knowingly participated in Dunlap's and Kersh's breaches of fiduciary duties. Allegations of mere notice, unreasonable unawareness or recklessness are not sufficient. See, e.g., Samuel M. Feinberg Testamentary Trust v. Carter, 652 F. Supp. 1066, 1082 (S.D.N.Y. 1987); Terrydale Liquidating Trust v. Barnes, 611 F. Supp. 1006 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) (“Actual knowledge of a breach of duty is required; mere suspicion or even recklessness as to the existence of a breach is insufficient.”). There is not a single allegation in the Amended Complaint that suggests that Morgan Stanley knew that Dunlap and Kersh were advancing their personal interests, as opposed to Sunbeam’s, and thus violating their duty of loyalty to Sunbeam. From Morgan Stanley’s point of view, the interests of Dunlap and Kersh were aligned with those of Sunbeam. See Amended Complaint ¶¶ 27, 29.

* Claims arising out of an alleged breach of fiduciary duties owed to a corporation are governed by the law of the state of incorporation (in this case, Delaware). See Alwick v. European Micro Holdings, Inc., 137 F. Supp. 2d 112, 126 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) (citing Walton v. Morgan Stanley & Co., 623 F.2d 796, 798 n.3 (2d Cir. 1980)). The same choice-of-law rule applies to claims of aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duties. See BBS Norwalk One, Inc. v. Raccolta, Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 123, 129 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd, 205 F.3d 1321 (2d Cir. 2000). "New York law governing a claim of aiding and abetting [a breach of fiduciary duty] is not materially different" from Delaware law. Id.; see also Glidden v. Jandernoa, 5 F. Supp. 2d 541, 555 n. 9 (W.D. Mich. 1998) (New York and Delaware "appl[y] the same legal standards" to a claim of aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty).

Likewise, there are no specific facts alleged that would demonstrate, if proven, an “understanding” between Dunlap, Kersh and Morgan Stanley with respect to their “complicity.” “Conclusion and conjecture” is insufficient to establish knowing participation in a breach of fiduciary duty. Nebenzahl, 1996 WL 494913, at *7 (dismissing aiding and abetting claims). Nor is the fact that Morgan Stanley profited from its professional services to Sunbeam sufficient to establish that it knew of Dunlap’s and Kersh’s wrongdoing. See, e.g., BBS Norwalk, 60 F. Supp. 2d at 131 (“the mere fact that [a lender] obtained a favorable deal does not reasonably support a conclusion that he knew of any wrongdoing”); Rand v. Western Airlines Inc., 1989 WL 104933, at *5 (Del. Ch. Sept. 11, 1989) (“the fact that [third party charged with aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty] requested and obtained . . . concessions [in its dealings with corporation] does not, without more, give rise to an inference that [third party] was aware of any wrongful conduct by [corporation] or its directors”).

As discussed in Point III.B, the Amended Complaint is devoid of any facts demonstrating such critical elements of aiding and abetting liability as Morgan Stanley’s actual knowledge of or participation in Dunlap’s and Kersh’s alleged wrongdoing, or the causal connection (both “but for” and proximate) between Morgan Stanley’s alleged participation and any harm to Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley’s conduct alleged in the Fifth Claim is precisely the same as alleged in the Fourth Claim. Therefore, the Amended Complaint’s allegations of aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duties must be dismissed as legally insufficient as a matter of law for the same reasons as stated herein with respect to the allegations of aiding and abetting fraud.

POINT V

THE SIXTH CLAIM FOR RECOUPMENT MUST BE DISMISSED.

The Amended Complaint fails to state a recoupment claim. Indeed, such a claim could not possibly be valid, because recoupment is “in the nature of a defense” to a claim. See In re Malinowski, 156 F.3d 131, 133 (2d Cir. 1998); Comm. Br. at 66. But Morgan Stanley has not asserted any claims against Sunbeam, so there simply is no basis for the “defense” of recoupment. Thus, the Amended Complaint’s reference to the “claims of the MS Entities against Sunbeam” (Amended Complaint ¶ 157) is disingenuous and misleading.

The recoupment claim can pertain only to MSF, not Morgan Stanley. The Amended Complaint styles its “Sixth Claim for Relief” as “Recoupment against the MS Entities” (emphasis added). But the Amended Complaint pleads that “Sunbeam’s claims against the MS Entities should be recouped from MSF’s claims against Sunbeam.” Amended Complaint ¶ 157 (emphasis added). And the Committee’s brief concedes that “[t]he claims asserted in the Amended Complaint against Morgan Stanley have been included only to the extent necessary to seek recoupment from the claims of MSF. Recoupment should be permitted from MSF’s claims.” Comm. Br. at 68 (emphasis added).

As demonstrated in the separate memorandum submitted on behalf of the Lenders, the Amended Complaint fails to state a valid claim of recoupment even against MSF. See Lenders’ Brief at III. And the grounds for dismissal of the claim as against MSF apply with equal force to the claim as against Morgan Stanley. But there can be no question that the recoupment claim fails as against Morgan Stanley for the more fundamental reason that Morgan Stanley has not asserted any claims against Sunbeam that could be the subject of recoupment; the Amended Complaint and accompanying brief acknowledge that the Committee seeks recoupment only from MSF’s claims. Accordingly, the Court should dismiss the recoupment claim as against Morgan Stanley.

Conclusion

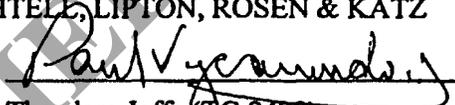

Based on the foregoing, it is respectfully submitted that the claims against Morgan Stanley should be dismissed. As stated more fully in Point IV of the Lenders' brief submitted concurrently herewith (which Point is incorporated herein by reference), the Committee should not be allowed leave to replead its allegations again, and to the extent the Amended Complaint as against Morgan Stanley is dismissed pursuant to Rules 12(b)(6) and 9(b) for failure to state a claim and for failure to plead with particularity, it should be dismissed with prejudice.

ARTHUR J. GONZALEZ
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Before the Court are two motions, each dated October 1, 2001, to dismiss portions of an Amended Complaint,¹ dated September 6, 2001 (the "Amended Complaint"). The Amended Complaint was filed by the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the "Committee") against (i) Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF"), (ii) First Union National Bank ("First Union"), (iii)

¹ The original complaint was filed on July 13, 2001. On August 15, 2002, the parties that filed the current motions to dismiss filed motions to dismiss the original complaint. The August 15, 2002 motions to dismiss were rendered moot by the filing of the Amended Complaint.

Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association (“BANTSA”) (collectively, the “Lenders”) who are holders of secured claims in excess of $1.6 billion against Sunbeam Corp. (“Sunbeam” or the “Debtor”); and (iv) Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (“Morgan Stanley,” and collectively with the Lenders, the “Defendants”). The Amended Complaint seeks to equitably subordinate, or equitably disallow, the claims of all of the Defendants; to avoid and recover for the estate the Lenders’ claims and liens as fraudulent conveyances; to recover damages for Morgan Stanley’s alleged gross negligence and for Morgan Stanley allegedly having aided and abetted fraud and aided and abetted breach of fiduciary duty; and to recoup from MSSF’s claims against the Debtor, all of the Debtor’s claims against what the Committee refers to as the Morgan Stanley entities.

One motion to dismiss was filed by the Lenders and the other by Morgan Stanley. The two motions seek dismissal of the Amended Complaint for lack of standing to pursue the action, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7012(b) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7009 for failure to state fraud with the requisite particularity. The Debtor supports the relief sought in the two motions to dismiss.

DISCUSSION

Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) is incorporated into bankruptcy procedure by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7012(b). In considering a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim for relief, the court accepts as true all material facts alleged in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Bolt Elec., Inc. v. City of New York, 53 F.3d 465 (2d Cir. 1995). The motion to dismiss is granted only if no set of facts can be established to entitle the plaintiff to relief. Walker v.

City of New York, 974 F.2d 293, 298 (2d Cir. 1992).

In considering such a motion, although the Court accepts all the factual allegations in the complaint as true, the Court is “not bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation.” Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 106 S. Ct. 2932, 2944 92 L. Ed. 2d 209 (1986). Rather, to withstand a motion to dismiss, there must be specific and detailed factual allegations to support the claim. Friedl v. City of New York, 210 F.3d 79, 85-86 (2d Cir. 2000).

“Although bald assertions and conclusions of law are insufficient, the pleading standard is nonetheless a liberal one.” Cooper v. Parsky, 140 F.3d 433, 440 (2d Cir. 1998). Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a), which is made applicable to adversary proceedings by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7008, in asserting a claim, the pleader need only set forth a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. The purpose of the statement is to provide “fair notice” of the claim and “the grounds upon which it rests.” Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47, 78 S. Ct. 99,103, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957). The simplicity required by the rule recognizes the ample opportunity afforded for discovery and other pre-trial procedures which permit the parties to obtain more detail as to the basis of the claim and as to the disputed facts and issues. Conley, 355 U.S. at 47-48, 78 S. Ct. at 103. Based upon the liberal pleading standard established by Rule 8(a), even the failure to cite a statute, or to cite the correct statute, will not affect the merits of the claim. Northrop v. Hoffman of Simsbury, Inc., 134 F.3d 41, 46 (2d Cir. 1997). In considering a motion to dismiss, it is not the legal theory but, rather, the factual allegations that matter. Id., citing, Flickinger v. Harold C. Brown & Co., 947 F.2d 595, 600 (2d Cir. 1991) (other citations omitted).

In reviewing a 12(b)(6) motion, the court may consider the allegations in the complaint, exhibits attached to the complaint or incorporated therein by reference, matters of which judicial notice may be taken, Brass v. American Film Techs., Inc., 987 F.2d 142, 150 (2d Cir. 1993), and documents of which plaintiff has notice and on which it relied in bringing its claim or that are integral to its claim. Cortec Industrs. v. Sum Holding, L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 48 (2d Cir. 1991). However, mere notice or possession of the document is not sufficient. Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147, 153 (2d Cir. 2002). Rather, a necessary prerequisite for the court's consideration of the document is that a plaintiff relied "on the terms and effect of a document in drafting the complaint." Id. As such, the document relied upon in framing the complaint is considered to be merged into the pleading. Id. at 153 n.3. (citation omitted). In contrast, when assessing the sufficiency of the complaint, the court does not consider extraneous material because considering such material would run counter to the liberal pleading standard which requires only a short and plain statement of the claim showing entitlement to relief. Id. at 154.

Finally, to survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff only has to allege sufficient facts, not prove them. Koppel v. 4987 Corp., 167 F.3d 125, 133 (2d Cir. 1999). A court's role in ruling on a motion to dismiss is to evaluate the legal feasibility of the complaint, not to undertake to weigh the evidence which may be offered to support it. Cooper v. Parsky, 140 F.3d 433, 440 (2d Cir. 1998).

Thus, for the purposes of this motion to dismiss, the Court accepts as true all of the material allegations in the Committee's complaint.

The Amended Complaint

The Amended Complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley acted as underwriter in connection with Sunbeam's offering of certain convertible notes (the "Note Offering") at the same time that it acted as financial advisor to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of three entities (the "Acquisitions") - The Coleman Company, Inc; First Alert, Inc.; and Signature Brands USA, Inc. In this dual capacity, the Amended Complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley was conflicted. The Amended Complaint details alleged fraudulent activity by certain of Debtor's senior management (the "Insiders"). It is alleged that, in its dual role as underwriter in the Note Offering and advisor concerning the Acquisitions, Morgan Stanley aided and abetted the fraudulent activity of the Insiders. According to the Amended Complaint, Morgan Stanley committed gross negligence by (i) failing to uncover the Insiders fraudulent activity, and (ii) recklessly advising Sunbeam to proceed with the Acquisitions by rendering a "Fairness Opinion" to Sunbeam that the Acquisitions were fair to Sunbeam from a financial point of view based on a synergy analysis when, according to the Committee, the amounts paid for the Acquisitions were excessive. It is alleged that the Fairness Opinion issued by Morgan Stanley was based on evaluations prepared by Coopers & Lybrand upon which Morgan Stanley relied without independent verification. It is also alleged that the Lenders extended financing (the "Bank Facility") to Sunbeam in 1998 and Sunbeam used the proceeds from the Bank Facility to finance the Acquisitions while Sunbeam was insolvent or, alternatively, that the Acquisitions caused Sunbeam to become insolvent.

The Amended Complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley, as underwriter, lured investors into purchasing the Notes to finance the Acquisitions. It is alleged that the purpose of the Note Offering was to use the proceeds to bolster the creditworthiness of the Lenders' loan. This was allegedly accomplished because pursuant to the Indenture upon which the Notes were issued, the Notes were contractually subordinated to the indebtedness under the Bank Facility and the proceeds of the Note Offering would provide a substantial "cushion" for repayment of the loan. It is further alleged that the Lenders would only provide financing conditioned on the issuance of the Notes. After the Note Offering closed, the Lenders issued a commitment letter on the loan. The borrowings under the loan were guaranteed by the Debtor's direct and indirect subsidiaries and, as such, the Bank Facility was structurally senior to the Notes.

The Committee alleges that Morgan Stanley committed fraud by omitting and misrepresenting material facts concerning Sunbeam's financial condition when acting as underwriter for the Note Offering and inducing the purchase of the Sunbeam Notes. In its capacity as underwriter, Morgan Stanley consented to a March 19, 1998 press release with allegedly material misrepresentations of Sunbeam's financial condition. It is alleged that Morgan Stanley received information that should have alerted it to the fact that Sunbeam would not meet the projections set forth in the press release and it therefore was misleading. It is further alleged that once the press release was issued, a representative of the accounting firm Arthur Anderson opposed its inclusion with the offering materials distributed for the Notes but that Morgan Stanley proceeded to include the press release in those materials. It is also alleged that the Noteholders relied on the misrepresentations, were not aware that they were false, and have suffered injury as a result. Further, this alleged fraud injured the Noteholders and other unsecured creditors.

In the Amended Complaint, it is further alleged that MSSF is the alter ego of Morgan Stanley and as such, Morgan Stanley's alleged misconduct can be imputed to MSSF. It is also alleged that BANTSA and First Union's participation in the Bank Facility is also actionable because the misconduct of Morgan Stanley can be imputed to BANTSA and First Union on an agency theory or because BANTSA and First Union willingly accepted the benefits of the Note Offering, knowing that such was the product of fraud, or by recklessly disregarding that fact.

First Claim for Relief

With respect to the first claim for relief in the Amended Complaint, the Committee seeks to equitably subordinate the claims of all of the Defendants.

The Lenders argue that the equitable subordination claim must be dismissed as to them because, while alleging misconduct by Morgan Stanley, the Amended Complaint does not allege any inequitable conduct by the Lenders or any basis to attribute Morgan Stanley's alleged inequitable conduct to the Lenders.

Morgan Stanley argues that the claim for equitable subordination against it must be dismissed because in order to equitably subordinate a claim, the claimant itself must have engaged in the inequitable conduct and Morgan Stanley is not a claimant as it has not filed a proof of claim in this case.

Equitable Subordination

11 U.S.C. § 510(c) provides, in relevant part, that:

(c) . . . the court may

(1) under principles of equitable subordination, subordinate for purposes of distribution all or part or an allowed claim to all or part of another allowed claim or all or part of an allowed interest to all or part of another allowed interest; or

(2) order that any lien securing such a subordinated claim be transferred to the estate.

11 U.S.C. § 510(c).

The Bankruptcy Code does not set forth the "principles of equitable subordination." Rather, Congress intended for existing case law to establish the framework for its development. 80 Nassau Assocs. v. Crossland Fed. Sav. Bank (In re 80 Nassau Assocs.), 169 B.R. 832, 837 n.3 (Bankr.

S.D.N.Y. 1994), citing, S. Rep No. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 74 (1978); 124 Cong.Rec. H11,095 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978) (statement of Rep. Edwards); Andrew De Natale & Prudence B. Abram, The Doctrine of Equitable Subordination as Applied to Nonmanagement Creditors, 40 Bus. Law 417, 421 (1985). Thus, pre-Bankruptcy Code cases which interpret the doctrine of equitable subordination continue as authoritative precedent. Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 837 n.3. Indeed, in considering the doctrine under the Bankruptcy Code, courts have relied on the three-prong test set forth in Benjamin v. Diamond (In re Mobile Steel Co.), 563 F.2d 692, 700 (5th Cir. 1977), a proceeding under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act, 11 U.S.C. §§ 701 et. seq. (1970).

The elements of the Mobile Steel test are as follows:

- (i) the claimant must have engaged in some type of inequitable conduct;
- (ii) the misconduct must have resulted in injury to the creditors . . . or conferred an unfair advantage on the claimant;
- (iii) equitable subordination of the claim must not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy [law].

Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 700.

A bankruptcy court's "general equitable power to adjust equities among creditors in relation to the liquidation results" is the source of the bankruptcy court's power to subordinate claims. Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 837. The equitable goal is to prevent injustice or unfairness in the bankruptcy context. Id. This is accomplished by permitting the court to subordinate an otherwise legally valid claim when the claimant has engaged in conduct that makes it unjust or unfair for the claimant to share pro rata with similarly situated creditors. Id.

Equitable subordination can only be used to reorder priorities, not to disallow claims. Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 837. Moreover, pursuant to the express terms of Bankruptcy Code § 510(c), claims may only be subordinated to other claims and interests may only be subordinated to other interests.

Inequitable Conduct

The type of misconduct that warrants equitable subordination of a claim includes instances where there has been:

- (i) fraud, illegality or breach of fiduciary duty;
- (ii) undercapitalization; and
- (iii) control or use of the debtor as an alter ego for the benefit of the claimant.

Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 838. See also Capital Bank & Trust Realty Trust v. 604 Columbus Ave. Realty Trust (In re 604 Columbus Ave. Realty Trust), 968 F.2d 1332, 1359-60 (1st Cir. 1992) (noting that equitable subordination applies when the debtor's fiduciary misuses his position to disadvantage other creditors, when a third party dominates or controls a debtor to disadvantage others, or when a third party defrauds other creditors.)

However, even lawful conduct may be considered inequitable if it "shocks one's good conscience." Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 837. This is because, as an "integrated proceeding," the bankruptcy case "concerns not only the legal validity of the claim but also claimant's right to share in the estate." Id. If a claimant has engaged in inequitable conduct, its claim may be equitably subordinated irrespective of whether that conduct is related to the acquisition or assertion of the claim. Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 700.

A higher level of proof is required to equitably subordinate the claim of a party that is neither an insider of the debtor, nor a fiduciary to the debtor or other creditors. ABF Capital Mgmt. v. Kidder Peabody & Co., Inc. (In re Granite Partners, L.P.), 210 B.R. 508, 515 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997).

This is because, absent receipt of a preference or fraudulent transfer, a creditor may ordinarily improve its position in relation to other creditors. Id. at 515. Courts are “reluctant to find the requisite level of misconduct in ‘arms-length’ transactions between borrowers and lenders.” Columbus Ave., 968 F.2d at 1361.

When a non-insider or non-fiduciary is involved, courts have required that a claimant’s conduct be egregious and severely unfair to other creditors before its claim will be equitably subordinated. Columbus Ave., 968 F.2d at 1360. The conduct required has been described as “substantial misconduct tantamount to fraud, misrepresentation, overreaching or spoliation.” Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 838-39. Few cases find that non-insider, non-fiduciary claimants meet this standard. Granite Partners, 210 B.R. at 515.

The conduct alleged must “violate[] a generally recognized duty that exists outside of bankruptcy law.” Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 839. Thus, to defeat a motion to dismiss, the facts must allege that the claimant committed fraud or some other illegal action, or that the claimant breached some legal duty that it owed to the debtor or its creditors. Granite Partners, 210 B.R. at 508.

Injury to Creditors or Unfair Advantage to the Claimant

The second element of the Mobile Steel test requires a finding that the claimant’s conduct injured the debtor or its creditors or resulted in an unfair advantage to the claimant. Moreover, when a court finds that the claimant’s conduct warrants equitable subordination of its claim, as equitable relief is remedial and not penal, that claim is “subordinated only to the extent necessary to offset the harm which the bankrupt and its creditors suffered on account of the inequitable conduct.” Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 701. The injury suffered sets the limits of the remedy regardless of the nature of the claimant’s conduct. Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 840.

Not Inconsistent with the Bankruptcy Code

The third requirement of the Mobile Steel standard is that any equitable subordination of a claim not be inconsistent with bankruptcy law. This element recognizes that the doctrine is not a mechanism to be used by courts to alter the statutory scheme in an effort to reach a result the court considers more equitable than the distribution scheme provided for in the Bankruptcy Code. Nassau Assocs., 169 B.R. at 841.

As the first requirement for equitable subordination is that the claimant itself engaged in the inequitable conduct, the Lenders and Morgan Stanley argue that their claims cannot be subordinated under this theory. The Lenders argue that they are claimants but the inequitable conduct alleged was not their conduct but, rather, the conduct of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley argues that it is not a claimant as it has not filed any proof of claim in this case.

The Committee contends that the Lenders were lenders under the Bank Facility in name only and that there was an alter ego or agency relationship between Morgan Stanley and MSSF and, therefore, the inequitable conduct alleged against Morgan Stanley can be imputed to MSSF. The Committee further alleges that there was also an agency relationship between Morgan Stanley and BANTSA and First Union which would allow for Morgan Stanley's conduct to be imputed to BANTSA and First Union.

Alter Ego Liability

In determining whether the corporate form will be disregarded and the corporate veil pierced, the law of the state of incorporation is applied. Fletcher v. Atex, Inc., 68 F.3d 1451, 1456 (2d Cir.

1995). Morgan Stanley and MSSF are Delaware corporations, therefore, Delaware law applies.

Under Delaware law, the corporate veil of an entity can be pierced “where there is fraud or where a subsidiary is in fact a mere instrumentality or alter ego of its owner.” Geyer v. Ingersoll Publ'ns Co., 621 A.2d 784, 793 (Del.Ch. 1992). As the applicable standard is in the alternative, there is no requirement of a showing of fraud when relying on the alter ego theory of liability. Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1457.

To establish alter ego liability under Delaware law, what must be shown is:

- (1) that the parent and the subsidiary operated as a single economic entity; and
- (2) that an overall element of injustice or unfairness is present.

Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1457. (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Thus, although fraud need not be shown, it is required that an overall element of injustice or unfairness be shown. Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1458.

A court considers various factors in determining whether the parent and subsidiary “operated as a single economic entity such that it would be inequitable . . . to uphold a legal distinction between them.” Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1458. (citations omitted). The relevant factors to consider include:

- whether the corporation was adequately capitalized for the corporate undertaking;
- whether the corporation was solvent;
- whether dividends were paid, corporate records kept, officers and directors functioned properly, and other corporate formalities were observed;
- whether the dominant shareholder siphoned corporate funds; and
- whether, in general, the corporation simply functioned as a facade for the dominant shareholder.

Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1458.

However, even in the absence of allegations of these specific factors, a court may not grant a motion to dismiss where the plaintiff has made other relevant allegations. Union Carbide Corp. v. Montell N.V., 944 F.Supp. 1119, 1145 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

The purpose of allowing the corporate veil to be pierced on an alter ego theory is to hold the party actually responsible for the inequitable conduct accountable and to prevent that corporation from “using another corporation to shield itself from liability.” Gabriel Capital, L.P. v. NatWest Fin., Inc., 122 F. Supp.2d 407, 432 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), citing, 1 WILLIAM MEADE FLETCHER ET AL, FLETCHER CYCLOPEDIA OF THE LAW OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS § 41.10, at 577-78 & § 41.20, at 596.

Nevertheless, courts are reluctant to disregard the corporate structure unless provided with a sufficient rationale. Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1458. Therefore, a high standard must be met before alter ego liability is warranted. Gabriel Capital, 122 F.Supp.2d at 432.

Ordinarily the determination of the nature and extent of domination is a question of fact. Union Carbide, 944 F. Supp. at 1145. However, there are instances “where courts have granted motions to dismiss as well as motions for summary judgment in favor of defendant parent companies where there has been a lack of sufficient evidence to place the alter ego issue in dispute.” See Fletcher, 68 F.3d at 1458 (citing cases).

To support a claim for alter ego liability and establish that the subsidiary was a mere facade for the dominant shareholder, it is not sufficient to show “mere domination and control” of the subsidiary by the parent corporation. Outokumpu Eng’g. Enters., Inc. v. Kvaerner Enviropower, Inc., 685 A.2d 724, 729 (Sup.Ct. Del. 1996). Rather, the domination shown must be “complete domination of the corporation” concerning the transaction in issue. Union Carbide Corp. v. Montell N.V., 944 F.Supp. 1119, 1144 (S.D.N.Y. 1996). The extent of the domination and control must preclude the controlled entity from having "legal or independent significance of its own." Wallace v. Wood, 752 A.2d 1175, 1184 (1999). There must be an abuse of the corporate form to effect a fraud or an injustice - some sort of "elaborate shell game." Outokumpu, 685 A.2d at 729.

Finally, while it is not sufficient, at the pleading stage, to make conclusory allegations of control, Union Carbide Corp., 944 F. Supp. at 1144-45, nevertheless, setting forth some examples of alleged domination may provide sufficiently specific factual allegations to support an alter ego claim and result in denial of the motion to dismiss. See Union Carbide, 944 F. Supp. at 1145; Geyer, 621 A.2d at 793.

Agency

There are two theories of agency for determining whether a parent may be liable for actions by a subsidiary, one is complete dominion and control and the analysis is similar to that used for alter ego, the other is "the standard principal/agent concept often involving but not necessarily requiring a parent and subsidiary." Outokumpu Eng'g Enters, Inc. v. Kvaerner Enviropower Inc., 685 A.2d at 730 (Del Supr. 1996). While the former uses an alter ego type of analysis and requires that total dominance of the subsidiary by the parent be proven, the latter does not require a showing of complete dominance because customary agency principles may apply whether the parties are parent and subsidiary or completely unrelated apart from the specific transaction where they may have assumed roles of principal and agent. Phoenix Canada Oil Co. Ltd. v. Texaco, Inc., 842 F.2d 1466, 1477 (3d. Cir. 1988). In considering traditional agency principles the focus of the inquiry is on the relationship between the two entities as it bears on the alleged wrong. Id.

Even under traditional agency relationship analysis where total domination need not be proven, in considering whether an agency relationship is present, the most essential element is a finding that the principal directs and controls the agent's action. Nat'l Petrochemical Co. of Iran v. M/T Stolt Sheaf, 930 F.2d 230, 244 (2d Cir. 1991); see also Abex, Inc. v. Koll Real Estate Group, Inc., 1994 WL 728827 *14 (Del.Ch. 1994) (noting that the right to control is the critical factor in establishing an agency relationship).

Moreover, acting in the name of another, by itself, does not make one an agent. Rather, "[t]o be an agent, one must have been appointed by the principal and be subject to the principal's orders." Abex, Inc., 1994 WL 728827 at *15 citing, RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF AGENCY §§ 1 and 14.

Application of the Facts, as Alleged, to the "Alter Ego" and "Agency" Theories

The Committee argues that the alter ego theory applies because Morgan Stanley and MSSF operated as a single economic unit and therefore there should be no distinction between them. The Committee alleges that MSSF was just named as the lender in the loan documents but that Morgan Stanley really controlled the entire process.

With respect to the alter ego theory, the Defendants maintain that mere control of one entity by another is not sufficient to pierce the corporate veil. The Defendants also contend that because the Committee has not alleged any of the Fletcher factors, their motion must be dismissed.

The Amended Complaint contains no allegation concerning the Fletcher factors. Most relevant, there are no allegations that MSSF was undercapitalized, or that it had no business operations, or that its finances were intermingled with those of Morgan Stanley. Nevertheless, even in the absence of allegations of Fletcher factors, in certain cases, it may be proper to deny a motion to dismiss where there are other specific relevant allegations.

In this case, the Committee argues that the corporate veil should be pierced because of Morgan

Stanley's purported control and dominance over its affiliate, MSSF, throughout the entire process leading to the extension of the Bank Facility. The Committee alleges that the allocation of responsibility concerning the Bank Facility was to be determined solely by Morgan Stanley. The Committee also alleges that Morgan Stanley did not distinguish between itself and MSSF in its engagement letter to Sunbeam or in the Note offering. The Committee further alleges that in addition to its oversight over MSSF's actions concerning the Bank Facility, MSSF did not perform any due diligence and had no independent discretion. The Committee asserts that MSSF's role was merely to be named a lender on the Bank Facility.

The Committee's assertion that MSSF had no discretion is conclusory. The Committee has had ample discovery and has not provided support for this assertion. Moreover, the Court does not credit the Committee's reference to Morgan Stanley's alleged failure to distinguish between itself and MSSF in Morgan Stanley's engagement letter to Sunbeam or in the Note Offering because in both instances, despite the Committee's allegation to the contrary, Morgan Stanley clearly referenced the fact that either it or "its affiliates" or "an affiliate" would provide the services mentioned in those documents.

In addition, mere domination or control by one entity over another is not sufficient to require piercing of the corporate veil. Rather there must be such complete domination and control that the controlled entity is a mere shell.

Moreover, the purpose in allowing the corporate veil to be pierced is to ensure that an entity who engaged in inequitable conduct is held accountable for its actions and to prevent that wrongdoer from using another entity to shield it from liability. The typical situation arises where an entity completely controls an undercapitalized subsidiary or affiliate and, through that dominance, causes the underfunded-controlled entity to engage in inequitable conduct. When, as a result of that conduct, the injured party attempts to obtain redress, the controlling entity shields itself from liability behind the facade of the shell corporation, while the injured party has no recourse against the undercapitalized shell corporation. In that instance, the corporate form was used to effect a fraud or injustice and the corporate veil is pierced to allow the injured party to obtain redress from the actual wrongdoer who has the wherewithal to pay any damages awarded.

In this case, the allegations of wrongdoing are all based on the conduct of Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley's purported wrongful conduct is blamed for the injury to the Noteholders and other unsecured creditors. There is no evidence, however, that Morgan Stanley used MSSF to shield itself from potential liability. Rather, Morgan Stanley has liability exposure to the Noteholders by virtue of its role as underwriter of the Note Offering. Moreover, MSSF is not the typical undercapitalized shell used to shield a related entity from creditors. MSSF had sufficient capital to make the loan and there are no allegations that it did not have sufficient capital to fund its operations generally. Thus, the corporate form was not used to allow Morgan Stanley to escape any liability it might have based on its conduct. The Committee has not presented a sufficient rationale to overcome the reluctance to disregard the corporate structure.

In addition, the Court finds that the Committee has not alleged a sufficient basis upon which to hold MSSF liable for any conduct on Morgan Stanley's part based upon a theory of agency. The Court has rejected application of alter ego liability and as the characteristics of agency based upon complete dominance and control are identical, agency cannot be established on that basis. Under a traditional agency theory, in order to hold the principal liable for the agent's conduct, there would have to be allegations that the principal directed and controlled the agent. There are no allegations in the Amended Complaint that Morgan Stanley acted subject to MSSF's direction and control. Thus, there are no allegations that MSSF controlled Morgan Stanley upon which to conclude that Morgan Stanley was MSSF's agent. Indeed, the Committee has alleged the opposite, that Morgan Stanley controlled MSSF.

The Court, further finds that even if one were to impute Morgan Stanley's conduct to MSSF, the allegations in the Amended Complaint would be insufficient to hold First Union or BANTSA liable on a theory of agency. There are no allegations that First Union or BANTSA controlled either Morgan Stanley or MSSF. The Committee referenced the titles given the Lenders under the documents - Syndication Agent, Documentation Agent, and Administrative Agent. However, merely having been given a title does not establish an agreement by one to be subject to another's control. The titles by themselves do not set forth legal relationships. In any case, the alleged inequitable conduct by Morgan Stanley sought to be imputed to MSSF would be outside of its scope as syndication agent and could not therefore be imputed to its principal even if it were established that First Union and BANTSA were the principals of MSSF in its role as syndication agent. Aside from the reference to the titles, there are no allegations in the Amended Complaint that specifically reference anything in the loan documents or in the agreement between the Lenders establishing an agreement by MSSF to be subject to the control of First Union or BANTSA. Nor are there any allegations that First Union or BANTSA directed any specific actions of either Morgan Stanley or MSSF. Thus, the allegation that Morgan Stanley and MSSF acted as agent for First Union and BANTSA in connection with the Bank Facility is conclusory.

Moreover, there is no allegation that Morgan Stanley acted as agent for First Union and BANTSA in connection with the Note Offering or the Acquisitions. Yet, it is Morgan Stanley's conduct in relation to the Note Offering and Acquisitions that form the basis for its allegedly inequitable conduct.

The Committee argues that First Union and BANTSA are also liable based on their own actions. In the Amended Complaint, the Committee alleges that BANTSA and First Union failed to conduct due diligence concerning the March 19, 1998 press release issued by Sunbeam which was purportedly fraudulent.² However, in connection with their extension of the loan as part of the Bank Facility, failure to conduct such due diligence cannot be considered inequitable conduct as the Lenders did not have a duty to conduct due diligence concerning the press release. Nor is the Lenders' decision to attempt to syndicate all or a portion of the loan evidence of inequitable conduct as syndication of large loans is common, and acceptable, practice.

None of the allegations directed at the Lenders themselves, as opposed to those directed to Morgan Stanley and attempted to be imputed to the Lenders, are the type of gross and egregious conduct required to equitably subordinate a claim.

The allegations in the Amended Complaint do not provide a basis to impute Morgan Stanley's conduct to MSSF, under either an alter ego or agency theory. Nor is there any basis to find First Union or BANTSA liable on a theory of agency. In addition, there are no allegations in the Amended Complaint concerning actionable inequitable conduct by the Lenders themselves. Thus, the Court grants the Lenders motion to dismiss the first claim for relief.³

Second Claim for Relief

Concerning the second claim for relief which seeks to avoid the Lenders' claims and liens as fraudulent conveyances, the Committee argues that the loans were earmarked for the Acquisitions at a time when the Lenders knew or recklessly disregarded that Sunbeam would not receive reasonably equivalent value for the loans. Further, the Committee notes that as security for the loans, Sunbeam and its subsidiaries conveyed security interests in their respective property to the Defendants. The Committee contends that the Acquisitions, and the incurrence of the debt and transfer of the security interests related to the Bank Facility, reduced Sunbeam's assets available to other creditors. The Committee urges that the Court consider the Bank Facility and the Acquisitions a single integrated transaction. Further, the Committee contends that this series of transactions occurred at a time when Sunbeam was insolvent or, alternatively, the transactions caused Sunbeam to become insolvent.

The Lenders move to dismiss this claim for relief arguing first that the Amended Complaint fails to allege the absence of fair consideration or reasonably equivalent value with the requisite particularity. In addition, the Lenders argue that the facts do not warrant "collapsing" the loan transaction and the Acquisitions into a single integrated transaction. The Lenders maintain that the transaction pursuant to which Sunbeam borrowed from the Lenders and secured those loans is separate and independent from the transaction under which Sunbeam used certain of the loan proceeds, as well as proceeds of the Note Offering, to make the Acquisitions.

Collapsing Transactions

A series of transactions may, under certain circumstances, be “collapsed” and treated as a single transaction for the purpose of determining whether there has been a fraudulent conveyance. HBE Leasing Corp. v. Frank, 48 F.3d 623, 635 (2d Cir. 1995). This treatment is usually accorded in situations where a debtor who has exchanged property with another for fair consideration, then gratuitously transfers that consideration to a third-party. Id. When the series of transactions are completed, the debtor remains with nothing while the counter-party to the first transaction receives the property and the counter-party to the second transaction receives the consideration. Id.

Although the concept of “collapsing” a series of transactions and treating them as a single integrated transaction has been applied primarily when analyzing a transfer alleged to be fraudulent in the context of a failed leveraged buy-out (“LBO”), it has also been utilized in other contexts. In re Best Prods. Co., Inc., 157 B.R. 222, 229-30 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1993) (citing LBO cases, then collapsing sublease between subsidiary and parent corporation which was used as mere financing vehicle and treating loan as having been made directly to parent corporation); see also, Orr v. Kinderhill Corp., 991 F.2d 31, 35-36 (2d Cir. 1993) (collapsing transactions concerning corporation’s (i) transfer of real property, and (ii) subsequent distribution of stock in transferee corporation, and treating integrated transaction as not supported by fair consideration); See also, Voest-Alpine Trading Corp. v. Vantage Steel Corp., 919 F.2d 206, 212-13 (3d Cir. 1990) (collapsing series of transactions as “sham” where transactions were designed to deprive a company’s unsecured creditors of access to its assets by rendering company insolvent through foreclosure and transferring its assets to another company without fair consideration).

Courts have “collapsed” a series of transactions into one transaction when it appears that despite the formal structure erected and the labels attached, the segments, in reality, comprise a single integrated scheme when evaluated focusing on the knowledge and intent of the parties involved in the transaction. Best Prods. Co., 157 B.R. at 229; Voest-Alpine, 919 F.2d at 213. Focusing on the knowledge and intent of the parties involves a fact intensive case-by-case analysis. Best Prods. Co., 157 B.R. at 229.

Where a transfer is actually “only a step in a general plan,” an evaluation is made of the entire plan and its overall implications. Orr v. Kinderhill Corp., 991 F.2d at 35. A loan may appear to provide fair consideration because the lender provided funds to an entity in exchange for a security interest. If, however, the proceeds of that loan are transferred to a third-party for less than fair consideration, the transactions may be collapsed and the initial lender’s transfer deemed fraudulent if that initial transferor was intimately involved in the formulation or implementation of the plan by which the proceeds of the loan were channeled to the third-party. Voest-Alpine, 919 F.2d at 212-13, citing, U.S. v. Tabor Court Realty Corp., 803 F.2d 1288, 1303 n.8 (3d Cir. 1986). Where the evidence shows that the parties knew or should have known that the ultimate use of the funds would deplete the assets of a corporation, a court disregards the formal structure. Lippi v. City Bank, 955 F.2d 599, 612 (9th Cir. 1992). Nevertheless, a lender may extend a loan to an entity even if it is aware that the borrower ultimately intends to use the funds to repay antecedent debt, Atlanta Shipping Corp. v. Chemical Bank, 818 F.2d 240, 249 (2d Cir. 1987), or to invest in a speculative venture. In re

Greenbrook Carpet Co., 722 F.2d 659, 661 (11th Cir. 1984). Where the funds are ultimately used for legitimate corporate purposes, then the transfer is not fraudulent even if the series of transactions are viewed as a single integrated transaction. HBE Leasing, 48 F.3d at 637.

To render the initial transferee's exchange with a debtor fraudulent, that transferee must have had either actual or constructive knowledge of the entire scheme. HBE Leasing, 48 F.3d at 635. Constructive knowledge is attributed to a party if it was aware of circumstances that would ordinarily lead one to inquire further but it failed to do so. Id. at 636. Although certain courts attribute the transferees who fail to make appropriate inquiries with the knowledge that would have been gained from ordinary diligence, other courts require a "more active avoidance of the truth," such as consciously turning away from knowledge. Id. (citations omitted).

Application of the Facts, as Alleged, to the Collapsing Theory

In order for the Committee to prevail on its collapsing theory, it is necessary to treat the transaction concerning the borrowing from the Lenders and the securing of the loan, the transaction concerning the Note Offering, and the transaction concerning the use of the loan proceeds to buy the Acquisitions as one integrated transaction.

The Committee argues that although the $1.6 billion advanced to the Debtor provided fair consideration for the security interest received by the Lenders, the Lenders knew that proceeds from the loan would be used to purchase the Acquisitions at prices substantially higher than their fair market value and that those purchases were made while the Debtor was insolvent or, alternatively, that the purchases caused the Debtor to become insolvent. The Committee contends that the Lenders were prepared to finance this risky loan because the funds from the Note Offering would supply a cushion for repayment of their loan. Thus, the Committee argues that because the Lenders knew that the ultimate use of the funds would harm the Debtor, the transactions should be collapsed and the Lenders claims and liens should be avoided as fraudulent transfers.⁴

The Lenders argue that the factual allegations do not justify collapsing the transactions because the loan proceeds were used for legitimate corporate purposes. In addition to applying a portion of the proceeds of the Bank Facility for the purchase of the Acquisitions, the Lenders note that in the Amended Complaint, the Committee acknowledges that the documents upon which they rely indicate that the balance of the loan proceeds were to be used to refinance certain existing indebtedness, to pay related fees and expenses, and to finance ongoing working capital needs. The Lenders maintain that there is no dispute that these additional intended uses are all legitimate corporate expenditures. Moreover, the Lenders argue that it was proper to use a portion of the loan proceeds, together with the proceeds from the Note Offering, to purchase three unrelated companies - each with their own geographic presence, product lines and brand names. As those proceeds were used to acquire other existing companies, each with its own business and assets, the Lenders maintain that the purchases of the Acquisitions were legitimate corporate expenditures even if they were speculative ventures.

⁴ Citing to the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, the committee asserts that a party seeking to recover a conveyance as fraudulent must plead that:

- i. the debtor was insolvent, inadequately capitalized and/or intended to incur debts that it could not repay as they would become due.
- ii. the debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value (also known as "fair consideration") in exchange for the obligation incurred or the property transferred.

The Committee also cites to N.Y. Debtor & Creditor Law § 272, 273; Fla. Stat. §§ 726.103, 726.104, as containing analogous sections.

The Committee asserts that the Lenders were aware of the structure of the entire transaction in that proceeds from the Bank Facility would be used to purchase the Acquisitions and that closing on the Notes was a condition precedent to closing on the Bank Facility. Thus, the Committee maintains that the Lenders knowingly funded the purchase of the Acquisitions.

An entity, however, may use proceeds of a loan to purchase another business even if it is a speculative venture and the fact that the acquired company later proves unprofitable is not a basis upon which to retroactively impute knowledge that the consideration paid to acquire it far exceeded its value to the purchaser.

The Committee, nevertheless, contends that the Lenders had actual knowledge, after having conducted due diligence, that the Debtor was insolvent and that it was paying an excessive sum to purchase the Acquisitions. In support of this assertion, the Committee references information provided by the current CEO of the Debtor as to the unreliability of the financial analysis upon which the Lenders relied in extending the loan. A deposition upon which the Committee relied in bringing the Amended Complaint, however, makes clear that the meeting at which the CEO provided this information to the Lenders did not occur until several months after the closing of the Bank Facility.

The Committee's assertion concerning the Lenders purported knowledge of the Debtor's overpayment for the Acquisitions is conclusory as there are no factual allegations to support it. There are no allegations concerning what facts were discovered by the Lenders. Rather, the allegations concern what Morgan Stanley discovered. Moreover, in the Amended Complaint, it is acknowledged that Morgan Stanley found the purchase of the Acquisitions to be fair to the Debtor from a financial point of view based upon the synergy estimates prepared by Coopers & Lybrand and the other financial information provided to it, upon all of which it was entitled to rely without independent verification, in accordance with its engagement. In addition, the Debtor's board of directors approved of the transactions involving the Acquisitions, fully aware of Morgan Stanley's reliance on Coopers & Lybrand's synergy analysis and the other financial information provided to it.

Moreover, the statement made by the Debtor's CEO does not support the Committee's contention that the Lenders knew prior to closing the Bank Facility that the Debtor was insolvent because the CEO's testimony dates the Debtor's insolvency to a period subsequent to the closing of the Bank Facility. Nor are there any allegations that would support the Committee's assertion that the Lender's knew that the purchase of Acquisitions would render the Debtor insolvent.

Thus, there are no allegations that, prior to closing the Bank Facility, the Lenders knew or consciously avoided discovering that the Acquisitions were worth substantially less than the Debtors paid for them or that the Debtor was insolvent or that it would be rendered insolvent as a result of the Acquisitions. Nor are there any allegations to support a finding that the Lenders had constructive knowledge that the Debtor was overpaying for the Acquisitions, or that it was insolvent or would be rendered insolvent by the Acquisitions. There are no allegations concerning any facts learned by the Lenders as a result of their due diligence that would have put them on notice of a fraudulent scheme or that would have required further investigation.

As there are no facts alleged in the Amended Complaint to support a finding that the Lenders had either actual or constructive knowledge that the Debtor was insolvent or would be rendered insolvent or that the Acquisitions were valued incorrectly, there is no basis to warrant collapsing the several transactions for the purpose of finding any of the conveyances to be fraudulent.

Therefore, the Court grants the Lenders' motion to dismiss the second claim for relief contained in the Amended Complaint.⁵

The Third, Fourth and Fifth Claims for Relief

The third, fourth and fifth claims for relief are all asserted against Morgan Stanley. The third claim seeks to recover damages for the estate based upon Morgan Stanley's purported negligence or gross negligence in issuing the Fairness Opinion and recommending that the Debtor proceed with the purchase of the Acquisitions. The fourth claim for relief seeks to recover damages for the estate based on Morgan Stanley's purported role in aiding and abetting the fraud allegedly committed by the Insiders. The fifth claim for relief seeks to recover damages for the estate based on Morgan Stanley's purported role in aiding and abetting the Insiders in committing breaches of their fiduciary duty as officers of the Debtor.

Morgan Stanley contends that all of the claims for relief asserted against it must be dismissed because the Committee had no authority to commence an adversary proceeding against it as the Committee failed to obtain leave of court to commence the action on behalf of the estate. Alternatively, Morgan Stanley argues that the factual allegations in the Amended Complaint do not support the relief sought.

The Committee argues that the claims against Morgan Stanley should not be dismissed as the Final Order Authorizing Debtor in Possession to Enter into Post-Petition Financing Agreement, dated

March 1, 2001 (the "DIP Financing Order"), provides the Committee with the requisite authority to sue Morgan Stanley. Alternatively, the Committee requests that the Court grant it authority to sue, on behalf of the estate, as the Committee asserts that the estate has a colorable claim against Morgan Stanley which the Debtor refuses to pursue.

The DIP Financing Order conferred standing on the Committee to assert or prosecute certain actions against any of the "Pre-Petition Lenders" or "Pre-Petition Agents" and to raise defenses to their claims. The Pre-Petition Lenders and Pre-Petition Agents, as defined, included the Lenders, but not Morgan Stanley. Thus, the DIP Financing Order authorized the Committee to pursue, on behalf of the estate, the Debtor's claims against the Lenders, but not against Morgan Stanley. Nevertheless, the Committee argues that because the DIP Financing Order provided it with authority to assert defenses to MSSF's claims, its action against Morgan Stanley should be viewed as a recoupment defense to MSSF's claim which it is authorized to assert. The argument, however, even if tenable, would depend upon treating Morgan Stanley and MSSF as the same entity, a contention which this Court has already rejected. Thus, the DIP Financing Order did not provide the Committee with authority to commence an action against Morgan Stanley. Alternatively, the Committee now asks the Court to confer authority on it to assert the claims against Morgan Stanley.

In Unsecured Creditors Committee v. Noyes (In re STN Enterprises), 779 F.2d 901, 904 (2d Cir. 1985), the Second Circuit found that pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 1103(c)(5) and 1109(b), a creditors' committee has a qualified right to initiate an action against a third-party where (i) the trustee or debtor-in possession unjustifiably fails to bring such action or abuses its discretion in not bringing the action, and (ii) the creditors' committee first obtains the approval of the bankruptcy court to bring the action.

In determining whether to allow a creditors' committee to commence an action, a court considers:

- 1) whether the creditors' committee has presented a colorable claim; and
- 2) whether the action is likely to benefit the reorganization estate.

In re STN Enterprises, 779 F.2d at 905. Moreover, a creditors' committee may also acquire standing to pursue a debtor's claims if (1) the debtor in possession or trustee consents to the committee pursuing the claims, and (2) the court finds that allowing the action by the committee is (a) in the bankruptcy estate's best interest, and (b) is "necessary and beneficial" to the fair and efficient resolution of the bankruptcy proceedings." Commodore Int'l Ltd. v. Gould (In re Commodore Int'l Ltd.), 262 F.3d 96, 100 (2d Cir. 2001).

The Committee argues that it is not required to show that pursuing the debtor's claim is "necessary and beneficial" to the fair and efficient resolution of the bankruptcy proceeding because that standard only applies in the case where the debtor has given its consent. The Committee directs the Court's attention to language in the Commodore decision where the Second Circuit noted that in the situation where the trustee or debtor-in-possession consents to a committee maintaining suit on a debtor's claim, the committee's suit must be necessary and beneficial to the resolution of the bankruptcy proceeding. Commodore, 262 F.3d at 100. From this statement, the Committee concludes that it is not required to meet the "necessary and beneficial" standard when a committee seeks to commence a claim where the trustee or debtor-in-possession have unjustifiably failed to commence that suit. This argument, however, fails to recognize that in those cases where a committee does not obtain the consent of a trustee or debtor-in-possession to bring an action, in order for the Committee to gain the capacity to bring the action itself, it must establish that the debtor has unjustifiably failed to bring such action or abused its discretion in not bringing the action. Any analysis concerning whether a debtor's failure to bring an action was unjustifiable or an abuse of its discretion would require a determination of whether the action was necessary and beneficial to the bankruptcy estate. Thus, a finding that allowing a committee to pursue a debtor's claim would be necessary and beneficial to the resolution of the bankruptcy proceeding is required in all instances.

The Court finds that the Committee has not met the standards set forth in STN and Commodore and, therefore, denies its request for leave to commence the derivative action against Morgan Stanley on behalf of the Debtor's estate. The Committee has not shown that the Debtor unjustifiably refused to commence an action against Morgan Stanley as the Committee has not even shown that it consulted with the Debtor in bringing such action. Moreover, any lawsuit brought on behalf of the Debtor's estate against Morgan Stanley would have to overcome the in pari delicto defense.⁶ In addition, the Committee seeks to pursue claims that will delay resolution of this reorganization proceeding by impeding approval of the pending plan of reorganization which is not in the best interests of the estate.

Most significantly, the reorganization value of the Debtor has dropped continuously in the last year because of the general market decline in the industry and in the overall economy. At the commencement of this case, a major issue of contention between the Debtor and the Committee was the reorganization value of the Debtor - with the Committee according it a value in excess of $2 billion, while the Debtor contended that the value was approximately half of that amount. More recently, however, at the hearing to consider approval of the Debtor's disclosure statement which was held on October 4, 2002, the Committee acknowledged that for the past year it has recognized that the reorganization value of the Debtor is less than the $1.6 billion owed the Lenders and that the only way in which the unsecured creditors would recover any value is if they were successful in this litigation. The Debtors and the Lenders have argued that the Lenders faced a deficiency in the payment of their claim in excess of $500 million at the commencement of this case and that the deficiency has steadily increased. While the Committee does not concede the extent of the Lender's deficiency claim, the fact that the Committee is no longer disputing the reorganization value is an indication to the Court that the Committee acknowledges that the deficiency is material. As the Court has dismissed the Committee's claim for relief based on equitable subordination and as the Noteholder claims are contractually subordinated, any recovery from an action against Morgan Stanley would first be used to pay the Lenders claims before any payment benefitted the Noteholders or other unsecured creditors. The proposed plan of reorganization provides that the Lenders are to receive 100% of the equity of the reorganized entity. Consequently, the unsecured claimants, including the Noteholders, have no economic stake in the reorganization. It is the Lenders who would benefit from pursuit of any claim against Morgan Stanley and they have chosen not to proceed at this time. As the entities that would benefit from any recovery are not seeking to pursue the claims at this time and as any recovery will not materially impact on the distribution to other creditors, the Committee has not shown that the prosecution of the actions against Morgan Stanley would be necessary and beneficial to the resolution of the bankruptcy proceeding.

As the Court has determined not to grant the Committee leave to commence an action against Morgan Stanley, the Committee may not maintain the third, fourth and fifth claims for relief against Morgan Stanley and, therefore, those claims are dismissed.

The Sixth Claim for Relief

In the final claim for relief, the Committee seeks to recoup from any amounts owed to MSSF, anything that Morgan Stanley or MSSF owe the Debtor based on the other claims for relief asserted against the Defendants. As the Court has dismissed the other claims for relief against the Defendants, there is no basis upon which to assert the defense of recoupment. Therefore, the sixth claim for relief is dismissed.⁷

CONCLUSION

The Court finds that the allegations in the Amended Complaint do not provide a basis to impute Morgan Stanley's purported inequitable conduct to the Lender's such as would warrant subordinating the Lender's claim pursuant to § 510(c). Nor are there allegations in the Amended Complaint that would provide a basis to find actionable inequitable conduct by the Lenders themselves. The first claim for relief is dismissed.⁸

⁸ In light of the Court's ruling, it is not necessary to address the Committee's request that the guaranties given by the Debtor's subsidiaries be disallowed.

The Court further finds that as there are no facts alleged in the Amended Complaint to support a finding that the Lenders had either actual or constructive knowledge that the Debtor was insolvent at the time of, or would be rendered insolvent by, the purchase of the Acquisitions, or that the Debtor was overpaying for the Acquisitions, there is no basis to warrant collapsing the several transactions for the purpose of finding any of the conveyances to be fraudulent. Thus, the second claim for relief is dismissed.

The Court further finds that because the Creditors' Committee has not met the standards for obtaining the Court's approval to pursue any claim the estate may have against Morgan Stanley, the third, fourth and fifth claims for relief against Morgan Stanley are dismissed.

The Court further finds that, as the other claims for relief have been dismissed, there is no basis upon which to assert the defense of recoupment and the final claim for relief is dismissed.

Thus, the entire Amended Complaint is dismissed.

Counsel for the Lenders is to settle an order, consistent with this Memorandum Decision, on three (3) days' notice.

Following the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer expects to be merged with and into Coleman Worldwide (the "Coleman Worldwide Merger"), and Coleman Worldwide, as successor to the Issuer, will continue to own the 16,394,810 shares (representing approximately 30.7% of shares outstanding) of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the LYONs, the 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the Coleman Holdings Notes and the 1,672,710 shares (representing approximately 3.2% of shares outstanding) of Coleman Common Stock not currently pledged, of which 522,710 shares are currently available to be pledged to secure the Notes, less any shares of Coleman Common Stock delivered upon exchange of the LYONs (the "Delivered Shares").

Concurrently with the closing of the Offering, the Issuer will deposit the net proceeds of the Offering (the "Escrowed Funds") with an escrow agent (the "Escrow Agent"), and the Escrowed Funds will be temporarily invested in Treasury Securities and other Permitted Investments (as such terms are defined herein). The Escrowed Funds will be used by the Issuer to make capital contributions from time to time to Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide (the "Capital Contributions"), which Capital Contributions will be used to fund the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement.

The Notes will be redeemable at the option of the Issuer, in whole or in part, at any time on and after May 15, 2000 at the redemption prices set forth herein on the date of redemption. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Issuer will have the option to redeem the Notes at any time in whole at a redemption price equal to the Accreted Value (as defined herein) on the date of redemption plus the Applicable Premium (as defined herein). Upon a Change of Control (as defined herein), subject to certain conditions, each holder of the Notes will have the right to require the Issuer to repurchase all or a portion of such holder's Notes at a price equal to the Put Amount (as defined herein) on the date of repurchase.

The Notes will be senior secured obligations of the Issuer and will rank pari passu in right of payment with all future senior indebtedness of the Issuer, if any, and senior to all future subordinated indebtedness of the Issuer, if any. The Notes will be (i) upon consummation of the Offering and prior to the Coleman Holdings Merger, secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Holdings, (ii) upon consummation of the Offering, guaranteed on a non-recourse basis by Coleman Worldwide (the "Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty"), which Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will initially be secured by a pledge of 522,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently available to be pledged and, simultaneously with the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, also secured by a pledge of the 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the Coleman Holdings Notes, and (iii) simultaneously with the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. In addition, simultaneously with any release of Escrowed Funds from time to time in connection with the LYONs Retirement, the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will also be secured by the shares of Coleman Common Stock for which such exchanged LYONs are exchangeable that are released from the pledge to secure any exchanged LYONs. Upon consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of 44,067,520 shares of Coleman Common Stock, less any Delivered Shares. The First Priority Notes will rank senior in right of payment to the Second Priority Notes with respect to any collateral securing the Notes and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty. See "Risk Factors—Control by Holders of First Priority Notes." On May 15, 1997, the last reported sale price of the Coleman Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange (the "NYSE") was $16¼ per share.

Upon consummation of the Offering, the only outstanding indebtedness of the Issuer will be the Notes, and all of the Issuer's consolidated liabilities (other than the Notes and certain liabilities incurred in connection with the Offering) will be liabilities of its subsidiaries. The Issuer is a holding company and therefore the Notes will be effectively subordinated to all existing and future indebtedness and other liabilities of the Issuer's subsidiaries. The Indenture will generally prohibit the incurrence of additional debt by the Issuer and will limit the incurrence of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by the Issuer's subsidiaries. As of March 31, 1997, after giving pro forma effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the outstanding indebtedness and other liabilities of such subsidiaries would have been approximately $970.9 million. Prior to the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will also be effectively subordinated to the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs, respectively. See "Description of the Notes."

For a discussion of certain federal income tax consequences to holders of Notes, see "Certain U.S. Federal Income Tax Considerations." It is expected that the Notes will be eligible for trading in the Private Offerings, Resales and Trading through Automated Linkages (PORTAL) market.

OFFERING MEMORANDUM SUMMARY

The following is qualified in its entirety by, and should be read in conjunction with, the more detailed information and the Consolidated Financial Statements and notes thereto contained elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum. Unless the context otherwise requires, all references in this Offering Memorandum to (i) the "Issuer" mean Coleman Escrow Corp., (ii) the "Company" or "Coleman" mean The Coleman Company, Inc. and its subsidiaries, (iii) "Coleman Holdings" mean Coleman Holdings Inc. and (iv) "Coleman Worldwide" mean Coleman Worldwide Corporation. All share information and percentages with respect to Coleman Common Stock are based on the number of shares outstanding as of May 5, 1997.

The Issuer

The Issuer is a holding company whose only significant asset is all of the common stock, par value $1.00 per share, of Coleman Holdings. Coleman Holdings is a holding company formed in July 1993 in connection with the offering of the Coleman Holdings Notes and holds all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. Coleman Worldwide was formed in March 1993 in connection with the offering of $575 million aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs. Coleman Worldwide also holds 44,067,520 shares of the Coleman Common Stock, which represent approximately 82.6% of the outstanding Coleman Common Stock. As such, the Issuer's principal business operations are conducted by Coleman and its subsidiaries, and the Issuer has no operations of its own. The Issuer is an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MacAndrews Holdings"), a corporation wholly owned through Masco Holdings Inc. ("Masco" and together with MacAndrews Holdings, "MacAndrews & Forbes") by Ronald O. Perelman. See "Relationship with MacAndrews & Forbes" and "Ownership of Common Stock." Following the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, Coleman Holdings expects to be merged with and into the Issuer in the Coleman Holdings Merger. Following the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer expects to be merged with and into Coleman Worldwide in the Coleman Worldwide Merger, with Coleman Worldwide as the surviving corporation.

The Company

Coleman is a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the outdoor recreation and hardware markets on a global basis. The Company's products have been sold domestically and internationally under the Coleman brand name since the 1920s. The Company believes its strong market position is attributable primarily to its well-recognized trademarks, particularly the Coleman brand name, broad product line, product quality and innovation, and marketing, distribution and manufacturing expertise.

The Company participates in two primary markets, outdoor recreation and hardware. The Company's principal outdoor recreation products include a comprehensive line of lanterns and stoves for outdoor recreational use, fuel-related products such as disposable fuel cartridges, a broad range of coolers and jugs, sleeping bags, backpacks, tents, outdoor folding furniture, portable electric lights, spas, camping accessories and other products for recreational use. These outdoor recreation products are distributed predominantly through mass merchandisers, sporting goods chains and outdoor specialty stores. The Company's principal hardware products include portable generators, portable and stationary air compressors, and safety and security products such as smoke alarms, carbon monoxide detectors and thermostats.

The Company has made several acquisitions in recent years designed to expand its product lines in the outdoor recreation market. In 1996, the Company acquired the French company Application des Gaz ("Camping Gaz"), which is a leader in the European camping equipment market. In 1995, the Company acquired Sierra Corporation of Fort Smith, Inc. ("Sierra"), a manufacturer of portable outdoor and recreational folding furniture and accessories. In 1994, the Company acquired substantially all of the assets of Eastpak, Inc. and all of the capital stock of M.G. Industries, Inc. (together, "Eastpak"), a leading designer, manufacturer and distributor of branded daypacks, sports bags and related products.

The Company also restructured certain operations in the outdoor recreation market. In 1994, the Company restructured its German manufacturing operations (the "German Restructuring"), including selling its plastic cooler business located in Inheiden, Germany and Loucka, Czech Republic. In 1996, the Company closed the Brazilian manufacturing operations it had acquired from Metal Yanes, Ltda. in 1994.

The Company has also expanded its presence in the hardware market through its acquisition in 1996 of the assets of Seatt Corporation ("Seatt"), a leading designer, manufacturer and distributor of smoke alarms, thermostats and carbon monoxide detectors, its acquisition in 1995 of substantially all of the assets of Active Technologies, Inc. ("ATI"), a manufacturer of technologically advanced lightweight generators and battery charging equipment, and its acquisition in 1994 of substantially all of the assets of Sanborn Manufacturing Company ("Sanborn"), a manufacturer of a broad line of portable and stationary air compressors.

Business Strategy and Restructuring

The Company's business strategy is to build upon its reputation as a leading manufacturer and marketer of high quality brand name consumer products for the outdoor recreation and hardware markets by (i) focusing on quality and service, (ii) continuing to introduce new products, (iii) developing the Company's existing brands, (iv) expanding the Company's international presence, (v) continuing to develop its human resources, including developing and building its team of experienced managers and increasing management's focus on profitability and cash flows and (vi) further improving the quality and efficiency of its business processes to reduce administrative costs and improve profitability and competitiveness.

As part of its strategy to improve its business processes, the Company has announced several restructuring initiatives designed to reduce costs and improve profitability and competitiveness. In March 1997, the Company announced that it would close its executive offices in Golden, Colorado, with most of its administrative functions expected to return to its Wichita, Kansas facility. In April 1997, the Company announced its intention to (i) eliminate 700 employees, which represent approximately 10% of its current work force, (ii) close or relocate three domestic factories and close one international factory, (iii) close its Geneva, Switzerland international headquarters, (iv) rationalize its product lines, including a significant reduction in SKUs, and (v) sell its pressure washer business. In addition, the Company may sell other non-strategic businesses if suitable opportunities arise. Coleman has already begun to implement its new restructuring plan. Coleman has announced plans to close its Hastings, Nebraska factory which was used in the manufacturing of portable power generators and pressure washers. The Company expects to incur certain restructuring and other charges in connection with these initiatives during 1997. The Company recorded other charges of approximately $2.4 million, net of taxes, for the first quarter of 1997 and expects to record a significantly greater amount of restructuring and other charges for the second quarter of 1997. There can be no assurance as to the amount of the restructuring and other charges to be recorded in the second quarter of 1997 or that restructuring and other charges will not be recorded in subsequent periods. See "Management's Discussion of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Background

Coleman was formed in December 1991 to succeed to the assets and liabilities of the outdoor products business of New Coleman Holdings Inc. ("Holdings"), an indirect parent of the Issuer. Holdings (then named The Coleman Company, Inc.) was acquired in 1989 by MacAndrews & Forbes (the "Acquisition"). In March 1992, the Company completed an initial public offering of the Coleman Common Stock (the "IPO"). Coleman Worldwide's ownership interest in the Company was approximately 82.6% at May 5, 1997.

In 1993, Coleman Worldwide issued $575.0 million principal amount at maturity of LYONs in an underwritten public offering. The net proceeds from the issuance of the LYONs of approximately $133.1 million were distributed by Coleman Worldwide to its then direct and indirect parent companies, of which $110.0 million was used to repay indebtedness incurred in connection with the Acquisition. See "Description of Other Indebtedness—Coleman Worldwide—The LYONs." In connection with the offering of the LYONs, the ownership interest of MacAndrews & Forbes in the Company was transferred to Coleman Worldwide. Each LYON ($1,000 principal amount at maturity) is exchangeable at the option of the holder at any time for 15.706 shares of Coleman Common Stock, subject to Coleman Worldwide's right to elect to pay cash equal to the then market value of such shares in lieu, in whole or in part, of delivering such shares of Coleman Common Stock. The LYONs are secured by a pledge of 16,394,810 shares (representing approximately 30.7% of shares outstanding) of Coleman Common Stock.

Also in 1993, Coleman Holdings issued approximately $281.3 million principal amount at maturity of Coleman Holdings Notes pursuant to exemptions from, or in transactions not subject to, the registration requirements of the Securities Act and applicable state securities laws. The net proceeds from the issuance of the Coleman Holdings Notes of approximately $162.3 million were distributed to MacAndrews & Forbes and were not available to Coleman Holdings or its subsidiaries. In connection with the offering of the Coleman Holdings Notes, all of the outstanding capital stock of Coleman Worldwide was transferred by Holdings to Coleman Holdings. The Coleman Holdings Notes are secured by a pledge of all of the common stock of Coleman Worldwide and guaranteed on a non-recourse basis by Coleman Worldwide (the "Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty"). The Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty is secured by a pledge of 26,000,000 shares (representing approximately 48.7% of shares outstanding) of Coleman Common Stock. In addition, Coleman Worldwide currently owns 1,672,710 shares (representing approximately 3.2% of shares outstanding) of Coleman Common Stock, of which 522,710 shares are currently available to be pledged to secure the Notes.

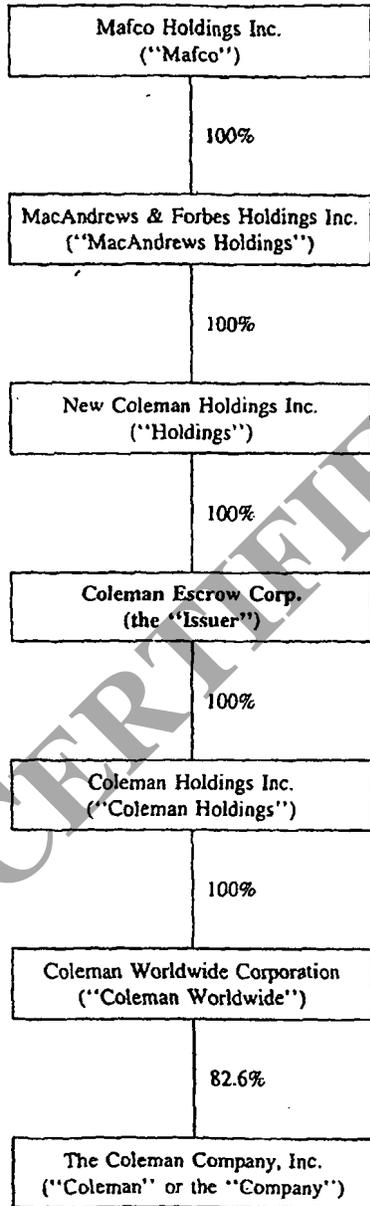

The Issuer was incorporated in Delaware in May 1997. The Issuer's principal executive offices are located at 5900 North Andrews Avenue, Suite 700, Fort Lauderdale, Florida 33309 and its telephone number is (954) 772-9000.

The Transactions

Upon consummation of the Offering, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of all of the shares of common stock of Coleman Holdings and guaranteed pursuant to the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, which Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will initially be secured by a pledge of 522,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently available to be pledged. Concurrently with the closing of the Offering, the Issuer will deposit the Escrowed Funds, which will consist of the net proceeds of the Offering, with the Escrow Agent. The Escrow Agent will release the Escrowed Funds to the Issuer from time to time upon the satisfaction of certain conditions, including presentation of an Officer's Certificate certifying that, among other things (a) (i) the conditions to the optional redemption by Coleman Holdings contained in the indenture governing the Coleman Holdings Notes (the "Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture") to be complied with on the date of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption (other than payment) have been satisfied or waived, (ii) the conditions to any delivery of cash upon exchange from time to time of LYONs through an exchange offer to be complied with by Coleman Worldwide (other than payment) have been satisfied or waived, (iii) the conditions to the optional redemption by Coleman Worldwide contained in the indenture governing the LYONs (the "LYONs Indenture") to be complied with on May 27, 1998 (other than payment) have been satisfied or waived, (iv) the conditions to any exchange of LYONs from time to time by the holders thereof and the election by Coleman Worldwide to deliver cash in lieu of shares of Coleman Common Stock that are contained in the LYONs Indenture (other than payment) have been satisfied or waived or (v) the conditions to certain other payments that may be required to be made by Coleman Worldwide pursuant to the terms of the LYONs Indenture have been satisfied or waived and (b) following the release, such Escrowed Funds, subject to certain limited exceptions, will be contributed to Coleman Holdings or Coleman Worldwide and used to fund the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, the LYONs Retirement or such other payments, as the case may be. See "Description of the Notes—Escrow of Proceeds." Notwithstanding the foregoing, there will be no release of Escrowed Funds to the Issuer after the occurrence of certain events of bankruptcy, insolvency or reorganization of Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide or Coleman (the "Triggering Events"). If a Triggering Event occurs, the Issuer will be required to use any remaining Escrowed Funds to redeem the Notes, on a pro rata basis, at a redemption price equal to the Accreted Value plus accrued interest (if any) on the Mandatory Redemption Date (as defined herein). See "Description of the Notes—Mandatory Redemption."

The Issuer will contribute from time to time the Escrowed Funds to Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide (the "Capital Contributions") to finance the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement. The Issuer intends to cause Coleman Holdings to give a notice of redemption of the Coleman Holdings Notes upon consummation of the Offering. The Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption is expected to be consummated on or about July 15, 1997. The LYONs Retirement is expected to be completed on or prior to May 27, 1998. Coleman Worldwide is expected to commence an offer to pay cash upon exchange of LYONs in excess of the then market value of the shares of Coleman Common Stock for which the LYONs may be exchanged as soon as reasonably practicable. The Issuer intends to cause Coleman Worldwide to redeem any outstanding LYONs on May 27, 1998, which is the first time that Coleman Worldwide has the right to do so under the LYONs Indenture. There can be no assurance that an exchange offer for the LYONs will be consummated or, if consummated, as to the final terms thereof or that the LYONs Retirement will be consummated on or before May 27, 1998. In addition, there can be no assurance that the Escrowed Funds will be sufficient to consummate the LYONs Retirement. See "Risk Factors—Subordination to Subsidiary Liabilities."

Following the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, Coleman Holdings expects to be merged with and into the Issuer in the Coleman Holdings Merger, and the Issuer will directly own all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. The pledge of the Coleman Holdings capital stock will terminate upon the Coleman Holdings Merger. Following the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer expects to be merged with and into Coleman Worldwide in the Coleman Worldwide Merger, with Coleman Worldwide, as the surviving corporation, assuming all of the Issuer's obligations under the Indenture and the Notes. The Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty and the pledge of the Coleman Worldwide capital stock will terminate upon the Coleman Worldwide Merger. Following each of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, all obligations of Coleman Holdings under the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture and all obligations of Coleman Worldwide under the LYONs Indenture, respectively, will be satisfied and discharged.

Simultaneously with the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by an additional pledge of the 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently pledged to secure the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes. In addition to such shares, simultaneously with the release of Escrowed Funds from time to time in connection with the LYONs Retirement, the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by the shares of Coleman Common Stock for which such exchanged LYONs are exchangeable that are released from the pledge to secure any exchanged LYONs. Upon consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of 44,067,520 shares of Coleman Common Stock (consisting of the 26,000,000 shares currently pledged to secure the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes, the 16,394,810 shares of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the LYONs and the 1,672,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock not currently pledged, of which 522,710 shares are currently available to be pledged to secure the Notes), less any Delivered Shares.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, there will be no release of Escrowed Funds to the Issuer upon the occurrence of a Triggering Event. See "Description of the Notes—Escrow of Proceeds."

Collateral Upon consummation of the Offering and prior to the Coleman Holdings Merger, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Holdings. In addition, upon consummation of the Offering, the Notes will be guaranteed pursuant to the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, which Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will initially be secured by a pledge of the 522,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock owned by Coleman Worldwide which are currently available to be pledged. Simultaneously with the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by an additional pledge of the 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently pledged to secure the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes. In addition to such shares, simultaneously with the release of Escrowed Funds from time to time in connection with the LYONs Retirement, the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by the shares of Coleman Common Stock for which such exchanged LYONs are exchangeable that are released from the pledge to secure any exchanged LYONs. Upon consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will be secured by a pledge of 44,067,520 shares of Coleman Common Stock (consisting of the 26,000,000 shares currently pledged to secure the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes, the 16,394,810 shares of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the LYONs and the 1,672,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock not currently pledged, of which 522,710 shares are currently available to be pledged to secure the Notes), less any Delivered Shares. The First Priority Notes will rank senior in right of payment to the Second Priority Notes with respect to any collateral securing the Notes and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty. See "Risk Factors—Control by Holders of First Priority Notes." No additional shares of Coleman Common Stock will be pledged by the Issuer as security for the Notes irrespective of the value of Coleman Common Stock at any time. See "Risk Factors—Security for the Notes; Potential for Diminution" and "Description of the Notes—Security."

After the consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer or Coleman Worldwide, as applicable, may withdraw the collateral consisting of shares of Coleman Common Stock, in whole or in part, by substituting therefor with the Trustee cash or U.S. Government Obligations (as defined herein) that will be sufficient for the payment at maturity of principal and interest (if any) on the Notes.

or the pro rata portion thereof, respectively. In addition, the pro rata portion of collateral consisting of Coleman Common Stock may be released following a redemption, in part, of the Notes or a repurchase, in part, of the Notes after a Change of Control or the delivery of less than all the Notes for cancellation. See "Description of the Notes—Security."

The Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by "margin stock" within the meaning of the margin regulations (Regulations G, T, U, and X) issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the "Federal Reserve Board"). Accordingly, if a purchaser of Notes (other than, based on a published opinion of the staff of the Federal Reserve Board, a Qualified Institutional Buyer acting in reliance on the exemption from the registration requirements provided by Rule 144A under the Securities Act) is a bank within the meaning of Regulation U, such purchaser will have to comply with such Regulation. If a purchaser of Notes is a person (other than (i) based on a published opinion of the staff of the Federal Reserve Board, a Qualified Institutional Buyer acting in reliance on the exemption from the registration requirements provided by Rule 144A under the Securities Act, (ii) a bank subject to Regulation U or (iii) a broker or dealer subject to Regulation T) which is purchasing the Notes in the ordinary course of its business, such purchaser will be required to be a registered lender under Regulation G or will be required to so register within 30 days of the end of the calendar quarter in which the Notes are purchased unless such purchaser does not during such calendar quarter extend credit (including its purchase of the Notes) secured by "margin stock" in excess of $200,000 and does not have outstanding extensions of credit (including the Notes) so secured in excess of $500,000 in the aggregate at any time during such calendar quarter. The purchase of the Notes will not constitute "purpose credit" within the meaning of Regulation G or Regulation U, and, accordingly, will not be subject to the collateral requirements of such Regulations.

Ranking and Holding Company Structure

The Notes will be senior secured obligations of the Issuer and will rank pari passu in right of payment with all future senior indebtedness of the Issuer, if any, and senior to all future subordinated indebtedness of the Issuer, if any. Upon consummation of the Offering, the only outstanding indebtedness of the Issuer will be the Notes, and all the Issuer's consolidated liabilities (other than the Notes and certain liabilities incurred in connection with the Offering) will be liabilities of its subsidiaries. The Issuer is a holding company and therefore the Notes will be effectively subordinated to all existing and future indebtedness and other liabilities of the Issuer's subsidiaries, including trade payables. As of March 31, 1997, after giving pro forma effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the outstanding indebtedness and other liabilities of such subsidiaries would have been approximately $970.9 million. Prior to the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will also be effectively subordinated to the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs.

respectively. See "Risk Factors—Holding Company Structure,"
"—Indebtedness and Ability to Repay the Notes," "—Subordination to Subsidiary Liabilities" and "Description of the Notes."

Exchange Offer; Registration Rights ...

The Issuer has agreed to use its best efforts to cause to be declared effective a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") with respect to a registered offer to exchange the Notes (the "Exchange Offer") for senior secured notes of the Issuer which will have substantially identical terms to the Notes (the "Exchange Notes") by October 17, 1997. In the event that applicable interpretations of the staff of the SEC do not permit the Issuer to effect the Exchange Offer, or if for any other reason the Exchange Offer is not consummated by November 17, 1997, the Issuer will use its best efforts to cause to be declared effective a shelf registration statement with respect to the resale of the Notes (the "Shelf Registration Statement") and to keep the Shelf Registration Statement effective until two years after the effective date thereof. If (a) by July 7, 1997 a registration statement has not been filed with the SEC with respect to the Exchange Offer or the resale of the Notes, interest will accrue (in addition to the accretion of Original Issue Discount) on the Notes from and including such date, until but excluding the earlier of (i) the date such registration statement is filed and (ii) November 17, 1997; and (b) if by November 17, 1997 neither (i) the Exchange Offer is consummated nor (ii) the Shelf Registration Statement is declared effective, interest will accrue (in addition to the accretion of Original Issue Discount) on the Notes from and including such date, until but excluding the earlier of (i) the consummation of the Exchange Offer and (ii) the effective date of the Shelf Registration Statement. In each case, such interest will be payable in cash semiannually in arrears on May 15 and November 15, commencing November 15, 1997, at a rate per annum equal to .50% of the Accreted Value of the Notes as of the November 15 and May 15 immediately preceding such interest payment date. See "Exchange Offer; Registration Rights."

Certain Covenants

The indenture governing the Notes (the "Indenture") will require the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption to be consummated no later than July 31, 1997 and the LYONs Retirement to be consummated no later than June 10, 1998, provided that, in each case, no Triggering Event shall have occurred. The Indenture will also require the Issuer, prior to the Coleman Holdings Merger, to hold directly all of the capital stock of Coleman Holdings and, prior to the Coleman Worldwide Merger, to hold, directly or indirectly, all of the capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. The Issuer will also be required to hold, directly or indirectly, a majority of the voting power of the voting stock of Coleman at all times, unless and until the Issuer exercises its right to substitute U.S. Government Obligations for all of the pledged collateral. The Indenture will also contain certain covenants that, among other things, will generally prohibit the incurrence of additional debt by the Issuer and the issuance of additional debt or preferred stock by Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide, and will limit (i) the incurrence of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by Coleman,

022717

(ii) the payment of dividends on the capital stock of the Issuer and its subsidiaries and the redemption or repurchase of the capital stock of the Issuer, (iii) the sale of assets and subsidiary stock, (iv) transactions with affiliates, (v) the creation of liens on the assets of the Issuer, Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide and (vi) consolidations, mergers and transfers of all or substantially all of the Issuer's assets. The foregoing limitations and prohibitions, however, are subject to a number of qualifications. See "Description of the Notes—Certain Covenants."

Transfer Restrictions;

Absence of a Public

Market for the Notes

The Notes have not been registered under the Securities Act and are subject to restrictions on transferability and resale. The Notes are new securities and there is currently no established market for the Notes. If issued, the Exchange Notes generally will be freely transferable (subject to the restrictions discussed elsewhere herein), but will be new securities for which initially there will not be a market. Accordingly, there can be no assurance as to the development or liquidity of any market for the Notes or, if issued, the Exchange Notes. The Notes are eligible for trading in the PORTAL market. The Initial Purchasers have advised the Issuer that they currently intend to make a market in the Notes. However, the Initial Purchasers are not obligated to do so, and any market making with respect to the Notes may be discontinued without notice. The Issuer does not intend to apply for listing of the Notes or, if issued, the Exchange Notes on any national securities exchange or for their quotation through The Nasdaq Stock Market. See "Risk Factors—Lack of Public Market; Restrictions on Transferability" and "Notice to Investors."

Use of Proceeds

The Issuer will use the net proceeds of the Offering, which are estimated to be approximately $455.3 million, to make the Capital Contributions to finance the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement. Pending such uses, the net proceeds of the Offering will be held in escrow and invested in Treasury Securities and other Permitted Investments. See "Use of Proceeds."

Risk Factors

Prospective purchasers of the Notes should consider carefully all of the information set forth in this Offering Memorandum and, in particular, should evaluate the specific factors set forth under "Risk Factors" on page 20 for risks involved with an investment in the Notes.

Summary Historical Financial Data

The Issuer is a holding company formed in May 1997 to hold all of the common stock of Coleman Holdings. Coleman Holdings is a holding company formed in July 1993 in connection with the offering of the Coleman Holdings Notes and holds all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. Coleman Worldwide was formed in March 1993 in connection with the offering of $575 million aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs and holds 44,067,520 shares of Coleman Common Stock, which represent approximately 82.6% of the outstanding Coleman Common Stock. Coleman was formed in December 1991 to succeed to the assets and liabilities of the outdoor products business of Holdings. Due to the Issuer's 100% direct ownership of Coleman Holdings, 100% indirect ownership of Coleman Worldwide and approximately 82.6% indirect ownership of Coleman, the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer include the accounts of Coleman Holdings and its subsidiaries after elimination of all material intercompany accounts and transactions. Minority interest primarily represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the results of operations and equity of Coleman.

The summary historical financial data for, and as of the end of, each of the years in the five year period ended December 31, 1996 have been derived from the audited Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and its subsidiaries. The summary historical financial data for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and as of March 31, 1997 have been derived from the unaudited Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer which reflect, in the opinion of management, all adjustments (which include only normal recurring adjustments) necessary to present fairly the financial data for such periods and at such date. Results for the interim periods are not necessarily indicative of results for the full year.

The following summary historical financial data should be read in conjunction with "Capitalization," "Selected Historical Financial Data," "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations" and the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and the notes thereto included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

EBITDA is presented here not as a measure of operating results but rather as a measure of debt service ability. EBITDA should not be considered in isolation or as a substitute for net income or cash flow from operations prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, or as a measure of the profitability or liquidity of the Company. EBITDA does not take into account the Issuer's consolidated debt service requirements and other commitments and, accordingly, is not necessarily indicative of amounts that may be available for discretionary uses. Summary Pro Forma Financial Data

The following unaudited summary pro forma consolidated condensed statements of operations and other data for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and the year ended December 31, 1996 give pro forma effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement. In each case, as if such transactions had been consummated on January 1, 1996, and the pro forma consolidated condensed balance sheet as of March 31, 1997 gives pro forma effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement as if such transactions had been consummated on March 31, 1997. The pro forma information does not give effect to any exchange offer for the LYONs, but rather assumes that all outstanding LYONs are redeemed on May 27, 1998. The pro forma adjustments are based upon available information and certain assumptions that management of the Issuer believes are reasonable under the circumstances. The summary pro forma financial data do not purport to represent the results of operations or the financial position of the Issuer and its subsidiaries that actually would have occurred had the foregoing transactions been consummated on the aforesaid dates.

The summary pro forma financial data should be read in conjunction with the Pro Forma Financial Data, Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and the notes thereto included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

Stockholder's deficit reflects a charge representing interest accretion on the LYONs from April 1, 1997 through May 27, 1998 of $9,436 net of taxes, an extraordinary loss of $3,173, net of taxes, representing the write-off of deferred charges related to the LYONs and a distribution of the tax benefit of $7,727 associated with such charges since the Issuer is not a party to a tax sharing agreement.
- (3) Reflects the redemption of the Coleman Holdings Notes for aggregate consideration of $262,197 based on the redemption price of 102.175% of the accreted value at July 15, 1997. Stockholder's deficit reflects a charge representing interest accretion on the Coleman Holdings Notes from April 1, 1997 through July 15, 1997 of $5,018 net of taxes, an extraordinary loss of $4,575, net of taxes, representing the redemption premium paid to redeem the Coleman Holdings Notes and the write-off of deferred charges related to the Coleman Holdings Notes, and a distribution of the tax benefit of $5,166 associated with such charges since the Issuer is not a party to a tax sharing agreement.
- (4) Reflects interest expense on the Notes based on a yield to maturity of 11 1/8% on the First Priority Notes and 12 7/8% on the Second Priority Notes compounded semiannually on a bond equivalent basis, and the related amortization of deferred financing costs over four years.
- (5) Reflects the elimination of interest expense and amortization of deferred financing costs related to the LYONs and Coleman Holdings Notes. Since the LYONs Retirement may not be completed until May 27, 1998, the Issuer and its subsidiaries will continue to incur interest expense on the outstanding principal amount of the LYONs not retired at a rate of 7.25% and will earn interest income on the Escrowed Funds for such period. Since the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption will not be completed until approximately two months after the Offering, the Issuer and its subsidiaries will continue to incur interest expense on the Coleman Holdings Notes at a rate of 10.875% and will earn interest income on the Escrowed Funds for such period. Escrowed Funds will earn interest income at an annual rate of approximately 5.5% based on interest rates as of May 14, 1997.
- (6) Reflects the tax effect of the pro forma adjustments.
- (7) The actual and pro forma deficiency of earnings to fixed charges was $86,113 and $107,063, respectively, for the year ended December 31, 1996 and $8,917 and $14,752, respectively, for the three months ended March 31, 1997.

RISK FACTORS

Prospective purchasers of the Notes offered hereby should consider carefully the following factors, as well as the other information set forth in this Offering Memorandum, before making an investment in the Notes.

Holding Company Structure

The Issuer is a holding company with no business operations or source of income of its own. The Issuer's only significant asset is all of the common stock of Coleman Holdings, a holding company that through Coleman Worldwide owns approximately 82.6% of the outstanding shares of Coleman Common Stock. The Issuer's principal business operations are conducted by Coleman and its subsidiaries, and the Issuer has no operations of its own. Accordingly, the Issuer's only source of cash to pay its obligations with respect to the Notes and any other obligations is expected to be distributions with respect to its ownership interest in Coleman from the net earnings and cash flow generated by Coleman, after payment by Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings of amounts due on the LYONs and the Coleman Holdings Notes, as the case may be, for so long as they remain outstanding and certain other expenses. As the indirect holder through Coleman Worldwide of approximately 82.6% of the Coleman Common Stock, the Issuer has the ability to cause the Company, Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings, to make distributions up to the maximum amount permitted by law, subject to limitations in the debt instruments of the Company, Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings. However, the Issuer currently expects that, for the foreseeable future, the net earnings and cash flow of the Company will be retained and used in the business of the Company and that the Issuer will not receive any distributions from the Company, Coleman Worldwide or Coleman Holdings. The terms of the Company's credit agreement as amended and restated as of August 3, 1995 and as further amended (the "Company Credit Agreement"), prohibits the Company from paying dividends prior to January 1, 1999 and thereafter restricts the Company's ability to pay dividends or make other payments to Coleman Worldwide, Coleman Holdings and the Issuer. In addition, the LYONs Indenture restricts Coleman Worldwide's ability to pay dividends and make other payments to Coleman Holdings or the Issuer and the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture restricts Coleman Holdings' ability to pay dividends and make other payments to the Issuer. Although Coleman Worldwide may receive payments from the Company pursuant to a tax sharing agreement (the "Company Tax Sharing Agreement"), Coleman Worldwide will not distribute such payments to Coleman Holdings or the Issuer. In addition, the LYONs Indenture requires that any such payments received from the Company be paid to Mafco or retained by Coleman Worldwide (except under certain limited circumstances which are unlikely to occur prior to the LYONs Retirement). See "Description of Other Indebtedness—Coleman Worldwide—The LYONs" and "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Indebtedness and Ability to Repay the Notes

Upon consummation of the Offering, the only outstanding indebtedness of the Issuer on an unconsolidated basis will be the Notes. The Indenture generally will prohibit the incurrence of additional debt by the Issuer and will limit the incurrence of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by the Issuer's subsidiaries. See "Description of the Notes—Certain Covenants."

The Issuer currently anticipates that in order to pay the principal amount at maturity of the Notes or upon the occurrence of an Event of Default, to redeem the Notes or to repurchase the Notes upon the occurrence of a Change of Control, the Issuer will be required to adopt one or more alternatives, such as seeking capital contributions or loans from its affiliates, refinancing its indebtedness or selling its equity securities or the equity securities or assets of Coleman. None of the affiliates of the Issuer will be required to make any capital contributions or other payments to the Issuer with respect to the Issuer's obligations on the Notes, and, except for the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, which will terminate upon the Coleman Worldwide Merger, the obligations of the Issuer with respect to the Notes will not be guaranteed by any affiliate of the Issuer or any other person. There can be no assurance that any of the foregoing actions could be effected on satisfactory terms, that they would be sufficient to enable the Issuer to make any payments in respect of the Notes when required or that any of such actions would be permitted by the terms of the Indenture, the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture (prior to the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption), the LYONs Indenture (prior to the LYONs Retirement) or the debt instruments of the Company or Coleman Worldwide then in effect. Moreover, the events that constitute a Change of Control under the Indenture may also constitute events of default or repurchase right events under certain debt instruments of the Issuer's subsidiaries. Such events may permit the lenders under such debt instruments to accelerate the debt (or, in the case of the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs, to require the issuers thereof to repurchase such securities) and, if the debt is not paid or repurchased, to enforce their security interests, if any, in substantially all of the assets of the Issuer's subsidiaries and the shares of Coleman Common Stock securing the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs. Any such enforcement may limit the Issuer's ability to raise cash to purchase the Notes and may have a material adverse effect on the market price of Coleman Common Stock and on the price that could be obtained for the Coleman Worldwide capital stock and thus on the ability of the Trustee to realize value through sales of the collateral. See "—Security for the Notes; Potential for Diminution," "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources," "Description of Other Indebtedness" and "Description of the Notes."

Recent Operating Losses and Stockholder's Deficit

The Issuer recorded a loss before extraordinary item of $57.0 million for the year ended December 31, 1996 and a net loss of $6.0 million for the three months ended March 31, 1997. On a historical basis, the Issuer's earnings before fixed charges were insufficient to cover fixed charges by approximately $86.1 million and $8.9 million for the year ended December 31, 1996 and the three months ended March 31, 1997, respectively. On a pro forma basis, assuming that the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement had each occurred on January 1, 1996, the Issuer would have experienced a loss before extraordinary item of $70.9 million and $9.8 million for the year ended December 31, 1996 and the three months ended March 31, 1997, respectively. On a pro forma basis, assuming that the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement had each occurred on January 1, 1996, the Issuer's net earnings for the year ended December 31, 1996 and the three months ended March 31, 1997 would have been insufficient to cover fixed charges by approximately $107.1 million and $14.8 million, respectively. As a result, on a historical and a pro forma basis, the Issuer would have had to achieve growth in its earnings before fixed charges at least equal to the amounts of such insufficiencies in order to cover its fixed charges. Fixed charges consist of interest expense (including amortization of debt issuance costs, but not the loss relating to the early extinguishment of debt) and 33% of rental expense (considered by the Issuer to be representative of the interest factor). The Issuer had a stockholder's deficit of approximately $187.2 million as of March 31, 1997 and, on a pro forma basis, assuming that the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement had each occurred on March 31, 1997, the Issuer's stockholder's deficit would have been approximately $222.3 million.

Subordination to Subsidiary Liabilities

Any right of the Issuer and its creditors, including holders of the Notes, to participate in the assets of any of the Issuer's subsidiaries upon any liquidation or reorganization of any such subsidiary will be subject to the prior claims of the subsidiary's creditors, including trade creditors (except to the extent the Issuer may itself be a creditor of such subsidiary). Accordingly, the Notes will be effectively subordinated to liabilities, including trade payables, of the subsidiaries of the Issuer. The ability of the Issuer's creditors, including the holders of the Notes, to participate in such assets will also be limited to the extent that the outstanding shares of Coleman Common Stock are not beneficially owned by the Issuer. The Issuer is a holding company and, immediately following the issuance of the Notes, the Issuer will not have any indebtedness that ranks pari passu with, or senior to, the Notes. As of March 31, 1997, after giving effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, subsidiaries of the Issuer would have had approximately $970.9 million of total liabilities, including approximately $648.3 million of indebtedness. The Indenture will generally prohibit the incurrence of additional debt by the Issuer and will limit the incurrence of additional debt and the issuance of preferred stock by the Issuer's subsidiaries, including Coleman. Prior to the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will also be effectively subordinated to the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs, respectively.

There can be no assurance that an exchange offer for the LYONs will be consummated or that the LYONs Retirement will be consummated on or before May 27, 1998. See "Description of the Notes." To the extent that the LYONs Retirement may not be completed until May 27, 1998, the Issuer and its subsidiaries will continue to incur interest expense on the outstanding principal amount of the LYONs not retired at the rate of 7.25%. In addition, there can be no assurance that the Escrowed Funds will be sufficient to consummate the LYONs Retirement at any time, particularly if the market value of the Coleman Common Stock increases such that the market value of the shares for which the outstanding LYONs may be exchanged exceeds the remaining Escrowed Funds. If the Escrowed Funds are insufficient, the Issuer will be required to adopt one or more alternatives, such as seeking capital contributions or loans from its affiliates, or if LYONs are exchanged, delivering Coleman Common Stock upon exchange, thereby reducing the Issuer's indirect ownership of Coleman. None of the affiliates of the Issuer will be required to make any capital contributions or other payments to the Issuer with respect to the Issuer's obligation to consummate the LYONs Retirement. There can be no assurance that any of the foregoing actions could be effected on satisfactory terms, that they would be sufficient to enable the Issuer to consummate the LYONs Retirement on May 27, 1998 without delivering Coleman Common Stock upon exchange or that any of such actions would be permitted by the terms of the Indenture, the LYONs Indenture or the debt instruments of the Company then in effect.

Security for the Notes; Potential for Diminution

Upon the consummation of the Offering and prior to the Coleman Holdings Merger, all of the Issuer's obligations under the Indenture and the Notes will be secured by a pledge of all of the shares of capital stock of Coleman Holdings. In addition, upon consummation of the Offering, the Notes will be guaranteed pursuant to the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, which Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will initially be secured by 522,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock. Simultaneously with the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, the Notes will be secured by all of the capital stock of Coleman Worldwide and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be secured by an additional pledge of the 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently pledged to secure the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes. The Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty and the pledge of the Coleman Worldwide capital stock will terminate upon the Coleman Worldwide Merger. The Trustee's claim under the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will be limited to the shares pledged as security therefor and will not entitle the Trustee or the holders of the Notes to the status of a general creditor of Coleman Worldwide. In addition to such shares, simultaneously with the release of Escrowed Funds from time to time to redeem the LYONs or upon exchange of LYONs in connection with the LYONs Retirement, the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty will become secured by the shares of Coleman Common Stock into which such exchanged or redeemed LYONs are exchangeable that are released from the pledge to secure any exchanged or redeemed LYONs, until consummation of the LYONs Retirement, at which time the Notes will also be secured by the 16,394,810 shares of Coleman Common Stock currently pledged to secure the LYONs and the 1,672,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock not currently pledged, of which 522,710 shares are currently available to be pledged to secure the Notes, less any Delivered Shares. Upon consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Notes will be secured by the shares of Coleman Common Stock that are currently pledged to secure the LYONs and the Old Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of the Coleman Holdings Notes plus the 1,672,710 shares of Coleman Common Stock not currently pledged, less any Delivered Shares.

No additional shares of Coleman Common Stock will be pledged irrespective of the market value of the stock at any time. The Coleman Common Stock is currently listed on the NYSE. Since January 1, 1996, the high and low sales prices of the Coleman Common Stock were $26 and $11½ per share, respectively. There currently is no public market for the Coleman Worldwide or Coleman Holdings capital stock. The value of the collateral will be subject to fluctuation and there can be no assurance that the proceeds from the sale or sales of all of such collateral would be sufficient to satisfy the amounts due on the Notes in the event of a default. In addition, the ability of the holders of the Notes to realize upon the collateral may be subject to certain limitations and there can be no assurance that the Trustee or the holders of the Notes would be able to sell the shares pledged as collateral to secure the Notes and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty at the then current market value. Sales of substantial amounts of the Coleman Common Stock (whether by the Trustee or other secured lenders, if any, or otherwise) could adversely affect market prices.

The Notes are not guaranteed by the Company, and except for the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty of Coleman Worldwide, which will terminate upon the Coleman Worldwide Merger, the Notes are not guaranteed by any other affiliate of the Issuer. If there were an Event of Default under the Indenture and the Trustee under the Indenture or the holders of the Notes were to foreclose upon the collateral, such foreclosure could constitute a change of control of the Company which would result in an event of default permitting acceleration under the Company Credit Agreement. There can be no assurance that the assets of the Company and its subsidiaries would be sufficient to repay in full borrowings under the Company Credit Agreement if they became due. In such event no assets of the subsidiaries of the Company would be available to the holders of the Notes and the value of the shares of Coleman Common Stock (and Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide capital stock) securing the Notes would be substantially diminished or eliminated. Although currently unsecured, the Company Credit Agreement provides that it will become secured by the Company's assets at December 31, 1997 if a specified financial leverage requirement is not met. If the Company Credit Agreement became secured, any enforcement of the security interests securing the Company Credit Agreement, or enforcement of the security interests securing any other indebtedness of the Issuer or its subsidiaries, could have a material adverse effect on the market price of Coleman Common Stock and on the ability of the Trustee to realize value through sales of the collateral pledged to secure the Notes and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty. The Indenture permits the Issuer, under certain circumstances, to grant liens on its assets, if any, other than the shares of Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide or Coleman, as the case may be, pledged to secure the Notes.

Because the additional 26,000,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock to be pledged to secure the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty following the Coleman Holdings Merger and the shares, if any, to be pledged upon the completion of the LYONs Retirement, will not be pledged simultaneously with Coleman Worldwide incurring its obligation to issue the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, but rather will be pledged later, in certain circumstances such pledge could constitute a preference if Coleman Worldwide were to become a debtor in a bankruptcy case. Under applicable provisions of the United States Bankruptcy Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") if Coleman Worldwide were to become the subject of a bankruptcy case within the 90-day period following the issuance of the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty or following any pledges of additional shares of Coleman Common Stock (or within one year of such events if the entity for whom the transfer is made is an "insider" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Code), a bankruptcy court could avoid the pledge of Coleman Common Stock as a preference if Coleman Worldwide was insolvent at the time thereof and the pledge enabled holders of the Notes to receive more than they would if Coleman Worldwide were liquidated under the Bankruptcy Code. Such pledges by Coleman Worldwide may also be voidable as preferences under similar state laws, which in many cases have a 120-day preference period. The Notes are not secured by a pledge of the Escrowed Funds. The Escrowed Funds could be subject to the claims of creditors of the Issuer, if any, other than the holders of the Notes.

Control by Holders of First Priority Notes

The First Priority Notes are expected to constitute approximately 82.0% of the aggregate principal amount at maturity of the Notes to be sold in the Offering and the Second Priority Notes will constitute the balance. Under the terms of the Indenture, although the First Priority Notes and the Second Priority Notes will be treated as separate series of securities for purposes of their respective rights to payment upon a realization of the collateral securing the Notes and the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty. Accordingly, any proceeds received by the Trustee from a realization on the collateral will be applied first to pay the expenses of the Trustee under the Indenture, second to pay the Default Amount (as defined herein) on the First Priority Notes and, thereafter, to pay the Default Amount on the Second Priority Notes. For all other purposes the First Priority Notes and the Second Priority Notes will be treated as a single class of securities issued under the Indenture. Any actions that may be taken by the holders of less than all of Notes outstanding under the Indenture, including the approval of any supplements or amendments thereto, waivers of any past defaults, giving notice to the Issuer and the Trustee of an Event of Default, rescinding an acceleration of the Notes, exercising remedies with respect to the collateral securing the Notes and controlling proceedings following an Event of Default, may be taken by the holders of specified percentages of the aggregate principal amount at maturity of Notes outstanding. There will be no separate class voting for holders of the Second Priority Notes under any circumstances, even if the proposed action would more adversely affect the holders of the Second Priority Notes. Accordingly, it is expected that the holders of the First Priority Notes will be able to control the vote on all actions requiring approval of the holders of a majority of the aggregate principal amount at maturity of Notes outstanding without obtaining the approval of any holders of the Second Priority Notes. With respect to actions that may be taken by holders of at least 25% of the aggregate principal amount at maturity of Notes outstanding, the approval of at least some of the holders of the First Priority Notes will be required in order to take such actions. In addition, if a default occurs under the Indenture, the Trustee may be deemed to have a "conflicting interest" within the meaning of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, as amended (the "TIA"). In such case, the Trustee would be required to eliminate the conflicting interest, by appointing another trustee or otherwise.

Restrictions Imposed by Terms of Indebtedness; Consequences of Failure to Comply

The terms and conditions of the Indenture, the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture, the LYONs Indenture, the Company Credit Agreement and the Company Senior Notes (as defined herein) impose restrictions that affect, among other things, the ability of the Issuer and its subsidiaries to incur debt, pay dividends, make acquisitions, create liens, sell assets and make certain investments.

The terms of the Company Credit Agreement also require the Company to maintain specified financial ratios and tests, including a specified ratio of consolidated current assets to consolidated current liabilities, a specified ratio of consolidated debt to consolidated net worth, a minimum interest coverage ratio, a minimum fixed charge coverage ratio, and a minimum consolidated net worth. The terms of the Company Senior Notes also require the Company to maintain specified financial ratios and tests, including a specified level of consolidated net worth. The Company's ability to comply with the foregoing provisions can be affected by events beyond the Company's control, and there can be no assurance that the Company will achieve operating results that maintain compliance with such provisions. The breach of any of such covenants would result in a default under the Company Credit Agreement or the Company Senior Notes permitting the holders thereof to declare all amounts outstanding thereunder to be due and payable. In addition, the terms of the LYONs Indenture provide that if the Company fails to maintain a specified ratio of consolidated debt to the sum of consolidated debt and consolidated net worth or Coleman Worldwide fails to maintain a minimum consolidated net worth, an Additional Purchase Right Event under the LYONs Indenture would occur, which would require Coleman Worldwide to repurchase the LYONs. If an Additional Purchase Right Event under the LYONs Indenture did so occur, however, the Issuer would be permitted under the Indenture and the Escrow Agreement to use the Escrowed Funds to finance such LYONs repurchase. If indebtedness of the Issuer or its subsidiaries were to be accelerated or required to be repurchased, there could be no assurance that the assets of the Issuer and its subsidiaries would be sufficient to repay in full borrowings under the outstanding debt instruments of the Issuer and its subsidiaries, including the Notes. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources," "Description of the Notes" and "Description of Other Indebtedness."

The events that constitute a Change of Control under the Indenture may also constitute events of default or repurchase right events under certain indebtedness of the Issuer's subsidiaries which indebtedness is effectively senior to the Notes. See "—Subordination to Subsidiary Liabilities." Such events may permit the lenders under such debt instruments to accelerate the debt (or, in the case of the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs, to require the issuers thereof to repurchase such securities) and, if the debt is not paid or repurchased, to enforce their security interests, if any, thereby limiting the Issuer's ability to raise cash to repurchase the Notes and reducing the practical benefit of this provision to the holders of the Notes. As of March 31, 1997 after giving pro forma effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the amount of outstanding indebtedness that could be accelerated or result in a mandatory repurchase under these circumstances would have been $205.1 million (excluding the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs). See "—Indebtedness and Ability to Repay the Notes," "—Subordination to Subsidiary Liabilities" and "Description of the Notes—Change of Control."

Competition

The markets in which the Company operates are highly competitive. The Company competes in selected product categories against a number of multinational manufacturers, some of which are larger and have substantially greater resources than the Company. See "Business—Competition."

Social, Political and Economic Risks Affecting Foreign Operations and Effects of Foreign Currency Fluctuations

The Company sells its products in more than 100 countries. As a result, the Company is exposed to the risk of changes in social, political and economic conditions inherent in foreign operations, including changes in the laws and policies that govern foreign investment in countries where it has operations as well as, to a lesser extent, changes in United States laws and regulations relating to foreign trade and investment. In addition, the Company's results of operations and the value of its foreign assets are affected by fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates, which may favorably or adversely affect reported earnings and, accordingly, the comparability of period-to-period results of operations. Changes in currency exchange rates may affect the relative prices at which the Company and foreign competitors sell their products in the same market. For 1996 and 1995, 32% and 24%, respectively, of the Company's net sales were outside North America. The Company enters into forward and option contracts to hedge certain cash flows denominated in foreign currency. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Fraudulent Conveyance Considerations

None of the proceeds from the Offering will be available to Coleman Worldwide, which following the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption will issue the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty to secure the Notes issued by its parent, the Issuer, and pledge Coleman Common Stock as security therefor. Under applicable provisions of federal bankruptcy law or comparable provisions of state fraudulent transfer law, if a court were to find that at the time it issued the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty or pledged the Coleman Common Stock in connection with the Offering (a) Coleman Worldwide issued the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty or pledged the Coleman Common Stock with the intent of hindering, delaying or defrauding creditors, or (b) Coleman Worldwide received less than reasonably equivalent value or fair consideration in exchange for the obligations that it incurred under the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty, or for the pledge of Coleman Common Stock, and Coleman Worldwide (i) was insolvent or was rendered insolvent by reason of such incurrence or pledge, (ii) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction, for which its remaining assets constituted unreasonably small capital or (iii) intended to incur, or believed that it would incur, debts beyond its ability to pay such debts as they matured, the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty and the pledge of the Coleman Common Stock securing the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty could be voided, or claims in respect of the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty and the pledge could be subordinated to all other debts of Coleman Worldwide. In addition, any payments by Coleman Worldwide pursuant to the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty could be avoided and be required to be returned to Coleman Worldwide, particular creditors of Coleman Worldwide or to a fund for the benefit of its creditors.

The measures of insolvency for purposes of the foregoing considerations will vary depending upon the law applied in any proceeding with respect to the foregoing. Generally, however, Coleman Worldwide would be considered insolvent if the sum of its debts, including contingent liabilities, were greater than the value of all of its assets at a fair valuation or if the present fair saleable value of its assets were less than the amount that would be required to pay its probable liability on its existing debts, including contingent liabilities, as they become absolute and mature. There can be no assurance, however, as to what standard a court would apply in making such determination.

Original Issue Discount; Limitations on Holders' Claims

The Notes will be issued at a substantial original issue discount from their principal amount at maturity. Consequently, purchasers of Notes will be required to include amounts in gross income for federal income tax purposes in advance of receipt of the cash payments to which the income is attributable. See "Certain U.S. Federal Income Tax Considerations" for a more detailed discussion of the federal income tax consequences to the purchasers of the Notes resulting from the purchase, ownership or disposition thereof.

Under the Indenture, in the event of an acceleration of the maturity of the Notes upon the occurrence of an Event of Default, the holders of the Notes may be entitled to recover only the amount which may be declared due and payable pursuant to the Indenture, which will be less than the principal amount at maturity of such Notes. See "Description of the Notes—Defaults."

If a bankruptcy case is commenced by or against the Issuer under the Bankruptcy Code, the claim of a holder of Notes with respect to the principal amount thereof may be limited to an amount equal to the sum of (i) the Issue Price of the Notes and (ii) that portion of the Original Issue Discount which is not deemed to constitute "unmatured interest" for purposes of the Bankruptcy Code. Accordingly, holders of the Notes under such circumstances may, even if sufficient funds are available, receive a lesser amount than they would be entitled to under the express terms of the Indenture. In addition, there can be no assurance that a bankruptcy court would compute the accrual of interest by the same method as that used for the calculation of Original Issue Discount under federal income tax law and, accordingly, a holder might be required to recognize gain or loss in the event of a distribution related to such a bankruptcy case.

Lack of Public Market; Restrictions on Transferability

The Notes are new securities for which there currently is no market. Although the Initial Purchasers have informed the Issuer that they currently intend to make a market in the Notes, and if issued, the Exchange Notes, they are not obligated to do so and any such market making may be discontinued at any time without notice. In addition, such market making activity may be limited during the pendency of the Exchange Offer or the effectiveness of a shelf registration statement in lieu thereof. Accordingly, there can be no assurance as to the development or liquidity of any market for the Notes and, if issued, the Exchange Notes. It is expected that the Notes will be eligible for trading by qualified buyers in the PORTAL market. The Issuer does not intend to apply for listing of the Notes or, if issued, the Exchange Notes, on any securities exchange or for quotation through The Nasdaq Stock Market.

The Notes are being offered in reliance upon an exemption from registration under the Securities Act and applicable state securities laws. Therefore, the Notes may be transferred or resold only in a transaction registered under or exempt from the Securities Act and applicable state securities laws. Pursuant to the Registration Agreement (as defined herein), the Issuer has agreed to file the Exchange Offer Registration Statement (as defined herein) with the SEC and to use its best efforts to cause such registration statement to become effective with respect to the Exchange Notes. If issued, the Exchange Notes generally will be permitted to be resold or otherwise transferred (subject to the restrictions described under "Exchange Offer: Registration Rights" and "Notice to Investors") by each holder without the requirement of further registration. The Exchange Notes, however, also will constitute a new issue of securities with no established trading market. The Exchange Offer will not be conditioned upon any minimum or maximum aggregate principal amount of Notes being tendered for exchange. No assurance can be given as to the liquidity of the trading market for the Exchange Notes, or, in the case of non-tendering holders of Notes, the trading market for the Notes following the Exchange Offer.

The liquidity of, and trading market for, the Notes or the Exchange Notes also may be adversely affected by general declines in the market for similar securities. Such a decline may adversely affect such liquidity and trading markets independent of the financial performance of, and prospects for, the Issuer.

Control by MacAndrews & Forbes

MacAndrews & Forbes' indirect ownership of all of the capital stock of each of the Issuer, Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide and approximately 82.6% of the Coleman Common Stock permits MacAndrews & Forbes to elect the entire Board of Directors of each of the Issuer, Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide and the Company and to control the Issuer, Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide and the Company, including the vote on matters submitted to a vote of the Company's stockholders. Although the Company has five directors who are neither officers nor employees of MacAndrews & Forbes or any of its affiliates, the Board of Directors of each of the Issuer, Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide and the Company has been, and is expected to continue to be, comprised entirely of designees of MacAndrews & Forbes, which is wholly owned by Ronald O. Perelman.

The shares of common stock of the Issuer and shares of common stock of intermediate holding companies are or may from time to time be pledged to secure obligations of MacAndrews & Forbes or its affiliates. A foreclosure upon any such shares of common stock could constitute a change of control under the Indenture and certain debt instruments of the Issuer's subsidiaries, including the Company Credit Agreement, the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs. See "—Security for the Notes; Potential for Diminution."

Forward-Looking Statements

This Offering Memorandum contains certain forward-looking statements and information relating to the Company that are based on the beliefs of management as well as assumptions made by and information currently available to management. Such forward-looking statements are principally contained in the sections "Offering Memorandum Summary," "Business—Business Strategy" and "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations." In addition, in those and other portions of this Offering Memorandum, the words "anticipate," "believe," "estimate," "expect," "plans," "intends" and similar expressions, as they relate to the Issuer, Coleman Holdings, Coleman Worldwide, the Company or management, are intended to identify forward-looking statements. Such statements reflect the current views of the Issuer and its subsidiaries with respect to future events and are subject to certain risks, uncertainties and assumptions, including the risk factors described in this Offering Memorandum. In addition to factors that may be described in this Offering Memorandum, the following factors, among others, could cause the actual results of the Issuer and its subsidiaries, including the Company, to differ materially from those expressed in any forward-looking statements made: (i) the success of the Company's restructuring programs, (ii) negative external factors like adverse weather in North America or other regions, (iii) possible continued consumer spending decline in Japan, (iv) the possibility the Company may be required to renegotiate its credit agreements and (v) any difficulties or delays in effecting the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement. Should one or more of these risks or uncertainties materialize, or should underlying assumptions prove incorrect, actual results may vary materially from those described herein as anticipated, believed, estimated or expected. The Issuer does not intend to update these forward-looking statements.

USE OF PROCEEDS

The Issuer will use the net proceeds of the Offering, approximately \$455.3 million, to make the Capital Contributions to finance the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement. The Coleman Holdings Notes mature on May 27, 1998 and original issue discount thereon accretes at the rate of 10 $\frac{1}{8}$ % per annum, compounded on a semiannual bond equivalent basis. The LYONs mature on May 27, 2013 and original issue discount accretes at the rate of 7.25% per annum, compounded on a semiannual bond equivalent basis. As of March 31, 1997, the accreted value of the Coleman Holdings Notes and the LYONs was approximately \$248.9 million and \$177.7 million, respectively. If there are any proceeds of the Offering remaining after consummation of the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer intends to dividend or distribute such funds to MacAndrews & Forbes. See "Description of Other Indebtedness." Pending such uses, the net proceeds of the Offering will be held in escrow and invested in Treasury Securities and other Permitted Investments.

CAPITALIZATION

The following table sets forth the actual consolidated capitalization of the Issuer and its subsidiaries as of March 31, 1997 and the consolidated capitalization of the Issuer and its subsidiaries at such date as adjusted to give effect to the Offering, the Capital Contributions, the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption and the LYONs Retirement, as if such transactions had been consummated on March 31, 1997. The as adjusted information does not give effect to any exchange offer for the LYONs, but rather assumes that all outstanding LYONs are redeemed on May 27, 1998. Due to its direct 100% ownership of Coleman Holdings, indirect 100% ownership of Coleman Worldwide and indirect 82.6% ownership of Coleman, the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and its subsidiaries include the accounts of Coleman Holdings and its subsidiaries after elimination of all material intercompany accounts and transactions. Minority interest primarily represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the equity of Coleman. SELECTED HISTORICAL FINANCIAL DATA

The Issuer is a holding company formed in May 1997 to hold all of the common stock of Coleman Holdings. Coleman Holdings is a holding company formed in July 1993 in connection with the offering of the Coleman Holdings Notes and holds all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. Coleman Worldwide was formed in March 1993 in connection with the offering of $575 million aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs and holds 44,067,520 shares of Coleman Common Stock, which represent approximately 82.6% of the outstanding Coleman Common Stock. Coleman was formed in December 1991 to succeed to the assets and liabilities of the outdoor products business of Holdings. Due to the Issuer's 100% direct ownership of Coleman Holdings, 100% indirect ownership of Coleman Worldwide and approximately 82.6% indirect ownership of Coleman, the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer include the accounts of Coleman Holdings and its subsidiaries after elimination of all material intercompany accounts and transactions. Minority interest primarily represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the results of operations and equity of Coleman.

The selected historical financial data for, and as of the end of, each of the years in the five year period ended December 31, 1996 have been derived from the audited Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and its subsidiaries. The selected historical financial data for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and as of March 31, 1997 have been derived from the unaudited Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer which reflect, in the opinion of management, all adjustments (which include only normal recurring adjustments) necessary to present fairly the financial data for such periods and at such date. Results for the interim periods are not necessarily indicative of results for the full year.

The following selected historical financial data should be read in conjunction with "Capitalization," "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations" and the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and the notes thereto included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

- (a) During 1996, the Company recorded restructuring and certain other charges totaling $52,516, net of tax. Cost of sales includes a pre-tax charge of $44,005, selling, general and administrative expenses include a pre-tax charge of $30,195, and the provision for income tax benefit includes $21,684 of net tax benefits resulting from these charges.
- (b) Asset impairment charge reflects primarily the non-recurring charge taken in connection with the adoption of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 121.
- (c) Restructuring expense reflects primarily the non-recurring charge taken in connection with the German Restructuring which includes severance costs, commitments to third parties and write-downs of leasehold improvements and other assets to estimated realizable values.
- (d) Gain on IPO represents the gain to Coleman Worldwide on the sale of approximately 18% of the Coleman Common Stock in the IPO.
- (e) Earnings used in computing the ratio of earnings to fixed charges consist of loss (earnings) before income taxes plus fixed charges. Fixed charges consist of interest expense (including amortization of debt issuance costs, but not the loss relating to the early extinguishment of debt) and 33% of rental expense (considered to be representative of the interest factors). The deficiency of earnings to fixed charges was $8,917 and $86,113 for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and the year ended December 31, 1996, respectively.
- (f) EBITDA is defined as (loss) earnings before income taxes, minority interest and extraordinary item, plus interest expense, net, depreciation and amortization, asset impairment charge of $12,289 for the year ended December 31, 1995, restructuring and certain other charges of $3,928 for the three months ended March 31, 1997, $74,200 for the year ended December 31, 1996 and $18,456 for the year ended December 31, 1994, less gain on IPO of $54,515 for the year ended December 31, 1992 and less non-cash gain on LYONs conversion of $2,751 for the three months ended March 31, 1996 and $2,755 for the year ended December 31, 1996. EBITDA is presented here not as a measure of operating results but rather as a measure of debt service ability. EBITDA should not be considered in isolation or as a substitute for net income or cash flow from operations prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, or as a measure of the profitability or liquidity of the Company. EBITDA does not take into account the Issuer's consolidated debt service requirements and other commitments and, accordingly, is not necessarily indicative of amounts that may be available for discretionary uses. Net cash (used) provided by operating activities was ($48,121), ($92,844), ($5,476), $9,341, $46,648, $36,749 and $15,530 for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995, 1994, 1993 and 1992, respectively. Net cash provided (used) by investing activities was $2,813, ($66,812), ($204,339), ($68,252), ($157,083), ($68,506) and ($20,400) for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995, 1994, 1993 and 1992, respectively. Net cash provided by financing activities was $39,534, $153,778, $210,692, $64,388, $114,748, $30,176 and $8,704 for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995, 1994, 1993 and 1992, respectively.

MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

The Issuer is a holding company with no business operations or source of income of its own. Accordingly, except as otherwise indicated, the following discussion relates to the results of operations of the Company. The following discussion should be read in conjunction with the Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer and the notes thereto included elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum. See "Index to Consolidated Financial Statements."

Results of Operations

Three months ended March 31, 1997 compared with the three months ended March 31, 1996

Net revenues of $295.5 million in 1997 were $21.9 million or 8.0% greater than in 1996 with outdoor recreation products increasing $29.2 million or 15.5% and hardware products decreasing $7.3 million or 8.6%. Geographically, United States and Canadian revenues decreased 7.9% while international revenues increased 60.6%.

Outdoor recreation products revenues increased $29.2 million or 15.5%. The sales increase includes the effects of Camping Gaz, a business acquired in March 1996. Excluding the estimated effects of the Camping Gaz acquisition and the strengthening of the US dollar, sales decreased approximately 3.9% reflecting the Company's initiatives to reduce its dependence on promotional programs. Hardware products revenues decreased $7.3 million or 8.6% due to the decline in pressure washer sales, a result of the Company's decision to exit the electric pressure washer business.

Gross margins decreased as a percent of sales by 2.2 percentage points from 29.6% in 1996. The decrease is driven by the effect of lower production levels and to a lesser extent increased resin costs associated with the Company's plastics business. The closing or relocating of three domestic factories and the closing of one international factory as part of the Company's restructuring initiatives is intended to reduce manufacturing costs in the latter part of 1997.

Selling, general and administrative ("SG&A") expenses were $65.9 million in 1997 compared to $46.7 million in 1996, an increase of 40.9%. The increase in SG&A expenses reflects SG&A expenses associated with the Camping Gaz acquisition and severance costs associated with recent executive changes.

Interest expense was $10.7 million in 1997 compared with $8.1 million in 1996, an increase of $2.6 million. This increase was primarily the result of higher borrowings to fund the Camping Gaz acquisition and to a lesser extent higher interest rates. Coleman Worldwide, on a stand-alone basis, had $3.2 million of interest expense in 1997 compared with $3.0 million in 1996, an increase of $0.2 million. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the LYONs. In addition, Coleman Holdings, on a stand-alone basis, had $6.5 million of interest expense in 1997 compared with $5.9 million in 1996, an increase of $0.6 million. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the Coleman Holdings Notes.

During the three months ended March 31, 1996, holders of LYONs with a principal amount at maturity of $9.4 million elected to exchange such LYONs pursuant to the terms of the LYONs Indenture. In connection with these exchanges, Coleman Worldwide delivered 74,107 shares of Coleman Common Stock that Coleman Worldwide owned to the holders of such LYONs. Coleman Worldwide recognized a gain of $2.7 million in connection with these exchanges which is reflected in other income. Coleman Worldwide also recognized an extraordinary loss on early extinguishment of debt as a result of the LYONs exchange in an amount of $1.0 million ($0.6 million after tax). This extraordinary loss represents (i) the excess fair value of the property delivered by Coleman Worldwide to the holders of the LYONs which were exchanged over the accreted value of the LYONs obligations at the time of the exchange, along with (ii) a pro rata portion of the related unamortized financing costs associated with the LYONs issuance.

Minority interest in earnings of Camping Gaz represents the interest of minority shareholders in certain subsidiary operations of Camping Gaz. Minority interest in the earnings of Coleman represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the results of operations of Coleman, which is reflected on the Issuer's consolidated financial statements because of the Issuer's approximate 82.6% ownership of Coleman Common Stock.

The Company recorded a provision for income tax expense of $0.5 million or 38.6% of pre-tax earnings in 1997 compared to a provision for income tax expense of $8.8 million or 37.0% of pre-tax earnings in 1996. On an unconsolidated basis, Coleman Worldwide recorded an income tax benefit of $1.3 million in 1997 and $0.1 million in 1996, or approximately 38% of Coleman Worldwide's unconsolidated pre-tax loss in each period. In addition, Coleman Holdings on an unconsolidated basis, recorded a provision for income tax benefit of $2.4 million in 1997 and $2.2 million in 1996, or approximately 35.0% of Coleman Holdings' unconsolidated pre-tax loss in each period.

The Company recorded other charges of approximately $2.4 million, net of taxes, for the first quarter of 1997 and expects to record a significantly greater amount of restructuring and other charges for the second quarter of 1997. See "Business—Business Strategy and Restructuring—Restructuring." There can be no assurance as to the amount of the restructuring and other charges to be recorded in the second quarter of 1997 or that restructuring and other charges will not be recorded in subsequent periods. See "—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Net revenues in 1996 and 1995 were $1,220.2 million and $933.6 million, respectively, an increase of $286.6 million or 30.7% with outdoor recreation products increasing by $170.7 million or 24.8% and hardware products increasing $115.9 million or 47.4%. Geographically, United States and Canada revenues increased 15.6%, while international revenues increased 79.5%.

Outdoor recreation products revenues increased $170.7 million or 24.8%. Excluding the impact of the Camping Gaz and Sierra acquisitions, the effect of a weaker yen in 1996 as compared to 1995 and the one-time 1995 thermo-electric cooler premium promotion, comparable outdoor recreation product revenues increased approximately 6.4%. Significant revenue gains were experienced in the backpack, tent and sleeping bag businesses, primarily in international markets. In addition, the Company successfully introduced a new line of camping accessories and expanded its heater and light businesses. These gains were substantially offset by poor weather conditions during the camping season in North America and the economic downturn experienced in Japan, both of which adversely affected the demand for the Company's camping products. Hardware products revenues increased 47.4% or $115.9 million. Excluding the impact of the Seatt acquisition, comparable hardware products revenues increased approximately 13.8%, driven by strong generator and pressure washer sales.

Gross margins, excluding the impact of restructuring and other charges totaling $44.0 million which are more fully discussed below, decreased as a percent of sales by 2.9 percentage points from 30.4% in 1995 to 27.5% in 1996. This decrease is primarily the result of lower margins associated with the Company's backpack business and the unfavorable effects of product mix including significantly higher sales of pressure washers at lower gross margin percentages and lower sales of camping products which tend to have higher gross margin percentages than the Company's average.

SG&A expenses, excluding $30.2 million of restructuring and other charges as discussed more fully below, were $261.5 million in 1996 compared to $174.7 million in 1995, an increase of 49.7%. The increase in SG&A expenses primarily reflects SG&A expenses associated with the Camping Gaz and Seatt business acquisitions and to a lesser extent increased advertising and marketing expenses.

During 1996, the Company recorded restructuring and certain other charges totaling $52.5 million net of tax. The restructuring charges total $45.1 million, net of tax, and consist of charges to (a) integrate the Camping Gaz and Coleman operations into a single global recreation products business, (b) exit the low-end electric pressure washer business, (c) exit a portion of the Company's battery powered light business and settle certain litigation with respect to this business, and (d) increase the valuation reserve for certain foreign deferred income tax assets. Other charges of $7.4 million, net of tax, relate to certain asset write-offs and other tax matters. These other charges were incurred in the Company's normal course of business, although the amounts involved are higher than similar charges that the Company has recorded in prior periods. Cost of sales includes a pre-tax charge of $44.0 million, SG&A expenses includes a pre-tax charge of $30.2 million, and the provision for income tax expense includes $21.7 million of tax benefits resulting from these charges, net of the effect of an increase in the valuation reserve related to certain foreign deferred tax assets and other foreign tax charges.

The Company's interest expense was $38.7 million in 1996 compared with $24.5 million in 1995, an increase of $14.2 million. This increase was primarily the result of higher borrowings to fund business acquisitions and support the increased working capital. On an unconsolidated basis, Coleman Worldwide had an additional $12.1 million of interest expense in 1996 compared with $11.4 million in 1995, an increase of $0.7 million. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the LYONS. In addition, Coleman Holdings, on an unconsolidated basis, had $24.3 million of interest expense in 1996 compared with $21.9 million in 1995, an increase of $2.4 million. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the Coleman Holdings Notes.

The Company recorded an income tax benefit in 1996 of $10.9 million, which includes the net tax benefit of $21.7 million associated with restructuring and other charges discussed above. Excluding the net tax benefit from restructuring and other charges, the provision for income taxes would have been $10.8 million or 45.0% of pre-tax earnings, excluding restructuring and other charges, as compared to a provision for income tax expense of $24.5 million or 37.9% of pre-tax earnings in 1995. The increase is primarily due to losses of certain foreign subsidiaries for which the Company has not recognized a tax benefit and the impact of non-deductible goodwill amortization. On an unconsolidated basis, Coleman Worldwide recorded an income tax benefit of $3.9 million in 1996 and $4.6 million in 1995 or approximately 38% of Coleman Worldwide's unconsolidated pre-tax loss in each period. In addition, Coleman Holdings on an unconsolidated basis, recorded a provision for income tax benefit of $9.0 million in 1996 and $8.2 million in 1995 or approximately 35.0% of Coleman Holdings' unconsolidated pre-tax loss in each period.

The Company obtained control of approximately 70% of Camping Gaz in March 1996 and obtained control of the remaining 30% in July 1996. Accordingly, the minority interest in Camping Gaz for 1996 primarily represents the minority shareholders' approximate 30% proportionate share of the results of operations of Camping Gaz for the period March through June of 1996. Minority interest in Camping Gaz also includes the interests of minority shareholders in certain subsidiary operations of Camping Gaz.

Minority interest in the loss of the Company represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the results of operations of the Company, which is reflected on the Issuer's Consolidated Financial Statements because of the Issuer's ownership through Coleman Holdings and Coleman Worldwide of approximately 83% of the Coleman Common Stock.

During the second quarter of 1996, in connection with the renegotiation of its then existing credit agreement, the Company recorded an extraordinary loss of $1.1 million ($0.6 million after taxes) which represents a write-off of the related unamortized financing costs associated with its then existing credit agreement. During the third quarter of 1995, the Company completed a $200.0 million private placement debt issue. In connection with the private placement, the Company renegotiated its previous credit agreement and recorded an extraordinary loss of $1.3 million ($0.8 million after taxes) which represents a write-off of the related unamortized financing costs associated with its previous credit agreement.

Net revenues in 1995 and 1994 were $933.6 million and $751.6 million, respectively, an increase of $182.0 million, or 24.2% with outdoor recreation products increasing by $125.2 million or 22.2% and hardware products increasing $56.8 million or 30.2%. Geographically, United States and Canada revenues increased 24.0%, while international revenues increased 25.1%.

Outdoor recreation products revenues increased $125.2 million or 22.2%. The sales increase includes the effects of a full twelve months of the Eastpak business, a business acquired in November 1994. The sales increase also reflects strong performance in the sleeping bag, tent, and the core camping businesses, particularly in Japan. Sales of coolers and jugs increased overall in part due to a thermo-electric cooler premium promotion that began in early 1995. In addition, price increases in selected areas also helped to compensate for the loss of revenues attributable to the German operations which were sold in the third quarter of 1994. Hardware products revenues increased 30.2% or $56.8 million. The sales increase includes the effects of a full twelve months of the compressor business, a business acquired in April of 1994. Pressure washer unit sales continued to increase although per unit sales prices declined somewhat in the latter half of 1995 in response to a more competitive market. In addition, generator sales were up primarily as a result of storm activity in the latter half of 1995

Gross margins increased as a percent of sales by 1.7 percentage points from 28.7% in 1994 to 30.4% in 1995. The margin improvement is due to the favorable effects of the mix of products sold including higher margin new products. Gross margins were negatively impacted in 1995 due to manufacturing inefficiencies, integration costs and pricing issues at the Company's Brazilian operations. Cost of sales in 1995 also includes a $6.3 million benefit resulting from the effects of marking to market the Company's forward exchange contracts pursuant to the guidance of the Emerging Issues Task Force (the "EITF") in its consensus opinion of EITF 95-2 "Determination of What Constitutes a Firm Commitment for Foreign Currency Transactions Not Involving a Third Party", which was adopted in the fourth quarter of 1995. Prior to the adoption of EITF 95-2, the Company routinely used forward exchange contracts to hedge certain intercompany commitments and deferred recognition of forward exchange contract gains and losses until the component of the related hedge transaction was completed and recognized in income. Cost of sales in 1994 also includes a $2.2 million charge resulting from an increase in the Company's reserves for estimated costs of environmental remediation efforts.

SG&A expenses were $174.7 million in 1995, compared to $128.5 million in 1994, an increase of 36.0%. The increase in SG&A expenses is primarily related to the Company's selling and marketing organization. SG&A expenses associated with the businesses acquired in 1994, and expenses associated with the relocation of corporate, certain international and hardware offices. Reduced annual expenses associated with certain insurance programs helped reduce the overall increase in SG&A.

During the fourth quarter of 1995, the Company adopted Financial Accounting Standards No. 121, "Accounting for the Impairment of Long-Lived Assets and for Long-Lived Assets to be Disposed Of" ("FAS 121"). In connection with the adoption of FAS 121 the Company recognized an asset impairment charge of $12.3 million ($9.9 million after tax) related to its Brazilian operations. The Brazilian operations had not performed to the Company's expectations since the acquisition of this business in April of 1994, and, in the fourth quarter of 1995, the Company initiated actions to reduce the operating losses in Brazil. These actions included replacing management, increasing prices, dramatically downsizing the manufacturing operations and reducing SG&A and other overhead. Because of these actions, the Company performed an impairment review pursuant to the guidelines set forth in FAS 121 and concluded that a recognition of an asset impairment charge was appropriate.

During September 1994, the Company restructured its German manufacturing operations in a move to strengthen its European business and eliminate unprofitable operations. The German Restructuring resulted in a one-time charge of approximately $18.0 million before tax and included severance costs of $1.5 million, commitments to third parties of approximately $5.5 million, and write-downs of leasehold improvements and other assets to estimated realizable values aggregating $11.0 million. In connection with the restructuring, the Company recognized tax benefits of approximately $10.9 million relating to the write-off of the Company's investment in its German operations. The Company also announced a plan to change from manufacturing to sourcing for certain textile product lines and to exit the market for personal flotation devices. This plan resulted in a $0.5 million pretax charge.

The Company's interest expense was $24.5 million in 1995 and $13.4 million in 1994, an increase of $11.1 million. This increase was primarily the result of higher borrowings in 1995 necessary to support the Company's acquisitions and increased working capital needs related to the growth of the Company and, to a lesser extent, higher interest rates in 1995. On an unconsolidated basis, Coleman Worldwide had an additional $11.4 million of interest expense in 1995 compared with $10.6 million in 1994, an increase of $0.8 million, or 6.9%. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the LYONs. In addition, Coleman Holdings, on an unconsolidated basis, had $21.9 million of interest expense in 1995 compared with $19.7 million in 1994, an increase of $2.2 million, or 11.1%. This increase is a result of the effects of compounding interest related to the Coleman Holdings Notes.

Minority interest represents the minority stockholders' proportionate share of the results of operations of the Company, which is reflected on the Issuer's Consolidated Financial Statements because of the sale of approximately 18% of the Coleman Common Stock in the IPO in 1992. Minority interest increased in 1995 due to an increase in the Company's income in 1995.

The Company's effective income tax rate was 37.9% in 1995 compared with 30.6% in 1994. The increase in the effective tax rate in 1995 as compared to 1994 is primarily due to higher taxes on foreign earnings in the 1995 period as compared to the 1994 period which was favorably impacted by the tax benefits arising from permanent basis differences associated with the restructuring of the German operations. The effective income tax rate in 1995 also reflects the favorable impact of tax benefits associated with the Company's manufacturing operations in Puerto Rico, which were acquired in late 1994. The Issuer's consolidated effective income tax rate was 40.1% in 1995 compared with 19.3% in 1994. The increase in the Issuer's consolidated effective income tax rate reflects the proportionately greater impact of the items discussed above when compared to the Issuer's consolidated earnings before income taxes, minority interest and extraordinary item, partially offset by the proportionately higher impact of nondeductible goodwill amortization when compared with 1994.

During the third quarter of 1995, the Company completed a $200.0 million private placement debt issue. In connection with the private placement, the Company renegotiated its previous credit agreement and recorded an extraordinary loss of $1.3 million ($0.8 million after taxes), which represents a write-off of the related unamortized financing costs associated with its previous credit agreement. During the second quarter of 1994, in connection with the renegotiation of its then existing credit agreement, the Company recorded an extraordinary loss of $1.1 million ($0.7 million after taxes) which represents a write-off of the related unamortized financing costs associated with its then existing credit agreement.

Operating activities of the Issuer and its subsidiaries used $5.5 million of cash during the year ended December 31, 1996 and provided $9.3 million and $46.6 million for the years ended December 31, 1995 and 1994, respectively, and used $48.1 million and $92.8 million during the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996, respectively. At December 31, 1996, receivables were approximately equal to 1995 year-end levels, excluding the amount acquired in connection with the Camping Gaz and Seatt acquisitions and the effect of the restructuring and other charges described above. Inventories, excluding the amount acquired in connection with the Camping Gaz and Seatt acquisitions and the effect of the restructuring and other charges described above, increased by $42.4 million during the year ended December 31, 1996 period primarily because of lower than expected sales as described above. During the three months ended March 31, 1997, receivables increased $67.5 million as a result of the seasonality of the Company's sales and an increase in the overall level of such sales. Despite the seasonality of the Company's business, inventories at March 31, 1997 were approximately equal to the levels at December 31, 1996 as a result of the Company's initiative to reduce inventory.

Net cash used for (provided by) investing activities by the Issuer and its subsidiaries was $204.3 million, $68.3 million, and $157.1 million for the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995 and 1994, respectively, and ($2.8) million and $66.8 million for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996, respectively. Net cash used for investing activities was composed primarily of the Company's capital expenditures, purchases of businesses, and also advances to Mafco under the Coleman Worldwide Tax Sharing Agreement (as defined herein) and the terms of the LYONs Indenture of $4.1 million, $6.7 million and $27.1 million for the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995 and 1994, respectively. The Company's capital expenditures were $41.3 million in the year ended December 31, 1996, and the Company used $161.9 million of cash for business acquisitions during the year ended December 31, 1996. During the three months ended March 31, 1997, the Company's capital expenditures were $6.3 million, and Coleman Worldwide had a reduction in the net advances to Mafco under the Coleman Worldwide Tax Sharing Agreement and the terms of the LYONs Indenture in the amount of $7.0 million. For 1997, the Company expects capital expenditures to be within the range of $30.0 million to $40.0 million.

Net cash provided by financing activities by the Issuer and its subsidiaries was $210.7 million, $64.4 million, and $114.7 million for the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995, and 1994, respectively, and consisted primarily of increases in long-term borrowings and in 1994 from revolving credit agreement borrowings. The Company paid $2.3 million to acquire 100,000 shares of Coleman Common Stock in the open market during 1996. Coleman Holdings' net cash provided by financing activities for the three months ended

March 31, 1997 consisted primarily of an increase in short-term borrowings to finance the seasonal increase in working capital.

The Company's working capital requirements are currently funded by cash flow from operations and domestic and foreign bank lines of credit. In April 1996, the Company amended its then existing credit agreement to: (a) provide a term loan of French Franc 385.1 million ($75.0 million at the then current exchange rates and approximately $68.2 million at March 31, 1997), (b) provide an unsecured revolving credit facility in an amount of $275.0 million, (c) allow for the Camping Gaz acquisition and (d) extend the maturity of the Company Credit Agreement. Due to the restructuring and other charges as discussed previously and lower than expected operating results, the Company further amended the Company Credit Agreement in October 1996 and again in March 1997.

Availability under the Company Credit Agreement is reduced by any commercial paper borrowings outstanding. The Company Credit Agreement is available to the Company until April 30, 2001. At December 31, 1996, $128.1 million was available for borrowings under the Company Credit Agreement. At March 31, 1997, $135.1 million was available for borrowings under the Company Credit Agreement. However, the Indenture, the Coleman Holdings Indenture and the LYONs Indenture contain certain provisions that by their terms restrict the Company's ability to, among other things, incur debt. Accordingly, to the extent that borrowings by the Company of amounts otherwise available under the Company Credit Agreement exceed the level of borrowings permitted by such holding company debt instruments, a default will result under such debt instruments.

The outstanding loans under the Company Credit Agreement bear interest at either of the following rates, as selected by the Company from time to time: (i) the higher of the agent's base lending rate or the federal funds rate plus .50% or (ii) the London Inter-Bank Offered Rate ("LIBOR") plus a margin ranging from .25% to 2.125% based on the Company's financial performance. If there is a default, the interest rate otherwise in effect will be increased by 2% per annum. The Company Credit Agreement also bears an overall facility fee ranging from .15% to .375% based on the Company's financial performance.

The Company Credit Agreement contains various restrictive covenants including, without limitation, requirements for the maintenance of specified financial ratios, levels of consolidated net worth and profits, and certain other provisions limiting the incurrence of additional debt, purchase or redemption of the Company's common stock, issuance of preferred stock of the Company, and also prohibits the Company from paying any dividends until on or after January 1, 1999 and limits the amount of dividends the Company may pay thereafter. The Company Credit Agreement also provides for a specific requirement relating to the Company's financial leverage at December 31, 1997 which, if not achieved, will result in the Company Credit Agreement becoming secured by the Company's assets. For purposes of determining the Company's compliance with certain of such financial covenants, the Company Credit Agreement excludes up to $30 million of charges in connection with the Company's restructuring initiatives. See "Description of Other Indebtedness—Company Credit Agreement." In addition, substantially all of the Coleman Common Stock owned by Coleman Worldwide are pledged to secure indebtedness of Coleman Worldwide and of its parent, Coleman Holdings.

The Company's ability to meet its current cash operating requirements, including projected capital expenditures, tax sharing payments and other obligations is dependent upon a combination of cash flows from operations and borrowings under the Company Credit Agreement. The Company's ability to borrow under the terms of the Company Credit Agreement is subject to the Company's continuing requirement to meet the various restrictive covenants, including without limitation, those described above. If the Company fails to meet the various restrictive covenants of the Company Credit Agreement, the Company will need to renegotiate its current Company Credit Agreement, and/or enter into alternative financing arrangements. There is no assurance that the terms and conditions of such agreements would be as favorable as those now contained in the Company Credit Agreement.

The Company financed the acquisition of the shares of Camping Gaz with the net proceeds from (i) a private placement issuance and sale of $85.0 million aggregate principal amount of 7.10% Senior Notes, Series A, due 2006 (the "Notes due 2006") and (ii) a private placement issuance and sale of $75.0 million aggregate principal amount of 7.25% Senior Notes, Series B, due 2008 (the "Notes due 2008"). The Notes due 2006 bear interest at the rate of 7.10% per annum payable semiannually, and the principal amount is payable in annual installments of $12.1 million commencing June 13, 2000 with a final payment due on June 13, 2006. If there is a default, the interest rate will be the greater of (i) 9.10 % or (ii) 2% above the prime interest rate. The Notes due 2008 bear interest at the rate of 7.25% per annum payable semiannually, and the principal amount is payable in annual installments of $15.0 million commencing June 13, 2004 with a final payment due on June 13, 2008. If there is a default, the interest rate will be the greater of (i) 9.25 % or (ii) 2% above the prime interest rate. The Notes due 2006 and the Notes due 2008 are unsecured and are subject to various restrictive covenants, including without limitation, requirements for the maintenance of specified financial ratios and levels of consolidated net worth and certain other provisions limiting the incurrence of additional debt and sale and leaseback transactions under the terms of the Note Purchase Agreement. The Notes due 2006 and the Notes due 2008 and the Company's Notes due 2007 (as defined herein) shall become secured if the Company Credit Agreement becomes secured as discussed above. See "Description of Other Indebtedness."

The Company's international operations are located primarily in Japan, Europe, and Canada, which are not considered to be highly inflationary environments. The Company uses a variety of derivative financial instruments to manage its foreign currency and interest rate exposures. The Company does not speculate on interest rates or foreign currency rates. Instead, it uses derivatives when implementing its risk management strategies to reduce the possible effects of these exposures.

With respect to foreign currency exposures, the Company principally uses forward and option contracts to reduce risks arising from firm commitments, anticipated intercompany sales transactions and intercompany receivable and payable balances. The Company generally uses interest rate swaps and interest rate caps to fix certain of its variable rate debt. The Company manages credit risk related to these derivative contracts through credit approvals, exposure limits and other monitoring procedures.

Coleman Worldwide is a holding company with no business operations or source of income of its own, and its ability to meet its obligations with respect to the LYONs and any other obligations is contingent upon distributions from the Company, including payments under the Company Tax Sharing Agreement, capital contributions or loans from its direct and indirect parent companies, other borrowings and proceeds from the disposition of the Coleman Common Stock owned by Coleman Worldwide. As the holder of approximately 83% of the Coleman Common Stock, Coleman Worldwide has the ability to cause the Company to make distributions up to the maximum amount permitted by law, subject to limitations in the debt instruments of the Company. However, Coleman Worldwide currently expects that, for the foreseeable future, the net earnings and cash flow of the Company will be retained and used in the business of the Company and that Coleman Worldwide will not receive any distributions from the Company other than payments under the Company's tax sharing agreement. Furthermore, the terms of the Company Credit Agreement prohibits the Company from paying any dividends until on or after January 1, 1999 and limits the amount of dividends the Company may pay thereafter. The receipt by Coleman Worldwide of tax sharing payments from the Company will cease upon Coleman Worldwide's ownership interest in Coleman falling below 80%, and the LYONs Indenture does not require Coleman Worldwide to own more than a majority of the Coleman Common Stock. Pursuant to the LYONs Indenture, at any time that the LYONs are outstanding, the amounts that Coleman Worldwide would be required to pay to Mafco Holdings under the Worldwide Tax Sharing Agreement, together with any remaining funds paid to Coleman Worldwide by the Company under the Company Tax Sharing Agreement may not be paid as tax sharing payments, but Coleman Worldwide may advance such funds to Mafco Holdings as long as the aggregate amount of such advances at any time does not exceed the issue price plus accrued OID of the LYONs. Such advances are evidenced by noninterest bearing unsecured demand promissory notes from Mafco Holdings in the amount of $47.7 million at March 31, 1997. See "Relationship with MacAndrews & Forbes—Tax Sharing Agreements."

The Issuer expects to use the Escrowed Funds to redeem the LYONs or to repurchase the LYONs for cash, including upon the optional redemption on May 27, 1998 or upon the occurrence of any Additional Purchase Right Event (as defined), or to repay the LYONs upon an acceleration after an Event of Default (as defined in the LYONs Indenture) has occurred. There can be no assurance, however, that the Escrowed Funds will be sufficient to consummate the LYONs Retirement. If the Escrowed Funds are insufficient, the Issuer will be required to adopt one or more alternatives, such as seeking capital contributions or loans from its affiliates. None of the affiliates of the Issuer will be required to make any capital contributions or other payments to the Issuer with respect to the Issuer's obligations to consummate the LYONs Retirement. There can be no assurance that any of the foregoing actions could be effected on satisfactory terms, that they would be sufficient to enable the Issuer to consummate the LYONs Retirement when required or that any of such actions would be permitted by the terms of the Indenture, the LYONs Indenture or the debt instruments of the Company then in effect.

The LYONs Indenture provides the holders of LYONs with the option to require Coleman Worldwide to purchase the LYONs after the occurrence of certain events ("Additional Purchase Right Events"). Additional Purchase Right Events occur, among other things, upon the Company's Consolidated Debt Ratio (as defined) exceeding 0.75 to 1.0 or the Consolidated Net Worth (as defined) of Coleman Worldwide as of the end of any fiscal quarter being less than a specified amount which is $60.0 million at March 31, 1997, which specified amount increases to $70.0 million at June 30, 1997. The Indenture and the Escrow Agreement will permit the use of Escrowed Funds to finance any required purchase of LYONs by Coleman Worldwide following an Additional Purchase Right Event.

On March 31, 1997, MacAndrews Holdings assumed a liability of Coleman Worldwide in the amount of approximately $2.3 million. The assumption was accounted for as a capital contribution.

Coleman Holdings is a holding company with no business operations or source of income of its own. Coleman Holdings' only significant asset is all of the common stock of Coleman Worldwide, which owns approximately 82.6% of the outstanding shares of Coleman Common Stock. Coleman Holdings' principal business operations are conducted by Coleman and its subsidiaries, and Coleman Holdings has no operations of its own. Accordingly, Coleman Holdings' only source of cash to pay its obligations with respect to the Coleman Holdings Notes and any other obligations is distributions with respect to ownership interest in Coleman from the net earnings and cash flow generated by Coleman, after payment by Coleman Worldwide of amounts due on the LYONs for so long as they remain outstanding and certain other expenses. However, Coleman Holdings currently expects that the proceeds of the Offering will be contributed by the Issuer to Coleman Holdings and used to fund the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption.

The Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture contains certain covenants that, among other things, state that Coleman Holdings shall not permit the Company to issue debt if after giving effect to such issuance the Company's Consolidated Debt Ratio (as defined) exceeds 0.75 to 1.0. See "Risk Factors—Indebtedness and Ability to Repay the Notes," "Description of Other Indebtedness" and "Description of the Notes."

The Issuer is a holding company with no business operations or source of income of its own. The Issuer's only significant asset is all of the common stock of Coleman Holdings, a holding company that through Coleman Worldwide owns approximately 82.6% of the outstanding shares of Coleman Common Stock. The Issuer's principal business operations are conducted by Coleman and its subsidiaries, and the Issuer has no operations of its own. Accordingly, the Issuer's only source of cash to pay its obligations with respect to the Notes and any other obligations is expected to be distributions with respect to ownership interest in Coleman from the net earnings and cash flow generated by Coleman, after payment by Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings of amounts due on the LYONs and the Coleman Holdings Notes, as the case may be, for so long as they remain outstanding and certain other expenses. As the indirect holder through Coleman Worldwide of approximately 82.6% of the Coleman Common Stock, the Issuer has the ability to cause the Company, Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings, to make distributions up to the maximum amount permitted by law, subject to limitations in the debt instruments of the Company, Coleman Worldwide and Coleman Holdings. However, the Issuer currently expects that, for the foreseeable future, the net earnings and cash flow of the Company will be retained and used in the business of the Company and that the Issuer will not receive any distributions from the Company, Coleman Worldwide or Coleman Holdings. The terms of the Company Credit Agreement prohibit the Company from paying dividends until on or after January 1, 1999 and thereafter restrict the Company's ability to pay dividends or make other payments to Coleman Worldwide, Coleman Holdings and the Issuer. In addition, the LYONs Indenture restricts Coleman Worldwide's ability to pay dividends and make other payments to Coleman Holdings or the Issuer and the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture restricts Coleman Holdings' ability to pay dividends and make other payments to the Issuer. Although Coleman Worldwide may receive payments from the Company pursuant to the Company Tax Sharing Agreement, Coleman Worldwide will not distribute such payments to Coleman Holdings or the Issuer. In addition, the LYONs Indenture requires that any such payments received from the Company be paid to Mafco or retained by Coleman Worldwide (except under certain limited circumstances which are unlikely to occur prior to the LYONs Retirement). See "Description of Other Indebtedness—Coleman Worldwide—The LYONs" and "Risk Factors—Holding Company Structure."

The Issuer currently anticipates that in order to pay the principal amount at maturity of the Notes or upon the occurrence of an Event of Default, to redeem the Notes or to repurchase the Notes upon the occurrence of a Change of Control, the Issuer will be required to adopt one or more alternatives, such as seeking capital contributions or loans from its affiliates, refinancing its indebtedness or selling its equity securities or the equity securities or assets of Coleman. None of the affiliates of the Issuer will be required to make any capital contributions or other payments to the Issuer with respect to the Issuer's obligations on the Notes, and, except for the Coleman Worldwide Non-Recourse Guaranty to be issued following the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, the obligations of the Issuer with respect to the Notes will not be guaranteed by any affiliate of the Issuer or any other person. There can be no assurance that any of the foregoing actions could be effected on satisfactory terms, that they would be sufficient to enable the Issuer to make any payments in respect of the Notes when required or that any of such actions would be permitted by the terms of the Indenture, the Coleman Holdings Notes Indenture, the LYONs Indenture or the debt instruments of the Company or Coleman Worldwide then in effect. Moreover, the events that constitute a Change of Control under the Indenture may also constitute events of default or repurchase right events under certain debt instruments of the Issuer's subsidiaries. Such events may permit the lenders under such debt instruments to accelerate the debt (or, in the case of LYONs, to require Coleman Worldwide to repurchase the LYONs) and, if the debt is not paid or repurchased, to enforce their security interests in substantially all of the assets of the Issuer's subsidiaries. Any such enforcement may limit the Issuer's ability to raise cash to purchase the Notes and may have a material adverse effect on the market price of Coleman Common Stock and on the price that could be obtained for the Coleman Worldwide capital stock and thus on the ability of the Trustee to realize value through sales of the collateral. See "Risk Factors—Indebtedness and Ability to Repay the Notes." "—Security for the Notes: Potential for Diminution." "Description of Other Indebtedness" and "Description of the Notes."

Seasonality

The Company's sales generally are highest in the second quarter of the year and lowest in the fourth quarter. As a result of this seasonality, the Company has generally incurred a loss in the fourth quarter. The Company's sales may be affected by weather conditions, especially during the second and third quarters of the year. For the years ended December 31, 1994, 1995 and 1996, second quarter sales comprised approximately 34%, 33% and 37% of annual sales, respectively. Consequently, the Company's annual results are generally dependent on its results during the second quarter. Furthermore, the Company has announced and is in the process of implementing certain restructuring initiatives, which the Company expects to have an impact on its results during the remainder of 1997. There can be no assurance as to the Company's success in implementing such initiatives or the results therefrom or as to any adverse impact of the Company's restructuring initiatives. See "—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Inflation

In general, manufacturing costs are affected by inflation and the effects of inflation may be experienced by the Company in future periods. Management believes, however, that such effect has not been material to the Company during the past three years.

BUSINESS

The Issuer

The Issuer is a holding company whose only significant asset is all of the common stock, par value $1.00 per share, of Coleman Holdings. Coleman Holdings is a holding company formed in July 1993 in connection with the offering of the Coleman Holdings Notes and holds all of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Coleman Worldwide. Coleman Worldwide was formed in March 1993 in connection with the offering of $575 million aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs. Coleman Worldwide also holds 44,067,520 shares of the Coleman Common Stock, which represent approximately 82.6% of the outstanding Coleman Common Stock. As such, the Issuer's principal business operations are conducted by Coleman and its subsidiaries, and the Issuer has no operations of its own. The Issuer is an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of MacAndrews Holdings, a corporation wholly owned by Ronald O. Perelman. See "Relationship with MacAndrews & Forbes" and "Ownership of Common Stock." Following the Coleman Holdings Notes Redemption, Coleman Holdings expects to be merged with and into the Issuer in the Coleman Holdings Merger. Following the LYONs Retirement, the Issuer expects to be merged with and into Coleman Worldwide in the Coleman Worldwide Merger, with Coleman Worldwide as the surviving corporation.

The Company

Coleman is a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the outdoor recreation and hardware markets on a global basis. The Company's products have been sold domestically and internationally under the Coleman brand name since the 1920s. The Company believes its strong market position is attributable primarily to its well-recognized trademarks, particularly the Coleman brand name, broad product line, product quality and innovation, and marketing, distribution and manufacturing expertise.

The Company participates in two primary markets, outdoor recreation and hardware. The Company's principal outdoor recreation products include a comprehensive line of lanterns and stoves for outdoor recreational use, fuel-related products such as disposable fuel cartridges, a broad range of coolers and jugs, sleeping bags, backpacks, tents, outdoor folding furniture, portable electric lights, spas, camping accessories and other products for recreational use. These outdoor recreation products are distributed predominantly through mass merchandisers, sporting goods chains and outdoor specialty stores. The Company's principal hardware products include portable generators, portable and stationary air compressors, and safety and security products such as smoke alarms, carbon monoxide detectors and thermostats.

The Company has made several acquisitions in recent years designed to expand its product lines in the outdoor recreation market. In 1996, the Company acquired the French company, Camping Gaz, which is a leader in the European camping equipment market. In 1995, the Company acquired Sierra, a manufacturer of portable outdoor and recreational folding furniture and accessories. In 1994, the Company acquired substantially all of the assets of Eastpak. In 1993, the Company acquired substantially all of the assets associated with the butane business of Taymar in the United Kingdom and substantially all of the assets of S.V.B. in Italy. Taymar manufactures and distributes lightweight butane camping lanterns and stoves, as well as butane gas torches and other accessories. S.V.B. manufactures and distributes a wide range of products for the camping and hardware markets under the S.V.B. brand name.

The Company also restructured certain operations in the outdoor recreation market. In 1994, the Company completed the German Restructuring of its German manufacturing operations, including selling its plastic cooler business located in Inheiden, Germany and Loucka, Czech Republic. In 1996, the Company closed the Brazilian manufacturing operations it had acquired from Metal Yanes, Ltda. in 1994.

The Company has also expanded its presence in the hardware market through its acquisition in 1996 of the assets of Seatt, a leading designer, manufacturer and distributor of smoke alarms, thermostats and carbon monoxide detectors, its acquisition in 1995 of substantially all of the assets of ATI, a manufacturer of technologically advanced lightweight generators and battery charging equipment, and its acquisition in 1994 of substantially all of the assets of Sanborn, a manufacturer of a broad line of portable and stationary air compressors.

As part of its restructuring initiatives, the Company expects to sell its pressure washer business. See "—Business Strategy and Restructuring."

Business Strategy and Restructuring

Business Strategy

The Company's business strategy is to build upon its reputation as a leading manufacturer and marketer of high quality brand name consumer products for the outdoor recreation and hardware markets. The specific operating strategies include:

Focus on Quality and Service. Since the business of the Company was founded in the early 1900s, Coleman has built a reputation for its quality products and superior customer service. The Company is committed to continuing, and building upon, this reputation.

Introducing New Products. The Company plans to continue introducing new products. Management intends to focus on leveraging the Company's existing technologies, processes and expertise to maximize the speed and efficiency of new product development and introductions.

Developing Existing Brands. The Company believes it has some of the more prominent brand names in the outdoor recreation and hardware markets and plans to strengthen these brands through superior product design, advertising and promotion.

Expanding International Markets. Coleman is currently a market leader in several product categories in Europe and Japan. The Company plans to utilize its well-established infrastructures in Europe and Japan to expand in other core product categories and to invest appropriately to develop and build businesses in new geographic markets.

Developing Human Resources. The Company plans to continue developing, training, and motivating its personnel at all levels to achieve excellence, including developing and building its team of experienced managers and revising its management incentive programs to increase management's focus on profitability and cash flows.

Operating Efficiency. The Company plans to continue seeking ways to further improve the quality and efficiency of its business processes in order to ensure quality and realize cost savings, including, among other things, exiting low margin product lines and businesses and consolidating manufacturing, distribution and administrative facilities.

Restructuring

As part of its strategy to improve its business processes, the Company has announced several restructuring initiatives designed to reduce costs and improve profitability and competitiveness. In March 1997, the Company announced that it would close its executive offices in Golden, Colorado, with most of its administrative functions expected to return to its Wichita, Kansas, facility. In April 1997, the Company announced its intention to (i) eliminate 700 employees, which represent approximately 10% of its current work force, (ii) close or relocate three domestic factories and close one international factory, (iii) close its Geneva, Switzerland international headquarters, (iv) rationalize its product lines, including a significant reduction in SKUs, and (v) sell its pressure washer business. In addition, the Company may sell other non-strategic businesses if suitable opportunities arise. Coleman has already begun to implement its new restructuring plan. Coleman has announced plans to close its Hastings, Nebraska factory which was used in the manufacturing of portable power generators and pressure washers, and to eliminate the jobs of its 135 factory employees. The Company expects to incur certain restructuring and other charges in connection with these initiatives during 1997. The Company recorded other charges of approximately $2.4 million, net of taxes, for the first quarter of 1997 and expects to record a significantly greater amount of restructuring and other charges for the second quarter of 1997. There can be no assurance as to the amount of the restructuring and other charges to be recorded in the second quarter of 1997 or that restructuring and other charges will not be recorded in subsequent periods. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Sales and Marketing

The following table sets forth the net revenues by class of products for the three months ended March 31, 1997 and 1996 and the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995 and 1994.

	Three months ended March 31,		Year ended December 31,
	1997	1996	1996	1995	1994
	(In Millions)
Outdoor Recreation	$217.8	$188.6	$ 859.6	$688.9	$563.7
Hardware	77.7	85.0	360.6	244.7	187.9
Total	$295.5	$273.6	$1,220.2	$933.6	$751.6

In the United States and Canada, the Company's outdoor recreation products are sold by the Company's own sales force and, to a lesser extent, by sales representatives that serve specialty markets and related distribution channels. Spa products, however, are sold by independent sales representatives to a nationwide dealer network and, to a lesser extent, by regional sales managers employed by the Company. The Company's hardware products are sold by Company and independent sales representatives.

The Company promotes its products through national and local advertising campaigns, frequently coordinating with retailers' promotions to maximize the benefits of its advertising efforts.

Coleman's major customers include Canadian Tire, Home Depot, Kmart, Price/Costco, Target, and Wal-Mart. Wal-Mart and its affiliates accounted for approximately 15% of the Company's 1996 consolidated net revenues. Although the loss of Wal-Mart as a customer could have an adverse effect on the Company, the Company believes its relationship with Wal-Mart is satisfactory and the Company has no reason to believe Wal-Mart will not continue as a customer.

International sales represented 32%, 24% and 23% of net revenues for the years ended December 31, 1996, 1995 and 1994, respectively. For 1996, approximately 79% of the Company's international sales were in Japan and Europe, with the balance in Latin America, Asia-Pacific, Africa and the Middle East. The Company has sales administration offices and warehouse and distribution facilities in Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, the Czech Republic, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, The Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Switzerland, the United Arab Emirates and the United Kingdom. Each office is responsible for sales and distribution of the Company's products in the territories assigned to that office. The Company's direct export operations market its products directly to international customers in certain other markets through Company sales managers, independent distributors, and commissioned sales representatives. In total, the Company sells its products in more than 100 countries.

Seasonality

The Company's sales generally are highest in the second quarter of the year and lowest in the fourth quarter. As a result of this seasonality, the Company has generally incurred a loss in the fourth quarter. The Company's sales may be affected by weather conditions, especially during the second and third quarters of the year. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations—Seasonality."

Competition

The markets in which the Company operates are highly competitive, based primarily on product quality, product innovation, price and customer service and support. The Company's competitors vary according to product line. The Company believes that no other company produces and markets the breadth of camping and outdoor recreation products marketed by the Company. Lanterns and stoves compete with, among others, products offered by Century Primus (a unit of Century Tool & Manufacturing Inc.), American Camper (a unit of Brunswick Corporation) and Dayton Hudson Corporation. The Company's insulated cooler and jug products compete with products offered by Rubbermaid Incorporated, Igloo Products Corp. (a unit of Brunswick Corporation) and The Thermos Company (a unit of Nippon Sanso KK). The Company's sleeping bags compete with, among others, American Recreation and Slumberjack (units of Kellwood Company), Academy Broadway Corp. and MZH Inc. (a unit of Brunswick Corporation), as well as certain private label manufacturers. In the tent market, the Company competes with, among others, Sears, Wenzel (a unit of Kellwood Company), Eureka (a unit of Johnson Worldwide Associates, Inc.) and Mountain Safety Research (a unit of Thaw Corporation), as well as certain private label manufacturers. The Company's backpack products compete with, among others, American Camper (a unit of Brunswick Corporation), JanSport (a unit of VF Corporation), Nike, Outdoor Products and Kelty (a unit of Kellwood Company), as well as certain private label manufacturers. The Company's competition in the electric light business includes, among others, Eveready (a unit of Ralston Purina Company) and Rayovac Corporation. The Company's spas compete with, among others, Watkins Manufacturing Corporation (d.b.a. Hot Springs, a unit of Masco Corporation) and Clark Manufacturing Company, Inc. (d.b.a. Sundance Spas). The Company's camping accessories compete primarily with Coughlan's. The Company's primary competitors in the generator business are Generac Corporation, Honda Motor Co., Ltd., Kawasaki and Yamaha. Primary competitors in the air compressor business include DeVilbiss and Campbell Hausfeld. Alfred Karcher, Inc. and Sears are the Company's primary competitors in pressure washers. The Company's safety and security products compete primarily with First Alert, American Sensor and Nighthawk (a unit of Williams Holding PLC). In addition, the Company competes with various other entities in international markets.

Patents, Trademarks, and Licenses

The Company's operations are not significantly dependent upon any single or related group of patents. While the Company does not believe any single trademark is material to its business other than the "Coleman" word mark and the "Coleman in parallelogram with lantern symbol" logo mark, it believes its trademarks taken as a whole are material to its business. Accordingly, the Company has taken, and will continue to take, actions to protect its interests in all such trademarks.

The Company licenses the Coleman name and logo under two types of licensing arrangements: general merchandise licenses and licenses to purchasers of businesses divested by Holdings. The Company's general merchandise licensing activities involve licensing the Coleman name and logo, for a royalty fee, to certain companies that manufacture and sell products that complement the Company's product lines. In connection with the divestitures of certain businesses after the Acquisition, Holdings entered into trademark license agreements with the purchasers of these businesses. The Company and Holdings receive no direct financial remuneration from the use of the Coleman name by the purchasers of the divested businesses. The Company's licensing activities are not material to the results of operations of the Company.

Research and Development

The Company's research and development efforts are linked to the process of marketing its products. New products and improvements to existing products are developed based upon the perceived needs and demands of consumers. The Company's research and development is performed primarily by an in-house team of marketing managers, engineers, draftsmen and product testers using tools such as computer-assisted design and a variety of consumer research techniques.

Industry Segments, Foreign and Domestic Operations

The Company operates in a single business segment. Certain information concerning geographic segments of the Company is set forth in Note 16 to the Notes to Consolidated Financial Statements of the Issuer contained elsewhere in this Offering Memorandum.

Employees

As of December 31, 1996, the Company employed approximately 4,200 persons full time in the United States and 2,800 persons internationally. None of the Company's United States employees are represented by unions. The Company's Canadian warehouse employees are represented by a union. All of the approximately 350 production employees at the Company's operations in France and Italy and the approximately 1,100 production employees at the Company's operations in Mexico are represented by unions. The Company believes that its relations with its employees are satisfactory and that its employees, many of whom have long-term experience with the Company, represent a valuable resource.

Properties

The Company's principal properties as of December 31, 1996 are as follows:

Legal Proceedings

Environmental Matters

Gilbert and Mosley Site. As a result of investigations undertaken in 1986, the Kansas Department of Health and Environment ("KDHE") discovered that groundwater in the downtown Wichita area (the "Gilbert and Mosley Site") was contaminated with volatile organic chemicals ("VOCs"). Coleman occupied a facility within the boundaries of the Gilbert and Mosley Site. Subsequent investigations in the area, including investigations in November 1988 by Coleman, indicated that the groundwater beneath the Coleman property is contaminated with VOCs. Coleman is in the process of remediating the contamination on its property.

The City of Wichita has entered into a voluntary agreement with KDHE in which the City agreed to investigate and then remediate contamination in the Gilbert and Mosley Site. Coleman has entered into an agreement with KDHE in which Coleman agreed to perform a similar study for the Coleman property and to implement remedial activities at its property. In addition, Coleman entered into an agreement with the City of Wichita in which Coleman agreed to fund its proportionate share of the City's study and remediation of the Gilbert and Mosley site.

All previously filed lawsuits alleging that properties in the downtown Wichita area were diminished in value as a result of discharges of volatile organic chemicals from Coleman's downtown Wichita facility have been settled and dismissed.

Maize Site. Coleman has undertaken a soil and groundwater investigation at its facility in Maize, Kansas (the "Maize Site"). Results indicate that limited VOC contamination is present in the groundwater under and to the southeast of the facility. The data has been reported to the KDHE, and Coleman has entered into an agreement with KDHE to implement appropriate remedial actions. The remediation system has been installed, and Coleman is in the process of remediating the contaminated groundwater.

Northeast Site. In 1990 Coleman undertook a soil and groundwater investigation of its facility in northeast Wichita (the "Northeast Site"). Results indicated the presence of VOCs in the groundwater and soils. Although some of the contamination may be a result of Coleman's operations at the facility, the data also indicated that

The COLEMAN COMPANY, INC.
Corporate Office

December 6, 1999

Dear Stockholder:

On or about January 6, 2000, Coleman plans to merge with a subsidiary of Sunbeam Corporation. Under the February 1998 agreement relating to the merger, you will receive $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed. In addition, under a court-approved litigation settlement, you will receive warrants each entitling you to purchase one Sunbeam share at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003. You will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed (assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding Coleman shares).

The merger was approved by Coleman's board of directors and majority stockholder, a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., on February 27, 1998. As a result, no further action by you or any other Coleman stockholder is required to complete the merger.

At the same time that Coleman's board and majority stockholder approved the merger, Sunbeam agreed to acquire indirectly about 81% of the then outstanding Coleman common stock from a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary. That transaction was completed on March 30, 1998. Sunbeam now owns indirectly about 79% of the outstanding Coleman common stock, as well as shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock purchased from Coleman in July 1999, which together enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock.

As a result of several negative developments affecting Sunbeam, the market price of Sunbeam common stock has declined sharply since the transaction was first announced. Sunbeam's stock closed at $41.75 on February 27, 1998; it closed at $4.75 on December 3, 1999. The financial advisor which advised the then Coleman board on February 27, 1998 that the merger was fair to you has since indicated that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of the subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. In addition, Sunbeam's financial advisor has advised Sunbeam that its opinion regarding the fairness to Sunbeam of the consideration payable to you under the merger agreement, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon.

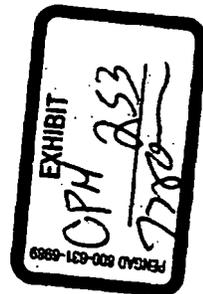

The February 1998 merger agreement provides that it cannot be amended or terminated and the amount of merger consideration has not been adjusted to reflect the decline in the market price of Sunbeam's stock. However, litigation brought on behalf of you and the other Coleman minority stockholders relating to the merger has been settled and, under the terms of the court-approved litigation settlement, you and the other Coleman minority stockholders will receive the warrants, in addition to the cash and stock provided under the merger agreement, when the merger is completed.

Instead of receiving cash, Sunbeam stock and warrants upon completion of the merger, you have the right to dissent from the merger and have the fair value of your Coleman shares appraised by a court and paid to you in cash. These appraisal rights are granted to you by Delaware law and were not affected by the litigation settlement. In order to pursue your appraisal rights, you must submit a written demand to Coleman on or before December 27, 1999 and satisfy the other requirements outlined in the attached document.

The attached document contains important information about the merger, Coleman, Sunbeam, your Delaware law appraisal rights and the litigation settlement. You should read it carefully.

Very truly yours,

Jerry W. Levin

SUMMARY

This summary highlights information that may be found in greater detail elsewhere in this document. In this summary, we have attempted to describe those matters which we believe will be of the greatest importance to you in considering the merger. This summary may not, however, contain all information that is important to you. For that reason, we urge you to read this document carefully in its entirety, including the Annexes at the back of this document and the additional documents we refer you to under "WHERE YOU CAN FIND MORE INFORMATION" beginning on page 155. In particular, you are urged to read carefully the information contained in this document under the caption "RISK FACTORS," beginning on page 18.

Q: What will I receive in the merger?

A: Under the February 1998 agreement relating to the merger, you will receive $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed. In addition, under a court-approved litigation settlement, you will receive warrants each entitling you to purchase one Sunbeam share at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003. You will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed (assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding Coleman shares). For further information regarding the terms of the settlement, including the terms of the warrants, see "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" beginning on page 60.

You will not receive fractional shares of Sunbeam common stock in the merger. Instead, you will receive a check in payment for any fractional share based on the closing share price of Sunbeam common stock on the day the merger is completed. Nor will you receive any fractional warrants under the litigation settlement. Any fractional warrant will be rounded up or down to the nearest whole number.

Q: What choice do I have?

A: Your basic choice is whether to receive the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give you when the merger is completed, or to take action to pursue your Delaware law appraisal rights to have a court determine the value of your Coleman shares and to receive that value as determined by the court entirely in cash.

Q: What risks should I consider?

A: First, you should understand that you are receiving a fixed number of Sunbeam shares in the merger (0.5677 of a share for each Coleman share you own) and no more than a fixed number of Sunbeam warrants in the settlement (0.381 of a warrant for each Coleman share you own). Since the merger was approved, negative developments affecting Sunbeam have caused the market price of the Sunbeam shares to decline sharply (from $41.75 per share on February 27, 1998 to $4.75 per share on December 3, 1999). The market price per Sunbeam share may further decrease before or after the merger.

Second, please understand that the financial advisor which advised the then Coleman board on February 27, 1998 that the merger was fair to you has since indicated that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. Moreover, no other financial advisor has been asked to provide a fairness opinion with respect to the consideration you will receive in the merger. As a result, you do not have the benefit of an independent evaluation of the fairness of the merger consideration in deciding whether to accept the merger consideration or pursue your Delaware law appraisal rights. In addition, Sunbeam's financial advisor has advised Sunbeam that its opinion regarding the fairness to Sunbeam of the consideration payable to you under the merger agreement, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon.

You also should realize that Sunbeam faces the following risks that could negatively affect the value of the shares and warrants you receive:

- Sunbeam is highly leveraged which impairs its ability to obtain financing and limits cash flow available for Sunbeam's operations and may limit its competitiveness in the market place.
- Sunbeam's bank credit facility contains covenants which Sunbeam may not be able to satisfy and default provisions it may not be able to avoid, and if Sunbeam cannot, the banks could demand immediate repayment of Sunbeam's bank debt.
- Sunbeam's bank debt could become due on April 10, 2000, if Sunbeam does not get another waiver from the banks or refinance its bank debt by then, and there can be no assurance that Sunbeam would be able to repay the bank debt on that date.
- Sunbeam may not be able to service its large debt burden, which may force it to restructure or refinance its debt.
- Sunbeam's outside auditors determined that Sunbeam's 1997 internal controls were inadequate and Sunbeam cannot assure you that the corrective measures it has adopted or will adopt to address these inadequacies will be effective.
- Sunbeam had significant losses and its operations consumed significant amounts of cash in the first nine months of 1999 and in fiscal year 1998 and Sunbeam cannot assure you that it will be able to generate profits or positive cash flow from operations in the future.
- Major lawsuits have been brought against Sunbeam, including lawsuits under federal and state securities laws, and the SEC is conducting a formal investigation of Sunbeam; Sunbeam cannot predict the outcome of these lawsuits or the SEC investigation, but if Sunbeam were to lose the lawsuits, the resulting judgments would likely have a negative effect on its financial position, results of operations and cash flow.
- Sunbeam's 1998 acquisitions have increased the size of the operations Sunbeam has to manage and Sunbeam's failure to manage its operations effectively would likely cause Sunbeam to have poor operating results.
- Sunbeam's international operations expose Sunbeam to uncertainties and risks from abroad, which could negatively affect its operations and sales.
- The nature of Sunbeam's businesses requires Sunbeam to successfully develop new and innovative products on a consistent basis in order to regain profitability and increase revenues and Sunbeam may not be able to do so.
- Sunbeam's businesses are very sensitive to the strength of the U.S. retail market and any weakness in this market could adversely affect Sunbeam's financial results.
- Sunbeam operates in a highly competitive market and Sunbeam's inability to compete effectively could cause it to lose market share and could adversely affect its financial results.
- Sunbeam's sales are highly dependent on purchases from several large customers and any significant decline in these purchases or pressure from these customers to reduce prices could have a negative effect on Sunbeam's future financial performance; Sunbeam has no long-term supply contracts with any of its customers.
- Raw materials and components are critical inputs for Sunbeam's products and price hikes or problems with their supply could adversely affect Sunbeam.
- Sunbeam's operations are dependent upon third-party suppliers and service providers whose failure to perform adequately could disrupt Sunbeam's business operations.
- Sunbeam is subject to several production-related risks which could jeopardize its ability to realize anticipated sales and profits.

- The effects of Sunbeam's prior management's outsourcing of critical operating tasks and sales policies may continue to cause Sunbeam substantial difficulty.
- Weather conditions can hurt sales of some of Sunbeam's products.
- Sunbeam remains vulnerable to Year 2000 compliance problems in its systems and those of its suppliers and customers which could potentially disrupt Sunbeam's operations and may require greater than anticipated remedial expenses.
- Sunbeam's debt covenants currently do not allow Sunbeam to pay cash dividends on Sunbeam common stock.
- Negative developments since March 1998 have caused Sunbeam's common stock price to drop significantly, and the risks described in the "RISK FACTORS" section of this document may cause further declines in the price of Sunbeam common stock.
- Because many members of Sunbeam's current management and board of directors recently joined Sunbeam and do not have a long history of managing Sunbeam, there can be no assurance that Sunbeam's current management and board of directors will be able to successfully manage Sunbeam, and
- Sunbeam relies on its key personnel and the loss of one or more of those personnel could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's business, financial condition and results of operations.

For more detail about these and other risks, please carefully read "RISK FACTORS" beginning on page 18 and "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM" beginning on page 26.

Q: When do you expect the merger to be completed?

A: We plan to complete the merger on or about January 6, 2000, which is the twenty-first business day following the date on which this document was first mailed to you.

Q: What are the tax consequences of the merger to Coleman stockholders?

A: Your receipt of cash, Sunbeam common stock and warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock in exchange for the shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed is expected to be a taxable transaction for United States Federal income tax purposes and may also be a taxable transaction under applicable state, local, foreign and other tax laws. However, the tax consequences of the merger are subject to a number of qualifications, as discussed below under the caption "UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS" beginning on page 60.

The tax consequences to you of the merger will depend on your own situation. You should consult your own tax advisor for a full understanding of these tax consequences.

Q: Am I being asked to vote on the merger?

A: No. The merger agreement was approved on February 27, 1998 by Coleman's former board of directors and majority stockholder, a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary. As a result, no further action by you or any other Coleman stockholder is required to complete the merger.

Q: What if I want to accept the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give me? Should I send in my Coleman common stock certificates now?

A: If you wish to accept the cash, stock and warrants described above in exchange for the shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed, you need not take any action now. After the merger is completed, you will receive written instructions on how to surrender your Coleman common stock certificates in exchange for the merger consideration.

Q: What if I do not wish to accept the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give me?

A: If you object to the merger and do not wish to accept the cash, stock and warrants described above in exchange for the shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed, you have the right to dissent from the merger and have the fair value of your Coleman shares appraised by a court and the amount determined by the court will be paid to you in cash by Coleman. If you wish to exercise this right, you must submit a written demand to coleman on or before December 27, 1999. you must also satisfy the other requirements outlined under "APPRAISAL RIGHTS" beginning on page 62. Failure to take any of the required steps on a timely basis may result in the loss of your appraisal rights.

Q: Where should I send my written demand for appraisal?

A: You should send your written demand for appraisal to the following address:

The Coleman Company, Inc.
2111 East 37th Street North
P.O. Box 2931
Wichita, Kansas 67201
Attention: Corporate Secretary

Q: Does Sunbeam currently pay dividends?

A: No. Sunbeam stopped paying dividends after the first quarter of 1998 and has no present intention to pay any dividends for the foreseeable future. In addition, Sunbeam's bank credit agreement prohibits Sunbeam from paying cash dividends.

Q: Who can help answer further questions?

A: If you would like additional copies of this document, or if you have questions about the merger, you should contact either Sunbeam or Coleman at the following addresses:

- issuance to Sunbeam of shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock to enable Sunbeam and Coleman to file consolidated income tax returns prior to the completion of the merger.

We urge you to carefully read "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING COLEMAN" beginning on page 35 and "RISK FACTORS" beginning on page 18.

The Merger

The merger agreement is attached as Annex 1 at the back of this document. We encourage you to read the merger agreement carefully as it is the legal document that governs the merger.

Merger Consideration. Under the February 1998 agreement relating to the merger, you will receive $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed. In addition, under a court-approved litigation settlement, you will receive warrants each entitling you to purchase one Sunbeam share at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003. You will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed (assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding Coleman shares). On March 30, 1998, in connection with the acquisition by Sunbeam of about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock from a subsidiary of MacAndrew & Forbes, all outstanding Coleman employee stock options vested and became exercisable. Accordingly, holders of Coleman employee stock options now have the choice of exercising their options prior to the merger or having their options cashed out in the merger at a price equal to $27.50 minus the per share exercise price of the option. Under the terms of the settlement, the pool of warrants available to Coleman minority stockholders will be distributed pro rata based on the number of Coleman shares held by Coleman minority stockholders at the time of the merger. The number of warrants available for distribution will not be increased in the event that additional Coleman shares are issued to Coleman minority stockholders prior to the completion of the merger. Therefore, if Coleman employee stock option holders were to exercise their options prior to the merger, the outstanding number of Coleman shares would increase and the fraction of a warrant you would receive in the merger for each of your Coleman shares would be reduced. Sunbeam and Coleman do not anticipate that Coleman employee stock option holders will exercise their options prior to the merger, however, because the exercise prices of these options are substantially above the current market price of Coleman common stock. For further information regarding the terms of the settlement, including the terms of the warrants, see "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" beginning on page 60.

You will not receive fractional shares of Sunbeam common stock in the merger. Instead, you will receive a check in payment for any fractional share based on the closing share price of Sunbeam common stock on the day the merger is completed. Nor will you receive any fractional warrants under the terms of the litigation settlement. Any fractional warrant will be rounded up or down to the nearest whole number.

Instead of receiving the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give you, you may exercise your Delaware law appraisal rights if you follow the procedures and satisfy the other requirements outlined below under the caption "APPRAISAL RIGHTS" beginning on page 62.

Ownership of Sunbeam After the Merger. In the merger, Sunbeam will issue about 6,676,135 shares of Sunbeam common stock, assuming all currently outstanding options to acquire Coleman common stock are cashed out in the merger and no Coleman stockholders exercise their Delaware law appraisal rights. See "THE MERGER—Ownership Interest of Coleman Stockholders in Sunbeam After the Merger" beginning on page 58. These 6,676,135 shares of Sunbeam common stock will constitute about 6.2% of the outstanding Sunbeam shares after the merger.

On March 30, 1998, Sunbeam issued 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam common stock to a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in the transaction in which Sunbeam acquired indirectly about 81% of the then outstanding Coleman common stock (the "M&F Transaction"). These 14,099,749 shares will constitute about 13.1% of the outstanding Sunbeam shares after the merger.

In addition, under a court-approved litigation settlement, Sunbeam will issue warrants expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase about 4.98 million Sunbeam shares at a cash price of $7 per share when the merger is completed, assuming no Coleman stockholders exercise their Delaware law appraisal rights. Sunbeam has already issued a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 23 million Sunbeam shares at a cash price of $7 per share to a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in settlement of claims relating to the M&F Transaction. The warrants to be issued to you will have the same terms as the warrant issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary except that the warrants issued to you, unlike the warrants issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, will be freely tradeable upon issuance. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction beginning on page 32 and "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" beginning on page 60. If all these warrants were exercised promptly after the merger, the shares owned by the former Coleman minority stockholders would represent about 8.6% of the then outstanding Sunbeam shares, and the shares owned by the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary would represent about 27.4% of the then outstanding Sunbeam shares.

The current stockholders of Sunbeam, other than the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, will own about 81% of the outstanding Sunbeam shares after the merger, or about 64% if all the warrants are exercised promptly after the merger.

Conditions. The completion of the merger was originally subject to the following conditions contained in the merger agreement:

- this document had to be declared effective by the SEC;
- the shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued in the merger had to be listed for trading on the NYSE; and
- the M&F Transaction had to be completed.

All of these conditions have already been satisfied. Therefore, assuming no court order is entered which prevents the merger from being completed, we expect that the merger will be completed on or about January 6, 2000, which is the twenty-first business day following the date on which this document was first mailed to you.

Accounting Treatment. The merger will be accounted for under the "purchase" method in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Therefore, the aggregate consideration paid by Sunbeam to Coleman stockholders in the merger and in the M&F Transaction will be allocated to Coleman's assets and liabilities based upon their fair market value with any excess being treated as goodwill.

Coleman's Financial Advisor. Credit Suisse First Boston Corporation acted as Coleman's financial advisor in connection with the merger. On February 27, 1998, when the merger agreement was approved by Coleman's former board of directors, Credit Suisse First Boston delivered to Coleman's former board an oral opinion, which was subsequently confirmed in writing, to the effect that, as of that date and based upon and subject to the matters described in the opinion, the cash and stock consideration you will receive under the merger agreement was fair to you from a financial point of view. Because Sunbeam did not plan to issue the warrants at the time the merger agreement was signed, Credit Suisse First Boston did not take the warrants into account when evaluating the fairness of the merger agreement consideration.

Since the date of the Credit Suisse First Boston opinion, numerous events have occurred that significantly adversely affected the price of Sunbeam common stock. When Credit Suisse First Boston was engaged by Coleman, they were not asked to render an updated opinion as of the date of this document and neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has requested that they do so. Moreover, Credit Suisse First Boston has advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM" beginning on page 26.

For its services to Coleman, Credit Suisse First Boston has received fees of about $4 million. See "SPECIAL FACTORS—Financial Advisors' Opinions" beginning on page 42.

Sunbeam's Financial Advisor. Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated acted as Sunbeam's financial advisor in connection with its acquisition of Coleman. On February 27, 1998, when the merger agreement was approved by Sunbeam's board of directors, Morgan Stanley rendered to Sunbeam's board of directors an oral opinion, which was subsequently confirmed in writing, to the effect that, as of that date and based upon and subject to certain matters described in the opinion, the cash and stock consideration payable in the M&F Transaction and under the merger agreement was fair to Sunbeam from a financial point of view. Because Sunbeam did not plan to issue the warrants at the time the merger agreement was signed, Morgan Stanley did not take the warrants into account when evaluating the fairness to Sunbeam of the consideration payable in the M&F Transaction and under the merger agreement.

Since the date of the Morgan Stanley opinion, a number of negative developments have occurred affecting Sunbeam and the price of Sunbeam common stock. When Morgan Stanley was engaged by Sunbeam, they were not asked to render an updated opinion as of the date of this document and neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has requested that they do so. Moreover, Morgan Stanley has advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of the subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM" beginning on page 26.

For its services to Sunbeam in connection with the Coleman acquisition, Morgan Stanley has received fees from Sunbeam totaling about $9.6 million. The amended engagement letter between Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley provides for the payment to Morgan Stanley of an additional transaction fee of $680,000 when the merger is completed, based on the average market price of Sunbeam common stock on the last trading day prior to the date of this document. Sunbeam's obligation to pay this additional transaction fee to Morgan Stanley will not be affected by the fact that Sunbeam is no longer entitled to rely on Morgan Stanley's fairness opinion. See "SPECIAL FACTORS—Financial Advisors' Opinions" beginning on page 42.

Interests of Certain Persons in the Merger. You should be aware that a number of persons, including current directors and executive officers of Sunbeam and former directors and executive officers of Coleman, some of whom have subsequently rejoined Coleman, have interests in the merger that are different from or in addition to yours. See "THE MERGER—Interests of Certain Persons in the Merger" beginning on page 50. These interests include:

- the accelerated vesting, as a result of the M&F Transaction, of options to purchase Coleman common stock held by Coleman employees, officers and directors, including options exercised as a result of such accelerated vesting by two current executive officers of Sunbeam and Coleman, one of whom is a current director of Sunbeam and Coleman and a former director and executive officer of Coleman, as described below,
- the right under the merger agreement of holders of Coleman employee stock options—including one former director of Coleman and three current executive officers of Sunbeam and Coleman, as described below—to have their options to purchase shares of Coleman common stock cashed out in the merger at a price equal to $27.50 per share minus the per share exercise price of the options,
- the right of Coleman's current and former officers, directors, employees and consultants to continued indemnification,
- the right of Coleman's officers, directors, employees and consultants—including two current executive officers of Sunbeam and Coleman and one former executive officer of Coleman, as described below—to receive severance payments as a result of the M&F Transaction, and
- the right of the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary from which Sunbeam acquired a controlling interest in Coleman in the M&F Transaction and former directors and executive officers of Coleman to require the registration under the federal and state securities laws of the shares of Sunbeam common stock held by them and the warrants held by the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary and the shares issuable upon exercise of that warrant.

Immediately after the completion of the M&F Transaction, two current executive officers of Sunbeam and Coleman exercised options which vested as a result of the M&F Transaction. Jerry W. Levin, the then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Coleman and the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, exercised 500,000 Coleman stock options at per share exercise prices ranging from $12.25 to $14.00 and Mr. Levin received net proceeds upon the sale of such shares of about $9.94 million. Bobby G. Jenkins, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam and Executive Vice President of Coleman, exercised 20,000 Coleman stock options at per share exercise prices ranging from $16.125 to $16.434 and Mr. Jenkins received net proceeds upon the sale of such shares of about $288,360.

Ronald O. Perelman, the sole stockholder of MacAndrews & Forbes and a member of the Coleman board at the time the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger agreement were executed, holds 500,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $14.00 per share. Paul E. Shapiro, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, holds 62,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share and 15,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 per share. Karen K. Clark, the current Senior Vice President, Finance of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President, Finance of Coleman, holds 10,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share and 15,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 per share. Steven R. Isko, the current Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman, holds 10,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share, 7,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 per share and 2,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $12.937 per share. Upon completion of the merger, in settlement of their Coleman stock options, Messrs. Perelman, Shapiro and Isko, and Ms. Clark will receive cash payments of $6,750,000, $823,000, $226,009 and $275,005, respectively.

In connection with the change in control resulting from the completion of the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam has paid, or has caused Coleman to pay or recognize as payable, a total of $7,903,765 in severance compensation and related benefits for approximately 117 former Coleman employees. Of that amount, $7,597,936 was in respect of base salary and related benefits, and $305,829 was in respect of extra pension credits. In addition, Coleman paid $454,277 for management incentive bonuses to 37 former Coleman employees. The only principal executive officer of Coleman to receive severance compensation from Coleman as a result of the change in control was Joseph Page, the former Chief Financial Officer of Coleman, who received severance payments totaling $280,000. Bobby G. Jenkins, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam and Executive Vice President of Coleman, received severance payments totaling $18,583 as a result of his resignation from Coleman following the M&F Transaction, and prior to his being rehired by both Sunbeam and Coleman in the capacities mentioned above. Steven R. Isko, the current Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman, received severance payments totaling $185,634 as a result of his resignation from Coleman following the M&F Transaction, and prior to his being rehired by both Sunbeam and Coleman in the capacities mentioned above.

Governmental and Regulatory Approvals. Under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, as amended, Sunbeam and Coleman were required to make filings with the Federal Trade Commission and the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice about the merger and observe a waiting period before completing the merger. These filings were made and the waiting period was terminated in March 1998.

United States Federal Income Tax Considerations

Your receipt of cash, Sunbeam common stock and warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock in exchange for the shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed is expected to be a taxable transaction for United States Federal income tax purposes and may also be a taxable transaction under applicable state, local, foreign and other tax laws. In general, for United States Federal income tax purposes, you will recognize gain or loss equal to the difference between:

- the sum of the cash and the fair market value of the Sunbeam common stock and warrants you receive, and
- your adjusted tax basis in the shares of Coleman common stock you exchange in the merger.

This gain or loss will be capital gain or loss if you hold the shares of Coleman common stock as a capital asset and will be long-term capital gain or loss if you have held the shares for more than twelve months.

However, the tax consequences of the merger are subject to a number of qualifications, discussed below under the caption "UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS" beginning on page 60.

The tax consequences to you of the merger will depend on your own situation. You should consult your own tax advisor for a full understanding of all of these tax consequences.

Litigation Settlement and Warrants

On October 21, 1998, Sunbeam announced that it had entered into a memorandum of understanding to settle class action and derivative lawsuits brought by minority stockholders of Coleman challenging the merger. A stipulation of settlement was executed on August 6, 1999. The Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware held a hearing on September 29, 1999 to consider approving the settlement. The court approved the settlement on November 12, 1999.

Under the terms of the settlement, unless you have demanded your Delaware law appraisal rights, you will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed (assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding Coleman shares). Each warrant will entitle you to purchase one share of Sunbeam common stock at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003. The total number of warrants you receive will be based on the number of shares of Coleman common stock outstanding and the number of shares you own at the time of the merger and will be equal to the product of (A) 4,979,663, less the 497,966 warrants awarded by the court to counsel for the Coleman minority stockholders in the litigation as their fee multiplied by (B) a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of shares of Coleman common stock you hold when the merger is completed (other than any shares with respect to which Delaware law appraisal rights have been demanded) and the denominator of which is the total number of shares of Coleman common stock outstanding and owned by Coleman stockholders other than Sunbeam and its subsidiaries at the time of the merger (approximately 11,759,970 shares, assuming no further exercises of Coleman employee stock options). Sunbeam does not anticipate any further exercises of Coleman employee-stock options. The warrants will be subject to anti-dilution adjustments. No fractional warrants will be issued. Instead, the number of warrants to which you are entitled will be rounded up or down to the closest whole number. Thus, for example, if there are no further exercises of Coleman options and no anti-dilution adjustments, a Coleman stockholder who holds 100 shares of Coleman common stock at the time of the merger and does not demand Delaware law appraisal rights would be entitled to receive 38 warrants, calculated as follows:

total # of warrants available	-	total # of warrants paid to plaintiffs' counsel	X	/	# of shares owned	=	# of warrants to be received total # of shares owned by the Coleman minority stockholders at the time the merger is completed

The result of this equation would then be rounded down from 38.109 to 38, the closest whole number. However, because of the possibility (although unlikely) that Coleman options will be exercised prior to the completion of the merger, you will not be able to determine the precise number of warrants you will be entitled to receive in the merger before December 27, 1999, the date by which you must submit to Coleman a written demand for your appraisal rights under Delaware law if you wish to exercise those rights. See "APPRAISAL RIGHTS" beginning on page 62. However, for a description of the warrants, see "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" beginning on page 60.

Material Contacts Between Coleman and Sunbeam and Its Affiliates

Financial Transactions Between Coleman and Sunbeam. In connection with the M&F Transaction, Coleman repaid substantially all of its outstanding indebtedness with the proceeds of borrowings from Sunbeam. Since then, Coleman has borrowed from, and repaid funds to, Sunbeam. Through April 15, 1999, Coleman's obligations to Sunbeam were evidenced by an unsecured subordinated demand note payable by

Coleman to Sunbeam. This note was pledged by Sunbeam to its lenders as security for Sunbeam's obligations under its bank credit facility.

In connection with the April 15, 1999 amendment to Sunbeam's bank credit facility, the Coleman note was revised to, among other things:

- lower the interest rate,
- make the note payable on April 15, 2000 rather than on demand,
- add customary representations, warranties, covenants and events of default, and
- provide that an event of default under Sunbeam's bank credit facility would constitute an event of default under the Coleman note.

As security for the revised Coleman note, Coleman pledged:

- substantially all of its domestic assets, other than real property,
- 66% of its ownership interests in its direct foreign subsidiaries and in its domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries (but not the assets of these subsidiaries), and
- all of its ownership interests in its other direct domestic subsidiaries (but not the assets of these subsidiaries).

The revised Coleman note had an unpaid principal balance of $303.2 million on September 30, 1999. Sunbeam pledged the revised Coleman note as security for Sunbeam's obligations to its lending banks under its bank credit facility and assigned to these lending banks the security pledged by Coleman for the revised Coleman note. Coleman also gave the lending banks a direct pledge of the assets securing the revised Coleman note to secure the obligations under Sunbeam's bank credit facility, subject to a cap equal to the balance due from time to time on the revised Coleman note. The revision of the Coleman note and the pledge of Coleman's assets were approved on behalf of Coleman by A. Whitman Marchand, Coleman's only disinterested director, acting as a duly authorized independent committee of the Coleman board of directors.

Under Sunbeam's bank credit facility, an event of default will occur if this document is not declared effective by the SEC on or before January 10, 2000, if the merger is not completed within 25 business days after the effectiveness of this document or if Sunbeam has to pay more than $87.5 million in cash (excluding expenses) to complete the merger (including any amounts paid with respect to appraisal rights). An event of default of this kind would also constitute an event of default under the Coleman note, and Sunbeam's lenders would be entitled to foreclose on the Coleman note and the Coleman assets pledged as security for the Coleman note. The Coleman note, by its terms, will not be affected by the merger and will remain outstanding. For more information concerning Sunbeam's bank credit facility, including the aggregate amount of borrowings outstanding thereunder, the amount available for future borrowings and the maturity date, see "SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION" beginning on page 64. See also "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Financial Transactions Between Coleman and Sunbeam" beginning on page 68.

M&F Transaction. In the M&F Transaction, which was completed on March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired indirectly about 81% of the then outstanding Coleman common stock (reduced to about 79% as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options immediately following the M&F Transaction). As a result of a purchase by Sunbeam of shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock in July 1999, Sunbeam now has the right to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock.

In the M&F Transaction, a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes received 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam common stock, which represent about 14% of the currently outstanding Sunbeam common stock, and about $160 million in cash. In addition, in connection with the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam assumed about $1,016 million in debt of Coleman and its parent corporations, including $497 million of indebtedness of Coleman.

Immediately following the M&F Transaction, all the directors of Coleman resigned, the number of directors constituting the Coleman board of directors was fixed at five, and five designees of Sunbeam were elected as directors of Coleman. In addition, Sunbeam designees were appointed to senior management positions at Coleman. Subsequently, as a result of changes in Sunbeam's management and board of directors, in June 1998, Jerry W. Levin, the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was reelected to the Coleman board. In addition, Paul E. Shapiro, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board. The other members of the Coleman board resigned or were removed by Sunbeam. In April 1999, the size of the Coleman board was fixed at three members and A. Whitman Marchand, who is not otherwise affiliated with either Sunbeam or Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board. In July 1999, the size of the Coleman board was fixed at four and John H. Klein, an outside director of Sunbeam, was elected to the Coleman board. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Appointments of Former Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes Officers to Sunbeam's Management and Board," "—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction" and "—Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes" beginning on pages 71, 71 and 72, respectively.

Registration Rights Agreement. The shares of Sunbeam common stock issued to a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes in the M&F Transaction were not registered under federal or state securities laws. Accordingly, in connection with the issuance, Sunbeam entered into a registration rights agreement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary. Under the registration rights agreement, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary can require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the shares of Sunbeam common stock it received in the M&F Transaction. The registration rights agreement was amended in August 1998 to provide that the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary can also require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the warrant; and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant, issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in settlement of legal claims related to the M&F Transaction.

Directors, officers and other affiliates of Coleman who receive shares of Sunbeam common stock in the merger can also require Sunbeam to register those shares under federal and applicable state securities laws. To exercise this right, these individuals must agree to be bound by the terms of the registration rights agreement.

Appointments of Former Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes Officers to Sunbeam's Management and Board. In June 1998, following the removal of Sunbeam's former Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer, Sunbeam announced that Jerry W. Levin of MacAndrews & Forbes had been elected as Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Levin and other Sunbeam executives that were affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes later signed three-year employment agreements with Sunbeam. The other executives include Paul E. Shapiro, Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam, and Bobby G. Jenkins, Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam. Mr. Levin and Howard Gittis of MacAndrews & Forbes also were elected to the Sunbeam board. For a description of the terms of the employment agreements entered into by Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins, see "MANAGEMENT—Executive Compensation—Employment Agreement with Mr. Levin"; "Employment Agreements with Executives Shapiro, Jenkins and Clark" beginning on pages 142 and 143, respectively. For a further discussion of the events leading up to the appointment of Mr. Levin as Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer and the appointment of Messrs. Levin and Gittis to the Sunbeam board, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board" beginning on page 30.

Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction. On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that, following investigation and negotiation by a special committee of the Sunbeam board consisting of four directors not affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes, Sunbeam had entered into a settlement agreement with a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary. The settlement:

- released Sunbeam from threatened claims of MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates arising from the M&F Transaction,
- enabled Sunbeam to retain the services of executive personnel affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes who had been managing Sunbeam since mid-June of 1998, including Jerry W. Levin, Sunbeam's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Paul E. Shapiro, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer, and Bobby G. Jenkins, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, and

- provided for the continuing management assistance and other support by MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates to Sunbeam described in "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes" beginning on page 72.

As part of the settlement, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary received from Sunbeam a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. For a description of the settlement agreement and the terms of the warrant issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction" beginning on page 32.

Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes. Under Sunbeam's August 1998 settlement agreement with a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, in addition to the services of MacAndrews & Forbes' former executive personnel who have been managing Sunbeam since mid-June 1998, MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide management assistance and other support to Sunbeam at its request in a wide variety of areas. Sunbeam does not pay MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates for the services of their employees, but does reimburse them for out-of-pocket expenses. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes" beginning on page 72.

Acquisition of Coleman Preferred Stock. On July 12, 1999, one of Sunbeam's wholly owned subsidiaries acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock for an aggregate purchase price of approximately $31 million. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock already indirectly owned by Sunbeam, enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock as of July 12, 1999. This class of preferred stock was created by Coleman and acquired by Sunbeam in order to enable Sunbeam and Coleman to file consolidated federal income tax returns and, in certain jurisdictions, consolidated state income tax returns, prior to the completion of the merger. In connection with the acquisition of these shares, Sunbeam entered into a tax sharing agreement with Coleman pursuant to which Coleman will pay to Sunbeam amounts equal to the federal and state income taxes that would have been payable by Coleman had Coleman not been included in the consolidated income tax return of Sunbeam. The terms of the voting preferred stock, the per share issue price and the terms of the tax sharing agreement were approved on Coleman's behalf by Coleman's then sole independent director. The net proceeds from the sale of the preferred stock to Sunbeam were used by Coleman to make a partial repayment on Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam. For further information regarding the terms of the preferred stock issued to Sunbeam's subsidiary, see "DESCRIPTION OF COLEMAN CAPITAL STOCK—Coleman Preferred Stock beginning on page 154."

SUMMARY HISTORICAL AND PRO FORMA FINANCIAL INFORMATION

The following summary historical financial information is derived from Sunbeam's audited consolidated financial statements and unaudited condensed consolidated financial statements. The following summary pro forma financial information is derived from Sunbeam's unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements beginning on page 72. The summary unaudited pro forma financial information gives effect to the following "Pro Forma Transactions":

- the corporate acquisitions Sunbeam made in 1998, excluding the acquisition of First Alert, Inc., the effect of which is not significant;
- the proposed acquisition by Sunbeam of the Coleman common stock held by the Coleman minority stockholders upon completion of the merger for cash, shares of Sunbeam common stock and warrants;
- the initial borrowing of approximately $1.325 million under Sunbeam's bank credit facility;
- the original offering of an aggregate principal amount at maturity of $2,014 million of Sunbeam's Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures due 2018 on March 25, 1998, for net proceeds of about $730 million; and

- the use of most of the net proceeds of the original bank borrowing and the original offering of the debentures to acquire Coleman and Signature Brands and to refinance indebtedness.

The summary unaudited pro forma financial information is not necessarily indicative of what Sunbeam's results would have been if the Pro Forma Transactions actually had occurred as of the dates indicated or of what Sunbeam's future operating results will be.

This summary historical and pro forma financial information should be read in conjunction with Sunbeam's audited consolidated financial statements beginning on page F-1, "MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS" beginning on page 86 and "UNAUDITED PRO FORMA CONDENSED CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS" beginning on page 72.

While reviewing the summary historical and pro forma financial information, please note the following:

- Sunbeam accounted for the March 30, 1998 acquisition of a controlling interest in Coleman and the April 6, 1998 acquisitions of First Alert and Signature Brands under the purchase method of accounting. Accordingly, Sunbeam's consolidated financial statements include the financial position and results of operations of each of the acquired companies from the respective dates of acquisition.
- For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998, Sunbeam took an extraordinary charge of $122.4 million related to the early extinguishments of debt and took other charges of:
 - $70.0 million related to the issuance of warrants to a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary;
 - $62.5 million related to the write-off of goodwill;
 - $39.4 million related to fixed asset impairments;
 - $31 million related to compensation expense for the new employment agreements with Sunbeam's former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other former senior officers; and
 - $95.8 million related to write-downs of inventory.

See Notes 2, 3 and 11 to Sunbeam's audited consolidated financial statements.

- For the fiscal year ended December 28, 1997, Sunbeam reversed $28.0 million of pre-tax liabilities no longer required and $13.3 million of tax liabilities no longer required.
- For the fiscal year ended December 29, 1996, Sunbeam took restructuring, asset impairment and other charges of $239.2 million before taxes. See Notes 12 and 13 to Sunbeam's audited consolidated financial statements.
- The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated balance sheet as of September 30, 1999 gives pro forma effect to the proposed acquisition of the shares of Coleman common stock held by the Coleman minority stockholders as if it had occurred on September 30, 1999. The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated statement of operations for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998 and the nine months ended September 30, 1999 give effect to the Pro Forma Transactions, as if they had occurred on December 29, 1997, the beginning of Sunbeam's 1998 fiscal year. Also, pro forma net losses are from continuing operations and do not include extraordinary items.
- In computing the ratio of earnings to fixed charges:
 - earnings represent income (loss) from continuing operations before income taxes and fixed charges (exclusive of interest capitalized); and
 - fixed charges consist of interest expense, capitalized interest and the estimated interest portion of rental expense.

For the fiscal years ended December 29, 1996 and December 31, 1998, historical earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $262.2 million and $797.1 million, respectively. For the nine months ended September 30, 1998 and 1999, historical earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $476.7 million and $130.1 million, respectively. For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998 and for the nine months ended September 30, 1999, on a pro forma basis, earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $834.9 million and $139.1 million, respectively.

- At September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had goodwill and other intangible assets of $1,809.9 million.

For a discussion of matters relating to Coleman's continued listing on the NYSE, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING COLEMAN" beginning on page 35. Following the completion of the merger, the Coleman common stock will be delisted from all of the stock exchanges on which it is listed and deregistered under the Exchange Act.

Sunbeam Dividend Policy. Through the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam's practice had been to pay a dividend at a quarterly rate of $.01 per share. Sunbeam discontinued paying dividends after the first quarter of 1998 and has no present intention to pay any dividends for the foreseeable future. Moreover, Sunbeam's bank credit facility, as amended, prohibits Sunbeam from paying cash dividends.

Coleman Dividend Policy. Coleman has not declared a cash dividend on its common stock since its initial public offering in February 1992. Under the merger agreement, Coleman is prohibited from paying any cash dividends prior to the completion of the merger.

RISK FACTORS

In reviewing the information contained in this document and in deciding whether to accept the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give you, or to dissent from the merger and have the fair value of your shares appraised by a court and paid to you in cash, you should consider the following:

The number of Sunbeam shares and warrants you receive for each Coleman share has not been and will not be adjusted

Unless you pursue your appraisal rights, you will receive $6.44 in cash, 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock and 0.381 of a Sunbeam warrant (assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding Coleman shares), for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed. The number of Sunbeam shares and warrants you will receive has not been adjusted to reflect the decrease in the market price of Sunbeam common stock and will not be adjusted to reflect any future changes in the market price of either Sunbeam common stock or Coleman common stock. Since February 27, 1998, the market price of Sunbeam common stock reached a high of $53 on March 4, 1998 and a low of $4.125 on November 5 and 8, 1999. It was $4.75 on December 3, 1999, the last trading day prior to the date of this document, and may increase or decrease between the date of this document and the date on which the merger is completed. Variations in the price of Sunbeam common stock may be the result of changes in the business, operations or prospects of Sunbeam or Coleman, general market and economic conditions and other factors. See "—Negative developments since March 1998 have caused Sunbeam's common stock price to drop significantly, and the risks described in the "RISK FACTORS" section of this document may cause further declines in the price of Sunbeam common stock." Stockholders of Coleman are urged to obtain current market quotations for Sunbeam common stock and Coleman common stock. See "SUMMARY—Market Prices and Dividends."

Coleman's financial advisor has advised Coleman that its opinion as to the fairness of the consideration to be paid to you under the February 1998 merger agreement upon completion of the merger should no longer be relied upon and no other financial advisor has been asked to provide a fairness opinion. Therefore, you do not have the benefit of an independent evaluation of the fairness of the merger to you from a financial point of view in deciding whether to accept the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give you or pursue your Delaware law appraisal rights

As a result of the adverse developments affecting Sunbeam described in the section of this document captioned "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM" beginning on page 26, Coleman's financial advisor, Credit Suisse First Boston, has advised Coleman that its February 1998 opinion as to the fairness of the consideration payable to you under the merger agreement should no longer be relied upon. Therefore, you should no longer rely on the Credit Suisse First Boston opinion or on the February 1998 determination of the then Coleman board that the consideration payable under the merger agreement was fair to you from a financial point of view, since that determination was based, at least in part, on the Credit Suisse First Boston opinion. As a result, you do not have the benefit of an independent evaluation of the fairness of the merger to you from a financial point of view in deciding whether to accept the cash, stock and warrants Sunbeam proposes to give you or pursue your Delaware law appraisal rights.

Sunbeam is highly leveraged which impairs its ability to obtain financing and limits cash flow available for Sunbeam's operations and may limit its competitiveness in the market place

Sunbeam is highly leveraged, with indebtedness that is very large when compared to its stockholders' equity. Much of its indebtedness was incurred to finance three corporate acquisitions in 1998. At September 30, 1999, Sunbeam's consolidated indebtedness was approximately $2,322.7 million and its stockholders' equity was approximately $94.7 million, including approximately $1,809.9 million of goodwill and other intangible assets. If required, Sunbeam may incur additional indebtedness under the bank credit facility or, subject to restrictions in the bank credit facility, through other borrowings. The indenture governing Sunbeam's zero coupon convertible senior subordinated debentures does not limit Sunbeam's ability to incur additional indebtedness. You should carefully read Sunbeam's audited consolidated financial statements beginning on page F-1.

Sunbeam's high leverage has important consequences. For example:

- Sunbeam's ability to obtain additional financing for working capital, capital expenditures, acquisitions or general corporate purposes is and may continue to be impaired,
- all or a substantial portion of Sunbeam's cash flow from operations must be dedicated to the payment of principal and interest on Sunbeam's indebtedness; therefore cash available for its operations and other purposes will be limited,
- Sunbeam may be substantially more leveraged than some of its competitors, which may place it at a competitive disadvantage,
- Sunbeam may be less able to adjust rapidly to changing market conditions, and
- Sunbeam's results of operations could be adversely affected, particularly in the event of a downturn in general economic conditions or Sunbeam's business.

Sunbeam's bank credit facility contains covenants which Sunbeam may not be able to satisfy and default provisions it may not be able to avoid, and, if Sunbeam cannot, the banks could demand immediate repayment of Sunbeam's bank debt

As of September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had incurred about $1,500 million in borrowings and had availability to borrow about $200 million under the bank credit facility. The bank credit facility contains covenants which require Sunbeam to meet financial tests and ratios relating to Sunbeam's future performance which it may not be able to satisfy. If Sunbeam cannot satisfy these tests and ratios it would be in default. The bank credit facility also provides that the occurrence of any of the following events, which Sunbeam may not be able to avoid, would be an event of default:

- if Sunbeam fails to have the SEC declare this document effective by January 10, 2000,
- if Sunbeam fails to complete the merger within 25 business days after this document is declared effective by the SEC, or
- if Sunbeam has to pay more than $87.5 million in cash to complete the merger, including any payments on account of the exercise of any appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses.

An event of default would give the banks the right to demand immediate repayment—a demand Sunbeam might not be able to meet.

Sunbeam's bank debt could become due on April 10, 2000, if Sunbeam does not get another waiver from the banks or refinance its bank debt by then, and there can be no assurance that Sunbeam would be able to repay the bank debt on that date

In 1998, Sunbeam was in violation of some of the covenants of the bank credit facility, but the banks waived these violations first until December 31, 1998, then until April 10, 1999, then until April 15, 1999 and now until April 10, 2000. However, if Sunbeam does not get another waiver or refinance the bank debt by April 10, 2000, the banks would have the right to demand immediate repayment—a demand which Sunbeam might not be able to meet.

Sunbeam may not be able to service its large debt burden, which may force it to restructure or refinance its debt

To meet its debt service requirements, Sunbeam must be able to successfully implement its business strategy and integrate into its operations the three companies Sunbeam acquired in 1998. In addition, Sunbeam's future financial and operating performance will affect its ability to repay or to refinance its indebtedness. Sunbeam's future financial and operating performance is subject to prevailing economic and competitive conditions and to financial, business and other factors which may be beyond Sunbeam's control.

Sunbeam cannot assure you that its operating cash flow and capital resources will be sufficient to meet its debt service requirements. For the nine months ended September 30, 1999 and the year ended December 31, 1998 Sunbeam's earnings were insufficient to cover its fixed charges by approximately $130.1 million and $797.1 million, respectively. If Sunbeam does not have enough cash flow and capital resources to meet its debt service obligations, Sunbeam may be forced to reduce or delay capital expenditures, sell assets, or seek to obtain additional equity capital. Sunbeam also might be forced to refinance or restructure its debt, including its zero coupon convertible subordinated debentures. Although Sunbeam does not have any firm plans or arrangements to restructure its debt, a restructuring, if Sunbeam decided to pursue one, could involve one or more exchange offers, tender offers or consent solicitations involving the debentures.

Sunbeam's outside auditors determined that Sunbeam's 1997 internal controls were inadequate and Sunbeam cannot assure you that the corrective measures it has adopted or will adopt to address these inadequacies will be effective

In October 1998, Sunbeam's auditors at the time, Arthur Andersen LLP, told Sunbeam that the design and effectiveness of its internal controls were inadequate to detect material misstatements in the preparation of Sunbeam's 1997 annual and quarterly financial statements. As described further in "CHANGES IN AND DISAGREEMENTS WITH ACCOUNTANTS ON ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE" beginning on page 118, Sunbeam has restated its financial results for a six-quarter period from the fourth quarter of 1996 through the first quarter of 1998. Sunbeam cannot assure you that any interim or final corrective measures Sunbeam has adopted or will adopt to address the inadequacies in its internal controls will be effective.

Sunbeam had significant losses and its operations consumed significant amounts of cash in the first nine months of 1999 and in fiscal year 1998 and Sunbeam cannot assure you that it will be able to generate profits or positive cash flow from operations in the future

For the nine months ended September 30, 1999 and the year ended December 31, 1998, Sunbeam had consolidated net losses of approximately $155.0 million and $897.9 million, respectively, and net cash used in operations of $73.2 million and $190.4 million, respectively. Sunbeam cannot assure you that it will be able to generate profits or positive cash flow from operations in the future. See "MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS" beginning on page 86 for a further discussion.

Major lawsuits have been brought against Sunbeam, including lawsuits under federal and state securities laws, and the SEC is conducting a formal investigation of Sunbeam; Sunbeam cannot predict the outcome of these lawsuits or the SEC investigation, but if Sunbeam were to lose the lawsuits, the resulting judgments would likely have a negative effect on its financial position, results of operations and cash flow

Litigation. Beginning in April 1998 many lawsuits alleging claims arising under Delaware law, Texas law and federal and state securities laws have been filed against Sunbeam and some of its former directors and officers, some of its current directors and its former auditor in various federal and state courts. Many of these lawsuits relate to Sunbeam's financial performance from the second quarter of 1997 through the second quarter of 1998. Many plaintiffs are claiming that Sunbeam's prior management misrepresented and omitted material information in its public filings and in their statements concerning its historical and expected future results of operations for the purpose of artificially inflating the market price of Sunbeam common stock. Currently Sunbeam cannot predict the outcome of these lawsuits, evaluate the likelihood of Sunbeam's success in any particular case, or evaluate the range of potential loss. If Sunbeam were to lose these lawsuits, judgments would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

Sunbeam's insurers are attempting to have the directors' and officers' liability policies it has with them voided or canceled or have advised Sunbeam that they do not intend to provide coverage with respect to these lawsuits. Failure by Sunbeam to obtain insurance recoveries from its liability insurers following an adverse judgment against Sunbeam or any persons it is obligated to indemnify in any of the lawsuits discussed above could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flow.

SEC Investigation. In July 1998, the SEC commenced a formal investigation of Sunbeam after informing Sunbeam in the previous month of an informal investigation. Although Sunbeam believes that it has cooperated with the SEC and furnished the SEC with documents they requested, Sunbeam has, however, declined to provide the SEC with material that Sunbeam believes is subject to the attorney-client privilege and the work product immunity. Sunbeam cannot predict how long this investigation will last or its outcome. In addition, Sunbeam cannot at this time determine what actions, if any, the SEC might take against it or what effect any action might have on Sunbeam. For further information regarding the SEC investigation of Sunbeam, please see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—SEC Investigation" beginning on page 32.

Product-Related Liabilities. As a consumer goods manufacturer and distributor, Sunbeam faces the constant risks of product liability and related lawsuits involving claims for substantial money damages, product recall actions and higher than anticipated rates of warranty returns or other returns of goods. These claims could result in liabilities that could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position and results of operations. Some of the product lines Sunbeam acquired in the 1998 acquisitions have increased its exposure to product liability and related claims.

See "BUSINESS OF SUNBEAM—Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities" beginning on page 126 for more information about lawsuits Sunbeam is involved in, the SEC investigation and other contingent liabilities.

Sunbeam's 1998 acquisitions have increased the size of the operations Sunbeam has to manage and Sunbeam's failure to manage its operations effectively would likely cause Sunbeam to have poor operating results

The 1998 acquisitions of Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands have resulted in a substantial increase in the size of Sunbeam's operations. As a result, Sunbeam must effectively use its employees and management, operational, and financial resources to manage its expanded operations. A failure on Sunbeam's part to successfully integrate and effectively manage its expanded operations would likely cause Sunbeam to have poor operating results.

Sunbeam's international operations expose Sunbeam to uncertainties and risks from abroad which could negatively affect its operations and sales

Sunbeam currently has sales in countries where economic growth has slowed, primarily Japan and Korea; or where economies have been unstable or hyperinflationary in recent years, primarily Mexico and Venezuela. The economies of other foreign countries important to Sunbeam's operations, including other countries in Latin America and Asia, could also suffer slower economic growth or instability in the future.

The following are among the risks that could negatively affect Sunbeam's operations and sales in foreign markets:

- new restrictions on access to markets,
- currency devaluation,
- new tariffs,
- adverse changes in monetary and/or tax policies,
- inflation, and
- governmental instability.

Should any of these risks occur, it could impair Sunbeam's ability to export its products and result in a loss of sales from its international operations.

The nature of Sunbeam's businesses requires Sunbeam to successfully develop new and innovative products on a consistent basis in order to regain profitability and increase revenues and Sunbeam may not be able to do so

Sunbeam must develop new and innovative products to regain profitability and increase revenues. In the past Sunbeam has experienced difficulties in developing and introducing quality new products on a timely basis. Sunbeam may not be able to meet its schedules for future product development. Failure to develop and manufacture successful new products could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's future financial performance.

Sunbeam's businesses are very sensitive to the strength of the U.S. retail market and any weakness in this market could adversely affect Sunbeam's financial results

The strength of the retail economy in the United States has a significant impact on Sunbeam's performance. Weakness in consumer confidence and poor financial performance by retail outlets, including the financial weakness or bankruptcy of retail outlets, especially mass merchants, may adversely impact Sunbeam's future financial results.

Sunbeam operates in a highly competitive market and Sunbeam's inability to compete effectively could cause it to lose market share and could adversely affect its financial results

Sunbeam operates in a highly competitive environment. Sunbeam has numerous domestic and foreign competitors, and many of them are financially strong and capable of competing effectively with Sunbeam. Competitors may take actions to match Sunbeam's new product introductions and other initiatives. Some competitors may be willing to reduce prices and accept lower profit margins to compete with Sunbeam. As a result of this competition, Sunbeam could lose market share and sales and suffer losses, which could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's future financial performance.

Sunbeam's future success will significantly depend upon its ability to remain competitive in the areas of price, quality, marketing, product development, manufacturing, distribution, order processing and customer service. Sunbeam cannot assure you that it will be able to compete effectively in all these areas in the future.

Sunbeam's sales are highly dependent on purchases from several large customers and any significant decline in these purchases or pressure from these customers to reduce prices could have a negative effect on Sunbeam's future financial performance; Sunbeam has no long-term supply contracts with any of its customers

Due to the consolidation of the U.S. retail industry, Sunbeam's customer base has become relatively concentrated. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Sunbeam's largest single customer, accounted for 18% of Sunbeam's net sales in 1998, and its five largest customers combined accounted for 38% of its 1998 net sales.

Sunbeam has no long-term supply contracts with any of its customers. As a result, Sunbeam must receive a continuous flow of new orders from its large, high-volume retailing customers. Sunbeam has responded to the challenges of its markets by pursuing strategic relationships with large, high-volume merchandisers. However, Sunbeam cannot assure you that it can continue to successfully meet the needs of Sunbeam's customers. In addition, failure to obtain anticipated orders or delays or cancellations of orders or significant pressure to reduce prices from key customers could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's future financial performance.

Raw materials and components are critical inputs for Sunbeam's products and price hikes or problems with their supply could adversely affect Sunbeam

Raw materials and components constitute a significant portion of the cost of Sunbeam's goods. Factors which are largely beyond Sunbeam's control, such as movements in commodity prices for the specific materials Sunbeam requires, may affect the future cost of such raw materials and components. In addition, any inability of Sunbeam's suppliers to timely deliver raw materials and components or any unanticipated change in Sunbeam's suppliers could be disruptive and costly to Sunbeam.

A significant failure by Sunbeam to contain raw material or component costs could have a material adverse effect on its future financial performance. In addition, delays or cancellations by suppliers could adversely affect results.

Sunbeam's operations are dependent upon third-party suppliers and service providers whose failure to perform adequately could disrupt Sunbeam's business operations

Sunbeam currently manufactures many of its products, but it sources many of its parts and products from third parties. Sunbeam's ability to select reliable vendors who provide timely deliveries of quality parts and products will impact its success in meeting customer demand for timely delivery of quality products. Any inability of Sunbeam's suppliers to timely deliver quality parts and products or any unanticipated change in suppliers or pricing of products could be disruptive and costly to Sunbeam.

Sunbeam has entered into various arrangements with third parties for the provision of back-office administrative services that it used to perform internally. Sunbeam now outsources accounts payable, collection of accounts receivable, customer service and some necessary computer systems servicing, among other things. If any of these third-party service providers failed to perform adequately, Sunbeam's normal business operations could be disrupted. Among other things, this could hurt Sunbeam's sales, collections, customer service, cash flow and profitability.

Sunbeam is subject to several production-related risks which could jeopardize its ability to realize anticipated sales and profits

To realize sales and operating profits at anticipated levels, Sunbeam must manufacture, source and deliver in a timely manner products of high quality. Among others, the following factors can have a negative effect on Sunbeam's ability to do these things:

- labor difficulties,
- scheduling and transportation difficulties,
- management dislocation,
- substandard product quality, which can result in higher warranty, product liability and product recall costs,
- delays in development of quality new products,
- changes in laws and regulations, including changes in tax rates, accounting standards, environmental laws and occupational health and safety laws, and
- changes in the availability and costs of labor.

The effects of Sunbeam's prior management's outsourcing of critical operating tasks and sales policies may continue to cause Sunbeam substantial difficulty

Sunbeam's prior management substantially reduced the number of its employees and hired third parties to perform many of its critical operating tasks, including handling of accounts payable, computer support, customer service and collection of accounts receivable. Sunbeam is currently evaluating the effectiveness of outsourcing these activities and are hiring personnel to perform some of these tasks in-house once again. Sunbeam may experience disruption in critical services and other difficulties while it implements necessary staff increases and changes in prior management's outsourcing policy.

Sunbeam's prior management increased sales of products in some prior periods by providing retailers with substantial price discounts or attractive payment terms to induce them to purchase more products than they needed at the time. Sunbeam believes this caused many of its customers to build up inventory in its products which reduced Sunbeam's sales and profitability through 1998. Although Sunbeam believes that the excess inventory maintained by retailers has been eliminated, Sunbeam may not have correctly evaluated the amount of or the impact of such inventory practices, which may continue to negatively impact its sales and profitability.

Weather conditions can hurt sales of some of Sunbeam's products

Weather conditions may negatively impact sales of some of Sunbeam's products. For instance, Sunbeam may not sell as many portable generators as anticipated if there are fewer natural disasters such as hurricanes and ice storms; mild winter weather may negatively impact sales of electric blankets, some health products and smoke detectors; and the late arrival of summer weather may negatively impact sales of outdoor camping equipment and grills.

Sunbeam remains vulnerable to year 2000 compliance problems in its systems and those of its suppliers and customers which could potentially disrupt Sunbeam's operations and may require greater than anticipated remedial expenses

Sunbeam is preparing for the impact of the Year 2000 on its operations. Year 2000 issues could include potential problems in Sunbeam's information technology and other systems that it use in its operations. Year 2000 system failures could affect routine but critical operations such as:

- forecasting,
- purchasing,
- production,
- order processing,
- inventory control,
- shipping, and
- billing and collections.

In addition, system failures could affect security, payroll operations and employee safety. Third parties who fail to adequately address their own Year 2000 issues could also expose Sunbeam to potential risks.

Systems and applications that Sunbeam had identified as not Year 2000 ready and which are critical to its operations include:

- financial software systems, which process:
 - order entry,
 - purchasing,
 - production management,
 - general ledger,
 - accounts receivable,
 - accounts payable functions, and
 - payroll applications, and
- critical applications in Sunbeam's manufacturing and distribution facilities, such as warehouse management applications.

Sunbeam has largely implemented the corrective work described above and expects to complete final testing and implementation of such systems in the fourth quarter of 1999.

Sunbeam's failure to timely complete its Year 2000 compliance work could have a material adverse impact on Sunbeam. In addition, the failure of its third-party suppliers and customers to become Year 2000 compliant could have a material adverse impact on Sunbeam.

At this time, Sunbeam believes that the most likely "worst-case" scenario relating to Year 2000 involves potential disruptions in areas in which its operations must rely on third parties, such as suppliers, whose systems may not work properly after January 1, 2000. While these system failures could significantly affect some of Sunbeam's important operations, currently it cannot estimate either the likelihood or the potential cost of such failures. If Sunbeam does not develop appropriate contingency plans before January 1, 2000, the impact on its operations could be material.

Sunbeam currently estimates that the total cost of addressing and remedying Year 2000 issues and enhancing its operating systems is about $64 million. Through the first nine months of 1999, including costs incurred in 1998, Sunbeam spent about $60 million to address Year 2000 issues, with approximately $41 million of these expenditures occurring in the first nine months of 1999. As Sunbeam completes its assessment of the Year 2000 issues, it may determine that the actual expenditures it must incur may be materially higher than its current estimates. The bank credit facility does not permit Sunbeam to spend more than $50 million on Year 2000 testing and remediation during 1999.

See "MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS—Year 2000 Readiness Disclosure" beginning on page 113 for more details of its Year 2000 assessment and compliance efforts.

Sunbeam's debt covenants currently do not allow Sunbeam to pay cash dividends on Sunbeam common stock

The bank credit facility prohibits Sunbeam from paying cash dividends on Sunbeam common stock. Accordingly, Sunbeam cannot assure you that Sunbeam will be able to pay dividends on Sunbeam common stock. In any event, Sunbeam currently does not intend to pay dividends on Sunbeam common stock. Sunbeam discontinued paying dividends beginning in the second quarter of 1998. See the "SUMMARY—Comparative Per Share Data" section beginning on page 15 for information concerning the history of Sunbeam's dividend payments.

Negative developments since March 1998 have caused Sunbeam's common stock price to drop significantly, and the risks described in the "RISK FACTORS" section of this document may cause further declines in the price of Sunbeam common stock

The price of Sunbeam common stock has dropped significantly since March 1998. Sunbeam believes this was the result of many of the negative developments described in the "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM" section beginning on page 26. On March 18, 1998, the last trading day prior to former management's announcement of lower than expected net sales for the first quarter of 1998, the last reported sale price of Sunbeam common stock was $50.625 per share. On December 3, 1999, the last reported sale price of Sunbeam common stock was $4.750 per share. Sunbeam cannot assure you that the market price of Sunbeam common stock will not experience further declines as a result of the risks described in this "RISK FACTORS" section or otherwise. See the "SUMMARY—Market Prices and Dividends" section beginning on page 16 for details of Sunbeam common stock's recent trading prices.

Because many members of Sunbeam's current management and board of directors recently joined Sunbeam and do not have a long history of managing Sunbeam, there can be no assurance that Sunbeam's current management and board of directors will be able to successfully manage Sunbeam

Sunbeam's board of directors replaced several members of Sunbeam's management in June of 1998, including Albert J. Dunlap, Sunbeam's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. Since that time, six new directors have been appointed or elected to the Sunbeam board. Although Sunbeam's current management has significant experience in the consumer products industry, including working at Coleman, most of Sunbeam's current management and many members of its board of directors had no direct exposure to Sunbeam's operations prior to June 1998. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that Sunbeam's current management and board of directors will be able to successfully manage Sunbeam.

Sunbeam relies on its key personnel and the loss of one or more of those personnel could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's business, financial condition and results of operations.

Sunbeam's operations and prospects depend in large part on the performance of its senior management team. There can be no assurance that Sunbeam would be able to find qualified replacements for any of these individuals if their services were no longer available. The loss of the services of one or more members of Sunbeam's senior management team could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's business, financial condition and results of operations. For further information regarding Sunbeam's senior management team, see the discussion below under the caption "MANAGEMENT" beginning on page 133.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM

The 1998 Acquisitions

On March 2, 1998, in addition to announcing its agreement to acquire Coleman, Sunbeam announced that it had entered into separate agreements to acquire Signature Brands and First Alert, companies not affiliated with Coleman or MacAndrews & Forbes.

In the M&F Transaction, which was completed on March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock from Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes. This represented MacAndrews & Forbes' entire interest in Coleman. In exchange, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary received about 14% of the currently outstanding shares of Sunbeam common stock and about $160 million in cash. Sunbeam also assumed about $1,016 million of debt, including $497 million of indebtedness of Coleman. Immediately after the M&F Transaction, as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options, Sunbeam's ownership of Coleman decreased to about 79% of the outstanding shares of Coleman common stock.

At the same time Sunbeam agreed to acquire the Coleman shares from the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, Sunbeam also agreed to acquire the remaining shares of Coleman common stock in the merger and the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary voted its shares to approve the merger. Under the February 1998 merger agreement, you will receive $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed. In addition, unless you exercise and perfect your Delaware law appraisal rights, you will receive warrants each entitling you to purchase one Sunbeam share at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003, under a court-approved settlement of litigation relating to the merger. Under the terms of the settlement, you will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed, assuming the number of outstanding shares of Coleman common stock does not increase prior to the completion of the merger as a result of further exercises of Coleman employee stock options. In the aggregate, the Coleman minority stockholders will receive about 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock, about $87 million in cash, including cash outs of Coleman's remaining employee stock options, and warrants to purchase about 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock (less the warrants awarded by the court to plaintiffs' counsel as their fee), assuming no Coleman stockholders exercise their Delaware law appraisal rights. See "—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction" for information regarding the settlement of legal claims of a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes relating to the M&F Transaction. See "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" for information regarding the settlement of legal claims of Coleman stockholders relating to the merger.

On April 3, 1998, Sunbeam acquired more than 90% of the stock of each of Signature Brands and First Alert in cash tender offers. On April 6, 1998, Sunbeam acquired the remaining shares of each of Signature Brands and First Alert in merger transactions. Signature Brands is a leading manufacturer of a comprehensive line of consumer and professional products, including coffee makers marketed under the Mr. Coffee® brand name and consumer health products marketed under the Health-o-Meter®, Counselor® and Borg® brand names. Signature Brands had revenues of about $279 million in 1997. First Alert is the worldwide leader in residential fire safety equipment, including smoke and carbon monoxide detectors marketed under the First Alert® brand name. First Alert had revenues of about $187 million in 1997. Sunbeam paid about $255 million in cash, including the paying down of debt, to acquire Signature Brands. Sunbeam paid about $133 million in cash and assumed about $49 million in debt—a total consideration of about $182 million—to acquire First Alert.

On July 12, 1999, one of Sunbeam's wholly owned subsidiaries acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock for an aggregate purchase price of approximately $31 million. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock already indirectly owned by Sunbeam, enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock. Coleman created these shares and Sunbeam acquired them in order to enable Sunbeam and Coleman to file consolidated federal income tax returns and, in certain jurisdictions, consolidated state income tax returns, prior to the completion of the merger. In connection with the acquisition of these shares, Sunbeam entered into a tax sharing agreement with Coleman pursuant to which Coleman will pay to Sunbeam amounts equal to the federal and state income taxes that would have been payable by Coleman had Coleman not been included in the consolidated income tax return of Sunbeam. The terms of the voting preferred stock, the per share issue price and the terms of the tax sharing agreement were approved on Coleman's behalf by Coleman's then sole independent director. The net proceeds from the sale of the preferred stock to Sunbeam were used by Coleman to make a partial repayment on Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam.

On November 9, 1999, Sunbeam announced its intention to divest Coleman's Eastpak business, as well as certain non-essential assets. Sunbeam anticipates that these asset sales will produce net proceeds of approximately $200 million, which will be used primarily to pay down its bank debt.

Issuance of Debentures and Bank Credit Facility

In order to finance the 1998 acquisitions and to refinance substantially all of the indebtedness of Sunbeam, Coleman and its parent corporations, CLN Holdings and Coleman Worldwide, First Alert and Signature Brands, Sunbeam completed an offering of an aggregate principal amount at maturity of $2,014 million of its Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures Due 2018 on March 25, 1998, for net proceeds of about $730 million, and borrowed about $1,325 million under a new bank credit facility.

The debentures are due March 25, 2018, are subject to earlier repurchase at the option of the holders on specified dates beginning in 2003 and are convertible into up to 13,242,050 shares of Sunbeam common stock, subject to adjustment in certain events.

The bank credit facility, as amended, allows Sunbeam to borrow up to $1,700 million under:

- a $400 million revolving credit facility maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $52.5 million may be used only to complete the merger,
- up to $800 million in term loans maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $35 million may be used only to complete the merger, and
- a $500 million term loan maturing on September 30, 2006, of which $5.0 million has already been repaid through September 30, 1999.

Unless Sunbeam further amends its bank credit facility or refinances its bank debt by April 10, 2000, Sunbeam's lenders will be able to accelerate the maturities listed above at any time after April 10, 2000.

Until March 31, 2000, Sunbeam has agreed to limit the total amount of revolving loans (other than those used to fund the merger) at the end of each month as follows:

Month	Amount
April, 1999	$290,400,000
May, 1999	$303,700,000
June, 1999	$279,100,000
July, 1999	$281,400,000
August, 1999	$264,200,000
September, 1999	$257,300,000
October, 1999	$277,000,000
November, 1999	$224,200,000
December, 1999	$185,200,000
January, 2000	$201,500,000
February, 2000	$217,800,000
March, 2000	$234,100,000

Borrowings under the bank credit facility are secured by, among other things, substantially all of Sunbeam's assets, including a pledge of Sunbeam's stock in Coleman, First Alert, Signature Brands and its other material subsidiaries. See "SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION—Security and Guarantees."

021910

This credit facility accrues interest, at Sunbeam's option:

- at LIBOR, or
- at the base rate of the administrative agent which is generally the higher of the prime commercial lending rate of the administrative agent or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.50%, in each case, plus an interest rate margin which varies depending on the occurrence of specified events. The interest rate margin is currently 4.00% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans, and is subject to potential decreases in the future, including a decrease to 3.00% for LIBOR loans and 1.75% for base rate loans upon consummation of the merger and the effectiveness of the pledge of substantially all of Coleman's and its domestic subsidiaries' assets to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility. See "Covenants Under Bank Credit Facility."

Under an April 15, 1999 amendment to the bank credit facility, Sunbeam agreed to pay the bank lenders a loan commitment fee of between 0.25% to 1.00% of the commitments under the bank credit facility as of April 15, 1999. The percentage used to calculate the fee will be determined by reference to the bank lenders' aggregate commitments and loan exposure under the bank credit facility as they may be reduced on or before September 30, 2000. The fee is payable on the earlier of September 30, 2000 and the date the commitments are terminated and the loans and other amounts payable under the bank credit facility are repaid.

At September 30, 1999, Sunbeam owed about $1,500 million under the bank credit facility (including $200 million of outstanding revolving credit facility borrowings) and had about $200 million available for borrowing. See "SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION."

Covenants Under Bank Credit Facility

Sunbeam's bank credit facility contains a number of covenants, including covenants requiring Sunbeam to meet various financial tests and ratios. As a result of Sunbeam's operating losses, among other things, at June 30, 1998 Sunbeam was not in compliance with these financial covenants of the bank credit facility. As of June 30, 1998, Sunbeam entered into an agreement with its bank lenders which waived Sunbeam's compliance with these covenants and terms through December 31, 1998. On October 19, 1998, Sunbeam's bank lenders agreed to extend this waiver through April 10, 1999, then until April 15, 1999. In April 1999, the waiver was extended to April 10, 2000, and the bank credit facility was amended to, among other things:

- require Sunbeam to meet new financial tests and ratios,
- decrease the interest rate margins to 3.75% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans,
- further reduce the interest rate margins to 3.25% for LIBOR loans and 2.00% for base rate loans as a result of Sunbeam's satisfaction on May 14, 1999 of the agreed upon conditions to this reduction. However, such margins increased to 3.50% for LIBOR loans and 2.25% for base rate loans on September 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date and increased to 4.00% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans on October 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date,
- defer until April 10, 2000 principal payments of $69.3 million otherwise due September 30, 1999 and principal payments of $69.3 million otherwise due March 31, 2000, as a result of Sunbeam's satisfaction on May 14, 1999 of the agreed upon conditions to this deferral,
- provide that the following events relating to the merger will be events of default under the bank credit facility:
 - if Sunbeam fails to have the SEC declare this document effective by October 30, 1999 (which was subsequently amended to January 10, 2000),
 - if Sunbeam fails to complete the merger within 25 business days after this document is declared effective by the SEC, or

- if Sunbeam has to pay more than $87.5 million in cash to complete the merger, including any payments on account of the exercise of appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses,
- require Sunbeam and Coleman to amend Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam and to have Coleman secure the note, which is pledged by Sunbeam to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility, with substantially all of Coleman's assets other than real property,
- impose restrictions on the total amount of revolving loans (other than those used to fund the merger) permitted to be outstanding at the end of each month under the bank credit facility,
- require Sunbeam to maintain a concentration cash management system and to repay to the banks (subject to reborrowing) revolving loans to the extent that cash on hand in Sunbeam's concentration accounts on any business day exceeds $15 million,
- require Sunbeam to prepay term loans under the bank credit facility on December 31, 1999 to the extent that cash on hand in Sunbeam's concentration accounts plus the total amount of unused revolving loan commitments on this date exceeds $125 million, but Sunbeam is not required to prepay more than $69.3 million in total as a result of this provision,
- require Sunbeam to reserve $52.5 million of availability under the revolving credit facility for use solely to pay the required cash portion of the merger consideration,
- limit the amount that Sunbeam may spend on Year 2000 testing and remediation to $50 million in total during the fiscal year ending December 31, 1999,
- require Sunbeam to obtain the bank lenders' consent to any litigation settlement concerning the restatement of Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 fiscal year and first quarter 1998 financial statements if such settlements require the payment of money, not paid by insurance carriers or other third parties, of more than $1 million in total,
- impose new informational reporting requirements, and
- provide Sunbeam with a $40 million foreign currency revolving loan subfacility.

See "SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION."

Delayed Filing of Registration Statement

On March 25, 1998, Sunbeam entered into a registration rights agreement with Morgan Stanley relating to the original issuance of the debentures. The registration rights agreement required Sunbeam to file a registration statement with the SEC by June 23, 1998 to register the debentures and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon conversion of the debentures for resale by the holders. However, Sunbeam did not file that registration statement until February 4, 1999 and the SEC did not declare the registration statement effective until November 8, 1999. The delay resulted from Sunbeam's need to review and restate its historical financial statements following the refusal of its former independent auditors, Arthur Andersen, to consent to the inclusion in that registration statement of their opinion on Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements.

Sunbeam's failure to file that registration statement by June 23, 1998 did not constitute a default under the debentures. However, from June 23, 1998 until the day on which that registration statement was declared effective, cash liquidated damages payable to the holders of the debentures accrued:

- on a daily basis at a rate per annum equal to 0.25% during the first 90 days, and
- on a daily basis at a rate per annum equal to 0.50% thereafter, multiplied, in each case, by the sum of the issue price of the debentures plus the accrued original issue discount on the debentures on each day for which damages are calculated. Sunbeam has made total payments for liquidated damages since June 23, 1998 of $4.5 million, of which $1.5 million related to damages for the period through December 31, 1998. A final payment of approximately $0.5 million, representing liquidated damages from September 26, 1999 until the registration statement was declared effective, will be payable on March 25, 2000.

Press Releases Relating to Sunbeam's First Quarter 1998 Results

On March 19, 1998, Sunbeam's prior management issued a press release stating that Sunbeam's net sales for the first quarter of 1998 might be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million, but that net sales for the quarter were expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. On April 3, 1998, Sunbeam's prior management issued a press release announcing that net sales for the first quarter of 1998 were expected to be about 5% lower than those achieved in the first quarter of 1997 and, due to the lower sales and significant one-time charges, a loss was expected for the quarter.

On May 11, 1998, Sunbeam's prior management announced 1998 first quarter results and made forecasts for the remainder of 1998 and beyond. They reported net sales of $244.3 million for the quarter, as compared to $253.4 million in the first quarter of 1997. Before one-time charges of $36.8 million for early retirement of debt and compensation expense relating to new employment agreements with three former Sunbeam executives, they reported a net loss from continuing operations of $7.8 million in the first quarter of 1998 versus net income from continuing operations of $20.6 million in the first quarter of 1997. After one-time charges of $0.43 per share, Sunbeam lost $0.52 per share in the 1998 quarter, compared with earnings per share of $0.08 in the comparable 1997 period. Sunbeam's prior management also stated that it expected earnings per share in the range of $1.00 for 1998 and $2.00 for 1999. On June 15, 1998, Sunbeam's new management announced that these previously announced forecasts should not be relied upon.

Following each of these press releases, the market price of Sunbeam common stock fell substantially. On October 20, 1998, Sunbeam issued a press release restating operating results for fiscal years 1996 and 1997, as well as the first quarter of fiscal 1998. See "—Restatement of Financial Results," "—Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board" and "RISK FACTORS."

Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board

On June 15, 1998, Sunbeam's board of directors removed Albert J. Dunlap as Sunbeam's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. Three days later, Sunbeam's board of directors removed Russell A. Kersh as Sunbeam's Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer. The Sunbeam board took these steps because Sunbeam's outside directors had lost confidence in Mr. Dunlap's leadership. On June 15, 1998, the Sunbeam board elected Peter A. Langerman as non-executive Chairman of the board and Jerry W. Levin as Sunbeam's new Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Langerman, an outside director of Sunbeam since 1990, is President and Chief Executive Officer of Franklin Mutual Advisers, Inc., the investment adviser to Franklin Mutual Series Fund, which owns about 17% of Sunbeam's common stock. Mr. Levin is an Executive Vice President of MacAndrews & Forbes. A subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes owns about 14% of Sunbeam's common stock and a warrant which, if exercised in full, would increase its ownership to about 29% of Sunbeam's outstanding common stock. Mr. Levin was Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Coleman at the time of the M&F Transaction and previously was the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Revlon, Inc., an affiliate of MacAndrews & Forbes.

On June 16, 1998, Paul E. Shapiro was appointed as Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer. Mr. Shapiro also serves as a director and Executive Vice President of Coleman. Mr. Shapiro was the Executive Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman at the time of the M&F Transaction. Bobby G. Jenkins was appointed as Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer on June 15, 1998. Mr. Jenkins also serves as Executive Vice President of Coleman. On April 24, 1998, Karen K. Clark was appointed as Sunbeam's Vice President, Operations Finance. Since April 1999, Ms. Clark has served as Sunbeam's Senior Vice President, Finance. Ms. Clark also serves as Senior Vice President, Finance of Coleman. Jack D. Hall joined Sunbeam on October 1, 1998 as President, International. Steven R. Isko was appointed as Sunbeam's Senior Vice President and General Counsel on June 1, 1999. Mr. Isko also serves as Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman.

In June 1998, Mr. Levin, Howard Gittis of MacAndrews & Forbes, and Lawrence Sondike of Franklin Mutual Advisers, Inc. were elected to the Sunbeam board. William T. Rutter resigned from the Sunbeam board effective July 8, 1998, and Faith Whittlesey was elected to fill the vacancy on the Sunbeam board of directors' audit committee resulting from Mr. Rutter's resignation. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh resigned from the Sunbeam board of directors effective August 5, 1998. In January 1999, Mr. Sondike resigned from the Sunbeam board of directors; in February 1999, John H. Klein, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Bi-Logix, Inc., was elected to the Sunbeam board of directors; and on June 29, 1999, Philip E. Beekman, President of Owl Hollow Enterprises, Inc., was elected to the Sunbeam board of directors at its annual stockholders meeting.

In March 1999, Mr. Levin became Chairman of the Sunbeam board of directors, succeeding Mr. Langerman, who remains a director of Sunbeam.

Restatement of Financial Results; Change of Auditors

On June 25, 1998, Sunbeam announced that its former independent auditors, Arthur Andersen, would not consent to the inclusion of their opinion on Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements in a registration statement Sunbeam was then planning to file with the SEC. On June 30, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the audit committee of its board of directors would review the accuracy of Sunbeam's prior financial statements and, therefore, those financial statements should not be relied upon. Sunbeam also announced that Deloitte & Touche LLP had been retained to assist the audit committee and Arthur Andersen in this review. On August 6, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the audit committee had determined that Sunbeam would be required to restate its financial statements for 1997, the first quarter of 1998, and possibly 1996, and that the adjustments, while not then quantified, would be material.

On October 20, 1998, Sunbeam announced the restatement of its financial results for a six-quarter period from the fourth quarter of 1996 through the first quarter of 1998. Sunbeam had to restate these financial results because its previously issued financial statements generally overstated losses for 1996, overstated profits for 1997 and understated losses for the first quarter of 1998. The audit committee concluded that Sunbeam had incorrectly recognized revenue during these periods from "bill and hold" and guaranteed sales transactions. The audit committee also concluded that some costs and allowances for sales returns, co-op advertising, customer deductions and reserves for product liability and warranty expense were not accrued or were incorrectly recorded. Finally, the audit committee concluded that various costs were incorrectly included in and charged to restructuring, asset impairment and other costs.

On November 20, 1998, Sunbeam announced that its audit committee had recommended, and its board of directors had approved, the appointment of Deloitte & Touche to replace Arthur Andersen as Sunbeam's independent auditors for fiscal year 1998. Arthur Andersen will continue to provide Sunbeam with limited professional services. For further information regarding Sunbeam's independent auditors, see "CHANGES IN AND DISAGREEMENTS WITH ACCOUNTANTS ON ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE."

Reporting of Results for First Nine Months of 1999 and Fiscal Year 1998

On November 9, 1999, Sunbeam reported that for the first nine months of 1999 Sunbeam had net sales of $1,786.4 million and a net loss of $155.0 million, or a loss per diluted share of $1.54. Results for the nine months ended September 30, 1998 include Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert from their respective acquisition dates. After adjusting 1998 sales to include sales of the acquired companies for the periods from the beginning of 1998 through the respective dates of acquisition, 1999 net sales increased approximately $162 million or approximately 10% over 1998 combined historical net sales of $1,624.0 million. Sunbeam also announced that net cash used in operations was $73.2 million for the first nine months of 1999 as compared to $224.7 million during the same period in the prior year.

On April 21, 1999, Sunbeam reported that, for the full year 1998, Sunbeam had net sales of $1,800 million and a net loss of $898 million, or a loss of $9.25 per diluted share. Excluding sales of Coleman, First Alert and Signature Brands, comparable sales declined 23% to $828 million in 1998 from about $1,100 million in 1997. Sunbeam also announced net cash provided by operations of about $30 million for the fourth quarter of 1998, compared with net cash used in operations of about $220 million during the first three quarters of 1998.

Litigation Involving Sunbeam

Since prior management's issuance of the April 3, 1998 press release concerning Sunbeam's 1998 first quarter results, many lawsuits alleging legal claims arising under federal and state securities and other laws have been filed against Sunbeam, some of Sunbeam's former directors and officers, some of Sunbeam's current directors and Arthur Andersen. Sunbeam is currently defending these lawsuits in a number of courts. Many of these suits relate to Sunbeam's financial performance from the second quarter of 1997 through the second quarter of 1998. Many plaintiffs are claiming that Sunbeam's prior management misrepresented and omitted material information in its public filings and in its statements concerning Sunbeam's historical and expected future results of operations. In many of these cases, the plaintiffs claim that the alleged actions were intended to artificially inflate the market price of Sunbeam's common stock. Sunbeam's insurers have also attempted to have Sunbeam's directors' and officers' liability policies voided or canceled or have advised Sunbeam that they do not intend to provide coverage with respect to these lawsuits. Sunbeam is unable to predict the outcome of these lawsuits or its potential exposure to damages. However, if Sunbeam were to lose these lawsuits, the judgments would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial condition, results of operations and cash flow. For a more detailed description of these and other lawsuits, see "BUSINESS OF SUNBEAM—Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities."

SEC Investigation

The staff of the Division of Enforcement of the SEC advised Sunbeam in a letter dated June 17, 1998 that it was conducting an informal inquiry into Sunbeam's accounting policies and procedures. On July 2, 1998, the SEC advised Sunbeam that it had issued a formal order of investigation. The order indicates that the SEC is investigating whether Sunbeam, certain of its current or former officers, directors, employees and certain other persons and entities violated the federal securities laws and regulations by:

- filing or causing to be filed inaccurate reports with the SEC.
- failing to maintain accurate books, records and accounts,
- failing to create or maintain adequate internal accounting controls, or circumventing such controls,
- knowingly or recklessly making false or misleading statements in reports filed with the SEC or in other public statements, or
- making false or misleading statements to an accountant in connection with audits or examinations of Sunbeam's financial statements or reports filed with the SEC.

At the time the formal order of investigation was issued, the SEC also subpoenaed various documents from Sunbeam. On November 4, 1998, Sunbeam received another SEC subpoena requiring the production of additional documents. Sunbeam has cooperated with the SEC and has furnished the SEC with documents they requested. Sunbeam has, however, declined to provide the SEC with material Sunbeam believes is subject to the attorney-client privilege and the work product immunity. Sunbeam cannot predict how long the SEC investigation will continue or its outcome.

Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction

On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that it had entered into an agreement to settle threatened claims of the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary that sold Sunbeam a controlling interest in Coleman in the M&F Transaction in March 1998, in exchange for consideration which included about 14 million shares of Sunbeam common stock. These shares had a market value of about $580 million when the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary agreed to the M&F Transaction, but their market value was less than $100 million at the time of the settlement.

The claims of the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary were substantially the same as the claims made in a number of the stockholder lawsuits filed in the second and third quarters of 1998 alleging that Sunbeam, in 1997 and the first quarter of 1998 under its prior management, made material misstatements and omissions of fact that artificially inflated the market price of Sunbeam common stock. The MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary also alleged that Sunbeam had breached representations made in the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction. The settlement:

- released Sunbeam from threatened claims arising out of Sunbeam's acquisition of the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary's controlling interest in Coleman,
- enabled Sunbeam to retain the services of executive personnel affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes who had been managing Sunbeam since mid-June of 1998, including Jerry W. Levin, Sunbeam's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Paul E. Shapiro, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer, and Bobby G. Jenkins, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, and
- provided for continuing management assistance and other support by MacAndrews & Forbes to Sunbeam at its request.

In exchange, Sunbeam issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Sunbeam has agreed that the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary can require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the warrant and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant. See "BUSINESS—Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities."

The terms of the settlement and warrant were negotiated and approved on Sunbeam's behalf by a special committee of four of Sunbeam's outside directors, none of whom has any affiliation with MacAndrews & Forbes. The members of the special committee were Howard Kristol (Chairman), Charles Elson, Peter Langerman and Faith Whittlesey. They were assisted by independent financial advisors and legal counsel.

For their services as members of the special committee in connection with the settlement, Mr. Kristol received additional compensation of $50,000 and Messrs. Elson and Langerman and Mrs. Whittlesey each received additional compensation of $35,000. Sunbeam also agreed to indemnify each of the members of the special committee to the fullest extent allowed by applicable law and Sunbeam's certificate of incorporation and by-laws for any liabilities arising out of their services on the special committee.

The settlement normally would have required approval by Sunbeam's stockholders under the rules of the NYSE because of the issuance of the warrant as part of the settlement. However, Sunbeam's audit committee determined that the delay that would be necessary to secure stockholder approval prior to issuing the warrant would:

- be lengthy due to the SEC's ongoing investigation of Sunbeam's accounting practices and policies and the need to complete the restatement of Sunbeam's historical financial statements,
- inhibit Sunbeam's ability to reach a settlement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary and to retain and hire essential senior management personnel, and
- seriously jeopardize Sunbeam's financial viability.

Based on these determinations, Sunbeam's audit committee, relying on an exception provided in the applicable NYSE stockholder approval policy, expressly approved Sunbeam's omission to seek stockholder approval. The NYSE accepted Sunbeam's application of the exception.

In connection with the settlement agreement, Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins each signed three-year employment agreements with Sunbeam. See "MANAGEMENT."

Options Exchange

In August 1998, Sunbeam approved an exchange plan for outstanding options held by its employees to purchase shares of Sunbeam common stock. The exchange plan, which has been completed, provided for the outstanding options with exercise prices in excess of $10.00 per share to be valued by reference to the generally accepted Black-Scholes option pricing model, and permitted Sunbeam employees to exchange old options for new options with an exercise price of $7.00 per share having a value equivalent to the value of the old options. See Note 9 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements.

New York Stock Exchange Listing

In May 1998, the NYSE advised Sunbeam that it did not meet the NYSE's continuing listing standards because Sunbeam did not have tangible net assets of at least $12 million at December 31, 1997 and average annual net income of at least $600,000 for 1995, 1996 and 1997. Sunbeam representatives met with NYSE officials, and in March 1999, the NYSE informed Sunbeam that Sunbeam common stock would not be delisted at that time, although the NYSE would continue to monitor Sunbeam's financial condition and operating performance. On August 5, 1999, the NYSE advised Sunbeam that the NYSE had revised its continuing listing standards, and that Sunbeam is in compliance with the revised standards.

Matters Involving Former Management

In early August 1998, Sunbeam entered into a six-month agreement with Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh in which the parties agreed not to assert claims against each other and to exchange information relating to the pending stockholder lawsuits. Sunbeam also agreed to pay a portion of the accrued vacation and employment benefits of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh.

After the agreement expired, by letters dated February 9, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh submitted demands for arbitration to the American Arbitration Association alleging that Sunbeam terminated their employment without cause. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh are seeking lump sum payments of about $5,250,000 and $2,296,875, respectively. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh also are seeking:

- amounts for accrued but unused vacation,
- amounts in respect of certain benefit plans,
- a ruling that their options to acquire shares of Sunbeam common stock are fully vested and that they will receive the economic equivalent of their participation in Sunbeam's program for repricing of options, and
- in the case of Mr. Kersh, more than $3 million, including tax gross-ups, with respect to his restricted stock.

Sunbeam is vigorously contesting the claims of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. To date, Sunbeam has not made any severance payments to either of Messrs. Dunlap or Kersh.

On March 23, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed a complaint in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware seeking an order directing Sunbeam to advance attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred in connection with the defense of the stockholder lawsuits and the SEC investigation. A trial of this summary proceeding was held on June 15 and 16, 1999, and the court ordered Sunbeam to advance Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh about $1.4 million for their expenses incurred through the date of their complaint and to advance expenses reasonably incurred by them in the future. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh have agreed to repay to Sunbeam all amounts reimbursed or advanced if it is ultimately determined that they are not entitled to indemnification under Delaware law.

Acquisition of Coleman Preferred Stock

On July 12, 1999, one of Sunbeam's wholly owned subsidiaries acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock, for an aggregate purchase price of approximately $31 million. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock already indirectly owned by Sunbeam, enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock. Coleman created these shares and Sunbeam acquired them in order to enable Sunbeam and Coleman to file consolidated federal income tax returns and, in certain jurisdictions, consolidated state income tax returns, prior to the completion of the merger. In connection with the acquisition of these shares, Sunbeam entered into a tax sharing agreement with Coleman pursuant to which Coleman will pay to Sunbeam amounts equal to the federal and state income taxes that would have been payable by Coleman had

Coleman not been included in the consolidated income tax return of Sunbeam. The terms of the voting preferred stock, the per share issue price and the terms of the tax sharing agreement were approved on Coleman's behalf by Coleman's then sole independent director. The net proceeds from the sale of the preferred stock to Sunbeam were used by Coleman to make a partial repayment on Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam.

For information concerning the terms of the new preferred stock issued to Sunbeam, see "DESCRIPTION OF COLEMAN CAPITAL STOCK—Coleman Preferred Stock."

Proposed Sale of Coleman Eastpak Business

On November 9, 1999, Sunbeam announced its intention to divest Coleman's Eastpak business, as well as certain non-essential assets. Sunbeam anticipates that these asset sales will produce net proceeds of approximately $200 million, which will be used primarily to pay down its bank debt.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING COLEMAN

In April 1999, the NYSE advised Coleman that it did not meet the NYSE's continuing listing standards because Coleman did not have tangible net assets of at least $12 million at September 30, 1998 and average annual net income of at least $600,000 for fiscal years 1997, 1996 and 1995. At that time, Coleman requested the NYSE to continue to list the Coleman common stock until completion of the merger. The NYSE subsequently advised Coleman that Coleman also failed to satisfy certain non-financial continuing listing standards. On August 5, 1999, the NYSE advised Coleman that the NYSE had revised its continuing listing standards, and that Coleman is in compliance with the revised financial standards. Coleman and the NYSE have agreed upon a program whereby Coleman will correct the deficiencies in its non-financial continuing listing standards by the end of 1999. Coleman is currently complying with such program. If Coleman were to be delisted from the NYSE, it could adversely affect the market price of Coleman's common stock and Coleman's ability to sell its capital stock to third parties. However, Sunbeam's bank credit facility currently restricts Coleman from taking such action.

Following the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam caused Coleman to repay substantially all of its outstanding indebtedness (which had been assumed by Sunbeam in the M&F Transaction) with the proceeds of borrowings from Sunbeam. Since the completion of the M&F Transaction, Coleman has borrowed additional funds from Sunbeam. During 1998 and through April 15, 1999, these borrowings were evidenced by an unsecured subordinated demand note payable by Coleman to Sunbeam. This note was pledged by Sunbeam to its lenders as security for Sunbeam's obligations under its bank credit facility. In April 1999, Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam was revised and secured by a pledge of Coleman assets in favor of Sunbeam's lending banks. The revised Coleman note had an unpaid principal amount of $303.2 million on September 30, 1999. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Financial Transactions Between Coleman and Sunbeam."

As described above, on July 12, 1999, Coleman issued 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock to one of Sunbeam's wholly owned subsidiaries. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Acquisition of Coleman Preferred Stock."

SPECIAL FACTORS

Background of the Merger

In the spring of 1997, as part of a long-term strategic planning process, Sunbeam's prior management began exploring a possible sale of Sunbeam or the making of one or more major acquisitions. On April 22, 1997, representatives of Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated, Sunbeam's financial advisor, met with Albert J. Dunlap, Sunbeam's then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, and Russell A. Kersh, Sunbeam's then Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer, to discuss, among other things, the retention of Morgan Stanley as Sunbeam's financial advisor in connection with a possible sale of Sunbeam or one or more major acquisitions by Sunbeam.

On September 11, 1997, Morgan Stanley was formally retained by Sunbeam to assist in connection with a possible sale of Sunbeam, one or more possible acquisitions by Sunbeam and the consideration of other strategic alternatives. Thereafter, representatives of Morgan Stanley contacted five companies in the branded consumer products business to determine whether any of these companies would be interested in exploring a possible acquisition of Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley contacted only those companies which it believed were large enough to finance an acquisition of Sunbeam and to successfully integrate Sunbeam's operations. In addition, Morgan Stanley selected only companies with product lines and operations which it believed were compatible with or complementary to those of Sunbeam. One of the companies contacted was MacAndrews & Forbes, which Morgan Stanley from time to time advises on a variety of business and financial matters. None of the companies contacted by Morgan Stanley expressed interest in acquiring Sunbeam at a price which would have constituted a premium over the then current market price of the Sunbeam common stock. Based on Morgan Stanley's initial contacts with potential acquirors of Sunbeam, Sunbeam's then senior management concluded that it was unlikely that any major consumer products company would be likely to pursue an acquisition of Sunbeam at a price or on terms that would be acceptable to Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley then explored the impact on Sunbeam of various other strategic alternatives, including a sale of one or more of Sunbeam's businesses, a spin-off of one or more of Sunbeam's subsidiaries or a recapitalization of Sunbeam. These strategic alternatives were rejected by Sunbeam's former management because of former management's stated belief that one or more acquisitions by Sunbeam would have a more positive impact on stockholder value. Former management then directed Morgan Stanley to shift its focus to one or more possible major acquisitions.

On December 12, 1997, Mr. Kersh, David C. Fannin, Sunbeam's then Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, and Peter A. Langerman, a director of Sunbeam, met with Jerry W. Levin, then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Coleman, Paul E. Shapiro, then Coleman's Executive Vice President and General Counsel, and Joseph P. Page, then Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Coleman, and discussed Coleman's businesses and the potential cost savings, efficiencies and other benefits that could result from a combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. The December 12 meeting was initiated by Morgan Stanley on Sunbeam's behalf. Notwithstanding MacAndrews & Forbes' previous rejection of Sunbeam's overtures regarding an acquisition of Sunbeam by MacAndrews & Forbes, both Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam believed that the complementary nature of the product offerings of Sunbeam and Coleman, the asset base of Coleman, including its ownership of various brand names which enjoy substantial consumer recognition, the potential revenue and operational benefits associated with a Sunbeam/Coleman combination and the then current trading prices of Coleman's common stock all favored an acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam.

At that time, MacAndrews & Forbes indirectly owned about 81% of the Coleman common stock through various subsidiaries, including Coleman (Parent) Holdings. Other stockholders then owned about 19% of the outstanding Coleman common stock. For further information regarding the organizational structure of MacAndrews & Forbes and the structure of the M&F Transaction, see "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—M&F Transaction."

On December 18, 1997, Mr. Dunlap and Michael Price, the then President and Chief Executive Officer of Franklin Mutual Advisers, Inc., Sunbeam's largest stockholder, met with Ronald O. Perelman, MacAndrews & Forbes' Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and sole stockholder, and another senior executive of MacAndrews & Forbes. Mr. Dunlap suggested a possible transaction in which Sunbeam would acquire Coleman for consideration valued in the range of $18 to $22 per share of Coleman common stock. Mr. Perelman advised Mr. Dunlap that the price range was too low and indicated that he would not support a transaction in that price range.

On or about January 22, 1998, in an effort to revive a possible transaction, a representative of Morgan Stanley contacted a representative of MacAndrews & Forbes and indicated that Sunbeam might consider a possible transaction involving both cash and shares of Sunbeam common stock at a price higher than the price range suggested by Mr. Dunlap at the December 18 meeting. MacAndrews & Forbes' representative indicated his willingness to discuss a possible transaction on those terms. On January 23, 1998, representatives of Morgan Stanley met with representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes to begin discussions regarding a possible transaction between Sunbeam and Coleman. On January 29, 1998, representatives of Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley met with representatives of Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes, as well as representatives of Credit Suisse First Boston Corporation, Coleman's financial advisor. During the meeting, the parties discussed the potential cost savings, revenue and operational efficiencies and other benefits that might be associated with a business combination of Sunbeam and Coleman and a preliminary schedule for mutual due diligence. During the week of February 2, 1998, Morgan Stanley submitted to MacAndrews & Forbes an outline of a possible transaction structure which focused on Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman in a one-step merger of a wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary with and into Coleman in which all outstanding shares of Coleman common stock, including the shares owned indirectly by MacAndrews & Forbes, would be exchanged for consideration consisting solely of Sunbeam common stock. The proposal was rejected because it did not contemplate the assumption by Sunbeam of the indebtedness of two subsidiaries of MacAndrews & Forbes which were corporate parents of Coleman holding MacAndrews & Forbes' interest in Coleman—CLN Holdings (the subsidiary of Coleman (Parent) Holdings) and Coleman Worldwide (the subsidiary of CLN Holdings)—or the payment of any cash consideration. At that time, Coleman Worldwide and CLN Holdings had aggregate outstanding indebtedness of about $518.7 million.

On February 6, 1998, representatives of Morgan Stanley met with representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes and Credit Suisse First Boston to again discuss a possible acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam. At this meeting, the possibility of Sunbeam's acquisition of MacAndrews & Forbes' interest in Coleman, including Sunbeam's assumption of the indebtedness of Coleman Worldwide and CLN Holdings, as the first step in an acquisition of Coleman was discussed. Although the parties had not yet reached agreement on price or the value of Coleman, the parties began to discuss this structure.

On February 13, 1998 and February 19, 1998, representatives of Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley participated in conference calls with a representative of MacAndrews & Forbes and discussed the terms of a possible transaction, including structure and price. The parties tentatively agreed that the transaction would be structured as a stock purchase in which Sunbeam would acquire all of the outstanding capital stock of CLN Holdings from Coleman (Parent) Holdings, an indirect subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes. Under this structure, Sunbeam in effect would assume the indebtedness of CLN Holdings and Coleman Worldwide. The consideration payable by Sunbeam was not, however, agreed upon. Due diligence meetings were held at various times on and after February 21, 1998 during which representatives of Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley, as well as Sunbeam's accountants and consultants, met with representatives of Coleman, MacAndrews & Forbes and Credit Suisse First Boston, as well as Coleman's accountants, to discuss Coleman's financial results for fiscal year 1997, strategic plans and financial projections for fiscal year 1998.

Due diligence meetings were also held on February 23 and 24, 1998 during which representatives of Sunbeam met with representatives of Coleman, along with representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes and Credit Suisse First Boston, to discuss Sunbeam's long-term strategic plan and financial projections for fiscal years 1998 through 2000.

On February 24, 1998, Messrs. Kersh and Fannin and representatives of Morgan Stanley participated in conference calls with representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes to finalize the transaction structure and negotiate the remaining terms of the transaction. During these conference calls, the parties reached agreement on the type of consideration payable by Sunbeam in the acquisition, although neither the amount of cash consideration nor the precise exchange ratio of Sunbeam common stock for Coleman common stock was agreed upon. On February 25 and 26, 1998, meetings and conference calls were held between representatives of Sunbeam and its legal advisors, representatives of Coleman and its legal advisors, and representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes and its legal advisors. During the February 26, 1998 meetings and conference calls, the parties agreed that the final transaction structure would consist of a merger of CLN Holdings and a wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary, followed by a second-step merger of a wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary with Coleman. At that time, the parties also reached final agreement on the consideration payable by Sunbeam in the acquisition, including the amount of cash consideration and the precise exchange ratio of Sunbeam common stock for Coleman common stock. The parties and their advisors then finalized definitive agreements reflecting the agreed upon transaction structure and consideration.

On February 25, 1998, Coleman's then board of directors met and received and considered the presentations of the management of Coleman, Credit Suisse First Boston and Coleman's legal counsel regarding the transactions. The presentation of Credit Suisse First Boston was addressed, primarily, to the fairness to the Coleman minority stockholders of the consideration payable under the merger agreement. As part of this presentation, representatives of Credit Suisse First Boston evaluated the following factors:

- the proposed structure of the transaction;
- the type and amount of consideration payable to the Coleman minority stockholders in the merger and to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, in the M&F Transaction, including the assumption by Sunbeam of the indebtedness of Coleman Worldwide, CLN Holdings and Coleman;
- the premium represented by the then value of the merger consideration when compared to:
 - historical trading prices of the Coleman common stock;
 - Coleman's EBITDA for fiscal years 1997 and 1998; and
 - Coleman's earnings per share for fiscal years 1997 and 1998; and
- the value of Coleman, as measured by:
 - an analysis of the then present value of Coleman's future unlevered cash flows generated by its then current assets;
 - the public market trading values of comparable companies; and
 - the prices paid in recent acquisitions of comparable companies.

On Friday, February 27, 1998, meetings of the boards of directors of Coleman and Sunbeam were held to consider and act upon the proposed transactions. At the meeting of the Coleman board Credit Suisse First Boston delivered its opinion to the Coleman board to the effect that, as of that date, the consideration of 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock and $6.44 in cash, without interest thereon, in exchange for each share of Coleman common stock, was fair, from a financial point of view, to the stockholders of Coleman, other than MacAndrews & Forbes and its subsidiaries.

At the meeting of the Sunbeam board, the directors of Sunbeam received and considered presentations of Morgan Stanley regarding the transactions. The presentation of Morgan Stanley was addressed to the fairness to Sunbeam of the consideration payable under the merger agreement. As part of this presentation, representatives of Morgan Stanley, among other things, discussed with the Sunbeam board the following factors:

- the strategic rationale for the transaction, including:
 - the strength of Coleman's brand names and the potential revenue benefits they presented to Sunbeam;
 - the benefits associated with an acquisition by Sunbeam in terms of market expectations, Sunbeam's ability to remain a market leader and the increased leverage over distribution channels associated with increased size; and
 - the potential for synergies and cost savings as a result of the merger;
- the proposed structure of the transaction;

- the financial condition of Coleman and Sunbeam;
- the nature of Coleman's and Sunbeam's business operations and their future prospects;
- estimates of the revenue and operational benefits expected to be realized as a result of the transaction as prepared by the management of Sunbeam;
- an analysis of the present value of Coleman's projected cash flows with a terminal value applied;
- the public market trading values of comparable companies with a projected control premium included; and
- prices paid in recent acquisitions of comparable companies.

In addition, at the February 27, 1998 Sunbeam board meeting, Morgan Stanley delivered its opinion to the Sunbeam board to the effect that, as of that date, the consideration payable in the merger and the M&F Transaction was fair, from a financial point of view, to Sunbeam.

Following the receipt of the respective fairness opinions, the boards of directors of Sunbeam and Coleman each approved the merger and the M&F Transaction. Definitive agreements were executed by the parties late that night and a press release announcing the transactions was issued before the opening of trading on the NYSE on Monday, March 2, 1998.

On February 27, 1998, Coleman Worldwide, as the owner of about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock, executed a written consent and voted its shares to approve the merger agreement and the merger. As a result, no further action on the part of any stockholder of Coleman is required to complete the merger.

As described above under the caption "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM," since the merger agreement was approved and signed in February 1998 and the M&F Transaction was completed in March 1998, adverse developments affecting Sunbeam have caused a substantial decrease in the market value of the Sunbeam common stock. As a result, the value of the consideration paid to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in the M&F Transaction and the value of the consideration to be paid to Coleman's other stockholders under the merger agreement have also declined substantially. Coleman and Sunbeam have not considered amending or terminating the merger agreement because the merger agreement, by its terms, cannot be amended or terminated. Instead, Coleman and Sunbeam determined to provide additional consideration to the Coleman minority stockholders in connection with the settlement of the Coleman minority stockholders' litigation claims.

Coleman's Reasons for the Merger and Approval of the Coleman Board

At its meetings on February 25 and 27, 1998, the then Coleman board received and considered the presentations of Coleman management, Credit Suisse First Boston and Coleman's legal counsel regarding the merger agreement and the merger. At its February 27 meeting, the then Coleman board unanimously approved and adopted the merger and approved the merger agreement and the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement. See "—Background of the Merger."

In reaching its determination to approve the merger, the then Coleman board considered a number of factors. Listed below are the material factors, both positive and negative, considered. In view of the number and variety of factors considered in connection with its evaluation of the merger, the then Coleman board did not consider it practicable to, nor did it attempt to, quantify or otherwise assign relative weights to the specific factors considered in reaching its determination. In addition, individual members of the then Coleman board may have given different weight to the different factors.

The then Coleman board identified and considered a variety of positive factors in its deliberations concerning the merger, including those set forth below.

Coleman's Business, Condition and Prospects. The Coleman board reviewed Coleman's business, its then current financial condition and results of operations and its future prospects, including Coleman's ability to maintain its position in the consumer products business at its present size, and the current and anticipated developments in Coleman's business. The Coleman board received and reviewed presentations from, and discussed the terms and conditions of the merger agreement with, executive officers of Coleman and Coleman's financial and legal advisors. The Coleman board considered the views of its management and financial advisor regarding recent trends in the industry in which Coleman operates, including recent acquisitions and business combinations. Based on its familiarity with the business, current financial condition and results of operations and future prospects of Coleman, and in light of the various presentations it received, the Coleman board concluded that a business combination of Coleman with Sunbeam would be in the best interests of Coleman and its stockholders.

Terms and Structure of the Transaction. The Coleman board of directors considered the fact that the merger agreement does not contain any provisions that either (1) limit the effect of changes in the market price of the Sunbeam common stock prior to the completion of the merger on the value of the consideration to be received by Coleman stockholders in the merger or (2) permit Coleman or Sunbeam to terminate the merger agreement based upon changes in stock price and that, accordingly, the value of the consideration could change based on the performance of the Sunbeam common stock between the execution of the merger agreement and the completion of the merger. While recognizing that the absence of these provisions exposed Coleman's stockholders to market risk, the Coleman board considered this risk to be mitigated to some extent by the trading history of Sunbeam common stock during the period from January 1, 1997 through February 24, 1998 and the fact that the Sunbeam common stock had outperformed both the Coleman common stock and the Standard and Poor's 500 Stock Index during that period.

The Coleman board reviewed the economic terms of the transaction based upon the closing prices of the Coleman common stock and the Sunbeam common stock on February 24, 1998 and February 26, 1998, the days prior to each of the meetings of the Coleman board. As reported on the NYSE Composite Transactions Tape, the closing prices of Sunbeam common stock and Coleman common stock were $40.625 and $20.688, respectively, on February 24, 1998, and $41.875 and $20.188, respectively, on February 26, 1998. The Coleman board considered that, in each case, the merger consideration implied a per share premium of about 44.2% when the market value of the merger consideration was compared to the then market price per share of Coleman common stock. The Coleman board also considered that the merger consideration was higher than the value implied by the historical stock market prices of the Coleman common stock and Sunbeam common stock.

The Coleman board also considered the fact that the transaction was structured as a two-step acquisition which, among other things, would enable Sunbeam to acquire control of Coleman as quickly as possible in order to reduce disruption to Coleman's business. The two-step structure would enable Sunbeam to acquire control of Coleman more quickly than in a one-step transaction, since Sunbeam could issue shares of its common stock to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary that owned the shares of Coleman common stock without having to register the Sunbeam shares under the federal securities laws, thereby avoiding the delay inherent in the registration process. The agreement relating to the M&F Transaction was signed on February 27, 1998 and the transaction was completed thirty days later on March 30, 1998. As described below under "—Purposes and Effects of the Merger," Sunbeam believed that it was in the best interests of its stockholders that Sunbeam acquire Coleman for consideration consisting, at least in part, of shares of its common stock. Accordingly, Sunbeam believed that a cash tender offer for all outstanding shares of Coleman common stock, which also would have avoided the registration process, was not an acceptable alternative.

Opinion of Credit Suisse First Boston. The Coleman board considered the oral opinion delivered by Credit Suisse First Boston at the meeting of the Coleman board on February 27, 1998, which was subsequently confirmed in writing, to the effect that, as of that date and based upon and subject to the matters described in the opinion, the cash and stock consideration payable in the merger was fair from a financial point of view to Coleman's minority stockholders. When Credit Suisse First Boston was engaged by Coleman, they were not asked to render an updated opinion as of the date of this document and neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has requested that they do so. Moreover, Credit Suisse First Boston has advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam.

Ability of Coleman's Stockholders to Obtain a Continuing Interest in Sunbeam. The Coleman board considered that, under the terms of the merger agreement, Coleman's stockholders will receive equity securities of Sunbeam, thus enabling Coleman's stockholders to participate in increases in the value of Sunbeam, including any value that may be generated through Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman's businesses. The Coleman board also noted that the price of the Sunbeam common stock had more than doubled since the time Mr. Dunlap had become Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam.

Ownership of Coleman Voting Stock. The Coleman board considered the fact that prior to the merger the Coleman minority stockholders were stockholders in a company controlled by MacAndrews & Forbes, but that following the merger they would be stockholders in a public company without any controlling stockholder and therefore the Coleman minority stockholders, as stockholders of Sunbeam, may be able to obtain a control premium with respect to their Sunbeam common stock in the future. The ability of Coleman's stockholders to receive dividends or other distributions declared and paid by Coleman was not considered material by the Coleman board because Coleman had not declared a dividend since its initial public offering in February 1992 and at the time of the approval of the merger, the then Coleman board had no plans to declare any dividends.

Availability of Appraisal Rights. The Coleman board considered the fact that the Coleman minority stockholders would have the right to pursue appraisal rights under Delaware law. Accordingly, any Coleman public stockholder who did not wish to accept the cash and stock consideration payable under the merger agreement would have the right to dissent from the merger and have the fair value of his Coleman shares determined by a court and paid to him in cash.

In addition, the then Coleman board identified and considered a variety of potentially negative factors, including those set forth below.

Failure to Realize Expected Benefits. The then Coleman board considered the possibility that the operational and revenue benefits expected to be realized as result of the transaction might not be fully realized. For example, some of the benefits of the transaction projected by the then Coleman board depended upon the ability of Sunbeam to cut costs, streamline operations and capitalize on the revenue and operational benefits derived from a combination of the two companies and the unrealized potential of Coleman's assets. Any such projected benefits are inherently subject to risks and uncertainties beyond the control of either Sunbeam or Coleman. The then Coleman board considered that any failure by Sunbeam to successfully implement its business strategies and cost-saving initiatives could have a material adverse effect on the market price of the Sunbeam common stock and thereby adversely affect former Coleman stockholders who receive Sunbeam shares in the merger.

Possible Failure to Complete the Transaction. The then Coleman board considered that the M&F Transaction was subject to customary closing conditions and, therefore, was subject to the risk that the M&F Transaction and the merger would not be completed. The then Coleman board considered that non-consummation of the two transactions could negatively affect the market price of the Coleman common stock and the financial community's perception of the stability and future prospects of Coleman. Moreover, a failure to complete the two transactions following their public announcement could negatively affect Coleman's sales and operating results, its ability to attract and retain key management and marketing personnel and its ability to successfully complete long-term strategic projects.

Substantial Charges Incurred in Connection with the Transaction. The then Coleman board considered that Coleman would be required to incur significant expenses in order to complete the M&F Transaction and the merger. These expenses include costs of integrating the businesses of Coleman and Sunbeam, fees of Coleman's legal and financial advisors and the expenditure of corporate resources in support of the transaction generally. The then Coleman board recognized that these expenses would be borne solely by Coleman in the event that the transaction was not completed.

Possible Loss of Key Personnel. The then Coleman board considered that, despite the efforts of the combined company, key management and marketing personnel might not remain employed by Coleman or Sunbeam. The loss of any such key personnel could have a material adverse effect on Coleman's financial position, results of operations and cash flow.

Tax Treatment. The Coleman board considered the fact that the merger is expected to be a taxable transaction for United States Federal income tax purposes and may be taxable under state, local or foreign laws as well. For a discussion of the tax consequences of the merger to Coleman minority stockholders, see "UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS."

The then Coleman board believed, however, that the foregoing negative factors were outweighed by the projected benefits of the transactions.

The terms of the merger were arrived at through arms'-length negotiations between two unaffiliated parties, MacAndrews & Forbes and Sunbeam. The then Coleman board believed that the interests of MacAndrews & Forbes, as the then indirect owner of about 81% of the outstanding Coleman common stock, were substantially aligned with the interests of Coleman's minority stockholders. The merger agreement also contains provisions designed to protect Coleman's minority stockholders. The merger agreement prevents Sunbeam from altering the consideration payable to Coleman's minority stockholders in the merger or otherwise amending or terminating the merger agreement after completion of the M&F Transaction. Furthermore, the merger is subject to very few conditions, consisting only of (1) this document had to be declared effective by the SEC, (2) the Sunbeam common stock to be issued in the merger had to be listed on the NYSE, (3) the M&F Transaction had to be completed and (4) there can be no preliminary or permanent injunction preventing the merger. In addition, the merger agreement was approved by a unanimous vote of the Coleman board, including by those members of the Coleman board who were not employees or affiliates of Coleman or MacAndrews & Forbes. In light of the foregoing, the then Coleman board did not deem it necessary to institute additional procedural safeguards such as a requirement that the merger be approved by a majority of Coleman's minority stockholders or the formation of a special committee of Coleman's outside directors to negotiate the terms of the merger.

Financial Advisors' Opinions

Coleman's Financial Advisor. Credit Suisse First Boston acted as Coleman's financial advisor in connection with the merger at the time the merger agreement was signed. Credit Suisse First Boston was selected by Coleman based on Credit Suisse First Boston's experience, expertise and familiarity with Coleman and its business. Credit Suisse First Boston is an internationally recognized investment banking firm and is regularly engaged in the valuation of businesses and securities in connection with mergers and acquisitions, leveraged buyouts, negotiated underwritings, competitive biddings, secondary distributions of listed and unlisted securities, private placements and valuations for corporate and other purposes.

On February 27, 1998, Credit Suisse First Boston delivered to the Coleman board an oral opinion, which was subsequently confirmed in writing, to the effect that, as of that date and based upon and subject to the matters described in the opinion, the cash and stock consideration payable under the merger agreement was fair from a financial point of view to Coleman's minority stockholders. However, since the date of Credit Suisse First Boston's opinion, numerous events have occurred that significantly affected the price of Sunbeam common stock. When Credit Suisse First Boston was engaged by Coleman, they were not asked to render an updated opinion as of the date of this document and neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has requested that they do so. Moreover, Credit Suisse First Boston has advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. Because Sunbeam did not plan to issue the warrants at the time the merger agreement was signed, Credit Suisse First Boston did not take the warrants into account when evaluating the fairness of the merger consideration.

Terms of Credit Suisse First Boston's Engagement. Under the letter agreement dated December 10, 1997 between Coleman and Credit Suisse First Boston, Coleman agreed to pay Credit Suisse First Boston for services rendered in connection with the merger a fee of about $4 million. Coleman also agreed to reimburse Credit Suisse First Boston for all reasonable out-of-pocket expenses, including the reasonable fees and expenses of its legal counsel and any other advisor retained by Credit Suisse First Boston, resulting from or arising out of the engagement. Coleman further agreed to indemnify Credit Suisse First Boston and related persons and entities for losses, claims, damages or liabilities (including related actions or proceedings) related to or arising out of, among other things, its engagement as Coleman's financial advisor.

In the past, Credit Suisse First Boston has performed investment banking services for Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes and their affiliates and has received customary fees for these services. In the ordinary course of its business, Credit Suisse First Boston and its affiliates may actively trade the debt and equity securities of Coleman, MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates and Sunbeam for their own accounts and for the accounts of customers and, accordingly, may at any time hold a long or short position in those securities.

Sunbeam's Financial Advisor. Morgan Stanley was retained by Sunbeam to assist in connection with a possible sale of Sunbeam, one or more possible acquisitions by Sunbeam and/or other strategic alternatives. As part of that engagement, Morgan Stanley acted as Sunbeam's financial advisor in connection with its acquisition of Coleman. Sunbeam retained Morgan Stanley based on its qualifications, expertise and reputation, as well as upon its prior investment banking relationships with Sunbeam and its familiarity with Sunbeam and its business.

On February 27, 1998, Morgan Stanley rendered to the Sunbeam board an oral opinion, which was later confirmed in writing, to the effect that, as of that date and based upon and subject to the matters described in the opinion, the cash and stock consideration payable in the M&F Transaction and under the merger agreement was fair from a financial point of view to Sunbeam. When Morgan Stanley was engaged by Sunbeam, they were not asked to render an updated opinion as of the date of this document and neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has requested that they do so. Moreover, Morgan Stanley has advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. Because Sunbeam did not plan to issue the warrants at the time the merger agreement was signed, Morgan Stanley did not take the warrants into account when evaluating the fairness to Sunbeam of the consideration payable in the merger. On the basis of Morgan Stanley's advice, the Sunbeam board has determined not to rely on the opinion of Morgan Stanley as a basis for its plans to complete the merger.

Terms of Morgan Stanley's Engagement. Under an amended engagement letter between Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley, Sunbeam agreed to pay Morgan Stanley (1) an exposure fee equal to 25% of the estimated transaction fee referred to below, payable upon execution of the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger agreement, and (2) a transaction fee equal to a percentage of the aggregate value of the consideration payable by Sunbeam in the M&F Transaction and the merger (including the amount of any debt assumed or repaid by Sunbeam), payable, as to the M&F Transaction, upon its completion and, as to the merger, upon its completion. For purposes of calculating the transaction fee, the value of the Sunbeam common stock issued in the M&F Transaction and the merger will be the average of the closing sale prices for the Sunbeam common stock for the ten trading days prior to the completion of the M&F Transaction and the merger, respectively. For its services to Sunbeam in connection with the Coleman acquisition, Morgan Stanley has received fees from Sunbeam totaling about $9.6 million. The amended engagement letter between Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley provides for the payment to Morgan Stanley of an additional transaction fee of $680,000 when the merger is completed, based on the average market price of Sunbeam common stock on the last trading day prior to the date of this document. Sunbeam's obligation to pay this additional transaction fee to Morgan Stanley will not be affected by the fact that Sunbeam is no longer entitled to rely on Morgan Stanley's fairness opinion. Sunbeam has also agreed to reimburse Morgan Stanley for its expenses, including fees and expenses of its counsel, and to indemnify Morgan Stanley and related parties against various liabilities and expenses, which may include liabilities under the federal securities laws, arising out of its engagement. Morgan Stanley also acted as an initial purchaser for the private placement of the Sunbeam debentures and an affiliate of Morgan Stanley is a lender under Sunbeam's bank credit facility. Morgan Stanley also advised Sunbeam in connection with its acquisitions of Signature Brands and First Alert.

Sunbeam's Reasons for Acquiring Coleman and Approval of the Sunbeam Board

Sunbeam's Reasons for Acquiring Coleman. While Sunbeam's current management does not know all the reasons why prior management agreed to acquire Coleman, Sunbeam's current management believes that the following reasons were provided by prior management to the then Sunbeam board.

As part of its 1997 review of strategic alternatives, Sunbeam's then management team concluded that it was unlikely that Sunbeam could be sold at a price or on terms that would be acceptable to Sunbeam. Sunbeam shifted its strategic focus to identify underperforming companies with strong brand names that Sunbeam could acquire. Sunbeam's former management intended to capitalize on its perceived capability in cost containment and operational improvement by acquiring one or more of these companies and their premier brand names, thereby broadening the Sunbeam product offering spectrum and presenting opportunities to eliminate redundant or inefficient operations.

Sunbeam acquired its current interest in Coleman and agreed to acquire the remaining equity interest in Coleman primarily due to Coleman's strong and established brand names, the potential opportunity to streamline operations, the diversification these brand names provide to Sunbeam's product base and the potential for revenue and operational benefits associated with a combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. In addition, Sunbeam believed that its existing international geographic marketing and distribution strengths and those of Coleman would significantly complement each other. Sunbeam's former management believed that the acquisition of Coleman would give Sunbeam a platform from which to capitalize on the fragmentation and potential consolidation of the durable household consumer products sector.

Approval of the Sunbeam Board. In February 1998, the then Sunbeam board approved the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger agreement and determined that the terms of the agreements were fair to Sunbeam's stockholders. The then Sunbeam board identified and considered a variety of positive factors in its deliberations concerning the merger, including, but not limited to, the following:

- the opinion of Sunbeam's financial advisor, Morgan Stanley, to the effect that the consideration to be paid by Sunbeam for Coleman was fair to Sunbeam from a financial point of view; Morgan Stanley has since advised Sunbeam that its opinion, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam;
- the terms of the agreements, including the fact that the exchange ratio of Sunbeam common stock for Coleman common stock would not change even in the event of a decrease in the market price of the Sunbeam common stock;
- the then Sunbeam board's belief that the then per share premium of about 44.2% implied by the then current value of the consideration compared to the then market price per share of Coleman common stock was reasonable in light of other comparable transactions involving companies in the consumer products and sporting goods industries;
- the belief of Sunbeam's prior management that Coleman presented unrealized potential which could be exploited once Coleman's operations were added to those of Sunbeam;
- the anticipated operational efficiencies and revenue benefits associated with the acquisition of Coleman's product lines; and
- the belief of Sunbeam's prior management that Coleman's operations could be streamlined to enhance efficiency.

In addition, the Sunbeam board identified and considered a variety of potentially negative factors, including the following:

- the possibility that the operational and revenue benefits expected to be realized as result of the transaction might not be fully realized;
- the difficulties associated with integrating Coleman's operations with those of Sunbeam and managing the combined enterprise;
- the fact that the M&F Transaction was subject to customary closing conditions and, therefore, was subject to the risk that the M&F Transaction and the merger would not be completed; the Sunbeam board considered that non-consummation could negatively affect the market price of the Sunbeam common stock and the financial community's perception of the stability and future prospects of Sunbeam;
- the significant expenses Sunbeam would be required to incur in order to complete the M&F Transaction and the merger, including costs of integrating the businesses of Coleman and Sunbeam, fees of Sunbeam's legal and financial advisors and the expenditure of corporate resources in support of the transaction generally;
- the risks associated with managing a highly leveraged business; and

- the risks associated with managing operations at different locations.

The Sunbeam board believed, however, that the foregoing negative factors were outweighed by the projected benefits of the transactions.

Purposes and Effects of the Merger

The purpose of the merger is to enable Sunbeam to acquire the entire equity interest in Coleman. In the M&F Transaction, which was completed on March 30, 1998, Sunbeam acquired indirectly about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock. Sunbeam's ownership interest in Coleman was immediately thereafter reduced to about 79% as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options immediately following the M&F Transaction. As a result of the merger, Sunbeam will acquire the remaining equity interest in Coleman, and Coleman will become an indirect, wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam.

In addition, under the April 15, 1999 amendment to Sunbeam's bank credit facility, it is an event of default under the bank credit facility:

- if Sunbeam fails to have the SEC declare this document effective by October 30, 1999 (which was subsequently amended to January 10, 2000)
- if Sunbeam fails to complete the merger within 25 business days after this document is declared effective by the SEC, or
- if Sunbeam has to pay more than $87.5 million in cash to complete the merger including any amounts paid with respect to appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses.

If an event of default were to occur, a default would also occur under the Coleman note payable to Sunbeam and, among other things, the lenders under Sunbeam's credit agreement would be entitled to foreclose on the Coleman note and the Coleman assets pledged under the Coleman note. The Coleman note, by its terms, will not be affected by the merger and will remain outstanding. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN SUNBEAM AND COLEMAN AND ITS AFFILIATES—Financial Transactions Between Coleman and Sunbeam."

The interest rate margins on Sunbeam's bank credit facility increased to 3.50% for LIBOR loans and 2.25% for base rate loans on September 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date and increased to 4.00% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans on October 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date. The interest rate margins will be decreased to 3.00% for LIBOR loans and 1.75% for base rate loans upon consummation of the merger and the effectiveness of the pledge of substantially all of Coleman's and its domestic subsidiaries' assets to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility.

Coleman and Sunbeam adopted a two-step acquisition structure for several reasons, including to enable Sunbeam to acquire control of Coleman as quickly as possible. Alternative transaction structures were considered by Sunbeam and Coleman, including a one-step merger without first completing the M&F Transaction and a direct purchase by Sunbeam of Coleman Worldwide's equity interest in Coleman prior to completion of the merger. MacAndrews & Forbes rejected these transaction structures. The parties agreed that the final transaction would be structured as a merger of CLN Holdings and a wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary, followed by a second-step merger of another wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary with Coleman. See "Background of the Merger."

Sunbeam also considered paying alternative types of consideration to Coleman stockholders. Sunbeam initially proposed consideration consisting exclusively of Sunbeam common stock. Sunbeam's prior management believed that the use of Sunbeam common stock as consideration would enhance stockholder value by allowing Sunbeam to capitalize on the then recent rise in Sunbeam's stock price. This consideration, however, was rejected by MacAndrews & Forbes. Other types of consideration were also briefly discussed, including the use of Sunbeam preferred stock instead of the cash portion of the merger consideration. This type of consideration was not seriously considered by the parties.

As a result of the merger, the minority stockholders of Coleman:

- will cease to hold any direct equity interest in Coleman,
- will no longer directly share in the profits and losses of Coleman, but will indirectly share in such profits and losses as stockholders of Sunbeam.
- will not be entitled to receive dividends or other distributions, if any, declared and paid by Coleman, and
- will not be entitled to vote or otherwise participate in the corporate governance of Coleman, except through their ability to vote and participate in the corporate governance of Sunbeam through their ownership of Sunbeam common stock.

As a result of the M&F Transaction and the merger, Sunbeam will have the entire indirect interest in the net book value and net earnings of Coleman. Sunbeam will also be entitled to all benefits resulting from that interest, including all income generated by Coleman's operations, any future increase in Coleman's value and the right to elect all members of the Coleman board of directors. Similarly, Sunbeam will bear the entire risk of losses generated by Coleman's operations and any decrease in the value of Coleman after the merger. The minority stockholders of Coleman will have only an indirect interest in the net book value and net earnings of Coleman and future increases, if any, in the value of Coleman through their holdings of Sunbeam common stock to be received in the merger and upon any exercise of the warrants.

Upon completion of the merger, there will no longer be any publicly held shares of Coleman common stock and the Coleman common stock will be delisted from the NYSE, the Pacific Stock Exchange and the Chicago Stock Exchange and deregistered under the Exchange Act.

The tax consequences of the merger are subject to a number of qualifications, as discussed below under the caption "UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS."

Sunbeam's Plans and Proposals for Coleman

On May 11, 1998, Sunbeam's former management announced its plans to commence a restructuring intended to integrate Sunbeam's operations with those of Coleman, First Alert and Signature Brands. The planned restructuring was also intended to centralize the operations of the four companies, close or divest some of Sunbeam's plants and reduce Sunbeam's workforce. Following the changes in Sunbeam's management that were announced in June 1998, plans for the proposed restructuring were postponed pending further review of Sunbeam's organizational structure. On August 24, 1998, Sunbeam's new management announced a revised organizational structure which provided for some plant closings and reductions in workforce, but eliminated the previously announced centralization of Sunbeam's operations.

Upon completion of the M&F Transaction, which occurred on March 30, 1998, all of the members of the Coleman board resigned, the number of directors constituting the Coleman board of directors was fixed at five, and five designees of Sunbeam were elected as directors of Coleman. In addition, Sunbeam designees were appointed to senior management positions at Coleman. Subsequently, as a result of changes in Sunbeam's management and board of directors, Jerry W. Levin, the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was reelected to the Coleman board. In addition, Paul E. Shapiro, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board of directors. The other members of the Coleman board of directors resigned or were removed by Sunbeam. In April 1999, the size of the Coleman board of directors was fixed at three members and A. Whitman Marchand, who is not affiliated with either Sunbeam or Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board of directors. In July 1999, the size of the Coleman board was fixed at four and John H. Klein, an outside director of Sunbeam, was elected to the Coleman board. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board" and "—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction" and "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Appointments of Former Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes Officers to Sunbeam's Management and Board" and "—Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes."

Following the completion of the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam prepaid substantially all of the $1,016 million aggregate outstanding indebtedness of Coleman, Coleman Worldwide, CLN Holdings and certain of Coleman's subsidiaries with a portion of the net proceeds from the offering of the debentures and borrowings under Sunbeam's bank credit facility. See "SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION."

Position of Sunbeam and Coleman on the Fairness of the Merger and the Settlement

Sunbeam's interest is to complete the merger as soon as possible on terms beneficial to Sunbeam, and Coleman is controlled by Sunbeam. Therefore, the Coleman minority stockholders should not necessarily rely on any views of Sunbeam or Coleman regarding the fairness of the merger.

The original February 1998 merger agreement, which provided for consideration of $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock, was negotiated at arms'-length between parties that were unaffiliated at the time; was unanimously approved by the then Coleman board; and was approved by written consent of Coleman's then majority stockholder. These approvals constituted all the approvals required by Delaware law in connection with the merger. Following these approvals and the completion of the M&F Transaction, the merger agreement by its terms could not be amended or terminated, and the only unfulfilled condition to the merger was the effectiveness with the SEC of this document.

Thereafter, major adverse developments affecting Sunbeam caused a substantial decrease in the market value of Sunbeam's stock and, therefore, the value of the consideration to be paid to the Coleman minority stockholders under the merger agreement. The Coleman minority stockholders instituted litigation in the Delaware Court of Chancery claiming that the consideration payable to them under the merger agreement was inadequate. In October 1998, the litigation claims of the Coleman minority stockholders were settled in arms'-length negotiations between counsel to plaintiffs and counsel to Sunbeam. The settlement, which was approved by the Court on November 12, 1999, effectively increased the consideration payable to the Coleman minority stockholders in connection with the merger by providing them with warrants, each entitling them to purchase one Sunbeam share at $7 per share, at the rate of 0.381 of a warrant for each Coleman share (after deducting the warrants to be issued to counsel for the Coleman minority stockholders as their legal fees), in addition to their receiving $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a Sunbeam share for each Coleman share, upon completion of the merger.

Sunbeam and Coleman believe that the transaction consisting of the merger and the settlement is substantively fair to the Coleman minority stockholders, and that the process which arrived at the transaction was procedurally fair to them. This belief is based solely on the following considerations:

- (1) The merger agreement was negotiated at arms'-length between parties that were unaffiliated at the time—Sunbeam, on the one hand, and, on the other hand, Coleman and its then 81% stockholder, MacAndrews & Forbes.
- (2) The merger agreement provides that it cannot be amended (whether to change the merger consideration, to add conditions to the merger or otherwise) or terminated.
- (3) The settlement of the litigation claims of the Coleman minority stockholders was negotiated at arms'-length between parties that were and are unaffiliated—counsel to Sunbeam and counsel to the Coleman minority stockholders.
- (4) The settlement was approved by the Delaware Court of Chancery on November 12, 1999 as being fair, reasonable and in the best interests of the Coleman minority stockholders after a hearing on September 29, 1999 at which all Coleman minority stockholders had an opportunity to be heard and only one stockholder objected to the settlement.
- (5) Notwithstanding the settlement, any Coleman minority stockholder who objects to the terms of the merger agreement and settlement can pursue his Delaware law appraisal rights and seek payment in cash of the judicially determined fair value of his Coleman shares.

In transactions such as the merger, the SEC has stated that certain factors normally are considered to be important when reaching a determination regarding the fairness of the proposed transaction to unaffiliated security holders. However, for the reasons set forth below, Sunbeam and Coleman believe that none of these factors is relevant to an evaluation of the fairness of the consideration payable to Coleman minority stockholders under the merger agreement and in the settlement:

- Current Market Prices. The trading price of Coleman common stock has been linked to the trading price of Sunbeam common stock since the execution of the merger agreement and the announcement of the merger in February 1998. Therefore, the Coleman common stock has no market value independent of its relationship to the Sunbeam common stock and the value of the consideration payable under the merger agreement and in the settlement;
- Historical Market Prices. The trading price of Coleman common stock has been linked to the trading price of Sunbeam common stock since the execution of the merger agreement and the announcement of the merger in February 1998. Sunbeam and Coleman do not believe that market prices prior to February 1998—more than 20 months ago—provide any indication of the current value of Sunbeam or Coleman;
- Net Book Value. Sunbeam and Coleman believe that net book value is not a true indication of the value of Sunbeam or the value of Coleman on a stand-alone basis;
- Prior Coleman Common Stock Repurchases. Coleman has not repurchased any of its common stock since March 1996 and Sunbeam and Coleman do not believe that the prices paid in connection with any such transactions more than three and one half years ago provide any indication of the current value of Coleman;
- Going Concern Value; Liquidation Value. Any current estimate of the going concern value or liquidation value of Sunbeam or Coleman would require a detailed financial analysis by an appraiser, financial advisor or other outside party. No such analysis was requested or obtained and it was considered impractical to request or obtain such an analysis;
- Reports, Opinions or Appraisals. Coleman's financial advisor, Credit Suisse First Boston, has advised Sunbeam that its February 1998 opinion regarding the fairness to the Coleman minority stockholders from a financial point of view of the consideration payable under the merger agreement, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. Moreover, Sunbeam's financial advisor, Morgan Stanley, has advised Sunbeam that its February 1998 opinion regarding the fairness to Sunbeam from a financial point of view of the consideration payable under the merger agreement, although correct when given, should no longer be relied upon because of subsequent negative developments affecting Sunbeam. No other report, opinion or appraisal was requested or obtained by Sunbeam or Coleman in connection with the merger or the settlement and it was considered impractical to request or obtain any such report, opinion or appraisal; and
- Offers or Proposals by Unaffiliated Persons. During the past 18 months, neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has received any offer or proposal from an unaffiliated person regarding a merger or consolidation involving, or the acquisition of all or any substantial part of the assets of, or the acquisition of securities conferring control of, Sunbeam or Coleman.

Sunbeam and Coleman have not performed, and (as stated above) have not requested or obtained from any financial advisor or other outside expert, any current valuation of Coleman or the minority stockholders' interest in Coleman based on any of the analyses typically employed in such a valuation (such as a comparable company or comparable transaction analysis or an analysis of the discounted present value of projected future cash flows and terminal values). Nor have they performed, or requested or obtained, any current valuation of the warrants which are part of the consideration to be paid to the Coleman minority stockholders upon completion of the merger.

The Delaware Court of Chancery, in its November 12, 1999 opinion approving the settlement, accepted a September 1999 valuation of the warrants by plaintiffs' expert based on the Black-Scholes option-pricing model of $2.475 per warrant. Based on such valuation (which may no longer be applicable because it assumed a $6.00 per share Sunbeam stock price), and assuming a market price of $4.75 per Sunbeam share (the NYSE closing price on December 3, 1999), the consideration to be received by the Coleman minority stockholders upon completion of the merger would have a value of approximately $10.08 per Coleman share ($6.44 in cash, $2.70 in Sunbeam stock and $0.94 in Sunbeam warrants). However, Sunbeam and Coleman cannot and will not try to predict the prices at which the Sunbeam shares and warrants will trade upon completion of the merger, or whether an active trading market for the warrants will develop.

Because the merger agreement was approved by all action of the Coleman board and stockholders required under Delaware law and by its terms cannot be amended, Sunbeam and Coleman have not considered amending the merger agreement to add procedural safeguards as conditions to the merger, such as a condition that the merger be approved by a majority of Coleman's minority stockholders or by independent Coleman directors or a condition requiring a favorable opinion of a financial advisor on the fairness of the consideration to be received by stockholders upon completion of the merger. Instead, Sunbeam and Coleman decided to settle the claims of the Coleman minority stockholders challenging the fairness of the consideration provided under the merger agreement through arms'-length negotiations with their litigation counsel on terms that the Delaware Court of Chancery would approve as being fair to the Coleman minority stockholders. Notwithstanding the absence of the procedural safeguards discussed in the first sentence of this paragraph, based solely on the factors listed under items (1) through (5) above, Sunbeam and Coleman believe that the transaction consisting of the merger and the settlement is procedurally fair to the Coleman minority stockholders.

Camper Acquisition Corp. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam which was formed solely for the purpose of acting as an acquisition vehicle in connection with the merger. Camper Acquisition Corp expressly adopts the foregoing statements of Sunbeam.

The description of the merger and the merger agreement contained in this document does not purport to be complete and is qualified in its entirety by reference to the merger agreement, a copy of which is attached as Annex I at the back of this document and is incorporated in this document by reference.

General

The merger will become effective when a certificate of merger is filed with the Secretary of State of the State of Delaware. It is currently anticipated that the certificate of merger will be filed, and the merger will become effective, on or about January 6, 2000, which is the twenty-first business day following the date on which this document was first mailed to you.

Prior to the completion of the merger, the outstanding capital stock of Camper Acquisition Corp., all of which is currently owned directly by Sunbeam, will be contributed to Coleman Worldwide Corporation. In the merger, Camper Acquisition Corp., which will then be directly owned by Coleman Worldwide Corporation, will be merged into Coleman, which is currently 80.01% directly owned by Coleman Worldwide Corporation.

Interests of Certain Persons in the Merger

In considering the approval of the merger by the former Coleman board of directors, you should be aware that a number of persons, including current and former directors and executive officers of Coleman, have interests in the merger that are different from or in addition to yours, as described below.

Coleman Options. Under the merger agreement, after the completion of the M&F Transaction, which occurred on March 30, 1998, all of the then outstanding options to purchase shares of Coleman common stock under Coleman's stock option plans became fully vested and exercisable. During the period between the completion of the M&F Transaction and the completion of the merger, Sunbeam is obligated, under the merger agreement, to cause Coleman to maintain a broker-dealer cashless exercise procedure for the exercise of the Coleman stock options. Upon the completion of the merger, each outstanding Coleman stock option that has not been exercised will be cancelled and each holder of an unexercised Coleman stock option will be paid an amount in cash equal to the product of (1) the total number of shares of Coleman common stock subject to the Coleman stock option, multiplied by (2) the excess of $27.50 over the exercise price per share of Coleman common stock subject to the Coleman stock option, less any applicable withholding taxes.

Immediately after the completion of the M&F Transaction, two current executive officers of Sunbeam and Coleman exercised options that vested as a result of the M&F Transaction. Jerry W. Levin, the then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Coleman and the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, exercised 500,000 Coleman stock options at per share exercise prices ranging from $12.25 to $14.00 and Mr. Levin received net proceeds upon the sale of such shares of about $9.94 million. Bobby G. Jenkins, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam and Executive Vice President of Coleman, exercised 20,000 Coleman stock options at per share exercise prices ranging from $16.125 to $16.434 and Mr. Jenkins received net proceeds upon the sale of such shares of about $288,360.

Ronald O. Perelman, the sole stockholder of MacAndrews & Forbes and a member of the Coleman board at the time the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger agreement were executed, holds 500,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $14.00 per share. Paul E. Shapiro, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman and a director of Coleman, holds 62,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share and 15,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 per share. Karen K. Clark, the current Senior Vice President, Finance of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President, Finance of Coleman, holds 10,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share and 15,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 per share. Steven R. Isko, the current Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman, holds 10,000 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $17.062 per share, 7,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $16.125 and 2,500 Coleman stock options with an exercise price of $12.937 per share. Upon completion of the merger, in settlement of their Coleman stock options, Messrs. Perelman, Shapiro and Isko and Ms. Clark will receive cash payments of $6,750,000, $823,000, $226,009 and $275,005 respectively.

Severance Arrangements. The M&F Transaction constituted a "change in control" of Coleman under the terms of some Coleman employee benefit plans and various employment, severance, termination, consulting and retirement agreements to which Coleman was a party. As a result, at the effective time of the M&F Transaction, Coleman became obligated to pay all amounts provided under those plans and agreements as a result of the change in control. Under the merger agreement, Sunbeam agreed that after completion of the M&F Transaction it would honor, and cause Coleman to honor, all employment, severance, termination, consulting and retirement agreements to which Coleman was a party on that date. Accordingly, all rights and obligations of Coleman under these agreements have become rights and obligations of Sunbeam and except as noted below with respect to the former employment agreements between Coleman and Messrs. Levin and Shapiro, Sunbeam has agreed to cause Coleman to pay all amounts provided under these employee benefit plans and agreements as a result of the change in control of Coleman in accordance with their respective terms and to honor, and to cause Coleman to honor, all rights, privileges and modifications to or with respect to any such employee benefit plans of Coleman or agreements which become effective as a result of the change in control. However, neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has any responsibility for Coleman's obligations under the former employment agreements between Coleman and Jerry W. Levin, Coleman's then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, and Paul E. Shapiro, Coleman's then Executive Vice President and General Counsel, except, in the case of Mr. Levin, for an incentive payment in the amount of $1.5 million due from Coleman (and subsequently paid) related to the sale of Coleman Safety & Security Products, Inc. to an unrelated third party, which transaction was pending at the time the merger agreement was signed. The former employment agreements with Messrs. Levin and Shapiro were terminated upon completion of the M&F Transaction.

In connection with the change in control resulting from the completion of the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam has paid, or has caused Coleman to pay or recognize as payable, a total of $7,903,765 in severance compensation and related benefits for approximately 117 former Coleman employees. Of that amount, $7,597,936 was in respect of base salary and related benefits, and $305,829 was in respect of extra pension credits. In addition, Coleman paid $454,277 for management incentive bonuses to 37 former Coleman employees. The only principal executive officer of Coleman to receive severance compensation from Coleman as a result of the change in control was Joseph Page, the former Chief Financial Officer of Coleman, who received severance payments totaling $280,000. Bobby G. Jenkins, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam and Executive Vice President of Coleman, received severance payments totaling $18,583 as a result of his resignation from Coleman following the M&F Transaction, and prior to his being rehired by both Sunbeam and Coleman in the capacities mentioned above. Steven R. Isko, the current Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Sunbeam and Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Coleman, received severance payments totaling $185,634 as a result of his resignation from Coleman following the M&F Transaction, and prior to his being rehired by both Sunbeam and Coleman in the capacities mentioned above.

Indemnification. The merger agreement provides that all rights to indemnification existing in favor of any director or officer of Coleman in office at or prior to the completion of the merger, as provided in Coleman's Certificate of Incorporation, Coleman's By-laws, as amended, or indemnification agreements in effect as of February 27, 1998, will survive the merger and continue in full force and effect for a period of six years after the effective time of the merger (and during the period from the completion of the M&F Transaction to the completion of the merger), to the extent these rights are consistent with Delaware law. In addition, Sunbeam agreed that, from and after the completion of the M&F Transaction and for a period of six years following the completion of the merger, Sunbeam or Coleman, as the surviving corporation in the merger, will cause to be maintained a liability insurance policy for the benefit of Coleman's former directors and officers providing coverage substantially similar to the policies in effect as of February 27, 1998. Neither Sunbeam nor Coleman will be required to pay an annual premium for such insurance in excess of 200% of the last annual premium paid by Coleman prior to the date of the merger agreement, but in such case will purchase as much coverage as possible for such amount. See "THE MERGER—Continuation of Existing Indemnification Rights."

Registration Rights Agreement. The shares of Sunbeam common stock issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary from which Sunbeam acquired indirectly about 81% of the then outstanding Coleman common stock in the M&F Transaction were not registered under federal or state securities laws. Accordingly, in connection with the completion of the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam entered into a registration rights agreement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, permitting the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary and other affiliates of Coleman to require Sunbeam to register their shares of Sunbeam common stock under federal and applicable state securities laws. The registration rights agreement was subsequently amended in August 1998 to provide that the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary can also require Sunbeam to register the warrant and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in connection with the settlement of legal claims related to the M&F Transaction. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—Registration Rights Agreement."

Conversion of Coleman Common Stock

Upon completion of the merger, each outstanding share of Coleman common stock—other than shares held indirectly by Sunbeam and shares, if any, with respect to which Delaware appraisal rights are sought and perfected—will no longer be outstanding and will automatically be cancelled. After completion of the merger, you will no longer have any rights under the certificate representing your shares of Coleman common stock, except the right to receive $6.44 in cash and 0.5677 of a share of Sunbeam common stock for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed, a cash payment equal to the value of any fractional shares of Sunbeam common stock you would otherwise be entitled to receive upon surrender of the certificate, and warrants entitling you to purchase one share of Sunbeam common stock at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003 to be issued under the recent settlement of litigation relating to the merger. Under the terms of the settlement, you will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed, assuming no further increase in the number of outstanding shares of Coleman common stock prior to the completion of the merger as a result of further exercises of Coleman employee stock options. The number of warrants you will receive will be rounded up or down to the nearest whole number to avoid the issuance of fractional warrants. See "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS."

Upon completion of the merger, all shares of Coleman common stock held indirectly by Sunbeam through Coleman Worldwide will remain outstanding and unchanged as a result of the merger. Each share of Coleman common stock, if any, held in the treasury of Coleman, by any subsidiary of Coleman, by Sunbeam or by any subsidiary of Sunbeam (other than Coleman Worldwide) immediately prior to the completion of the merger will be automatically cancelled. In addition, upon completion of the merger, each outstanding share of common stock of Camper Acquisition Corp., the wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam that will be merged with Coleman in the merger, will be automatically cancelled.

Exchange of Coleman Common Stock

The exchange of the shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed will occur as follows:

- upon completion of the merger, Sunbeam will deposit, with an exchange agent selected by Sunbeam, (1) certificates for the shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued to you in the merger; (2) cash sufficient to pay the cash portion of the merger consideration and any fractional share payments you are entitled to receive; and (3) warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock at a cash price of $7 per share to which you are entitled under the court-approved settlement of litigation relating to the merger;
- as soon as reasonably practicable after the completion of the merger, Sunbeam will cause the exchange agent to mail a letter of transmittal and exchange instructions to you;

- upon surrender of your Coleman common stock certificate(s) for cancellation to the exchange agent, together with a properly completed and duly executed letter of transmittal, you will receive, in exchange for your Coleman certificate(s), (1) a certificate for the shares of Sunbeam common stock you are entitled to receive in the merger, (2) a cash payment in respect of the cash portion of the merger consideration, after giving effect to any required withholding tax, and any fractional share payment you are entitled to receive, and (3) warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock at a cash price of $7 per share to which you are entitled under the court-approved litigation settlement relating to the merger based on the number of shares of Coleman common stock you own when the merger is completed; your certificate(s) will then be cancelled;
- until you surrender your Coleman stock certificates, you will not be entitled to vote the shares of Sunbeam common stock you are entitled to receive in the merger or receive any dividends or distributions with a record date after the completion of the merger with respect to such Sunbeam common stock, although any such dividends or distributions will accrue and be payable to you, without interest, upon surrender of your certificate(s); it should be noted, however, that Sunbeam does not pay, and is prohibited from paying under the bank credit facility, cash dividends;
- any merger consideration and warrants that remain undistributed for six months after the completion of the merger will be delivered to Sunbeam, upon demand, and any holders of unsurrendered Coleman common stock certificates may thereafter look only to Sunbeam, as general creditors, for payment of the merger consideration and warrants. In no event will Sunbeam, Coleman or the exchange agent be liable to any holder of unsurrendered certificates for any merger consideration or warrants that are delivered to a public official under applicable escheat laws; and
- upon completion of the merger, the stock transfer books of Coleman will be closed and no further transfer of shares of Coleman common stock will be made; if, after the completion of the merger, Coleman common stock certificates are presented to Coleman, they will be cancelled and exchanged for the merger consideration and warrants.

You should not forward your certificates to the exchange agent until you receive a letter of transmittal and exchange instructions.

No Fractional Shares or Warrants

No fractional shares of Sunbeam common stock or warrants will be issued to you, and no dividend, stock split or other change in the capital structure of Sunbeam will relate to any fractional shares. Any Coleman stockholder who would otherwise be entitled to fractional shares will not be entitled to vote or to exercise any rights of a security holder with respect to such fractional shares.

Instead of any fractional shares of Sunbeam common stock, each Coleman stockholder who would otherwise be entitled to a fraction of a share of Sunbeam common stock will be paid cash, without interest, in an amount equal to the fraction of a share of Sunbeam common stock to which such stockholder would otherwise be entitled, multiplied by the closing sale price of one share of Sunbeam common stock on the NYSE Composite Transactions Tape on the day of the completion of the merger, or, if shares of Sunbeam common stock are not so traded on that day, the closing sale price on the next preceding day on which the shares were traded on the NYSE. Shares of Coleman common stock of any holder represented by two or more certificates will be aggregated, and in no event will any holder of Coleman common stock be paid an amount of cash for fractional shares in respect of one or more than one share of Sunbeam common stock.

Instead of any fractional warrants, each Coleman stockholder who would otherwise be entitled to a fraction of a warrant will receive a number of whole warrants determined by rounding up or down to the nearest whole number.

Conditions

Under the terms of the merger agreement, the completion of the merger was subject to the following conditions: (1) this document had to be declared effective by the SEC, (2) the shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued by Sunbeam in the merger had to be listed for trading on the NYSE, and (3) the M&F

Transaction had to be completed. All of these conditions have already been satisfied. Therefore, assuming that no court order is entered which prevents the merger from being completed, the merger will be completed on or about January 6, 2000, which is the twenty-first business day following the date on which this document was first mailed to you.

Governmental And Regulatory Approvals

Completion of the M&F Transaction was conditioned on the expiration or termination of the applicable waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, as amended. On March 4, 1998, Sunbeam and Ronald O. Perelman, as the then ultimate parent of Coleman, filed notifications and report forms under the HSR Act with the Federal Trade Commission and the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger. The applicable waiting period under the HSR Act was terminated on March 27, 1998. However, notwithstanding the termination of the waiting period under the HSR Act, the FTC, the Antitrust Division, a state or a private person or entity could seek under federal or state antitrust laws, among other things, to enjoin or rescind the M&F Transaction or the merger. Although Sunbeam and Coleman believe that the M&F Transaction and the merger do not violate United States antitrust laws, there can be no assurance that if such a challenge is made, it would not be successful.

In addition to the filings under the HSR Act, Sunbeam and Coleman filed a pre-merger notification form with the German Federal Cartel Office relating to the M&F Transaction and the merger, which was approved by the Federal Cartel Office on March 20, 1998. Neither Sunbeam nor Coleman is aware of any other material approval or other action by any governmental, administrative or regulatory agency or authority, domestic or foreign, that would be required in order to complete the merger.

Employee Matters

Sunbeam agreed that, from and after the completion of the M&F Transaction, it would honor, and cause Coleman to honor, all employment, severance, termination, consulting and retirement agreements to which Coleman was a party on that date. Accordingly, all rights and obligations of Coleman under these agreements became rights and obligations of Sunbeam. However, neither Sunbeam nor Coleman has any responsibility for Coleman's obligations under the former employment agreements between Coleman and Jerry W. Levin, Coleman's then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, and Paul E. Shapiro, Coleman's then Executive Vice President and General Counsel, except in the case of Mr. Levin for an incentive payment in the amount of $1.5 million due from Coleman (and subsequently paid) related to the sale of Coleman Safety & Security Products, Inc. to an unrelated third party, which transaction was pending at the time the merger agreement was signed. The former employment agreements with Messrs. Levin and Shapiro were terminated upon completion of the M&F Transaction. Sunbeam agreed to cause Coleman to allow Coleman employees to participate in Sunbeam employee benefit plans, from and after the completion of the M&F Transaction, on substantially the same basis as similarly situated Sunbeam employees. With respect to welfare benefit plans, Sunbeam also agreed to waive any pre-existing condition limitations and give effect, in determining any deductible and maximum out-of-pocket limitations, to claims incurred and amounts paid by, and reimbursed to, those employees with respect to similar plans maintained by Coleman. Sunbeam has, or has caused Coleman to, give Coleman employees full credit for purposes of eligibility and vesting of benefits and benefit accrual for service with Coleman and its affiliates prior to the completion of the M&F Transaction under each employee benefit plan, so long as such crediting of service did not result in duplication of benefits. See "—Interests of Certain Persons in the Merger."

The M&F Transaction constituted a "change in control" of Coleman under some Coleman employee benefit plans and employment, severance, termination, consulting and retirement agreements. Except as noted above with respect to the employment agreements of Messrs. Levin and Shapiro, Sunbeam agreed to cause Coleman to pay all amounts provided under these employee benefit plans and agreements as a result of the change in control of Coleman in accordance with their respective terms and to honor, and to cause Coleman to honor, all rights, privileges and modifications to or with respect to any such employee benefit plans of Coleman or agreements which became effective as a result of the change in control. See "—Interests of Certain Persons in the Merger."

Sunbeam caused Coleman to continue Coleman's Annual Incentive Plan for Management Employees for the remainder of 1998, and participants in the Management Incentive Plan were not eligible to participate in Sunbeam's incentive plan in respect of 1998. Under the terms of the Management Incentive Plan, participants were eligible for cash bonuses payable upon the attainment of certain performance goals, which performance goals were determined by reference to (1) earnings before interest, taxes and amortization, (2) operating working capital per sales dollar and (3) other quantitative goals as approved from time to time. Cash bonuses paid were equal to a percentage of a participant's base salary, depending on the percentage of the target attained by Coleman. Coleman paid a total of about $2.9 million to participants in the Management Incentive Plan with respect to 1998. Eligible participants include select employees of Coleman and its subsidiaries who are (1) designated to participate by the Chief Executive Officer of Coleman, (2) are employed prior to the start of the last fiscal quarter in the plan year and (3) are not participants in another short-term incentive program of Coleman.

Sunbeam will honor, and will cause Coleman to honor, Coleman's Executive Severance Policy without any amendments adverse to participants. The Coleman Executive Severance Policy applies to certain terminations of employment of employees of Coleman and its subsidiaries who are participants in Coleman's Management Incentive Plan or who are in the position of country general manager/president and above. Participation in the Executive Severance Policy is limited to those participants in the Management Incentive Plan described above. Benefits are payable to a participant in the event of a termination of the participant's employment by Coleman within three years following the M&F Transaction other than for Cause (as defined in the Executive Severance Policy) or by the participant with Good Reason (as defined in the Executive Severance Policy). The benefits payable under the Executive Severance Policy generally include the following:

- salary continuation for twelve, nine or six months, depending on the participant's level of participation in the Management Incentive Plan;
- medical and/or dental coverage under COBRA until the end of the severance period at the same contribution level in effect for active participants, with Coleman paying the portion of the premiums it was paying for such participant prior to the M&F Transaction;
- in the event of a termination prior to December 31, 1998, a pro rata payment under the Management Incentive Plan through the date of such termination;
- a lump sum cash payment in an amount equal to the aggregate benefit that the participant would have accrued had he or she remained employed during the severance period under Coleman's qualified defined benefit retirement plans and its excess or supplemental defined benefit retirement plans, less any actual vested benefit of the participant under such plans;
- a lump sum payment in an amount equal to the value of the participant's accrued vacation, determined in accordance with Coleman's vacation policy; and
- an additional payment to hold the participant harmless from the excise taxes imposed by sections 280G and 4999 of the tax code, if the severance payments and benefits payable under the Executive Severance Policy exceed certain minimum thresholds.

In addition, any participant who was a party to an employment contract or other written agreement with Coleman was entitled to choose between the severance benefits, if any, payable under such contract and the severance benefits payable under the Executive Severance Policy.

Since the ninety-first day following completion of the M&F Transaction, some of the participants in the Executive Severance Policy have been entitled to voluntarily terminate their employment with Coleman and to have such termination deemed to be for Good Reason under the Executive Severance Policy, as a result of the completion of the M&F Transaction.

Since the date of the M&F Transaction, Coleman has paid or become obligated to pay about $4.2 million to participants under the Executive Severance Policy.

For the benefit of those employees of Coleman who were not participants in the Executive Severance Policy and who did not have employment agreements with Coleman, Sunbeam provided severance benefits under Sunbeam's Severance Pay Plan on substantially the same basis as similarly situated Sunbeam employees. To date, Sunbeam has made aggregate payments of about $470,000 to former Coleman employees under the Sunbeam Severance Pay Plan. Under the terms of the Severance Pay Plan, a participant who is a Coleman employee and whose employment is terminated as the direct result of the closure of a facility or the elimination of the participant's position will be entitled to receive the following severance benefits:

- a lump sum cash payment in an amount equal to (1) six months', three months' or six weeks' base pay, depending on the number of years of service, in the case of an exempt employee or (2) one week of base pay for each completed year of service, in the case of a non-exempt employee; and
- health coverage under COBRA until the end of the severance pay period at the same contribution level in effect for active participants, with Sunbeam paying the same portion of the premiums that it would pay for active participants.

Continuation of Existing Indemnification Rights

For a period of six years after the completion of the merger, and during the period between the completion of the M&F Transaction and the completion of the merger, Sunbeam agreed to indemnify directors and officers of Coleman in office at or prior to the completion of the merger in connection with any threatened or actual legal proceeding to the fullest extent allowed by Delaware law, the Coleman Certificate of Incorporation, the Coleman By-laws and any indemnification agreement in effect at the date of the merger agreement, including any provisions relating to advancement of expenses. This indemnification does not, however, extend to any legal proceeding initiated against Coleman by an indemnified person unless the proceeding was (1) authorized by the Coleman board of directors or (2) brought by an indemnified person to enforce his or her right to indemnification under the merger agreement. In addition, the right to indemnification under the merger agreement extends only to legal proceedings arising from:

- the fact that the indemnified person was a director or officer of Coleman or was serving at the request of Coleman as a director, officer, employee or agent of another entity, or
- the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction, the merger agreement or any of the transactions contemplated by those agreements.

Moreover, the right to indemnification provided by the merger agreement extends only to claims which pertain to matters arising, existing or occurring prior to or at the completion of the merger. To give rise to an indemnification right, however, the claim need not have been asserted prior to the completion of the merger. If any claim is asserted against an indemnified person within the period during which indemnification is provided, all rights to indemnification under the merger agreement continue until disposition of the claim. In the event any indemnified person becomes involved in a legal proceeding after the completion of the merger, Sunbeam will, or will cause Coleman to, periodically advance legal and other expenses to the indemnified person, including the cost of any investigation and preparation incurred in connection with the legal proceeding. However, as a condition to advancement of expenses, the indemnified person must provide Sunbeam with an undertaking to reimburse all amounts so advanced in the event that the indemnified person is determined not to be entitled to indemnification.

Sunbeam and Coleman also agreed that all rights to indemnification, and all limitations with respect to indemnification, existing in favor of any indemnified person, as provided in the Coleman Certificate of Incorporation, the Coleman By-Laws or any indemnification agreement in effect at the date of the merger agreement, will survive the merger and will, to the extent permitted by Delaware law, continue in full force and effect, without any amendment, for a period of six years after the completion of the merger and during the period from the completion of the M&F Transaction to the completion of the merger. If any claim is asserted against any indemnified person within that period, all rights to indemnification will continue until final disposition of the legal proceeding. Any determination required to be made with respect to whether an indemnified person's conduct complies with the standards set forth under Delaware law, the Coleman certificate of incorporation, the Coleman by-laws or any agreement, as the case may be, will be made by independent legal counsel selected by the indemnified person and reasonably acceptable to Sunbeam.

Sunbeam also agreed that, from and after the completion of the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam or Coleman will maintain, for a period of not less than six years after the completion of the merger, a liability insurance policy for the benefit of Coleman's former directors and officers providing coverage substantially similar to the policies in place prior to the completion of the M&F Transaction. However, neither Sunbeam nor Coleman will be required to pay an annual premium for this insurance which exceeds 200% of the last annual premium paid by Coleman prior to the date of the merger agreement. In the event that the premium does exceed that amount, Sunbeam or Coleman will purchase as much coverage as possible for such amount.

Accounting Treatment

The merger will be accounted for under the "purchase" method of accounting in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Therefore, the aggregate consideration paid by Sunbeam in the merger and in the M&F Transaction will be allocated to Coleman's assets and liabilities based upon their fair market value with any excess being treated as excess of investment over net assets acquired or "goodwill". The assets and liabilities and results of operations of Coleman have been consolidated for financial accounting (but not tax) purposes with the assets and liabilities and results of operations of Sunbeam since the completion of the M&F Transaction.

Stock Exchange Listing

The NYSE has approved for listing on the NYSE the shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued to Coleman stockholders in the merger, subject to official notice of issuance. Sunbeam intends to file an application with the NYSE to list the shares of Sunbeam common stock that will be issued when the warrants are exercised. For a description of matters relating to the continued listing of Sunbeam common stock on the NYSE, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—New York Stock Exchange Listing."

Delisting and Deregistration of Coleman Common Stock

Upon completion of the merger, there will no longer be any publicly held shares of Coleman common stock and the Coleman common stock will be delisted from the NYSE, the Pacific Stock Exchange and the Chicago Stock Exchange and deregistered under the Exchange Act. For a description of matters relating to the continued listing of Coleman common stock on the NYSE, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING COLEMAN."

Ownership of Coleman Common Stock

At the close of business on December 3, 1999, there were outstanding 55,827,490 shares of Coleman common stock held by about 548 holders of record. In the M&F Transaction, which was completed on March 30, 1998, Sunbeam became the indirect beneficial owner of 44,067,520 shares of Coleman common stock, representing about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock. As a result of option exercises by employees and former employees of Coleman immediately following the completion of the M&F Transaction, these shares represent about 79% of the currently outstanding shares of Coleman common stock. On July 12, 1999, Sunbeam acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock acquired by Sunbeam in the M&F Transaction, enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock.

The table below shows the number of shares of Coleman common stock owned by each of the current directors and officers of Coleman and the percentage of the outstanding Coleman common stock which these shares represent.

At its February 27, 1998 meeting, the then Coleman board of directors unanimously approved the merger agreement. See "—Coleman's Reasons for the Merger and Approval of the Coleman Board." Since the completion of the M&F Transaction, however, the composition of Coleman's management and board of directors has changed significantly. See "MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES—M&F Transaction." Mr. Levin voted on February 27, 1998 as a member of the Coleman board of directors to approve the merger agreement. However, neither Mr. Levin nor any other director or officer of Coleman is currently making any recommendation to Coleman stockholders regarding the merger.

Since January 1, 1996, Coleman has completed one purchase of Coleman common stock. On March 1, 1996, Coleman purchased 50,000 shares of Coleman common stock (or 100,000 shares, adjusted for the two-for-one stock split of Coleman common stock on June 28, 1996) in the open market at a purchase price of $46.54 per share ($23.26 per share, as adjusted), or an aggregate of $2.33 million. On May 23, 1997, Coleman Worldwide commenced an offer to accept for exchange its Liquid Yield Option™ Notes due 2013 ("LYONs") for cash at a price equal to their redemption price of $343.61 per $1,000 principal amount at maturity. The LYONs were exchangeable for shares of Coleman common stock at the rate of 15.706 shares for each $1,000 principal amount at maturity of LYONs. The holders of $545,053,000 aggregate principal amount at maturity of LYONs out of the $561,553,000 aggregate principal amount at maturity then outstanding accepted Coleman Worldwide's offer, which expired on June 20, 1997. On April 20, 1998, Coleman Worldwide gave notice of its intention to redeem all LYONs remaining outstanding on May 27, 1998 for cash at their redemption price of $343.61 per $1,000 principal amount at maturity, unless, prior to that date, the holders of the LYONs elected to exchange their LYONs for shares of Coleman common stock. All of the LYONs that remained outstanding on May 27, 1998 were redeemed by Coleman Worldwide.

Ownership Interest of Coleman Stockholders in Sunbeam After the Merger

Based on the number of shares of Sunbeam common stock and Coleman common stock outstanding on December 3, 1999 and assuming no Coleman stockholders exercise their Delaware law appraisal rights, upon completion of the merger there will be about 107,578,527 shares of Sunbeam common stock outstanding, of which the former stockholders of Coleman, including a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, will own about 19.3%. The former holders of Coleman common stock will own about 36% of the outstanding Sunbeam common stock after the merger, assuming the exercise of (1) the warrant issued to a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in settlement of threatened legal claims related to the M&F Transaction and (2) the warrants to be issued to the Coleman minority stockholders upon completion of the merger under the recent settlement of litigation related to the merger.

Expenses

All costs and expenses incurred in connection with the M&F Transaction and the merger will be paid by the party incurring such expenses.

Sunbeam and Coleman have incurred, and will incur, fees and expenses in connection with the M&F Transaction and the merger, including filing fees in connection with the registration of the shares to be issued in connection with the merger and upon exercise of the warrants and other required filings, fees of counsel, accountants' fees and printing costs. These expenses are estimated to be as follows:

Financial advisory fees	$13,600,000
Legal fees and expenses	2,000,000
Accounting fees and expenses	700,000
Filing fees	67,669
Printing and mailing	350,000

UNITED STATES FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS

The following discussion is a summary of the anticipated material United States Federal income tax consequences of the merger to a holder of Coleman common stock (a "holder"). The discussion is based on laws, regulations, rulings and decisions in effect on the date of mailing of this document, all of which are subject to change, possibly with retroactive effect. This discussion deals only with holders who hold their shares of Coleman common stock as capital assets and does not address all aspects of United States Federal taxation that may be relevant to particular holders in light of their personal circumstances or to holders (1) who are not citizens or residents of the United States, (2) who may be subject to special tax rules, such as rules relating to financial institutions and banks, tax-exempt organizations, insurance companies, dealers in securities, and persons who hold Coleman common stock as part of a hedge, conversion or constructive sale transaction, straddle or other risk reduction transaction (3) who perfect their appraisal rights under Delaware law, or (4) who acquired their shares of Coleman common stock pursuant to the exercise of employee stock options or other compensation arrangements with Coleman. In addition, the discussion does not address the tax consequences of the merger arising under the laws of any state, local or foreign jurisdiction.

Each holder of Coleman common stock is urged to consult its own tax advisor with respect to the particular tax consequences of the merger to such holder.

The receipt of the cash, Sunbeam common stock and warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock upon completion of the merger is expected to be a taxable transaction for United States Federal income tax purposes and may also be a taxable transaction under applicable state, local, foreign and other tax laws. In general, for United States Federal income tax purposes, a holder will recognize gain or loss equal to the difference between (1) the sum of cash, the fair market value of the Sunbeam common stock received in exchange for such holder's shares of Coleman common stock, and the fair market value of the warrants to purchase additional shares of Sunbeam common stock and (2) the adjusted tax basis of such shares of Coleman common stock. This gain or loss will be capital gain or loss and will be long-term capital gain or loss if the shares have been held for more than twelve months.

LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS

Beginning on June 25, 1998, several class action lawsuits were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware by minority stockholders of Coleman against Coleman, Sunbeam and several of Coleman's former officers and directors. These actions were later consolidated into a single class action lawsuit. The class action alleged, among other things, that the consideration to be paid to the minority stockholders of Coleman under the February 1998 merger agreement was no longer fair as a result of the decline in the market price of Sunbeam's common stock. See "BUSINESS OF SUNBEAM—Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities."

On October 21, 1998, Sunbeam announced that it had entered into a memorandum of understanding to settle the class action, subject to court approval. On August 6, 1999, a stipulation of settlement was executed and on August 25, 1999, notice of the settlement and of a September 29, 1999 hearing in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware to consider approval of the settlement was mailed to the members of the class (consisting of all Coleman stockholders owning shares at any time from February 27, 1998 until the date of the merger other than Coleman Worldwide). The Court held a hearing on September 29, 1999 and approved the settlement on November 12, 1999.

Under the terms of the settlement, Sunbeam will issue to the Coleman minority stockholders and their litigation counsel warrants expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase about 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Each Coleman minority stockholder will receive 0.381 of a warrant for each share of Coleman common stock owned by such stockholder when the merger is completed, assuming the number of outstanding shares of Coleman common stock does not increase prior to the completion of the merger as a result of further exercises of Coleman employee stock options. Warrants will be issued when the merger is completed to all Coleman stockholders of record as of the completion of the merger, other than Coleman Worldwide and those stockholders who choose to dissent from the merger and have the fair value of their shares appraised by a court, and to counsel for the Coleman minority stockholders in the litigation as their court-awarded fee.

The warrants will be freely transferrable and are exempt from registration under the Securities Act. The shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued upon exercise of the warrants will be freely transferrable and will be registered under the Securities Act. Sunbeam intends to file an application with the NYSE to list the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrants. In the settlement, all members of the class released Coleman, Sunbeam, MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates and the former and present directors of Coleman from all claims arising out of or relating to the merger, other than their Delaware law appraisal rights.

The number of warrants that each Coleman minority stockholder will receive will be based on the number of shares of Coleman common stock owned by the stockholder at the time of the merger and will be equal to the product of (A) 4,979,663, less the 497,966 warrants awarded by the court to counsel for the Coleman minority stockholders in the litigation as their fee and (B) a fraction, the numerator of which is equal to the number of shares of Coleman common stock held by such stockholder immediately prior to the merger (other than any shares with respect to which Delaware law appraisal rights have been exercised) and the denominator of which is equal to the total number of shares of Coleman common stock outstanding and owned by Coleman minority stockholders at the time of the merger (approximately 11,759,970 shares assuming no further exercises of Coleman options).

The warrants to be issued under the settlement will have the same terms as the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, in August 1998 in the settlement of its claims against Sunbeam. The number of warrants to be issued in the settlement (4,979,663) was determined by multiplying the number of shares issuable upon exercise of the warrant received by Coleman (Parent) Holdings (23,000,000) by a fraction of which the numerator is the number of Coleman shares owned by its minority stockholders on February 27, 1998 (9,540,930) and the denominator is the number of Coleman shares then owned by Coleman (Parent) Holdings (44,067,520). Since February 27, 1998, the number of Coleman shares held by the Coleman stockholders entitled to receive warrants in the settlement has increased to 11,759,970 through exercises of previously granted Coleman employee stock options, but the settlement did not provide for any increase in the number of warrants to be issued thereunder as a result of the issuance of Coleman shares after February 27, 1998.

No fractional warrants will be issued in the merger. A Coleman public stockholder who would otherwise be entitled to receive fractional warrants will receive a number of warrants determined by rounding up or down to the nearest whole number of warrants.

General. The warrants to be issued in the merger will be issued under a Warrant Agreement to be entered into prior to the completion of the merger by Sunbeam and The Bank of New York, as Warrant Agent. The description of the Warrant Agreement contained in this document does not purport to be complete and is qualified in its entirety by reference to the form of Warrant Agreement, a copy of which, including the form of warrant certificate, is included as an exhibit to the registration statement of which this document forms a part.

Each warrant issued in the merger will be evidenced by a warrant certificate which will entitle the warrant holder, at any time prior to August 24, 2003, to purchase one share of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share. Warrants that are not exercised prior to that date will expire and become void.

Exercise of Warrants. In order to exercise any or all of your warrants, you will be required to surrender to The Bank of New York, as Warrant Agent: (1) the warrant certificate, (2) a duly executed copy of the exercise subscription form set forth in the warrant certificate and (3) payment in full of the exercise price for each share of Sunbeam common stock as to which the warrants are exercised. Payment may be made in cash (including wire transfer of immediately available funds) or by certified or official bank check or bank cashier's check payable to the order of Sunbeam Corporation.

Upon the exercise of any warrants in accordance with the Warrant Agreement, Sunbeam will transfer the appropriate number of shares of Sunbeam common stock to the warrant holder or to a designee specified by the warrant holder. All shares of Sunbeam common stock issued upon the exercise of warrants will be validly issued, fully paid and nonassessable.

Antidilution Provisions. The number of shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of each warrant is subject to adjustments in the event that Sunbeam, among other things: (1) pays a dividend or makes any other distribution in shares of Sunbeam common stock, (2) subdivides the Sunbeam common stock, (3) combines the Sunbeam common stock into a smaller number of shares, (4) issues any shares of Sunbeam common stock in a reclassification (including any reclassification in connection with a merger, consolidation or other business combination in which Sunbeam is the continuing corporation), (5) distributes, by dividend or otherwise, options, rights or warrants to purchase any such securities, cash or other assets, (6) issues non-convertible and non-exchangeable preferred stock (or other debt or equity securities or evidences of indebtedness of Sunbeam or options, rights or warrants to purchase any of such securities) at a price per share that is lower (at the record date for the issuance) than the fair market value of the shares or other securities issued, (7) repurchases, by self-tender offer or otherwise, any shares of Sunbeam common stock (or options, rights or warrants to purchase shares of Sunbeam common stock or any securities convertible into or exchangeable for Sunbeam common stock) at a price per share that is higher (at the record date for the issuance) than the then current market value per share of Sunbeam common stock or (8) repurchases, by self-tender offer or otherwise, any non-convertible and non-exchangeable preferred stock (or other debt or equity securities or evidences of indebtedness of Sunbeam or options, rights or warrants to purchase any of such securities) at a price per share that is higher (at the record date for the issuance) than the fair market value of the shares or other securities repurchased.

No fractional shares will be issued upon exercise of warrants. In the event of any transaction in which Sunbeam stockholders receive stock, securities, cash or other assets in exchange for their Sunbeam common stock, each warrant holder will, upon exercise of the warrant at any time after the transaction, have the right to the stock, securities, cash or other assets the warrant holder would have been entitled to receive if the warrant had been exercised immediately prior to the transaction.

No Stock Rights. Prior to the exercise of his or her warrants, no warrant holder will be entitled to vote or be deemed the holder of the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrants and will have no rights of a stockholder of Sunbeam.

APPRAISAL RIGHTS

Under Delaware law, Coleman stockholders have appraisal rights in connection with the merger. Any stockholder who is eligible to exercise appraisal rights and properly does so will be paid in cash the "fair value" (exclusive of any element of value arising from the accomplishment or expectation of the merger) for his or her shares of Coleman common stock as determined by the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware. Any shares of Coleman common stock for which a written demand for appraisal is properly filed and not withdrawn in accordance with the procedures set forth under Delaware law, except any shares as to which the holder effectively withdraws or loses the right to appraisal and payment for such shares prior to the effective time of the merger, are referred to in this document as "Dissenting Shares."

Any holder of Dissenting Shares will be paid the "fair value" of the shares, as described below, and will not receive, upon completion of the merger, cash, shares of Sunbeam common stock and warrants payable in the merger, as described in "THE MERGER—Conversion of Coleman Common Stock."

Only holders of record of Coleman common stock who are eligible for appraisal rights and comply with the applicable statutory procedures summarized in this document will be entitled to appraisal rights under Delaware law. A person having a beneficial interest in shares of Coleman common stock held of record in the name of another person, such as a broker or nominee, must act promptly to cause the record holder to follow the steps summarized below properly and in a timely manner to perfect appraisal rights.

The following discussion is not a complete statement of the law pertaining to appraisal rights under Delaware law and is qualified in its entirety by the full text of Section 262 of the general Corporation Law of the State of Delaware which is reprinted in its entirety as Annex II at the back of this document. All references in Section 262 and in this summary to a "stockholder" or "holder" are to the record holders of Dissenting Shares.

Under Delaware law, when a merger is approved by written consent in lieu of a stockholders meeting under Section 228 of Delaware law, as the merger was, each constituent corporation, either before the effective date of the merger or within ten days after that date, must notify each holder of any class or series of stock of the constituent corporation that is entitled to appraisal rights of the approval of the merger and the availability of appraisal rights for any or all shares of that class or series of stock, and must include in the notice a copy of Section 262 of Delaware law.

This document constitutes the required notice to the stockholders of Coleman and the applicable statutory provisions of Delaware law are attached as Annex II at the back of this document. Any stockholder who wishes to exercise his or her appraisal rights or who wishes to preserve his or her right to do so should review the following discussion and Annex II carefully, because failure to timely and properly comply with the procedures specified will result in the loss of appraisal rights under Delaware law.

A Coleman stockholder wishing to exercise appraisal rights must deliver to Coleman, within twenty days after the date of mailing of this document, or by December 27, 1999, a written demand for appraisal of such holder's shares of Coleman common stock. Written demands received after that date will be disregarded. This demand must reasonably inform Coleman of the identity of the stockholder and of the stockholder's intent to demand appraisal of his or her shares of Coleman common stock. A holder of Coleman common stock wishing to exercise his or her appraisal rights must be the holder of record of the Coleman common stock on the date the written demand for appraisal is made and must continue to hold the Coleman common stock until the completion of the merger. Accordingly, a Coleman stockholder who is the holder of record of Coleman common stock on the date the written demand for appraisal is made, but who subsequently transfers the Coleman common stock prior to completion of the merger, will lose any right to appraisal of such holder's shares of Coleman common stock. Similarly, any person who acquires Coleman common stock after December 27, 1999 will not be entitled to appraisal rights.

Only a stockholder of record is entitled to assert appraisal rights for the Coleman common stock registered in that holder's name. A demand for appraisal should be executed by or on behalf of the holder of record, fully and correctly, as the holder's name appears on the holder's stock certificates. If the Coleman common stock is held of record in a fiduciary capacity, such as by a trustee, guardian or custodian, execution of the demand should be made in that capacity. If the Coleman common stock is held of record by more than one owner, as in a joint tenancy or tenancy in common, the demand should be executed by or on behalf of all joint owners. An authorized agent, including one or more joint owners, may execute a demand for appraisal on behalf of a holder of record. However, the agent must identify the holder of record and expressly disclose the fact that, in executing the demand, the agent is agent for the holder. A holder of record, such as a broker who holds Coleman common stock as nominee for several beneficial owners, may exercise appraisal rights with respect to the Coleman common stock held for one or more beneficial owners while not exercising appraisal rights with respect to the Coleman common stock held for other beneficial owners. In that case, the written demand should set forth the number of shares of Coleman common stock as to which appraisal is sought. When no number of shares of Coleman common stock is expressly mentioned, the demand will be presumed to cover all shares of Coleman common stock in brokerage accounts or other nominee forms. Those stockholders whose shares of Coleman common stock are held in brokerage accounts or other nominee forms who wish to exercise appraisal rights under Delaware law are urged to consult with their brokers or nominees to determine the appropriate procedures for the making of a demand for appraisal.

All written demands for appraisal should be sent or delivered to The Coleman Company, Inc., 2111 E. 37th Street North P.O. Box 2931, Wichita, Kansas 67201, Attention: Corporate Secretary.

Within 120 days after the completion of the merger, but not after that date, the surviving corporation in the merger, or any stockholder who has complied with the statutory requirements summarized above, may file a petition in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware demanding a determination of the fair value of the Dissenting Shares. Coleman, as the surviving corporation in the merger, is under no obligation, and Coleman has no present intention, to file a petition for the appraisal of the fair value of the Dissenting

Shares. Accordingly, it is the obligation of stockholders wishing to assert appraisal rights to initiate all necessary action to perfect their appraisal rights within the time prescribed in Section 262 of Delaware law.

Within 120 days after the completion of the merger, any stockholder who has complied with the requirements for exercise of appraisal rights will be entitled, upon written request, to receive from Coleman a statement setting forth the aggregate number of Dissenting Shares as to which demands for appraisal have been received and the aggregate number of holders of those Dissenting Shares. Such statements must be mailed within ten days after a written request therefor has been received by Coleman.

If a petition for an appraisal is timely filed, after a hearing on the petition, the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware will determine the stockholders entitled to appraisal rights and will appraise the "fair value" of their Dissenting Shares, exclusive of any element of value arising from the accomplishment or expectation of the merger, together with a fair rate of interest, if any, to be paid upon the amount determined to be the fair value. Stockholders considering seeking appraisal should be aware that the fair value of their Dissenting Shares as determined under Section 262 of Delaware law could be more than, the same as or less than the value of the merger consideration they are entitled to receive under the merger agreement if they do not seek appraisal of their shares of Coleman common stock and that investment banking opinions as to fairness from a financial point of view are not necessarily opinions as to fair value under Section 262 of Delaware law. The Supreme Court of the State of Delaware has stated that "proof of value by any techniques or methods which are generally considered acceptable in the financial community and otherwise admissible in court" should be considered in the appraisal proceedings.

The Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware will determine the amount of interest, if any, to be paid upon the amounts to be received by stockholders whose Dissenting Shares have been appraised. The costs of the action may be determined by the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware and imposed upon the parties as the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware deems equitable. The Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware may also order that all or a portion of the expenses incurred by any stockholder in connection with an appraisal, including reasonable attorneys' fees and the fees and expenses of experts utilized in the appraisal proceeding, be charged pro rata against the value of all of the Dissenting Shares entitled to appraisal.

Any holder of Coleman common stock who has duly demanded an appraisal in compliance with Section 262 of Delaware law will not, after the completion of the merger, be entitled to vote the Dissenting Shares for any purpose or be entitled to the payment of dividends or other distributions on those Dissenting Shares.

If any stockholder who properly demands appraisal of Coleman common stock under Section 262 of Delaware law fails to perfect, or effectively withdraws or loses, the right to appraisal, as provided in Section 262 of Delaware law, the shares of Coleman common stock owned by such stockholder upon completion of the merger will be converted into the right to receive the cash, stock and warrants referred to above. A stockholder will fail to perfect, or effectively lose or withdraw, the right to appraisal if, among other things, no petition for appraisal is filed within 120 days after the completion of the merger, or if the stockholder delivers to Coleman a written withdrawal of the demand for appraisal. Any attempt to withdraw an appraisal demand more than sixty days after the completion of the merger will require the written approval of Coleman.

SOURCE AND AMOUNT OF FUNDS AND OTHER CONSIDERATION

General. The total amount of funds and other consideration required by Sunbeam to complete the merger and to pay related expenses is about $103,737,669 in cash, 6,676,135 shares of Sunbeam common stock and warrants to purchase about 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock, assuming all outstanding Coleman stock options are cashed out in the merger and no Coleman stockholders exercise their Delaware law appraisal rights.

Bank Credit Facility. Sunbeam expects to obtain the cash portion of the merger consideration and amounts necessary to pay related expenses from cash on hand and additional borrowings under its bank credit facility. Sunbeam's bank credit facility, as amended, provides for aggregate borrowings of up to $1,700 million under: (1) a revolving credit facility in an aggregate principal amount of up to $400 million, maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $52.5 million may be used only to complete the merger; (2) up to $800 million in Tranche A term loans maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $35 million may be used only to complete the merger; and (3) a Tranche B $500 million term loan maturing on September 30, 2006, of which $5.0 million has already been repaid through September 30, 1999. Absent a further extension by Sunbeam's bank lenders of the April 15, 1999 waiver or a refinancing of the bank credit facility, the foregoing maturities could be accelerated by Sunbeam's bank lenders at any time after April 10, 2000.

Under the bank credit facility, interest accrues, at Sunbeam's option: (1) at LIBOR; or (2) at the base rate of the administrative agent, which is generally the higher of the prime commercial lending rate of the administrative agent or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.50%, in each case, plus, an interest rate margin which varies depending upon the occurrence of specified events. These events relate to:

- the execution and delivery by Coleman and its domestic subsidiaries of guarantees and related security documents which will become effective upon the completion of the merger;
- the filing with the SEC of this document;
- the completion of the merger; and
- the reduction of the bank lenders' commitment and loan exposure under the bank credit facility.

The interest rate margin is currently 4.00% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans and is subject to potential decreases in the future, including a decrease to 3.00% for LIBOR loans and 1.75% for base rate loans upon consummation of the merger and the effectiveness of the pledge of substantially all of Coleman's and its domestic subsidiaries' assets to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility.

Security and Guarantees. Borrowings under the bank credit facility are secured by a pledge of the stock of Sunbeam's material subsidiaries, including Coleman and by a security interest in substantially all of the assets of Sunbeam and its material domestic subsidiaries, other than Coleman and its subsidiaries except as described below. Currently, Coleman's inventory and related assets are pledged to secure its obligations for letters of credit issued for its account under the bank credit facility. Additionally, as security for Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam, Coleman pledged substantially all of its domestic assets, other than real property, including 66% of its ownership interests in Coleman's direct foreign subsidiaries and domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries and all of its ownership interests in other direct domestic subsidiaries (but not the assets of any of these subsidiaries). The pledge runs in favor of Sunbeam's lending banks, to which the Coleman note has been pledged as security for Sunbeam's obligations to them. The Coleman note, by its terms, will not be affected by the completion of the merger. Upon completion of the merger, substantially all of Coleman's assets and the assets of Coleman's domestic subsidiaries will be pledged to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility.

Borrowings under the bank credit facility are guaranteed by a number of Sunbeam's wholly owned material domestic subsidiaries and these subsidiary guarantees are secured as described above. Upon completion of the merger, Coleman and each of its domestic subsidiaries will become guarantors of the obligations under the bank credit facility. To the extent extensions of credit are made by any subsidiaries of Sunbeam, the obligations of these subsidiaries are guaranteed by Sunbeam.

Repayment and Refinancing. Sunbeam has made no decision with respect to the repayment or refinancing of indebtedness incurred or to be incurred under the bank credit facility and may repay this indebtedness out of its internally generated funds or from proceeds of a subsequent financing. Any decisions with respect to such repayment or refinancing will be made based on a review from time to time of the advisability of particular transactions, as well as on prevailing interest rates and financial and economic conditions.

Covenants. The bank credit facility contains covenants customary for credit facilities of a similar nature, including limitations on the ability of Sunbeam and its subsidiaries, including Coleman, to, among other things:

- declare dividends or repurchase stock;
- prepay, redeem or repurchase debt, incur liens and engage in sale-leaseback transactions;

- make loans and investments;
- incur additional debt, including revolving loans under the bank credit facility;
- amend or otherwise alter material agreements or enter into restrictive agreements;
- make capital and Year 2000 compliance expenditures;
- engage in mergers, acquisitions and asset sales;
- engage in certain transactions with affiliates;
- alter its fiscal year or accounting policies;
- enter into hedging agreements;
- settle certain litigation;
- alter its cash management system; and
- alter the businesses they conduct.

Sunbeam is also required to comply with specified financial covenants and ratios. As a result of Sunbeam's operating losses, among other things, at June 30, 1998 Sunbeam was not in compliance with these financial covenants and other terms of its bank credit facility. As of June 30, 1998, Sunbeam entered into an agreement with its bank lenders which waived Sunbeam's compliance through December 31, 1998. On October 19, 1998, Sunbeam's bank lenders agreed to extend this waiver through April 10, 1999. In April 1999, the waiver was extended to April 10, 2000, and the bank credit facility was amended to, among other things:

- require Sunbeam to meet new financial tests and ratios;
- decrease the interest rate margins to 3.75% for LIBOR loans and 2.5% for base rate loans;
- further reduce the interest rate margins to 3.25% for LIBOR loans and 2.00% for base rate loans as a result of Sunbeam's satisfaction on May 14, 1999 of the agreed upon conditions to this reduction. However, such margins increased to 3.50% for LIBOR loans and 2.25% for base rate loans on September 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date and increased to 4.00% for LIBOR loans and 2.50% for base rate loans on October 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date;
- defer until April 10, 2000 principal payments of $69.3 million otherwise due September 30, 1999 and principal payments of $69.3 million otherwise due March 31, 2000, as a result of the satisfaction by Sunbeam on May 14, 1999 of the agreed upon conditions to this deferral;
- provide that the following events relating to the merger will be events of default under the bank credit facility:
 - if Sunbeam fails to have the SEC declare this document effective by October 30, 1999 (which was subsequently amended to January 10, 2000);
 - if Sunbeam fails to complete the merger within 25 business days after this document is declared effective by the SEC; or
 - if Sunbeam has to pay more than $87.5 million in cash to complete the merger, including any payments on account of the exercise of any appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses;
- require Sunbeam and Coleman to amend Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam and to have Coleman secure the note, which is pledged by Sunbeam to secure the obligations under Sunbeam's bank credit facility, with substantially all of Coleman's domestic assets other than real property including 66% of its ownership interests in Coleman's direct foreign subsidiaries and domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries, and all of its ownership interests in other direct domestic subsidiaries;

- impose restrictions on the aggregate revolving loan (other than loans used to fund the merger) principal balance permitted to be outstanding at the end of each month under the bank credit facility;
- require Sunbeam to maintain a concentration cash management system and to repay revolving loans, which may be reborrowed subject to satisfaction of the bank credit facility's borrowing conditions, to the extent that cash on hand in the concentration accounts on any business day exceeds $15 million;
- require Sunbeam to prepay term loans under the bank credit facility on December 31, 1999 to the extent that cash on hand in Sunbeam's concentration accounts plus the aggregate amount of unused revolving loan commitments on this date exceeds $125 million, but Sunbeam is not required to prepay more than $69.3 million in the aggregate as a result of this provision;
- require Sunbeam to reserve $52.5 million of availability under the revolving credit facility for use solely to pay required cash portion of the merger consideration;
- limit the amount that Sunbeam and its subsidiaries may spend on Year 2000 compatibility testing and remediation to $50 million in the aggregate during the fiscal year ending December 31, 1999;
- require Sunbeam to obtain the bank lenders' consent to any litigation settlement concerning the restatement of Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 fiscal year and first quarter 1998 financial statements if such settlements require the payment of money, not paid by insurance carriers or other third parties, of more than $1 million in total;
- impose new informational reporting requirements; and
- provide Sunbeam with a $40 million foreign currency revolving loan subfacility.

At September 30, 1999, approximately $1,500 million was outstanding and approximately $200 million was available for borrowing under the credit facility. Of the approximately $1,500 million outstanding under the new credit facility, $1,300 million was outstanding under the Tranche A and Tranche B term loans and $200 million was outstanding under the revolving credit facility.

Defaults. The bank credit facility provides for events of default customary for transactions of this type, including nonpayment, misrepresentation, breach of covenant, cross-defaults, bankruptcy, material adverse change arising from compliance with ERISA, material adverse judgments, entering into guarantees and change of ownership and control. It is also an event of default under the bank credit facility if this document is not declared effective by the SEC on or before January 10, 2000 or if the merger does not occur within 25 business days of the effectiveness of this document or if the cash consideration—including any payments on account of the exercise of any appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses—to consummate the merger exceeds $87.5 million. Although there can be no assurance, Sunbeam anticipates that it will satisfy these conditions.

Issuance of Sunbeam Common Stock in the Merger and upon Exercise of the Warrants. The stock portion of the merger consideration and the shares of stock to be issued upon exercise of the warrants will consist of newly issued shares of Sunbeam common stock. The issuance of the shares of Sunbeam common stock in the merger and upon exercise of the warrants is being registered under the registration statement of which this document forms a part.

MATERIAL CONTACTS BETWEEN COLEMAN AND SUNBEAM AND ITS AFFILIATES

Financial Transactions Between Coleman and Sunbeam

In connection with the M&F Transaction, Coleman repaid substantially all of its outstanding indebtedness with the proceeds of borrowings from Sunbeam. These borrowings, together with loans made by Sunbeam to Coleman after March 30, 1998, were evidenced by an unsecured subordinated demand note payable by Coleman to Sunbeam. The note bore interest at a floating rate equivalent to the weighted average interest rate incurred by Sunbeam on borrowings under its bank credit facility and on its debentures (about 5.9% per annum during the first half of 1999). The note was pledged by Sunbeam as security for its obligations under its bank credit facility.

In connection with the April 15, 1999 amendment to Sunbeam's bank credit facility, the Coleman note payable to Sunbeam was revised to, among other things:

- lower the interest rate to 4% if the three-month LIBOR quoted on the teletype system is less than 6%, or 5% if the three-month LIBOR quoted on the teletype system is 6% or higher,
- make the note payable on April 15, 2000 rather than on demand,
- add customary representations, warranties, covenants and events of default, and
- provide that an event of default under Sunbeam's bank credit facility would constitute an event of default under the Coleman note.

The revised Coleman note had an unpaid principal amount of $303.2 million on September 30, 1999. As security for the revised Coleman note, Coleman pledged substantially all of its domestic assets, other than real property, including 66% of its ownership interests in its direct foreign subsidiaries and in its domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries, and all of its ownership interests in its other direct domestic subsidiaries, but Coleman's subsidiaries have not pledged their assets or the stock of their subsidiaries. Sunbeam pledged the revised Coleman note as security for Sunbeam's obligations to its lending banks and Sunbeam assigned to these lending banks the security pledged by Coleman for the revised Coleman note. Coleman also gave the lending banks a direct pledge of the assets securing the revised Coleman note to secure the obligations under Sunbeam's bank credit facility, subject to a cap equal to the balance due from time to time on the revised Coleman note. The Coleman note, by its terms, will not be affected by the completion of the merger. The revision of the Coleman note and the pledge of Coleman assets were approved on behalf of Coleman by A. Whitman Marchand, Coleman's then only disinterested director, acting as a duly authorized independent committee of the Coleman board of directors. Coleman paid Mr. Marchand $25,000 for his services as an independent director and agreed to indemnify him to the fullest extent permitted by Delaware law.

Since the Sunbeam bank credit facility provides that Sunbeam will not contribute capital to Coleman or, with some exceptions, permit Coleman to borrow money from any source other than Sunbeam, Coleman's ability to meet its cash operating requirements, including working capital requirements, capital expenditures and other obligations, is dependent upon its cash flow from operations and loans from Sunbeam. Sunbeam intends, and believes it will have the ability, to fund any Coleman requirements for borrowed funds through April 10, 2000. All loans from Sunbeam to Coleman will be added to the Coleman note payable to Sunbeam.

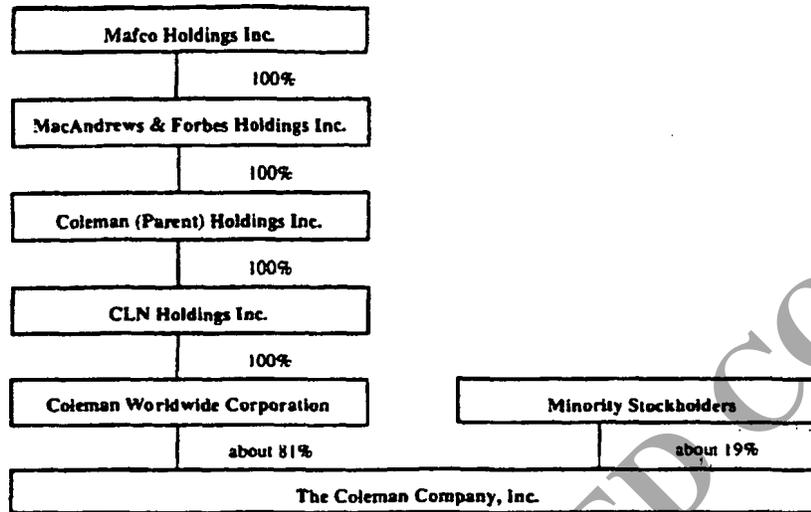

M&F Transaction

Prior to the M&F Transaction, MacAndrews & Forbes indirectly owned about 81% of the issued and outstanding Coleman common stock through various subsidiaries, including Coleman (Parent) Holdings, CLN Holdings and Coleman Worldwide.

Ownership Structure Before the M&F Transaction

In the M&F Transaction, which was completed on March 30, 1998, CLN Holdings merged with Laser Acquisition Corp., a subsidiary of Sunbeam, and Sunbeam, through its then indirect ownership of Coleman Worldwide, became the owner of MacAndrews & Forbes' shares of Coleman common stock. In exchange for the Coleman shares, Coleman (Parent) Holdings received 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam common stock and $159,956,756 in cash. In addition, in the M&F Transaction, Sunbeam assumed about $1.016 million in debt of Coleman and its parent corporations, including $497 million of indebtedness of Coleman.

Ownership Structure After the M&F Transaction

Sunbeam's ownership interest in Coleman was reduced to about 79% as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options immediately following the M&F Transaction. On July 12, 1999, Sunbeam acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock acquired by Sunbeam in the M&F Transaction, enable Sunbeam to exercise just over 80% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock. Following the completion of the M&F Transaction, Coleman (Parent) Holdings remained a wholly owned subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes.

As a result of the M&F Transaction, MacAndrews & Forbes, as the indirect parent corporation of Coleman (Parent) Holdings, became Sunbeam's second largest stockholder with shares representing about 14% of the currently outstanding Sunbeam common stock. As part of the August 1998 settlement with MacAndrews & Forbes of threatened claims related to the M&F Transaction, Coleman (Parent) Holdings received from Sunbeam a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase an additional 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Accordingly, MacAndrews & Forbes may now be deemed to be the beneficial owner of 29.9% of the total number of shares of Sunbeam common stock that would be outstanding following the exercise of the warrant. See "—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction."

Under the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction, upon completion of the M&F Transaction, all the directors of Coleman resigned, the number of directors constituting the board of directors of Coleman was fixed at five, and five designees of Sunbeam were elected as directors of Coleman. In addition, Sunbeam designees were appointed to senior management positions at Coleman. Subsequently, as a result of changes in Sunbeam's management and board of directors, Jerry W. Levin, the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was reelected to the Coleman board. In addition, Paul E. Shapiro, the current Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam and Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board. The other members of the Coleman board resigned or were removed by Sunbeam. In April 1999, the size of the Coleman board was fixed at three members and A. Whitman Marchand, who is not affiliated with either Sunbeam or Coleman, was elected to the Coleman board. In July 1999, the size of the Coleman board was fixed at four and John H. Klein, an outside director of Sunbeam, was elected to the Coleman board. See "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board," "—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction" and "—Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes."

Under the agreement relating to the M&F Transaction, Coleman (Parent) Holdings agreed not to transfer the shares of Sunbeam common stock it received in the M&F Transaction (other than to specified affiliates) for a period of nine months from and after the completion of the M&F Transaction, subject to certain exceptions. This nine-month period expired on November 30, 1998. Notwithstanding the lapse of these restrictions, to date Coleman (Parent) Holdings has not transferred any such shares.

The agreement relating to the M&F Transaction has been filed as an exhibit to the Registration Statement of which this document forms a part and is incorporated in this document by reference.

Registration Rights Agreement

The shares of Sunbeam common stock issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings in the M&F Transaction were not registered under federal or state securities laws. Accordingly, in connection with the issuance, Sunbeam entered into a Registration Rights Agreement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings. Under the Registration Rights Agreement, Coleman (Parent) Holdings can require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the shares of Sunbeam common stock it received in the M&F Transaction. The Registration Rights Agreement was amended in August 1998 to provide that Coleman (Parent) Holdings can also require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the warrant, and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant, issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings in connection with a settlement of legal claims related to the M&F Transaction.

Sunbeam has also agreed to use its reasonable best efforts to permit any registration statement filed by Sunbeam in connection with the Registration Rights Agreement to be used by former affiliates of Coleman for resales of Sunbeam common stock received by those affiliates in the merger. Any affiliate seeking to register shares of Sunbeam common stock for resale must agree in writing to be bound by the terms of the Registration Rights Agreement.

The Registration Rights Agreement, and the August 1998 amendment thereto, have been filed as exhibits to the Registration Statement of which this document forms a part and are incorporated in this document by reference.

Appointments of Former Coleman and MacAndrews & Forbes Officers to Sunbeam's Management and Board

In June 1998, concurrently with the removal of Sunbeam's former Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer, Sunbeam announced that Jerry W. Levin of MacAndrews & Forbes had been elected as Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Levin and other Sunbeam executives who were affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes later signed three-year employment agreements with Sunbeam. The other executives include Paul E. Shapiro, Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer of Sunbeam, and Bobby G. Jenkins, Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Sunbeam. Mr. Levin and Howard Gittis of MacAndrews & Forbes also were elected to the Sunbeam board of directors. For a description of the terms of the employment agreements entered into by Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins, see "MANAGEMENT—Executive Compensation." For a further discussion of the events leading up to the appointment of Mr. Levin as Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer and the election of Messrs. Levin and Gittis to the Sunbeam board of directors, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Changes in Sunbeam's Management and Board."

Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction

On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that, following investigation and negotiation by a special committee of the Sunbeam board, Sunbeam had entered into a settlement agreement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary from which Sunbeam acquired a controlling interest in Coleman in the M&F Transaction. The settlement:

- released Sunbeam from threatened claims of MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates arising from the M&F Transaction,
- enabled Sunbeam to retain the services of executive personnel affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes who had been managing Sunbeam since mid-June 1998, including Jerry W. Levin, Sunbeam's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Paul E. Shapiro, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer, and Bobby G. Jenkins, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, each of which signed a three-year employment agreement with Sunbeam in connection with the settlement, and
- provided for continuing management assistance and other support by MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates to Sunbeam, at its request, as described below.

As part of the settlement, Coleman (Parent) Holdings received from Sunbeam a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Accordingly, MacAndrews & Forbes may now be deemed to be the beneficial owner of 29.9% of the total number of shares of Sunbeam common stock that would be outstanding following the exercise of the warrant. In connection with the settlement agreement, Sunbeam and Coleman (Parent) Holdings entered into an amendment to the Registration Rights Agreement executed in connection with the M&F Transaction. Under this amendment, Coleman (Parent) Holdings can require Sunbeam to register under federal and applicable state securities laws the warrant received by Coleman (Parent) Holdings in the settlement and the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant. For a description of the settlement agreement and the terms of the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction."

The special committee that negotiated and approved the terms of the settlement agreement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings, including the terms of the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, consisted of four outside directors, none of whom has any affiliation with MacAndrews & Forbes. The members of the special committee were Howard Kristol (Chairman), Charles Elson, Peter Langerman and Faith Whittlesey. They were assisted by independent financial advisors and independent legal counsel. The special committee considered the services of Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins and MacAndrews & Forbes' commitment to provide assistance and support to Sunbeam to be essential and of substantial (although incalculable) value to Sunbeam.

In connection with the settlement agreement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins each signed three-year employment agreements with Sunbeam. See "MANAGEMENT."

Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes

Under Sunbeam's August 1998 settlement agreement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings, in addition to the services of MacAndrews & Forbes' former executive personnel who have been managing Sunbeam since mid-June 1998, MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide management assistance and other support to Sunbeam at its request in a wide variety of areas. Although the nature and extent of this assistance and support had not been determined at the time of the settlement, Sunbeam has significantly benefited from this assistance and support in connection with the following areas:

- negotiations with Sunbeam's lending banks;
- the defense of the many lawsuits brought against Sunbeam and certain of its present and former directors and officers;
- the prosecution of claims against Sunbeam's liability insurance providers;
- the defense of claims against Sunbeam by its former Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer;
- the restatement of certain of Sunbeam's historical financial statements;
- the preparation of various SEC filings by Sunbeam and Coleman; and
- various other insurance, regulatory, litigation and executive compensation matters.

MacAndrews & Forbes employees provide this assistance and support to Sunbeam. Sunbeam does not pay MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates for the services of its employees, but does reimburse them for out-of-pocket expenses. Execution of the settlement agreement was a condition to Sunbeam's continued employment of Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins as officers of Sunbeam.

UNAUDITED PRO FORMA CONDENSED CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

The following unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements were prepared to give effect to the following "Pro Forma Transactions":

- Sunbeam's acquisition on March 30, 1998 of about 81% of the then outstanding shares of Coleman common stock in exchange for 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam's common stock and approximately $160 million in cash. Immediately thereafter, as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options, Sunbeam's beneficial ownership of Coleman decreased to approximately 79% of the total number of outstanding shares of Coleman common stock;
- Sunbeam's acquisition on April 6, 1998 of all of the outstanding stock of Signature Brands in exchange for approximately $255 million in cash;
- Sunbeam's proposed acquisition of the shares of Coleman common stock held by the Coleman minority stockholders, in exchange for about 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock, about $87 million in cash, including cash-outs of Coleman options and warrants to purchase up to approximately 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at $7 per share;
- the initial borrowing of approximately $1,325 million under Sunbeam's bank credit facility;
- the original offering of the debentures producing net proceeds of approximately $730 million; and
- the use of most of the net proceeds from the original bank borrowing and offering of the debentures.

The bank credit facility, as amended, consists of:

- a revolving credit facility in an aggregate principal amount of up to $400 million maturing March 30, 2005, of which $52.5 million may only be used to complete the merger;
- up to $800 million in term loans maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $35.0 million may only be used to complete the merger; and
- a $500 million term loan maturing September 30, 2006, of which $5.0 million has already been repaid through September 30, 1999.

Interest accrues, at the Company's option:

- at LIBOR, or
- at the base rate of the administrative agent which is generally the higher of the prime commercial lending rate of the administrative agent or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.50%, in each case, plus an interest margin which is currently 4.00% for LIBOR borrowings and 2.50% for base rate borrowings and is subject to potential decreases in the future, including a decrease to 3.00% for LIBOR borrowings and 1.75% for base rate borrowings upon consummation of the merger and the effectiveness of the pledge of substantially all of Coleman's and its domestic subsidiaries' assets to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility. Past defaults have been waived through April 10, 2000.

The original offering in March 1998 of $2,014 million aggregate principal amount of the debentures at a yield to maturity of 5.0% resulted in net proceeds of approximately $730 million. The debentures are exchangeable for shares of Sunbeam common stock at an initial conversion rate of 6.575 shares for each $1,000 principal amount at maturity of the debentures, subject to adjustment upon occurrence of certain events. The debentures are subordinated in right of payment to all of our existing and future senior indebtedness. The debentures are not redeemable by Sunbeam prior to March 25, 2003.

Proceeds from the initial bank borrowing and the original offering of debentures of $1,176 million, $255 million and $182 million were used to acquire and repay the debt of Coleman and its parent corporations, CLH Holdings and Coleman Worldwide, Signature Brands and First Alert, respectively. Also, approximately $300 million of Sunbeam's outstanding indebtedness was repaid from such proceeds. In addition, the financing provided funds to pay the $106.9 million of redemption premiums associated with debt extinguishments and also provided working capital and funds for general corporate purposes.

The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated balance sheet as of September 30, 1999 gives pro forma effect to Sunbeam's proposed acquisition of the shares of Coleman common stock held by the Coleman minority stockholders as if it had occurred on September 30, 1999. The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated statements of operations for the year ended December 31, 1998 and the nine months ended September 30, 1999 give effect to the Pro Forma Transactions as if they had occurred on December 29, 1997, the beginning of Sunbeam's 1998 fiscal year.

The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements do not include pro forma adjustments relating to the acquisition of First Alert because the effects of that acquisition are not significant.

Sunbeam's consolidated historical results of operations for the year ended December 31, 1998 includes Coleman and Signature Brands from the respective acquisition dates and has been derived from the audited financial statements of Sunbeam as of and for the year ended December 31, 1998. The results of operations of the acquired entities from the beginning of the period through the respective acquisition dates have been derived from the unaudited statements of operations of the acquired entities for the three months ended March 31, 1998. The acquisitions have been accounted for under the purchase method of accounting.

Reclassifications were made to the net sales, cost of goods sold and selling, general and administrative expense as reported in the historical financial statements of Coleman and Signature Brands. These reclassifications were made to conform to the classifications of Sunbeam and consist of promotional allowances and cooperative advertising expenses. Sunbeam classifies these amounts as a deduction to arrive at net sales.

Included in the historical statement of operations of Coleman for the three months ended March 31, 1998, are certain pretax charges for costs relating to the acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam in the amount of $7.1 million, a $3.6 million write-off of capitalized costs associated with the installation of a company-wide computer software system which was abandoned following its acquisition by Sunbeam and $2.2 million to cancel a licensing agreement with an affiliate. Additionally, the expense of the early extinguishment of debt of $1.2 million shown as an extraordinary charge on Coleman's historical statement of operations for the three months ended March 31, 1998, has been excluded from the unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated statement of operations for the year ended December 31, 1998.

The pro forma adjustments are based upon available information and certain assumptions that Sunbeam believes are reasonable under the circumstances.

The unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements should be read in conjunction with "MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS" and the financial statements of Sunbeam and the notes thereto, and the other financial information included elsewhere in this document. These unaudited pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements are provided for informational purposes only and do not purport to be indicative of the financial position or results of operations which would have been obtained had the Pro Forma Transactions been completed as of the dates indicated above or the results of operations for any future period.

Fair value of total liabilities assumed, including debt	1,455	83
	2,196	338
Fair value of assets acquired	1,113	191
Excess of purchase price over fair value of net assets acquired	$1,083	$147

The value of approximately $44 per share for the Sunbeam common stock issued at the date of the M&F Transaction was derived by using the average closing stock price for the day before and day of the public announcement of the M&F Transaction. Subsequent to the M&F Transaction, Coleman Spas, Inc. was sold for $17 million and the related proceeds are therefore presented above as a deduction to arrive at the net cash paid and equity issued for the businesses retained. The $17 million is similarly excluded from the amount of $1,113 million described as "fair value of assets acquired." Immediately after the M&F Transaction, employee stock options were exercised generating proceeds of $9 million.

This amount is presented above as a reduction to arrive at the net cash paid for the M&F Transaction and a proportionate corresponding increase is included in the minority interest liability assumed.

The pro forma amounts are derived as follows:

	Coleman	Signature Brands	Average Life	Quarterly Depreciation/Amortization
Increase in property, plant and equipment to reflect fair value	$50,560	$3,871	7.9 years	$1,727
Amount attributable to:
Cost of goods sold				$1,554
Selling, general and administrative expense				$ 173

The pro forma purchase price allocation to the acquired property, plant and equipment of Coleman and Signature Brands represents the aggregate amount recorded for financial statement purposes as detailed by an independent appraisal. The remaining economic useful lives for the acquired property, plant and equipment range from 17 to 34 years for buildings, 6 to 12 years for machinery and equipment and 1 to 5 years for tooling and other depreciable assets. The average life of 7.9 years represents the weighted average of the depreciable lives used for financial reporting purposes.

Amortization of goodwill and identifiable intangibles:

	Coleman	Signature Brands	Life	Quarterly Depreciation/Amortization
Goodwill	$1,083,259	$147,151	40 years	$7,690
Trademarks	279,920	53,900	40 years	2,086
Assembled workforce	12,880	3,000	8 years	496
Patents	5,600	1,800	8 years	231
				10,503
Less: historical amortization				(3,966)
				$6,537

- (e) Represents the net increase in interest expense to reflect the pro forma effect of acquisition and refinancing borrowings as if such transactions occurred at the beginning of the period. Amounts are derived as follows:

Acquisition	Acquisition and Refinancing Borrowings	Effective Rate	Quarterly Interest on Acquisition and Refinancing Borrowings	Less: Quarterly Interest on Pre-Acquisition Borrowings	Increase in Interest Expense
Coleman	$1,176,000	7.47%	$21,962	$9,044	$12,918
					$13,019

The assumed effective interest rate was derived using the 1998 effective rates, including amortization of deferred financing costs, of 9.05% for the term loan borrowings, which represent approximately 59% of Sunbeam's acquisition and refinancing borrowings, and 5.20% for the debentures, which represent approximately 41% of Sunbeam's acquisition and refinancing borrowings. The effect on operations of a 1/8% variance in interest rates on the acquisition and refinancing borrowings would be approximately $1.1 million per year and $0.3 million per quarter.

- (f) Represents the net increase in interest expense to reflect the pro forma effect of higher interest rates on the new financing compared with historical financing. The amount is derived as follows:

	Average Pre-Refinancing Borrowings	Effective Rate	Quarterly Interest at Refinancing Borrowings Rate	Quarterly Interest at Pre-Refinancing Borrowings Rate	Increase in Interest Expense
Historical Sunbeam	$242,500	7.47%	$4,529	$3,828	$701

- (g) Represents the domestic income tax provision accrued by Coleman of $4.4 million for the three months ended March 31, 1998. On a pro forma basis this accrual would not have been required as a consequence of the net operating losses generated by Sunbeam for the year ended December 31, 1998. No adjustment is required to the Signature Brands tax benefit since the Signature Brands loss in the first quarter of 1998 was available for carryback. No tax benefit is provided on the pro forma adjustments since the adjustments for depreciation and amortization are not deductible for income tax purposes and the deferred tax asset resulting from the remaining pro forma adjustments results in an additional valuation allowance since it is more likely than not that such deferred tax assets will not be realized from future taxable income.
- (h) Represents approximately 21% of the loss from continuing operations before extraordinary charge of Coleman for the three months ended March 31, 1998.
- (i) Represents the pro forma effects associated with completing the merger and acquiring the remaining Coleman shares outstanding. The total consideration is derived as follows:

Cash	$ 87,000
Sunbeam common stock	45,225
Sunbeam warrants	15,139
	$147,364

The portion of the consideration consisting of approximately 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock is valued at $6.75 per share, the closing price of Sunbeam's common stock on October 21, 1998, the date the Company announced the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding. The warrants to purchase approximately 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at $7 per share are valued at $3.04 per warrant, the same value ascribed to the warrant issued to a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes in August 1998 based on a valuation performed by an independent consultant. The pro forma allocation of the consideration is based on independent appraisals prepared in connection with the M & F transaction. Allocation of the total consideration and its effect on the pro forma condensed consolidated financial statements is as follows:

	Life	Allocation	Year Ended December 31, 1998
			Pro Forma Effect on:
			Cost of Goods Sold	Amortization of Goodwill and Identifiable Intangibles	Selling, General and Administrative Expense
Inventories	—	$ 4,280
Property, plant and equipment	7.9 years	12,640	$1,440		$160
Trademarks	40 years	69,980		$1,750
Assembled workforce	8 years	3,220		403
Patents	8 years	1,400		175
Minority interest	—	65,195
Deferred income taxes	—	(36,600)
Goodwill	40 years	27,249		681
		$147,364	$1,440	$3,009	$160
Pro forma effect on Nine Months Ended September 30, 1999			$1,080	$2,257	$120

The pro forma adjustment for the nine months ended September 30, 1999, assumes that the depreciation and amortization are charged to operations ratably over the year.

In deriving the above pro forma adjustments, Sunbeam assumed that the fair values used in connection with the acquisition of the initial 79% interest in Coleman were reasonable approximations of the appropriate fair values to be used in connection with the second half of this step acquisition.

Accordingly, the purchase price amounts allocated above to inventories, property, plant and equipment, trademarks, assembled workforce and patents reflect 21% of the fair values used in the acquisition of the initial 79% interest of Coleman.

The pro forma adjustment to deferred income taxes represents the recording in purchase accounting of the deferred income tax effects of the temporary differences which result from the allocation of $91.5 million of the consideration to tangible and identifiable intangible assets. The deferred income taxes have been established based on an estimated federal, state and foreign income tax rate of approximately 40%.

The pro forma adjustments also reflect:

- additional interest expense of $7.439 million and $5.579 million for the year ended December 31, 1998 and nine months ended September 30, 1999, respectively, on the $87 million portion of the consideration which is expected to be funded from Sunbeam's revolving credit facility at an interest rate of 8.55% (the rate in effect at December 31, 1998). The effect on operations of a 1/8% variance in interest rates on these borrowings would be approximately $109,000 per year and $27,000 per quarter.
 - the elimination of the minority interest in the loss on Coleman in the pro forma statement of operations.
- (j) Represents the increase in the weighted average shares of Sunbeam common stock outstanding as of December 31, 1998, adjusted for the 14,099,749 shares issued in connection with the acquisition of Coleman as if it had occurred at the beginning of the period and the approximately 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued in connection with the acquisition of the remaining Coleman shares outstanding. Since the Coleman acquisition occurred at the end of the first quarter of 1998, the weighted average shares outstanding would have increased on a pro forma basis by one quarter of the 14,099,749 shares issued, or 3,524,937 shares. The shares of common stock issuable upon conversion of the debentures, the MacAndrews & Forbes warrants, and the warrants to be issued in connection with the merger have not been included, as they would be anti-dilutive.
- (k) Represents the increase in the weighted average shares of Sunbeam common stock outstanding as of September 30, 1999, adjusted for the approximately 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock to be issued in connection with the acquisition of the remaining Coleman shares outstanding. The shares of common stock issuable upon conversion of the debentures, the MacAndrews & Forbes warrants, and the warrants to be issued in connection with the merger have not been included, as they would be anti-dilutive.
- (l) In computing the ratio of earnings to fixed charges: (a) earnings represents income (loss) from continuing operations before income taxes and fixed charges, exclusive of capitalized interest; and (b) fixed charges consist of interest expense, capitalized interest and the estimated interest portion of rental expense. For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998 and the nine months ended September 30, 1999, historical earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $797.1 million and $130.1 million, respectively. For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998 and the nine months ended September 30, 1999, on a pro forma basis, earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $834.9 million and $139.1 million, respectively.

SELECTED CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL INFORMATION OF SUNBEAM

On April 6, 1998, Sunbeam completed the cash acquisitions of First Alert and Signature Brands. The acquisitions were accounted for under the purchase method of accounting and, accordingly, the financial position and results of operations of each acquired entity are included in the Consolidated Financial Statements from the respective dates of acquisition.
 - For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998, Sunbeam took an extraordinary charge of $122.4 million related to the early extinguishments of debt and took other charges of:

- For the fiscal year ended December 29, 1996, Sunbeam took restructuring, asset impairment and other charges of $239.2 million before taxes. See Notes 12 and 13 to Sunbeam's consolidated financial statements included in this prospectus.
- The "earnings (loss) from discontinued operations, net of taxes" and "loss on sale of discontinued operations, net of taxes" represent results from Sunbeam's furniture business, net of taxes and the estimated loss on disposal. See Note 13 to Sunbeam's consolidated financial statements included in this prospectus.
- In computing the ratio of earnings to fixed charges:
 - earnings represent income (loss) from continuing operations before income taxes and fixed charges (exclusive of capitalized interest); and
 - fixed charges consist of interest expense, capitalized interest and the estimated interest portion of rental expense.

For the fiscal year ended December 29, 1996 and the fiscal year ended December 31, 1998, historical earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $262.2 million and $797.1 million, respectively. For the nine months ended September 30, 1998 and 1999, historical earnings were insufficient to cover fixed charges by $476.7 million and $130.1 million, respectively. MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION
AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

The following discussion should be read in conjunction with the accompanying Consolidated and Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements (and related notes), Selected Consolidated Financial Information of Sunbeam and Unaudited Pro Forma Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements appearing elsewhere in this document.

On March 30, 1998, Sunbeam, through a wholly owned subsidiary, acquired approximately 81% of the outstanding shares of common stock of Coleman from a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes in exchange for 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam's common stock and approximately $160 million in cash. In addition, Sunbeam assumed approximately $1,016 million in debt. Immediately afterwards, as a result of the exercise of Coleman employee stock options, Sunbeam's indirect beneficial ownership of Coleman decreased to approximately 79%. Sunbeam's agreement for the acquisition of the remaining publicly held Coleman shares in a merger transaction provides that the remaining Coleman shareholders will receive:

- approximately 6.7 million shares of Sunbeam common stock—0.5677 of a share for each outstanding Coleman share; and
- approximately $87 million in cash—$6.44 for each outstanding Coleman share and cash outs of unexercised Coleman employee stock options equal to the difference between $27.50 per share and the exercise price of the options.

Sunbeam expects to complete the merger in the fourth quarter of 1999 or early in the first quarter of 2000, although there can be no assurance that the merger will occur during that time. See Notes 2 and 15 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements and "LITIGATION SETTLEMENT AND WARRANTS" for information regarding the settlement of claims relating to the Coleman acquisition, the terms of which provide for the issuance at the time of the merger of warrants to purchase up to approximately 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam's common stock at $7 per share.

On April 6, 1998, Sunbeam completed the cash acquisitions of First Alert, a leading manufacturer of smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, and Signature Brands, a leading manufacturer of consumer and professional products. The First Alert and the Signature Brands acquisitions were valued at approximately $182 million, including $133 million of cash and $49 million of assumed debt, and $255 million, reflecting cash paid, including the required retirement or defeasance of debt, respectively.

The acquisitions were recorded under the purchase method of accounting and accordingly, the financial position and results of operations of each acquired entity are included in the Consolidated Financial Statements from the respective dates of acquisition. The purchase prices of the acquired entities have been allocated to individual assets acquired and liabilities assumed based on estimates of fair values determined by independent appraisals at the dates of acquisition.

Fiscal Year

To standardize the fiscal period ends of Sunbeam and the acquired entities, effective with its 1998 fiscal year, Sunbeam has changed its fiscal year end from the Sunday nearest December 31 to a calendar year. See Note 1 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements.

Asset Impairment and Other Charges

Goodwill

When changes in circumstances indicate that the carrying value of goodwill may not be recoverable, Sunbeam estimates future cash flows using the recoverability method -undiscounted future cash flows and including related interest charges—as a basis for recording any impairment loss. An impairment loss is then recorded to adjust the carrying value of goodwill to the recoverable amount. The impairment loss taken is no greater than the amount by which the carrying value of the net assets of the business exceeds its fair value. Due to First Alert's financial performance in 1998 and its prospects for 1999 and beyond, Sunbeam determined that the goodwill relating to this acquisition was impaired. Accordingly, based on its determination of fair value, Sunbeam has written off the net carrying value of goodwill of $62.5 million in the fourth quarter of 1998.

Fixed Asset Impairment and Excess and Obsolete Inventory Reserves

In the second quarter of 1998, Sunbeam decided to outsource or discontinue a substantial number of products—principally breadmakers, toasters and certain other appliances, air and water filtration products, and the elimination of certain stock keeping units ("SKUs") within existing product lines, primarily relating to appliances, grills and grill accessories—previously made by Sunbeam, resulting in some facilities and equipment that will either no longer be used or will be utilized in a significantly different manner. Accordingly, a charge of $29.6 million was recorded in Cost of Goods Sold to write some of these assets down to their estimated fair market value. Approximately 80% of this charge related to machinery, equipment and tooling at Sunbeam's Mexico City and Hattiesburg, Mississippi manufacturing plants, the estimated fair value for which was derived through an auction process. The remainder of this charge related to tooling and equipment at various other facilities, which either had a nominal value or the fair market value of which was derived through an auction process. These assets were taken out of service at the time of the write-down and consequently were not depreciated further after the write-down. The net carrying value of these assets after the write-down approximated $2.2 million and these assets are expected to be disposed of by September 30, 1999. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $2.6 million in 1998, $4.2 million in 1997 and $3.5 million in 1996.

Personnel at the Mexico City facility were notified in the second quarter of 1998 that the plant was scheduled for closure at year-end 1998; accordingly, at that time a liability of $1.8 million was recorded in Cost of Goods Sold primarily for employee severance. The employee severance was related to approximately 1,200 positions of which approximately 1,100 were terminated, and $1.4 million paid in severance, as of December 31, 1998. Substantially all of the remaining positions were eliminated and severance payments were paid by July 31, 1999. In the third quarter of 1998, Sunbeam recorded in Cost of Goods Sold an additional provision for impairment of fixed assets of $3.1 million in an acquired entity relating to assets taken out of service for which there was no remaining value. The asset impairment resulted from management's decision, during the third quarter, to discontinue certain SKU's within product lines, principally generators, compressors and propane cylinders. These fixed assets were taken out of service at the time of the write-down and consequently were not depreciated further after the write-down. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $0.8 million in 1998. In the fourth quarter of 1998, Sunbeam recorded a $7.1 million charge as a result of management's decision, during the fourth quarter, to outsource the production of some appliances (principally irons). This charge to Cost of Goods Sold primarily consists of a provision for certain tooling and equipment ($6.7 million) and severance and related benefits ($0.4 million). This tooling and equipment, which had no remaining value, was written off and depreciation of this equipment was discontinued at the time of the write-down. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $2.4 million in 1998, $2.3 million in 1997 and $0.9 million in 1996. The severance costs related to approximately 45 production employees, none of whom was terminated as of December 31, 1998. It is anticipated that these employees' positions will be eliminated and the severance obligation paid by December 31, 1999.

During 1997 and the first half of 1998, Sunbeam built inventories in anticipation of 1998 sales volumes which did not materialize. As a result, it has been and will continue to be necessary to dispose of some portions of excess inventories at amounts less than cost. Accordingly, during 1998, when it became evident that the anticipated sales volumes would not materialize, Sunbeam recorded $58.2 million in charges (of which $46.4 million, $2.2 million and $9.6 million, were recorded during the second, third and fourth quarters, respectively) to properly state this inventory at the lower-of-cost-or-market. This inventory primarily related to some appliances, grills and grill accessories. Sunbeam also recorded a charge of $11.0 million during the second quarter for excess inventories for raw materials and work in process which will not be used due to outsourcing the production of breadmakers, toasters and some other appliances. In addition, during 1998, Sunbeam made the decision to exit some product lines, primarily air and water filtration products, and to eliminate some SKUs within existing product lines, primarily relating to appliances, grills and grill accessories. As a result of this decision, a $26.6 million charge was recorded during the second quarter to properly state this inventory at the lower-of-cost-or-market. Total charges for excess inventories recorded at the lower-of-cost-or-market based upon management's best estimate of net realizable value, amounted to approximately $95.8 million at December 31, 1998. See Note 12 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements for asset impairment and other charges recorded in conjunction with a 1996 restructuring plan.

Restatements

On June 30, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the audit committee of its board of directors was initiating a review into the accuracy of Sunbeam's prior financial statements. The audit committee's review has since been completed and, as a result of its findings, Sunbeam has restated its previously issued consolidated financial statements for 1996 and 1997 and the first quarter of 1998. Based upon the review, it was determined that some revenue had been inappropriately recognized, some costs and allowances had not been accrued or were improperly recorded, and some costs were inappropriately included in, and subsequently charged to, restructuring, asset impairment and other costs within the Consolidated Statement of Operations for the years ended December 29, 1996 and December 28, 1997 and the three months ended March 31, 1998. The financial statements for the years ended December 28, 1997 and December 29, 1996 were restated, audited and filed on Form 10-K/A with the SEC on November 9, 1998. The accompanying 1996 and 1997 Consolidated Financial Statements and 1998 Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements of Sunbeam present the restated results.

In connection with the restatements referred to above, Arthur Andersen advised Sunbeam that it believed there were material weaknesses in Sunbeam's internal controls. In order to address these material weaknesses, Sunbeam has increased the number of senior financial personnel and has implemented comprehensive review procedures of operating and financial information. Additionally, as explained in more detail under "—Year 2000 Readiness Disclosure" below, Sunbeam is in the process of significantly enhancing its operating systems. Sunbeam anticipates that its systems enhancements will be completed in 1999. See "CHANGES IN AND DISAGREEMENTS WITH ACCOUNTANTS ON ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE."

Nine Months Ended September 30, 1999 Compared to Nine Months Ended September 30, 1998

Net sales for the nine months ended September 30, 1999 and 1998 were $1,786.4 million and $1,322.1 million respectively, an increase of $464.3 million. Results for the nine months ended September 30, 1998 include Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert from their respective acquisition dates. After adjusting 1998 sales to include sales of the acquired companies for the periods from the beginning of 1998 through the respective dates of acquisition, combined historical net sales would be $1,624.0 million. 1999 net sales increased approximately $162 million or approximately 10% over 1998 combined historical net sales. Information that adjusts for the results of the acquisitions prior to the actual acquisition dates (the "combined historical" information) is provided for informational purposes only and is to enhance comparability of the period presented. This information is not necessarily indicative of what the combined results would have been had these acquisitions occurred at the beginning of the periods presented or the results for any future period. The increase in net sales is driven by the Outdoor Leisure group which had an increase of approximately $123 million in 1999 as compared to the combined historical net sales in the same period in the prior year. This increase over combined historical net sales was largely due to sales of outdoor recreation products and Powermate® generators. The higher level of sales of these products is believed to be partially attributable to heightened consumer sensitivity to the need for emergency preparedness. Sunbeam believes that this heightened sensitivity is reflective of a combination of factors, including weather conditions and Year 2000 considerations. Household net sales in 1999 increased approximately $11 million compared to 1998 combined historical net sales. Sunbeam believes that the decrease in shipments in the prior year in order to allow trade inventories to return to a normal level is primarily responsible for this increase. This factor affects the year to year comparisons for each of the operating groups. Excluding the effect on 1998 of loading, Sunbeam believes that Household net sales in 1999 were approximately the same as in the prior year. Within the Household segment, net sales of personal care products increased as a result of a strengthening retail environment largely offset by decreases in sales of appliances. International net sales in 1999 increased $30.3 million over 1998 combined historical net sales. Higher sales in Canada, Europe and Japan resulted predominantly from strong retail demand of Powermate® and outdoor recreation products. This increase was partially offset by the impact of weak economic conditions in Latin America.

Gross margin for the first nine months of 1999 was $452.3 million or $403.6 million higher than the comparable period in 1998. During 1998, Sunbeam recorded a number of largely non-recurring charges which affect the comparability of gross margin in the first nine months of 1999 over the same period in the prior year. These charges are summarized below:

- In the second and third quarters of 1998, Sunbeam recorded charges totaling $86.2 million relating to fixed asset impairments and provisions for excess and obsolete inventory totaling $32.7 million. These charges, which were recorded in Cost of Goods Sold, are discussed above in the section "Fixed Asset and Excess Obsolete Inventory Reserves."

In addition to the charge taken in 1998, the excess and obsolete inventory referenced above has impacted Sunbeam's operating results in several ways, with two primary effects. First, gross margins have been impacted by sales, at below normal prices, of obsolete inventory into non-traditional channels and excess inventory into traditional channels. In addition, due to the high levels of excess inventory at the end of 1998, Sunbeam's usage of its manufacturing facilities has been lower than normal, resulting in lower fixed cost absorption, which in turn, reduced gross margins in 1999.

- Cost of Goods Sold for the first nine months of 1998 also reflects the non-recurring impact ($28.1 million) of Sunbeam recording the 1998 acquisitions using the purchase method of accounting. In accordance with this accounting method, inventory pertaining to acquisitions was recorded at fair value. The fair value of the inventory exceeded the book value reflected on the balance sheets of the acquired companies as of the respective acquisition dates. The excess of the fair value of inventory over its pre-acquisition book value was recorded in cost of sales as the inventory was sold.

Adjusting for the combined results of the acquired companies and excluding the effects of 1998 non-recurring items, which are summarized above, gross margin for the first nine months of 1999 increased approximately $182 million over the 1998 combined historical gross margin. As a percentage of net sales, gross margin improved to approximately 25% in the first nine months of 1999 as compared to approximately 4% in the 1998 period. The gross margin percentage for the 1998 period adjusted for the non-recurring charges and for the effect of the acquired companies was approximately 17% of combined historical net sales. The Household group contributed approximately 30% of the 1999 gross margin improvement over the 1998 combined historical gross margin. The improvement in the Household group's gross margin resulted primarily from lower sales deduction rates, improved manufacturing processes and controls, additional sales volume, and improved product mix. The Outdoor Leisure group contributed approximately 50% of the 1999 gross margin improvement over the 1998 combined historical gross margin. Approximately 80% of the improvement in the Outdoor Leisure group's gross margin resulted from additional volume and related improved manufacturing overhead absorption, as well as improvements in manufacturing. The balance of the increase resulted from improved product mix. The International group contributed approximately 20% of the 1999 gross margin improvement over 1998 combined historical gross margin. Approximately 40% of the improvement in the International group's gross margin resulted from the shut down of the Mexico City manufacturing facility which had experienced high material usage costs and employee benefit costs in the prior year. The remaining improvement resulted from increased sales volume, a lower level of product returns and improved product mix.

SG&A expense for the first nine months of 1999 was $449.3 million, an increase of $8.9 million or 2.0% over the same period in the prior year. After adjusting 1998 SG&A expense to include the acquired companies' SG&A expense for the period from the beginning of 1998 through the respective dates of acquisition ($100.9 million), combined historical SG&A expense was $541.3 million. Since the combined historical 1998 SG&A expenses were derived by adding the acquired companies' pre-acquisition period costs to the reported nine months' results of Sunbeam, the combined historical SG&A expenses include $30.4 million of amortization of intangibles expense representing both pre- and post-acquisition periods, as well as approximately $12 million of transaction costs incurred by the acquired companies relating to them being purchased by Sunbeam. Excluding these costs and the effects of the following, adjusted 1998 SG&A expenses were approximately $378 million.

- $70.0 million recorded in the third quarter of 1998 related to the issuance of a warrant to a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, as discussed below,
- approximately $31 million of 1998 compensation expense recorded in connection with the new February 1998 employment agreement with Sunbeam's former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other senior officers of Sunbeam and approximately $3.8 million of severance for former employees. The new employment agreements provided for, among other items, the acceleration of vesting of restricted stock and the forfeiture of unvested restricted stock that had been granted under the executives' prior employment agreements, new restricted stock grants and options to purchase common shares. In addition, the new employment agreements provided for income tax gross-ups with respect to any tax assessed on the restricted stock grants and acceleration of vesting of restricted stock. (See Note 8 to the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements);
- $10.8 million, $4.0 million, and $2.1 million of costs recorded in 1998 related to expenses associated with the restatement efforts (principally representing legal, accounting and auditing costs of $6.1 million and $4.7 million, respectively), a corporate office relocation and Year 2000 compliance efforts, respectively.

Excluding amortization of intangibles expense of $38.4 million for the first nine months of 1999 and $18.7 million of costs related to Year 2000 compliance efforts, adjusted 1999 SG&A costs were $392.2 million, an increase of approximately $14 million over adjusted 1998 SG&A expense. As previously discussed, this increase is primarily attributable to higher levels of selling and administrative costs driven by increased net sales, headcount increases to support future growth and costs associated with certain redundant operations resulting from Sunbeam's 1998 acquisitions which operations Sunbeam is integrating and the decision to bring in-house certain functions that had previously been outsourced. Sunbeam is in the process of fully integrating certain of these functions and expects that when this process has been completed consolidated SG&A expense for these functions will be reduced. Partially offsetting these increases in SG&A expense are certain 1998 expenses which did not reoccur in 1999. These 1998 expenses include increases associated with restructuring reserve at Coleman (approximately $7 million) and higher bad debt expense (approximately $5 million).

On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that, following investigation and negotiation conducted by a Special Committee of the Board of Directors consisting of four outside directors not affiliated with M&F, Sunbeam had entered into a settlement agreement with a subsidiary of M&F pursuant to which Sunbeam was released from certain threatened claims of M&F and its subsidiaries arising from the Coleman acquisition and M&F agreed to provide certain management personnel and assistance to Sunbeam in exchange for the issuance to the M&F subsidiary of a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase up to 23 million shares of the Company's common stock at a cash exercise price of $7.00 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Sunbeam concluded that the agreement to issue this warrant did not result in a new measurement date for the purposes of determining the purchase price for Coleman and accounted for the issuance of this warrant in the third quarter of 1998 as a cost of settling a potential claim. Accordingly, a $70.0 million non-cash SG&A expense was recorded in the third quarter of 1998, based upon a valuation performed as of August 1998 using facts existing at that time. The valuation was conducted by an independent consultant engaged by the special committee of the board of directors.

Operating results for the first nine months of 1999 and 1998, were a profit of $3.0 million in 1999 and a loss of $391.7 million in 1998. Adjusted for the historical results of the acquired companies and excluding non-recurring charges, as previously described, operating results for the 1999 and 1998 periods were a profit of $21.7 million and a loss of $149.2 million, respectively. This change resulted from the factors discussed above.

Interest expense increased from $88.5 million in 1998 to $136.6 million in 1999. Approximately 75% of the change related to higher borrowing levels in 1999 resulting primarily from borrowings for the acquisitions that were outstanding for the entire 1999 nine-month period as compared to only a portion of the 1998 period. The balance of this increase was primarily driven by the amortization of the loan commitment fee (approximately $2 million) Sunbeam is obligated to pay under the terms of Sunbeam's bank credit facility and the expense related to liquidated damages payable to debenture holders (approximately $3 million).

Other income, net of $4.6 million in 1999 included a gain of approximately $4 million relating to the sale of the Mexico City facility. This gain was partially offset by losses from other miscellaneous asset sales of approximately $0.3 million. The remaining other income, net in 1999 resulted from favorable foreign exchange rates, primarily from Sunbeam's operations in Japan. Other income, net of $4.1 million in 1998 included $8.0 million from the settlement of a lawsuit partially offset by net foreign exchange losses, primarily from Mexico.

The minority interest reported in 1999 and 1998 relates to the minority interest held in Coleman by public shareholders.

Approximately $6 million of the $12.7 million income tax expense recorded in 1999 related to U.S. tax liability generated by Coleman as a separate U.S. tax filing entity. As previously discussed, in July 1999, Sunbeam acquired a sufficient ownership interest in Coleman to permit it to file consolidated U.S. tax returns with Coleman for all future periods. The remaining tax expense recorded in 1999 related to taxes on foreign income and was partially offset by the favorable resolution of an income tax audit. Tax expense recorded in 1998 was nearly all related to foreign taxes. No net tax benefit was recorded on Sunbeam's losses in either year as it is management's assessment that Sunbeam cannot demonstrate that it is more likely than not that deferred tax assets resulting from these losses would be realized through future taxable income.

On July 12, 1999, Sunbeam acquired 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock for an aggregate purchase price of approximately $31 million. These shares, together with the shares of Coleman common stock Sunbeam owns, enable Sunbeam to exercise 80.01% of the total voting power of Coleman's outstanding capital stock as of July 12, 1999. This class of preferred stock was created by Coleman and acquired by Sunbeam in order to enable Coleman and Sunbeam to file consolidated federal income tax returns, and in certain jurisdictions, consolidated state income tax returns, prior to the consummation of the Coleman merger. In connection with the issuance of the shares of preferred stock, Sunbeam entered into a tax sharing agreement with Coleman, pursuant to which Coleman will pay to Sunbeam amounts equal to the federal and state income taxes that would have been payable by Coleman had Coleman not been included in the consolidated income tax return of Sunbeam. The net proceeds from the issuance of the shares by Coleman of its voting preferred stock to Sunbeam were used by Coleman to make a partial repayment of loans outstanding from Sunbeam under Coleman's intercompany note. (See Note 8 to the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements.)

In March 1998, Sunbeam prepaid a $75.0 million 7.85% industrial revenue bond related to its Hattiesburg facility originally due in 2009. In connection with the early extinguishment of this debt, Sunbeam recognized an extraordinary charge in the first quarter of 1998. As a result of repayment of certain indebtedness assumed in the Coleman acquisition, Sunbeam also recognized an extraordinary charge in the second quarter of 1998. The debt assumed in connection with the Coleman acquisition was repaid as a result of the requirements under the terms of Sunbeam's bank credit facility. These extraordinary charges consisted of redemption premiums ($106.9 million), unamortized debt discount ($13.8 million) and unamortized deferred financing costs ($1.7 million) and were net of income taxes ($10.7 million).

On November 9, 1999, Sunbeam announced a plan to divest Eastpak and also plans to divest certain non-essential assets. Proceeds from these assets sales are estimated to be $200 million and will be primarily used to pay down debt.

Results of operations for the year ended December 31, 1998 include the results of Coleman from March 30, 1998 and of Signature Brands and First Alert from April 6, 1998, the respective dates of the acquisitions. The acquired companies generated net sales of $1,009.0 million from the acquisition dates noted above through December 31, 1998, with corresponding gross margin of $205.1 million, or 20% of sales.

SG&A costs recorded by the acquired companies were $329.9 million in the period, yielding an operating loss of $124.8 million.

For the acquired companies, net sales from the dates of the acquisitions through fiscal year-end were approximately $152 million lower than the same period in the prior year. This decline was caused by lower net sales at Coleman ($81.5 million), Signature Brands ($31.2 million) and First Alert ($39.2 million). Excluding the effects of Coleman's sale of its safety and security business in March 1998 and the discontinuation of its pressure washer business during 1997, Coleman's 1998 sales would have been approximately $4 million lower than in 1997. Sunbeam believes that Signature Brands' decline, primarily in its coffee and tea products, resulted largely from lost distribution and insufficient attention to the business during part of 1998. Sunbeam believes that all of the acquired businesses were, to some extent, impacted by the disruption that arose from the integration with Sunbeam and the related management changes, both at the acquired companies and at Sunbeam. First Alert's sales decline related predominantly to increased inventory positions in the domestic channel in 1997 as compared to 1998 with the remaining decrease primarily related to more favorable weather conditions in the fourth quarter of 1997 as compared to the same period in 1998 which affected consumer shopping patterns. Excluding the effects from purchase accounting and the write-off of First Alert's goodwill, as discussed in Note 2 to the Consolidated Financial Statements, operating profit for these three companies declined by approximately $45 million since the acquisitions in 1998 as compared to the same period in the prior year, resulting primarily from lower net sales. Although there can be no assurance, management anticipates that results from the acquired companies will significantly improve during 1999 due to, among other things, the absence of the factors causing disruption and insufficient focus at these three companies during 1998.

Consolidated net sales for the year ended December 31, 1998 were $1,836.9 million, an increase of $763.8 million versus the year ended December 28, 1997. After excluding:

- $1,009.0 million of sales generated by the acquired companies;
- $5.5 million of sales in 1998 resulting from the change in fiscal year end, as described in Note 1 to the Consolidated Financial Statements;
- $12.7 million in 1998 and $31.3 million in 1997 from sales of excess or discontinued inventory for which the inventory carrying value was substantially equivalent to the sales value;
- $4.2 million from 1997 sales relating to divested product lines which are not classified as discontinued operations - time and temperature products and Counselor and Borg branded scales; and
- a $5.4 million benefit in 1997 from the reduction of cooperative advertising accruals no longer required (cooperative advertising costs are recorded as deductions in determining net sales);

net sales on an adjusted basis ("Adjusted Sales") of $809.7 million in 1998 decreased approximately 22% from Adjusted Sales of $1,032.2 million in 1997. Product sales were adversely impacted by a number of factors, with the largest being changes in retail inventory levels from channel loading which took place in 1997. Sunbeam believes the year-to-year effect of these inventory reductions amounted to over $100 million. Additionally, losses in distribution of outdoor cooking products estimated at approximately $60 million, the estimated effect of price discounting on appliance and grill products of approximately $14 million, and estimated higher provisions for customer returns and allowances of approximately $30 million contributed to the lower sales in 1998. The increase in customer returns and allowances resulted from:

- increased returns of approximately $16 million principally resulting from channel loading and other aggressive sales practices (estimated at approximately $9 million) which began in the fourth quarter of 1997 and continued in the first quarter of 1998, a blanket recall ($3.0 million) and the discontinuance of certain product lines (approximately $4 million) principally air and water products; and
- additional customer allowances of approximately $14 million primarily to induce sales during the first quarter of 1998.

The remaining sales decline was due in part to exiting some product SKUs.

Domestic Adjusted Sales declined approximately 21% or $170 million from 1997. Sunbeam believes more than half of the sales decline was due to increased retail inventory levels in 1997 versus decreased inventory positions at customers in 1998. Excluding this effect, sales were still lower than the prior year throughout the business, with the most significant decline occurring in outdoor cooking products sales. During 1997, Sunbeam lost a significant portion of its outdoor cooking products distribution, including the majority of its grill parts and accessories products distribution. The outdoor cooking products sales decline was attributable predominantly to this lost distribution and to price discounting. The majority of the remaining sales decline was due to higher provisions for customer returns and allowances.

International Adjusted Sales, which represented 22% of Adjusted Sales for 1998, decreased approximately 24% compared with the International Adjusted Sales for the same period a year ago. Sunbeam believes this sales decline was primarily attributable to decreasing customer inventory levels as compared with the prior year. Sales were also adversely impacted by a decision to stop selling to some export distributors in Latin America and by poor economic conditions in that region. In addition, lost distribution in Canada contributed to the sales decline from the prior year.

Excluding the effects of:

- the gross margin generated from the inclusion of the acquired companies' operations in the period of $205.1 million;
- $0.8 million from the impact of the change in fiscal year-end;
- $128.4 million in 1998 in charges recorded in the second and fourth quarters related to excess inventory and fixed assets impairments;
- $15.8 million from the benefit in 1997 from the reversal of reserves no longer required, including $5.4 million of cooperative advertising accruals; and
- a $2.8 million benefit recorded in the second quarter of 1997 resulting from capitalizing some manufacturing supplies inventories which were previously expensed;

there was a negative gross margin of $29.4 million for 1998 versus a gross margin of $223.5 million for 1997. This reduction in gross margin was principally attributable to the following:

- approximately $145 million related to lower sales volume and unfavorable manufacturing efficiencies resulting from lower production levels associated with the lower sales volumes and high inventory levels in 1998;
- approximately $65 million related to lower price realization, higher costs of customer returns and allowances, and adverse sales mix in 1998;
- approximately $12 million related to higher costs in 1998 associated with warranty, of which $3.0 million related to a blanket recall, with the remaining increase attributable to increased provisions in response to higher overall warranty expense experiences; and
- approximately $20 million related to unfavorable inventory adjustments, of which the most significant single factor was physical inventory adjustments in the domestic business.

Adverse product sales mix was due to the loss of a majority of the grill accessory products distribution as accessories generate significantly better margins than the average margins on sales of most of Sunbeam's other products.

Excluding the effects of the following, SG&A expenses were approximately $254 million in 1998, approximately $105 million, or 70% higher than in 1997:

- $329.9 million of SG&A charges in the acquired companies, including the $62.5 million goodwill write-off related to First Alert;
- $70.0 million recorded in the third quarter of 1998 related to the issuance of a warrant to a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, as discussed below;

- $2.3 million of SG&A expense in 1998 from the change in the fiscal period;
- a $3.0 million benefit in 1998 and a $12.1 million benefit in 1997 from the reversal of reserves no longer required. The 1998 benefit consists of a $3.0 million reversal in the first quarter of 1998 of environmental reserves which are no longer required as a result of a favorable development at a remediation site. The 1997 benefit consists primarily of a $8.1 million reversal of litigation reserves, established in 1996, which were no longer required in the fourth quarter of 1997 due to a favorable settlement during 1997. The remaining $4.0 million 1997 benefit consists of reversals of other accruals primarily relating to consulting fees, health insurance and advertising. For further information see Note 17 to the Consolidated Financial Statements;
- approximately $31 million of 1998 compensation expense recorded in connection with new February 1998 employment agreements with Sunbeam's former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other former senior officers and approximately $3 million of severance in 1998 for some former employees. The new employment agreements provided for Sunbeam to pay these former employees amounts which reimbursed them for their personal tax liabilities resulting from shares issued in connection with the accelerated vesting of restricted stock granted under their July 1996 agreements ($6.9 million), as well as on the new unrestricted stock grants under the February 1998 agreements ($9.8 million). The charge also includes the value, at approximately $39 per share, of 300,000 restricted shares and 45,000 restricted shares which vested in February 1998 for Sunbeam's then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other then senior officers, respectively ($13.6 million). In addition, $0.4 million was expensed during 1998 relating to the amortization of the 1996 restricted stock awards. See Note 8 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements for information regarding the terms of these employment agreements;
- $20.4 million, $6.1 million and $4.0 million of costs recorded in 1998 related to costs associated with the restatement efforts, principally representing legal, accounting and auditing, and consulting costs of $14.1 million, $5.7 million and $0.6 million, respectively, Year 2000 compliance efforts and a corporate office relocation, respectively; and
- $15.8 million of restructuring related charges recorded in 1997, charged to operations as incurred, represent employee relocation and recruiting ($6.2 million), equipment relocation and installation ($5.6 million) and package redesign costs ($4.0 million).

The increase of approximately $105 million in SG&A expense in 1998 over 1997 is principally due to several factors:

- Corporate administrative costs increased by approximately $47 million, reflecting additional personnel and related relocation, travel and other costs, as well as increased outside provider fees, telecommunications expense and insurance.
- Higher allowances for accounts receivable in 1998, accounting for approximately $20 million of the increase, related primarily to collection issues with customers in the United States and in Latin America, including several major customers who have filed and/or threatened bankruptcy.
- Advertising, marketing and selling expenses increased by approximately $13 million, reflecting a national television campaign for grills and increased activity in market research, package design and sales efforts. Higher inventory levels in 1998 and costs associated with outsourcing small parts fulfillment led to higher distribution and warehousing costs of approximately $12 million.
- Increased environmental reserves for divested and closed facilities added approximately $5 million. Approximately half of the environmental reserve increase reflected revisions to estimates of costs to remediate existing sites. These revisions were based on obtaining additional information in the fourth quarter of 1998 about costs of planned remediation actions and costs associated with additional remediation actions. The remaining amount was to provide for revisions to reserves for estimated losses for damages related to environmental sites. These revisions were based on obtaining additional information in the fourth quarter of 1998 regarding the level of damages sought and the costs and probability of defending Sunbeam's position in these actions.

• Settlement of a patent infringement action resulted in additional expense of approximately $4 million. Remaining legal expenses recorded in the year of approximately $1 million for investigation, defense and settlement of both new and previously existing issues were nearly equal to amounts incurred for similar items in 1997. Additionally, as described above, SG&A includes $14.1 million of legal costs recorded in 1998 associated with the restatement efforts. Amounts accrued for litigation matters represent the anticipated costs (damages and/or settlement amounts) in connection with pending litigation and claims and related anticipated legal fees. The costs are accrued when it is both probable that an asset has been impaired or a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated. The accruals are based upon Sunbeam's assessment, after consultation with counsel, of probable loss based on the facts and circumstances of each case, the legal issues involved, the nature of the claim made, the nature of the damages sought and any relevant information about the plaintiff, and other significant factors which vary by case. When it is not possible to estimate a specific expected amount of loss to be incurred, Sunbeam evaluates the range of possible losses and records the minimum end of the range. As of December 31, 1998 and December 28, 1997, Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $31.2 million (representing $17.5 million and $13.7 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively) and $9.9 million (representing $3.0 million and $6.9 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively). It is anticipated that the $31.2 million accrual will be paid as follows: $22.4 million in 1999, $7.5 million in 2000 and $1.3 million in 2001. Sunbeam believes, based on information known to it on December 31, 1998, that anticipated probable costs of litigation matters existing as of December 31, 1998 have been adequately reserved to the extent determinable.

During 1997, Sunbeam determined that the amounts accrued at December 29, 1996 for Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges recorded in fiscal 1996 exceeded amounts ultimately required. Accordingly, the 1997 Consolidated Statement of Operations reflects the reversal of accruals no longer required, resulting in a Restructuring and Asset Impairment Benefit of $14.6 million. This reversal was reflected in the third ($5.8 million) and fourth ($8.8 million) quarters of 1997 when it became evident that such accruals were no longer required.

On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that, following investigation and negotiation conducted by a special committee of the board of directors consisting of four outside directors not affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes, Sunbeam had entered into a settlement agreement with a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, pursuant to which Sunbeam was released from certain threatened claims of MacAndrews & Forbes and its affiliates arising from the Coleman acquisition and MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide certain management personnel and assistance to Sunbeam in exchange for the issuance to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase up to 23 million shares of Sunbeam's common stock at a cash exercise price of $7.00 per share, subject to antidilution adjustments. Sunbeam concluded that the agreement to issue this warrant did not result in a new measurement date for the purposes of determining the purchase price for Coleman and has accounted for the issuance of this warrant as a cost of settling a potential claim. Accordingly, a $70.0 million non-cash SG&A expense was recorded in the third quarter of 1998, based on a valuation performed as of August 1998 using facts existing at that time. The valuation was conducted by an independent consultant engaged by the special committee of the board of directors.

Operating results for 1998 and 1997, on an adjusted basis as described above, were a loss of approximately $283 million in 1998 and a profit of approximately $74 million in 1997. This change resulted from the factors discussed above.

Interest expense increased from $11.4 million for the twelve months of 1997 to $131.1 million for the same period in 1998. Approximately 70% of the change related to higher borrowing levels in 1998 for the acquisitions, with the remainder due to increased borrowings to fund working capital, capital expenditures and the operating losses.

Other income, net increased in 1998 by $4.8 million due to approximately $8 million from the settlement of a lawsuit, and approximately $4 million of increased net gains from foreign exchange in the period. The foreign exchange net gains were primarily from Mexico. Increased losses on sales of fixed assets of approximately $5 million and increased expenses related to the bank credit facility partially offset the above mentioned income. The increased credit facility expenses largely related to unused facility fees.

The minority interest reported in 1998 relates to the minority interest held in Coleman by minority stockholders.

During 1998, the current tax provision arose largely from taxes on the earnings of foreign subsidiaries as well as franchise taxes. Deferred tax benefits were recognized in 1998 principally due to net operating losses incurred subsequent to the acquisitions. These benefits were realized through the use of deferred tax credits that were established in connection with the acquisitions to the extent that such credits are expected to be realized in the loss carryforward period. Throughout 1998, Sunbeam increased the income tax valuation allowance on deferred tax assets to $290.5 million. This increase reflects management's assessment that it is more likely than not that these deferred tax assets will not be realized through future taxable income. This assessment, which was initially made in the fourth quarter of 1997, resulted from the significant leverage undertaken by Sunbeam in connection with its acquisitions and the continuing decline in Sunbeam's net sales and earnings, as well as the operating losses incurred throughout the 1998 year. The 1997 effective tax rate was higher than the federal statutory income tax rate primarily due to state taxes, the effects of foreign earnings and dividends taxed at other rates and the impact of providing a valuation allowance on deferred tax assets.

In 1998, Sunbeam prepaid debt assumed in the acquisitions and prepaid an industrial revenue bond related to its Hattiesburg facility. The debt assumed in connection with the Coleman acquisition was repaid as a result of the requirements under the terms of Sunbeam's new credit facility. In connection with these early extinguishments of debt, Sunbeam recognized an extraordinary charge of $122.4 million, consisting of redemption premiums ($106.9 million), unamortized debt discount ($13.8 million) and unamortized deferred financing costs ($1.7 million).

Sunbeam's discontinued furniture business, which was sold in March 1997, had revenues of $51.6 million in the first quarter of 1997 prior to the sale and nominal earnings for that period. As a result of the sale of Sunbeam's furniture business assets (primarily inventory, property, plant and equipment), Sunbeam received $69.0 million in cash, retained approximately $50 million in accounts receivable and retained some liabilities. The final purchase price for the furniture business was subject to a post-closing adjustment based on the terms of the sale agreement and in the first quarter of 1997, after completion of the sale, Sunbeam recorded an additional loss on disposal of $14.0 million net of applicable income tax benefits of $8.5 million.

1996 Restructuring Plan and Other Charges and Benefits

In November 1996, Sunbeam announced the details of a restructuring plan. The plan included:

- the consolidation of administrative functions;
- the reduction of manufacturing and warehouse facilities;
- the centralization of Sunbeam's procurement function;
- the reduction of Sunbeam's product offerings and SKUs; and
- the elimination of some businesses and product lines.

As part of the restructuring plan, Sunbeam consolidated six divisional and regional headquarters functions into a single worldwide corporate headquarters and outsourced some back office activities resulting in a reduction in total back-office/administrative headcount. Overall, the restructuring plan called for a reduction in the number of production facilities from 26 to 8 and the elimination of over 6,000 positions from Sunbeam's workforce, including 3,300 from the disposition of some business operations and the elimination of approximately 2,800 other positions, some of which were outsourced. Sunbeam completed the major phases of the restructuring plan by July 1997.

The 1996 restructuring plan was unable to improve earnings over the long term for a number of reasons, including, but not limited to, its failure to realize some of the anticipated costs savings and the negative impact that implementation of the restructuring plan had on sales, product quality, customer service, research and development and the introduction of new products. Sunbeam's current strategy is to create innovative new products that anticipate consumer needs, develop effective marketing and advertising programs, build relationships, create the right culture and choose the right people.

In conjunction with the implementation of the restructuring plan, Sunbeam recorded a pre-tax charge of $239.2 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. This amount is recorded as follows in the Consolidated Statements of Operations:

- $110.1 million recorded in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges, as further described below;
- $60.8 million in Cost of Goods Sold related principally to inventory write-downs to net realizable value as a result of a reduction in SKUs and costs of inventory liquidation programs;
- $10.1 million in SG&A expense, for period costs, which were charged to operations as incurred, principally relating to employee relocation and recruiting, equipment relocation and installation ($3.2 million), transitional fees relating to outsourcing arrangements ($4.9 million) and package redesign costs ($2.0 million); and
- $58.2 million ($39.1 million net of taxes) in Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations related to the divestiture of its furniture business.

In 1997, upon completion of the sale of the furniture business, Sunbeam recorded an additional pre-tax loss of $22.5 million from discontinued operations ($14.0 million net of taxes) due primarily to lower than anticipated sales proceeds relating to the post closing adjustment that was part of the sale agreement.

Amounts included in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges in 1996 in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations included anticipated cash charges such as severance and other employee costs of $24.7 million, lease obligations of $12.6 million and other exit costs associated with facility closures and related to the implementation of the restructuring plan of $4.1 million, principally representing costs related to clean-up and restoration of owned and leased facilities for either sale or return to the landlord.

Included in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges of $110.1 million in 1996 was $68.7 million of non-cash charges principally consisting of:

- asset write-downs to net realizable value of $22.5 million for disposals of excess facilities and equipment and product lines;
- write-offs of redundant computer systems of $12.3 million from the administrative back-office consolidations and outsourcing initiatives;
- write-off of intangibles of $10.1 million relating to discontinued product lines;
- write-off of capitalized product and package design costs and other expenses of $9.0 million related to exited product lines and SKU reductions. Prior to 1996, Sunbeam had capitalized certain costs related to international product development and package design, which were amortized over the period of related benefit. The product development costs ($1.9 million) related to international operations and represented the costs necessary to modify products for introduction to the international markets. As the restructuring plan included the closure of the International Group office and elimination of a number of products to which these costs pertained, the related capitalized costs were written off. Additionally, in connection with the restructuring plan, as a result of the elimination of many products and SKUs, Sunbeam updated its package designs. Accordingly, the unamortized balance of the capitalized package design costs which had been capitalized prior to 1996 ($5.0 million) was written off. Sunbeam discontinued incurring costs of a significant nature relating to these items and consequently has discontinued capitalizing such costs subsequent to 1995; and
- asset write-downs of $14.8 million related to the divestiture of some non-core products and businesses.

The asset write-downs of $22.5 million and write-offs of $12.3 million discussed above included equipment taken out of service in 1996 (either abandoned in 1996 or sold in 1997) and, accordingly, depreciation was not recorded subsequent to the date of the impairment charge. The asset write-downs of $14.8 million related to the divestiture of non-core products and businesses resulted from divesting the time and temperature business in March 1997 and Counselor and Borg scale product lines in May 1997 and the sale of the textile mill in Biddeford, Maine in May 1997. These charges primarily represented the estimated non-cash losses resulting from the sale or abandonment of facilities and equipment, based on the estimated net proceeds from the sale of these assets compared to their recorded net book value, related to exiting these product lines.

The $24.7 million for severance and other employee costs, including COBRA and other fringe benefits, related to approximately 3,700 positions that were planned to be eliminated as a result of the restructuring plan, excluding approximately 2,400 employees terminated from the furniture business for which severance was included in Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations. See Note 13 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements. The furniture business was sold in 1997. In 1996 and 1997, approximately 1,200 employees and 1,800 employees, respectively, were terminated from continuing operations. Due largely to attrition, the remaining planned terminations were not required. In 1997, Sunbeam determined that its severance and employee benefit costs were less than originally accrued principally due to lower than expected COBRA and workers compensation costs and, accordingly, reversed accruals of $7.9 million in the third ($2.1 million) and fourth ($5.8 million) quarters. At December 31, 1997, the balance accrued of $1.2 million represented the remaining severance and employee benefit costs for some employees terminated during 1997. During 1998, all amounts were expended.

The amounts accrued at December 29, 1996 for Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges recorded in fiscal 1996, exceeded amounts ultimately required principally due to reductions in anticipated severance and employee benefit costs of $7.9 million, as discussed above, and reductions in estimated lease payments of $6.7 million ($3.7 million and $3.0 million recognized in the third and fourth quarters, respectively) resulting from better than anticipated rentals received under sub-leases and favorable negotiation of lease terminations. Accordingly, the fiscal 1997 Consolidated Statement of Operations included $14.6 million of benefit ($5.8 million in the third quarter and $8.8 million in the fourth quarter of 1997) related to the reversal of accruals no longer required, which were recorded as these reduced obligations became known.

In 1996, in conjunction with the initiation of the restructuring plan, Sunbeam recorded additional charges totaling $129.1 million, reflected in Cost of Goods Sold, SG&A expense, and Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations. The charge included in Cost of Goods Sold of $60.8 million principally represented inventory write-downs to net realizable value and anticipated losses on the disposition of the inventory as a result of the significant reduction in SKUs provided for in the restructuring plan. The write-down to net realizable value, based upon management's best estimates, included $26.9 million related to raw materials, work-in process and finished goods for discontinued outdoor cooking products, principally grills and grill accessories and the balance related to raw materials, work-in process and finished goods for other discontinued products including appliances ($27.8 million), clippers ($1.0 million) and blankets ($5.1 million). For inventory which management determined was saleable, the estimated write-down was based upon the difference between the expected net sales proceeds of the inventory, depending upon distribution channel, and the recorded value of the inventory. In the case of abandoned inventory, the write-down was equal to the recorded value of the inventory. The resulting difference between carrying value and estimated net realizable value represented the $60.8 million write-down necessary to record the inventory at its net realizable value. SG&A expense included period costs, charged to operations as incurred, in 1997 and 1996 of $15.8 million and $10.1 million, respectively, relating to employee relocation and recruiting and equipment installation and relocation ($11.8 million in 1997 and $3.2 million in 1996) transitional fees relating to outsourcing arrangements ($4.9 million in 1996), and package redesign costs ($4.0 million in 1997 and $2.0 million in 1996) expended as a result of the implementation of the restructuring plan. The 1996 Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations related to the divestiture of Sunbeam's furniture business. In 1996, Sunbeam decided to divest its furniture operations and recorded an estimated pre-tax loss of $58.2 million related to the sale of assets, primarily fixed assets and inventory. In 1997, Sunbeam recorded an additional pre-tax loss of $22.5 million due primarily to lower than anticipated sales proceeds resulting from the post closing adjustment as provided for in the sale agreement. See Notes 12 and 13 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements.

At December 28, 1997, Sunbeam had $5.2 million in liabilities accrued related to the 1996 restructuring plan, including $1.2 million of severance related costs and $4.0 million related to facility closures, which principally represented future lease payments, net of sub-leases, on exited facilities. During 1998, this liability was reduced by $4.0 million as a result of cash expenditures. At December 28, 1997, Sunbeam had $3.0 million of warranty liabilities related to the discontinued furniture operations. During 1998, $2.5 million of this liability was liquidated.

The charges and benefit described above are included in the following categories in the 1997 and 1996 Consolidated Statements of Operations (in millions):

At December 29, 1996, the net realizable value of the remaining inventory written-down as part of the restructuring and asset impairment charges was approximately $37.3 million. During 1997, this inventory, a portion of which was product of discontinued operations, was sold for amounts substantially equivalent to its net carrying value.

As further discussed in Note 15 to the Consolidated Financial Statements, during the fourth quarter of 1996, Sunbeam charged SG&A for increases of $9.0 million in environmental reserves and $12.0 million in litigation reserves. In the fourth quarter of 1996, Sunbeam performed a comprehensive review of all environmental exposures in an attempt by the then new senior management team to accelerate the resolution and settlement of environmental claims. As a result, upon the conclusion of the review, Sunbeam recorded additional environmental reserves of $9.0 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. The litigation charge of $12.0 million was recorded due to an unfavorable court ruling in January 1997, which held that Sunbeam was liable for environmental remediation costs related to the operations of a successor company. As a result of this ruling, Sunbeam provided for this liability in the fourth quarter of 1996. In the fourth quarter of 1997, this case was settled and, as a result, $8.1 million of the charge was reversed into income, primarily in the fourth quarter of 1997.

As described in Note 8 to the Consolidated Financial Statements, Sunbeam also charged $7.7 million to SG&A expenses in 1996 for compensation costs associated with restricted stock awards and other costs related to the employment of the then new senior management team.

During the first, second, third and fourth quarters of 1997, approximately $0.5 million, $4.5 million, $1.5 million and $21.5 million, respectively, of pre-tax liabilities provided in prior years and determined to be no longer required were reversed and taken into income. These amounts were primarily related to:

- the litigation reserve of $8.1 million discussed above, resulting in a reduction in SG&A expenses;
- inventory valuation allowances of $7.0 million, resulting in a reduction in Costs of Goods Sold;
- cooperative advertising allowances of $5.4 million, resulting in an increase in net sales;
- liabilities for exiting of facilities and plant consolidations provided for prior to 1996 of $3.5 million, resulting in a decrease in Cost of Goods Sold; and
- consulting fee accruals of $1.3 million, which resulted in a decrease in SG&A expenses.

These liabilities were provided for by Sunbeam, principally in 1996, based upon its best available estimate at the time of the probable liabilities. When information became available that the amounts provided were in excess of what was required, Sunbeam reduced the applicable reserves and recorded increases in Net Sales of $5.4 million, reductions in Cost of Goods Sold of $10.5 million and reductions in SG&A expenses of $12.1 million.

Additionally, effective in the second quarter of fiscal 1997, Sunbeam changed its method of accounting to capitalize manufacturing supplies inventories, whereas, previously these inventories were charged to operations when purchased. This change reduced Cost of Goods Sold in fiscal 1997 by $2.8 million.

Results of Operations for 1997 Compared to 1996

Net sales for 1997 were $1,073.1 million, an increase of $88.9 million or 9% over 1996. After excluding the following, Adjusted Sales increased 8% over the prior year to $1,032.2 million from $953.4 million in 1996:

- $4.2 million and $30.8 million in 1997 and 1996, respectively, related to divested product lines which were not classified as discontinued operations (time and temperature products, decorative bedding and Counselor and Borg branded scales);
- $31.3 million of sales in 1997 of discontinued inventory which resulted primarily from the reduction of SKUs as part of the 1996 restructuring plan and for which the inventory carrying value was substantially equivalent to the sales value; and
- a $5.4 million benefit from the reduction of cooperative advertising accruals no longer required in 1997.

Adjusted Sales, on a worldwide basis, increased during 1997 primarily from new product introductions, expanded distribution, particularly with Sunbeam's top ten customers, international geographic expansion and increased inventory positions at some customers. Adjusted Sales growth was approximately 19% for appliances and approximately 12% in outdoor cooking. Adjusted Sales for health products increased approximately 5% while Adjusted Sales of personal care products and blankets decreased approximately 13% during 1997.

Sales increases in appliances of approximately $69 million were driven by new products, such as redesigned blenders and mixers, coffeemakers, irons, deep fryers and toasters, and by increased distribution with large national mass retailers, combined with higher inventory levels at some customers. Sales of outdoor cooking products increased approximately $30 million in 1997 attributed to increased merchandising and advertising programs, new distribution and higher inventory levels at some customers. During 1997, Sunbeam lost a significant portion of its outdoor cooking products distribution, including the majority of its grill accessory products distribution. Accessories, which accounted for just over 10% of the outdoor cooking sales volume in 1997, generate significantly better margins than the average margins on sales of grills. These distribution changes are expected to adversely impact outdoor cooking sales and margins in the future, until such time as the distribution is regained.

Sales of personal care products and blankets suffered during the fourth quarter of 1997 as a result of lower than expected retail sell through of electric blankets in key northern markets in late 1997 coupled with the inability to service demand for king and queen sized blankets due to shortages of blanket shells. Sunbeam shifted to a more level production for blankets in 1998 in order to more adequately service the seasonal demand for bedding products. Sales of health products as well as personal care and bedding products were impacted by increased inventory positions at customers in 1997.

International sales, which represented 21% of total revenues in 1997, grew 25% during the year. This sales growth was driven primarily by 54 new 220 volt product introductions and a general improvement in demand in export operations and in Mexico. Net sales growth of approximately 35% was achieved in the Latin American export sales organization. Most of this growth came from increased business with three exporters. In Mexico and Venezuela, sales grew 30% and 24%, respectively. Canada accounted for the majority of the remaining international sales growth.

Excluding the effects of:

- charges of $60.8 million to Cost of Goods Sold related to the restructuring plan in 1996;
- the $15.9 million benefit of reducing reserves no longer required in 1997; and
- the $2.8 million benefit in 1997 of capitalizing manufacturing supplies inventories;

gross margin as a percent of Adjusted Sales would have been approximately 22% in 1997, an improvement of approximately 6 percentage points from 16% in 1996. This increase reflects the results of lower overhead spending, improved factory utilization and labor cost benefits resulting from Sunbeam's restructuring plan, coupled with reductions in materials costs. The lower overhead spending resulted from a reduction in the number of facilities operated by Sunbeam. With fewer facilities used for production purposes, the capacity of the remaining plants was more fully utilized. The labor cost benefits were realized principally from shifting production to Mexico. In addition, a broad based program to obtain lower costs for materials contributed to the 1997 margin improvement.

Excluding the impact of:

- the restructuring and asset impairment period costs to SG&A expense of $15.8 million in 1997 and $10.1 million in 1996;
- the 1996 charges for the environmental accrual of $9.0 million, litigation accrual of $12.0 million and restricted stock grant compensation of $7.7 million; and
- the 1997 benefit from the reversal of reserves no longer required of $12.1 million;

SG&A improved to 14% of Adjusted Sales in 1997, down 5 percentage points from 19% in 1996. This improvement was partially the result of benefits from the consolidation of six divisional and regional headquarters into one corporate headquarters and one administrative operations center, reduced staffing levels, a reduction in the number of warehouses, and Company-wide cost control initiatives. Higher expenditures in 1996 for market research, new packaging and other discretionary charges and higher bad debt expenses associated with some of Sunbeam's customers also contributed to the decrease in SG&A expense from 1996 to 1997. The expense for doubtful accounts and cash discounts was $17.3 million in 1997 as compared to $27.1 million in 1996. The principal factor in the decrease in bad debt expenses during this period was the acceleration of the consolidation of the U.S. retail industry and the related competitive environment, which resulted in a number of troubled retailers and related bankruptcies during 1996. This resulted in the significant amount of bad debt write-offs—$19.9 million—in 1996.

The restructuring accrual, which existed at January 1, 1996 ($13.8 million), was initially established as part of a "rightsizing program" during fiscal 1992. During 1996, approximately $3 million of this accrual was utilized and the remaining $10.8 million became part of the reserve requirements of the 1996 restructuring plan. In effect, in 1996, Sunbeam reversed the $10.8 million prior year accrual determined to be no longer required and provided a corresponding amount in connection with the 1996 restructuring charge.

Operating results for 1997 and 1996, on a comparable basis as described above, were earnings of $74.5 million in 1997 and a loss of $34.8 million in 1996. On the same basis, operating margin increased 11 percentage points to 7% of Adjusted Sales in 1997 versus a loss of 4% in 1996. This improvement resulted from the factors discussed above.

Interest expense decreased from $13.6 million in 1996 to $11.4 million in 1997 primarily as a result of lower average borrowing levels in 1997.

The 1997 effective income tax rate for continuing operations was higher than the federal statutory income tax rate primarily due to state taxes plus the effect of foreign earnings and dividends taxed at other rates and the increase to the valuation reserve for deferred tax assets, offset in part by the reversal of tax liabilities no longer required. During the fourth quarter of 1997, approximately $13.3 million of tax liabilities related to the 1993 and 1994 tax years were determined to be no longer required and were reversed and taken into income. These accruals were no longer required because during the fourth quarter of 1997 Sunbeam reached a resolution with the Internal Revenue Service on its audits of the 1993 and 1994 tax years. Additionally, in the fourth quarter of 1997, Sunbeam increased the valuation allowance by $23.2 million reflecting management's assessment that it was more likely than not that the deferred tax asset will not be realized through future taxable income. Of this amount, $18.9 million related to deferred tax assets, the majority of which was recognized as a benefit in the first three quarters of 1997. The remainder related to minimum pension liabilities and was therefore recorded as an adjustment to shareholders' equity. This assessment was made as a result of the significant leverage incurred by Sunbeam to finance the acquisitions and the significant decline in net sales and earnings from anticipated levels during the fourth quarter of 1997 and the first quarter of 1998. For 1996, the effective income tax rate for continuing operations equaled the federal statutory income tax rate.

Sunbeam's diluted earnings per share from continuing operations was $0.60 per share in 1997 versus a loss per share from continuing operations in 1996 of $2.05. Sunbeam's share base utilized in the diluted earnings per share calculation increased approximately 6% during 1997 as a result of an increase in the number of shares of common stock outstanding due to the exercise of stock options in 1997 and the inclusion of common stock equivalents in the 1997 calculation.

Sunbeam's discontinued furniture business, which was sold in March 1997, had revenues of $51.6 million in the first quarter of 1997 prior to the sale and nominal earnings. In 1996, the discontinued furniture business had net income of $0.8 million on revenues of $227.5 million and an estimated loss on disposal of the business of $39.1 million, net of applicable income tax benefits. The sale of Sunbeam's furniture business assets—primarily inventory, property, plant and equipment—was completed in March 1997. Sunbeam received $69.0 million in cash, retained approximately $50.0 million in accounts receivable and retained some liabilities related to the furniture business. The final purchase price for the furniture business was subject to a post-closing adjustment under the terms of the sale agreement, and in the first quarter of 1997, after completion of the sale, Sunbeam recorded an additional pre-tax loss on disposal of $22.5 million. Although the discontinued furniture business was profitable, net income had declined from $21.7 million in 1994 to $0.8 million in 1996. This decline, along with Sunbeam's announcement that it intended to divest this line of business contributed to the loss on the sale. See discussion of restructuring and asset impairment (benefit) charges in Note 12 and discontinued operations in Note 13 to the Consolidated Financial Statements for further information regarding sale of the furniture business.

After consideration of the adjustments above, 1998 and 1996 results from continuing operations reflect losses and 1997 continuing operations are marginally profitable. Due to a variety of factors, including increased inventory positions at some customers and manufacturing and sourcing activities during 1997 and the first half of 1998 which increased Sunbeam's inventory position, the results for each of 1998 and 1997 are not indicative of future results. Results for 1999 are expected to be impacted by the continuing effects of Sunbeam's excess inventory position, as well as costs related to Year 2000 compliance efforts.

Foreign Operations

Approximately 75% of Sunbeam's business is conducted in U.S. dollars, including domestic sales, U.S. dollar denominated export sales, primarily to Latin American markets, Asian sales and the majority of European sales. Sunbeam's non-U.S. dollar denominated sales are made principally by subsidiaries in Europe, Canada, Japan, Latin America and Mexico. Mexico reverted to a hyperinflationary status for accounting purposes in 1997; therefore, translation adjustments related to Mexican net monetary assets are included as a component of net (loss) earnings. Mexico is no longer considered hyperinflationary as of January 1, 1999. This change in Mexico's hyperinflationary status is not expected to have a material effect on Sunbeam's financial results. Translation adjustments resulting from Sunbeam's non-U.S. denominated subsidiaries have not had a material impact on Sunbeam's financial condition, results of operations or cash flows.

While revenues generated in Asia have traditionally not been significant, economic instability in this region is expected to have a negative effect on earnings. Economic instability and the political environment in Latin America have also affected sales in that region. It is anticipated that sales in and exports to these regions will continue to decline so long as the economic environments in those regions remain unsettled.

On a limited basis, Sunbeam selectively uses derivatives—foreign exchange option and forward contracts—to manage foreign exchange exposures that arise in the normal course of business. No derivative contracts are entered into for trading or speculative purposes. The use of derivatives has not had a material impact on Sunbeam's financial results. See Note 4 to the Consolidated Financial Statements.

Exposure to Market Risk

Qualitative Information

Sunbeam uses a variety of derivative financial instruments to manage its foreign currency and interest rate exposures. Sunbeam does not speculate on interest rates or foreign currency rates. Instead, it uses derivatives when implementing its risk management strategies to reduce the possible effects of these exposures.

With respect to foreign currency exposures, Sunbeam is most vulnerable to changes in rates between the United States dollar/Japanese yen, Canadian dollar, German deutschemark, Mexican peso and Venezuelan bolivar exchange rates. Sunbeam principally uses forward and option contracts to reduce risks arising from firm commitments, intercompany sales transactions and intercompany receivable and payable balances. Sunbeam generally uses interest rate swaps to fix some of its variable rate debt. Sunbeam manages credit risk related to these derivative contracts through credit approvals, exposure limits and threshold amounts and other monitoring procedures.

Quantitative Information

Below are tables of information related to Sunbeam's investments in market risk sensitive instruments. All of the instruments in the following tables have been entered into by Sunbeam for purposes other than trading purposes.

Interest Rate Sensitivity: The table below provides information about Sunbeam's derivative financial instruments and other financial instruments that are sensitive to changes in interest rates, including interest rate swaps and debt obligations.

For debt obligations, the table presents principal cash flows by expected maturity date and related (weighted) December 31, 1998 average interest rates. Included in the debt position are the debentures, which carry no intervening cash flows but mature in 2018. For interest rate swaps, the table presents notional amounts and weighted average interest rates for the contracts at the current time. Notional amounts are used to calculate the contractual payments to be exchanged under the contracts.

- (1) The fair value of fixed rate debt is estimated using either reported transaction values or discounted cash flow analysis. The carrying value of variable rate debt is assumed to approximate market value based on the periodic adjustments of the interest rates to the current market rates in accordance with the terms of the agreements. The fair value of the interest rate swaps is based on estimates of the cost of terminating the swaps.
- (2) The total amount of debentures maturing in future periods exceeds the balance as of December 31, 1998 due to the accretion of the debentures. See Note 3 to Sunbeam's Consolidated Financial Statements.

Exchange Rate Sensitivity. The table below provides information about Sunbeam's derivative financial instruments, other financial instruments and forward exchange agreements by functional currency and presents such information in U.S. dollar equivalents. The table summarizes information on instruments and transactions that are sensitive to foreign currency exchange rates, including foreign currency variable rate credit lines, foreign currency forward exchange agreements and foreign currency purchased put option contracts. For debt obligations, the table presents principal cash flows and related weighted average interest rates by expected maturity dates. For foreign currency forward exchange agreements and foreign currency put option contracts, the table presents the notional amounts and weighted average exchange rates by expected (contractual) maturity dates. These notional amounts generally are used to calculate the contractual payments to be exchanged under the contract. None of the instruments listed in the table have maturity dates beyond 1999.

Euro Conversion

On January 1, 1999, certain member countries of the European Union established fixed conversion rates between their existing currencies and the European Union's common currency (the "Euro"). The transition period for the introduction of the Euro is between January 1, 1999 and January 1, 2002. Sunbeam has been preparing for the introduction of the Euro and continues to evaluate and address the many issues involved, including the conversion of information technology systems, recalculating currency risk, strategies concerning continuity of contracts, and impacts on the processes for preparing taxation and accounting records. Based on the work to date, Sunbeam believes the Euro conversion will not have a material impact on its results of operations.

Seasonality

Sunbeam's consolidated sales are not expected to exhibit substantial seasonality; however, sales are expected to be strongest during the second quarter of the calendar year. Furthermore, sales of a number of products, including warming blankets, vaporizers, humidifiers, grills, First Alert products, camping and generator products may be impacted by unseasonable weather conditions.

Liquidity and Capital Resources

Debt Instruments

In order to finance the acquisition of Coleman, First Alert and Signature Brands and to refinance substantially all of the indebtedness of Sunbeam and the three acquired companies, Sunbeam consummated an offering of debentures at a yield to maturity of 5%—approximately $2,014 million principal amount at maturity—in March 1998, which resulted in approximately $730 million of net proceeds and borrowed about $1,325 million under its new bank credit facility.

The debentures are exchangeable for shares of Sunbeam's common stock at an initial conversion rate of 6.575 shares for each $1,000 principal amount at maturity of the debentures, subject to adjustments upon occurrence of specified events. The debentures are subordinated in right of payment to all existing and future senior indebtedness of Sunbeam. The debentures are not redeemable by Sunbeam prior to March 25, 2003. On or after such date, the debentures are redeemable for cash with at least 30 days notice, at the option of Sunbeam. Sunbeam is required to purchase debentures at the option of the holder as of March 25, 2003, March 25, 2008 and March 25, 2013, at purchase prices equal to the issue price plus accrued original discount to such dates. Sunbeam may, at its option, elect to pay any such purchase price in cash or common stock or any combination thereof. However, the bank credit facility prohibits Sunbeam from redeeming or repurchasing debentures for cash. Sunbeam was required to file a registration statement with the SEC to register the debentures by June 23, 1998. This registration statement was filed on February 4, 1999 and, as amended, was declared effective on November 8, 1999. Sunbeam's failure to file the registration statement by June 23, 1998 did not constitute default under the terms of the debentures. From June 23, 1998 until the registration statement was declared effective, Sunbeam was required to pay to the debenture holders cash liquidated damages accruing, for each day during such period, at a rate per annum equal to 0.25% during the first 90 days and 0.50% thereafter multiplied by the total of the issue price of the debentures plus the original issue discount thereon on such day. Sunbeam has made total payments for liquidated damages since June 23, 1998 of $4.5 million, of which $1.5 million related to damages for the period through December 31, 1998. A final payment of approximately $0.5 million, representing liquidated damages from September 26, 1999 until the registration statement was declared effective, will be payable on March 25, 2000.

Concurrent with the acquisitions, Sunbeam replaced its $250 million syndicated unsecured five-year revolving credit facility with the bank credit facility. The bank credit facility provided for aggregate borrowings of up to $1.7 billion and in addition to other customary covenants, required Sunbeam to maintain specified consolidated leverage, interest coverage and fixed charge coverage ratios as of the end of each fiscal quarter occurring after March 31, 1998 and on or prior to the latest stated maturity date for any of the borrowings under the bank credit facility.

As a result of, among other things, its operating losses incurred during the first half of 1998, Sunbeam did not achieve the specified financial ratios for June 30, 1998 and it appeared unlikely that Sunbeam would achieve the specified financial ratios for September 30, 1998. Consequently, Sunbeam and its lenders entered into an agreement dated as of June 30, 1998 that waived through December 31, 1998 all defaults arising from the failure of Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for June 30, 1998 and September 30, 1998. Pursuant to an agreement with Sunbeam dated as of October 19, 1998, Sunbeam's lenders extended all of the waivers under the June 30 agreement through April 10, 1999 and also waived through such date all defaults arising from any failure by Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for December 31, 1998. As part of the October 19, 1998 agreement, Sunbeam agreed to a minimum monthly earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization ("EBITDA") covenant for each of February, March and April of 1999, which covenant Sunbeam was able to satisfy.

On April 10, 1999, among other things, the lenders extended all of the waivers set forth in the October 19, 1998 agreement through April 15, 1999. On April 15, 1999, Sunbeam and its lenders entered into a comprehensive amendment to the bank credit facility that, among other things, extended all of the waivers under the April 10, 1999 agreement until April 10, 2000 and waived until such date all defaults arising from any failure by Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for any fiscal quarter end occurring during 1999 and for March 31, 2000. As part of the April 15, 1999 amendment, Sunbeam agreed to a minimum cumulative EBITDA covenant that is based on post-December 31, 1998 consolidated EBITDA and is tested at the end of each month occurring on or prior to March 31, 2000, as well as a covenant limiting the amount of revolving loans (other than those used to fund the merger) that may be outstanding under the bank credit facility as of the end of each such month. The minimum cumulative EBITDA was initially $6.3 million for the period January 1, 1999 through April 30, 1999 and generally grows on a monthly basis until it reaches $121 million for the period from January 1, 1999 through March 31, 2000. The following description of the bank credit facility reflects the terms of the bank credit facility as amended to date.

The bank credit facility provides for aggregate borrowings of up to $1.7 billion through:

- a revolving credit facility in an aggregate principal amount of up to $400.0 million maturing March 30, 2005, $52.5 million of which may be used only to complete the merger;
- up to $800.0 million in term loans maturing on March 30, 2005, of which $35.0 million may be used only to complete the merger; and
- a $500.0 million term loan maturing September 30, 2006 (of which $5.0 million has already been repaid through June 30, 1999).

As of September 30, 1999, approximately $1.5 billion was outstanding and approximately $0.2 billion was available for borrowing under the bank credit facility.

Under the bank credit facility, interest accrues, at Sunbeam's option:

- at LIBOR; or
- at the base rate of the administrative agent which is generally the higher of the prime commercial lending rate of the administrative agent or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.50%;

in each case plus an interest margin which is currently 4.00% for LIBOR borrowings and 2.50% for base rate borrowings. The current interest rates reflect an increase of 0.25% for LIBOR loans and base rate loans which occurred on September 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date and an increase of 0.50% for LIBOR and 0.25% for base rate loans which occurred on October 1, 1999 as a result of the merger not occurring by such date. The applicable interest margin is subject to downward adjustment upon the occurrence of specified events, including a decrease to 3.00% for LIBOR borrowings and 1.75% for base rate borrowings upon completion of the merger and the effectiveness of the pledge of substantially all of Coleman's and its domestic subsidiaries' assets to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility.

Under an April 15, 1999 amendment to the bank credit facility, Sunbeam agreed to pay the bank lenders a loan commitment fee of between 0.25% to 1.00% of the commitments under the bank credit facility as of April 15, 1999. The percentage used to calculate the fee will be determined by reference to the bank lenders' aggregate commitments and loan exposure under the bank credit facility as they may be reduced on or before September 30, 2000. The fee is payable on the earlier of September 30, 2000 and the date the commitments are terminated and the loans and other amounts payable under the bank credit facility are repaid. See Note 15 to the Consolidated Financial Statements.

Borrowings under the bank credit facility are secured by a pledge of the stock of Sunbeam's material subsidiaries, including Coleman, and by a security interest in substantially all of the assets of Sunbeam and its material domestic subsidiaries, other than Coleman and its material subsidiaries except as described below. Currently, Coleman's inventory and related assets are pledged to secure its obligations for letters of credit issued for its account under the bank credit facility. Additionally, as security for Coleman's note payable to Sunbeam, Coleman pledged substantially all of its domestic assets, other than real property, including 66% of the stock of its direct foreign subsidiaries and domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries and all of the stock of its other direct domestic subsidiaries but not the assets of Coleman's subsidiaries. The pledge runs in favor of Sunbeam's lending banks, to which the Coleman note has been pledged as security for Sunbeam's obligations to them. Upon completion of the merger, substantially all of Coleman's assets and the assets of Coleman's domestic subsidiaries will be pledged to secure the obligations under the bank credit facility.

In addition, borrowings under the bank credit facility are guaranteed by a number of Sunbeam's wholly owned material domestic subsidiaries and these subsidiary guarantees are secured as described above. Upon completion of the merger, Coleman and each of its United States subsidiaries will become guarantors of the obligations under the bank credit facility. To the extent extensions of credit are made to any subsidiaries of Sunbeam, the obligations of such subsidiaries are guaranteed by Sunbeam.

In addition to the above described financial ratios and tests, the bank credit facility contains covenants customary for credit facilities of a similar nature, including limitations on the ability of Sunbeam and its subsidiaries, including Coleman, to, among other things:

- declare dividends or repurchase stock;
- prepay, redeem or repurchase debt, incur liens and engage in sale-leaseback transactions;
- make loans and investments;
- incur additional debt, including revolving loans under the bank credit facility;
- amend or otherwise alter material agreements or enter into restrictive agreements;
- make capital and Year 2000 compliance expenditures;
- engage in mergers, acquisitions and asset sales;
- engage in certain transactions with affiliates;
- settle certain litigation;
- alter its cash management system; and
- alter the businesses they conduct.

Sunbeam is also required to comply with specified financial covenants and ratios.

The bank credit facility provides for events of default customary for transactions of this type, including nonpayment, misrepresentation, breach of covenant, cross-defaults, bankruptcy, material adverse change arising from compliance with ERISA, material adverse judgments, entering into guarantees and change of ownership and control. It is also an event of default under the bank credit facility, as amended November 16, 1999, if Sunbeam's registration statement in connection with the merger is not declared effective by the SEC on or before January 10, 2000 or if the merger does not occur within 25 business days of the effectiveness of the registration statement or if the cash consideration—including any payments on account of the exercise of any appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses—to consummate the merger exceeds $87.5 million. Although there can be no assurance, Sunbeam anticipates that it will satisfy these conditions. Furthermore, the bank credit facility requires Sunbeam to prepay term loans under the bank credit facility on December 31, 1999 to the extent that cash on hand in Sunbeam's concentration accounts plus the aggregate amount of unused revolving loan commitments on this date exceeds $125 million, but Sunbeam is not required to prepay more than $69.3 million in the aggregate as a result of the provision.

Unless waived by the bank lenders, the failure of Sunbeam to satisfy any of the financial ratios and tests contained in the bank credit facility or the occurrence of any other event of default under the bank credit facility would entitle the bank lenders to (a) receive a 2.00% increase in the interest rate applicable to outstanding loans and increase the trade letter of credit fees to 1.00% and (b) accelerate the maturity of the outstanding borrowings under the bank credit facility and exercise all or any of their other rights and remedies. Any such acceleration or other exercise of rights and remedies would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam.

The bank credit facility also includes provisions for the deferral of the September 30, 1999 and March 31, 2000 scheduled term loan payments of $69.3 million due on each such date until April 10, 2000 as a result of the satisfaction by Sunbeam on May 14, 1999 of the agreed upon conditions to the deferral. See Note 3 to the Consolidated and Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements.

Cash Flows

As of September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had cash and cash equivalents of $29.1 million and total debt of $2.3 billion. Because the waivers granted by Sunbeam's lenders expire on April 10, 2000, the borrowings under the bank credit facility, as well as other debt containing cross-default provisions, are classified as current in the September 30, 1999 Condensed Consolidated Balance Sheet. Cash used in operating activities during the first nine months of 1999 was $73.2 million compared to $224.7 million in the first nine months of 1998. This change is primarily attributable to improved operating results after giving effect to non-cash items, partially offset by increased working capital needs during the 1999 period. The increase in cash used for working capital during the 1999 period was primarily driven by accounts receivable, which increased $159.4 million as compared to the 1998 period, primarily attributable to Sunbeam's Outdoor Leisure division which experienced stronger second and third quarters sales in 1999 than in 1998. Additionally, working capital for the 1998 period was positively affected by the timing of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, which was at the peak of its inventory build for the 1998 selling season. Cash used for this acquired inventory is not reflected in working capital for the 1998 period. As a result of the effect of Company's management of inventory levels in 1999, cash flow improved approximately $81 million as compared to 1998 despite the favorable impact of the inventory acquired in connection with the 1998 acquisitions. Increases in accounts payable of approximately $30 million in the first nine months of 1999 positively impacted cash flow whereas payables used approximately $76 million of cash in the same period of 1998, resulting in an improvement in cash flow period-to-period of approximately $106 million. The increase in payables in the current period resulted from payable balances having been reduced to a low level by year-end 1998. This reduction in payables, which included an effort to reduce delinquent payables, began in the second quarter of 1998. Decreases in other liabilities, primarily accrued interest, account for the majority of the balance of the cash used for working capital in 1999. Sunbeam participates in an accounts receivable securitization program to finance a portion of its accounts receivable. See Note 4 to the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements.

In the first nine months of 1999, cash used in investing activities was driven by capital expenditures of $63.2 million, primarily for information systems, including expenditures for Year 2000 readiness and equipment and tooling for new products. Capital spending in the comparable 1998 period was $32.8 million and was primarily for several manufacturing efficiency initiatives, equipment and tooling for new products and management information systems and software licenses. The new product capital spending in the 1998 period principally related to the appliance category and included costs related to water and air filtration products which were discontinued in the second quarter, blenders, standmixers and irons. Cash used in investing activities in the first nine months of 1998 also reflects $379.2 million for the acquisitions of the shares of Coleman from a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes, as well as the acquisitions of Signature Brands and First Alert. Sunbeam anticipates 1999 capital spending to be less than 5% of net sales. Capital expenditures in the current year are expected to primarily relate to information systems and related support, including expenditures for Year 2000 readiness, new product introductions and capacity additions.

Cash provided by financing activities totaled $99.2 million in the first nine months of 1999 and reflected net borrowings under Sunbeam's bank credit facility. Cash provided by financing activities in the first nine months of 1998 was $636.1 million and reflected net proceeds from the debentures of $729.6 million, the cancellation and repayment of all outstanding balances under Sunbeam's $250 million September 1996 revolving credit facility, the repayment of certain debt assumed in connection with the Coleman, Signature Brands and First Alert acquisitions, and the early extinguishment of the $75.0 million Hattiesburg industrial revenue bond. In addition, cash provided by financing activities in 1998 is net of $26.2 million of financing fees related to Sunbeam's $1.7 billion bank credit facility and $19.6 million of proceeds from the exercise of stock options. See Note 3 to the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements.

As of December 31, 1998, Sunbeam had cash and cash equivalents of $61.4 million, working capital excluding cash and cash equivalents of $427.1 million and total debt of $2,261 million. Cash used in operating activities during 1998 was $190.4 million compared to $6.0 million used in operating activities in 1997. This change is primarily attributable to lower earnings after giving effect to non-cash charges partially offset by improvements in working capital. During 1998, $184.2 million in cash was generated by reducing receivables, including through the revolving trade accounts receivable securitization program described below, and reducing inventories, which was partially offset by a $68.2 million reduction in accounts payable levels. In the fourth quarter of 1998, cash provided by operating activities totaled $34.3 million, principally due to cash generated by reducing receivables and inventories of $181.9 million. The decrease in cash provided by operations from 1996 to 1997 is primarily attributable to increased inventory levels in 1997 and spending in 1997 related to the restructuring initiatives accrued for in 1996, largely offset by an increase in cash generated by earnings in 1997 and an income tax refund (net of payments) in 1997. Cash used in operating activities reflects proceeds of $200.0 million in 1998 and $58.9 million in 1997 from Sunbeam's revolving trade accounts receivable securitization program, described below.

Cash used in investing activities in 1998 reflects $522.4 million for the acquisitions. In 1997, cash provided by investing activities reflected $91.0 million in proceeds from the sales of divested operations and other assets. Capital spending totaled $53.7 million in 1998 and was primarily for manufacturing efficiency initiatives, equipment and tooling for new products, and management information systems hardware and software licenses. The new product capital spending principally related to the air and water filtration products which were discontinued in the second quarter of 1998, electric blankets, grills, clippers and appliances. Capital spending in 1997 was $60.5 million and was primarily attributable to manufacturing capacity expansion, cost reduction initiatives and equipment to manufacture new products. The new product capital spending in 1997 principally related to appliances and included costs related to blenders, toasters, stand mixers, slow cookers and a soft serve ice cream product. Capital spending in 1996 was $75.3 million, including $14.5 million related to the discontinued furniture business, and was primarily attributable to equipment for new product development and cost reduction initiatives. As discussed above, Sunbeam's capital and Year 2000 compliance expenditures are limited under the terms of the bank credit facility.

Cash provided by financing activities totaled $766.2 million in 1998 and reflects:

- the net proceeds from the sale of debentures of $729.6 million;
- the cancellation and repayment of all outstanding balances under Sunbeam's $250 million September 1996 revolving credit facility;
- the repayment of debt in connection with the acquisitions;
- the early extinguishment of the $75.0 million Hattiesburg industrial revenue bond; and
- net borrowings under the bank credit facility.

In addition, cash provided by financing activities during 1998 includes $19.6 million of proceeds from the exercise of stock options.

During 1997, cash provided by financing activities of $16.4 million reflected:

- net borrowings of $5.0 million under Sunbeam's September 1996 revolving credit facility;
- $12.2 million of debt repayments related to the divested furniture business and other assets sold; and

- $26.6 million in cash proceeds from the exercise of stock options.

During 1996, cash provided by financing activities of $45.3 million primarily reflected:

- revolving credit facility borrowings of $30.0 million to support working capital and capital spending requirements;
- $11.5 million in new issuances of long-term debt; and
- $4.6 million in proceeds from the sale of treasury shares to certain executives of Sunbeam.

In December 1997, Sunbeam entered into a revolving trade accounts receivable securitization program, which as amended expires in March 2000, to sell without recourse, through a wholly owned subsidiary, up to a maximum of $70 million in trade accounts receivable. Sunbeam, as agent for the purchaser of the receivables, retains collection and administrative responsibilities for the purchased receivables. For the nine months ended September 30, 1999 and for the year ended December 31, 1998, Sunbeam sold approximately $228.4 million and $200 million of accounts receivable, respectively, under this program. At September 30, 1999 and December 31, 1998, Sunbeam had reduced accounts receivable by $36.9 million and $20.0 million, respectively, for receivables sold under this program. Sunbeam expects to continue to utilize the securitization program to finance a portion of its accounts receivable. See Note 4 to the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements and Note 5 to the Consolidated Financial Statements.

At September 30, 1999, standby and commercial letters of credit aggregated $68.9 million and were predominantly for insurance, pension, environmental, workers' compensation, and international trade activities. In addition, as of September 30, 1999, surety bonds with a contract value of $67.5 million were outstanding largely for Sunbeam's pension plans and as a result of litigation judgments that are currently under appeal.

For additional information relating to the debentures, the bank credit facility and the repayment of debt, see Note 3 to the Consolidated and Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements.

Sunbeam expects to acquire the remaining equity interest in Coleman in a merger transaction in which the existing Coleman minority stockholders will receive 0.3677 share of Sunbeam's common stock and $6.44 in cash for each share of Coleman common stock outstanding. In addition, under a court-approved litigation settlement, Coleman minority stockholders (other than those who exercise and perfect their Delaware law appraisal rights) will receive for each share of Coleman common stock 0.381 of a warrant, entitling them to purchase one Sunbeam share at a cash price of $7 per share until August 24, 2003 (assuming no further increases in the number of outstanding shares of Coleman common stock). Furthermore, unexercised options under Coleman's stock option plans will be cashed out at a price per share equal to $27.50 minus the per share exercise price of such options. Sunbeam expects to issue approximately 6.7 million shares of common stock and expend approximately $87 million in cash, including cash paid to option holders, to complete the Coleman transaction. See Note 2 to the Unaudited Condensed Consolidated and Consolidated Financial Statements. Also, see Note 15 to the Consolidated Financial Statements. Although there can be no assurance, it is anticipated that the merger will occur late in the fourth quarter of 1999 or early in the first quarter of 2000.

Sunbeam believes its borrowing capacity under the bank credit facility, cash flow from the combined operations of Sunbeam and its acquired companies, existing cash and cash equivalent balances, and its receivable securitization program will be sufficient to support working capital needs, capital expenditure and Year 2000 compliance spending, and debt service through April 10, 2000. Sunbeam intends to negotiate with its lenders on an amendment to the bank credit facility, negotiate with its lenders on further waiver of such covenants and other terms or refinance the bank credit facility. Any decisions with respect to such amendment, waiver, or refinancing will be made based on a review from time to time of the advisability of particular transactions. There can be no assurance that an amendment, further waiver of existing covenants and other terms, or refinancing will be entered into by April 10, 2000. The failure to obtain such an amendment, further waiver or debt refinancing would likely result in violation of existing covenants and non-compliance with other terms, which would permit the bank lenders to accelerate the maturity of all outstanding borrowings under the bank credit facility, and could otherwise have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam. Accordingly, debt related to the bank credit facility and all debt containing cross-default provisions is classified as current in the Unaudited Condensed Consolidated Balance Sheet at September 30, 1999.

In May 1998, the NYSE advised Sunbeam that it did not meet the NYSE's continuing listing standards because Sunbeam did not have tangible net assets of $12.0 million at December 31, 1997 and average annual net income of at least $0.6 million for fiscal years 1997, 1996 and 1995. Sunbeam representatives met with NYSE officials, and in March 1999, the NYSE informed Sunbeam that Sunbeam common stock would not be delisted at that time, although the NYSE would, however, continue to monitor Sunbeam's financial condition and operations. On August 5, 1999, the NYSE advised Sunbeam that the NYSE had revised its continuing listing standards, and that Sunbeam is in compliance with the revised standards.

In April 1999, the NYSE advised Coleman that it did not meet the NYSE's continuing listing standards because Coleman did not have tangible net assets of at least $12.0 million at September 30, 1998 and average annual net income of at least $0.6 million for fiscal years 1997, 1996 and 1995. At that time, Coleman requested the NYSE to continue to list the Coleman common stock until completion of the merger. The NYSE subsequently advised Coleman that Coleman also failed to satisfy certain non-financial continuing listing standards. On August 5, 1999, the NYSE advised Coleman that the NYSE had revised its continuing listing standards, and that Coleman is in compliance with the revised financial standards. Coleman and the NYSE have agreed upon a program whereby Coleman will correct the deficiencies in its non-financial continuing listing standards by the end of 1999. Coleman is currently complying with such program. If Coleman were to be delisted from the NYSE, it could adversely affect the market price of Coleman's common stock and Coleman's ability to sell its capital stock to third parties. However, Sunbeam's bank credit facility currently restricts Coleman from taking such actions.

By letter dated June 17, 1998, the staff of the Division of Enforcement of the SEC advised Sunbeam that it was conducting an informal inquiry into Sunbeam's accounting policies and procedures and requested that Sunbeam produce documents. On July 2, 1998, the SEC issued a Formal Order of Private Investigation, designating officers to take testimony and pursuant to which a subpoena was served on Sunbeam requiring the production of documents. On November 4, 1998, Sunbeam received another SEC subpoena requiring the production of additional documents. Sunbeam has provided numerous documents to the SEC staff and continues to cooperate with the SEC staff. Sunbeam has, however, declined to provide the SEC with material that Sunbeam believes is subject to the attorney-client privilege and the work product immunity. Sunbeam cannot predict the term of such investigation or its potential outcome.

Sunbeam is involved in significant litigation, including class and derivative actions, relating to events which led to the restatement of its consolidated financial statements, the issuance of the MacAndrews & Forbes warrant, the sale of the debentures and the employment agreements, of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. Sunbeam intends to vigorously defend each of the actions, but cannot predict the outcome and is not currently able to evaluate the likelihood of Sunbeam's success in each case or the range of potential loss. However, if Sunbeam were to lose these suits, judgments would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flows. Additionally, Sunbeam's insurance carriers have filed various suits requesting a declaratory judgment that the directors' and officers' liability insurance policies for excess coverage was invalid and/or had been properly canceled by the carriers or have advised Sunbeam of their intent to deny coverage under such policies. Sunbeam intends to pursue recovery from all of its insurers if damages are awarded against Sunbeam or its indemnified officers and/or directors under any of the foregoing actions and to recover attorneys' fees covered under those policies. Sunbeam's failure to obtain such insurance recoveries following an adverse judgment against Sunbeam on any of the foregoing actions could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

Amounts accrued for litigation matters represent the anticipated costs (damages and/or settlement amounts) in connection with pending litigation and claims and related anticipated legal fees. The costs are accrued when it is both probable that an asset has been impaired or a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated. The accruals are based upon Sunbeam's assessment, after consultation with counsel, of probable loss based on the facts and circumstances of each case, the legal issues involved, the nature of the claim made, the nature of the damages sought and any relevant information about the plaintiffs, and other significant factors which vary by case. When it is not possible to estimate a specific expected cost to be incurred, Sunbeam evaluates the range of probable loss and records the minimum end of the range. As of September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $22.6 million (representing $11.3 million and $11.3 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively). As of December 31, 1998, Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $31.2 million (representing $17.5 million and $13.7 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively) and $9.9 million as of December 28, 1997, (representing $3.0 million and $6.9 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively). It is anticipated that the $22.6 million accrual will be paid as follows: $5.2 million in 1999, $14.9 million in 2000, and $2.5 million in 2001. Sunbeam believes, based on information known to Sunbeam on September 30, 1999, that anticipated probable costs of litigation matters existing as of September 30, 1999 have been adequately reserved to the extent determinable.

As a consumer goods manufacturer and distributor, Sunbeam faces the constant risks of product liability and related lawsuits involving claims for substantial money damages, product recall actions and higher than anticipated rates of warranty returns or other returns of goods. These claims could result in liabilities that could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flows. Some of the product lines Sunbeam acquired in the 1998 acquisitions have increased its exposure to product liability and related claims.

Sunbeam and its subsidiaries are also involved in various lawsuits from time to time that Sunbeam considers to be ordinary routine litigation incidental to its business. In the opinion of Sunbeam, the resolution of these routine matters, and of matters relating to prior operations, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a material adverse effect on the financial position, results of operations or cash flows of Sunbeam.

For additional information relating to litigation, see "BUSINESS OF SUNBEAM—Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities."

New Accounting Standards

In March 1998, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants ("AICPA") issued Statement of Position 98-1, Accounting for the Costs of Computer Software Developed or Obtained for Internal Use ("SOP 98-1"). SOP 98-1 requires computer software costs associated with internal use software to be expensed as incurred until certain capitalization criteria are met. Sunbeam adopted SOP 98-1 effective January 1, 1999. Adoption of this statement did not have a material impact on Sunbeam's consolidated financial position, results of operations, or cash flows. Actual charges incurred due to systems projects may be material.

In April 1998, the AICPA issued Statement of Position 98-5, Reporting on the Cost of Start-up Activities ("SOP 98-5"). SOP 98-5 requires all costs associated with pre-opening, pre-operating and organization activities to be expensed as incurred. Sunbeam adopted SOP 98-5 beginning January 1, 1999. Adoption of this statement did not have a material impact on Sunbeam's consolidated financial position, results of operations, or cash flows.

In June 1998, the FASB issued SFAS No. 133, Accounting for Derivative Instruments and Hedging Activities, which is effective for fiscal years beginning after June 15, 2000. SFAS No. 133 requires the recognition of all derivatives in the Consolidated Balance Sheets as either assets or liabilities measured at fair value. Sunbeam has not yet determined the impact SFAS No. 133 will have on its consolidated financial position, results of operations or cash flows.

Year 2000 Readiness Disclosure

Sunbeam is preparing for the impact of the Year 2000 on its operations. Year 2000 issues could include potential problems in the information technology ("IT") and non-IT systems that Sunbeam uses in its operations and problems in Sunbeam's products. Year 2000 system failures could affect routine but critical operations such as forecasting, purchasing, production, order processing, inventory control, shipping, billing and collection. In addition, system failures could affect Sunbeam's security, payroll operations, or employee safety. Sunbeam may also be exposed to potential risks from third parties with whom Sunbeam interacts who fail to adequately address their own Year 2000 issues.

Sunbeam's Approach to Year 2000 Issues

While Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness planning has been underway for over one year, during the third quarter of 1998 Sunbeam established a cross-functional project team consisting of senior managers, assisted by three external consulting firms which were retained to provide consulting services and to assist Sunbeam in implementing its Year 2000 strategy. This team is headed by Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer who reports directly to Sunbeam's Chief Executive Officer on this issue. The audit committee of the board of directors is advised periodically on the status of Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness program.

The Year 2000 project team has developed a phased approach to identify and resolve Year 2000 issues with many of these activities conducted in parallel. Sunbeam's approach and the anticipated timing of each phase are described below.

Phase 1—Inventory and Assessment. During the first phase of Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness program, Sunbeam established a Year 2000 program management office to centralize the management of all of Sunbeam's Year 2000 projects. Through this office, Sunbeam developed a corporate-wide, uniform strategy for assessing and addressing the Year 2000 issues.

Sunbeam has completed an inventory of its hardware and software systems, manufacturing equipment, electronic data interchange, telecommunications and other technical assets potentially subject to Year 2000 problems, such as security systems and controls for lighting, air conditioning, ventilation and facility access. This inventory was then entered into Sunbeam's Year 2000 database along with a determination of the item's level of criticality to operations. For those inventory items anticipated to have a significant effect on the business if not corrected, Sunbeam's Year 2000 program envisions repair or replacement and testing of such items. All information relative to each item is being tracked in Sunbeam's Year 2000 database. Sunbeam completed most of this phase during the third and fourth quarters of 1998. Sunbeam has completed a review of the readiness of embedded microprocessors in its products and determined that none of Sunbeam's products have Year 2000 date sensitive systems.

Phase 2—Correction and Testing. The second phase of Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness program is structured to replace, upgrade or remediate, as necessary, those items identified during Phase 1 as requiring corrective action.

Sunbeam relies on its IT functions to perform many tasks that are critical to its operations. Significant transactions that could be impacted by not being ready for any Year 2000 issues include, among others:

- purchases of materials;
- production management;
- order entry and fulfillment;
- payroll processing; and
- billing and collections.

Systems and applications that have been identified by Sunbeam to date as not currently Year 2000 ready and which are critical to Sunbeam's operations include:

- financial software systems, which process:
 - order entry;
 - purchasing;
 - production management;
 - general ledger;
 - accounts receivable; and

- accounts payable functions;
- payroll applications; and
- critical applications in Sunbeam's manufacturing and distribution facilities, such as warehouse management applications.

Recognizing how dependent the entire company is on IT, Sunbeam decided in 1997 to replace its primary business applications with a uniform international business and accounting information system to address the systems or applications listed above as well as to improve internal reporting processes. Based upon representations from the manufacturer that the current version of this uniform information system is Year 2000 ready, Sunbeam upgraded its business sites that currently utilize this uniform system to the Year 2000 ready version. In addition to the pre-acquisition Sunbeam locations which had already utilized an earlier non-Year 2000 ready version of this uniform business and accounting information system, Eastpak, Mr. Coffee, Health-o-Meter, and Sunbeam Latin America replaced their current non-Year 2000 ready systems with this new uniform system. In addition, Coleman Europe also has replaced key business components with this new system.

Sunbeam is also actively replacing and/or upgrading a number of business systems that are not Year 2000 ready, including those that use localized business system packages which were not candidates to be replaced by the uniform business and accounting information system. For example, at Coleman approximately 2,000 mainframe software programs that are used in lieu of Sunbeam's uniform business and accounting information system have been remediated and tested to be Year 2000 ready. With respect to Sunbeam's non-IT systems, including time and attendance, security, and in-line manufacturing hardware, Sunbeam has analyzed these items to assess any Year 2000 issues, and is testing and correcting such items, if necessary.

Phase 3—Customers, Suppliers and Business Partners. The third phase of Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness program which was initiated during the third and fourth quarters of 1998 is designed to assess and interact with Sunbeam's customers, suppliers, and business partners. As part of this effort, Sunbeam surveyed 1,100 vendors and suppliers, a portion of which did not provide an initial response. During the first half of 1999, "high risk" vendors were contacted directly and the number of non-respondents has since decreased substantially. In fact, currently only 7% of Sunbeam's vendors who were surveyed are categorized as "high risk," which includes non-respondents. Based on the most recent responses to the survey and continued evaluation, Sunbeam believes that there is only a low to a medium risk of Year 2000 issues for the remaining vendors. Sunbeam will continue to monitor the Year 2000 progress of the "high risk" vendors and has resurveyed these companies to determine the appropriate course of action. Furthermore, Sunbeam has contacted alternate vendors who are Year 2000 ready to replace critical vendors deemed "high risk" in the event that these vendors are not found to be Year 2000 ready. Sunbeam is in the process of completing a verification of the Year 2000 survey responses for the most critical vendors to Sunbeam.

Sunbeam has responded to numerous customer inquiries about Sunbeam's Year 2000 readiness. Sunbeam has verified that all of Sunbeam's major customers have planned programs to deal with Year 2000 issues and is currently completing the process of contacting its major customers to confirm they are implementing their planned programs to address Year 2000 issues. In order to improve Sunbeam's communication with its customers, suppliers and business partners, Sunbeam has set up a Sunbeam Year 2000 telephone number and is providing Year 2000 information on a Company web site.

Phase 4—Contingency Planning. This phase involves contingency planning for unresolved Year 2000 issues, particularly any issues arising with third party suppliers. Sunbeam has designed and documented its Year 2000 contingency plan and is in the process of implementing it. The development of the contingency plan included a process whereby Sunbeam's critical IT and non-IT systems were evaluated for Year 2000 readiness. As a result of this evaluation, Sunbeam does not expect to require additional operational equipment or significant process contingency measures. Although Sunbeam does not currently believe there is significant risk associated with its third party suppliers, the contingency plan includes the continuing evaluation of the readiness of Sunbeam's suppliers and minor increases in Sunbeam's inventory requirements to protect against supply disruption.

The Risks of Sunbeam's Year 2000 Approach

The independent consultants assisting Sunbeam in its Year 2000 readiness program have reviewed and concurred with Sunbeam's approach, have assisted in developing cost estimates and have monitored costs for the largest single component (upgrade or installation of Sunbeam's uniform system) of Sunbeam's Year 2000 program. Since Sunbeam's Year 2000 program was developed and is monitored with the help of independent consultants, Sunbeam did not engage another independent third party to verify the program's overall approach or total cost; based on this, Sunbeam believes that Sunbeam's exposure in this regard is mitigated. In addition, through the use of external third-party diagnostic software packages that are designed to analyze the Year 2000 readiness of business software programs, Sunbeam was able to identify potential Year 2000 issues at Coleman. Given this, Sunbeam believes that it has also mitigated its risk by validating and verifying key program components.

Management believes that, although there are significant systems that are being modified or replaced, including the uniform business and accounting information system, Sunbeam's information systems environment will be made Year 2000 ready prior to January 1, 2000. Sunbeam's failure to timely complete such corrective work could have a material adverse impact on Sunbeam.

With respect to customers, suppliers and business partners, the failure of some of these third parties to become Year 2000 ready could also have a material adverse impact on Sunbeam. For example, the failure of some of Sunbeam's principal suppliers to have Year 2000 ready internal systems could impact Sunbeam's ability to manufacture and/or ship its products or to maintain adequate inventory levels for production.

At this time, Sunbeam believes that the most likely "worst-case" scenario relating to Year 2000 involves potential disruptions in areas in which Sunbeam's operations must rely on third parties, such as suppliers, whose systems may not work properly after January 1, 2000. While such system failures could either directly or indirectly affect important operations of Sunbeam and its subsidiaries in a significant manner, Sunbeam cannot at present estimate either the likelihood or the potential cost of such failures. Subject to the nature of the goods or services provided to Sunbeam by third parties whose operations are not made ready for Year 2000 issues, the impact on Sunbeam's operations could be material. However, Sunbeam believes that it has mitigated such risks through the development and implementation of the contingency plans discussed above.

The nature and focus of Sunbeam's efforts to address the Year 2000 problem may be revised periodically as interim goals are achieved or new issues are identified. In addition, it is important to note that the description of Sunbeam's efforts and assessments necessarily involves estimates and projections with respect to activities required in the future. These estimates and projections are subject to change as work continues, and such changes may be substantial.

The Costs to Address Sunbeam's Year 2000 Issues

Through the first nine months of 1999, including costs incurred in 1998, Sunbeam had expended approximately $60 million to address Year 2000 issues of which approximately 50% was recorded as capital expenditures and the remainder as SG&A expense. Sunbeam's current assessment of the total costs to address and remedy Year 2000 issues and enhance its operating systems, including costs for the acquired companies, is approximately $64 million.

This estimate includes the following categories:

- | | |
|---|--------------|
| • uniform international business and accounting system | $44 million |
| • localized business system software upgrades and remediation | $9 million |
| • Year 2000 readiness assessment and tracking | $6 million |
| • upgrade of personal computers and related software | $5 million |

The amount to be incurred for Year 2000 issues during 1999 of approximately $44 million represents over 50% of Sunbeam's total 1999 budget for information systems and related support, including Year 2000 costs. A large majority of these costs are expected to be incremental expenditures that will not recur in the Year 2000 or thereafter. Fees and expenses related to third party consultants, who are involved in the program management office as well as the modification and replacement of software, represent approximately 75% of the total estimated cost. The balance of the total estimated cost relates primarily to software license fees and new hardware, but excludes the costs associated with company employees. Sunbeam expects these expenditures to be financed through operating cash flows or borrowings, as applicable. A significant portion of these expenditures will enhance Sunbeam's operating systems in addition to resolving the Year 2000 issues. As Sunbeam completes its assessment of the Year 2000 issues, the actual expenditures incurred or to be incurred may differ materially from the amounts shown above. The bank credit facility does not permit Sunbeam to spend more than $50 million on Year 2000 testing and remediation during 1999.

Because Year 2000 readiness is critical to the business, Sunbeam has redeployed some resources from non-critical system enhancements to address Year 2000 issues. In addition, due to the importance of IT systems to Sunbeam's business, management has deferred non-critical systems enhancements as much as possible. Sunbeam does not expect these redeployments and deferrals to have a material impact on Sunbeam's financial condition, results of operations or cash flows.

Effects of Inflation

For each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 1998, and in the nine-month period ended September 30, 1999, Sunbeam's cost of raw materials and other product remained relatively stable. To the extent possible, Sunbeam's objective is to offset the impact of inflation through productivity enhancements, cost reductions and price increases.

CHANGES IN AND DISAGREEMENTS WITH ACCOUNTANTS ON ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE

On November 20, 1998, the audit committee recommended and Sunbeam's board approved the appointment of Deloitte & Touche as its independent auditors for 1998, to replace Arthur Andersen, Sunbeam's former auditor. Arthur Andersen is continuing to provide certain professional services to Sunbeam.

On June 25, 1998, Sunbeam announced that Arthur Andersen would not consent to the inclusion of its opinion on Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements in a registration statement Sunbeam was planning to file with the SEC. On June 30, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the audit committee of its board of directors would conduct a review of Sunbeam's prior financial statements and that, therefore, those financial statements should not be relied upon. Sunbeam also announced that Deloitte & Touche had been retained to assist the audit committee and Arthur Andersen in their review of Sunbeam's prior financial statements. On August 6, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the audit committee had determined that Sunbeam would be required to restate its financial statements for 1997, the first quarter of 1998 and possibly 1996, and that the adjustments, while not then quantified, would be material. On October 20, 1998 Sunbeam announced the restatement of its financial results for a six-quarter period from the fourth quarter of 1996 through the first quarter of 1998. On November 12, 1998, Sunbeam filed a Form 10-K/A for the year ended December 28, 1997, which contains an unqualified opinion by Arthur Andersen on Sunbeam's restated consolidated financial statements as of December 29, 1996 and December 28, 1997 and for each of the three years in the period ended December 28, 1997.

Arthur Andersen's report on Sunbeam's financial statements for the two fiscal years of Sunbeam ended December 28, 1997 contained no adverse opinion or disclaimer of opinion and was not qualified or modified as to uncertainty, audit scope or accounting principles. In connection with its audits for those periods and through November 20, 1998, there were no disagreements with Arthur Andersen on any matter of accounting principles or practices, financial statement disclosure, or auditing scope or procedure, which disagreements if not resolved to the satisfaction of Arthur Andersen would have caused Arthur Andersen to make reference thereto in their report on the financial statements for such years. Sunbeam has not consulted with Deloitte & Touche on any matter that was either the subject of a disagreement or a reportable event between Sunbeam and Arthur Andersen.

In connection with the restatements referred to above, in a letter dated October 16, 1998, Arthur Andersen advised Sunbeam that there existed the following conditions that Arthur Andersen believed to be material weaknesses in Sunbeam's internal controls:

"In our opinion, [Sunbeam's] design and effectiveness of its internal control were inadequate to detect material misstatements in the preparation of [Sunbeam's] 1997 annual (before audit) and quarterly financial statements."

As part of its audit of Sunbeam's 1997 consolidated financial statements that led to the restatement of these financial statements, Arthur Andersen was required to consider Sunbeam's internal controls in determining the scope of its audit procedures. Arthur Andersen has advised management of its concerns regarding Sunbeam's internal controls. Management is addressing these concerns and although Sunbeam has not yet fully implemented all additional planned controls, management believes that the interim measures Sunbeam has adopted to prevent material misstatements in its financial statements will be effective until the remainder of the additional controls can be implemented.

Outdoor barbecue grills consist of gas, electric and charcoal models which are sold by Sunbeam primarily under the Sunbeam and Grillmaster® brand names. Sunbeam's outdoor cooking products also include smokers and replacement parts for grills and various accessories such as cooking utensils, grill cleaning products and barbecue tools. Almost all of Sunbeam's grills are manufactured at Sunbeam's United States facility. Sunbeam sources practically all of its accessories and a portion of its replacement parts from various manufacturers, many of which are in East Asia. A licensee of Sunbeam produces gas barbecue grills under the Coleman name. In 1997 and 1996, sales of gas grills accounted for approximately 13% and 19%, respectively, of consolidated net sales.

Powermate. Sunbeam's principal Powermate products include portable generators and portable and stationary air compressors. Sunbeam is a leading manufacturer and distributor of portable generators in the United States. Generators are used for home improvement projects, small businesses, emergency preparedness and outdoor recreation. International

Sunbeam markets a variety of products outside the United States. While Sunbeam sells many of the same products domestically and internationally, it also sells products designed specifically to appeal to foreign markets. Sunbeam, through its foreign subsidiaries, has manufacturing facilities in France, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, and Venezuela, and sales administration offices, warehouse and distribution facilities in Canada, Europe, the Mideast, Asia and Latin America. Sunbeam also sells its products directly to international customers in certain other markets through Sunbeam sales managers, independent distributors and commissioned sales representatives. The products sold by the international group are sourced from Sunbeam's manufacturing operations or from vendors primarily located in Asia. International sales accounted for approximately 23%, 21% and 19% of Sunbeam's consolidated net sales in 1998, 1997 and 1996, respectively. Sunbeam's international operations are managed through the following geographic areas:

Europe. Sunbeam's European operations are managed from Lyon, France and the sales are dominated by the product lines acquired by Sunbeam as part of the Coleman acquisition, including the Campingaz product lines and Eastpak products. Sunbeam's European office also manages the sale and distribution of Sunbeam products throughout Africa and the Middle East.

Japan. Sunbeam's sales in Japan are almost exclusively sales of camping equipment such as tents, stoves, lanterns, sleeping bags and accessories.

Latin America. The activities of Sunbeam outside the United States were primarily focused in Mexico and Latin America prior to the 1998 acquisition of Coleman. Sunbeam enjoys a strong market position in a number of product lines in Latin America. The Oster brand has the leading market share in small appliances in a number of Latin American countries. Sunbeam's sales in Latin America are derived primarily from household appliances, particularly the Oster blender and the recently introduced Oster arepa maker.

Canada. Sunbeam sells substantially all of its products in Canada through a distribution sales office located in Toronto.

East Asia. During 1998, Sunbeam's sales in East Asia were hampered by the economic downturn particularly in South Korea where Sunbeam had developed a strong market for Eastpak bags, and in Indonesia where Sunbeam sells Campingaz products. Sunbeam has established a sales office in Australia, from which it sells primarily clippers and appliances, and distributes First Alert products in Australia and New Zealand. Sales offices have also been established in Manila and Hong Kong.

Sunbeam has sales and facilities in countries where economic growth has slowed, primarily Japan, Korea and Latin America. The economies of other foreign countries important to Sunbeam's operations could also suffer instability in the future. The following are among the factors that could negatively affect Sunbeam's operations in foreign markets: (1) access to markets; (2) currency devaluation; (3) new tariffs; (4) changes in monetary and/or tax policies; (5) inflation; and (6) governmental instability. See "MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS—Foreign Operations."

Corporate

Retail. Sunbeam sells many of its products through its retail outlet stores which are operated under the Sunbeam, Oster and Camp Coleman® names. In addition, Sunbeam currently has 37 retail outlet stores in the United States and Canada which primarily carry discontinued, overstock and refurbished products for retail sale to consumers. Net sales from retail stores were not significant in any of the last three fiscal years.

Licensing. Sunbeam licenses the Sunbeam name and the Coleman name and logo under two types of licensing arrangements: general merchandise licenses and licenses to purchasers of businesses divested by Sunbeam. Sunbeam's general merchandise licensing activities involve licensing the Sunbeam and/or Coleman name and logo, for a royalty fee, to certain companies that manufacture and sell products that complement Sunbeam's product lines. Revenue from licensing activities in 1998 in the amount of $4 million was generated primarily from the license of the Coleman name. In addition, Sunbeam licenses trade names from third parties for use in connection with Sunbeam's products. Revenue from licensing activities was not significant in 1997 and 1996.

Competition

The markets in which Sunbeam operates are generally highly competitive, based primarily on product quality, product innovation, price and customer service and support, although the degree and nature of such competition vary by location and product line. Sunbeam believes that no other company produces and markets the breadth of household appliance, camping and outdoor recreation products marketed by Sunbeam.

Sunbeam competes with various manufacturers and distributors with respect to its household appliances. Primary competitors in the kitchen appliance area have been Black & Decker (which recently sold its appliance division to Windmere), Hamilton Beach/Procter Silex, West Bend, Melita, Salton-Maxim, Cuisinart, Regal, Krups, Kitchen Aid, Braun and Rival. Sunbeam's primary competitor in the consumer scale market is Metro Corporation. Sunbeam's health care products compete with those of numerous small manufacturers and distributors, none of which dominates the home health care market. Sunbeam has limited domestic competition for its electric blankets and heated throws and enjoys a market share in excess of 90% for these products. Sunbeam's primary competitors for retail clippers and trimmers are Wahl and Conair; the primary competitors in the professional products lines are Wahl and Andis. Sunbeam enjoys a leading market share with respect to its smoke and carbon monoxide detectors where Ranco, American Sensor, Nighthawk and Siebe are the primary competitors. Sunbeam competes with Micro General with respect to its Pelouze scales.

Sunbeam's Outdoor Leisure products compete with numerous products sold by other manufacturers. Lanterns and stoves compete with, among others, products offered by Century Primus, American Camper and Dayton Hudson Corporation, while Desa & Schau and Mr. Heater are the primary competitors for heaters. The primary competitors for Sunbeam's portable furniture are a variety of import companies. Sunbeam's insulated cooler and jug products compete with products offered by Rubbermaid Incorporated, Igloo Products Corp. and The Thermos Company. Sunbeam's sleeping bags compete with, among others, American Recreation, Slumberjack, Academy Broadway Corp. and MZH Inc., as well as certain private label manufacturers. In the tent market, Sunbeam competes with, among others, Wenzel, Eureka and Mountain Safety Research, as well as certain private label manufacturers. Sunbeam competes with W.C. Bradley, Meco, Fiesta, Ducane, Weber and Keanall for sales of outdoor grills and accessories. Sunbeam's backpack products compete with, among others, American Camper, JanSport, Nike, Outdoor Products, The North Face, and Kelty, as well as certain private label manufacturers. Sunbeam's competition in the electric light business includes, among others, Eveready and Rayovac Corporation. Sunbeam's camping accessories compete primarily with Coughlan's. Sunbeam's primary competitors in the generator business are Generac Corporation, Honda Motor Co., Ltd., Kawasaki and Yamaha. Primary competitors in the air compressor business include DeVilbiss and Campbell Hausfield. In addition, Sunbeam competes with various other entities in international markets.

Customers

Sunbeam markets its products through virtually every category of retailer including mass merchandisers, catalog showrooms, warehouse clubs, department stores, catalogues, Sunbeam-owned outlet stores, television shopping channels, hardware stores, home improvement centers, office products centers, drug and grocery stores, and pet supply retailers, as well as independent distributors and military post exchange outlets. In 1998, Sunbeam sold products to virtually all of the top 100 U.S. retailers, including Wal-Mart/Sam's Club, Kmart, Price Costco, Target Stores and Home Depot. Sunbeam's largest customer, Wal-Mart, accounted for approximately 18%, 20% and 19% of consolidated net sales in 1998, 1997 and 1996, respectively. Sunbeam has the majority of its U.S. customer sales on electronic data interchange (EDI) systems.

Backlog

The amount of backlog orders at any point in time is not a significant factor in Sunbeam's business.

Patents and Trademarks

Sunbeam believes that an integral part of its strength is its ability to capitalize on the Sunbeam®, Coleman®, Oster®, Eastpak®, Mr. Coffee®, Health-o-Meter®, First Alert® and Campingaz®, trademarks which are registered in the United States and in numerous foreign countries. Widely recognized throughout North America, Latin America and Europe, these registered trademarks, along with Powermate®, Pelouze®, Peak One®, Osterizer®, Mixmaster®, Toast Logic®, Steammaster®, Oskar®, Grillmaster® and "Blanket with a Brain®" brands are important to the success of Sunbeam's products. Other important trademarks within Sunbeam include Oster Designer®, Cuddle-Up® and A5®. The loss of any single trademark would not have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's business; however, the Sunbeam, Coleman and Mr. Coffee trademarks are integral to certain of Sunbeam's continuing operations and Sunbeam aggressively monitors and protects these and other brands.

Sunbeam holds numerous design and utility patents covering a wide variety of products, the loss of any one of which would not have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's business taken as a whole.

Research and Development

New products and improvements to existing products are developed based upon the perceived needs and demands of consumers. Research and development expenditures are expensed as incurred. The amounts charged to operations for the nine months ended September 30, 1999 and 1998 and for the fiscal years ended 1998, 1997 and 1996 were $18.8 million, $13.2 million, $18.7 million, $5.7 million and $6.5 million, respectively.

Employees

As of September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had approximately 13,700 full-time and part-time employees of which approximately 8,700 are employed domestically. Sunbeam is a party to collective bargaining agreements with its hourly employees located at the Aurora, Illinois, Glenwillow, Ohio and Bridgeview, Illinois plants. Sunbeam's Canadian warehouse employees are represented by a union, as are all of the production employees at Sunbeam's operations in France and Italy. Sunbeam has had no material labor-related work stoppages and, in the opinion of management, relations with its employees are generally good.

Seasonality

Sunbeam's consolidated sales are not expected to exhibit substantial seasonality; however, sales are expected to be strongest during the second quarter of the calendar year. Furthermore, sales of a number of products, including warming blankets, vaporizers, humidifiers, grills, First Alert products, camping and generator products, may be impacted by unseasonable weather conditions.

Raw Materials/Suppliers

The raw materials used in the manufacture of Sunbeam's products are available from numerous suppliers in quantities sufficient to meet normal requirements. Sunbeam's primary raw materials include aluminum, steel, plastic resin, copper, electrical components, various textiles or fabrics and corrugated cardboard for cartons. Sunbeam also purchases a substantial number of finished products. Sunbeam is not dependent upon any single supplier for a material amount of such sourced products.

Sunbeam management considers Sunbeam's facilities to be suitable for Sunbeam's operations, and believes that Sunbeam's facilities provide sufficient capacity for its production requirements.

Litigation and Other Contingent Liabilities

On April 23, 1998, two class action lawsuits were filed on behalf of purchasers of Sunbeam common stock in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida against Sunbeam and some of its present and former directors and former officers alleging violations of the federal securities laws as discussed below. After that date, approximately fifteen similar class actions were filed in the same Court. One of the lawsuits also named as defendant Arthur Andersen, Sunbeam's independent accountants for the period covered by the lawsuit.

On June 16, 1998, the court entered an order consolidating all these suits and all similar class actions subsequently filed (collectively, the "Consolidated Federal Actions") and providing time periods for the filing of a consolidated amended complaint and defendants' response thereto. On June 22, 1998, two groups of plaintiffs made motions to be appointed lead plaintiffs and to have their selection of counsel approved as lead counsel. On July 20, 1998, the court entered an order appointing lead plaintiffs and lead counsel. This order also stated that it shall apply to all subsequently filed actions that are consolidated with the other actions. On August 28, 1998, plaintiffs in one of the subsequently filed actions filed an objection to having their action consolidated pursuant to the June 16, 1998 order, arguing that the class period in their action differs from the class periods in the originally filed consolidated actions. On December 9, 1998, the court entered an order overruling plaintiffs' objections and affirming its prior order appointing lead plaintiffs and lead counsel.

On January 6, 1999, plaintiffs filed a consolidated amended class action complaint against Sunbeam, some of its present and former directors and former officers, and Arthur Andersen. The consolidated amended class action complaint alleges that, in violation of section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and SEC Rule 10b-5, defendants made material misrepresentations and omissions regarding Sunbeam's business operations, future prospects and anticipated earnings per share, in an effort to artificially inflate the price of Sunbeam common stock and call options, and that, in violation of section 20(a) of the Exchange Act, the individual defendants exercised influence and control over Sunbeam, causing Sunbeam to make material misrepresentations and omissions. The consolidated amended complaint seeks an unspecified award of money damages. On February 5, 1999, plaintiffs moved for an order certifying a class consisting of all persons and entities who purchased Sunbeam common stock or who purchased call options or sold put options with respect to Sunbeam common stock during the period April 23, 1997 through June 30, 1998, excluding the defendants, their affiliates, and employees of Sunbeam. Defendants' response to the motion for class certification was filed on May 6, 1999. On March 8, 1999, all defendants who had been served with the consolidated amended class action complaint moved to dismiss it. Under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, all discovery in the consolidated action is stayed pending resolution of the motions to dismiss.

On April 7, 1998, a purported derivative action was filed in the Circuit Court for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida against Sunbeam and some of its present and former directors and former officers. The action alleged that the individual defendants breached their fiduciary duties and wasted corporate assets when Sunbeam granted stock options on or about February 2, 1998 at an exercise price of $36.85 to three of its officers and directors who were subsequently terminated by Sunbeam. On June 25, 1998, all defendants filed a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to make a pre-suit demand on Sunbeam's board of directors. On October 22, 1998, the plaintiff amended the complaint against all but one of the defendants named in the original complaint. On February 19, 1999, plaintiffs filed a second amended derivative complaint nominally on behalf of Sunbeam against some of its present and former directors and former officers and Arthur Andersen. The second amended complaint alleges, among other things, that Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh, Sunbeam's former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and former Chief Financial Officer, respectively, caused Sunbeam to employ fraudulent accounting procedures in order to enable them to secure new employment contracts, and seeks a declaration that the individual defendants have violated fiduciary duties, an injunction against the payment of compensation to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh or the imposition of a constructive trust on such payments, and unspecified money damages. The defendants have each moved to dismiss the second amended complaint in whole or in part.

On June 25, 1998, four purported class actions were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware in New Castle County by minority stockholders of Coleman against Coleman, Sunbeam and certain of Sunbeam's and Coleman's present and former officers and directors. An additional class action was filed on August 10, 1998, against the same parties. The complaints in these class actions alleged, in essence, that the existing exchange ratio for the proposed merger is no longer fair to Coleman minority stockholders as a result of the decline in the market value of Sunbeam common stock. On October 21, 1998, Sunbeam announced that it had entered into a memorandum of understanding to settle, subject to court approval, the class actions. The court approved the settlement on November 12, 1999. Under the terms of the settlement, Sunbeam will issue to Coleman minority stockholders and plaintiffs' counsel in this action warrants to purchase up to approximately 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution adjustments. Coleman minority stockholders who elect an appraisal under Delaware law will not receive warrants. These warrants will generally have the same terms as the warrant issued to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary and will be issued when the merger is consummated, which is now expected to occur during the fourth quarter of 1999 or early in the first quarter of 2000.

During the months of August and October 1998, purported class action and derivative lawsuits were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware in New Castle County and in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida by stockholders of Sunbeam against Sunbeam, MacAndrews & Forbes and some of Sunbeam's present and former directors. These complaints allege that the defendants breached their fiduciary duties when Sunbeam entered into a settlement agreement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary that sold Sunbeam a controlling interest in Coleman. In the settlement agreement the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary released Sunbeam from threatened claims arising out of Sunbeam's acquisition of its interest in Coleman, and MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide management support to Sunbeam. Under the settlement agreement, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary was granted a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase up to an additional 23 million shares of Sunbeam's common stock at an exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution provisions. The plaintiffs have requested an injunction against the issuance of stock to MacAndrews & Forbes upon the exercise of its warrant and unspecified money damages. These complaints also allege that the rights of the minority stockholders have been compromised, as the settlement would normally require stockholder approval under the rules and regulations of the NYSE. The audit committee of Sunbeam's board of directors determined that obtaining such stockholder approval would have seriously jeopardized the financial viability of Sunbeam which is an allowable exception to the NYSE stockholder approval requirements. By order of the Delaware Court of Chancery dated January 7, 1999, the derivative actions filed in that court were consolidated, and Sunbeam and other defendants have moved to dismiss these actions. The action filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida has been dismissed.

On September 16, 1998, an action was filed in the 56th Judicial District Court of Galveston County, Texas alleging various claims in violation of the Texas Securities Act and Texas Business and Commercial Code as well as common law fraud as a result of Sunbeam's alleged misstatements and omissions regarding Sunbeam's financial condition and prospects during a period beginning May 1, 1998 and ending June 16, 1998, in which the U.S. National Bank of Galveston, Kempner Capital Management, Inc. and Legacy Trust Company engaged in transactions in Sunbeam common stock on their own behalf and on behalf of their respective clients. Sunbeam is the only named defendant in this action. The complaint requests recovery of compensatory damages, punitive damages and expenses in an unspecified amount. This action was removed to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas and subsequently transferred to the Southern District of Florida and consolidated with the Consolidated Federal Actions. Plaintiffs in this action have objected to the consolidation and have sought reconsideration by the Southern District of Florida of the order of the Southern District of Texas denying plaintiffs' motion to remand the case to state court and transferring it to Florida. A similar suit was brought by the same group of plaintiffs in the above action against Arthur Andersen. In that action, the plaintiffs allege that Arthur Andersen violated the Texas Securities Act, committed statutory and common law fraud and was negligent in its audits of Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial statements. On September 29, 1999, Arthur Andersen had filed a motion for leave to join Sunbeam and certain of its former officers as responsible third parties and contribution defendants. Their motion was denied.

On October 30, 1998, a class action lawsuit was filed on behalf of certain purchasers of the debentures in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida against Sunbeam and some of Sunbeam's former officers and directors, alleging violations of the federal securities laws and common law fraud. The complaint alleges that Sunbeam's offering memorandum used for the marketing of the debentures contained false and misleading information regarding Sunbeam's financial position and that the defendants engaged in a plan to inflate Sunbeam's earnings for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs and others. The plaintiffs seek a declaration that defendants violated federal securities laws and either unspecified monetary damages or rescission of their purchase of the debentures. The parties have negotiated a proposed coordination plan in order to coordinate proceedings in this action with those in the Consolidated Federal Actions.

Sunbeam has been named as a defendant in an action filed in the District Court of Tarrant County, Texas, 48th Judicial District, on November 20, 1998. Sunbeam was served in this action through the Secretary of State of Texas on January 15, 1999. The plaintiffs in this action are purchasers of the debentures. The plaintiffs allege that Sunbeam violated the Texas Securities Act and the Texas Business & Commercial Code and committed state common law fraud by materially misstating the financial position of Sunbeam in connection with the offering and sale of the debentures. The complaint seeks rescission, as well as compensatory and exemplary damages in an unspecified amount. Sunbeam specially appeared to assert an objection to the Texas court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over Sunbeam, and a hearing on this objection took place on April 15, 1999. On April 23, 1999, the court entered an order granting Sunbeam's special appearance and dismissing the case without prejudice. The plaintiffs moved for reconsideration of the court order, which motion the court denied on May 24, 1999. The plaintiffs have appealed the order dismissing the case to the Texas Court of Appeals, and the appeal is pending.

On April 12, 1999, a class action lawsuit was filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida. The lawsuit was filed on behalf of persons who purchased debentures during the period of March 20, 1998 through June 30, 1998, inclusive, but after the initial offering of such debentures. The complaint asserts that Sunbeam made material omissions and misrepresentations that had the effect of inflating the market price of the debentures. The complaint names as defendants Sunbeam, its former auditor, Arthur Andersen, and two former Sunbeam officers, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. The plaintiff is an institution which allegedly acquired in excess of $150,000,000 face amount of the debentures and now seeks unspecified money damages. Sunbeam was served on April 16, 1999 in connection with this pending lawsuit. Sunbeam has requested that this action be coordinated with the Consolidated Federal Actions.

On February 9, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed with the American Arbitration Association demands for arbitration of claims under their respective employment agreements with Sunbeam. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh are requesting a finding by the arbitrator that Sunbeam terminated their employment without cause and that they should be awarded certain benefits based upon their respective employment agreements. On March 12, 1999, Sunbeam asked the Circuit Court for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida to issue an injunction prohibiting Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh from pursuing their arbitration proceedings against Sunbeam on the grounds, among others, that the simultaneous litigation of the action filed in that court on April 7, 1998, described above, and the arbitration proceedings would subject Sunbeam to the threat of inconsistent adjudications with respect to certain rights to compensation asserted by Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh and would cause irreparable harm to Sunbeam and its stockholders. On March 19, 1999, the plaintiff in the April 7, 1998 action discussed above moved for an injunction on similar grounds. On May 11, 1999, the court denied the motions for a preliminary injunction filed by Sunbeam and the plaintiff. Sunbeam has answered the arbitration demands of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh and has filed counterclaims seeking, among other things, the return of all consideration paid, or to be paid, under the February 1998 Employment Agreements between Sunbeam and Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. An answer was filed by Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh generally denying Sunbeam's counterclaim. Discovery is pending.

On May 24, 1999, an action naming Sunbeam as defendant was filed in the Circuit Court for Ozaukee County, Wisconsin. Prior to service of the complaint, the plaintiff dismissed its claims, voluntarily, without prejudice. The plaintiff in this action was a purchaser of the debentures. The plaintiff alleged that Sunbeam violated the Wisconsin Uniform Securities Act and committed acts of false advertising and misrepresentation in connection with the offering and sale of the debentures. The plaintiff sought rescission, as well as compensatory and exemplary damages in an unspecified amount.

On September 13, 1999, an action naming Sunbeam and Arthur Andersen as defendants was filed in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County, Alabama. The plaintiffs in this action are purchasers of Sunbeam common stock during the period March 19, 1998 through May 6, 1998. The plaintiffs allege, among other things, that the defendants violated the Alabama Security Laws and SEC Rule 10b-5. The plaintiffs seek compensatory and punitive damages in an unspecified amount. Sunbeam has removed this case to the U.S. District Court for the District of Alabama. In addition, Arthur Andersen has filed a cross claim against Sunbeam for contribution and indemnity. Sunbeam has filed a motion with the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation to consolidate this action with the Consolidated Federal Actions.

Sunbeam intends to vigorously defend each of the foregoing lawsuits other than those as to which a memorandum of understanding to settle has been reached, but cannot predict the outcome and is not currently able to evaluate the likelihood of Sunbeam's success in each case or the range of potential loss. However, if Sunbeam were to lose these lawsuits, judgments would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's consolidated financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

On March 23, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed a complaint in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware seeking an order directing Sunbeam to advance attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred in connection with various state and federal class and derivative actions and an investigation instituted by the SEC. The complaint alleges that such advancements are required by Sunbeam's by-laws and by a forbearance agreement entered into between Sunbeam and Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh in August, 1998. A trial of this summary proceeding was held on June 15 and 16, 1999. On June 23, 1999, the court issued a memorandum opinion directing Sunbeam to pay about $1.4 million on account of expenses incurred to date and to advance the reasonable future expenses in those actions and investigations. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh have agreed to repay all amounts advanced to them if it is ultimately determined that they are not entitled to indemnification under Delaware law.

On July 2, 1998, the American Alliance Insurance Company filed suit against Sunbeam in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York requesting a declaratory judgment of the court that the directors' and officers' liability insurance policy for excess coverage issued by American Alliance was invalid and/or had been properly canceled by American Alliance. American Alliance has filed a motion for summary judgment on the ground that coverage was never bound. Sunbeam has opposed that motion. As a result of a motion made by Sunbeam, this case has been transferred to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida for coordination and consolidation of pre-trial proceedings with the various actions pending in that court. On October 20, 1998, an action was filed by Federal Insurance Company in the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida requesting the same relief as that requested by American in the previously filed action as to additional coverage levels under Sunbeam's directors' and officers' liability insurance policy. This action has been transferred to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida and is currently in discovery. Sunbeam is seeking a stay of discovery to coordinate discovery in this action with any discovery that may occur in the Consolidated Federal Actions. Plaintiff has moved to compel production of various documents. On December 22, 1998, an action was filed by Executive Risk Indemnity, Inc. in the Circuit Court of the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit in and for Broward County, Florida requesting the same relief as that requested by American and Federal in their previously filed actions as to additional coverage levels under Sunbeam's directors' and officers' liability insurance policy. On April 15, 1999, Sunbeam filed an action in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida against National Union Fire Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, PA, Gulf Insurance Company and St. Paul Mercury Insurance Company requesting, among other things, a declaratory judgment that National Union is not entitled to rescind its directors' and officers' liability insurance policies to Sunbeam and a declaratory judgment that Sunbeam is entitled to coverage from these insurance companies for the various lawsuits described herein under directors' and officers' liability insurance policies issued by each of the defendants. In response to Sunbeam's complaint, defendants St. Paul and Gulf have answered and asserted counterclaims seeking rescission and declaratory relief that no coverage is available to Sunbeam. Sunbeam has denied the allegations of Gulf's and St. Paul's counterclaims. Defendant National Union has filed a motion to dismiss or stay the claims filed by Sunbeam against National Union on the basis, among others, that Sunbeam must submit the dispute to arbitration or mediation. Sunbeam has filed a response opposing that motion. Sunbeam intends to pursue recovery from all of its insurers if damages are awarded against Sunbeam or its indemnified officers and/or directors under any of the foregoing actions and to recover attorneys' fees covered under those policies. Sunbeam's failure to obtain such insurance recoveries following an adverse judgment in any of the actions described above could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

By letter dated June 17, 1998, the staff of the Division of Enforcement of the SEC advised Sunbeam that it was conducting an informal inquiry into Sunbeam's accounting policies and procedures and requested that Sunbeam produce certain documents. On July 2, 1998, the SEC issued a Formal Order of Private Investigation, designating SEC officers to take testimony and pursuant to which a subpoena was served on Sunbeam requiring the production of certain documents. On November 4, 1998, another SEC subpoena requiring the production of additional documents was received by Sunbeam. Sunbeam has provided numerous documents to the SEC staff and continues to cooperate with the SEC staff. Sunbeam has, however, declined to provide the SEC with material that Sunbeam believes is subject to the attorney-client privilege and the work product immunity.

The SEC has not commenced any civil or administrative proceedings as a result of its investigation, and Sunbeam cannot predict at this time whether the SEC will seek to impose any monetary or other penalties against Sunbeam. Under these circumstances, Sunbeam cannot estimate the duration of the investigation or its outcome.

Sunbeam and its subsidiaries are also involved in various other lawsuits arising from time to time which Sunbeam considers to be ordinary routine litigation incidental to its business. In the opinion of Sunbeam, the resolution of these routine matters, and of certain matters relating to prior operations, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a material adverse effect upon the financial position, results of operations or cash flows of Sunbeam.

Amounts accrued for litigation matters represent the anticipated costs (damages and/or settlement amounts) in connection with pending litigation and claims and related anticipated legal fees for defending such actions. The costs are accrued when it is both probable that an asset has been impaired or a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated. The accruals are based upon Sunbeam's assessment, after consultation with counsel, of probable loss based on the facts and circumstances of each case, the legal issues involved, the nature of the claim made, the nature of the damages sought and any relevant information about the plaintiffs and other significant factors which vary by case. When it is not possible to estimate a specific expected cost to be incurred, Sunbeam evaluates the range of probable loss and records the minimum end of the range. As of September 30, 1999, Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $22.6 million (representing $11.3 million and $11.3 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively.) As of December 31, 1998 Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $31.2 million (representing $17.5 million and $13.7 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively) and $9.9 million as of December 28, 1997 (representing $3.0 million and $6.9 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively). It is anticipated that the $22.6 million accrual will be paid as follows: $5.2 million in 1999, $14.9 million in 2000, and $2.5 million in 2001. Sunbeam believes, based on information known to Sunbeam on September 30, 1999, that anticipated probable costs of litigation matters existing as of September 30, 1999 have been adequately reserved to the extent determinable.

Products Liability

As a consumer goods manufacturer and distributor, Sunbeam faces the constant risks of product liability and related lawsuits involving claims for substantial money damages, product recall actions and higher than anticipated rates of warranty returns or other returns of goods. These claims could result in liabilities that could have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's consolidated financial position, results of operations or cash flows. Some of the product lines Sunbeam acquired in the 1998 acquisitions have increased its exposure to product liability and related claims.

BRK Brands, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunbeam, is a defendant in an ongoing products liability case in which the plaintiff alleged, among other things, that the plaintiff's smoke detector (which had been manufactured by a predecessor company to BRK Brands, Inc.) did not alarm quickly enough. In July 1999, the jury in the case awarded $20 million in compensatory damages and $30 million in punitive damages. This case has been settled and BRK Brands, Inc.'s obligation under the settlement is limited to payment of the balance of its self-insured retention.

Sunbeam is party to various personal injury and property damage lawsuits relating to its products and incidental to its business. Annually, Sunbeam sets its product liability insurance program based on Sunbeam's current and historical claims experience and the availability and cost of insurance. Sunbeam's program for 1999 was comprised of a self-insurance retention of $3.5 million per occurrence, and was limited to $28.0 million in the aggregate.

Cumulative amounts estimated to be payable by Sunbeam with respect to pending and potential claims for all years in which Sunbeam is liable under its self-insurance retention have been accrued as liabilities. Such accrued liabilities are necessarily based on estimates (which include actuarial determinations made by independent actuarial consultants as to liability exposure, taking into account prior experience, numbers of claims and other relevant factors); thus, Sunbeam's ultimate liability may exceed or be less than the amounts accrued. The methods of making such estimates and establishing the resulting liability are reviewed continually and any adjustments resulting therefrom are reflected in current operating results.

Historically, product liability awards have rarely exceeded Sunbeam's individual per occurrence self-insured retention. There can be no assurance, however, that Sunbeam's future product liability experience will be consistent with its past experience. Based on existing information, Sunbeam believes that the ultimate conclusion of the various pending product liability claims and lawsuits of Sunbeam, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a material adverse effect on the financial position, results of operations or cash flows of Sunbeam.

Environmental Matters

Sunbeam's operations, like those of comparable businesses, are subject to certain federal, state, local and foreign environmental laws and regulations in addition to laws and regulations regarding labeling and packaging of products and the sales of products containing certain environmentally sensitive materials. Sunbeam believes it is in substantial compliance with all environmental laws and regulations which are applicable to its operations. Compliance with environmental laws and regulations involves certain continuing costs; however, such costs of ongoing compliance have not resulted, and are not anticipated to result, in a material increase in Sunbeam's capital expenditures or to have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam's results of operations, financial condition or competitive position.

In addition to ongoing environmental compliance at its operations, Sunbeam also is actively engaged in environmental remediation activities many of which related to divested operations. As of December 31, 1998, Sunbeam has been identified by the United States Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") or a state environmental agency as a potentially responsible party ("PRP") in connection with seven sites subject to the federal Superfund Act and five sites subject to state Superfund laws comparable to the federal law (collectively the "Environmental Sites"), exclusive of sites at which Sunbeam has been designated (or expects to be designated) as a de minimis (less than 1%) participant.

The Superfund Act, and related state environmental remediation laws, generally authorize governmental authorities to remediate a Superfund site and to assess the costs against the PRPs or to order the PRPs to remediate the site at their expense. Liability under the Superfund Act is joint and several and is imposed on a strict basis, without regard to degree of negligence or culpability. As a result, Sunbeam recognizes its responsibility to determine whether other PRPs at a Superfund site are financially capable of paying their respective shares of the ultimate cost of remediation of the site. Whenever Sunbeam has determined that a particular PRP is not financially responsible, it has assumed for purposes of establishing reserve amounts that such PRP will not pay its respective share of the costs of remediation. To minimize Sunbeam's potential liability with respect to the Environmental Sites, Sunbeam has actively participated in steering committees and other groups of PRPs established with respect to such sites. Sunbeam currently is engaged in active remediation activities at 11 sites, six of which are among the Environmental Sites referred to above, and five of which have not been designated as Superfund sites under federal or state law. The remediation efforts in which Sunbeam is involved include facility investigations, including soil and groundwater investigations, corrective measure studies, including feasibility studies, groundwater monitoring, extraction and treatment, soil sampling, excavation and treatment relating to environmental clean-ups. In certain instances, Sunbeam has entered into agreements with governmental authorities to undertake additional investigatory activities and in other instances has agreed to implement appropriate remedial actions. Sunbeam has also established reserve amounts for certain non-compliance matters including those involving air emissions.

Sunbeam has established reserves to cover the anticipated probable costs of investigation and remediation, based upon periodic reviews of all sites for which Sunbeam has, or may have remediation responsibility. Sunbeam accrues environmental investigation and remediation costs when it is both probable that a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated and Sunbeam's responsibility is established. Generally, the timing of these accruals coincides with the earlier of formal commitment to an investigation plan, completion of a feasibility study or Sunbeam's commitment to a formal plan of action. As of September 30, 1999, December 31, 1998 and 1997, Sunbeam's environmental reserves were $23.3 million (representing $21.6 million for the estimated costs of facility investigations, corrective measure studies, or known remedial measures, and $1.7 million for estimated legal costs), $25.0 million (representing $22.9 million for the estimated costs of facility investigations, corrective measure studies, or known remedial measures, and $2.1 million for estimated legal costs) and $24.0 million (representing $21.8 million for the estimated costs of facility investigations, corrective measure studies, or known remedial measures, and $2.2 million for estimated legal costs), respectively. It is anticipated that the $23.3 million accrual at September 30, 1999 will be paid as follows: $5.2 million in 1999, $3.9 million in 2000, $1.8 million in 2001, $2.0 million in 2002, $0.6 million in 2003 and $9.8 million thereafter. Sunbeam has accrued its best estimate of investigation and remediation costs based upon facts known to Sunbeam at such dates and because of the inherent difficulties in estimating the ultimate amount of environmental costs, which are further described below, these estimates may materially change in the future as a result of the uncertainties described below. Estimated costs, which are based upon experience with similar sites and technical evaluations, are judgmental in nature and are recorded at undiscounted amounts without considering the impact of inflation and are adjusted periodically to reflect changes in applicable laws or regulations, changes in available technologies and receipt by Sunbeam of new information. It is difficult to estimate the ultimate level of future environmental expenditures due to a number of uncertainties surrounding environmental liabilities. These uncertainties include the applicability of laws and regulations, changes in environmental remediation requirements, the enactment of additional regulations, uncertainties surrounding remediation procedures including the development of new technology, the identification of new sites for which Sunbeam could be a PRP, information relating to the exact nature and extent of the contamination at each site and the extent of required cleanup efforts, the uncertainties with respect to the ultimate outcome of issues which may be actively contested and the varying costs of alternative remediation strategies. Sunbeam continues to pursue the recovery of some environmental remediation costs from certain of its liability insurance carriers; however, such potential recoveries have not been offset against potential liabilities and have not been considered in determining Sunbeam's environmental reserves.

Due to uncertainty over remedial measures to be adopted at some sites, the possibility of changes in environmental laws and regulations and the fact that joint and several liability with the right of contribution is possible at federal and state Superfund sites, Sunbeam's ultimate future liability with respect to sites at which remediation has not been completed may vary from the amounts reserved as of September 30, 1999.

Sunbeam believes, based on existing information for sites where costs are estimable, that the costs of completing environmental remediation of all sites for which Sunbeam has a remediation responsibility have been adequately reserved and that the ultimate resolution of these matters will not have a material adverse effect upon Sunbeam's financial condition, results of operations or cash flows.

Regulatory Matters

Sunbeam is subject to various laws and regulations in connection with its business operations, including but not limited to laws related to relations with employees, maintenance of safe manufacturing facilities, truth in packaging and advertising, regulation of medical products and safety of consumer products. Sunbeam does not anticipate that its business or operations will be materially adversely affected by compliance with any of these provisions.

Compensation of Sunbeam Directors

The Amended and Restated Sunbeam Corporation Stock Option Plan (the "Option Plan") provides that each director of Sunbeam who is not an employee of Sunbeam or an affiliate of Sunbeam ("Outside Directors"), is automatically granted 1,500 shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock upon his or her initial election or appointment to the Sunbeam board and upon each subsequent re-election to the Sunbeam board of directors (prorated in case of an election or appointment at any time other than at an annual meeting of stockholders). Such restricted Sunbeam common stock vests immediately upon the Outside Director's acceptance of his or her election or appointment.

In addition to the grant of restricted stock, effective as of June 29, 1999, Outside Directors are paid a $10,000 annual retainer and $1,000 for each meeting of the board of directors or its committees that they attend, whether in person or by telephone.

Sunbeam directors do not receive any other fees, but are reimbursed for all ordinary and necessary out-of-pocket expenses incurred by them in attending meetings of the Sunbeam board or its committees. Pursuant to Sunbeam's by-laws and Delaware law, Sunbeam is either providing a defense, or reimbursing certain current and former directors of Sunbeam for defense costs incurred by them, in connection with pending litigation against Sunbeam in which certain of such directors have been named as defendants. (B) Grant date values were calculated using the Black-Scholes options pricing model which has been adjusted to take dividends into account for the period prior to announced discontinuance of dividends. Use of this model should not be viewed in any way as a forecast of the future performance of the common stock. The estimated present value of each stock option as set forth above is based on the following inputs:

Valuation Dates	2/01/98	2/19/98	5/12/98	5/19/98	8/12/98	8/31/98	12/16/98
Risk Free Interest Rate	5.51%	5.57%	5.79%	5.72%	5.37%	4.95%	4.60%
Stock Price Volatility	36.10%	36.00%	40.30%	40.30%	49.60%	49.80%	52.80%
Dividend Yield	0.10%	0.10%	0.20%	0.20%	0.00%	0.00%	0.00%

The model assumes: (a) an expected option term of six years; (b) a risk-free interest rate based on closing six-year U.S. Treasury strip yield on the date of valuation; and (c) no forfeitures. Stock price volatility is calculated using weekly stock prices for a period of five years ended as of the valuation date and believed to reflect volatility in the absence of unusual corporate transactions. Notwithstanding the fact that these options are, with limited exceptions, non-transferable, no discount for lack of marketability was taken.

Aggregated Option Exercises in Last Fiscal Year and Fiscal Year-End Option Values

The following table sets forth information with respect to option exercises occurring during 1998 and the number of options held by the Named Executives at Sunbeam's fiscal year end. The option grants to Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins were approved by Sunbeam's stockholders at Sunbeam's 1999 annual meeting of stockholders held on June 29, 1999. Sunbeam and Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh are disputing the amounts and benefits paid and payable to each of them under their respective employment agreements, and Sunbeam is contesting the validity of options granted to them. The following table includes the entire amount of the options granted by Sunbeam which Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh assert are vested. See "—Employment Agreement with Mr. Dunlap—Dispute with Mr. Dunlap" and "—Employment Agreement with Messrs. 022025

Compensation

Under the Levin Agreement, Mr. Levin will be paid a base salary at an annual rate of not less than $1,000,000. Effective April 1, 1999, Mr. Levin's base compensation was increased to $1,150,000. Additionally, Mr. Levin was paid a guaranteed bonus for 1998 of $541,667 and, thereafter, is eligible to receive a performance-based target annual bonus of 100% of his base salary and, if specified performance objectives are met, up to a bonus of 200% of his base salary under Sunbeam's incentive plan subject to a maximum award of $2,000,000. Mr. Levin participates in the other benefit plans available generally to employees or other senior executives of Sunbeam. Sunbeam also reimburses Mr. Levin for the cost of membership in a country club.

Equity Grants

Mr. Levin received grants effective as of August 12, 1998 of options to purchase 1,750,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at a price of $7.00 per share; 500,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at a price of $14.00 per share; and 500,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at a price of $10.50 per share (the "Levin Options"). The term of each of the Levin Options is ten years, and they will vest and become exercisable in full on June 14, 2001 if Mr. Levin remains employed by Sunbeam as of such date. In addition, effective March 29, 1999, Mr. Levin received grants of options under the Option Plan to purchase 250,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at $5.57 per share. These options will vest equally on the first, second and third anniversaries of the grant date. Upon the occurrence of a "Change in Control" of Sunbeam as defined in the Option Plan, all of the options granted to Mr. Levin will vest in full.

Termination and Change in Control Provisions

Sunbeam may terminate Mr. Levin's employment under the Levin Agreement due to his disability, or for Cause. As defined in the Levin Agreement, "Cause" means (1) gross neglect of his duties, (2) his conviction for a felony or any lesser crime or offense involving the property of Sunbeam, (3) willful misconduct in connection with the performance of any material portion of his duties, (4) willful breach of any material provision of the Levin Agreement, or (5) any conduct on Mr. Levin's part which would make his continued employment materially prejudicial to the best interests of Sunbeam. In addition, he may terminate his employment following a Company Breach upon 60 days' written notice to Sunbeam. As defined in the Levin Agreement, "Company Breach" means (1) any material breach of the Levin Agreement by Sunbeam, including the failure to obtain stockholder approval of the grant of the Levin Options, or (2) a "Change in Control" of Sunbeam, as defined in the Levin Agreement.

The Levin Agreement provides that, if Sunbeam terminates Mr. Levin's employment for Cause or if he voluntarily terminates his employment, all obligations, other than accrued obligations, of Sunbeam will cease and all unvested Levin Options will be immediately forfeited. If a Company Breach occurs, and Mr. Levin terminates the Levin Agreement, Sunbeam is obligated to continue to pay Mr. Levin's base salary and target bonus for the balance of the term and continue his benefits until his reemployment. In addition, all of the Levin Options vest and remain exercisable for three years.

The Levin Agreement provides that, if Mr. Levin's employment is terminated due to his death or his continued disability for six months, his legal representatives or designated beneficiary, or Mr. Levin, will receive continued payments in an amount equal to 60% of base salary until the longer of 12 months or the end of the term in effect at the time of his death or termination due to disability. The Levin Options will become vested and remain exercisable for three years thereafter.

Equity Grants

Under the Executive Agreements, Messrs. Shapiro and Jenkins and Ms. Clark also received grants effective as of June 15, 1998, June 15, 1998 and August 31, 1998, respectively, of options to purchase 600,000 shares, 450,000 shares and 50,000 shares, respectively, of Sunbeam common stock at a price of $7.00 per share (the "Executive Options"). The term of each of the Executive Options is ten years, and they will vest and become exercisable in full on June 14, 2001, June 14, 2001 and June 14, 2000, respectively, if the Executive remains employed as of such date. Mr. Jenkins was also granted an option, effective March 29, 1999, to acquire 100,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at a purchase price of $5.57 per share. This option will vest in equal increments on the first, second and third anniversaries of the grant date. Upon the occurrence of a "Change in Control" of Sunbeam, as defined in the Option Plan, the Executive Options will vest in full. In addition, under her employment agreement, Ms. Clark exchanged 75,000 options she had previously received upon joining Sunbeam for 50,000 options with an exercise price of $7.00 per share, as part of Sunbeam's option exchange program.

Termination and Change in Control Provisions

Sunbeam may terminate an Executive's employment under his or her Executive Agreement due to disability, or for Cause. As defined in the Executive Agreements, "Cause" means (1) gross neglect of duties, (2) conviction for a felony or any lesser crime or offense involving the property of Sunbeam, (3) willful misconduct in connection with the performance of any material portion of the Executive's duties, (4) willful breach of any material provision of the agreement by Executive, or (5) any conduct on the Executive's part which would make continued employment materially prejudicial to the best interests of Sunbeam. The Executive may terminate his or her employment under the Executive Agreement at any time. In addition, he or she may terminate his or her employment for Company Breach upon 60 days' written notice to Sunbeam. As defined in the Executive Agreements, "Company Breach" means any material breach of the Executive Agreement by Sunbeam. In the case of the agreements with Messrs. Shapiro and Jenkins, a material breach includes the failure to obtain stockholder approval of the grants of the Executive Options to Messrs. Shapiro and Jenkins and a "Change of Control" of Sunbeam, as defined in their respective Executive Agreements.

The Executive Agreements provide that, if Sunbeam terminates an Executive's employment for Cause or if the Executive voluntarily terminates his or her employment, all obligations, other than accrued obligations of Sunbeam will cease and all unvested Executive Options shall be immediately forfeited. If a Company Breach occurs, and an Executive terminates his or her Executive Agreement, Sunbeam is obligated to continue to pay the Executive's base salary and target bonus for the balance of the term and continue the Executive's benefits until his reemployment. In addition, all of the Executive Options will vest and remain exercisable for three years.

The Executive Agreements provide that, if an Executive's employment is terminated due to death, his or her legal representatives or designated beneficiary will receive continued payments in an amount equal to 60% of base salary until the longer of 12 months or the end of the term in effect at the time of death. Upon an Executive's death, the Executive Options will be vested upon such death and will remain exercisable for three years thereafter.

Employment Agreement with Mr. Dunlap

As of February 1, 1998, Sunbeam entered into an employment agreement with Mr. Dunlap (the "Dunlap Agreement") in which Sunbeam agreed to continue to employ Mr. Dunlap as Chairman of the board of directors and Chief Executive Officer, and Mr. Dunlap agreed to serve in such capacities, for a period of three years ending January 31, 2001, and for successive one-year renewal periods unless advance notice of termination was given by either party by no later than August 1 of the immediately preceding year. The Dunlap Agreement was not renewable beyond January 31, 2003. The Dunlap Agreement replaced and superseded Mr. Dunlap's prior employment agreement.

Dispute with Mr. Dunlap. On June 13, 1998, the Sunbeam board of directors removed Mr. Dunlap as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. The Sunbeam board took this step because Sunbeam's outside directors had lost confidence in Mr. Dunlap's leadership. Mr. Dunlap has asserted that Sunbeam terminated his employment without cause in breach of the Dunlap Agreement, and Sunbeam is vigorously contesting these claims, including claims regarding the validity of grants of Sunbeam common stock and stock options to him. Nothing in this prospectus should be construed to support his claims or to limit or otherwise affect Sunbeam's claims against Mr. Dunlap, including claims with respect to his entitlement to equity grants.

Compensation. Under the Dunlap Agreement, Mr. Dunlap was to be paid a base salary at an annual rate of $2,000,000. Sunbeam could increase Mr. Dunlap's base salary, but could not reduce it after any such increase. Mr. Dunlap was eligible to participate in the other benefit plans available generally to employees or other senior executives of Sunbeam. However, he was not eligible to participate in any incentive plan of Sunbeam. Sunbeam also provided Mr. Dunlap with various perquisites on a grossed-up basis. Upon Mr. Dunlap's termination, he did not receive any compensation from Sunbeam. Sunbeam subsequently agreed to pay $52,000 of the accrued vacation and employment benefits of Mr. Dunlap as part of a six-month agreement with Mr. Dunlap in which the parties agreed not to assert claims against each other and to exchange information relating to the pending stockholder lawsuits.

Equity Grants. The Dunlap Agreement provided that all of Mr. Dunlap's then outstanding options to purchase shares of Sunbeam common stock, which were granted under Mr. Dunlap's prior employment agreement, vested as of February 20, 1998; 40% of Mr. Dunlap's shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock were canceled as of such date; and all of Mr. Dunlap's remaining shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock vested as of such date. The Dunlap Agreement also provided that Sunbeam reimburse Mr. Dunlap on a grossed-up basis with respect to any income tax assessed in connection with the vesting of such shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock.

Mr. Dunlap received a grant as of February 1, 1998 of 300,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock. Mr. Dunlap also received a grant effective as of February 1, 1998 of options to purchase 3,750,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock at a price of $36.85 per share (the "Dunlap Options"), which grant was approved by Sunbeam's stockholders at the 1998 annual meeting. The Dunlap Options provided for a term of ten years, and for vesting with respect to one-third of the shares subject thereto on the grant date and for an additional one-third to vest on each of the first and second anniversaries of the grant date if Mr. Dunlap had remained employed by Sunbeam. The Dunlap Agreement provided that upon the occurrence of a "Change in Control" of Sunbeam, as defined in the Option Plan, the Dunlap Options would have vested in full.

Termination and Change in Control Provisions. The Dunlap Agreement provided that Sunbeam could terminate Mr. Dunlap's employment at any time, or due to his disability, or for Cause. The Dunlap Agreement defined "Cause" to mean (1) willful failure substantially to perform Mr. Dunlap's duties under the Dunlap Agreement, except if such failure results from disability, or (2) his conviction for a felony or a plea of guilty or no contest thereto.

The Dunlap Agreement provided that, if Sunbeam terminated Mr. Dunlap's employment other than for Cause and not due to his disability, or if he terminated his employment for a "Good Reason," as defined in the Dunlap Agreement:

(1) he would receive as liquidated damages a lump sum payment in an amount equal to the base salary that would have been payable through the period ending January 31, 2001, or any then applicable renewal period;

(2) the Dunlap Options would become fully vested, and he would be entitled to exercise the Dunlap Options as well as previously granted options for the balance of their original ten-year term; and

(3) he would be entitled to continue participating in the employee benefit plans in which he had been entitled to participate before termination, for three years after termination, or to receive substantially equivalent benefits.

The Dunlap Agreement provided that, if Sunbeam terminated Mr. Dunlap's employment for Cause or if he terminated his employment other than for Good Reason, all obligations, other than accrued obligations, of Sunbeam would cease, except that Mr. Dunlap would be able to exercise the Dunlap Options as well as previously granted options which were exercisable on the date of termination within 90 days, if the termination were for Cause, and within one year, if it were by Mr. Dunlap without Good Reason.

In addition, the Dunlap Agreement provided that Mr. Dunlap would be entitled to receive a gross-up with respect to any excise tax applicable under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, to "excess parachute payments."

Employment Agreements with Messrs. Kersh And Fannin

Sunbeam entered into employment agreements with each of Messrs. Kersh and Fannin as of February 1, 1998. Messrs. Kersh and Fannin are referred to herein as the "Prior Executives." The employment agreements with Messrs. Kersh and Fannin had terms ending on January 31, 2001. The employment agreements with Messrs. Kersh and Fannin (referred to individually as a "Prior Executive Agreement" and collectively as the "Prior Executive Agreements") replaced and superseded their respective previous employment agreements with Sunbeam.

Dispute with Mr. Kersh. On June 16, 1998, the Sunbeam board of directors terminated Mr. Kersh as Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer. Mr. Kersh has asserted that Sunbeam terminated his employment without cause in breach of his Prior Executive Agreement, and Sunbeam is vigorously contesting these claims, including claims regarding the validity of grants of restricted Sunbeam common stock and options to him. Nothing in this prospectus should be construed to support his claims or to limit or otherwise affect Sunbeam's claims against Mr. Kersh, including claims with respect to his entitlement to equity grants.

Compensation. Under their respective Prior Executive Agreements, Messrs. Kersh and Fannin were each to be paid a base salary at annual rates of $875,000 and $595,000, respectively. The Prior Executives were also eligible to participate in those benefit plans available generally to employees or other senior executives of Sunbeam. However, the Prior Executives were not eligible to participate in any cash incentive plan of Sunbeam. Upon Mr. Kersh's termination, he did not receive any compensation from Sunbeam. Sunbeam subsequently agreed to pay $68,000 of the accrued vacation and employment benefits of Mr. Kersh as part of a six-month agreement with Mr. Kersh in which the parties agreed not to assert claims against each other and to exchange information relating to the pending stockholder lawsuits.

Equity Grants. The Prior Executive Agreements provided that all of Mr. Kersh's then outstanding options to acquire shares of Sunbeam common stock, which were granted under Mr. Kersh's previous employment agreement, and all of Mr. Fannin's then outstanding options to acquire shares of Sunbeam common stock vested as of February 20, 1998; 40% of each of Mr. Kersh's and Mr. Fannin's shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock were canceled as of such date; and all of Mr. Kersh's and Mr. Fannin's remaining shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock vested as of such date. The Prior Executive Agreements provided that Sunbeam was to reimburse Messrs. Kersh and Fannin on a grossed-up basis with respect to any income tax assessed in connection with the vesting of such shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock.

As of February 1, 1998, Messrs. Kersh and Fannin each received a grant of 150,000 and 30,000 shares of restricted Sunbeam common stock (the "Prior Executive Restricted Shares"), respectively. These Prior Executive Restricted Shares provided for vesting in four equal installments on each of February 1, 1998 and the first, second and third anniversaries of February 1, 1998. Messrs. Kersh and Fannin also received grants, effective as of February 1, 1998, of options to purchase 1,125,000 and 750,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock, respectively, at a price of $36.85 per share which were approved by Sunbeam's stockholders at the 1998 annual meeting (the "Prior Executive Options"). These Prior Executive Options provided for vesting in four equal installments on the grant date of February 1, 1998 and the first, second and third anniversaries of February 1, 1998.

Termination and Change in Control Provisions. The Prior Executive Agreements with Messrs. Kersh and Fannin provided that Sunbeam may terminate either Prior Executive's employment at any time, or due to the Prior Executive's disability, or for "Cause," as defined in the Prior Executive Agreement.

Each Prior Executive Agreement provided that, if Sunbeam terminated the Prior Executive's employment other than for Cause and not due to his disability, or if the Prior Executive terminated his employment for "Good Reason," as defined in the Prior Executive Agreements, or following a "Change in Control," as defined in the Prior Executive Agreements:

(1) such Prior Executive would receive as liquidated damages a lump sum payment in an amount equal to the base salary that would have been payable to him through the end of the employment term;

(2) the Options and Executive Restricted Shares granted to such Prior Executive would become fully vested, and the Prior Executive will be entitled to exercise his Prior Executive Options and previously granted options for the balance of their original ten-year term; and

(3) the Prior Executive would be entitled to continue participating in the employee benefit plans in which he had been entitled to participate before termination, through the end of the employment term, or to receive substantially equivalent benefits.

Each Prior Executive Agreement provided that if Sunbeam terminated the Prior Executive's employment for Cause or if the Prior Executive terminated his employment other than for Good Reason or following a Change in Control, all obligations, other than accrued obligations, of Sunbeam would cease, except that such Prior Executive would be able to exercise Prior Executive Options and previously granted options granted to him which were exercisable on the date of termination or within 90 days thereof, if the termination were for Cause, and within one year thereof, if the termination were by the Executive other than for Good Reason or following a Change in Control.

In addition, each Prior Executive Agreement provided that the Prior Executive would be entitled to receive a gross-up with respect to any excise tax applicable under the Internal Revenue Code to "excess parachute payments."

Employment Agreement with Ms. Kelley

Sunbeam entered into an employment agreement with Ms. Kelley in December 1998. The agreement had an initial term extending until December 31, 2000, but expired upon her resignation from employment effective May 31, 1999. In 1999, while this agreement was in effect, Ms. Kelley's annual base salary rate was $275,000. In addition, Ms. Kelley was paid a guaranteed bonus of $112,500 for 1998. Under the agreement, Ms. Kelley received a grant effective as of December 16, 1998 of options to purchase 60,000 shares of common stock at a price of $7.00 per share.

Ms. Kelley's agreement provided that if Sunbeam terminated her employment for Cause (as defined in Ms. Kelley's agreement) or if she voluntarily terminated her employment, all obligations of Sunbeam, other than accrued obligations, would cease and all unvested stock options would be immediately forfeited. If a Company Breach (as defined in Ms. Kelley's agreement) occurred, and Ms. Kelley terminated her employment, under the agreement, Sunbeam was obligated to pay Ms. Kelley's base salary and target bonus for the balance of the term and continue her benefits until her reemployment. In addition, all of Ms. Kelley's options would have vested and remained exercisable for three years.

In connection with her resignation, the options to purchase 60,000 shares of common stock at $7.00 per share were made fully exercisable on June 13, 1999 in exchange for the forfeiture by Ms. Kelley of 68,583 exercisable options having exercise prices ranging from $20.30 per share to $38.34 per share.

Subsequent Arrangements with Messrs. Dunlap, Kersh and Fannin

In early August 1998, Sunbeam entered into a six-month agreement with Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh in which all parties agreed not to assert claims against each other and to exchange information relating to the various lawsuits in which Sunbeam and Messrs. Dunlap Kersh are named as defendants. Sunbeam also agreed to pay, and has paid, to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh amounts related to accrued vacation and employment benefits and to advance litigation defense costs subject to the receipt of an undertaking from each of them, which Sunbeam has received, to repay all amounts so advanced if it is determined that they did not meet the applicable standard of conduct for indemnification under Delaware law. This agreement has expired and Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh have commenced an arbitration action against Sunbeam claiming recovery of amounts they allege are payable to them under their agreements. Sunbeam is vigorously contesting these claims and is seeking the return of all amounts they received under their February 1998 employment agreements. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh have obtained an order from the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware requiring Sunbeam to advance reasonable litigation defense costs to each of them.

In connection with the termination of Mr. Fannin's employment by mutual agreement, Sunbeam entered into an agreement with him providing that, under the terms of his employment agreement and in consideration of the execution of the agreement, including a release and covenant not to sue contained therein, he would receive the following payments, all subject to applicable withholding taxes:

(a) $825,000 in severance payments, of which $575,001 was paid in 1998 and the balance of which is payable in monthly installments of $16,667;

(b) consulting payments of $250,000 of which $41,667 was paid in 1998 and the balance of which is payable in monthly installments of $13,889; and

(c) $50,000 payable for the three year extension of Mr. Fannin's non-compete agreement, of which $8,334 was paid in 1998 and the balance of which is payable in equal monthly installments of $2,778.

In addition, Mr. Fannin received the value of his accrued vacation for 1996, 1997 and 1998, continuation of health, dental and life insurance coverage, on the same basis as prior to termination of employment for an additional 18 months or until his earlier employment providing such benefits. The termination agreement with Mr. Fannin also provided for a three-year term for his outstanding vested stock options, confirmed the amount of his unrestricted Sunbeam common stock grants and provided for the mutually agreed cancellation of all other equity awards.

Other Transactions

Settlement of Claims; Issuance of Warrant

On August 12, 1998, Sunbeam announced that, following investigation and negotiation conducted by a special committee of the Sunbeam board of directors, consisting of four outside directors not affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes, Sunbeam had entered into the settlement agreement with the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary from which Sunbeam had acquired a controlling interest in Coleman in March 1998. Under the settlement agreement, Sunbeam was released from threatened claims arising from that acquisition, and MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide management personnel and assistance to Sunbeam, in exchange for the issuance to the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary of a warrant expiring August 24, 2003 to purchase 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock at an exercise price of $7 per share, subject to anti-dilution provisions.

Services Provided by MacAndrews & Forbes

Under the settlement agreement referred to in the previous paragraph, in addition to making the services of Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins available to Sunbeam, MacAndrews & Forbes agreed to provide management assistance to Sunbeam with respect to specified matters. Sunbeam does not reimburse MacAndrews & Forbes for these services or for expenses incurred in providing these services to Sunbeam, other than reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses paid to third parties. Execution of the settlement agreement was a condition to Sunbeam's continued employment of Messrs. Levin, Shapiro and Jenkins as officers of Sunbeam.

Registration Rights

Sunbeam and the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary which sold Sunbeam its controlling interest in Coleman have entered into a registration rights agreement. Under the registration rights agreement, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary can require Sunbeam to register under the federal and applicable state securities laws the shares of Sunbeam common stock the subsidiary received when it sold its controlling interest in Coleman to Sunbeam. Sunbeam has also agreed to permit former affiliates of Coleman that received Sunbeam common stock in the March 1988 acquisition to join the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary in any registration of the subsidiary's shares of Sunbeam common stock.

The registration rights agreement was amended in August 1998 to permit the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary to require Sunbeam to also register (1) the warrant issued to it by Sunbeam under its settlement agreement with Sunbeam and (2) the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant.

Settlement of Coleman Options

Under Sunbeam's agreement providing for the merger, the unexercised options under Coleman's stock option plans will be cashed out at a price per share equal to the difference between $27.50 and the exercise price of the options. Ronald O. Perelman, the sole stockholder of MacAndrews & Forbes, holds 500,000 options for which he will receive a net payment of $6,750,000 upon completion of the merger. Messrs. Shapiro and Isko and Ms. Clark, executive officers of Sunbeam, hold 77,500, 20,000 and 25,000 options, respectively, for which they will receive net payments of $823,000, $226,099 and $275,005, respectively.

Arrangements with Coleman

Coleman and a subsidiary of MacAndrews & Forbes are parties to a cross-indemnification agreement in which Coleman has agreed to indemnify the subsidiary, its officers, directors, employees, control persons, agents and representatives against all past, present and future liabilities, including product liability and environmental matters, related to the initial assets of Coleman, which Coleman acquired from such affiliate in December 1991. In addition, under this cross-indemnification agreement, the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary has agreed to indemnify Coleman and its officers, directors, employees, agents and representatives against all other liabilities of this MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary or any of its subsidiaries, including liabilities relating to the assets it did not transfer to Coleman in December 1991. This cross-indemnification agreement will survive the merger.

Coleman previously was included in the consolidated tax group for the MacAndrews & Forbes companies and was a party to a tax sharing agreement with a MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary, under which Coleman paid to this subsidiary the amount of taxes which would have been paid by Coleman if it were required to file separate Federal, state or local income tax returns. The obligations of MacAndrews & Forbes under the tax sharing agreement were terminated when Sunbeam bought a controlling interest in Coleman in March 1998. As described under the section titled "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Acquisition of Coleman Preferred Stock," one of Sunbeam's wholly owned subsidiaries recently acquired shares of a newly created series of Coleman voting preferred stock. These shares were created and purchased in order to enable Sunbeam and Coleman to file consolidated federal income tax returns prior to the completion of the merger. In connection with the acquisition of these shares, Sunbeam entered into a tax sharing agreement with Coleman pursuant to which Coleman will pay to Sunbeam amounts equal to the federal and state income taxes that would have been payable by Coleman had Coleman not been included in the consolidated income tax return of Sunbeam.

Office Space

During 1998, Sunbeam sublet office space in New York City from an affiliate of MacAndrews & Forbes. The expense for such rent during 1998 was approximately $130,000. The lease was terminated in 1999.

Employment of Law Firms

Sunbeam employed the law firms of Reboul, MacMurray, Hewitt, Maynard and Kristol, of which Mr. Kristol is a partner, and Holland & Knight, of which Mr. Elson is Of Counsel, to perform some legal services for Sunbeam during 1998. The total fees paid to these firms during 1998 were less than $20,000. Neither Mr. Kristol nor Mr. Elson was involved in the provision of legal services to Sunbeam.

DESCRIPTION OF SUNBEAM CAPITAL STOCK

The following statements are summaries of provisions of Sunbeam's capital stock.

Sunbeam Common Stock

Sunbeam's authorized capital stock currently consists of 500,000,000 shares of Sunbeam common stock, par value $.01 per share, and 2,000,000 shares of preferred stock, par value $.01 per share. As of December 3, 1999, there were 100,902,392 shares of Sunbeam common stock outstanding. Each share of Sunbeam common stock entitles its holder to one vote on all matters upon which Sunbeam stockholders are entitled or permitted to vote, including the election of directors. There are no cumulative voting rights. Shares of Sunbeam common stock would participate ratably in any distribution of assets in a liquidation, dissolution or winding up of Sunbeam, subject to prior distribution rights of any shares of preferred stock then outstanding. The Sunbeam common stock has no preemptive rights or conversion rights nor are there any redemption or sinking fund provisions applicable to the Sunbeam common stock. Holders of Sunbeam common stock are entitled to participate in dividends as and when declared by the Sunbeam board out of funds legally available therefor. Sunbeam's ability to pay cash dividends is subject to restrictions under Delaware law. In addition, Sunbeam's bank credit facility prohibits Sunbeam from paying cash dividends.

The transfer agent and registrar for the Sunbeam common stock is The Bank of New York.

Sunbeam Preferred Stock

There are no shares of Sunbeam preferred stock currently outstanding. Sunbeam's Certificate of Incorporation provides that the Sunbeam board of directors may authorize the issuance of one or more series of preferred stock having such rights, including voting, conversion and redemption rights, and such preferences, including dividend and liquidation preferences, as the Sunbeam board may determine without any further action by the stockholders of Sunbeam.

Warrants

Sunbeam currently has outstanding one warrant which entitles the holder to purchase up to 23 million shares of Sunbeam common stock. This warrant was issued on August 24, 1998 under the terms of the Settlement Agreement, dated August 12, 1998, by and between Sunbeam and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., the MacAndrews & Forbes subsidiary from which Sunbeam acquired about 81% of the then outstanding Coleman common stock in the M&F Transaction. In the merger, Sunbeam will issue warrants which will entitle their holders to purchase up to 4.98 million shares of Sunbeam common stock. These warrants will be issued under a Warrant Agreement to be entered into by Sunbeam and The Bank of New York, as Warrant Agent, prior to the completion of the merger.

The warrant to be issued in the merger will be substantially similar to the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings.

The warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings and each of the warrants to be issued in the merger will be exercisable at a cash exercise price of $7 per share and will expire on August 24, 2003. In addition, the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings and each of the warrants to be issued in the merger is subject to anti-dilution adjustments in the event that Sunbeam completes one or more transactions having a dilutive effect on its existing stockholders. Under the settlement with Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Sunbeam has agreed that Coleman (Parent) Holdings can require Sunbeam to register under the federal and applicable state securities laws the shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrant. The shares of Sunbeam common stock issuable upon exercise of the warrants to be issued in the merger are being registered under the registration statement of which this document forms a part.

For further information regarding the warrant issued to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, see "RECENT DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING SUNBEAM—Settlement of Claims Relating to the M&F Transaction." For further information regarding the terms of the warrants to be issued in the merger, see "SETTLEMENT OF LITIGATION AND WARRANTS."

DESCRIPTION OF COLEMAN CAPITAL STOCK

The following statements are summaries of provisions of Coleman's capital stock.

Coleman Common Stock

The authorized capital stock of Coleman consists of 100,000,000 shares of capital stock, 80,000,000 of which are common stock, par value $.01 per share, and 20,000,000 of which are preferred stock, par value $.01 per share. Of these authorized shares, as of December 3, 1999, 55,827,490 shares of Coleman common stock were issued and outstanding and 923,670 shares of Coleman common stock were issuable upon exercise of Coleman stock options outstanding under Coleman's employee stock option plans (all of which options are currently exercisable).

Subject to the rights of holders of any Coleman preferred stock then outstanding, holders of Coleman common stock are entitled to receive dividends as may from time to time be declared by the Coleman board subject to certain limitations under Delaware law. The merger agreement prohibits Coleman from paying dividends and Sunbeam's credit facility only permits Coleman to pay dividends in additional shares of its capital stock until the merger is completed. Holders of Coleman common stock are entitled to one vote per share on all matters on which the holders of Coleman common stock are entitled to vote. Because holders of Coleman common stock do not have cumulative voting rights, the holders of a majority of the shares of Coleman common stock represented at a meeting can elect all of the directors. In the event of liquidation, dissolution or winding up of Coleman, holders of Coleman common stock would be entitled to share ratably in assets of Coleman available for distribution to the holders of Coleman common stock.

Holders of Coleman common stock are not liable for any liabilities of Coleman. There are no preemptive rights for the Coleman common stock. The outstanding shares of Coleman common stock are fully paid and nonassessable.

American Stock Transfer & Trust Co. acts as transfer agent and registrar for the Coleman common stock.

Coleman Preferred Stock

As of December 3, 1999, there were 3,000,000 shares of Coleman preferred stock issued and outstanding. Coleman's Certificate of Incorporation authorizes the Coleman board of directors to provide for the issuance, from time to time, of shares of preferred stock in series, to establish from time to time the number of shares to be included in any such series and to fix the designation, powers, preferences and rights of the shares of each such series and any qualifications, limitations or restrictions thereof.

On July 12, 1999, Coleman issued to Coleman Worldwide Corporation 3,000,000 shares of a newly created series of voting preferred stock, par value $.01 per share, denominated as "Series A Participating Preferred Stock." Each share of Series A Participating Preferred Stock entitles the holder thereof to one vote on all matters submitted to a vote of the stockholders of Coleman. Except as required by law, the holders of the Series A Participating Preferred Stock vote together as a single class with the holders of Coleman common stock on all matters submitted to a vote of the Coleman stockholders. The Series A Participating Preferred Stock is entitled to an annual dividend. Dividends on the Series A Participating Preferred Stock will accrue and be payable at the earlier of (1) the time any liquidating distribution is made to the holders of the Series A Participating Preferred Stock and (2) the time the shares of Series A Participating Preferred Stock are exchanged or changed into other stock or securities, cash and/or any other property, in connection with a consolidation, merger, combination or other transaction involving Coleman (other than the merger of a wholly owned Sunbeam subsidiary with Coleman). However, Sunbeam's credit facility only permits Coleman to pay dividends in additional shares of its capital stock until the merger is completed. The holders of shares of Series A Participating Preferred Stock share ratably in all other dividends and distributions received by the holders of Coleman common stock. In addition, the holders of shares of Series A Participating Preferred Stock are entitled to a per share liquidation preference equal to the price the Series A Participating Preferred Stock was initially issued to Sunbeam and, once the holders of shares of Coleman common stock have received a like per share amount, the holders of shares of Series A Participating Preferred Stock will share ratably with the holders of shares of Coleman common stock in all remaining amounts available for distribution upon liquidation of Coleman.

INDEPENDENT AUDITORS' REPORT

To the Board of Directors and Shareholders of
Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries:

We have audited the accompanying consolidated balance sheet of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries (the "Company") as of December 31, 1998, and the related consolidated statements of operations, shareholders' equity, and cash flows for the year then ended. Our audit also included the financial statement schedule as of and for the year ended December 31, 1998, listed in the Index to Financial Statements. These financial statements and financial statement schedule are the responsibility of the Company's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements and financial statement schedule based on our audit. We did not audit the consolidated financial statements of The Coleman Company, Inc. and subsidiaries (consolidated subsidiaries), which statements reflect total assets constituting 27% of consolidated total assets as of December 31, 1998, and total revenues constituting 40% of consolidated total revenues for the year then ended. Those consolidated financial statements were audited by other auditors whose report has been furnished to us, and our opinion, insofar as it relates to the amounts included for The Coleman Company, Inc. and subsidiaries, is based solely on the report of such other auditors.

We conducted our audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audit and the report of the other auditors provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, based on our audit and the report of the other auditors, such consolidated financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries as of December 31, 1998, and the results of their operations and their cash flows for the year then ended in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. Also, in our opinion, based on our audit and (as to the amounts included for The Coleman Company, Inc. and subsidiaries) the report of other auditors, such financial statement schedule as of and for the year ended December 31, 1998, when considered in relation to the basic consolidated financial statements taken as a whole, presents fairly in all material respects the information set forth therein.

These financial statements are the responsibility of Sunbeam's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. REPORT OF INDEPENDENT CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

To the Board of Directors and Shareholders of Sunbeam Corporation:

We have audited the accompanying consolidated balance sheet of Sunbeam Corporation (a Delaware corporation) and subsidiaries as of December 28, 1997 and the related consolidated statements of operations, shareholders' equity and cash flows for each of the two fiscal years in the period ended December 28, 1997. These consolidated financial statements are the responsibility of the Company's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries as of December 28, 1997, and the results of their operations and their cash flows for each of the two fiscal years in the period ended December 28, 1997 in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

Our audits were made for the purpose of forming an opinion on the basic financial statements taken as a whole. Schedule II for each of the two years in the period ended December 28, 1997 is presented for the purpose of complying with the Securities and Exchange Commission's rules and is not part of the basic financial statements. This Schedule has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the audits of the basic financial statements and, in our opinion, fairly states in all material respects the financial data required to be set forth therein in relation to the basic financial statements taken as a whole.

NOTES TO CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies

Organization

Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam" or the "Company") is a leading designer, manufacturer and marketer of branded consumer products. The Company's primary business is the manufacturing, marketing and distribution of durable household and outdoor leisure consumer products through mass market and other distribution channels in the United States and internationally. The Company also sells its products to professional and commercial end users such as small businesses, health care providers, hotels and other institutions. The Company's principal products include household kitchen appliances; health monitoring and care products for home use; scales for consumer and professional use for weight management and business uses; electric blankets and throws; clippers and trimmers for consumer, professional and animal uses; smoke and carbon monoxide detectors; outdoor barbecue grills; camping equipment such as tents, lanterns, sleeping bags and stoves; coolers; backpacks and book bags; and portable generators and compressors.

In 1998 the Company acquired an indirect controlling interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") and all the outstanding common stock of Signature Brands USA, Inc. ("Signature Brands") and First Alert, Inc. ("First Alert").

Principles of Consolidation

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of the Company and all majority-owned subsidiaries that it controls. All material intercompany balances and transactions have been eliminated.

Presentation of Fiscal Periods

To standardize the fiscal period ends of the Company and its acquired entities, effective with its 1998 fiscal year, the Company has changed its fiscal year end from the Sunday nearest December 31 to a calendar year. The impact of this change in fiscal period on net sales for 1998 was to increase sales by approximately $5.5 million, and the impact on operating results for the period was to increase the net loss by approximately $1.5 million.

Fiscal years 1997 and 1996 ended on December 28, 1997 and December 29, 1996, respectively, which encompassed 52-week periods.

Use of Estimates

The preparation of the consolidated financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the amounts reported in the consolidated financial statements and accompanying notes. Actual results could differ from those estimates. Significant accounting estimates include the establishment of the allowance for doubtful accounts, tax valuation allowances, reserves for sales returns and allowances, product warranty, product liability, excess and obsolete inventory, litigation and environmental exposures.

Cash and Cash Equivalents

The Company considers highly liquid investments purchased with an original maturity of three months or less to be cash equivalents.

Concentrations of Credit Risk

Substantially all of the Company's trade receivables are due from retailers and distributors located throughout the United States, Europe, Latin America, Canada, and Japan. Approximately 38% of the Company's sales in 1998 were to its five largest customers. The Company establishes its credit policies based on an ongoing evaluation of its customers' creditworthiness and competitive market conditions and establishes its allowance for doubtful accounts based on an assessment of exposures to credit losses at each balance sheet date. The Company believes its allowance for doubtful accounts is sufficient based on the credit exposures outstanding at December 31, 1998. However, certain retailers filed for bankruptcy protection in the last several years and it is possible that additional credit losses could be incurred if other retailers seek bankruptcy protection or if the trends of retail consolidation continue.

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

Inventories

Inventories are stated at the lower-of-cost-or-market with cost being determined principally by the first-in, first-out method.

In certain instances, the Company receives rebates from vendors based on the volume of merchandise purchased. Vendor rebates are recorded as reductions in the price of the purchased merchandise and are recognized in operations as the related inventories are sold.

Effective in fiscal 1997, as a consequence of the initial outsourcing of the supplies inventories management function, the Company began capitalizing the cost of manufacturing supplies, whereas previously the cost of these supplies was charged to operations when purchased. This change, which management believes is preferable in that it provides for a more appropriate matching of revenues and expenses, increased pre-tax operating earnings in fiscal 1997 by $2.8 million. Additional disclosures pursuant to Accounting Principles Board ("APB") Opinion No. 20, Accounting Changes, are not provided since supplies inventories were not monitored for financial reporting purposes prior to the initial outsourcing of the inventory management function and, consequently, the information is not available.

Property, Plant and Equipment

Property, plant and equipment are stated at cost. The Company provides for depreciation using primarily the straight-line method in amounts that allocate the cost of property, plant and equipment over the following useful lives:

Buildings and improvements	5 to 45 years
Machinery, equipment and tooling	3 to 15 years
Furniture and fixtures	3 to 10 years

Leasehold improvements are amortized on a straight-line basis over the shorter of its estimated useful life or the term of the lease.

Long-lived Assets

The Company accounts for long-lived assets pursuant to Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 121, Accounting for the Impairment of Long-Lived Assets and for Long-Lived Assets to be Disposed of. The Company periodically evaluates factors, events and circumstances which include, but are not limited to, the historical and projected operating performance of the business operations, specific industry trends and general economic conditions to assess whether the remaining estimated useful lives of long-lived assets may warrant revision or whether the remaining asset values are recoverable through future operations. When such factors, events or circumstances indicate that long-lived assets should be evaluated for possible impairment, the Company uses an estimate of cash flows (undiscounted and without interest charges) over the remaining lives of the assets to measure recoverability. If the estimated cash flows are less than the carrying value of the asset, the loss is measured as the amount by which the carrying value of the asset exceeds fair value.

With respect to enterprise level goodwill, the Company reviews impairment when changes in circumstances, similar to those described above for long-lived assets, indicate that the carrying value may not be recoverable. Under these circumstances, the Company estimates future cash flows using the recoverability method

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

(undiscounted and including related interest charges), as a basis for recording any impairment loss. An impairment loss is then recorded to adjust the carrying value of goodwill to the recoverable amount. The impairment loss taken is no greater than the amount by which the carrying value of the net assets of the business exceeds its fair value.

Derivative Financial Instruments

The Company enters into interest rate swap agreements and foreign exchange rate contracts as part of the management of its interest rate and foreign currency exchange rate exposures. The Company has no derivative financial instruments held for trading purposes and none of the instruments is leveraged. All financial instruments are put into place to hedge specific exposures. To qualify as a hedge, the item to be hedged must expose the Company to price, interest rate or foreign currency exchange rate risk and the hedging instrument must reduce that exposure. Any contracts held or issued that do not meet the requirements of a hedge are recorded at fair value in the Consolidated Balance Sheets and any changes in that fair value recognized in operations.

Interest rate swap agreements—Interest rate differentials to be paid or received as a result of interest rate swap agreements are accrued and recognized as an adjustment of interest expense related to the designated debt. Amounts receivable or payable under the agreements are included in receivables or other current liabilities in the Consolidated Balance Sheets. The fair value of the swap agreements and changes in the fair value as a result of changes in market interest rates are not recognized in the financial statements. Related premiums are amortized to interest expense ratably during the life of the swap agreement.

Gains and losses on termination of interest rate swap agreements are deferred and amortized as an adjustment to interest expense over the original period of interest exposure, provided the designated liability continues to exist. Realized and unrealized changes in the fair value of interest rate swaps designated with liabilities that no longer exist are recorded as a component of the gain or loss arising from the disposition of the designated liability.

Foreign currency options and forward contracts—Foreign currency contracts designated and effective as hedges are marked to market with realized and unrealized gains and losses deferred and recognized in operations when the designated transaction occurs. Foreign currency contracts not designated as hedges, failing to be hedges or failing to continue as effective hedges are included in operations as foreign exchange gains or losses.

Discounts or premiums on forward contracts designated and effective as hedges are accreted or amortized to expense using the straight-line method over the term of the related contract. Discounts or premiums on forward contracts not designated or effective as hedges are included in the mark to market adjustment and recognized in income as foreign exchange gains or losses. Initial premiums paid for purchased option contracts are amortized over the related option period.

Capitalized Interest

Interest costs for the construction of certain long-term assets are capitalized and amortized over the related assets' estimated useful lives. Total interest costs during 1998, 1997 and 1996 amounted to $131.9 million, $12.3 million and $14.0 million, respectively, of which $0.8 million, $0.9 million and $0.4 million, respectively, was capitalized as a cost of the related long-term assets.

1. Operations and Significant Accounting Policies—(Continued)

Deferred Financing Costs

Costs incurred in connection with obtaining financing are deferred and amortized as a charge to interest expense over the terms of the related borrowings using the interest method.

Amortization Periods

Trademarks, tradenames and goodwill are being amortized on a straight-line basis over 20 to 40 years.

Revenue Recognition

The Company recognizes sales and related cost of goods sold from product sales at the latter of the time of shipment or when title passes to the customers. In some situations, the Company has shipped product with the right of return where the Company is unable to reasonably estimate the level of returns and/or the sale is contingent upon the resale of the product. In these situations, the Company does not recognize revenue upon product shipment, but rather when the buyer of the product informs the Company that the product has been sold. Net sales is comprised of gross sales less provisions for estimated customer returns, discounts, promotional allowances, cooperative advertising allowances and costs incurred by the Company to ship product to customers. Reserves for estimated returns are established by the Company concurrently with the recognition of revenue. Reserves are established based on a variety of factors, including historical return rates, estimates of customer inventory levels, the market for the product and projected economic conditions. The Company monitors these reserves and makes adjustments to them when management believes that actual returns or costs to be incurred differ from amounts recorded.

Warranty Costs

The Company provides for warranty costs in amounts it estimates will be needed to cover future warranty obligations for products sold during the year. Estimates of warranty costs are periodically reviewed and adjusted, when necessary, to consider actual experience.

Product Liability

The Company provides for product liability costs it estimates will be needed to cover future product liability costs for product sold during the year. Estimates of product liability costs are periodically reviewed and adjusted, when necessary, to consider actual experience, and other relevant factors.

Legal Costs

The Company records charges for the costs it anticipates incurring in connection with litigation and claims against the Company when management can reasonably estimate these costs.

Income Taxes

The Company accounts for income taxes under the liability method in accordance with SFAS No. 109, Accounting for Income Taxes. The provision for income taxes includes deferred income taxes resulting from items reported in different periods for income tax and financial statement purposes. Deferred tax assets and liabilities represent the expected future tax consequences of the differences between the financial statement carrying amounts of existing assets and liabilities and their respective tax bases. The effects of changes in tax rates on deferred tax assets and liabilities are recognized in the period that includes the enactment date.

Advertising Costs

Media advertising costs included in Selling, General and Administrative Expense ("SG&A") are expensed as incurred. Allowances provided to customers for cooperative advertising are charged to operations, as earned, based on revenues and are included as a deduction from gross sales in determining net sales. The amounts charged to operations for media and cooperative advertising during 1998, 1997 and 1996 were $124.5 million, $55.7 million and $78.7 million, respectively.

Research and Development

Research and development expenditures are expensed in the period incurred. The amounts charged against operations during 1998, 1997 and 1996 were $18.7 million, $5.7 million and $6.5 million, respectively.

Foreign Currency Translation

The assets and liabilities of subsidiaries, other than those operating in highly inflationary economies, are translated into U.S. dollars with resulting translation gains and losses accumulated in a separate component of shareholders' equity. Income and expense items are converted into U.S. dollars at average rates of exchange prevailing during the year.

For subsidiaries operating in highly inflationary economies (Venezuela and Mexico), inventories and property, plant and equipment are translated at the rate of exchange on the date the assets were acquired, while other assets and liabilities are translated at year-end exchange rates. Translation adjustments for those operations are included in Other (Income) Expense, Net in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations. Effective January 1, 1999, Mexico will no longer be considered highly inflationary.

Stock-Based Compensation Plans

SFAS No. 123, Accounting for Stock-Based Compensation allows either adoption of a fair value method for accounting for stock-based compensation plans or continuation of accounting under APB Opinion No. 25, Accounting for Stock Issued to Employees, and related interpretations with supplemental disclosures.

The Company has chosen to account for its stock options using the intrinsic value based method prescribed in APB Opinion No. 25 and, accordingly, does not recognize compensation expense for stock option grants made at an exercise price equal to or in excess of the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant. Pro forma net income and earnings per share amounts as if the fair value method had been adopted are presented in Note 9. SFAS No. 123 does not impact the Company's results of operations, financial position or cash flows.

Basic and Diluted (Loss) Earnings Per Share of Common Stock

Basic (loss) earnings per common share calculations are determined by dividing (loss) earnings available to common shareholders by the weighted average number of shares of common stock outstanding. Diluted (loss) earnings per share are determined by dividing (loss) earnings available to common shareholders by the weighted average number of shares of common stock and dilutive common stock equivalents outstanding (all related to outstanding stock options, restricted stock, warrants and the Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures).

For the years ended December 31, 1998 and December 29, 1996, respectively, 1,902,177 and 1,552,684 shares related to stock options, were not included in diluted average common shares outstanding because their effect would be antidilutive. Diluted average common shares outstanding as of December 29, 1996 also excluded (78,654) shares related to restricted stock. Diluted average common shares outstanding as of December 31, 1998 also excluded 13,242,050 shares related to the conversion feature of the Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures (see Note 3) and 23,000,000 shares issuable on the exercise of warrants, due to antidilution. For the year ended December 28, 1997, the dilutive effect of 2,718,649 equivalent shares related to stock options and (120,923) equivalent shares of restricted stock were used in determining the dilutive average shares outstanding.

New Accounting Standards

In March 1998, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants ("AICPA") issued Statement of Position 98-1, Accounting for the Costs of Computer Software Developed or Obtained for Internal Use ("SOP 98-1"). SOP 98-1 requires computer software costs associated with internal use software to be expensed as incurred until certain capitalization criteria are met. The Company will adopt SOP 98-1 on January 1, 1999. Adoption of this statement is not expected to have a material impact on the Company's consolidated financial position, results of operations, or cash flows. Actual charges incurred due to systems projects may be material.

In April 1998, the AICPA issued Statement of Position 98-5, Reporting on the Cost of Start-Up Activities ("SOP 98-5"). SOP 98-5 requires all costs associated with pre-opening, pre-operating and organization activities to be expensed as incurred. The Company will adopt SOP 98-5 beginning January 1, 1999. Adoption of this statement is not expected to have a material impact on the Company's consolidated financial position, results of operations, or cash flows.

In June 1998, the FASB issued SFAS No. 133, Accounting for Derivative Instruments and Hedging Activities, which is effective for fiscal years beginning after June 15, 1999. SFAS No. 133 requires the recognition of all derivatives in the Consolidated Balance Sheets as either assets or liabilities measured at fair value. The Company will adopt SFAS No. 133 for the 2000 fiscal year. The Company has not yet determined the impact SFAS No. 133 will have on its consolidated financial position, results of operations or cash flows.

Reclassification

Certain prior year amounts have been reclassified to conform with the 1998 presentation.

2. Acquisitions

On March 30, 1998, the Company, through a wholly-owned subsidiary, acquired approximately 81% of the total number of then outstanding shares of common stock of Coleman from an affiliate of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("M&F"), in exchange for 14,099,749 shares of the Company's common stock and approximately $160 million in cash. In addition, the Company assumed approximately $1,016 million in debt. The value of the common stock issued at the date of acquisition was derived by using the average closing stock price as reported on the New York Stock Exchange Composite Tape for the day before and day of the public announcement of the acquisition. Immediately thereafter, as a result of the exercise of employee stock options, Sunbeam's indirect beneficial ownership of Coleman decreased to approximately 79% of the total number of the outstanding shares of Coleman common stock.

On August 12, 1998, the Company announced that, following investigation and negotiation conducted by a Special Committee of the Board consisting of four outside directors not affiliated with M&F, the Company had entered into a settlement agreement with an affiliate of M&F pursuant to which the Company was released from certain threatened claims of M&F and its affiliates arising from the Coleman acquisition and M&F agreed to provide certain management personnel and assistance to the Company in exchange for the issuance to the M&F affiliate of a five year warrant to purchase up to 23 million shares of the Company's common stock at a cash exercise price of $7.00 per share, subject to antidilution adjustments. The Company concluded that the agreement to issue this warrant did not result in a new measurement date for the purposes of determining the purchase price for Coleman and has accounted for the issuance of this warrant as a cost of settling a potential claim. Accordingly, a $70.0 million non-cash SG&A expense was recorded in the third quarter of 1998, based on valuation performed as of August 1998 using facts existing at that time. The valuation was conducted by an independent consultant engaged by the Special Committee of the board of directors.

The Company expects to acquire the remaining equity interest in Coleman pursuant to a merger transaction in which the existing Coleman minority shareholders will receive 0.5677 shares of the Company's common stock and $6.44 in cash for each share of Coleman common stock outstanding. In addition, unexercised options under Coleman's stock option plans will be cashed out at a price per share equal to the difference between $27.50 and the exercise price of such options. The Company expects to issue approximately 6.7 million shares of common stock and expend approximately $87 million in cash to complete the Coleman acquisition. Although there can be no assurance, it is anticipated the Coleman merger will occur in the second half of 1999. The acquisition of the remaining outstanding shares of Coleman common stock will be accounted for under the purchase method of accounting on the date of consummation of the Coleman merger. (Also see Note 15 for information regarding the proposed issuance of warrants related to this transaction.)

On April 6, 1998, the Company completed the acquisitions of First Alert, valued at approximately $182 million (including $133 million of cash and $49 million of assumed debt) and Signature Brands valued at $255 million, (reflecting cash paid, including the required retirement or defeasance of debt).

All of these acquisitions were accounted for by the purchase method of accounting. Accordingly, the results of operations of the acquired entities are included in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations from their respective dates of acquisition.

In each acquisition, the purchase price paid has been allocated to the fair value (determined by independent appraisals) of tangible and identified intangible assets acquired and liabilities assumed as follows (in millions):

	Coleman	Signature Brands	First Alert	Total
Value of common stock issued	$ 607	$ —	$ —	$ 607
Cash paid including expenses and mandatory redemption of debt, net of cash acquired	160	255	133	548
Cash received from sale of Coleman Spas, Inc	(17)	—	—	(17)
Cash received from stock option proceeds	(9)	—	—	(9)
Net cash paid and equity issued	741	255	133	1,129
Fair value of total liabilities assumed, including debt	1,455	83	103	1,641
	2,196	338	236	2,770
Fair value of assets acquired	1,113	191	172	1,476
Excess of purchase price over fair value of net assets acquired	$1,083	$147	$64	$1,294

The excess of purchase price over the fair value of net assets acquired has been classified as goodwill. Goodwill related to the Coleman and Signature Brands acquisitions is being amortized on a straight-line basis over 40 years. During the fourth quarter of 1998, as a result of the significant loss incurred by First Alert, as well as its future prospects, the Company determined that the goodwill relating to this acquisition was impaired and, based on the determination of fair value, has written-off the net carrying value of goodwill approximating $62.5 million. This one-time charge is reflected in SG&A expense in the Consolidated Statements of Operations.

As of the date of the acquisition of Coleman, management of the Company determined approximately 117 employees of Coleman would need to be involuntarily terminated in order to eliminate duplicate activities and functions and fully integrate Coleman into Sunbeam's operations. The Company recognized a liability of approximately $8 million representing severance and benefit costs related to 117 employees pursuant to the termination plan. This liability was included in the allocation of purchase price. As of December 31, 1998, the

2. Acquisitions—(Continued)

Company had paid severance benefits of approximately $5 million and 8 employees remained to be terminated. Remaining termination costs are expected to be paid by December 31, 2000 and no additional charges are anticipated in future periods related to this issue.

The following unaudited pro forma financial information for the Company gives effect to the Coleman and Signature Brands acquisitions as if they had occurred at the beginning of the periods presented. No pro forma adjustments have been made for the First Alert acquisition as its effects are not significant. These pro forma results have been prepared for informational purposes only and do not purport to be indicative of the results of operations which actually would have occurred had the acquisitions been consummated on the dates indicated, or which may result in the future. The unaudited pro forma results follow (in millions, except per share data):

	Fiscal Years Ended
	December 31, 1998	December 28, 1997
Net sales	$2,098.7	$2,408.9
Net loss from continuing operations before extraordinary charge	(801.1)	(23.6)
Basic and diluted loss per share from continuing operations before extraordinary charge	(7.96)	(0.24)

3. Debt

Debt at the end of each fiscal year consists of the following (in thousands):

	1998	1997

Concurrent with the acquisitions, the Company replaced its $250 million syndicated unsecured five-year revolving credit facility with a revolving and term credit facility (the "New Credit Facility"). The New Credit Facility provided for aggregate borrowings of up to $1.7 billion and in addition to other customary covenants, required Sunbeam to maintain specified consolidated leverage, interest coverage and fixed charge coverage ratios as of the end of each fiscal quarter occurring after March 31, 1998 and on or prior to the latest stated maturity date for any of the borrowings under the New Credit Facility.

3. Debt—(Continued)

As a result of, among other things, its operating losses incurred during the first half of 1998, Sunbeam did not achieve the specified financial ratios for June 30, 1998 and it appeared unlikely that Sunbeam would achieve the specified financial ratios for September 30, 1998. Consequently, Sunbeam and its lenders entered into an agreement dated as of June 30, 1998 that waived through December 31, 1998 all defaults arising from the failure of Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for June 30, 1998 and September 30, 1998. Pursuant to an agreement with Sunbeam dated as of October 19, 1998, Sunbeam's lenders extended all of the waivers under the June 30, 1998 agreement through April 10, 1999 and also waived through such date all defaults arising from any failure by Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for December 31, 1998. As part of the October 19, 1998 agreement, Sunbeam agreed to a minimum monthly earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization ("EBITDA") covenant for each of February, March and April of 1999, which covenant Sunbeam was able to satisfy.

On April 10, 1999, among other things, the lenders extended all of the waivers set forth in the October 19, 1998 agreement through April 15, 1999. On April 15, 1999, Sunbeam and its lenders entered into a comprehensive amendment to the New Credit Facility that, among other things, extended all of the waivers under the April 10, 1999 agreement until April 10, 2000 and waived until such date all defaults arising from any failure by Sunbeam to satisfy the specified financial ratios for any fiscal quarter end occurring during 1999 and for March 31, 2000. As part of the April 15, 1999 amendment, Sunbeam agreed to a minimum cumulative EBITDA covenant that is based on post-December 31, 1998 consolidated EBITDA and is tested at the end of each month occurring on or prior to March 31, 2000, as well as a covenant limiting the amount of revolving loans (other than those used to fund the Coleman merger) that may be outstanding under the New Credit Facility as of the end of each such month. The minimum cumulative EBITDA was initially $6.3 million for the period January 1, 1999 through April 30, 1999 and generally grows on a monthly basis until it reaches $121 million for the period from January 1, 1999 through March 31, 2000. The following description of the New Credit Facility reflects the terms of the New Credit Facility as amended.

The New Credit Facility provides for aggregate borrowings of up to $1.7 billion pursuant to: (i) a revolving credit facility in an aggregate principal amount of up to $400 million maturing March 30, 2005 ($52.5 million of which may only be used to complete the Coleman merger); (ii) up to $800 million in term loans maturing on March 30, 2005 (of which $35.0 million may only be used to complete the Coleman merger) and (iii) a $500 million term loan maturing September 30, 2006 (of which $5.0 million has already been repaid through March 31, 1999). As of December 31, 1998, $1.4 billion was outstanding and $0.3 billion was available for borrowing under the New Credit Facility.

Pursuant to the New Credit Facility, interest accrues, at the Company's option: (i) at the London Interbank Offered Rate ("LIBOR"), or (ii) at the base rate of the administrative agent which is generally the higher of the prime commercial lending rate of the administrative agent or the Federal Funds Rate plus 0.50%, in each case plus an interest margin which is currently 3.75% for LIBOR borrowings and 2.50% for base rate borrowings. The applicable interest margin is subject to upward or downward adjustment upon the occurrence of certain events. Borrowings under the New Credit Facility are secured by a pledge of the stock of the Company's material subsidiaries, including Coleman, and by a security interest in substantially all of the assets of Sunbeam and its material domestic subsidiaries, other than Coleman and its material subsidiaries except as described below. Currently, Coleman's inventory and related assets are pledged to secure its obligations for letters of credit issued for its account under the New Credit Facility. Additionally, as security for Coleman's note payable to the Company, Coleman pledged substantially all of its domestic assets, other than real property, including 66% of the stock of its direct foreign subsidiaries and domestic holding companies for its foreign subsidiaries, and all of the stock of its other direct domestic subsidiaries (but not the assets of Coleman's subsidiaries). The pledge runs in favor of Sunbeam's lending banks, to which the Coleman note has been pledged as security for Sunbeam's obligations to them. Upon completion of the Coleman merger, substantially all of Coleman's assets and the assets of Coleman's domestic subsidiaries will be pledged to secure the obligations under the New Credit Facility. In addition, borrowings under the New Credit Facility are guaranteed by a number of the Company's wholly owned material domestic subsidiaries and these subsidiary guarantees are secured as described above. Upon completion of the Coleman merger, Coleman and each of its United States subsidiaries will become guarantors of the obligations under the New Credit Facility. To the extent extensions of credit are made to any subsidiaries of the Company, the obligations of such subsidiaries are guaranteed by the Company.

In addition to the above described ratios and tests, the New Credit Facility contains covenants customary for credit facilities of a similar nature, including limitations on the ability of Sunbeam and its subsidiaries, including Coleman, to, among other things, (i) declare dividends or repurchase stock, (ii) prepay, redeem or repurchase debt, incur liens and engage in sale-leaseback transactions, (iii) make loans and investments, (iv) incur additional debt, including revolving loans under the New Credit Facility, (v) amend or otherwise alter material agreements or enter into restrictive agreements, (vi) make capital and year 2000 compliance expenditures, (vii) engage in mergers, acquisitions and asset sales, (viii) engage in certain transactions with affiliates, (ix) settle certain litigation, (x) alter its cash management system and (xi) alter the businesses they conduct. Sunbeam is also required to comply with specified financial covenants and ratios. The New Credit Facility provides for events of default customary for transactions of this type, including nonpayment, misrepresentation, breach of covenant, cross-defaults, bankruptcy, material adverse change arising from compliance with ERISA, material adverse judgments, entering into guarantees and change of ownership and control. It is also an event of default under the New Credit Facility if Sunbeam's registration statement in connection with the Coleman merger is not declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") on or before October 30, 1999 or if the merger does not occur within 25 business days of the effectiveness of the registration statement or if the cash consideration (including any payments on account of the exercise of any appraisal rights, but excluding related legal, accounting and other customary fees and expenses) to consummate the Coleman merger exceeds $87.5 million. Although there can be no assurance, the Company anticipates that it will satisfy these conditions. Unless waived by the bank lenders, the failure of Sunbeam to satisfy any of the financial ratios and tests contained in the New Credit Facility or the occurrence of any other event of default under the New Credit Facility would entitle the bank lenders to (a) receive a 2.00% increase in the interest rate applicable to outstanding loans and increase the trade letter of credit fees to 1.00% and (b) accelerate the maturity of the outstanding borrowings under the New Credit Facility and exercise all or any of their other rights and remedies. Any such acceleration or other exercise of rights and remedies would likely have a material adverse effect on Sunbeam. The New Credit Facility also includes provisions for the deferral of the 1999 scheduled term loan payments of $69.3 million, subject to delivery of certain collateral documents and the filing of an amendment to the Company's registration statement on Form S-4 relating to the Coleman merger. If these conditions are met, and there are no events of default, the scheduled loan payments will be extended until April 10, 2000. The Company anticipates that it will satisfy these conditions and, accordingly, has classified these amounts as long-term in the Consolidated Balance Sheet.

In March 1998, the Company completed an offering of Zero Coupon Convertible Senior Subordinated Debentures due 2018 (the "Debentures") at a yield to maturity of 5.0% (approximately $2,014 million principal amount at maturity) which resulted in approximately $730 million of net proceeds. The Debentures are exchangeable for shares of the Company's common stock at an initial conversion rate of 6.575 shares for each $1,000 principal amount at maturity of the Debentures, subject to adjustment upon occurrence of certain events. The Debentures are subordinated in right of payment to all existing and future senior indebtedness of the Company. The Debentures are not redeemable by the Company prior to March 25, 2003. On or after such date, the Debentures are redeemable for cash with at least 30 days notice, at the option of the Company. The Company is required to purchase Debentures at the option of the holder as of March 25, 2003, March 25, 2008 and March 25, 2013, at purchase prices equal to the issue price plus accrued original discount to such dates. The Company may, at its option, elect to pay any such purchase price in cash or common stock, or any combination thereof. The Company was required to file a registration statement with the SEC to register the Debentures by June 23, 1998. This registration statement was filed February 4, 1999 and the SEC has not declared the registration statement effective. Sunbeam's failure to file the registration statement by June 23, 1998 did not constitute a default under the terms of the Debentures. As part of the normal review process by the SEC, a number of comments have been made by the staff of the division of Corporation Finance relating to the registration statement and the restated 1996 and 1997 financial statements included therein. The Company expects to resolve these comments when it files an amendment to the registration statement. From June 23, 1998 until the registration statement is declared effective, the Company is required to pay to the Debenture holders cash liquidated damages accruing, for each day during such period, at a rate per annum equal to 0.25% during the first 90 days and 0.50% thereafter multiplied by the total of the issue price of the Debentures plus the original issue discount thereon on such day. The Company made its first payment of approximately $0.5 million to the Debenture holders on September 25, 1998. As of December 31, 1998 the Company had accrued additional payments totaling $1.0 million. The Company made a payment to Debenture holders in March 1999 of approximately $2.0 million. This amount included liquidated damages that accrued during the first quarter of 1999.

In connection with the acquisition of Signature Brands, the Company was required to defease $70.0 million of acquired debt. Cash was placed with a trustee to provide for the defeasance, including the related prepayment penalty. This cash was used to purchase Treasury Notes. Accordingly, $74.4 million of restricted investments held by the trustee for the August 1999 liquidation of this acquired debt are reflected as an asset and $70.0 million is reflected as short-term debt in the Consolidated Balance Sheet at December 31, 1998. The prepayment penalty is reflected as part of the acquisition price of Signature Brands.

In March 1998, the Company prepaid the $75.0 million 7.85% industrial revenue bond related to its Hattiesburg facility originally due in 2009. In connection with the early extinguishment of this debt, the Company recognized an extraordinary charge of $7.5 million. As a result of repayment of certain indebtedness assumed in the Coleman acquisition, the Company also recognized an extraordinary charge of $114.9 million. The debt assumed in connection with the Coleman acquisition was repaid as a result of the requirements under the terms of the New Credit Facility Credit Agreement. These extraordinary charges consisted of redemption premiums ($106.9 million), unamortized debt discount ($13.8 million) and unamortized deferred financing costs ($1.7 million).

During 1997, the Company repaid $12.2 million of long-term borrowings related to the divested furniture operations and other assets sold.

At December 31, 1998, the aggregate annual maturities on short-term and long-term debt in each of the years 1999-2003, and thereafter, were $119 million, $1,355 million, $1 million, $1 million, $1 million, and $5 million, respectively. In addition, the fully accreted Debenture amount of $2,014 million matures in 2018. The total of annual debt maturities for all years presented does not agree to the balance of debt outstanding at December 31, 1998 as a result of the accretion of discount on the Debentures. The outstanding balances relating to the New Credit Facility are included in the maturity schedule in 2000, consistent with the expiration of the covenant waiver. Sunbeam has made no decision with respect to the repayment or refinancing of indebtedness incurred or to be incurred under the New Credit Facility and may repay such indebtedness out of its internally generated funds or from proceeds of a subsequent financing. Any decisions with respect to such repayment or refinancing will be made based on a review from time to time of the advisability of particular transactions, as well as on prevailing interest rates and financial and economic conditions.

4. Financial Instruments

Fair Value of Financial Instruments

The fair value of the Company's financial instruments as of December 31, 1998 and December 28, 1997 was estimated based upon the following methods and assumptions:

Cash and Cash Equivalents—The carrying amount of cash and cash equivalents is assumed to approximate fair value as cash equivalents include all highly liquid, short-term investments with original maturities of three months or less.

Short and Long Term Debt—The fair value of the Company's fixed rate debt is estimated using either reported transaction values or discounted cash flow analysis. The fair value of the Company's fixed rate debt was $319 million as of December 31, 1998 as compared to the carrying value of $859 million. The carrying value of the Company's variable rate debt is assumed to approximate market based upon periodic adjustments of the interest rate to the current market rate in accordance with the terms of the debt agreements. The carrying value of the Company's various debt outstanding as of December 28, 1997 approximated market.

Letters of Credit and Surety Bonds—The Company utilizes stand-by letters of credit to back certain financing instruments and insurance policies and commercial letters of credit guaranteeing various international trade activities. In addition, the Company also entered into surety bonds largely as a result of litigation judgements that are currently under appeal. The contract amounts of the letters of credit and surety bonds approximate their fair values. The contract value of letters of credit were $82.3 million and $29.0 million as of December 31, 1998 and December 28, 1997, respectively. Contract values for surety bonds as of December 31, 1998 were approximately $26.5 million and were not significant at December 28, 1997.

Derivative Financial Instruments—The Company utilizes interest rate swap agreements to reduce the impact on interest expense of fluctuating interest rates on its floating rate debt. The use of derivatives did not have a material impact on the Company's operations in 1998, 1997 and 1996. At December 31, 1998, the Company held three floating to fixed interest rate swap agreements, one with a notional value of $25 million and two with notional amounts of $150 million each. The swap agreements are contracts to exchange floating rate for fixed interest payments periodically over the lives of the agreements without the exchange of the underlying notional principal amounts. The swaps expire in January 2003, June 2001 and June 2003, respectively. Under these agreements, the Company received an average floating rate of 5.64%, 5.59% and 5.59%, respectively, and paid an average fixed rate of 6.12%, 5.75% and 5.58%, respectively, during 1998. The fair value of the interest rate swaps at December 31, 1998 is estimated to be $7.3 million. This estimate is based upon quotes received from the Company's lending institutions and represents the cash requirement if the existing agreements had been terminated at the end of the year. Interest rate swaps are off-balance-sheet instruments and therefore have no carrying value. The Company had no swap agreements outstanding at December 28, 1997.

In order to mitigate the transaction exposures that may arise from changes in foreign exchange rates, the Company purchases foreign currency option and forward contracts to hedge specific transactions, principally the purchases of inventories. The option contracts typically expire within one year. The options are accounted for as hedges pursuant to SFAS No. 52, Foreign Currency Translation, accordingly gains and losses thereon are deferred and recorded in operations in the period in which the underlying transaction is recorded. At December 31, 1998, the Company held purchased option contracts with a notional value of $32.3 million and a fair value of $0.3 million and forward contracts with a notional value of $30.9 million and a fair value of $30.5 million. The Company did not hold any such contracts at December 28, 1997.

The table below summarizes by currency, the contractual amounts, carrying amounts and related unrealized gain (loss) of the Company's forward exchange and option contracts at December 31, 1998 (in millions):

December 31, 1998	Forward Contracts	Purchased Option Contracts	Total Contracts	Carrying Amount Asset (Liability)	Recognized Unrealized Gain (Loss)	Deferred Unrealized Gain (Loss)
Currency:
Deutschemark	$12.0	$18.4	$30.4	$ 0.3	$ 0.2	$—
Yen	$14.9	$12.4	$27.3	$(0.3)	$(0.7)	$—

Total	$30.9	$32.3	$63.2	$ 0.1	$(0.4)	$—

The fair values of the Company's foreign currency contracts were based on quoted market prices of comparable contracts, adjusted through interpolation where necessary for maturity differences.

Exposure to market risk on interest rate and foreign currency financial instruments results from fluctuations in interest and currency rates, respectively, during the periods in which the contracts are outstanding. The counterparties to the Company's interest rate swap agreements and currency exchange contracts consist of a diversified group of major financial institutions, each of which is rated investment grade A or better. The Company is exposed to credit risk to the extent of potential nonperformance by counterparties on financial instruments. The Company believes the risk of incurred losses due to credit risk is remote.

5. Accounts Receivable Securitization

In December 1997, the Company entered into a receivable securitization program, that expires March 2000, to sell without recourse, through a wholly owned subsidiary, certain trade accounts receivable, up to a maximum of $70.0 million. During 1998, the Company has received approximately $200.0 million under this arrangement. At December 31, 1998, the Company had reduced accounts receivable by $20.0 million for receivables sold under this program. At December 28, 1997, the Company had received $58.9 million under this arrangement, of which $39.1 million related to sales recorded in fiscal 1997 and the balance related to sales to be recognized in the first quarter of 1998. During 1997, the Company sold $19.8 million of receivables related to bill and hold and consignment sales that had been initially recognized in its Consolidated Financial Statements and were subsequently reversed in the restatement process. The conditions for recognizing these sales were met in the first quarter of 1998. Accordingly, at December 28, 1997, the accompanying Consolidated Balance Sheet reflects a reduction in accounts receivable of $39.1 million and an increase in other current liabilities of $19.8 million. Proceeds from the sales of receivables were used to reduce borrowings under the Company's revolving credit facility or to provide cash flow for working capital purposes, thereby reducing the need to borrow under the credit facility. Costs of the program, which primarily consist of the purchaser's financing cost of issuing commercial paper backed by the receivables, totaled $2.3 million and $0.2 million during 1998 and 1997, respectively, and have been classified as interest expense in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations. The Company, through a wholly-owned subsidiary, retains collection and administrative responsibilities for the purchased receivables. This agreement contains cross-default provisions that provide the purchaser of the receivables an option to cease purchasing receivables from the Company if the Company is in default under the New Credit Facility.

The Company establishes valuation allowances in accordance with the provisions of SFAS No. 109. The Company continually reviews the adequacy of the valuation allowances and recognizes tax benefits when it is more likely than not that the benefits will be realized. In the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company increased the valuation allowance by $23.2 million, reflecting management's assessment that it was more likely than not that the deferred tax assets would not be realized through future taxable income. Of this amount, approximately $18.9 million related to deferred tax assets, the majority of which was recognized as a benefit in the first three quarters of 1997. The remainder related to minimum pension liabilities and was therefore recorded as an adjustment in shareholders' equity. This assessment was made as a result of the significant leverage undertaken by the Company as part of the acquisitions (see Note 2) and the significant decline in net sales and earnings from anticipated levels during the fourth quarter of 1997 and the first quarter of 1998.

Throughout 1998, the Company increased the valuation allowance to $290.5 million, which increase reflects management's assessment that it is more likely than not that the deferred tax asset will not be realized through future taxable income. As described above, this assessment was made as a result of the significant leverage undertaken by the Company and the continuing decline in Sunbeam's net sales and earnings, as well as the operating losses incurred throughout the 1998 year. At December 31, 1998, the Company had net operating loss carryforwards ("NOL's") of approximately $725 million for domestic income tax purposes and $169 million for foreign income tax purposes. The domestic NOL's begin expiring in 2018. Of the foreign tax NOL's, $3 million, $4 million, $19 million, $18 million and $16 million expire in the years ending December 31, 1999 through 2003, respectively, and $91 million of such NOL's have an unlimited life.

The Company has not provided U.S. income taxes on undistributed foreign earnings of approximately $32 million at December 31, 1998, as the Company intends to permanently reinvest these earnings in the future growth of the business. Determination of the amount of unrecognized deferred U.S. income tax liability is not practicable because of the complexities associated with its hypothetical calculation.

7. Employee Benefit Plans

Pension and Other Postretirement Benefit Plans

The Company sponsors several defined benefit pension plans covering eligible U.S. salaried and hourly employees. Benefit accruals under such plans covering all U.S. salaried employees were frozen, effective December 31, 1990. Accordingly, no credit in the pension formula is given for service or compensation after that date. However, these employees continue to earn service toward vesting in their interest in the frozen plans as of December 31, 1990. The Company also provides health care and life insurance benefits to certain former employees who retired from the Company prior to March 31, 1991. The Company has consistently followed a policy of funding the cost of postretirement health care and life insurance benefits on a pay-as-you-go basis.

As a result of the Company's acquisitions of Coleman and First Alert (see Note 2), the liabilities for their respective defined benefit pension plans (the "Plans") were assumed and have been accounted for in accordance with Accounting Principles Board Opinion No. 16 ("APB 16"), Accounting for Business Combinations. Effective January 1, 1999, the Coleman and First Alert salaried pension plans were amended to change the pension benefit formula to a cash balance formula from the existing benefit calculation. The benefits accrued under these plans as of December 31, 1998 were frozen and converted to the new cash balance plan using a 7.0% interest rate assumption. The effect of the amendment of the Plans is reflected in the projected benefit obligation as of the date of acquisition as required by APB 16. Under the cash balance plan, the Company will credit certain participants' accounts annually. At the date of acquisition the pension benefit obligation and the fair value of the plan assets attributable to these Plans were $43.4 million and $27.7 million, respectively, and are reflected in the table below.

In addition, Coleman provided certain unfunded postretirement health and life insurance benefits for certain retired employees. At the date of acquisition the postretirement benefit obligation associated with this plan was $19.5 million as reflected in the table below, and has been accounted for in accordance with APB 16.

The Company funds all pension plans in amounts consistent with applicable laws and regulations. Pension plan assets include corporate and U.S. government bonds, corporate stocks, mutual funds, fixed income securities, and cash equivalents.

Employees of non-U.S. subsidiaries generally receive retirement benefits from Company sponsored plans or from statutory plans administered by governmental agencies in their countries. The assets, liabilities and pension costs of the Company's non-U.S. defined benefit retirement plans are not material to the consolidated financial statements.

On January 1, 1998, the Company adopted SFAS No. 132, Employers' Disclosures About Pensions and Other Postretirement Benefits ("SFAS No. 132"). This statement revises employers' disclosures about pension and other postretirement benefit plans. SFAS No. 132 does not change the method of accounting for such plans.

The assumed health care cost trend rates used in measuring the accumulated postretirement benefit obligation were 7.0% to 8.0% for the plans for 1999 and were assumed to decrease gradually to 5.0% by 2003 and remain at that level thereafter.

Defined Contribution Plans

As a result of the Company's acquisitions of Coleman, First Alert and Signature Brands, the Company amended its Savings & Investment and Profit Sharing Plan ("Savings Plan") to assume the assets of the respective savings plans at each of the acquired companies and establish parity with the benefits provided by Sunbeam. Effective January 1, 1999, all eligible employees could participate in the Savings Plan. Company contributions to these plans include employer matching contributions as well as discretionary contributions depending on the performance of the Company, in an amount up to 10% of eligible compensation. The Company provided $1.9 million in 1998, $1.8 million in 1997 and $1.7 million in 1996 for its defined contribution plans.

8. Shareholders' Equity

At December 31, 1998, the Company had 500,000,000 shares of $0.01 par value common stock authorized and there were 14,094,158 shares of common stock reserved for issuance upon the exercise of outstanding stock options.

Compensatory Stock Grants

In July 1996, the Company granted 1,100,000 shares of restricted stock in connection with the employment of a then new Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other senior officers of the Company. Compensation expense attributable to the restricted stock awards was amortized to expense beginning in 1996 over the periods in which the restrictions lapse (which in the case of 333,333 shares, was immediately upon the date of grant, in the case of 666,667 shares, was to be amortized equally over two years from the date of grant and in the case of the remaining 100,000 shares, was equally over three years from the date of grant). These restricted stock awards resulted in a $7.7 million charge to SG&A expense in 1996.

On February 20, 1998, the Company entered into new three-year employment agreements with its then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other then senior officers of the Company. These agreements replaced previous employment agreements entered into in July 1996 that were scheduled to expire in July 1999.

The new employment agreement for the Company's then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer provided for, among other items, the acceleration of vesting of 200,000 shares of restricted stock and the forfeiture of the remaining 133,334 shares of unvested restricted stock granted under the July 1996 agreement, a new equity grant of 300,000 shares of unrestricted stock, a new grant of a ten-year option to purchase 3,750,000 shares of the Company's common stock with an exercise price equal to the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant and exercisable in three equal annual installments beginning on the date of grant and the acceleration of vesting of 833,333 outstanding stock options granted under the July 1996 agreement, as further described in Note 9. In addition, the new employment agreement with the then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer provided for income tax gross-ups with respect to any tax assessed on the equity grant and acceleration of vesting of restricted stock.

The new employment agreements with the two other then senior officers provided for, among other items, the grant of a total of 180,000 shares of restricted stock that were to vest in four equal annual installments beginning on the date of grant, the acceleration of vesting of 44,000 shares of restricted stock and the forfeiture of the remaining 29,332 shares of unvested restricted stock granted under the July 1996 agreements, new grants of ten-year options to purchase a total of 1,875,000 shares of the Company's common stock with an exercise price equal to the fair market value of the stock at the date of grant and exercisable in four equal annual installments beginning on the date of grant and the acceleration of vesting of 383,334 outstanding stock options granted under the July 1996 agreements. In addition, the new employment agreements provided for income tax gross-ups with respect to any tax assessed on the restricted stock grants and acceleration of vesting of restricted stock.

Compensation expense attributed to the equity grant, the acceleration of vesting of restricted stock and the related income tax gross-ups was recognized in the first quarter of 1998 and compensation expense related to the new restricted stock grants and related tax gross-ups was amortized to expense beginning in the first quarter of 1998 with amortization to continue over the period in which the restrictions lapse. Total compensation expense recognized in 1998 related to these items was approximately $31 million.

On June 15, 1998, the Company's board of directors announced the removal of the then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and subsequently announced the removal or resignation of other senior officers, including the Company's then Chief Financial Officer. In connection with the removal or resignation of the senior officers and the termination of their restricted stock grants, the unamortized portion of the deferred compensation expense attributable to the restricted stock grants was reversed. The Company and certain of its former officers are in disagreement as to the Company's obligations to these individuals under prior employment agreements and arising from their terminations. (See Note 15.)

Accumulated Other Comprehensive Loss

The components of accumulated other comprehensive loss consist of the following (in thousands):

	Currency Translation Adjustments	Minimum Pension Liability	Total
Balance at December 29, 1996	$(12,111)	$ (6,163)	$(18,274)

Balance at December 31, 1998	(12,022)	(42,008)	(54,030)

The accumulated other comprehensive loss associated with the minimum pension liability is net of deferred income taxes of approximately $5.0 million in 1998, 1997 and 1996.

9. Employee Stock Options and Awards

The Company has one stock-based compensation plan, the Amended and Restated Sunbeam Corporation Stock Option Plan (the "Plan"). Under the Plan, all employees are eligible for grants of options to purchase up to an aggregate of 16,300,000 shares of the Company's common stock at an exercise price equal to or in excess of the fair market value of the stock on the date of grant. The term of each option commences on the date of grant and expires on the tenth anniversary of the date of grant subject to earlier cancellation. Options generally become exercisable over a three to five year period.

The Plan also provides for the grant of restricted stock awards of up to 200,000 shares, in the aggregate, to employees and non-employee directors. The Plan provides that each non-employee director of the Company is automatically granted 1,500 shares of restricted common stock upon his or her initial election or appointment and upon each subsequent re-election to the Company's board of directors. In the event of an election or appointment to the Company's board of directors at any time other than at the annual meeting of stockholders, the director receives a prorated amount of restricted common shares. These restricted common shares vest immediately upon the non-employee director's acceptance of his or her election or appointment to the Company's board of directors. The Company granted 6,000, 6,000, and 7,818 shares of restricted stock to non-employee directors in 1998, 1997 and 1996, respectively, and recognized compensation expense related to these grants of $0.2 million in each of 1998, 1997 and 1996. See Note 8 for a discussion of restricted stock awards made outside the Plan.

In July 1996, options to purchase an aggregate of 3,000,000 shares (of which 2,750,000 options were outstanding at December 28, 1997) were granted outside of the Plan at exercise prices equal to the fair market value of the Company's common stock on the dates of grant in connection with the employment of a then new Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and two other senior officers of the Company. These outstanding options have terms of ten years and, with respect to options for 2,500,000 shares, were exercisable in three annual installments beginning July 17, 1996. Options for the remaining 250,000 shares still outstanding were exercisable in three annual installments beginning on the first anniversary of the July 22, 1996 grant date. On February 20, 1998 the vesting provisions of the options granted outside the Plan were accelerated. Additional stock option grants outside the Plan were made in February 1998, with a portion thereof subsequently terminated in connection with the removal of the then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. The then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and another senior officer are disputing termination of their stock option grants. (See Notes 8 and 15.)

In the third and fourth quarters of 1998, options to purchase an aggregate of 4,200,000 shares were granted outside of the Plan in connection with the employment of the new Chief Executive Officer and certain members of the new senior management team. The options were granted to certain senior executives at exercise prices equal to or greater than the fair market value of the Company's common stock on the dates of the grant. The senior officers were granted options to purchase 3,200,000 shares of common stock at a price of $7.00 per share; 500,000 shares of common stock at a price of $10.50 per share and 500,000 shares at a price of $14.00 per share.

All of these outstanding options have terms of ten years and become fully exercisable at the end of two to three year periods if the executive remains employed by the Company as of such date. These grants are subject the shareholder approval at the 1999 Annual Meeting. A measurement date pursuant to APB Opinion No. 25 will be established for these grants upon shareholder approval. These options have been included in the following tables summarizing the Company's stock option activity for the year ended December 31, 1998.

In August 1998, the Company approved a plan to exchange outstanding common stock options held by the Company's employees. The exchange program, which has been completed, provided for outstanding options with exercise prices in excess of $10.00 per share to be exchanged for new options on a voluntary basis in an exchange ratio ranging from approximately two to three old options for one new option, (as determined by reference to a Black-Scholes option pricing model) with the exercise price of the new options set at $7.00 per share. These options were repriced at an exercise price approximating the market value of the Company's common stock at the date of the repricing and, consequently, there was no related compensation expense.

The Company applies APB Opinion No. 25 and related interpretations in accounting for its stock options. Accordingly, no compensation cost has been recognized for outstanding stock options. Had compensation cost for the Company's outstanding stock options been determined based on the fair value at the grant dates for those options consistent with SFAS No. 123, the Company's net (loss) earnings and basic and diluted (loss) earnings per share would have differed as reflected by the pro forma amounts indicated below (in thousands except per share amounts):

	1998	1997	1996
Net (loss) earnings:
As reported	$ (897,923)	$38,301	$(208,481)

Basic (loss) earnings per share:

Pro forma	(10.54)	0.17	(2.63)
Diluted (loss) earnings per share:
As reported	(9.25)	0.44	(2.51)
Pro forma	(10.54)	0.17	(2.63)

The Company's pro forma net loss for 1998 includes approximately $68 million of compensation cost relating to options issued to the former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer (3,750,000) and a former senior officer (1,125,000) in connection with their February 1998 employment agreements. These options are included in the outstanding and exercisable options issued outside the plan in the following table. The Company and these individuals are in dispute regarding the status of these options.

The fair value of each option grant is estimated on the date of grant using the Black-Scholes option-pricing model with the following weighted-average assumptions:

	1998	1997	1996
Expected volatility	52.80%	34.19%	36.78%

11. Asset Impairment and Other Charges

In the fourth quarter of 1998, the Company recorded a $62.5 million charge for the write-off of the carrying value of First Alert's goodwill (see Note 2).

In the second quarter of 1998, as a result of decisions to outsource or discontinue a substantial number of products previously made by the Company (principally breadmakers, toasters and certain other appliances, air and water filtration products and the elimination of certain stock keeping units ("SKU's")) within existing product lines, primarily relating to appliances, grills and grill accessories), certain facilities and equipment will either no longer be used or will be utilized in a significantly different manner. Accordingly, a charge of $29.6 million was recorded in Cost of Goods Sold to write certain of these assets down to their estimated fair market value. Approximately 80% of this charge related to machinery, equipment and tooling at the Company's Mexico City and Hattiesburg, Mississippi manufacturing plants, the estimated fair value for which was derived through an auction process. The remainder of this charge related to tooling and equipment at various other facilities, which either had a nominal value or the fair market value of which was derived through an auction process. These assets were taken out of service at the time of the write-down and consequently were not depreciated further after the write-down. The net carrying value of these assets after the write-down approximated $2.2 million and these assets are expected to be disposed of by September 30, 1999. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $2.6 million in 1998, $4.2 million in 1997 and $3.5 million in 1996.

Personnel at the Mexico City facility were notified in the second quarter of 1998 that the plant was scheduled for closure at year-end 1998; accordingly, at that time, a liability of $1.8 million was recorded in Cost of Goods Sold primarily for employee severance. The employee severance related to approximately 1,200 positions of which approximately 1,100 were terminated and $1.4 million paid in severance as of December 31, 1998. It is anticipated that the remaining 100 employees will be terminated and the balance of the severance obligation ($0.4 million) paid by July 31, 1999. In the third quarter of 1998, the Company recorded as Cost of Goods Sold, an additional provision for impairment of fixed assets of $3.1 million in an acquired entity, relating to assets taken out of service for which there was no remaining value. The asset impairment resulted from management's decision, during the third quarter, to discontinue certain SKU's within product lines (principally generators, compressors and propane cylinders) subsequent to the acquisition. These fixed assets were taken out of service at the time of the write-down and consequently were not depreciated further after the write-down. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $0.8 million in 1998. In the fourth quarter of 1998, the Company recorded a $7.1 million charge as a result of management's decision, during the fourth quarter, to outsource the production of certain appliances (principally irons). This charge to Cost of Goods Sold primarily consists of a provision for certain tooling and equipment ($6.7 million) and severance and related benefits ($0.4 million). This tooling and equipment, which had no remaining value, was written off. These fixed assets were taken out of service at the time of the write-down, and consequently depreciation was discontinued at the time of the write-down. Depreciation expense associated with these assets approximated $2.4 million in 1998. $2.4 million of the charge recorded in 1998, the severance was related to approximately 100 employees. The remaining $4.7 million of the charge was related to the tooling and equipment. The charge recorded in 1998, the severance was related to approximately 100 employees. The remaining $4.7 million of the charge was related to the tooling and equipment.

During 1997 and the first half of 1998, the Company built inventory for anticipated 1998 sales volume which did not materialize. As a result, it has been and will continue to be necessary to dispose of some portion of excess inventories at amounts less than cost. Accordingly, during 1998, when the facts and circumstances were known that such sales volume would not materialize, the Company recorded $58.2 million in charges (of which $46.4 million, $2.2 million and $9.6 million, were recorded during the second, third and fourth quarters, respectively) to properly state this inventory at the lower-of-cost-or-market. This inventory primarily related to certain appliances, grills and grill accessories. The Company also recorded a charge of $11.0 million during the second quarter for excess inventories for raw materials and work in process that will not be used due to outsourcing the production of breadmakers, toasters and certain other appliances. In addition, during 1998, the Company made the decision to exit certain product lines, primarily air and water filtration products and eliminate certain SKU's within existing product lines, primarily relating to appliances, grills and grill accessories. As a result of this decision, a $26.6 million charge was recorded during the second quarter to properly state this inventory at the lower-of-cost-or-market. Total charges for excess inventories recorded at the lower-of-cost-or-market, based on management's best estimate of net realizable value, amounted to approximately $95.8 million at December 31, 1998. (See Note 12 for asset impairment and other charges recorded in conjunction with a 1996

12. Restructuring

In November 1996, the Company announced the details of a restructuring plan. The plan included the consolidation of administrative functions within the Company, the reduction of manufacturing and warehouse facilities, the centralization of the Company's procurement function, and reduction of the Company's product offerings and SKU's. The Company also announced plans to divest several lines of business (see Note 13)

As part of the restructuring plan, the Company consolidated six divisional and regional headquarters into a single worldwide corporate headquarters and outsourced certain back office activities a reduction in total back-office/administrative headcount. Overall, the restructuring provided for a reduction in the number of production facilities from 26 to 8 and the elimination of over 6,000 positions from the Company's workforce, including 3,300 from the disposition of certain business operations and the elimination of approximately 2,700 other positions whose work was reassigned. The Company completed the major phases of the restructuring plan by July 1997.

In conjunction with the implementation of the restructuring plan, the Company recorded a pre-tax charge of $239.2 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. This amount is recorded as follows in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations: $110.1 million in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges, as further described below; $60.8 million in Cost of Goods Sold related principally to inventory write-downs to net realizable values as a result of a reduction in SKUs and costs of inventory liquidation programs; $50.3 million in SG&A expense, a period cost which were charged to operations as incurred, principally relating to employee relocation and remaining and equipment relocation and lease losses ($3.2 million); transitional fees relating to outsourcing arrangements ($4.9 million) and package redesign costs ($2.0 million), and $58.2 million ($39.1 million net of taxes) in Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations related to the divestiture of its furniture business. In 1997, upon completion of the sale of the furniture business, the Company recorded an additional pre-tax loss of $22.5 million from discontinued operations ($14.0 million net of taxes) due primarily to lower than anticipated sales proceeds relating to the post closing adjustment process that was part of the sale agreement.

Amounts included in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges in 1996 in the accompanying Consolidated Statements of Operations included cash items such as severance and other employee costs of $24.7 million, lease write-offs of $11.0 million and other fixed asset write-offs of $10.0 million, and other charges to the income statement of $64.4 million, principally consisting of the restructuring and asset impairment charges.

Included in restructuring and asset impairment charges in 1996 was $68.7 million in non-cash charges (classified within the $110.1 million restructuring charge) principally consisting of: (a) asset write-downs to net realizable value for disposals of excess facilities and equipment and certain product lines ($22.5 million); (b) write-offs of redundant computer systems from the administrative back-office consolidations and outsourcing initiatives ($12.3 million); (c) write-off of intangibles relating to discontinued product lines ($10.1 million); (d) write-off of capitalized product and package design costs and other expenses related to exited product lines and SKU reductions ($9.0 million) (Prior to 1996, Sunbeam had capitalized certain costs related to international product development and package design, which were amortized over the period of related benefit. The product development costs of $9 million related to international operations and represented the costs necessary to modify products for introduction to the international markets. As the restructuring plan included the closure of International Group office and elimination of a number of products to which these costs pertained, the related capitalized costs were written off. Additionally, in connection with the restructuring plan as a result of the elimination of many products and SKUs, Sunbeam updated its package designs. Accordingly, the unamortized balance of the capitalized package design costs which had been capitalized prior to 1996, $5.0 million, was written off. Sunbeam discontinued incurring costs of product and package design in 1996.

has discontinued incurring such costs subsequent to 1996 and the remaining $9.0 million related to the certain non-cash charges discussed above was for the remaining 1996 and 1997. (a) and (b) discussed above) included equipment taken out of service in 1996 further abandoned in 1996 or sold in 1997) and accordingly, depreciation was not recorded subsequent to the date of impairment charge. The asset write-downs of $14.8 million related to the divestiture of non-core products and businesses resulted from divesting of the time and temperature business (sold in March 1997) and Counselor® and Borg® scale product lines (sold in May 1997) and the sale of the textile mill in Biddeford, Maine in May 1997. These charges primarily represented the estimated non-cash losses resulting from the sale or abandonment of facilities and equipment related to exiting these product lines. The Company continued to record depreciation expense on these fixed assets, based on historical rates, until such time that the assets were disposed of. For these fixed assets, the impairment charges represented write-downs to net realizable values (based on the estimated net proceeds from the sale of these assets compared to their recorded net book value), less estimated depreciation expense at historical rates through the period of estimated use. The net carrying value of these assets at December 29, 1996 approximated $42.5 million.

The $24.7 million for severance and other employee costs, including COBRA and other fringe benefits, related to approximately 3,700 positions that were planned to be eliminated as a result of the restructuring plan, excluding approximately 2,400 employees terminated from the furniture business for which severance was included in Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations (see Note 13). The furniture business was sold in 1997. In 1996 and 1997, approximately 1,200 employees and 1,800 employees, respectively, were terminated from continuing operations. Due largely to attrition, the remaining planned terminations were not required. In 1997, the Company determined that its severance and employee benefit costs were less than originally accrued principally due to lower than expected COBRA and workers compensation costs, and accordingly reversed accruals of $7.9 million in the third quarter ($2.1 million) and fourth quarter ($5.8 million). At December 31, 1997, the balance accrued of $1.2 million represented the remaining severance and employee benefit costs for certain employees terminated during 1997. During 1998, all amounts were expended.

The amounts accrued at December 29, 1996, for Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges recorded in fiscal 1996, exceeded amounts ultimately required principally due to reductions in anticipated severance and employee benefit costs of $7.9 million, as discussed above, and reductions in estimated lease payments of $6.7 million ($3.7 million and $3.0 million recognized in the third and fourth quarters, respectively) resulting from better than anticipated rentals received under sub-leases and favorable negotiation of lease terminations. Accordingly, the fiscal 1997 Consolidated Statement of Operations included $14.6 million of benefit ($5.8 million in the third quarter and $8.8 million in the fourth quarter of 1997) related to the reversal of accruals no longer required, which were recorded as these reduced obligations became known.

In 1996, in conjunction with the initiation of the restructuring plan, the Company recorded additional charges totaling $129.1 million, reflected in Cost of Goods Sold; SG&A expense and Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations. The charge included in Cost of Goods Sold ($60.8 million) principally represented inventory write-downs to net realizable value, based upon management's best estimates, and anticipated losses on the disposition of the inventory as a result of the significant reduction in SKU's provided for in the restructuring plan. The write-down included $26.9 million related to raw materials, work-in process and finished goods for discontinued outdoor cooking products, principally grills and grills accessories and the balance related to raw materials, work-in-process and finished goods for other discontinued products including appliances ($27.8 million), clippers ($1.0 million) and blankets ($5.1 million). For inventory which management determined was salable, the estimated write-down was based upon the difference between the expected net sales proceeds of the inventory, depending on distribution channel, and the recorded value of the inventory. In the case of abandoned inventory, the write-down was equal to the recorded value of the inventory. The resulting difference between carrying value and estimated net realizable value represented the $60.8 million write-down necessary to record the inventory at its net realizable value. SG&A expense included period costs, charged to operations as incurred, in 1997 and 1996 of $15.8 million and $10.1 million, respectively, relating to employee relocation and recruiting and equipment relocation and installation ($11.8 million in 1997 and $3.2 million in 1996), transitional fees related to outsourcing arrangements ($4.9 million in 1996) and package redesign costs ($4.0 million in 1997 and $2.0 million in 1996) expended as a result of the implementation of the restructuring plan. The Loss on Sale of Discontinued Operations of $58.2 million is discussed further in Note 13.

At December 28, 1997, the Company had $5.2 million in liabilities accrued related to the 1996 restructuring plan, including $1.2 million of severance related costs and $4.0 million related to facility closures, which principally represented future lease payments (net of sub-leases) on exited facilities. During 1998, this liability was reduced by $4.0 million as a result of cash expenditures. At December 28, 1997, the Company had

The restructuring accrual, which existed at January 1, 1996 ($13.8 million), was initially established as part of a "rightsizing program" during fiscal 1992. During 1996 approximately $3 million of this accrual was utilized and the remaining $10.8 million became part of the reserve requirements of the 1996 restructuring plan. In effect, in 1996, the Company reversed the $10.8 million prior year accrual determined to be no longer required and provided a corresponding amount in connection with the 1996 restructuring charge.

13. Discontinued Operations

As part of the 1996 restructuring plan, the Company also announced the divestiture of the furniture business, by a sale of assets. In February 1997, the Company entered into an agreement to sell the business to U.S. Industries, Inc. in a transaction that was completed on March 17, 1997. In connection with the furniture divestiture, the Company recorded a provision for estimated losses to be incurred on the sale of $39.1 million in 1996, net of applicable income tax benefits of $19.9 million. Although the discontinued furniture operations were profitable, net income had declined from $21.7 million in 1994 to $0.8 million in 1996. This decline, along with the Company's announcement that it intended to divest this line of business contributed to the loss on sale. Revenues for the discontinued furniture business were $51.6 million in the first quarter of 1997, $227.5 million in 1996 and $185.6 million in 1995. Results of operations were nominal in 1997 and 1996, down from $12.9 million (net of $7.9 million in taxes) in 1995. In connection with the sale of these assets (primarily inventory, property, plant and equipment), the Company received $69.0 million in cash. The Company retained accounts receivable related to the furniture business of approximately $50 million as of the closing date and retained certain liabilities. The final purchase price for the furniture business was subject to a post-closing adjustment based on the terms of the asset purchase agreement and in the first quarter of 1997, after completion of the sale, the Company recorded an additional loss of $14.0 million, net of applicable income tax benefits of $8.5 million.

In addition to the furniture business divestiture, the Company also completed the sale of other product lines and assets in 1997 as part of its restructuring plan, including time and temperature products, Counselor® and Borg® scales and a textile facility. Losses incurred on the disposal of these assets, which consist primarily of write-downs of assets to net realizable value, are included in Restructuring and Asset Impairment Charges in 1996 in the Consolidated Statements of Operations.

14. Segment, Customer and Geographic Data

Throughout 1998 Sunbeam's operations were managed through four reportable segments: Household, Outdoor Leisure, International and Corporate. Reportable segments are identified by the Company based upon the distinct products manufactured (Household and Outdoor Leisure) or based upon the geographic region in which its products are distributed (International). The Company's reportable segments are all separately managed.

The Household group consists of appliances (including mixers, blenders, food steamers, bread makers, rice cookers, coffee makers, toasters, irons and garment steamers), health products (including vaporizers, humidifiers, air cleaners, massagers, hot and cold packs and blood pressure monitors), scales, personal care products (including hair clippers and trimmers and related products for the professional beauty, barber and veterinarian trade and sales of products to commercial and institutional channels), blankets (including electric blankets, heated throws and mattress pads) and First Alert® products (smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, fire extinguishers and home safety equipment).

The Outdoor Leisure group includes outdoor recreation products (which encompass tents, sleeping bags, coolers, camping stoves, lanterns and outdoor heaters), outdoor cooking products (including gas and charcoal outdoor grills and grill parts and accessories), Powermate® products (including portable power generators and air compressors), and Eastpak® products (including backpacks and bags).

The International group is managed through five regional subdivisions: Europe, Latin America, Japan, Canada and East Asia. Europe includes the manufacture, sales and distribution of Campingaz® products and sales and distribution in Europe, Africa and the Middle East of other Company products. The Latin American region includes the manufacture, sales and distribution throughout Latin America of small appliances, and sales and distribution of personal care products, professional clippers and related products, camping products and Powermate products. Japan includes the sales and distribution of primarily outdoor recreation products. Canada includes sales of substantially all the Company's products and East Asia encompasses sales and distribution in all areas of East Asia other than Japan of substantially all the Company's products.

The Company's Corporate group provides certain management, accounting, legal, risk management, treasury, human resources, tax and management information services to all operating groups and also includes the operation of the Company's retail stores and the conduct of the Company's licensing activities.

The accounting policies of the operating segments are the same as those described in the summary of significant accounting policies (see Note 1) except that certain bad debt expense is recorded at a consolidated level and included in the Corporate group. Sunbeam evaluates performance and allocates resources based upon profit or loss from operations before amortization, income taxes, minority interest, interest expense, non-recurring gains and losses and foreign exchange gains and losses. Intersegment sales and transfers are primarily recorded at cost.

The following tables include selected financial information with respect to Sunbeam's four operating segments. Business segment information for prior years has been reclassified to conform to the current year presentation.

Revenue from one retail customer in the United States in Sunbeam's Household and Outdoor Leisure segments accounted for approximately 18%, 20% and 19% of consolidated net sales in 1998, 1997 and 1996, respectively. Receivables from this customer approximated $62.6 million and $51.9 million at December 31, 1998 and December 27, 1997, respectively. The Company establishes its credit policies based on an ongoing evaluation of its customers' creditworthiness and competitive market conditions and establishes its allowance for doubtful accounts based on an assessment of exposures to credit losses at each balance sheet date. The Company believes its allowance for doubtful accounts is sufficient based on the credit exposures outstanding.

SEC Investigation

By letter dated June 17, 1998, the staff of the Division of Enforcement of the SEC advised the Company that it was conducting an informal inquiry into the Company's accounting policies and procedures and requested that the Company produce certain documents. On July 2, 1998, the SEC issued a Formal Order of Private Investigation, designating officers to take testimony and pursuant to which a subpoena duces tecum was served on the Company requiring the production of certain documents. On November 4, 1998, the Company received another SEC subpoena duces tecum requiring the production of further documents. The Company has provided numerous documents to the SEC staff and continues to cooperate with the SEC staff. The Company has, however, declined to provide the SEC with material that the Company believes is subject to the attorney-client privilege and the work product immunity. The Company cannot predict the term of such investigation or its potential outcome.

Litigation

On April 23, 1998, two class action lawsuits were filed on behalf of purchasers of the Company's common stock in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida against the Company and some of its present and former directors and former officers alleging violations of the federal securities laws as discussed below.

After that date, approximately fifteen similar class actions were filed in the same Court. One of the lawsuits also named as defendant Arthur Andersen LLP, the Company's independent accountants for the period covered by the lawsuit.

On June 16, 1998, the Court entered an Order consolidating all these suits and all similar class actions subsequently filed (collectively, the "Consolidated Federal Actions") and providing time periods for the filing of a consolidated amended complaint and defendants' response thereto. On June 22, 1998, two groups of plaintiffs made motions to be appointed lead plaintiffs and to have their selection of counsel approved as lead counsel. On July 20, 1998, the Court entered an Order appointing lead plaintiffs and lead counsel. This Order also stated that it "shall apply to all subsequently filed actions which are consolidated herewith." On August 28, 1998, plaintiffs in one of the subsequently filed actions filed an objection to having their action consolidated pursuant to the June 16, 1998 Order, arguing that the class period in their action differs from the class periods in the originally filed consolidated actions. On December 9, 1998, the Court entered an Order overruling plaintiffs' objections and affirming its prior Order appointing lead plaintiffs and lead counsel.

On January 6, 1999, plaintiffs filed a consolidated amended class action complaint against the Company, some of its present and former directors and former officers, and Arthur Andersen LLP. The consolidated amended class action complaint alleges that, in violation of section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and SEC Rule 10b-5, defendants made material misrepresentations and omissions regarding the Company's business operations, future prospects and anticipated earnings per share, in an effort to artificially inflate the price of the common stock and call options, and that, in violation of section 20(a) of the Exchange Act, the individual defendants exercised influence and control over the Company, causing the Company to make material misrepresentations and omissions. The consolidated amended complaint seeks an unspecified award of money damages. On February 5, 1999, plaintiffs moved for an order certifying a class consisting of all persons and entities who purchased Sunbeam common stock or who purchased call options or sold put options with respect to Sunbeam common stock during the period April 23, 1997 through June 30, 1998, excluding the defendants, their affiliates, and employees of Sunbeam. Defendants have filed a response to the motion for class certification. On March 8, 1999, all defendants who had been served with the consolidated amended class action complaint moved to dismiss it. Under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, all discovery in the consolidated action is stayed pending resolution of the motions to dismiss.

On April 7, 1998, a purported derivative action was filed in the Circuit Court for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida against the Company and some of its present and former directors and former officers. The action alleged that the individual defendants breached their fiduciary duties and wasted corporate assets when the Company granted stock options at an exercise price of $36.85 to three of its officers and directors (who were subsequently terminated) on or about February 2, 1998. On June 25, 1998, all defendants filed a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to make a presuit demand on Sunbeam's board of directors. On October 22, 1998, the plaintiff amended the complaint against all but one of the defendants named in the original complaint. On February 19, 1999, plaintiffs filed a second amended derivative complaint nominally on behalf of Sunbeam against some of its present and former directors and former officers and Arthur Andersen LLP. The second amended complaint alleges, among other things, that Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh (the Company's former Chairman and Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer, respectively) caused Sunbeam to employ fraudulent accounting procedures in order to enable them to secure new employment contracts, and seeks an award of damages and other declaratory and equitable relief. The plaintiff has agreed that defendants need not respond to the second amended complaint until May 14, 1999. As described below, the Company and the plaintiffs have moved the Court for injunctive relief against Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh with respect to the arbitration action brought by them.

On June 25, 1998, four purported class actions were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware in New Castle County by minority shareholders of Coleman against Coleman, the Company and some of the Company's and Coleman's present and former officers and directors. An additional class action was filed on August 10, 1998, against the same parties. The complaints in these class actions allege, in essence, that the existing exchange ratio for the proposed Coleman merger is no longer fair to Coleman's public shareholders as a result of the decline in the market value of the common stock. On October 21, 1998, the Company announced that it had entered into a Memorandum of Understanding to settle, subject to court approval, the class actions. Under the terms of the proposed settlement, if approved by the court the Company will issue to the Coleman public shareholders, and plaintiff's counsel in this action, warrants to purchase up to approximately 4.98 million shares of the Company's common stock at a cash exercise price of $7 per share, subject to certain anti-dilution provisions. These warrants will generally have the same terms as the warrants issued to an affiliate of M&F (see Note 2) and will be issued when the Coleman merger is consummated, which is now expected to be during the second half of 1999. As a consequence of entering the Memorandum of Understanding and agreeing to issue additional consideration in the form of warrants to purchase Sunbeam common stock, a new five year measurement date was established. The total consideration to be paid (cash, Sunbeam common stock, and Sunbeam warrants) to the Coleman shareholders will therefore be measured as of October 21, 1998. There can be no assurance that the Court will approve the settlement as proposed.

During the months of August and October 1998, purported class action and derivative lawsuits were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware in New Castle County and in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida by shareholders of the Company against the Company, M&F and certain of the Company's present and former directors. These complaints allege that the defendants breached their fiduciary duties when the Company entered into a settlement agreement whereby M&F and its affiliates released the Company from certain claims they may have had arising out of the Company's acquisition of M&F's interest in Coleman, and M&F agreed to provide management support to the Company. Under the settlement agreement, M&F was granted a five year warrant to purchase up to an additional 23 million shares of Sunbeam's common stock at an exercise price of $7 per share, subject to certain anti-dilution provisions. The plaintiffs have requested an injunction against issuance of stock to M&F pursuant to exercise of the warrants and unspecified money damages. These complaints also allege that the rights of the public shareholders have been compromised, as the settlement would normally require shareholders' approval under the rules and regulations of the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE"). The Audit Committee of the Company's board of directors determined that obtaining such shareholders' approval would have seriously jeopardized the financial viability of the Company, which is an allowable exception to the NYSE shareholders' approval requirements. By Order of the Court of Chancery dated January 7, 1999, the derivative actions filed in that Court were consolidated and the Company has moved to dismiss such action. The action filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida has been dismissed.

On September 16, 1998, an action was filed in the 56th Judicial District Court of Galveston County, Texas alleging various claims in violation of the Texas Securities Act and Texas Business & Commercial Code as well as common law fraud as a result of the Company's alleged misstatements and omissions regarding the Company's financial condition and prospects during a period beginning May 1, 1998 and ending June 16, 1998, in which the plaintiffs engaged in transactions in the Company's common stock. The Company is the only named defendant in this action. The complaint requests recovery of compensatory damages, punitive damages and expenses in an unspecified amount. This action was removed to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas and subsequently has been transferred to the Southern District of Florida, the forum for the Consolidated Federal Actions.

On October 30, 1998, a class action lawsuit was filed on behalf of certain purchasers of the Debentures in the U.S. District Court of the Southern District of Florida against the Company and some of the Company's former officers and directors, alleging violations of the federal securities laws and common law fraud. The complaint alleges that the Company's offering memorandum used for the marketing of the Debentures contained false and misleading information regarding the Company's financial position and that the defendants engaged in a plan to inflate the Company's earnings for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs and others. This action has been transferred to the Southern District of Florida, the forum for the Consolidated Federal Actions, and the parties have negotiated a proposed coordination plan in order to coordinate proceedings in this action with those in the Consolidated Federal Actions.

The Company has been named as a defendant in an action filed in the District Court of Tarrant County, Texas, 48th Judicial District, on November 20, 1998, which was served on the Company through the Secretary of State of Texas on January 15, 1999. The plaintiffs in this action are purchasers of the Debentures. The plaintiffs allege that the Company violated the Texas Securities Act and the Texas Business & Commercial Code and committed state common law fraud by materially misstating the financial position of the Company in connection with the offering and sale of the Debentures. The complaint seeks rescission, as well as compensatory and exemplary damages in an unspecified amount. The Company specially appeared to assert an objection to the Texas Court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the Company, and a hearing on this objection was held on April 15, 1999. The Court has issued a letter ruling advising the parties that it would grant the Company's special appearance and sustain the challenge to personal jurisdiction. The plaintiffs have moved for reconsideration of this decision. Plaintiffs had also moved for partial summary judgment on their Texas Securities Act claims, but, in light of the Court's decision on the special appearance, the hearing on the summary judgment motion has been cancelled.

On April 12, 1999, a class action lawsuit was filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida. The lawsuit was filed on behalf of persons who purchased the Debentures during the period of March 20, 1998 through June 30, 1998, inclusive, but after the initial offering of such Debentures. The complaint asserts that Sunbeam made material omissions and misrepresentations that had the effect of inflating the market price of the Debentures. The complaint names as defendants the Company, its former auditor, Arthur Andersen LLP and two former Sunbeam officers, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. The plaintiff is an institution which allegedly acquired in excess of $150,000,000 face amount of the Debentures and now seeks unspecified money damages. The Company was served on April 16, 1999 in connection with this pending lawsuit. The Company will advise the Court of the pending Consolidated Federal Actions and request transfer of the action.

On February 9, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed with the American Arbitration Association demands for arbitration of claims under their respective employment agreements with Sunbeam. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh are requesting a finding by the arbitrator that they were terminated by the Company without cause and should be awarded the corresponding benefits set forth in their respective employment agreements. On March 12, 1999, Sunbeam asked the Circuit Court for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida to issue an injunction prohibiting Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh from pursuing their arbitration proceedings against Sunbeam on the ground that the simultaneous litigation of the April 7, 1998 action and these arbitration proceedings would subject Sunbeam to the threat of inconsistent adjudications with respect to certain rights to compensation asserted by Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh. On March 19, 1999, the plaintiff in the April 7, 1998 action discussed above moved for a similar injunction on the ground that the arbitration proceedings threatened irreparable harm to Sunbeam and its shareholders. On March 26, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed a response in opposition to the motions for injunctive relief. A hearing on the motions for injunctive relief has been held and, as a result of Sunbeam's motion for preliminary injunction, administration of the arbitrations has been suspended until May 10, 1999.

On March 23, 1999, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh filed a complaint in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware seeking an order directing Sunbeam to advance attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred in connection with various state and federal class and derivative actions and an investigation instituted by the SEC. The complaint alleges that such advancements are required by Sunbeam's by-laws and by a forbearance agreement entered into between Sunbeam and Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh in August 1998. The Company has filed its answer to the complaint and the Court of Chancery has scheduled a trial of this summary proceeding to be held on June 15, 1999.

15. Commitments and Contingencies—(Continued)

The Company intends to vigorously defend each of the foregoing lawsuits other than those as to which a Memorandum of Understanding to settle has been reached, but cannot predict the outcome and is not currently able to evaluate the likelihood of the Company's success in each case or the range of potential loss. However, if the foregoing actions were determined adversely to the Company, such judgements would likely have a material adverse effect on the Company's financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

On July 2, 1998, the American Insurance Company ("American") filed suit against the Company in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York requesting a declaratory judgment of the Court that the directors' and officers' liability insurance policy for excess coverage issued by American was invalid and/or had been properly canceled by American. The Company's motion to transfer such action to the federal district court in which the Consolidated Federal Actions are currently pending was recently denied. The case is now in discovery. On October 20, 1998, an action was filed by Federal Insurance Company in the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida requesting the same relief as that requested by American in the previously filed action as to additional coverage levels under the Company's directors' and officers' liability insurance policy. This action has been transferred to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida and is currently in discovery. On December 22, 1998, an action was filed by Executive Risk Indemnity, Inc. in the Circuit Court of the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit in and for Broward County, Florida requesting the same relief as that requested by American and Federal in their previously filed actions as to additional coverage levels under the Company's directors' and officers' liability insurance policy. On April 15, 1999, the Company filed an action in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida against the National Union Fire Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, PA, Gulf Insurance Company and St. Paul Mercury Insurance Company requesting, among other things, a declaratory judgment that National Union is not entitled to rescind its liability insurance policy to the Company and a declaratory judgment that the Company is entitled to coverage from these insurance companies for various lawsuits described herein under liability insurance policies issued by each of the defendants. The Company intends to pursue recovery from all of its insurers if damages are awarded against the Company or its indemnified officers and/or directors under any of the foregoing actions. The Company's failure to obtain such insurance recoveries following an adverse judgement in any of the foregoing actions could have a material adverse effect on the Company's financial position, results of operations and cash flows.

The Company and its subsidiaries are also involved in various lawsuits arising from time to time that the Company considers to be ordinary routine litigation incidental to its business. In the opinion of the Company, the resolution of these routine matters, and of certain matters relating to prior operations, individually or in the aggregate, will not have a material adverse effect upon the financial position, results of operations, or cash flows of the Company.

In the fourth quarter of 1996, the Company recorded a $12.0 million charge related to a case for which an adverse development arose near year-end. In 1997, this case was favorably resolved and, as a result, $8.1 million of the charge established in 1996 was reversed into income primarily in the fourth quarter of 1997.

Amounts accrued for litigation matters represent the anticipated costs (damages and/or settlement amounts) in connection with pending litigation and claims and related anticipated legal fees. The costs are accrued when it is both probable that an asset has been impaired or a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated. The accruals are based upon the Company's assessment, after consultation with counsel, of probable loss based on the facts and circumstances of each case, the legal issues involved, the nature of the claim made, the nature of the damages sought and any relevant information about the plaintiffs, and other significant factors which vary by case. When it is not possible to estimate a specific expected cost to be incurred, the Company evaluates the range of probable loss and records the minimum end of the range. As of December 31, 1998 Sunbeam had established accruals for litigation matters of $31.2 million (representing $17.5 million and $13.7 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively) and $9.9 million as of December 28, 1997 (representing $3.0 million and $6.9 million for estimated damages or settlement amounts and legal fees, respectively). It is anticipated that the $31.2 million accrual will be paid as follows: $22.4 million in 1999, $7.5 million in 2000, and $1.3 million in 2001. The Company believes, based on information known at December 31, 1998, that anticipated probable costs of litigation matters existing as of December 31, 1998 have been adequately reserved to the extent determinable.

Environmental Matters

The Company's operations, like those of comparable businesses, are subject to certain federal, state, local and foreign environmental laws and regulations in addition to laws and regulations regarding labeling and packaging of products and the sales of products containing certain environmentally sensitive materials ("Environmental Laws"). The Company believes it is in substantial compliance with all Environmental Laws which are applicable to its operations. Compliance with Environmental Laws involves certain continuing costs; however, such costs of ongoing compliance have not resulted, and are not anticipated to result, in a material increase in the Company's capital expenditures or to have a material adverse effect on the Company's results of operations, financial condition or competitive position.

In addition to ongoing environmental compliance at its operations, the Company also is actively engaged in certain environmental remediation activities many of which relate to divested operations. As of December 31, 1998, the Company has been identified by the United States Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") or a state environmental agency as a potentially responsible party ("PRP") in connection with seven sites subject to the federal Superfund Act and five sites subject to state Superfund laws comparable to the federal law (collectively the "Environmental Sites"), exclusive of sites at which the Company has been designated (or expects to be designated) as a de minimis (less than 1%) participant.

The Superfund Act, and related state environmental remediation laws, generally authorize governmental authorities to remediate a Superfund site and to assess the costs against the PRPs or to order the PRPs to remediate the site at their expense. Liability under the Superfund Act is joint and several and is imposed on a strict basis, without regard to degree of negligence or culpability. As a result, the Company recognizes its responsibility to determine whether other PRPs at a Superfund site are financially capable of paying their respective shares of the ultimate cost of remediation of the site. Whenever the Company has determined that a particular PRP is not financially responsible, it has assumed for purposes of establishing reserve amounts that such PRP will not pay its respective share of the costs of remediation. To minimize the Company's potential liability with respect to the Environmental Sites, the Company has actively participated in steering committees and other groups of PRPs established with respect to such sites. The Company currently is engaged in active remediation activities at 12 sites, seven of which are among the Environmental Sites referred to above, and five of which have not been designated as Superfund sites under federal or state law. The remediation efforts in which the Company is involved include facility investigations, including soil and groundwater investigations, corrective measure studies, including feasibility studies, groundwater monitoring, extraction and treatment, soil sampling, excavation and treatment relating to environmental clean-ups. In certain instances, the Company has entered into agreements with governmental authorities to undertake additional investigatory activities and in other instances has agreed to implement appropriate remedial actions. The Company has also established reserve amounts for certain non-compliance matters including those involving air emissions.

The Company has established reserves, in accordance with SFAS No. 5, Accounting for Contingencies, to cover the anticipated probable costs of investigation and remediation, based upon periodic reviews of all sites for which the Company has, or may have remediation responsibility. The Company accrues environmental investigation and remediation costs when it is both probable that a liability has been incurred and the amount can be reasonably estimated and the Company's responsibility is established. Generally, the timing of these accruals coincides with the earlier of formal commitment to an investigation plan, completion of feasibility study or the Company's commitment to a formal plan of action. As of December 31, 1998 and 1997, the Company's environmental reserves were $25.0 million (representing $22.9 million for the estimated costs of facility investigations, corrective measure studies and known remedial measures and $2.1 million for estimated legal costs) and $24.0 million, (representing $21.8 million for the estimated cost of facility investigations, corrective measure studies and known remedial measures and $2.2 million for estimated legal costs), respectively. It is anticipated that the $25.0 million accrual at December 31, 1998 will be paid as follows: $5.3 million in 1999, $4.9 million in 2000, $3.2 million in 2001, $1.0 million in 2002, $1.0 million in 2003 and $9.6 million thereafter. The Company has accrued its best estimate of investigation and remediation costs (based upon a range of exposure of $13.0 million to $46.3 million) based upon facts known to the Company and because of the inherent difficulties in estimating the ultimate amount of environmental costs, which are further described below, these estimates may materially change in the future as a result of the uncertainties described below. Estimated costs, which are based upon experience with similar sites and technical evaluations, are judgmental in nature and are recorded at undiscounted amounts without considering the impact of inflation and are adjusted periodically to reflect changes in applicable laws or regulations, changes in available technologies and receipt by the Company of new information. It is difficult to estimate the ultimate level of future environmental expenditures due to a number of uncertainties surrounding environmental liabilities. These uncertainties include the applicability of laws and regulations, changes in environmental remediation requirements, the enactment of additional regulations, uncertainties surrounding remediation procedures including the development of new technology, the identification of new sites for which the Company could be a PRP, information relating to the exact nature and extent of the contamination at each site and the extent of required cleanup efforts, the uncertainties with respect to the ultimate outcome of issues which may be actively contested and the varying costs of alternative remediation strategies. The Company continues to pursue the recovery of some environmental remediation costs from certain of its liability insurance carriers; however, such potential recoveries have not been offset against potential liabilities and have not been considered in determining the Company's environmental reserves. Due to uncertainty over remedial measures to be adopted at some sites, the possibility of changes in Environmental Laws and regulations and the fact that joint and several liability with the right of contribution is possible at federal and state Superfund sites, the Company's ultimate future liability with respect to sites at which remediation has not been completed may vary from the amounts reserved as of December 31, 1998.

In the fourth quarter of 1996, the Company performed a comprehensive review of all environmental exposures in an attempt by the then new senior management team to accelerate the resolution and settlement of environmental claims. As a result, upon conclusion of the review, the Company recorded additional environmental reserves of approximately $9.0 million in the fourth quarter of 1996.
