Under New York law, determination as to whether writing was intended as complete and exclusive statement of agreement is function of court; in making this determination, court is to measure completeness of written instrument itself, rather than subjective attitude of parties.

[23] Limitation of Actions 119(3)
241k119(3)

Under New York law, action is commenced when summons is served on defendant. N.Y.McKinney's CPLR 203(b), par. 1.

[24] Federal Courts 427
170Bk427

When claim asserted in federal court is on right created by state law, provisions of state statute of limitations as to how action is commenced, rather than Rule 3 of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, control in federal court. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 3, 28 U.S.C.A.

[25] Limitation of Actions 21(1)
241k21(1)

Under New York law, action for breach of contract must be brought within four years of its accrual. N.Y.McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code § 2-725(1).

*414 Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle, New York City by Eliot Lauer, for plaintiff.

Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts, New York City by Edwin J. Wesely and Frederick A. Brodie, for defendant.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

KRAM, District Judge.

In this case concerning foreign currency exchange transactions, plaintiff Compania Sud-Americana de Vapores ("CSAV") seeks to recover more than $1.5 million, *415 claiming fraud, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract and violations of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) against defendant IBJ Schroder Bank & Trust Company ("Schroder"). Presently, Schroder moves for an order, pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, granting it summary judgment on the grounds that CSAV's four claims are defective as a matter of law. [FN1]

FN1. In connection with Schroder's motion for summary judgment, the following officers of CSAV, its wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary Chilean Line, Inc., and Schroder, have been deposed, and their testimony will be referred to as necessary: Barry F. Geis--Chief Financial Officer of Chilean Line, Inc. since 1979 ("Geis Tr."); Patricio Grez--President of Chilean Line, Inc. since June of 1990 and, from 1982 to 1990, Manager of the Finance Division of CSAV in Chile ("Grez Tr."); Henrietta Suttie--Chief Accountant of Chilean Line, Inc. ("Suttie Tr."); Frederick Seeley--former head of the Latin American Division at Schroder and currently a paid advisor and consultant to CSAV ("Seeley Tr."); Edward Hamway--Senior Executive Vice President of Schroder and Acting President and Chief Executive Officer of Schroder from August 3, 1990 until January 1, 1991 ("Hamway Tr."); Paul Wan--Executive Vice President and, since 1986, Treasurer of Schroder ("Wan Tr."); Kevin Raphael--Head Foreign Exchange Trader at Schroder from 1984 to 1986 ("Raphael Tr."); Rodolfo Espinosa--Vice President and Head Foreign Exchange Trader at Schroder since 1987 ("Espinosa Tr."); Sara Settembrini--First Vice President at Schroder and from 1982 to 1985 account officer with responsibility for CSAV ("Settembrini Tr."); Horst Hasselbach--Assistant Vice President and Head of the Foreign Exchange Operations Department at Schroder ("Hasselbach Tr.").

I. Background

CSAV is a Chilean company engaged in shipping goods to North and South America, Northern and Southern Europe and Asia. Its 1989 assets were worth $500 million dollars. Schroder is a banking institution with its principal place of business in New York. For many years, Schroder was one of CSAV's leading U.S. banks providing CSAV with credit and deposit services. CSAV also conducted foreign currency transactions with Schroder for more than forty years. At least between 1984 and 1990, these transactions between the parties proceeded as follows:

(1) Upon receipt of foreign currencies [FN2] in payment for CSAV's shipping services, CSAV's European agents remitted the funds to local European banks ("correspondent banks") where Schroder maintained foreign currency accounts ("nostro accounts").

FN2. According to the complaint, the principal foreign currencies received and converted by Schroder on behalf of CSAV were: the Belgian franc, the German deutsche mark, the Dutch guilder, the Danish krone, the Spanish peseta, the British pound sterling, the Norwegian krone, and the Swedish krona.

(2) The correspondent banks, upon crediting Schroder's "nostro accounts" with CSAV's foreign currencies, would notify Schroder of the remittance by means of an interbank telex called a "SWIFT."

(3) Upon receipt of the SWIFT, Schroder's back office would notify a Schroder foreign exchange trader who would determine the rate that would be applied to the conversion.

(4) After determining the exchange rate, an internal transaction ticket would be completed, and the foreign exchange trader would generally place a phone call to a designated person, usually Henrietta Suttie, the Chief Accountant in the Finance Department of Chilean Line, Inc. ("Chilean Line"), CSAV's wholly-owned New York subsidiary. [FN3]

FN3. Chilean Line acted as CSAV's agent with regard to the currency conversions at issue in this case. Thus, both CSAV and Chilean Line will be referred to as CSAV.

(5) In the phone call to Chilean Line, the Schroder trader informed CSAV of the contract number, the amount of foreign currency involved, the exchange rate to be applied, the U.S. dollar amount to be credited, and the "maturity date" or "value date" on which the U.S. dollars would be received.

*416 (6) After receiving the phone call from Schroder, Chilean Line would send the information about the transaction to CSAV's head office in Chile by telex.

(7) Schroder sent written confirmations of each foreign exchange transaction to both CSAV in Chile and Chilean Line in New York. These confirmations included the amount of foreign currency, the exchange rate, the U.S. dollar amount and the value date.

(8) When the conversion was completed, Schroder paid CSAV the U.S. dollar proceeds of these foreign currency exchange transactions by depositing the dollar proceeds into CSAV's demand deposit account ("DDA account") at Schroder in New York.

(9) CSAV routinely transferred those dollars out of its account at Schroder and into its operations account at Chase Manhattan Bank ("Chase"). CSAV directed Schroder to wire-transfer funds to Chase an average of once a day.

According to the complaint, between 1984 and 1990, 1,087 foreign currency transactions were executed by Schroder on CSAV's behalf. Complaint, at ¶ 23. These transactions continued until mid-1990. In June 1990, however, CSAV decided to ask other European and American banks for quotations on foreign currency exchanges. After discovering that other banks had superior exchange rates, and complaining to Schroder about its foreign currency exchange rates, [FN4] CSAV took its foreign exchange business elsewhere, specifically to Deutsche Bank Hamburg, in July or August of 1990.

FN4. On June 14, 1990, Barry Geis ("Geis"), Chilean Line's chief financial officer since 1979, and Patricio Grez ("Grez"), recently promoted from Manager of CSAV's Finance Division in Chile to President of Chilean Line, met with Schroder officials to complain about Schroder's foreign currency exchange rates. Grez Tr., at 240-246; Geis Tr., at 307-09, 313-14.

The instant action arises out of the above foreign currency exchange transactions. CSAV alleges that between January 1, 1984 and May 31, 1990, Schroder charged an exchange rate for the conversion of foreign currency into dollars that was "unreasonably and grossly in excess of the prevailing market rate of exchange at the time, and well in excess of rates and margins being charged by other banking institutions." Complaint, at ¶ 18. According to CSAV, between January 1, 1984 and May 31, 1990, Schroder executed 175 separate conversions of the Belgian franc into dollars, [FN5] and the difference between the market rate and the rate charged by Schroder for this currency rose steadily throughout this period. For example, in 1984 Schroder charged an average of 1.35% above the New York Interbank rate (the "market rate" or "interbank rate"), the rate that applies between banks, for conversions of the Belgian franc. By 1990, the difference between the average Schroder rate and the market rate had escalated to 12.96%. Complaint, at ¶ 19. As a result, CSAV alleges common law fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty and violations of civil RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1962.

FN5. Discovery in this case, prior to disposition of this motion, has been limited to transactions involving the Belgian franc.

II. Standards for Summary Judgment

Summary judgment is appropriate where "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). In testing whether the movant has met this burden, the Court must resolve all ambiguities against the movant. Lopez v. S.B. Thomas, Inc., 831 F.2d 1184, 1187 (2d Cir.1987) (citing United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655, 82 S.Ct. 993, 994, 8 L.Ed.2d 176 (1962)).

The moving party bears the initial burden of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Adickes v. S.H. Kress and Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 1608, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970). The movant may discharge this burden by demonstrating to the Court that there is an absence of evidence to support the non-moving party's case on which that party *417 would have the burden of proof at trial. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 2552, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986). [FN6] The non-moving party then has the burden of coming forward with "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e). The non-movant must "do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts." Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 1356, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986). Speculation, conclusory allegations and mere denials are not enough to raise genuine issues of fact. To avoid summary judgment, enough evidence must favor the non-moving party's case such that a jury could return a verdict in its favor. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2510, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986) (interpreting the "genuineness" requirement).

FN6. The moving party may rely on the evidence in the record to point out the absence of genuine issues of material fact. Celotex, supra, 477 U.S. at 323, 106 S.Ct. at 2552. The moving party does not have the burden of providing evidence to negate the non-moving party's claims. Id. As the Supreme Court recently noted, "whether the moving party accompanies its summary judgment motion with affidavits, the motion may, and should, be granted so long as whatever is before the court demonstrates that the standard for the entry of summary judgment, as set forth in Rule 56(c), is satisfied." Id.

III. CSAV's Claims [FN7]

FN7. In its Memorandum of Law in support of its Motion for Summary Judgment ("Def.Mem."), Schroder contends that portions of each of CSAV's claims are barred by the applicable statute of limitations. Def.Mem., at 39-41. Although courts generally address statute of limitations issues before substantive matters, in this case the Court will first examine the more substantive issues. The Court has taken this approach because Schroder's statute of limitations arguments apply only to portions of each of CSAV's claims, and thus even if Schroder's contentions are correct, it will still be necessary to address the substantive challenges raised by Schroder. Further, the Court has determined that it is not possible to address the statute of limitations issues without first analyzing the substantive claims themselves.

A. Common Law Fraud

The five elements of an action for common law fraud are "representation of material fact, falsity of that representation, scienter, reliance and damages." Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 80 (2d Cir.1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1123, 101 S.Ct. 938, 67 L.Ed.2d 109 (1981); accord Jo Ann Homes at Bellmore, Inc. v. Dworetz, 25 N.Y.2d 112, 119, 302 N.Y.S.2d 799, 803, 250 N.E.2d 214, 217 (1969). CSAV contends that it has established these elements, and that Schroder's motion for summary judgment on its fraud claim must therefore be denied. The Court disagrees.

1. CSAV's Contentions

CSAV's basic contention is that it was fraudulent for Schroder to promise that it would give CSAV favorable exchange rates and then charge rates significantly above the prevailing market rate.

a. Elements of Common Law Fraud

(i) Schroder's Representations

Between 1979 and 1981, Geis had a series of "good will" meetings with Schroder's foreign exchange traders in New York. According to CSAV, Geis was told by Schroder's traders that "CSAV was considered a preferred client within the bank ... and that CSAV was given preferential treatment within the [foreign exchange] department." Geis Tr., at 48. The nature of the preferential treatment was that CSAV's foreign currency remittances "[were] given rates normally credited to larger amounts," Geis Tr., at 48, and the rate applied to CSAV's conversions was the "million dollar rate." Id. at 65-66. Geis was also told that the "million dollar rate" was Schroder's best rate for corporate accounts, and was at or near the interbank rate. Id. at 48, 65-66, 78, 93, 310-11, 378.

Based on this testimony and the affidavit of Claude Tygier, Schroder's chief foreign exchange trader from June 1979 through January 1984, CSAV asserts that Schroder made the following representations to CSAV: (a) that CSAV was a preferred customer, Geis Tr., at 45-48, 83-84; (b) that the manner in which Schroder converted foreign currencies for CSAV was "unique" *418 and, unlike a trading relationship, was actually a currency management service, Affidavit of Claude Tygier ("Tygier Aff."), sworn to on October 31, 1991, at ¶¶ 3, 7; Hamway Tr., at 175-78; Exhibit "I" to DiNatale Affidavit ("DiNatale Aff."), sworn to on November 11, 1991; (c) that Schroder was obligated to provide CSAV with rates commensurate with CSAV's status as a preferred customer, Tygier Aff. at ¶¶ 3e, 4, 5; and (d) that the rates Schroder would apply to CSAV's conversions--variously referred to as the "million dollar rate," "spot rate," "preferred customer rate," and "interbank rate"--were at least as good as the best rates Schroder gave its corporate customers and at or near the rates banks applied in transactions among themselves. Geis Tr., at 48, 65-66, 78, 93, 310-11, 378.

(ii) CSAV's Reliance

CSAV also contends that it relied upon Schroder's representations that CSAV would receive favorable exchange rates. CSAV argues that an internal Schroder memorandum specifically describes CSAV's reliance upon Schroder's representations. This memorandum states:

Barry [Geis] also informs that all CSAV agents are instructed to remit to Schroder, New York and we have converted such payments for CSAV at the spot rate ... Exhibit "H" to DiNatale Aff. According to CSAV, this memorandum establishes that CSAV expected Schroder to convert foreign currencies for CSAV at the "spot price," which was equivalent to the "million dollar rate," at or near the interbank rate and Schroder's best rate for corporate accounts. Geis Tr., at 48, 93, 310-11, 378. In addition, CSAV contends that reliance is established as it continued to remit its European currencies exclusively to Schroder for conversion.

(iii) Scienter

CSAV contends that the scienter requirement is established because Schroder knew that CSAV was relying upon Schroder to convert CSAV's currencies at or near the interbank rate, and not treat CSAV as a trading partner, see, e.g., Exhibit "H" to DiNatale Aff. ("Barry [Geis] informs me that ... we have converted such payments for CSAV at the spot rate"); Suttie Tr., at 96 ("you know we never trade"), and despite this knowledge, Schroder converted CSAV's currency at grossly unfavorable rates. [FN8]

FN8. For purposes of this motion, there is no dispute that Schroder, in converting currencies on behalf of CSAV, did not apply rates at or near the interbank rates. With respect to the Belgian franc, the only currency subject to discovery prior to this motion, the rate of conversion increased steadily from an average of 1.35% above the interbank rate in 1984 to an average of 12.96% above the rate in 1990. Complaint, at ¶ 19.

b. The Confirmations Were Part of the Scheme to Defraud

CSAV also alleges that as part of its scheme to defraud, Schroder failed to advise CSAV, and omitted from its written confirmations, the prevailing market rate of exchange, the actual rate at which Schroder executed each trade with its correspondent banks, the amount or percentage of Schroder's margin or profit, the extent to which Schroder's rate of exchange exceeded the market rate, and any administrative and other expenses Schroder incurred on CSAV's behalf. Complaint, at ¶ 35.

Further, in response to Schroder's argument that there is no fraud because each confirmation sent to CSAV truthfully and accurately reflected the rate that had been applied to each conversion, CSAV argues that it is irrelevant that the confirmations reflected the actual numerical rates at which the conversions were accomplished, because Schroder knew that CSAV expected that the rates disclosed on the confirmations were what Schroder had represented the rates would be-- i.e., at least as good as Schroder's best corporate account rates and at or near the interbank rates.

2. Discussion

The Court disagrees with CSAV's contentions and finds, as a matter of law, that Schroder is entitled to summary judgment on CSAV's common law fraud claim.

*419 a. Absence of Justifiable Reliance

[1] Under New York law, a plaintiff must establish that his reliance was justifiable, both in the sense that the party claiming to have been defrauded was justified in believing the representation and that he was justified in acting upon it. 2 New York Pattern Jury Instructions, PJI 3:20, commentary, at 95 (Supp.1991). Thus, the question becomes under what circumstances is a plaintiff's reliance justified. It is well established that when matters are peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, a plaintiff may rely on defendant's representations without prosecuting an investigation, as he has no independent means of ascertaining the truth. Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 80 (2d Cir.1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1123, 101 S.Ct. 938, 67 L.Ed.2d 109 (1981); see e.g. Tahini Investments, Ltd. v. Bobrowsky, 99 A.D.2d 489, 490, 470 N.Y.S.2d 431, 433 (2d Dept.1984) (defendant did not disclose that drums of industrial waste had been buried underground at 93 acre farm; no need for plaintiff to investigate if drums were peculiarly within the seller's knowledge); Todd v. Pearl Woods, Inc., 20 A.D.2d 911, 248 N.Y.S.2d 975 (2d Dept.1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 817, 257 N.Y.S.2d 937, 205 N.E.2d 861 (1965) (failure to check defendant's representations against public records no bar to fraud claim). By contrast, when misrepresentations concern matters that are not peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge, as in this case, New York courts have rejected claims of justifiable reliance because:

[if plaintiff] has the means of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth, or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations (Citations Omitted).

Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d at 80-81 (citing Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N.Y. 590, 598, 30 N.E. 755, 757 (1892)); see also Heineman v. S & S Machinery Corp., 750 F.Supp. 1179, 1186-87 (E.D.N.Y.1990) (fraud "cannot be based on a failure to make simple inquiries" where the information allegedly not disclosed could have been easily obtained through "duly diligent inquiry," or by the exercise of "ordinary intelligence").

[2] In an effort to explain the above standard, the Second Circuit stated in Mallis that reliance on misrepresentations is not justified if "plaintiff was placed on guard or practically faced with the facts." Id. at 81 (citing Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597 (1959) (buyer may not rely on misrepresentations in face of contract clause eschewing such reliance); Sylvester v. Bernstein, 283 A.D. 333, 127 N.Y.S.2d 746, aff'd 307 N.Y. 778, 121 N.E.2d 616 (1954) (landlord may not rely on tenants' representation that apartment would not be used for residential purposes)). However, under New York law, a plaintiff will be deemed to have been "practically faced with the facts" if he has access to the critical information. Both the Second Circuit and New York state courts have recognized the principle that access [to material information] "bars claims of reliance on misrepresentations." Grumman Allied Industries, Inc. v. Rohr Industries, Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 737, n. 13 (2d Cir.1984) (where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance).

[3] In this case, there is no basis to dispute that CSAV had access to the critical information underlying its fraud claim and, had it exercised ordinary intelligence or made simple inquiries, CSAV would have been able to discover the alleged misrepresentations. Thus, CSAV cannot establish justifiable reliance.

CSAV's claim is based upon the difference between the rate charged by Schroder and the interbank rate, the rate allegedly promised by Schroder. At all relevant times, CSAV had access to both relevant rates. The rate charged by Schroder was *420 confirmed in writing to CSAV, [FN9] Complaint, at ¶ 13; Grez Tr., at 27; Geis Tr., at 126-27; Seeley Tr., at 142-43, and the interbank foreign exchange rates were available in daily newspapers. Grez Tr., at 33-34, 71-72, 120-21, 203; Geis Tr., at 196-97, 280-81; Seeley Tr., at 27, 98. Further, it is undisputed that Chilean Line subscribed to both The Wall Street Journal and the New York Times. Grez Tr., at 33-34. Moreover, it has been established that during the relevant period, Geis, the agent of CSAV in charge of dealing with Schroder, read the New York Times and The Wall Street Journal and Grez read El Mercurio, all of which publish currency exchange rate tables. Geis Tr., at 279-281; Grez Tr., at 72. In fact, Geis testified that he has read The Wall Street Journal on a daily basis for more than fifteen years and has read the foreign exchange tables in The Wall Street Journal on a regular basis since at least 1979. Geis Tr., at 278-80. Thus, as even CSAV's witnesses concede, CSAV could at any time have compared Schroder's rates to the interbank rate published in the newspaper. Grez Tr., at 71-72, 203; Geis Tr., at 196-97; Seeley Tr., at 27; Exhibit "AO" to Def. Appendix. [FN10]

FN9. Schroder confirmed each foreign exchange transaction in writing to both CSAV in Chile and Chilean Line in New York. The confirmations included the amount of foreign currency, the exchange rate, the U.S. dollar amount and the value date. See Exhibit "D" to Appendix of Pleadings and Exhibits submitted in Connection with Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ("Def. Appendix").

FN10. CSAV contends that Schroder was committed to apply not the "interbank rate," but, rather, a rate at or near the interbank rate that was at least as good as the rate Schroder gave other corporate accounts. Plaintiff's Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment (Pl.Mem.), at 23. And since those rates were not public information and were not disclosed by Schroder to CSAV, CSAV claims that it is irrelevant that CSAV's employees read newspapers which included foreign exchange tables. The Court disagrees. CSAV's entire complaint is based on Schroder having charged rates above the published interbank or market rate. Complaint, at ~ ¶ 18, 19, 20. Further, in calculating its alleged damages CSAV used the rate charged by Schroder and the published interbank rate. Complaint, at ¶ 21, 22, 23, 24. Thus, CSAV cannot now claim that it had no knowledge of the rate Schroder was committed to apply.

In addition to consulting newspapers, CSAV could have discovered the alleged misrepresentations by calling other banks and obtaining quotations, as it did in June of 1990. Grez testified that:

[T]he foreign exchange market is the biggest market in the world; huge quantities are transacted. It's the most-if there is a perfect market, that's the foreign exchange market. It's very transparent. Rates are available to whoever wants to look at them on the screens....

Grez Tr., at 56. Moreover, Geis' testimony indicates that CSAV was quite familiar with obtaining foreign exchange quotations from other institutions. Geis testified that after he was employed as Chilean Line's top financial officer in 1979, for two or three weeks "whenever we got an advice that Schroder had converted a currency for us, I matched the rate against a quote that I would get from one or more other banks." Geis Tr., at 49. In addition, in 1988 and 1989 when CSAV sought to purchase currency futures in the Japanese yen, Geis solicited quotes from Chase and First Maryland and purchased from whichever bank provided the better rate. Geis Tr., at 113, 179, 182-83, 185-86, 194; Exhibit "AC" to Def. Appendix. Finally, it is clear that CSAV obtained quotes from other banks in June of 1990. In fact, it was the superiority of these other quotes that led CSAV to discontinue its relationship with Schroder.

Further, CSAV's reliance is unjustified because CSAV officials recognized that they were responsible for checking the prices on foreign exchange transactions to make sure they were acceptable. Geis testified that CSAV was ultimately responsible for monitoring the prices at which foreign exchange transactions with Schroder were undertaken. Geis Tr., at 125. Grez testified that as manager of the Finance Division he was directly responsible for overseeing CSAV's foreign exchange activities, and it was his duty to make sure that CSAV got a fair market price for its foreign exchange activities. Grez Tr., at *421 18-19. Grez also testified that "if [Geis] found out that we had not received proper market rates, he would force the bank or ask the bank--I don't recall, of course, the exact words--to refund the company the proper difference." Grez Tr., at 54, 60.

Since CSAV did not compare Schroder's rates with the published interbank rate, did not ask other banks for quotations, and made no effort to inquire as to the underlying facts of its claim prior to June 1990, despite the availability of such information, the Court finds, as a matter of law, that CSAV's reliance on Schroder's alleged misrepresentations was unreasonable.

b. Absence of scienter or fraudulent intent

[4] CSAV's fraud claim is premised on statements made to Geis by Schroder foreign exchange traders during a series of "goodwill" meetings between 1979 and 1981. CSAV claims that during these meetings Geis was told that "CSAV was considered a preferred client within the bank ... and that CSAV was given preferential treatment within the [foreign] exchange department." Pl.Mem., at 11; Geis Tr., at 48. Geis was also told that

"the rate applied to CSAV's conversions was the million dollar rate." Pl.Mem., at 11; Geis Tr., at 65-66. Construing these statements as promises or representations by Schroder that CSAV was getting Schroder's best rates, CSAV alleges that "[p]romising a favorable rate and charging another is a clear cut fraud." Pl.Mem., at 17. The Court disagrees.

First, the evidence establishes that from 1979-1984 Schroder did not promise favorable rates and charge other rates. In fact, the record indicates that for many years Schroder applied favorable rates. Geis testified that when he started working at Chilean Line in 1979 he checked the foreign exchange rates at various other banks and found that Schroder's rates were competitive. Geis Tr., at 66, 236. In addition, the fact that CSAV's fraud claim seeks damages for excessive rates charged by Schroder between January 1, 1984 and June 1990, indicates that Schroder applied favorable rates prior to January of 1984.

Second, there is no evidence that these promises by Schroder were to last indefinitely. See Geis Tr., at 50-51. [FN11] But even if the statements made to Geis between 1979 and 1981 are construed as promises by Schroder to apply favorable rates indefinitely, Schroder's failure to continue applying these preferable rates does not constitute fraud under New York law as the record contains no evidence that Schroder intended not to perform its alleged promises at the time they were made. It is well settled that "fraudulent intent not to perform a promise cannot be inferred merely from the fact of nonperformance." Deligiannis v. Pepsico, Inc., 757 F.Supp. 241, 254 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (citing Brown v. Lockwood, 76 A.D.2d 721, 733, 432 N.Y.S.2d 186, 195 (2d Dept.1980)). Indeed, this Court has held that "nonperformance of a promise alone does not support an inference that it was fraudulent when uttered." Zola v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., CCH Fed.Secur.L.Rep. ¶ 93, 159 at 95, 721-22, 1987 WL 7742 (S.D.N.Y.1987). In order to properly allege a fraud claim, a defrauded party "must allege specific facts showing that the promisor intended not to honor his obligations at the time the promise was made." National Westminster Bank v. Ross, 130 B.R. 656, 664 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (citing Songbird Jet Ltd., Inc. v. Amax Inc., 581 F.Supp. 912 (S.D.N.Y.1984), aff'd, 812 F.2d 713 (2d Cir.1987)).

FN11. Aside from the longstanding relationship between CSAV and Schroder, CSAV has produced no evidence which indicates that the statements made to Geis were anything more than promises to give favorable rates between 1979 and 1981, when the statements were made. Although Geis testified that he believed the preferable rates would apply "ad infinitum," he could not recall anyone from Schroder making such a statement. In fact, he testified that it "was merely the impression I had." Geis Tr., at 50-51.

Since CSAV has offered no evidence that Schroder intended not to perform the alleged promise to apply favorable rates at the time the promise was made, and the record establishes that Schroder applied preferable rates from 1979-1984, the Court *422 finds, as a matter of law, that CSAV has failed to prove fraudulent intent.

c. The Confirmation Slips Were Not Part of A Scheme to Defraud

[5] Since the Court has found that CSAV alleges no actionable fraud, the confirmations sent to CSAV by Schroder a fortiori cannot be part of any scheme to defraud. But, even if the Court had not made the above two findings, CSAV's theory that each confirmation slip was part of a scheme to defraud is untenable.

In the complaint, CSAV alleges that:

As part of its scheme to defraud CSAV, Schroder wilfully and intentionally failed to advise CSAV and omitted from its written confirmations the prevailing market rate of exchange, the actual rate at which Schroder executed each trade with its correspondent banks, the amount or percentage of Schroder's margin or profit, the extent to which Schroder's rate of exchange exceeded the market rate, and any administrative and other expenses Schroder incurred on CSAV's behalf.

Complaint, at ¶ 35. For the following reasons, however, the Court finds that the confirmations were not a part of a scheme to defraud. First, there is no dispute that the confirmations truthfully and accurately stated the terms of the foreign exchange contracts, which is all they were required to do. See Pl.Mem., at 18. CSAV has presented no evidence that the confirmations were designed to include the allegedly omitted information. In fact, the evidence indicates that the purpose of the confirmations was to confirm particular transactions between CSAV and Schroder.

Second, there is no basis for CSAV's allegation that Schroder omitted "the actual rate at which Schroder executed each trade with its correspondent banks." Every confirmation slip contained the rate of exchange, see, e.g., Exhibit "D" to Def. Appendix, at 1, and that rate was the actual rate at which each currency exchange was executed with CSAV, the only other principal in each transaction. See Grez Tr., at 49-51; Seeley Tr., at 36.

Third, if CSAV had exercised ordinary intelligence or made simple inquiries as required by New York law, it would have discovered the prevailing market rate of exchange and uncovered the facts underlying the alleged scheme to defraud. Moreover, CSAV has presented no evidence that Schroder was required to disclose the prevailing market rate on the confirmations. In fact, the Second Circuit has stated that "there is no duty to disclose information to one who reasonably should already be aware of it," Seibert v. Sperry Rand Corp., 586 F.2d 949, 952 (2d Cir.1978), and has rejected fraud claims based on the omission or nondisclosure of market rates. Hafner v. Forest Laboratories, Inc., 345 F.2d 167, 168 (2d Cir.1965) (plaintiff was not "misled" by defendant's non-disclosure of market price information because "current price information on [defendant's] stock was available to the public in the National Daily Quotations Sheets"); Klamberg v. Roth, 473 F.Supp. 544, 552 (S.D.N.Y.1979) (no duty to disclose existed because "all of the factual information was readily available to plaintiff, especially since, as the complaint itself concedes, [the stock in question] was at all material times traded on the New York Stock Exchange").

Fourth, the "extent to which Schroder's rate of exchange exceeded the market rate" is merely a subtraction problem. Because CSAV knew the Schroder rate and the interbank or market rate was readily available, CSAV only had to subtract one from the other to find the allegedly omitted information.

Fifth, the remaining alleged omissions cited by CSAV are irrelevant and immaterial, and there is no evidence that Schroder had a duty to disclose such information.

Finally, even if there was a duty to disclose, the Court would not find that the confirmations were part of a fraudulent scheme because it was unreasonable for CSAV to rely on the confirmations as representing that Schroder was applying rates at or near the interbank rate when CSAV itself had access to the interbank rate in the daily newspapers.

*423 In an effort to revitalize its theory that the confirmations were part of a scheme to defraud, CSAV changes tactics. In opposition to the motion, CSAV argues that the confirmations were part of the scheme to defraud because "Schroder knew CSAV expected and understood that the rates disclosed on the confirmations were what Schroder represented the rates would be--i.e., at least as good as Schroder's best corporate account rates and at or near the interbank rates." Pl.Mem., at 18-22. In other words, although the confirmations were themselves accurate, they were part of a fraudulent scheme because they "represented that the rates applied were at or near the interbank rate when that was not the case." Pl.Mem., at 22.

Essentially, CSAV is claiming two things. First, that Schroder was required to disclose additional information so CSAV would know that the rates applied were not "at or near the interbank rate." As discussed above, this claim is without merit. CSAV had access to all material information, and there has been no evidence presented that Schroder had a duty to disclose additional information.

[6][7] Second, CSAV is claiming that unless the slips disclosed that Schroder was no longer applying the favorable rates promised, or that Schroder was no longer in compliance with the alleged promises made to CSAV between 1979 and 1981, the confirmation slips were part of the fraudulent scheme. However, failing to disclose a breach of promise does not transform a contract action into one for fraud. Rodgers v. Roulette Records, Inc., 677 F.Supp. 731, 738 (S.D.N.Y.1988) (citing Brignoli v. Balch Hardy and Scheinman, Inc., 645 F.Supp. 1201, 1207 (S.D.N.Y.1986) (a claim that defendant "intentionally and falsely represented that it was abiding by the alleged contract" was insufficient to support a fraud claim)); Robehr Films, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc., No. 85 Civ. 1072 (RPP), 1989 WL 111079, *4 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 1989) ("it is simply not a tort to fail to advise that the contract has been, or is being, breached"), aff'd 902 F.2d 1556 (2d Cir.1990). Thus, the Court finds that the confirmation slips were not part of the scheme to defraud.

Accordingly, the Court concludes, as a matter of law, that Schroder is entitled to summary judgment on CSAV's common law fraud claim.

B. RICO

[8] CSAV also alleges that Schroder violated § 1962(c) of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which provides that:

It shall be unlawful for any person employed by or associated with any enterprise engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce, to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debt.

18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). The offenses which underlie "racketeering activity" are the predicate acts necessary for a RICO violation. They are defined in 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1) as acts "indictable" or "punishable" under various federal criminal statutes, and acts "chargeable" under certain state criminal laws. See Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Alexander Grant & Co., 627 F.Supp. 1023, 1027 (S.D.N.Y.1985). These include murder, kidnapping, arson, robbery, bribery, extortion, dealing in narcotics, securities fraud, mail fraud and wire fraud. In this case, the predicate acts alleged in the complaint are violations of the mail fraud statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1341, and the wire fraud statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1343. According to CSAV, between 1984 and 1990, Schroder engaged in hundreds of separately indictable acts of federal mail and wire fraud. [FN12]

FN12. CSAV also appears to allege, although not in its complaint, that non-disclosure by a fiduciary may constitute the predicate for a RICO violation. Pl.Mem., at 63-64. According to CSAV, "the concealment by a fiduciary of material information which he is under a duty to disclose to another under circumstances where the non-disclosure could or does result in harm to another is a violation of the [mail fraud] statute." United States v. Bronston, 658 F.2d 920, 926 (2d Cir.1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 915, 102 S.Ct. 1769, 72 L.Ed.2d 174 (1982). Because the Court finds that no fiduciary relationship existed between the parties, it is unnecessary to address CSAV's contentions. See infra 424-27.

[9][10] *424 The offenses of both mail and wire fraud require proof of the same two elements: [FN13] (1) that defendant participated in a scheme to defraud; and (2) knowingly used the mails (or wires) to further the scheme. United States v. Rodolitz, 786 F.2d 77, 80 (2d Cir.1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 826, 107 S.Ct. 102, 93 L.Ed.2d 52 (1986) (citations omitted). Additionally, "proof of a fraudulent scheme requires evidence showing a specific intent to defraud," id. (quoting United States v. Gelb, 700 F.2d 875, 879 (2d Cir.1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 853, 104 S.Ct. 167, 78 L.Ed.2d 152 (1983)), which can be shown by proof that the scheme was reasonably calculated to deceive persons of ordinary prudence and comprehension.

Virden v. Graphics One, 623 F.Supp. 1417, 1422 (C.D.Cal.1985).

FN13. See United States v. Von Barta, 635 F.2d 999, 1005 n. 11 (2d Cir.1980) (courts have uniformly given the language of both statutes the same construction), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998, 101 S.Ct. 1703, 68 L.Ed.2d 199 (1981), overruling on other grounds recognized by, 841 F.2d 450 (2d Cir.1988).

[11] Before the Court can determine whether CSAV can establish these elements, it must first determine whether a plaintiff can ever satisfy the requirements of mail or wire fraud when its common law fraud claim has been dismissed. The Second Circuit has not yet considered whether the elements of common law or state statutory fraud must be satisfied to establish the predicate act of mail or wire fraud for civil RICO liability, and decisions within this district have been inconsistent. Some courts have held that the plaintiff's inability to plead common law fraud does not preclude a RICO claim based upon a scheme to defraud under the mail fraud statute. See e.g., Scharff v. Claridge Gardens, Inc., 1990 WL 186879, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15776 (S.D.N.Y.1990); Shaw v. Rolex Watch U.S.A., Inc., 726 F.Supp. 969, 972 (S.D.N.Y.1989); GLM Corp. v. Klein, 684 F.Supp. 1242, 1244-45 (S.D.N.Y.1988). However, other courts have dismissed RICO claims "based upon the predicate act of mail fraud where the complaint pleads a scheme to defraud under the mail fraud statute that does not state a claim for common law fraud." Scharff, 1990 WL 186879 at *3, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS at *8 (citing Morin v. Trupin, 711 F.Supp. 97, 105 (S.D.N.Y.1989); Long Island Lighting Co. v. Transamerica Delaval, Inc., 646 F.Supp. 1442, 1453 (S.D.N.Y.1986); River Plate Reinsurance Co. v. Jay-Mar Group, Ltd., 588 F.Supp. 23, 26-27 (S.D.N.Y.1984)).

Although there is no requirement in the text of the mail fraud statute that common law or state statutory fraud controls the sufficiency of a scheme to defraud under the mail fraud statute, and it is indeed well established that the reach of the mail fraud statute is not limited to common law or state statutory definitions of fraud, see Scharff, 1990 WL 186879 at *3, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS at *8 (citing numerous cases), the Court holds that the better view is that where the fraudulent scheme is premised upon an inadequate fraud claim, allegations of mail and wire fraud must generally also fail. See Morin, 711 F.Supp. at 105.

[12] Thus, CSAV's predicate act claim must fail, for, as set forth above, CSAV fails to adduce evidence that Schroder engaged in any "fraud" or "fraudulent scheme." Id. "Because the common law fraud [claim] is dismissed, there are no valid allegations of 'fraud' to underpin the ... RICO allegations and those claims must be dismissed as well." Id.

[13] However, even if the Court accepted the view that dismissal of the common law fraud claim does not preclude a RICO claim based upon a scheme to defraud under the mail and wire fraud statutes, the RICO claim in this case would still be dismissed as a matter of law because CSAV cannot establish the elements of either mail fraud or wire fraud. Proof of a fraudulent scheme requires evidence showing a specific intent to defraud, and, as discussed *425 above, CSAV cannot prove that Schroder had a specific intent to defraud. In this case, moreover, the alleged fraudulent omissions in the confirmation slips and fraudulent misrepresentations as to what rates Schroder would charge, were not reasonably calculated to deceive persons of "ordinary prudence and comprehension." Since Schroder knew that CSAV had access to both the rates charged by Schroder and the prevailing market rate, and since it is unreasonable to assume that Schroder was unaware of the facility with which an ordinary person might calculate that Schroder's rates were above the interbank rate, the Court finds, as a matter of law, that there is no proof of a fraudulent scheme reasonably calculated to deceive persons of ordinary prudence and comprehension.

For the aforementioned reasons, Schroder's motion for summary judgment as to CSAV's RICO claim is granted.

C. Breach of Fiduciary Duty Claim

[14] CSAV contends that the evidence establishes a fiduciary relationship, and that Schroder breached its fiduciary duty by charging CSAV rates in excess of the alleged promised rates. As support for its claim that a fiduciary relationship existed between Schroder and CSAV, CSAV points to their longstanding relationship of fifty years, and Schroder having deemed "CSAV and its subsidiaries [one] our oldest and most respected client relationships," and indeed, one of Schroder's leading clients in Latin America. Seeley Tr., at 208; see, e.g., Exhibit "O" to DiNatale Aff., at S00213; Exhibit "P" to DiNatale Aff., at S00187.

As further support for its claim, CSAV alleges that the relationship between Schroder and CSAV in connection with currency conversions was special and unique. Schroder's former President and former C.E.O. Hamway said the relationship was an "international cash management service" not provided to others. Hamway Tr., at 175-78. In addition, Tygier states that, unlike currency transactions with its other corporate accounts, Schroder did not trade with CSAV. Tygier Aff., at ¶ 3. Instead, "Schroder acted as a fiduciary and managed CSAV's foreign currency exchange activity for CSAV, and automatically converted or exchanged foreign currency on CSAV's behalf." Tygier Aff., at ¶ 3. Tygier also states that "Schroder acted in the capacity of a manager and fiduciary of CSAV's currency conversions in that CSAV and Schroder were in a unique relationship of trust." Tygier Aff., at ¶ 7.

Finally, CSAV claims that every CSAV witness testified that, by reason of the longstanding relationship and the manner in which foreign exchange business had been conducted, CSAV reposed trust and confidence in Schroder and relied upon Schroder to give CSAV the best rates. Geis Tr., at 383-85, 411-12; Grez Tr., at 47-49, 202; Suttie Tr., at 98-99; Seeley Tr., at 87-88.

Contrary to CSAV's assertions and Tygier's unjustified, conclusory statements about the existence of a fiduciary relationship, the Court finds, as a matter of law, that no fiduciary relationship existed between CSAV and Schroder; therefore there could be no breach of fiduciary duty.

Although "the exact limits of the term 'fiduciary relation' are impossible of statement," G. Bogert, The Law of Trusts and Trustees, § 481 (2d Ed.Rev.1984), broadly speaking,

[a] fiduciary relationship is one founded on trust or confidence reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. The term is a very broad one. It is said that the relation exists, and that relief is granted in all cases in which influence has been acquired and abused, in which confidence has been reposed and betrayed. The origin of the confidence and the source of the influence are immaterial. The rule embraces both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist whenever one man trusts in and relies upon another. Out of such a relation, the laws raise the rule that neither party may exert influence or pressure upon the other, take selfish advantage of his trust or deal with the subject matter of the trust in such a way as to benefit himself or prejudice the other except in the exercise of utmost good faith.... A fiduciary relation exists when confidence is reposed on one side and there is resulting superiority and influence on the other.

Mobil Oil Corporation v. Rubinfeld, 72 Misc.2d 392, 339 N.Y.S.2d 623, 632 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 48 A.D.2d 428, 370 N.Y.S.2d 943 (1975); accord, CBS, Inc. v. Ahern, 108 F.R.D. 14 (S.D.N.Y.1985) (citing United States v. Reed, 601 F.Supp. 685, 707 (S.D.N.Y.1985); Penato v. George, 52 A.D.2d 939, 942, 383 N.Y.S.2d 900, 904-05 (2d Dept.1976), appeal dismissed, 42 N.Y.2d 908, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 366 N.E.2d 1358 (1977)).

New York law is also quite clear, however, that "a conventional business relationship, without more, does not become a fiduciary relationship by mere allegation." Oursler v. Women's Interart Center, Inc., 170 A.D.2d 407, 566 N.Y.S.2d 295 (1st Dept.1991).

Indeed, New York Courts have rejected the proposition that a fiduciary relationship can arise between parties to a business transaction, National Westminster Bank, U.S.A. v. Ross, 130 B.R. 656, 679 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (citing Beneficial Commercial Corp. v. Murray Glick Datsun, 601 F.Supp. 770, 772 (S.D.N.Y.1985)), and have concluded that "where parties deal at arms length in a commercial transaction, no relation of confidence or trust sufficient to find the existence of a fiduciary relationship will arise absent extraordinary circumstances." National Westminster Bank, 130 B.R. at 679 (citations omitted).

In this case, CSAV has failed to set forth evidence that the dealings between the parties were not arms-length, or that there were extraordinary circumstances that would give rise to a fiduciary relationship between the parties. In fact, the record conclusively establishes that CSAV and Schroder were parties with equivalent knowledge engaged in mutually beneficial, arms-length commercial transactions.

First, it is clear from the record that both Schroder and CSAV were sophisticated parties. CSAV and Chilean Line were run by individuals who very knowledgeable about the foreign currency market. They participated in complex foreign exchange "swap" operations with the Central Bank of Chile, Grez Tr., at 138; bought and sold Chilean debt in the market to profit from favorable dollar/peso exchange rates, Grez Tr., at 135; purchased yen futures from Chase, Geis Tr., at 111; engaged in dollar/yen "forward swaps" and "reconversions" with First Maryland, Geis Tr., at 113; were "absolutely" familiar with the process of "hedging" their foreign currency exposure, Grez Tr., at 126; and investigated sophisticated hedging devices such as the "Philadelphia option," Geis Tr., at 87-92.

Second, even if the Court finds that Schroder provided CSAV with an unique international cash management service, did not trade with CSAV as to each currency transaction, and promised to convert CSAV's currency at favorable rates, there is no evidence to support CSAV's allegation that this was a fiduciary relationship rather than an arms-length relationship. There is not a scintilla of evidence that the agreements between the parties were a result of unequal bargaining power or that Schroder acquired any influence over CSAV. In fact, the record establishes that this was a typical arms-length relationship designed to further the interests of the respective parties. In 1988, despite its longstanding ties to CSAV, Schroder told CSAV not to count on any credit from Schroder in the future, Grez Tr., at 192; Exhibit "46" to Def.App., and basically terminated its relationship with CSAV in all areas except foreign exchange because it was no longer profitable to maintain Latin American banking relationships. Moreover, although CSAV employees testified that they believed that they were not free to take their business elsewhere, Geis Tr., at 52, the abrupt termination of the relationship by CSAV in June 1990 indicates that this was an arms-length relationship that would continue until CSAV found that it could get superior rates elsewhere.

CSAV is correct when it argues that there are circumstances where a fiduciary relationship might be found to exist "based upon prior business dealings", Apple Records, Inc. v. Capitol Records, Inc., 137 *427 A.D.2d 50, 57, 529 N.Y.S.2d 279, 283 (1st Dep't 1988) (quoting Penato v. George, 52 A.D.2d 939, 942, 383 N.Y.S.2d 900, 904-05 (2d Dep't 1976), appeal dismissed, 42 N.Y.2d 908, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 366 N.E.2d 1358 (1977)); see also, Gittes v. Cook International, 598 F.Supp. 717, 723 (S.D.N.Y.1984), but CSAV has not established that such circumstances are present in this case. In Apple Records, the court's decision was based largely on the fact that plaintiffs' breach of fiduciary duty claim was inextricably linked to their cognizable claims for fraudulent concealment and fraudulent representation. Apple Records, 529 N.Y.S.2d at 283 ("it can be said that from such a long enduring relationship was borne a special relationship of trust and confidence, one which existed independent of the contractual duties, and one which plaintiffs argue was betrayed by fraud in secretly selling records claimed as scrapped and in diluting the market and exploiting the Beatles' popularity with excessive distribution of promotional copies to benefit other aspects of defendants' business.") (emphasis added). Even the format of the opinion indicates the link as plaintiffs' claims for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty are discussed by the court in an almost interchangeable manner. Id. 529 N.Y.S.2d at 283. It is also clear that the court upheld the breach of fiduciary duty cause of action in Apple Records because the plaintiffs alleged that defendants breached their duty as bailees, a claim that is not asserted by CSAV in the case at hand. Thus, the court did not uphold the breach of fiduciary claim merely because the parties had a close 26 year business relationship. [FN14]

FN14. Gittes v. Cook International, 598 F.Supp. at 723, is also distinct from the present case. In that case the court dealt with a situation involving corporate directors and the duties they owe to minority shareholders. Further, in that case the court determined that no fiduciary relationship arose from the business relationship. Id.

[15][16] Further, CSAV establishes no other basis for the existence of a fiduciary relationship. CSAV's allegations that the "nostro accounts" were "special accounts" which turn a debtor-creditor relationship into a fiduciary one, are unfounded, and its assertion that a fiduciary relationship was established because Schroder held CSAV's currencies in its "nostro accounts" for the benefit of CSAV, is without foundation. [FN15] In addition, CSAV evinces no evidence to establish that Schroder owed it fiduciary duties as either an agent or a trustee.

FN15. This case is markedly different from SEC v. American Board of Trade, Inc., 654 F.Supp. 361 (S.D.N.Y.1987), aff'd in part, 830 F.2d 431 (2d Cir.1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 938, 108 S.Ct. 1118, 99 L.Ed.2d 278 (1988), where the court found a fiduciary relationship to exist based upon the defendant financial institution having arranged special "safekeeping accounts" for its T-bill customers. In American Board of Trade, the accounts were used to hold money for investment or in trust, whereas in this case the relationship was essentially one between buyer and seller. When Schroder received notification from the nostro bank, it purchased the foreign currency from CSAV. Plaintiff's 3(g) statement, at ¶ 4(b)-(e); Defendant's 3(g) statement, at ¶ 23(b)-(e). The written confirmations sent to CSAV by Schroder, which explicitly stated that "WE HAVE BOUGHT" and "WE HAVE SOLD," are strong evidence that Schroder was indeed purchasing the foreign currency from CSAV. Exhibit "D" to Def.App.; see also Banco Fonsecas & Burnay v. Prudential-Bache Securities, Inc., No. 87 Civ. 2308 (RO), 1990 WL 145150 at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 22, 1990), aff'd, 930 F.2d 910 (2d Cir.1991) (no fiduciary duty in transaction between purchaser and seller in government bond market). Similarly, in CBS, Inc. v. Ahern, 108 F.R.D. 14, 25 (S.D.N.Y.1985), in which the court held that the allegations support the imposition of fiduciary duties, the money held in "special accounts" was to be "invested and reinvested from time to time" in securities selected by an investment advisor.

Thus, the Court concludes that CSAV's allegations that it reposed trust and confidence in Schroder and relied upon Schroder to give CSAV the best rates are merely an effort to avoid the repercussions of its lack of diligence in monitoring the rates at which conversions were made for over six years, and finds that Schroder is entitled to summary judgment on CSAV's breach of fiduciary duty claim.

D. Breach of Contract Claim

1. CSAV's Contentions

CSAV claims that the evidence establishes that there was an oral agreement between *428 Schroder and CSAV regarding the management by Schroder of a conversion program for CSAV's currencies. CSAV contends that under this contract, it was obligated to remit all of its European currencies to Schroder's "nostro accounts," and Schroder was required to automatically convert those currencies to U.S. dollars and give CSAV a rate at or near the interbank rate. CSAV also contends that Schroder breached this agreement when it applied rates far in excess of the rates it agreed to apply.

2. Schroder's Contentions

Schroder contends that CSAV has produced no written contract which governs all of the parties' currency transactions, nor has any witness testified that such an agreement existed. See Grez Tr., at 34-35; Geis Tr., at 120; Suttie Tr., at 129, 135-36; Seeley Tr., at 29-30, 32; Wan Tr., at 300-01; Raphael Tr., at 60; Espinosa Tr., at 170-71; Hasselbach Tr., at 351. Thus, if any contract exists it must be an oral, unwritten agreement, as CSAV concedes. According to Schroder, however, CSAV's claim of the existence of an oral contract ignores the legal effect of the written confirmations that it regularly received. Because the specific terms of every foreign currency exchange, including the price term, were confirmed in writing to CSAV, Schroder argues that the parol evidence rule precludes CSAV from contradicting those written terms based on an alleged oral agreement. Moreover, Schroder claims that even if evidence of the alleged oral agreement was not barred by the parol evidence rule, the oral agreement is not an enforceable contract as a matter of law because "[it] is vapor." Def.Mem., at 18. None of CSAV's witnesses has any first-hand knowledge about the alleged oral agreement, its terms, the individuals who negotiated it, or when it was made. In addition, Schroder's witnesses have no knowledge of any oral agreement with CSAV respecting foreign exchange rates. Further, it is unenforceable because there is substantial confusion on the part of CSAV as to what the purported contract requires. On the strength of these arguments, Schroder moves for summary judgment on CSAV's breach of contract claim.

For the reasons set forth below, the Court denies Schroder's motion for summary judgment on CSAV's breach of contract claim.

3. Discussion

a. Oral Agreement

[17] It is undisputed that there was no written contract which governed all of the foreign currency exchange transactions between the parties. However, the record establishes at least a genuine issue of material fact as to whether an oral agreement existed between Schroder and CSAV regarding the management by Schroder of a conversion program for CSAV's currencies.

In order to determine whether the parties entered into an oral agreement and the terms of such an agreement, it is necessary to look ... to the objective manifestations of the intent of the parties as gathered by their expressed words and deeds. In doing so disproportionate emphasis is not to be put on any single act, phrase or other expression, but, instead, on the totality of all of these, given the attendant circumstances, the situation of the parties, and the objectives they were striving to attain.

Brown Brothers Electrical Contractors, Inc. v. Beam Construction Corp., 41 N.Y.2d 397, 399-400, 393 N.Y.S.2d 350, 352, 361 N.E.2d 999, 1001 (1977) (citations omitted). Further, "[it] is necessary that the totality of all the acts of the parties, their relationship and their objectives be considered in order to determine whether they entered into an oral agreement...." P.J. Carlin Construction Co. v. Whiffen Electric Co., Inc., 66 A.D.2d 684, 411 N.Y.S.2d 27, 29 (1st Dept.1978).

In this case, the most compelling evidence for the existence of an oral agreement is the absence of other explanation for the relationship that developed between CSAV and Schroder. It is implausible that Schroder set up accounts in Europe to accept CSAV's European currencies, converted those currencies to U.S. dollars automatically *429 and without prior consultation with CSAV, [FN16] and CSAV agents remitted their European currencies exclusively to Schroder, without the existence of any overarching oral agreement between the parties.

FN16. It is undisputed that there was no negotiation between Schroder and CSAV as to the rates to be applied to individual conversions of CSAV's currencies. See Def.Reply Mem., at 23 n. 14; Suttie Tr., at 96-99; Tygier Aff., at ¶ 3, 4, 7.

Further evidence for the existence of an agreement is provided by both CSAV and Schroder witnesses. CSAV witnesses have testified that CSAV was obligated to remit all of its European currencies to Schroder for conversion, and that Schroder was obligated to give CSAV the best available rates. Specifically, Grez stated that Geis and three other CSAV executives each described the contract to him. Grez Tr., at 35-36. Each of the executives told Grez that CSAV was bound to remit its European currencies to Schroder, and Schroder would give "special consideration" to CSAV. In addition, Schroder would automatically convert the currencies into U.S. dollars at "the best possible exchange rate," to be determined by reference to a benchmark such as the "Reuters, Frankfurt or New York" interbank rates. Grez Tr., at 35-38, 41-45, 56, 248. Moreover, Suttie testified that she was told by a Schroder employee that "because of the monies we put through the account[,] [Schroder] would give us the best rate in the market." Suttie Tr., at 54-55. She also testified that CSAV had an "exclusive arrangement" whereby "all European currencies must go to Schroder," Suttie Tr., at 146, and because of the exclusivity, "Schroder was working on [CSAV's] behalf, [and] they were getting us an honest rate." Id. at 52. [FN17] Finally, Geis has testified that he was told that "for years--nobody knew when--all of CSAV's European currencies were remitted to Schroder for conversion," Geis Tr., at 52, and that, in return, Schroder "converted [the currencies] and credited our account" and gave CSAV "preferential rates." Geis Tr., at 48-50.

FN17. As Schroder points out, Suttie points to no specific basis for her belief that an oral agreement existed. She testified that she "just ... believed" an oral agreement existed because it was "just something that you feel [exists]." Suttie Tr., at 131-32. However, in light of the testimony of other CSAV employees and Schroder employees, and the lack of another explanation for the complex relationship that developed between the parties, the Court finds that CSAV has raised a genuine issue of material fact as to the existence of an oral agreement.

Schroder witnesses have also provided testimony which tends to corroborate the existence of an oral agreement. Tygier has stated that Schroder "agreed to manage" and did manage the foreign currency activities for CSAV and was "committed" to give CSAV a rate at or near the interbank rate. Tygier Aff., at ¶¶ 2, 3, 5. Further, Schroder's former Chairman Hamway has testified that he believed Schroder was providing CSAV with an international cash management service that was not provided to any other Schroder client. Hamway Tr., at 175-177.

That none of CSAV witnesses has first-hand information about the oral agreement, its terms, the individuals who negotiated it or when it was made, does not warrant a finding that there was no oral agreement as a matter of law. It simply indicates that the alleged agreement was in existence prior to the involvement of the present witnesses.

Based on the circumstances of the relationship between Schroder and CSAV, and the testimony of both Schroder and CSAV witnesses, the Court finds that a jury could conclude that the parties were operating pursuant to an overarching agreement which provided that CSAV remit all of its European currencies to Schroder and Schroder convert these currencies at preferential rates. [FN18]

FN18. Schroder argues that since the overarching agreement between CSAV and Schroder could only be deduced by looking at the "totality" of the parties' acts, their relationship, objectives, and "the manner in which the conversion program was operated," Pl.Mem., at 30-31, 34, it must be a contract "implied in fact." Baltimore & Ohio R.R. Co. v. United States, 261 U.S. 592, 597, 43 S.Ct. 425, 426, 67 L.Ed. 816 (1923) (an agreement implied in fact, "although not embodied in an express contract, is inferred, as a fact, from conduct of the parties showing, in the light of the surrounding circumstances, their tacit understanding"). Schroder argues, however, that in this case, it is improper for the Court to resort to implication. See Def.Reply Mem., at 29-31. The Court need not consider whether Schroder's contentions are correct because there is not sufficient evidence to establish that the oral agreement at issue must be a contract "implied in fact." Although it is clear that no express written contract exists, there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether an express oral agreement regarding the conversion of currency existed between the parties. See supra, 417-18, 428-29.

[18] *430 Schroder argues, however, that even if the Court finds that an oral agreement exists, the inability of CSAV's witnesses to articulate the terms of the alleged oral understanding make the contract unenforceable. According to Schroder, CSAV's claimed entitlement to numerous and inconsistent rates makes the contract too vague and indefinite to be enforceable. As support for its position, Schroder cites the various rates claimed by CSAV employees at different times. At a meeting with Schroder officials in June 1990, Grez claimed the company was contractually entitled to "the best possible exchange rate." Grez Tr., at 246-48. A month later, CSAV claimed that the contract entitled it to "market rates no less favorable to us than those which would have been available to us from other first class international banks." Grez Tr., at 267; Exhibit "20" to Def.App. In a letter to the Court dated March 29, 1991, CSAV's counsel claimed that Schroder agreed to give CSAV a rate "equal to or better than that given to other customers." To further emphasize the confusion over what the contract purportedly required, Schroder highlights the inconsistencies in Geis' testimony. At varying times, Geis testified that CSAV's contractual rate could be higher than some market rates, Geis Tr., at 380; that CSAV had previously received the "million dollar rate" from Schroder, Geis Tr., at 65-66; that the "best possible rate" was the same as the "million dollar rate," Geis Tr., at 378; that the "best possible rate" equalled the interbank rate, Geis Tr., at 310-11; that the "million dollar rate" differed from the interbank rate, Geis Tr., 237-38; that CSAV was entitled to the "spot rate," Geis Tr., at 93; that he understood the "spot rate" to mean the "million dollar rate," Geis Tr., at 93; and that he now understands "spot rate" to refer to any exchange rate in a transaction maturing within two days. Geis Tr., at 101, 341.

It is well established that [A] price term is not necessarily indefinite because the agreement fails to specify a dollar figure, or leaves fixing the amount for the future, or contains no computational formula. Where at the time of the agreement the parties have manifested their intent to be bound, a price term may be sufficiently definite if the amount can be determined objectively without the need for new expressions by the parties; a method for reducing uncertainty to certainty might, for example, be found within the agreement, or ascertained by reference to an extrinsic event, commercial practice, or trade usage.

Cobble Hill Nursing Home, Inc. v. Henry & Warren Corp., 74 N.Y.2d 475, 483, 548 N.Y.S.2d 920, 923, 548 N.E.2d 203, 206 (1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 816, 111 S.Ct. 58, 112 L.Ed.2d 33 (1990). Thus, if the parties "specify a practicable method by which the price can be determined by the court without any new expressions by the parties themselves," the agreement is enforceable. In re McManus, 83 A.D.2d 553, 554, 440 N.Y.S.2d 954, 957 (2d Dept.1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 855, 447 N.Y.S.2d 708, 432 N.E.2d 601 (1982).

In this case, CSAV has submitted sufficient evidence so that the Court could determine the price without any new expressions by the parties. Although there have been slight variations in the testimony as to what rate the agreement requires, a jury could determine that CSAV was simply entitled to the best rate Schroder gave, and thus the price can be determined by reviewing the interbank rates, fair profit margins and rates Schroder and other banks gave to preferred customers

b. Parol Evidence Rule

[19][20] As codified in Article 2 of New *431 York's Uniform Commercial Code, [FN19] the parol evidence rule states:

FN19. The provisions of Article 2 governing "transactions in goods," N.Y.U.C.C. § 2-102, also apply to foreign currency transactions where, as here, foreign currency is traded as a commodity. See Intershoe, Inc. v. Bankers Trust Co., 77

N.Y.2d 517, 521, 569 N.Y.S.2d 333, 336, 571 N.E.2d 641, 644 (1991) ("[t]here seems to be no question that the U.C.C. applies to foreign currency transaction"); accord N.Y.U.C.C. § 2-105 official comment 1 (U.C.C.'s definition of "goods" is intended to cover the sale of money when money is being treated as a commodity). However, Article 2 only applies to contracts for the sale of goods. It does not apply to contracts for services. See N.Y.U.C.C. § 2-102. Thus, CSAV contends that Article 2 does not apply because the contract at issue, the management agreement that governs all the individual conversions, is a contract for services. According to CSAV, it did not just order goods, rather, it entrusted Schroder with the management of its European currency conversion program. In order to determine whether a contract is for the sale of goods, or for services, a court must look at the "essence" or main objective of the agreement. If the provision of services or rendition of other performance predominates and is not merely incidental or collateral to the sale of goods, then the U.C.C. does not apply. Dynamics Corp. of America v. International Harvester Co., 429 F.Supp. 341, 346 (S.D.N.Y.1977); North American Leisure Corp. v. A & B Duplicators, Ltd., 468 F.2d 695, 697 (2d Cir.1972); Schenectady Steel Co., Inc. v. Bruno Trimpoli General Construction Co., Inc., 43 A.D.2d 234, 350 N.Y.S.2d 920, 922 (3d Dept.), aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 939, 359 N.Y.S.2d 560, 316 N.E.2d 875 (1974). In this case, the Court finds that even if CSAV is correct and it is the overarching management agreement that is at issue, the contract is in "essence" a contract for the sale of goods. Schroder rendered services only to facilitate sales and purchases of foreign currency, making the provision of services incidental to the contract(s) for the sale of goods. As CSAV's fact witness, Frederick Seeley testified, "Schroder bought and sold foreign exchange to CSAV" and "[t]hat's what happened" between the parties. Seeley Tr., at 35-36. Further, CSAV cites no evidence to suggest that Schroder rendered any management services for any purpose aside from facilitating the sales and purchases of currency. The record indicates that the sole reason Schroder provided CSAV with any services was to facilitate the transactions in goods. See Hamway Tr., at 176 (goal of envisioned cash management arrangement was for CSAV to "engage in F/X conversions and get dollars available to them on the most efficient, fast basis"); Hasselbach Tr., at 362 (nostro accounts used by CSAV were selected to "expedite the payment" on foreign exchange transactions so as to move "dollars quicker to the client's accounts"). Thus, the Court finds that Article 2 of the U.C.C. applies to the relationship between the parties. Since the parol evidence rule set forth in Article 2, however, is substantially similar to the common law parol evidence rule, this determination has implications primarily for Schroder's contention that a portion of CSAV's contract claim is barred by the statute of limitations. See infra, at 433-34.

Final Written Expression: Parol or Extrinsic Evidence Terms with respect to which the confirmatory memoranda of the parties agree or which are otherwise set forth in a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement with respect to such terms as are included therein may not be contradicted by evidence of any prior agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement....

N.Y. U.C.C. § 2-202. [FN20]

FN20. The statute includes two exceptions for evidence by which written terms "may be explained or supplemented," but CSAV has not contended that either exception applies to the present case.

[21] Schroder's principal defense to CSAV's breach of contract claim is that evidence of the oral "management" agreement is precluded by the parol evidence rule because, as a prior oral agreement, it cannot serve to vary or contradict the price terms of more than one thousand written contracts evinced by confirmation slips. Specifically, Schroder claims that each of the individual conversions must be viewed as an independent contract, separate and apart from the management agreement pursuant to which all conversions were effectuated. Viewed as such, Schroder argues that because it sent CSAV a written confirmation of each conversion, setting forth the actual numerical rate at which the particular conversion was made, the parol evidence rule precludes CSAV from contradicting those written terms and arguing that the excessive rates charged by Schroder breached the alleged oral agreement. For this proposition, Schroder relies almost exclusively on Intershoe, Inc. v. Bankers Trust Co., 77 N.Y.2d 517, 569 N.Y.S.2d 333, 571 N.E.2d 641 (1991), a 1991 New York Court of Appeals case which, according to Schroder, applied N.Y. U.C.C. § 2-202 to written foreign exchange confirmations similar to Schroder's.

In Intershoe, the plaintiff ("Intershoe") was a shoe importer that used foreign currencies in transacting its business. On March 13, 1985, Intershoe entered into a foreign currency transaction over the phone with defendant Bankers Trust Co. ("Bankers"), involving Italian lira. Following the telephone conversation, Bankers sent Intershoe a written confirmation which stated: "WE HAVE BOUGHT FROM YOU ITL 537,750,000" and "WE HAVE SOLD TO YOU USD 250,000.00." The confirmation also reflected the rate at which the transaction was completed, and stated that delivery of the lira was scheduled to take place some 7 and 1/2 months later. Intershoe's treasurer subsequently signed the confirmation and returned it to Bankers. Intershoe, 77 N.Y.2d at 520, 569 N.Y.S.2d at 334-35, 571 N.E.2d at 642-43.

Seven months later, as the value date arrived, Intershoe claimed that the confirmation it had signed mistakenly reflected that it was selling lira when the oral agreement had actually provided for Intershoe to purchase lira. Intershoe refused to pay the lira to Bankers, and Bankers was forced to purchase lira in the open market. Intershoe, 77 N.Y.2d at 520, 569 N.Y.S.2d at 335, 571 N.E.2d at 643.

The New York Court of Appeals held that the parol evidence rule prevented Intershoe from claiming that the deal was actually a purchase and not a sale of lira. The court reasoned that the essential terms of the transaction were plainly set forth in the confirmation slip which Intershoe had signed and returned, signifying its acceptance of those terms. Intershoe, 77 N.Y.2d at 522, 569 N.Y.S.2d at 336, 571 N.E.2d at 644. The court also stated that "it is difficult to imagine words which could more clearly demonstrate the final expression of the parties' agreement than 'WE HAVE BOUGHT FROM YOU ITL 537,750,000' and 'WE HAVE SOLD TO YOU USD 250,000.00.' " Id. Finally, the court concluded that:

Where as here, the form and content of the confirmation slip suggest nothing other than that it was intended to be the final expression of the parties' agreement as to the terms set forth and where there is no evidence indicating that this was not so, U.C.C. 2-202 bars parol evidence of contradictory terms.

Id.

Schroder contends that since the confirmations at issue in the current case contain the same key language, the Court should similarly conclude that they were intended to be final expressions of the parties' agreement, barring parol evidence of contradictory terms.

[22] The determination as to whether a writing was intended as a complete and exclusive statement of an agreement is a function of the court. See FMC Corp. v. Seal Tape Ltd., Inc., 90 Misc.2d 1043, 396 N.Y.S.2d 993, 996 (1977) (citing Pennsylvania Gas Co. v. Secord Brothers, Inc., 73 Misc.2d 1031, 343 N.Y.S.2d 256 (1973), aff'd, 44 A.D.2d 906, 357 N.Y.S.2d 702 (1974)). In making this determination, the court is to measure the completeness of the written instrument itself, rather than the subjective attitude of the parties. Phillip Brothers, etc. v. El Salto, S.A., 487 F.Supp. 91, 94 (S.D.N.Y.1980).

While it is true that Schroder's confirmations contained the same key language relied upon by the court in Intershoe, and Schroder has produced evidence to indicate that each written confirmation stated the terms of a contract for the purchase and sale of currency, see Grez Tr., at 66; Geis Tr., at 128; Suttie Tr., at 65, 67; Seeley Tr., at 44, the Court finds that in this case, the confirmations cannot be deemed an integration intended as a final expression of the parties' agreement.

In Intershoe, which involved a single transaction, it was undisputed that the written confirmation was intended to reflect the individual transaction to which the parties had orally agreed. Indeed, Intershoe had unequivocally signified its acceptance of the terms set forth in the confirmation by signing and returning it to Bankers. In this case, by contrast, the confirmations were not intended to reflect the terms of the alleged overriding agreement pursuant *433 to which in excess of one thousand transactions were conducted. Nor were they intended to reflect a single transaction to which both parties had orally agreed. Rather, each confirmation was intended to reflect the terms at which one of hundreds of currency conversions contemplated by the oral agreement had been completed. Grez Tr., at 195.

In addition, here there was no negotiation of the terms that were later set forth in the written confirmations, nor was there any prior agreement to the terms by CSAV. And whereas in Intershoe the parties specifically agreed to the terms that were confirmed in writing, in this case Schroder executed the currency conversions without prior input or agreement from CSAV, Geis Tr., at 154-58, 352-53; Grez Tr., at 48-49, 52-54; Suttie Tr., at 36-37, 43, 50-52, 98-99; Tygier Aff., at ¶¶ 3, 4, 7, and then merely informed CSAV of the details of the transaction via the written confirmations.

Furthermore, it is undisputed that in this case CSAV never signed or otherwise assented to the written confirmations sent by Schroder. It is true that Schroder's written confirmations stated that "[t]his confirmation is valid without signature," see Exhibit "D" to Def. Appendix, but the absence of CSAV's signature on the written confirmations further distinguishes this case from Intershoe and makes it impossible for the Court to determine, as a matter of law, that these confirmations were intended to be "the final expression of the parties' agreement as to the terms set forth." Intershoe, 77 N.Y.2d at 522, 569 N.Y.S.2d at 336, 571 N.E.2d at 644. [FN21]

FN21. It appears that Schroder also contends that CSAV's acceptance of the U.S. dollars and its failure to register any complaint about the rates are equivalent to CSAV's signature as they indicate assent to each transaction. CSAV's assent, however, is not the issue. The issue is whether the written confirmations were intended to be the final expression of the parties' agreement, and CSAV's actions do not indicate that these confirmations were so intended. Whereas, in Intershoe, the signature on the confirmation provided such evidence.

Finally, the circumstances of the parties' longstanding relationship indicates that the confirmations should not be considered the complete and exclusive statement of the parties' agreement. The fact that Schroder set up accounts in Europe to accept CSAV's European currencies, and CSAV remitted its currencies exclusively to Schroder establish that the agreement between the parties had much more to it than was reflected in the confirmations sent to CSAV. As such, the Court finds that evidence of the oral agreement is not barred by the parol evidence rule. [FN22]

FN22. Because the Court has determined, as a matter of law, that the confirmations were not intended to be the final expression of the parties' agreement, it is not necessary to address the secondary issue of whether evidence of the oral agreement would contradict the price terms set forth in writing on each confirmation.

Accordingly, the Court concludes that Schroder's motion for summary judgment on CSAV's breach of contract claim should be denied.

IV. Statute of Limitations

Because only CSAV's breach of contract claim remains, it is only necessary to discuss whether a portion of that claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations as Schroder contends.

[23][24] As a preliminary matter, the Court must determine when CSAV's action was commenced for purposes of the relevant statute of limitations. CSAV filed the instant action on November 9, 1990 and served Schroder on November 13, 1990. Since New York law provides that an action is commenced when the summons is served on the defendant, [FN23] CSAV's breach of contract claim was commenced on November 13, 1990. New York Civil Practice *434 and Rules ("CPLR") § 203(b)(1) (McKinney 1972).

FN23. When the claim asserted in federal court is on a right created by state law, provisions of the state statute of limitations as to how the action is commenced, rather than Rule 3 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, control in the federal court. See Ragan v. Merchants Transfer & Warehouse Company, 337 U.S. 530, 69 S.Ct. 1233, 93 L.Ed. 1520 (1949); 4 C. Wright & A. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure §§ 1056-56 (1987).

[25] Article 2 of the U.C.C. [FN24] provides that an action for breach of contract must be brought within four years of its accrual. N.Y. U.C.C. § 2-725(1). Thus, CSAV's breach of contract claim is barred, as a matter of law, insofar as it alleges any breach occurring prior to November 13, 1986.

FN24. As discussed above, the provisions of Article 2 apply to all aspects of the parties' relationship.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, Schroder's motion, pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, for an order granting it summary judgment is granted as to CSAV's common law fraud, RICO, and breach of fiduciary duty claims, and denied as to CSAV's breach of contract claim. However, CSAV's contract claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations to the extent that it alleges any breach occurring prior to November 13, 1986.

SO ORDERED.

785 F.Supp. 411, RICO Bus.Disp.Guide
7956, 17 UCC Rep.Serv.2d 1050

END OF DOCUMENT

17

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

CONGRESS FINANCIAL CORPORATION, Plaintiff,
v.
JOHN MORRELL & CO., Defendant.

No. 90 Civ. 7191 (RPP).

April 20, 1992.

Finance company for seller of corporate assets brought action against buyer of assets, and buyer filed counterclaim. On motions for summary judgment, the District Court, Robert P. Patterson, Jr., J., held that: (1) genuine issue of fact existed as to meaning of "no offset" provision in agreement between buyer and finance company; (2) buyer could not have justifiably relied on any misrepresentations by finance company; (3) there was no special relationship between finance company and buyer; and (4) implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing did not impose upon the finance company a duty to continue to extend financing to the seller regardless of the seller's collateral position.

Motion granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 2510
170Ak2510

Different interpretations by finance company and purchaser of corporate assets as to whether "no offset" provision in agreement precluded all offsets, including claims of the purchaser directly against the finance company, or only precluded offsets by the purchaser against the finance company based on claims against the seller raised a genuine issue of fact precluding summary judgment.

[2] Evidence 397(2)
157k397(2)

Parol evidence rule bars extrinsic evidence of prior or contemporaneous oral agreement when offered to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from the clear and unambiguous terms of a valid, integrated written agreement.

[3] Evidence 434(1)
157k434(1)

New York law recognizes limited exception to the parol evidence rule and actions to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud.

[4] Contracts 238(2)
95k238(2)

Under New York law, parol evidence offered to modify fully integrated agreement which stated that it could be modified only in writing was inadmissible.

[5] Evidence 397(1)
157k397(1)

Proffered oral agreement which was an absolute promise by finance company to continue financing seller of corporate assets after closing at a loan level comparable to preclosing level was inconsistent with written requirement that funds be advanced pursuant to a particular formula, and thus was inadmissible parol evidence.

[6] Fraud 3
184k3

Elements of actual fraud under New York law are false representation, scienter, materiality, expectation of reliance, justifiable reliance, and damage.

[7] Fraud 64(4)
184k64(4)

Whether discrepancies in loan collateral report of seller of corporate assets was material to buyer was to be determined by jury.

[8] Fraud 23
184k23

Because buyer of corporate assets had unrestricted access to the same sources of information about seller as did seller's finance company, buyer could not have justifiably relied on alleged misrepresentations about that information by the finance company.

[9] Fraud 16
184k16

Elements of fraudulent concealment under

New York law are a relationship between contracting parties that creates a duty to disclose, knowledge of material facts by party bound to make such disclosures, nondisclosure, scienter, reliance, and damage.

[10] Fraud 17
184k17

Under New York law, duty to disclose material facts arises when there is fiduciary relationship between the parties, or where one party possesses knowledge which is not readily available to the other and knows that the party is acting on the basis of mistaken knowledge.

[11] Fraud 17
184k17

In order to invoke the special facts doctrine so as to give rise to duty on the part of one party to inform the other of certain information, one party must have superior knowledge, that knowledge must not be readily available to the other party, and the party with the knowledge must know that the other party is acting upon the basis of mistaken knowledge.

[12] Fraud 16
184k16

Where buyer of corporate assets had unrestricted access to all of the seller's books and records, facilities, and personnel and the means seller's to utilize that access, it could not claim fraudulent concealment by seller's finance company.

[13] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

New York courts do not recognize causes of action for negligent misrepresentation in the absence of special relationship of trust or confidence between the parties.

[14] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Ordinary contractual relationship alone is insufficient to constitute special relationship which will support claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law, as special relationship implies a closer degree of trust, confidence, or reliance, such as a previous or continuing relationship between the parties.

[15] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Relationship between finance company and borrower, as to which purchaser of corporate assets from the borrower was, at most, a third-party beneficiary, did not give rise to special relationship between the finance company and the buyer so as to support claim for negligent misrepresentation.

[16] Contracts 194
95k194

Implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in agreement between finance company and purchaser of corporate assets was not a promise by the finance company to continue to make loans to the seller irrespective of its collateral position.

*460 Otterbourg, Steindler, Houston & Rosen, P.C. by Bernard Beitel, Richard Haddad, New York City, for plaintiff.

Townley & Updike by Jerome P. Coleman, Zvi N. Raskin, Robert A. Isler, New York City, for defendant.

*461 OPINION AND ORDER

ROBERT P. PATTERSON, JR., District Judge.

This is an action for damages alleging breach of contract. Having completed discovery, Plaintiff moves pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for summary judgment on its first claim. For the reasons set forth below, Plaintiff's motion is granted.

BACKGROUND

I. INTRODUCTION

The key figures in this action are Plaintiff Congress Financial Corporation ("Congress"), a factoring and financing company; Defendant John Morrell & Co. ("Morrell"), a meat packer; and non-party Dinner Bell Foods, Inc. ("Dinner Bell"), [FN1] a meat packer with principal operations in Defiance and Troy, Ohio.

FN1. On October 3, 1990 Dinner Bell changed its name to B.J. Packing, Inc.

In June 1988, a corporation controlled by Joshua Leibovitz, with financial support from Citicorp Venture Capital, Ltd. ("Citicorp"), acquired control of Dinner Bell in a leveraged buy-out. Institutional financing for Dinner Bell was provided by a term loan from Glenfed Financial Corporation ("Glenfed") and by a three year revolving credit facility supplied by Congress. Glenfed's term loan was secured by a first lien on Dinner Bell's fixed assets, including its equipment, machinery, real estate, patents, and trademarks. Congress' revolving credit facility was secured by a first lien on Dinner Bell's accounts receivable, inventory, work in process, and other miscellaneous assets. Congress and Glenfed each received a junior lien on the collateral pledged by Dinner Bell to the other.

The Congress revolving credit facility commenced on June 3, 1988 with a "credit line," or upward limit, set at $15 million. [FN2] The actual funding available to Dinner Bell at any given time was calculated by a formula which factored in certain collateral on hand at Dinner Bell (the "Advance Formula"). The Advance Formula permitted loans to Dinner Bell equal to the sum of 85% of its eligible accounts receivable, 65% of its eligible product inventory, and 30% of its eligible supplies. To assist Congress in its calculation of funds available under the Advance Formula, Dinner Bell provided Congress with daily "Loan Collateral Reports," which set forth Dinner Bell's outstanding loan balance, its accounts receivable, its product inventory, and its supplies inventory. Because these amounts varied from day to day, Dinner Bell's financing eligibility varied on a daily basis. [FN3] The Advance Formula remained in effect and unchanged until Dinner Bell filed for bankruptcy on October 17, 1990.

FN2. The credit line was later reduced to $12 million.

FN3. For example, in the month of September 1990, the advances ranged from a high of $855,247.29 on September 14 to a low of $75,704.30 on September 27.

II. THE DINNER BELL-MORRELL ACQUISITION

After the leveraged buy-out, Dinner Bell's business declined substantially, and financial difficulties resulted. In the Spring of 1990, Dinner Bell began seeking a purchaser for certain of its assets, and Citicorp, Dinner Bell, and Morrell began negotiations toward such a sale. Pursuant to those negotiations, on July 25, 1990, Morrell issued Dinner Bell a "Letter of Intent" for the purchase of Dinner Bell's plant in Wilson, North Carolina and all of the intellectual property used in connection with Dinner Bell's business. On August 1, 1990, a team of Morrell representatives commenced an on-site review of Dinner Bell's business and operations. Although this review was denominated in a Morrell document as "Due Diligence," [FN4] Morrell disputes *462 whether this review was sufficiently thorough to constitute "due diligence."

FN4. An August 1, 1990 Morrell memorandum setting forth the information which Morrell wanted to gather during its review of Dinner Bell is entitled "Dinner Bell Due Diligence." Reply Affidavit of Edwin Stern, sworn to on January 22, 1992 ("Stern Rep. Aff.") Exh. B.

The transaction formally closed on October 2, 1990, at which time the following agreements were signed by Dinner Bell, Morrell, and Congress.

A. Asset Acquisition Agreement

Dinner Bell and Morrell entered into an "Asset Acquisition Agreement" wherein Morrell purchased Dinner Bell's Wilson, North Carolina plant, all of the intellectual property used in connection with Dinner Bell's business, and certain other assets. The purchase price consisted of $3,990,000 in cash to be delivered on closing; $500,000 to be paid on the first anniversary of the closing date, less any amounts owing from Dinner Bell to Morrell resulting from Dinner Bell's breach of any agreement with Morrell; and a five cent ($.05) per pound royalty on all processed meat sales subsequently made by Morrell under the Dinner Bell name up to a maximum of $12 million.

B. Co-Pack Agreements

Morrell and Dinner Bell entered into two separate "Co-Pack Agreements" involving the post-closing purchase by Morrell of Dinner Bell products. The Co-Pack Agreements were to remain in effect while Morrell transferred Dinner Bell's packing operations to its own plants. One Co-Pack agreement was to terminate in 60 days; the other was to remain in effect indefinitely, but could be terminated with notice after 120 days.

C. Congress/Morrell Agreement

Congress, Dinner Bell, and Morrell entered into the "Congress/Morrell Agreement." In consideration for the release by Congress of its security interests in and liens upon the Dinner Bell intellectual property and related assets sold by Dinner Bell to Morrell, Morrell acknowledged that Congress had a perfected security interest in and liens upon Dinner Bell's collateral for the revolving credit facility, including Dinner Bell's accounts receivable and inventory. Morrell agreed, inter alia, to pay to Congress within four days of receipt all invoices rendered by Dinner Bell for products purchased, received, and re-sold by Morrell, without offset, claim, counterclaim, or deduction.

D. Financing Amendment

Congress and Dinner Bell also signed a letter agreement entitled "Amendment to and Termination of Financing Agreements" (the "Financing Amendment") reflecting the terms pursuant to which Congress would continue to extend financing to Dinner Bell until November 30, 1990.

III. EVENTS SURROUNDING THE PARTIES' CLAIMS

On September 29, 1990, just prior to the closing, Dinner Bell conducted its customary fiscal year-end (September 30) inventory at its two Ohio plants. The memorandum setting forth the procedures to be followed during the inventory included procedures specifically requested by Morrell. Dinner Bell representatives did the actual inventory count, and Dinner Bell's accountants, Ernst & Young, were present observing. Both Congress and Morrell also sent representatives to observe the inventory. Morrell sent a four person team headed by its Assistant Corporate Controller to the Defiance plant. A second Morrell team headed by Morrell's Cost Controller went to the Troy plant. Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶¶ 35-36. Because no Congress personnel were available, Congress engaged Richard J. Kaminski, an accountant and former employee of a Congress subsidiary, as its representative. Mr. Kaminski was present at the Defiance plant on September 29, and he went to the Troy plant the following day. Affidavit of Edwin E. Stern, sworn to on November 14, 1991 ("Stern Aff."), ¶ 19; Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶ 36.

On Monday, October 1, 1990, Mr. Kaminski returned to the Defiance plant to meet with Dinner Bell's controller, Bob Kenhast, to familiarize himself with the pricing information that would be reflected in the year-end inventory report to be finalized by Dinner Bell a few weeks after the scheduled closing on October 2, 1990. While waiting to see Mr. Kenhast, Mr. Kaminski *463 proceeded to do a "rough reconciliation" of a prior month's inventory to make himself familiar with the records. For this purpose, Dinner Bell provided him with its internal August month-end priced physical inventory report and the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report which had been sent to Congress. Deposition of Richard Kaminski of August 13, 1991 ("Kaminski Dep.") at 104-5. He also received Dinner Bell's unaudited September 1, 1990 financial statement, which Dinner Bell had sent to Morrell on September 19, 1990. Stern Aff. ¶ 20; Affidavit of Bernard Beitel, sworn to on November 14, 1991, Exh. 8.

Mr. Kaminski was unable to reconcile his calculation of "priced" inventory as stated on the internal inventory report with the Loan Collateral Report, finding that the figure on the Loan Collateral Report exceeded that on the internal inventory report by $501,000. Kaminski Dep. at 108.

That afternoon, Mr. Kaminski called Edwin Stern, a Senior Vice President of Congress, related that he was unable to reconcile the inventory as priced, and reported that he had asked a Dinner Bell employee, Dave Beck, for a reconciliation. Mr. Kaminski testified that he did not state to Mr. Stern that Dinner Bell had overstated its inventory on the Loan Collateral Report, but rather, "I told him I had inability to reconcile these numbers and we both agreed to give it to Dave Beck to have him reconcile it by the time we got back or I got back." Kaminski Dep. at 108-9.

Mr. Stern states that after speaking with Mr. Kaminski, he placed a telephone call to Richard Mayberry of Citicorp and advised him of Mr. Kaminski's inability to reconcile the August month-end reports. Stern Aff. With Mr. Stern still on the telephone, Mr. Mayberry placed a telephone call to Stan Frieze, a "crisis manager" who was then running Dinner Bell's operations and who was in Ohio for the closing. Mr. Mayberry instructed Mr. Frieze to follow up on the matter and to provide the reconciliation to Congress. Mr. Stern states that he "did not reach any conclusion about the quantity of the inventory on October 1, 1990 because of the question raised by Kaminski." Stern Rep. Aff. ¶¶ 19-23.

Mr. Frieze testified that Mr. Stern did not tell him that there were overstatements of inventory by Dinner Bell on the Loan Collateral Reports, but only that an auditor had noticed a discrepancy between the two reports. He testified that the matter was referred to the Dinner Bell controller to resolve the discrepancy. Nowhere in his deposition does Mr. Frieze indicate that prior to the closing either he or anyone from Morrell concluded that Dinner Bell had been overstating its inventory on the Loan

Collateral Reports. Deposition of Stan Frieze of April 22, 1991 ("Frieze Dep.") at 69-71.

On October 1, 1990, Congress advanced Dinner Bell $528,000, and on October 2, 1990, the day of the closing, it advanced Dinner Bell $101,000 based on the Loan Collateral Reports sent on those days. On October 3, 1990, the day after the closing, Mr. Frieze sent a memo to Dinner Bell's owners reporting Dinner Bell's discovery that for over a year its former chief financial officer had been systematically overstating Dinner Bell's inventory on the Loan Collateral Reports sent to Congress. Affidavit of Jerome Coleman, sworn to on January 15, 1992, Exh. 6. This information was communicated to Congress and Morrell that same day. When Dinner Bell adjusted the inventory level reported on the Loan Collateral Reports to account for this overstatement, the level of financing for which Dinner Bell was eligible under the Advance Formula was reduced substantially. Dinner Bell received only about $18,000 from Congress on the day after the closing. Congress did not, however, modify the Advance Formula, and it continued to advance funds to Dinner Bell. For example, on October 10, 1990, Congress advanced some $100,000 to Dinner Bell.

Morrell paid Dinner Bell $3,900,000 on the day of the closing. That money was used by Dinner Bell as follows: $2,500,000 was delivered to Glenfed; approximately $1.1 million was used to pay selected past due accounts payable and to repay selected other debts; the balance of approximately *464 $400,000 was to be used by Dinner Bell as working capital, but was withdrawn by Chemical Bank to cover overdrafts on Dinner Bell's checking account. Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶ 42. It is not disputed that Congress was not to receive, and did not receive, any portion of the Morrell payments at the closing. Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶ 41.

Despite this influx of cash, as a result of its deteriorated financial condition Dinner Bell was unable to continue to purchase raw materials needed for production. On October 17, 1990, Dinner Bell declared bankruptcy, ceased operations, and stopped performing its Co-Pack Agreements with Morrell.

Before declaring bankruptcy, however, Dinner Bell had processed its remaining inventory and delivered finished products to its former customers for the account of Morrell. The 34 invoices for these products totalled $2,706,854.36, and Dinner Bell billed Morrell for this amount. Pursuant to the revolving credit facility and the Congress/Morrell Agreement, Dinner Bell assigned the invoices to Congress. Under the Congress/Morrell Agreement, payment was due to Congress from Morrell four days after receipt of the invoices.

On October 5, 1990, Morrell Senior Vice President Mark Littman notified Mr. Stern that Morrell had verified receipt of $450,428.38 in products from Dinner Bell and was wire transferring that amount to Congress. This represented the amount due from one invoice. During the next several days, Mr. Stern spoke to Mr. Littman and inquired about further payments due from Morrell. Mr. Littman responded that Morrell had not yet verified receipt of additional products. By October 15, 1990, when Congress had not received any further payments from Morrell, and Mr. Stern was unable to ascertain from Morrell when payment of the balance was forthcoming, Congress served a demand for payment on Morrell. On October 16, 1990, Morrell responded that it was refusing to pay any of the other invoices. Congress instituted this action immediately thereafter. Whether Morrell continued to receive the benefit and profits of deliveries of Dinner Bell products to Morrell customers, but failed to disclose to Congress its intent not to pay for those products is not established.

Congress charges that after applying certain credits, there remains a balance due from Morrell of $1,876,809.31. Congress now moves for summary judgment against Morrell with respect to this claim. [FN5] Morrell offers no evidence that this balance is incorrect, but instead maintains that it has valid offsets and counterclaims against Congress.

FN5. In its second cause of action, Congress charged that Morrell was required to and failed to purchase certain additional inventory valued at over $400,000. Congress does not move for summary judgment with respect to this claim.

IV. MORRELL'S DEFENSES AND COUNTERCLAIMS

In its answer, Morrell alleged as affirmative defenses and counterclaims: that prior to the closing, and at least once in September 1990, Congress conducted an examination of Dinner Bell's inventory; that Congress learned that Dinner Bell's inventory was less than Dinner Bell had represented to Morrell; that Congress did not disclose to Morrell that Dinner Bell had overstated its inventory to Morrell; that this failure to disclose caused Morrell to enter into a transaction it would not have entered into had it known the inventory was overstated; and that this failure to disclose constituted negligence, fraud, or breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the Congress/Morrell Agreement.

Congress moved for summary judgment with respect to the defenses and counterclaims asserted in Morrell's answer. Morrell's answering papers on this motion provide no support for essential elements of the claims asserted in its answer: that Congress conducted an examination of Dinner Bell's inventory, that Congress learned that Dinner Bell's inventory was less than Dinner Bell had represented to Morrell, and that Dinner Bell's inventory was in fact overstated in reports to Morrell. The Dinner Bell-Morrell transaction did not involve the purchase of Dinner Bell's inventory by *465 Morrell, and Thomas Davis, a Morrell Senior Vice President, states that Morrell was "not particularly interested in the [Dinner Bell] inventory levels." Deposition of Thomas Davis of May 16, 1991 ("Davis Dep.") at 22.

In its motion papers, however, Morrell sets forth a different theory from that asserted in its answer. [FN6] Morrell maintains that Congress' discovery of the discrepancy in the priced inventory reported in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report was material information in light of an alleged oral agreement between Congress and Morrell that Congress' level of financing of Dinner Bell after the closing would be comparable to its level prior to the closing. Def. Br. at 5-7. Morrell asserts that the continued financing of Dinner Bell by Congress was essential to ensure that Dinner Bell could continue its operations and comply with the terms of the Dinner Bell-Morrell Co-Pack Agreements. Mr. Davis states that:

FN6. For purposes of this motion, the Court deems Morrell's answer amended to conform with the allegations set forth in connection with this motion.

A crucial element in the success of the co-pack agreements was Congress' continued financing of Dinner Bell so as to allow Dinner Bell to have sufficient working capital to purchase raw materials for production and sale.

While Congress did not initially not want to continue providing such financing to Dinner Bell, I-and other Morrell personnel-informed Congress and Dinner Bell on several occasions that Morrell would not continue to pursue the deal if Congress' financing of Dinner Bell did not remain intact after the closing on October 2, 1990. These discussions were between Mark Littman, Henry Thoman and me, for Morrell, and Edwin Stern and Robert Miller for Congress, and Stanley Frieze, for Dinner Bell.

* * * * *

After intense negotiations on this issue of continued financing by Congress, Congress relented and agreed to provide the continued financing of the type and amounts regularly advanced in order to allow the co-pack agreement to succeed.

Affidavit of Thomas Davis, sworn to on January 13, 1992 ("Davis Aff.") ¶¶ 8-11 (emphasis added). Morrell argues that it would never have executed the closing agreements if Congress' financing was not to be maintained at a level sufficient to allow Dinner Bell to continue to operate throughout the duration of the Co-Pack Agreements. [FN7] Def. Br. at 7. Morrell also states that had it been aware of the inventory overstatement or discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report, it would not have gone ahead with the transaction. Davis Aff. ¶ 27; Affidavit of Mark Littman, sworn to on January 13, 1992 ("Littman Aff."), ¶ 10.

FN7. This would mean that Congress was effectively guaranteeing the Co-Pack arrangement.

In support of Morrell's claims, Mr. Davis asserts that during the October 1, 1990 Stern-Mayberry-Frieze telephone conference, it was decided not to disclose the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report to Morrell. Davis Aff., ¶¶ 25-26. Mr. Davis was not present during that conversation, and none of the affidavits or exhibits submitted provides any support for his conclusory statement.

Morrell also supplied transcripts of two telephone conversations which took place on October 3, 1990, the day after the closing, one between Mr. Littman and Mr. Stern, and the other between Mr. Littman and Mr. Leibovitz of Dinner Bell. Nowhere in those conversations do Mr. Stern or Mr. Leibovitz indicate that Congress had knowledge prior to the closing that the priced inventory reported on the Loan Collateral Reports was in fact overstated by Dinner Bell. As reflected in those conversations, Congress' concern prior to the closing appears to have been whether the possibility that Dinner Bell had overpriced its product inventory on the Loan Collateral Reports meant that there were insufficient secured assets at Dinner Bell for Congress *466 to enter into the extension of credit reflected in the Financing Amendment. [FN8]

FN8. The affidavits also reflect that in August 1990, Congress questioned Dinner Bell's chief financial officer about a product inventory item on the Loan Collateral Reports termed "EST. NOT TAKEN." This item, valued at about $500,000, represented inventory in transit to Dinner Bell. When Congress was unable to verify those amounts, it told Dinner Bell that inventory in transit was no longer eligible as loan collateral. Accordingly, the parties agreed to reduce Dinner Bell's eligible product inventory at a rate of $20,000 per day. By October 2, 1990, the "EST. NOT TAKEN" item had been reduced to $60,000. Stern Rep. Aff. ¶ 18. With regard to this inventory adjustment, Mr. Littman states, "Congress was aware of an inventory discrepancy at least as early as August, 1990." Littman Aff. ¶ 8. There is, however, no basis in the record for this assertion. The "inventory discrepancy" upon which Morrell bases its affirmative defenses and counterclaims is the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report, a matter different from and unrelated to the August inventory adjustment. There is no evidence that information regarding the August inventory adjustment was concealed from Morrell. Not revealed, however, is the extent to which this adjustment accounted for the August 31, 1990 discrepancy between Dinner Bell's internal inventory report and its Loan Collateral Report.

Congress denies having entered into any agreement with Morrell, oral or otherwise, regarding the continued financing of Dinner Bell. Stern Rep. Aff. ¶ 7. The Congress/Morrell Agreement, which is a fully integrated document, [FN9] contained no provision that Congress would continue to finance Dinner Bell after the closing at a loan level comparable to the pre-closing level. Furthermore, it is undisputed that at no time did Congress breach the terms of the revolving credit facility or the Financing Amendment with Dinner Bell.

FN9. Paragraph 6 of the Congress/Morrell Agreement provides: This Agreement sets forth the entire agreement of the parties hereto with respect to the subject matter hereof. Neither this Agreement nor any term hereof may be changed, modified, altered, waived, discharged or terminated except by written instrument executed by the party to be charged. Stern Aff., Exh. E.

Morrell argues that Congress did not disclose the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report because it was eager to have Morrell enter into the various arrangements, because "[w]ith Morrell's deep pocket now involved, Congress could be sure its loans to Dinner Bell ... would be fully repaid by Morrell." Def. Mem. at 3. As a preliminary matter, the Court notes that there is no evidence to support this position and that Morrell's premise is illogical. Congress was an asset-based lender, and thus secured by its liens on Dinner Bell's accounts receivable and inventory. There has been no showing that Congress benefitted in any way from the closing of the Dinner Bell-Morrell transaction, and Congress obtained no payments from Dinner Bell or Morrell at the October 2, 1990 closing.

DISCUSSION

I. STANDARD FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

"Summary judgment is appropriate when, after drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the party against whom summary judgment is sought, no reasonable trier of fact could find in favor of the non-moving party." Horn & Hardart Co. v. Pillsbury Co., 888 F.2d 8, 10 (2d Cir.1989). The substantive law governing the case [FN10] will identify the facts that are material, and "[o]nly disputes of fact that might affect the outcome of the suit under governing law will properly preclude entry of summary judgment ..." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2510, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986).

FN10. The parties agree that the substantive issues in this case are governed by New York law.

The movant for summary judgment "always bears the initial responsibility of informing the district court of the basis for the motion" and identifying which materials "demonstrate the absence of a genuine issues of material fact." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 2553, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986). Once this showing has been made, the burden then shifts to the non-movant who "must set forth facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Anderson, 477 U.S. at *467 250, 106 S.Ct. at 2511. "Conclusory allegations will not suffice to create genuine issues of material fact. There must be more than a scintilla of evidence and more than some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts." Delaware & Hudson Ry. v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 902 F.2d 174, 178 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 928, 111 S.Ct. 2041, 114 L.Ed.2d 125 (1990) (citations omitted).

II. CONGRESS' CLAIM FOR $1,876,809.31

In support of its motion for summary judgment, Congress presents a detailed accounting of the goods received by Morrell and its customers and the credits and adjustments which have been applied, leaving a balance due of $1,876,809.31. Stern Aff. ¶¶ 18-20. Morrell has not presented any affidavit, deposition or other evidence showing that the products were not received, that the balance claimed by Congress has been paid, or that Congress' accounting is inaccurate. Rather, in its Statement pursuant to Local Rule 3(g), counsel for Morrell provides bare denials, unsupported on this motion by any affidavit or other evidence. Such conclusory allegations do not create a genuine issue of fact precluding summary judgment. Delaware & Hudson Ry., 902 F.2d at 178. Congress' motion for summary judgment must therefore be granted unless Morrell has a valid affirmative defense or counterclaim offsetting or invalidating Congress' claim.

III. "NO OFFSET" PROVISIONS

Congress argues that Morrell is barred from asserting any counterclaims or defenses against Congress because of the "no offset" provisions in the Congress/Morrell Agreement. "No offset" provisions appear in the agreement several times. First, a specific clause labeled "No Offset" provides, in part:

(a) Except as expressly permitted hereunder, Morrell agrees that in no event shall Morrell or any person claiming by, through, or under Morrell, assert against Congress, as the assignee of, or secured party in respect of, the present and future Accounts of Dinner Bell arising from sales to Morrell or other sums payable by Morrell to Dinner Bell under the Co-Pack Agreements, any offset, claim, counterclaim or deduction which Morrell may have against Dinner Bell for any amounts due to Morrell from Dinner

Bell for any reason, including, but not limited to amounts due Morrell pursuant to the Purchase Agreement or the Co-Pack Agreements.

Stern Aff., Exh. E, ¶ 2(a) (emphasis added). The phrase "without offset, claim, counterclaim or deduction" occurs several other times in the agreement without the modifying language "against Dinner Bell." Stern Aff., Exh. E., ¶ 3(a), 3(c).

[1] Congress argues that the "no offset" provisions were intended to bar Morrell from asserting against Congress any and all offsets whatsoever. By contrast, one of Morrell's negotiators of the contract maintains that he understood all the "no offset" provisions were intended to bar Morrell only from asserting against Congress those offsets which Morrell might have against Dinner Bell. Littman Aff. ¶ 4. Morrell asserts that because its defenses and counterclaims allege wrongdoing by Congress itself, not by Dinner Bell, these claims may be asserted despite the "no-offset" provisions.

The different interpretations asserted by Congress and Morrell raise a genuine issue of fact as to whether Morrell is barred by the "no-offset" provisions from asserting offsets or counterclaims arising from Congress' acts. Accordingly, the "no-offset" provisions are not a ground for disposing of Morrell's defenses and counterclaims, and the Court will address those defenses and counterclaims in turn.

IV. FRAUD

The Court reads Morrell's motion papers to set forth two theories of fraud different from the position taken in its answer. The first theory is that Congress' misrepresentation or failure to disclose its knowledge of the discrepancy in Dinner Bell's August *468 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report constituted fraud in light of the alleged oral agreement by Congress to continue financing Dinner Bell after the closing at a loan level comparable to the pre-closing level. The second theory is that, notwithstanding the alleged oral agreement, Congress' misrepresentation or failure to disclose its knowledge of the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report was fraudulent in light of the written agreements executed at the closing, and that Morrell would not have entered into the transaction had it known of the discrepancy. The two theories are addressed separately below.

A. Fraud Based on the Oral Agreement

Morrell argues that Congress' misrepresentation or omission regarding its knowledge of the discrepancy in the Loan Collateral Report was fraudulent when considered in light of the alleged oral agreement by Congress to continue financing Dinner Bell after the closing at a loan level comparable to the pre-closing level. Congress denies having made any agreement with Morrell regarding the financing of Dinner Bell, and argues that because the parol evidence rule bars proof of the alleged oral agreement, Morrell cannot support its claim of fraud.

[2] The parol evidence rule bars extrinsic evidence of a prior or contemporaneous oral agreement when offered to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from the clear and unambiguous terms of a valid, integrated written instrument. See, e.g., Hicks v. Bush, 10 N.Y.2d 488, 225 N.Y.S.2d 34, 180 N.E.2d 425 (1962); Wallace Steel, Inc. v. Ingersoll-Rand Co., 739 F.2d 112, 115 (2d Cir.1984). The Congress/Morrell Agreement is a valid, integrated, written agreement, and falls within the ambit of the rule. Morrell argues, however, that the parol evidence rule does not bar proof of the oral agreement because (1) evidence of the oral agreement is offered in connection with a claim of fraud, and (2) the written agreements between the parties are not contradicted by the alleged oral agreement.

[3][4] New York law recognizes a limited exception to the parol evidence rule in actions to "rescind a contract on the ground of fraud." Sabo v. Delman, 3 N.Y.2d 155, 164 N.Y.S.2d 714, 717, 143 N.E.2d 906, 908 (1957) (emphasis in original). Parol evidence will only be admitted to show fraud where it indicates "the intention of the parties that the entire contract was to be a nullity ..." Bersani v. General Accident Fire & Life Assur. Corp., 36 N.Y.2d 457, 369 N.Y.S.2d 108, 112, 330 N.E.2d 68, 71 (1975). Here, where the parol evidence is offered to modify a fully integrated agreement, one which states explicitly that it can be modified only in writing, that evidence will not be permitted. See Hong Kong Deposit and Guaranty Co., Ltd. v. Hibdon, 611 F.Supp. 224, 229 (S.D.N.Y.1985) (in fraud claim where parol evidence would not destroy the contract, but only modify certain provisions, no exception to parol evidence rule applies). If Morrell were permitted to offer evidence of the oral agreement, the parol evidence rule would be rendered void. Any defendant in a claim for breach of contract could avoid summary judgment merely by alleging fraud in connection with an oral agreement.

[5] Morrell also claims that the parol evidence rule does not apply because the oral agreement does not contradict the terms of the written agreements between the parties. As alleged by Morrell, the oral agreement was an absolute promise by Congress to continue financing Dinner Bell after the closing at a loan level comparable to the pre-closing level. Thus, the oral agreement required Congress to provide Dinner Bell with a certain level of financing irrespective of Dinner Bell's collateral position and regardless of its loan eligibility under the Advance Formula. That agreement is plainly inconsistent with the requirement that funds be advanced pursuant to the Advance Formula, a requirement embodied in the Congress-Dinner Bell revolving credit facility and the Financing Amendment, which are referenced in the Congress/Morrell Agreement. Stern Aff., Exh. E. Furthermore, an agreement by Congress to make loans regardless of Dinner Bell's available collateral would contravene *469 ordinary and prudent business practice and would effectively make Congress a guarantor of Dinner Bell's performance under the Co-Pack Agreements. No reasonable trier of fact could accept that Congress entered into such an agreement, or that Morrell would not have required such an agreement to be in writing.

Accordingly, the parol evidence rule bars proof of the alleged oral agreement, and Morrell's claim of fraud in connection with that oral agreement must fail.

B. Fraud Based on the Closing Agreements

Morrell's second theory of fraud appears to be that notwithstanding any oral agreement, Congress' failure to disclose the inventory report discrepancy was fraud in light of the written agreements executed at the closing. The essence of this theory, which is gleaned from Morrell's motion papers and the affidavits of Mr. Davis and Mr. Littman, is that if the four closing agreements are read together as a single integrated transaction, then Morrell relied on Congress's agreement in the Financing Amendment to continue to make financing available to Dinner Bell until November 30, 1990 (subject to the same general terms and conditions which existed prior to the closing). Thus, after the closing, Dinner Bell's eligibility for financing would be determined by reference to the Advance Formula, which in turn depended in part on the level of the priced inventory as reported in the Loan Collateral Reports. The possibility that the priced inventory in the Loan Collateral Reports was overstated meant the possibility of a reduced level of financing to Dinner Bell and reduced cash flow. Dinner Bell had long been in financial difficulty, and reduced cash flow would impact on its ability to obtain supplies from creditors, to continue production, and to comply with its obligations to Morrell under the Co-Pack Agreements. Success of the Co-Pack Agreements was an element of the transaction which was important to Morrell. Thus, Morrell argues that Congress's knowledge of a discrepancy in the inventory reported on the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report was material information which would have effected its decision to enter into the transaction. Morrell charges that Congress's misstatement of or failure to disclose that information constitutes actionable fraud.

Fraud by affirmative misrepresentation, or actual fraud, and fraud by omission, or fraudulent concealment, are different causes of action and demand different elements of proof under New York law. Accordingly, Morrell's actual fraud claim and its fraudulent concealment claim are addressed separately.

1. Actual Fraud

[6] The elements of actual fraud under New York law are a false representation, scienter, materiality, expectation of reliance, justifiable reliance, and damage. Morse Diesel, Inc. v. Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland, 715 F.Supp. 578, 585 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Accord Cumberland Oil Corp. v. Thropp, 791 F.2d 1037, 1044 (2d Cir.), cert. denied 479 U.S. 950, 107 S.Ct. 436, 93 L.Ed.2d 385 (1986). The failure of any single element will void the claim. Conan Properties, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc., 712 F.Supp. 353, 366-67 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Assuming arguendo that Congress made an affirmative representation to Morrell and that Morrell was damaged thereby, the other elements of actual fraud must be explored.

a. Scienter

Fraud requires proof of "scienter," which means "knowledge of the falsity of a representation or knowing that one does not have a basis for asserting the truth of a representation with the intention that another party rely on the representation." In re Lilco Secur. Litigation, 625 F.Supp. 1500, 1504 (E.D.N.Y.1986). None of the witnesses from Dinner Bell, Morrell, or Congress give testimony showing that Congress had actual knowledge prior to the closing that Dinner Bell had overstated or overvalued its inventory on the Loan Collateral Reports. While Morrell charges that Congress did have actual knowledge, it has failed to adduce any direct or circumstantial evidence tending to support such a *470 conclusion. Nevertheless, the Court is reluctant to dismiss Morrell's claim based on an issue which depends largely on the credibility of Congress' witnesses since the issue relates to the state-of-mind of those witnesses. Accordingly, Morrell barely raises an issue of fact regarding scienter, and Morrell's fraud claim will not be dismissed on this basis.

b. Materiality

[7] The basic test of materiality is whether "a reasonable man would attach importance [to the fact misrepresented] in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question." List v. Fashion Park, Inc., 340 F.2d 457, 462 (2d Cir.), cert. denied 382 U.S. 811, 86 S.Ct. 23, 15 L.Ed.2d 60 (1965). Morrell asserts that it would not have entered into the transaction had it known of the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report.

Congress maintains that it had no reason to believe that its discovery of a possible discrepancy in the priced inventory reported on the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report was material information to Morrell. The closing did not involve the purchase by Morrell of Dinner Bell's inventory, and Mr. Davis admits that Morrell was "not particularly interested in the inventory levels." Davis Dep. at 22. On October 1, 1990, the day Mr. Kaminski raised the discrepancy, that discrepancy was believed to be an August discrepancy of $501,000. During August and September 1990, Dinner Bell and Congress had been writing down inventory of approximately the same amount, apparently without any impact on Dinner Bell's continued viability. [FN11] Furthermore, at that time Dinner Bell had accounts receivable of some $4.5 million to $5 million and inventory reported at over $3 million. Deposition of Edwin Stern of August 8, 1991 at 37. Thus, it seems unlikely that any rational trier of fact could find that the discovery of a possible discrepancy of $501,000 in priced inventory as reported on a month-old Loan Collateral Report was material information to Morrell on the day prior to the closing. Nevertheless, whether such a discrepancy was material to Morrell should be determined by a jury after hearing all of the evidence.

FN11. See note 8, supra.

c. Expectation of Reliance

The transaction at issue here involved the sale of certain assets by Dinner Bell to Morrell. Congress participated in the transaction in two limited ways. First, in the Congress/Morrell Agreement, Congress released its liens on certain assets which were being conveyed by Dinner Bell to Morrell pursuant to the Asset Acquisition Agreement. Second, in the Financing Amendment, Congress agreed with Dinner Bell to extend its asset based financing until November 30, 1990. In light of the role that Congress played, the contention that Congress expected Morrell to rely on it to advise Morrell about any possible problems with Dinner Bell's inventory level is untenable. If Morrell had wanted affirmative representations regarding Dinner Bell's inventory level, which apparently it did not, the only reasonable approach would have been for Morrell to rely on Dinner Bell to provide such representations. No such representations were required of Dinner Bell in the closing agreements. Nor is there anything in those agreements indicating Congress had reason to believe that Morrell was relying on it to provide that information.

The issue of expectation of reliance highlights the implausibility of Morrell's fraud claim. Nevertheless, the Court is reluctant to dismiss Morrell's fraud claim on this failure of proof.

d. Justifiable Reliance

[8] Because Morrell had unrestricted access to the same sources of information about Dinner Bell as Congress, Morrell's claim of justifiable reliance on the alleged misrepresentations made by Congress does not stand.

The principle that access bars claims of justifiable reliance on misrepresentations is well established and has been recognized by numerous courts. For example, in Shappirio v. Goldberg, 192 U.S. 232, 241-42, 24 S.Ct. 259, 261, 48 L.Ed. 419 (1904), the Supreme Court stated:

*471 When the means of knowledge are open and at hand, or furnished to the purchaser or his agent, and no effort is made to prevent the party from using them, and especially where the purchaser undertakes examination for himself, he will not be heard to say that he has been deceived to his injury by the misrepresentations of the vendor.

Similarly, in Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 603, 157 N.E.2d 597, 600 (1959), New York's highest court ruled:

If the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth, or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations.

In Grumman Allied Indus., Inc. v. Rohr Indus. Inc., 748 F.2d 729 (2d Cir.1984), the plaintiff purchased the assets of the defendant's subsidiary, including two hand-built prototypes of a bus which later went into production. Problems later developed in production models of the bus, forcing a recall. Upon discovery that the same problems were revealed in prototype testing prior to the sale, plaintiff sued for fraud. The Second Circuit rejected the fraud claim for lack of justifiable reliance, emphasizing the plaintiff's sophistication and its unrestricted access to the misrepresented information:

We believe Grumman's claim of justifiable reliance was properly rejected by the district court in light of the undisputed evidence demonstrating that Grumman enjoyed unfettered access to Flxible's plants, personnel and documents, and that it possessed the legal, technical and business expertise necessary to make effective use of that access.

* * * * *

Where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance. [FN12]

FN12. In the written contract in Grumman, the plaintiff "made specific disclaimers of reliance on [the defendant's] representations concerning the testing of the [prototype]." 748 F.2d at 734. Here, however, Congress was not the seller of the assets conveyed in the transaction or of the products sold pursuant to the Co-Pack Agreements. In the two contracts it signed, Congress made no representations concerning inventory or level of financing. Morrell did not require Congress to verify in part or in whole Dinner Bell's financials or inventories which were made part of the Asset Acquisition Agreement. Accordingly, no disclaimer of reliance by Morrell was called for.

Grumman, 748 F.2d at 737.

Similarly, in Marine Midland Bank v. Palm Beach Moorings, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 927, 403 N.Y.S.2d 15, 17 (1st Dep't 1978), in granting a motion for summary judgment, the court rejected a claim of justifiable reliance on the grounds that the defendant "had the opportunity to examine the corporate records before assuming the obligations reflected in the agreement of purchase." In such a situation, the court relied on the principle of Dannan Realty and rejected a claim of fraud based on misrepresentation. See also Frigitemp Corp. v. Financial Dynamics Fund, Inc., 524 F.2d 275, 282 (2d Cir.1975) (rejecting claim of justifiable reliance on the ground that "if the plaintiff has been furnished with the means of knowledge and he is not prevented from using them he cannot say that he has been deceived by the misrepresentations of the other party"); Aaron Ferer & Sons, Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 731 F.2d 112, 123 (2d Cir.1984) (rejecting claim of justifiable reliance because "all of the information that plaintiffs now claim was concealed from them was either a matter of public record, was not pursued by plaintiffs, or was disclosed, at least in part," by defendant).

Morrell had unrestricted access to Dinner Bell's plants, personnel, and documents. An acquisition team of Morrell representatives arrived at Dinner Bell on August 1, 1990 to begin a pre-acquisition *472 review. Davis. Dep. at 14; Frieze Dep. at 37. Morrell does not deny that:

The acquisition team was given unlimited access to the Dinner Bell facilities as well as its books and records. Those records included financial reports consisting of income statements, balance sheets, working capital statements, accounts payable records, etc., as well as agreements between Dinner Bell and Congress and the loan collateral reports.

* * * * *

Dinner Bell representatives supplied the Morrell acquisition team with copies of any and all Dinner Bell books and records that Morrell requested.

Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶¶ 25-26.

The undisputed evidence also shows that Morrell is a sophisticated entity which possessed the ability and expertise to make effective use of that access. Morrell is a large corporation with annual sales of approximately $1.8 billion. Its parent corporation, Chiquita Brands International, has annual sales in excess of $4 billion. Pl. 3(g) Stmt. ¶ 3. The Morrell acquisition team consisted of between 10 and 20 people, was headed by Mr. Davis, then the Director of Operations Support for Morrell, and included "financial people, operations people, and salespeople." Davis Dep. at 14; Frieze Dep. at 37. Morrell also had two separate teams observing Dinner Bell's year-end inventory. Pl. 3(g) Stmt. 35-36.

Thus, Morrell had access to the allegedly misrepresented information and the ability to utilize that access. There is no evidence suggesting that Congress participated in the overstatements of inventory by Dinner Bell's former chief financial officer, or that Congress in any way interfered with Morrell's ability to discover that information. In such a situation, Morrell cannot show justifiable reliance, and its actual fraud claim is deficient.

2. Fraudulent Concealment

[9] The elements of fraudulent concealment under New York law are a relationship between contracting parties that creates a duty to disclose, knowledge of material facts by a party bound to make such disclosures, nondisclosure, scienter, reliance, and damage. Leasing Service Corp. v. Broetje, 545 F.Supp. 362 (S.D.N.Y.1982). Because Morrell cannot show that Congress had a duty to disclose the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report, its fraudulent concealment claim must be rejected as a matter of law. Chiarella v. United States, 445 U.S. 222, 235, 100 S.Ct. 1108, 1118, 63 L.Ed.2d 348 (1980) ("when an allegation of fraud is based upon nondisclosure, there can be no fraud absent a duty to speak").

[10] Under New York law, a duty to disclose material facts arises (1) where there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties, or (2) where one party possesses superior knowledge, not readily available to the other, and knows that the other party is acting on the basis of mistaken knowledge. Aaron Ferer & Sons, 731 F.2d at 123. Morrell does not argue that there was a fiduciary relationship between it and Morrell, but instead relies on the second theory, often termed the "special facts" doctrine. See Chiarella, 445 U.S. at 248, 100 S.Ct. at 1124.

In Beneficial Commercial Corp. v. Murray Glick Datsun, Inc., 601 F.Supp. 770, 773 (S.D.N.Y.1985), the court explained the special facts doctrine, noting:

the growing trend to impose a duty to disclose in many circumstances where silence used to suffice; Steps have been taken toward application of the "special facts" doctrine in a broader array of contexts where one party's superior knowledge of essential facts renders a transaction without disclosure inherently unfair.

Id. (citing Chiarella, 445 U.S. at 248, 100 S.Ct. at 1124). Morrell relies on Gaines Service Leasing Corp. v. Carmel Plastic Corp., 105 Misc.2d 694, 432 N.Y.S.2d 760 (Civ.Ct., Kings Cty.1980), aff'd 113 Misc.2d 752, 453

N.Y.S.2d 391 (App.Term.1981). There, mistakenly believing that payment in full had been received, the plaintiff's employees delivered a van to the defendant. The defendant accepted delivery of the van but refused to pay the balance due. Relying on the special facts doctrine, the *473 court held that the defendant had breached its duty of disclosure:

The equal availability to both sides of the facts as to payment in the present case does not excuse defendant's silence. For defendants had to know plaintiff was relying on a basic misconception. Nor could plaintiff's error be seen by defendants as a matter of judgment or opinion. The only intention consistent with defendant's action was the fraudulent one which the jury found.

* * * * *

It is no longer acceptable, if ever it was, to conclude in knowing silence, a transaction damaging to a party who is mistaken about its basic factual assumptions when, like the present plaintiff, he "would reasonably expect a disclosure."

432 N.Y.S.2d at 762-63 (citations omitted). Morrell argues that like the defendant in Gaines, Congress concluded the transaction with Morrell in "knowing silence," while Morrell was mistaken about a "basic factual assumption" which it reasonably expected Congress would disclose.

Morrell also relies on Heineman v. S. & S. Machinery Corp., 750 F.Supp. 1179 (E.D.N.Y.1990), where the court accepted the rationale of Gaines, holding that defendants had a duty to disclose information regarding the financial stability of a company which was acquiring an 80% share of plaintiff's company and assuming 80% of its outstanding debt. Similarly, Morrell claims that because Congress knew that Morrell would rely upon Congress' inventory audit of Dinner Bell, [FN13] as well as Congress' detailed examination of Dinner Bell's collateral through the duration of the revolving credit facility, Congress had a duty to disclose its representative's inability to reconcile the discrepancy in the August 31, 1990 Loan Collateral Report.

FN13. The Court can find no factual basis for the assertion that Congress conducted an inventory audit of Dinner Bell. The evidence shows only that a Congress representative, as well as two teams of Morrell representatives, observed Dinner Bell's year-end inventory.

[11] Three specific elements must be shown to invoke the special facts doctrine: (1) one party must have superior knowledge, (2) that knowledge must not be readily available to the other party, and (3) the party with the knowledge must know that the other party is acting on the basis of mistaken knowledge. Aaron Ferer & Sons, 731 F.2d at 123. Failure of any single element bars application of the doctrine.

In Grumman, for example, because the plaintiff had access to the alleged omitted information, the court rejected plaintiff's claim of a duty of disclosure. The court noted, "In light of the unrestricted access to Flexible's facilities, personnel and records, as well as Grumman's arsenal of legal and technical talent, we find the claim that Rohr possessed superior knowledge (that was not readily available to Grumman) to be without merit." 748 F.2d at 739.

In Frigitemp, a corporation and certain of its shareholders alleged fraud against purchasers of stock based on the purchasers' alleged failure to disclose the amount of stock they held and their intent to purchase most of the stock issued in a certain offering. The court found that the purchasers did not have a duty to disclose information regarding their holdings because that information was available in the corporation's records. That availability entitled the purchasers to assume that the plaintiffs were not acting on the basis of mistaken knowledge. Without notice that the plaintiffs were acting on a mistaken belief, there was no duty of disclosure under the special facts doctrine. 524 F.2d at 282-83.

In Aaron Ferer & Sons, the court rejected an argument that there was a duty of disclosure based on superior knowledge "because all of the information that plaintiffs now claim was concealed from them was either a matter of public record, was not pursued by plaintiffs, or was disclosed, at least in part, by [defendant]." See also United States Steel & Carnegie Pension Fund, Inc. v. Orenstein, 557 F.2d 343, 345 (2d Cir.1977) (sustaining dismissal of securities fraud claims where plaintiff was in a position to discover the allegedly withheld *474 information; customer contracts and regularly prepared account control documents were available for inspection and plaintiff simply failed to review them).

[12] As in Grumman, Frigitemp, Aaron Ferer & Sons, and Orenstein, Morrell cannot make out all of the required elements of the special facts doctrine. As noted above, Morrell had unrestricted access to all Dinner Bell books and records, facilities, and personnel. Where Morrell had such access and the means to utilize that access, but failed to exercise diligence to discover the allegedly omitted information, Congress had no duty of disclosure, and Morrell cannot claim fraudulent concealment.

V. NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION

[13] Based on the same facts set forth in connection with its fraud claim, Morrell charges Congress with negligent misrepresentation. New York courts do not recognize a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation in the absence of a special relationship of trust or confidence between the parties. Accusystems, Inc. v. Honeywell Information Systems, Inc., 580 F.Supp. 474 (S.D.N.Y.1984). Accord American Protein Corp. v. AB Volvo, 844 F.2d 56, 63-64 (2d Cir.), cert. denied 488 U.S. 852, 109 S.Ct. 136, 102 L.Ed.2d 109 (1988). Morrell argues that a special relationship existed between Morrell and Congress because Morrell relied on Congress's promises in the oral agreement and in the Financing Amendment to continue the financing of Dinner Bell. Proof of a special relationship as embodied in the oral agreement between Congress and Morrell is barred by the parol evidence rule. The Financing Amendment between Congress and Dinner Bell is also insufficient to constitute a "special relationship" between Congress and Morrell.

[14][15] Courts generally find that an ordinary contractual relationship alone is insufficient to constitute a special relationship. See Accusystems, supra. The special relationship implying a closer degree of trust, confidence, or reliance, is generally a previous or continuing relationship between the parties. See Rosen v. Spanierman, 711 F.Supp. 749, 758 (S.D.N.Y.1989). The relationship allegedly contemplated in the Financing Amendment was between Congress and Dinner Bell as borrower and lender, with Morrell, at most, as a third-party beneficiary. Banking relationships (i.e. that between Dinner Bell and Congress) are generally not viewed by courts as special relationships giving rise to a heightened duty of care. See Aaron Ferer & Sons, 731 F.2d at 122 (under New York law the usual relationship of a bank and customer is not a fiduciary relationship, but one simply of debtor and creditor); In re W.T. Grant Co., 699 F.2d 599, 609 (2d Cir.), cert. denied 464 U.S. 822, 104 S.Ct. 89, 78 L.Ed.2d 97 (1983) (relationship of debtor and creditor did not lead to a duty of disclosure); Banco Espanol de Credito v. Security Pacific Nat'l Bank, 763 F.Supp. 36, 45 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (no fiduciary relationship in arms-length loan participation transactions between large financial institutions unless created in the participation agreement).

Furthermore, where a future relationship between the parties is the basis of a special relationship, the duration of that relationship must generally be long term. Coolite Corp. v. American Cyanamid Co., 52 A.D.2d 486, 384 N.Y.S.2d 808 (1st Dep't 1976) (long-term distributorship agreement); and Mathis v. Yondata Corp., 125 Misc.2d 383, 480 N.Y.S.2d 173 (Sup.Ct., N.Y.Cty.1984) (long-term service contract). The Financing Amendment would have been effective for only 60 days, too short a period to constitute a long-term relationship.

In support of its claim, Morrell relies primarily on Banker's Trust Co., Co. v. Steenburn, 95 Misc.2d 967, 409 N.Y.S.2d 51

(Sup.Ct.Chataqua Cty.1978), aff'd 70 A.D.2d 786, 418 N.Y.S.2d 723 (4th Dep't 1979); White v. Guarante, 43 N.Y.2d 356, 401 N.Y.S.2d 474, 372 N.E.2d 315 (1977); Coolite Corp., supra; and Mathis, supra. In each of these cases, the court found a special relationship sufficient to support a claim of negligent misrepresentation. An examination of these cases highlights the *475 weakness of Morrell's claim. See Sanitoy, Inc. v. Shapiro, 705 F.Supp. 152, 155 (S.D.N.Y.1989).

In Banker's Trust, the court found a special relationship between a bank and a borrower where there was an agreement to lend funds confirmed by the bank's executive vice-president. After the borrowers formed a corporation and incurred substantial personal indebtedness in reliance on the bank's promise, the bank refused to make the agreed upon loans. The court concluded there was a special relationship, in part because the bank officer had actively solicited the borrower's business, and the borrower had sought the bank officer's "advice and assistance." 409 N.Y.S.2d at 67. Here, by contrast, there is no suggestion that Congress had any role in inducing Morrell to purchase Dinner Bell's assets or that Morrell sought out or relied upon Congress' advice or counsel. Rather, the evidence reveals two sophisticated parties bargaining at arms-length for individual protection.

In White, the court found a special relationship between a limited partner of a partnership and the partnership's accounting firm. The ruling was based largely on the court's finding that the accountants owed a duty of care to third-party beneficiaries of the service contract to audit the partnership. 372 N.Y.S.2d at 320. The issue before the White court, therefore, was whether to extend a recognized fiduciary duty to include limited partners. Here, by contrast, there is no allegation that Congress owed a fiduciary duty to Dinner Bell which could be extended to apply to Morrell. In fact, the evidence supports the conclusion that because Congress and Dinner Bell were parties to an arms-length transaction, there was no fiduciary relationship. See Compania Sud-Americana de Vapores, S.A. v. IBJ Schroder Bank & Trust Co., 785 F.Supp. 411, 426 (S.D.N.Y.1992).

In Coolite, the court found a special relationship between a distributor and a distributee because the defendant had required the plaintiffs to form a new company before agreeing to enter a long term distributorship agreement. The court found that the plaintiff's investment of $500,000 attested that the parties relationship was "intrinsically a more intimate relationship association, at least in terms of reliance and trustworthiness, than that of the commonly encountered buyer and seller." 384 N.Y.S.2d at 811. By contrast, the alleged agreement here did not require any additional effort or investment by Morrell which would indicate that Congress' relationship was "more intimate" than the ordinary contractual relationship.

Mathis can also be distinguished. There, the defendants had agreed to supply the plaintiffs with data processing services. A year later, defendants attempted to induce the plaintiffs not to cancel the contract by promising to sell them computer equipment and to develop software necessary for the plaintiffs' business. The court held that the promises, representations, and warranties related to this long-term service contract created a special relationship between the parties. 480 N.Y.S.2d at 178. Here, Morrell does not even allege the existence of a long-term relationship accompanied by detailed warranties and representations from Congress.

Accordingly, because there is no evidence that the Congress-Morrell relationship was a special relationship with a closer degree of trust and confidence than the ordinary contractual relationship, Morrell's claim of negligent misrepresentation is denied as a matter of law.

VI. VIOLATION OF IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

[16] In Cross & Cross Properties, Ltd. v. Everett Allied Co., 886 F.2d 497, 502 (2d Cir.1989), the Second Circuit stated:

Courts applying New York law repeatedly have recognized the duty of good faith and fair dealing, the "implied obligation to exercise good faith not to frustrate [a] contract into which [one has] entered." Since the duty of good faith and fair dealing is implied in every contract, contracting parties' fields of discretion under a contract are bounded by the parties' *476 mutual obligation to act in good faith. The boundaries set by the duty of good faith are generally defined by the parties' intent and reasonable expectations in entering the contract (citations omitted).

Morrell argues that it was improper for Congress to enter into the Congress/Morrell Agreement having conveyed to Morrell the understanding "both in numerous conversations and in explicit written agreements" that Congress would continue to extend financing to Dinner Bell, while Congress knew that it would drastically reduce that financing the day after the closing. Def. Br. at 21. Morrell asserts that such behavior deprived it of the benefits of the transaction and constituted a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the Congress/Morrell Agreement.

To the extent that Morrell's claim relies on promises made by Congress in the alleged oral agreement, proof of that claim is barred by the parol evidence rule. To the extent that Morrell's claim relies on promises made by Congress in the Financing Amendment, it is equally deficient. In Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. RJR Nabisco, Inc., 716 F.Supp. 1504 (S.D.N.Y.1989), the court refused to apply the implied covenant of good faith in an indenture to create additional benefits which were not bargained for the express agreement between the parties. The court held:

While the Court stands ready to employ an implied covenant of good faith to ensure that such bargained for rights are performed and upheld, it will not, however, permit an implied covenant to shoehorn into an indenture additional terms plaintiffs now wish had been included.

716 F.Supp. at 1519. Likewise, here Morrell attempts to transform the implied covenant in the Congress/Morrell Agreement into an additional promise by Congress to continue to make loans to Dinner Bell irrespective of Dinner Bell's collateral position. That simply was not a term bargained for in the written agreement between the parties. All Congress agreed to do in the Financing Amendment was to continue to make funds available to Dinner Bell pursuant to the Advance Formula. There is no allegation that Congress breached that agreement. Accordingly, Morrell's claim must be rejected as a matter of law.

CONCLUSION

Because no reasonable trier of fact could find in favor of Morrell with regard to its defenses and counterclaims, Congress' motion for summary judgment on its claim for $1,876,809.31 is granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

790 F.Supp. 459

END OF DOCUMENT

18

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

CONSOLIDATED EDISON, INC., Plaintiff/
Counterclaim Defendant

v.

NORTHEAST UTILITIES, Defendant/
Counterclaim Plaintiff.

No. 01 CIV.1893(JGK).

March 21, 2003.

Parties filed cross-motions for partial summary judgment in suit arising out of the failed multi-billion dollar merger between New York and Massachusetts utilities. The District Court, Koeltl, J., held that: (1) specific disclaimer in parties' confidentiality agreement combined with the merger clause in their merger agreement precluded any claim of reasonable reliance on the extra-contractual representations made by Massachusetts utility's representatives, and therefore New York utility could not establish a valid claim under New York law for fraudulent inducement or negligent misrepresentation; (2) summary judgment was precluded in favor of either party on claims arising from alleged failure to perform condition precedent under merger agreement; (3) summary judgment in favor of New York utility was precluded on Massachusetts utility's counterclaim alleging material breach of merger agreement; and (4) Massachusetts utility had standing to recover its shareholders' lost premium.

Plaintiff's motion denied; defendant's motion granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 3
184k3

To state a claim for fraud under New York law, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) a representation of material fact; (2) falsity; (3) scienter; (4) reasonable reliance; and (5) injury.

[2] Fraud 20

184k20

To plead fraudulent inducement under New York law, contracting party must allege that it reasonably relied on false representations made by defendant.

[3] Fraud 36
184k36

Specific disclaimer in parties' confidentiality agreement, combined with the merger clause in their merger agreement, precluded any claim of reasonable reliance on the extra-contractual representations made by Massachusetts utility's representatives, and therefore New York utility could not establish a valid claim under New York law for fraudulent inducement or negligent misrepresentation; alleged oral representations made during due diligence were disclaimed by the confidentiality and merger agreements, and merger agreement went on to provide that the merger agreement and the confidentiality agreement were the entire agreement between the parties and superseded all prior understandings, both written and oral.

[4] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, where a party specifically disclaims reliance upon a particular representation in a contract, that party cannot, in a subsequent action for common law fraud, claim it was fraudulently induced to enter into the contract by the very representation it has disclaimed reliance upon.

[5] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, a general merger clause does not preclude a claim for fraudulent inducement.

[6] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Elements of a claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law are that (1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; (2) the defendant made a false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect; (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiff for a serious purpose; (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment.

[7] Fraud 20
184k20

To prove negligent misrepresentation under New York law the plaintiff must prove reasonable reliance on the alleged misrepresentation.

[8] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, a claim for negligent misrepresentation is not actionable without a special relationship of trust or confidence.

[9] Federal Civil Procedure 2509
170Ak2509

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether violation of merger agreement did or did not occur, precluding summary judgment in favor of either party on claims arising from alleged failure to perform condition precedent under utilities' merger agreement; subsidiary fact questions existed as to whether there was a failure to follow past practice, and whether that excused New York utility from performance.

[10] Federal Civil Procedure 2492
170Ak2492

Where contract language used is susceptible to differing interpretations, each of which may be said to be as reasonable as another, then the interpretation of the contract becomes a question of fact and cannot be resolved on a motion for summary judgment.

[11] Federal Civil Procedure 2509
170Ak2509

Differing interpretations of the financial data and the competing testimony of the parties' experts created genuine issues of material fact as to whether there was a failure of a condition precedent to New York utility's obligations under merger agreement, precluding summary judgment in favor of New York utility on contract claim against Massachusetts utility.

[12] Federal Civil Procedure 2509
170Ak2509

Genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether termination provision of merger agreement was the exclusive means to obtain consequential damages, as to the intent of the parties in requiring a "willful and material breach" and whether such an event had occurred, precluding summary judgment in favor of New York utility on Massachusetts utility's counterclaim alleging material breach of merger agreement.

[13] Contracts 187(2)
95k187(2)

Since merger agreement explicitly made Massachusetts utility's shareholders third party beneficiaries of New York utility's promise to pay the merger consideration, Massachusetts utility had standing to recover its shareholders' lost premium, which resulted from New York utility's repudiation of merger agreement.

[14] Contracts 187(1)
95k187(1)

[14] Contracts 187(2)
95k187(2)

Under New York law, a corporation's shareholders are intended, rather than incidental, beneficiaries of a merger agreement if recognition of a right to performance in the beneficiary is appropriate to effectuate the intention of the parties and either (1) the performance of the promise will satisfy an obligation of the promisee to pay money to the beneficiary; or (2) the circumstances indicate that the promisee intends to give the beneficiary the benefit of the promised performance. Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 302.

[15] Compromise and Settlement 16(1)
89k16(1)

New York utility, which repudiated merger agreement, failed to establish that Brody settlement agreement encompassed claims by Massachusetts utility to the merger premium; while the settlement agreement released New York utility from responsibility for injuries arising from the allegedly faulty joint proxy, the settlement did not speak to the later injuries caused by New York utility's repudiation of merger agreement.

[16] Release 1
331k1

A release is a type of contract and is governed by principles of contract law.

[17] Federal Courts 412.1
170Bk412.1

In determining the scope and validity of a release, courts should apply state law.

[18] Contracts 147(2)
95k147(2)

Under New York law, courts must discern the intent of the parties to the extent their intent is evidenced by their written agreement.

[19] Contracts 114
95k114

Under New York law, a release that absolves one party from liability receives the closest of judicial scrutiny.

[20] Damages 117
115k117

Under New York law, revenues due a plaintiff because of a breached contract must be offset by any amount plaintiff saved as a result of the breach.

390 AMENDED OPINION AND ORDER

KOELTL, District Judge.

This case arises out of the failed multi-billion dollar merger between the plaintiff and counterclaim defendant Consolidated Edison, Inc. ("Con Edison") and the defendant-Northeast Utilities ("NU"). Pursuant to the Merger Agreement between the parties, Con Edison was to pay $3.6 billion for the outstanding shares of NU. [FN1] The merger did not proceed amid mutual recriminations. Central to this lawsuit are Con Edison's claims that NU fraudulently induced it to enter into the Merger Agreement and thereafter breached various provisions of that Agreement, particularly the representation that there had been no material adverse change to NU's condition or prospects. NU in turn charges that Con Edison failed to proceed with the merger as it was required to do under the terms of the Merger Agreement and thereby breached that Agreement. NU claims that Con Edison did not proceed with the merger, not because there had been any material adverse change, but rather because Con Edison believed that the price required by the Merger Agreement was no longer warranted and because NU refused to negotiate a substantially lower price than that set forth in the Merger Agreement.

FN1. For purposes of this motion, Con Edison will be referred to as the "plaintiff" and NU will be referred to as the "defendant."

In the Amended Complaint ("Complaint"), Con Edison sues NU on claims for breach of contract, failure of conditions precedent, fraudulent inducement, and negligent misrepresentation. NU has filed a counterclaim for breach of contract. Con Edison now moves for partial summary judgment pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 56 on its First, Third, Fifth and Sixth claims for relief in the Complaint, as well as on NU's Counterclaim including certain affirmative defenses to the Counterclaim. NU has filed a motion for summary judgment on Con Edison's First, Second, Third, Fourth Sixth and Seventh claims for relief.

I.

The standard for granting summary judgment is well established. Summary judgment may not be granted unless "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986); Gallo v. Prudential Residential Servs., Ltd. Partnership, 22 F.3d 1219, 1223 (2d Cir.1994). "The trial *391 court's task at the summary judgment motion stage of the litigation is carefully limited to discerning whether there are genuine issues of material fact to be tried, not to deciding them. Its duty, in short, is confined at this point to issue-finding; it does not extend to issue-resolution." Gallo, 22 F.3d at 1224.

The moving party bears the initial burden of "informing the district court of the basis for its motion" and identifying the matter that "it believes demonstrate[s] the absence of a genuine issue of material fact." Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548. The substantive law governing the case will identify those facts which are material and "only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). In determining whether summary judgment is appropriate, a court must resolve all ambiguities and draw all reasonable inferences against the moving party. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986) (citing United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655, 82 S.Ct. 993, 8 L.Ed.2d 176 (1962)); see also Gallo, 22 F.3d at 1223.

If the moving party meets its burden, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to come forward with "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e). With respect to the issues on which summary judgment is sought, if there is any evidence in the record from any source from which a reasonable inference could be drawn in favor of the nonmoving party, summary judgment is improper. Chambers v. TRM Copy Ctrs. Corp., 43 F.3d 29, 37 (2d Cir.1994).

II.

The following facts are undisputed or are matters of public record.

Con Edison, a New York corporation with its principal place of business in New York, New York, is one of the nation's largest investor-owned electric and gas utilities; it serves the greater New York metropolitan area. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 1; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 1; Compl. ¶ 10.) Con Edison has extensive knowledge and experience in the field of electric generation, transmission, and distribution. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2.) Con Edison is also a sophisticated commercial entity with experience in merger and acquisition transactions, including the associated due diligence. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2.)

Northeast Utilities is a holding company or business trust organized and existing under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, with its principle place of business in Massachusetts. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 3; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 3; Agreement and Plan of Merger dated Oct. 13, 1999 as amended Nov. 1, 2000 ("Merger Agreement") § 3.01(a) attached as Ex. 1 to Declaration of Douglas M. Kraus Supp. NU Mot. Summ. J. dated May 8, 2002 ("Kraus Decl. Supp.")). NU owns three regulated electric utility subsidiaries, including Connecticut Light & Power Company ("CL & P"), as well as a regulated gas subsidiary. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 4; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 4.) NU also owns several unregulated businesses, including Select Energy, Inc. ("Select"), an energy marketing company that principally sells electricity to large energy users on a wholesale basis. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 4; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 4.) Two of Select's competitors, Con Ed Energy and Con Ed Solutions, are unregulated subsidiaries *392 owned by Con Edison. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 5; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 5.)

In June 1999, Con Edison approached NU about acquiring the latter company and NU agreed to further discussions. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 6; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 6.) On July 29, 1999, Con Edison and NU executed a written Confidentiality Agreement. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 7; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 7; Confidentiality Agreement ("Confid.Agr.") attached as Ex. 3 to Declaration of John Gueli Supp. Con Edison Mot. Summ. J. dated May 10, 2002 ("Gueli Decl. Supp.")). The Confidentiality Agreement governed the due diligence period during which Con Edison could learn more about NU and further evaluate the potential merger.

NU contends that Con Edison conducted an "extensive due diligence investigation of NU's regulated and unregulated businesses" between July 29 and October 13, 1999. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 9.) Con Edison allegedly organized its due diligence into two categories, or "tiers": Tier 1 consisted of information concerning NU's regulated utility businesses which were "value impacting" and thus of greatest importance to Con Edison. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 10.) Tier 2 comprised information about other matters, including NU's unregulated businesses such as Select. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 10.) Con Edison takes issue with NU's characterization of the Tier 2 information as non-value impacting. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 10.) Con Edison Chief Financial Officer Joan Freilich ("Freilich") testified in her deposition that, "[o]bviously subsidiary operations ... were value impacting, very high value impacting." (Deposition of Joan Freilich dated Dec. 18, 2001 ("Freilich Dep. Kraus") at 56 attached as Ex. 63 to Kraus Decl. Supp.)

The due diligence process involved a large number of Con Edison's officers and employees, as well as in-house and outside counsel, experts in due diligence investigations, and the investment banking firm Salomon Smith Barney ("SSB"). (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 11; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 11.) Con Edison requested and received numerous documents from NU and conducted a series of meetings between representatives of both parties. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 12.) NU claims that at no time during due diligence did NU refuse to provide Con Edison or its advisors with any information that Con Ed requested. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 13.)

Con Edison presents a different version of due diligence: Con Edison claims that NU limited the documents provided to Con Edison because of confidentiality concerns about sharing competitively sensitive information. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 9.) Instead, Con

Edison contends, NU insisted that Con Edison rely upon discussions and presentations by senior NU representatives in order to obtain requested information about Select. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 9, 12-13.)

Con Edison's claims in this case rely substantially on a four-year fixed price contract between Select and CL & P, known as the CL & P Standard Offer Contract ("CL & P Contract" or "Standard Offer Contract"), pursuant to which Select was obligated to supply electricity to CL & P for half of the total electricity needed for CL & P's retail customers for four years at a fixed price. The parties do not dispute that Con Edison knew that Select intended to enter into the four-year supply commitment months before signing the Merger Agreement in October 1999. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 14, 62; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 14, 62.) Both parties also agree that Select's prior experience in managing large standard offer contracts was extremely limited and was characterized by Joan Freilich as "quite negative." *393 (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 71-73; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 71-73; Deposition of Joan Freilich dated Dec. 10, 2001 ("Freilich Dep. Gueli") at 40 attached as Ex. 71 to Declaration of John Gueli Opp. NU Mot. Summ. J. ("Gueli Decl. Opp.") sworn June 7, 2002.)

Under a fixed price contract, the buyer (CL & P) agrees to pay the seller (Select) a predetermined fixed amount for electricity to be supplied at a future date. Thus, in order to make a profit, Select had to secure supply below the price that it negotiated with CL & P. The seller is at risk of significant financial losses if the market price of energy increases to such a level that the contractual commitment can no longer be met profitably.

According to Con Edison, the parties discussed Select's risk management policies and expected profit margins during meetings on August 26-27, 1999 in Hartford, Connecticut, including the risk policies as they applied to the CL & P Standard Offer Contract. (Deposition of Luther Tai dated Nov. 20, 2001 ("Tai Dep. Nov. 20") at 31, 35-38, 40-41, 65-66 attached as Ex. 93 to Gueli Decl. Opp.; Tai Notes and Observations of August 26-27 Meeting dated Aug. 28, 1999 attached as Ex. 10 to Gueli Decl. Opp.; Deposition of Charles Weliky dated Nov. 2, 2001 ("Weliky Dep.") at 41, 45-48, 248, 254-55 attached as Ex. 97 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) A subsequent meeting took place on September 23, 1999 among Gary Simon ("Simon"), NU Senior Vice President of Enterprise Development and Analysis, Charles Weliky ("Weliky"), President of Con Ed Energy and Con Ed Development, and Timothy Frost ("Frost"), a Director in Con Edison's Corporate Planning Department. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2; Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2) The parties disagree about the degree to which Simon, Weliky, and Frost discussed NU's risk management policies, particularly with respect to Select. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 2-3; Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 2-3.)

Con Edison claims that over the course of due diligence NU represented that it had covered the CL & P Contract, specifically that Select had purchased enough energy to meet its obligations over the four years of the contract. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 62, 70). In fact, when NU signed the CL & P Contract on November 2, 1999, after Con Edison and NU signed the Merger Agreement, Select had acquired sufficient electricity to cover only its obligations during the first two years of the contract (2001-2002). (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 68-69; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 68-69.) Select was thus "uncovered" for 2002-2003. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 69; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 69.) Select maintained the open position believing that it could acquire the necessary electricity to supply the latter half of the contract at a lower price because a large number of new power plants were set to open in New England which would drive down prices. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 70.)

Con Edison contends that at the September 23, 1999 meeting between Simon, Weliky, and Frost, NU's Simon represented that "Select had supplied to cover the standard offer contract for Connecticut Light and Power ... that locked down the profit margins for that part of the business." (Deposition of Timothy Frost dated Oct. 15, 2001 ("Frost Dep.") at 109 attached as Ex. 61 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Simon denies saying that the Standard Offer Contract was fully covered and claims that, to the contrary, it was clear to him "from [the] conversation on September 23, 1999 that Messrs. Weliky and Frost understood very well that Select had not secured sufficient power for the last two years of the CL & P Standard Offer *394 Contract." (Declaration of Gary Simon sworn June 6, 2002 ("Simon Decl.") ¶¶ 10-11.) Moreover, Simon directed the Con Edison representatives to John Forsgren ("Forsgren"), NU's Chief Financial Officer and Chairman of Select's Risk Oversight Council ("ROC") for any further questions about risk management. (Simon Decl. ¶ 6.)

The parties disagree about whether Con Edison pursued further information on Select and its risk management strategies, as well as whether NU provided such information in a forthright and complete manner. Con Edison claims that employees with relevant expertise reviewed the risk management policies and discussed Select's risk management policies with senior NU management, including Simon and Forsgren. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 81-83.) The parties do agree that prior to signing the Merger Agreement, Con Edison requested a copy of Select's risk management policies in response to which NU provided a copy of such a policy dated August 5, 1999 ("August Policies"). (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 5-6; Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 5-6; August Policies attached as Ex. 4 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) It is clear that Mr. Weliky only reviewed the August Policies after the September 23, 1999 meeting with Mr. Simon. (Weliky Dep. at 72, 267.)

Con Edison contends that the August Policies were already "the subject of review" and "in the process of undergoing major revision" although no such changes were disclosed to Con Edison. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 11.) For example, Con Edison argues, NU and Select senior management considered the volumetric limits in the August Polies "unrealistic," "obsolete," "too constraining," "not feasible," and lacking "good business sense." (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 12.)

NU, however, asserts that NU constantly reviews, evaluates and upgrades Select's risk management policies and that in September 1999, when the August Policies were turned over, Select was merely contemplating making appropriate revisions to meet the growth in Select's portfolio. (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 11; Forsgren Dep. at 168.) NU also claims that Con Edison never inquired into whether Select was or would be making changes to its risk management policies despite the fact that Con Edison should have been aware of the possibility because NU informed Con Edison that it was going to be Select's business practice to hold substantial open positions in order to build its business, thereby requiring at minimum an exception to the August Policies. (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 12.) John Forsgren, the person with primary responsibility for risk management at Select and to whom Simon had referred Weliky and Frost for additional questions, stated under oath that "[a]t no time during the due diligence period did anyone at Con Ed ask me any questions regarding Select's risk management policies." (Declaration of John H. Forsgren sworn May 1, 2002 ("Forsgren Decl.") ¶¶ 13, 14.)

NU also contends that during due diligence, Con Edison never discussed the August Policies or any aspect of risk management with any officer or employee of Select. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 83.) Nor did Con Edison request or review any of the written reports that Select prepared about its open, uncovered positions on its supply contracts or any of the minutes or reports of Select's ROC. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 83.) Moreover, documents existed from which Con Edison could have verified whether Select's expected supply obligations under the Standard Offer Contract were fully matched, or "covered." (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 75-77.) NU claims that Con Edison in fact ignored the advice of *395 one of its own employees to review the way in which Select implemented its policies in practice, because they appeared appropriate on paper. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 81-82.) Nor did Con Edison attempt to place any restrictions in the Merger Agreement on NU's right to grant exceptions to or otherwise modify the August

Policies. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 82.)

The parties entered into an Agreement and Plan of Merger (the "Merger Agreement") on October 13, 1999. The terms of the document were negotiated by officers and employees from both parties as well as their respective legal and financial advisors. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 15; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 15.) On or about February 29, 2000 Con Edison and NU issued a Joint Merger Proxy Statement ("Joint Proxy") through which they sought shareholder approval of the merger. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 16; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 16; Joint Proxy attached as Ex. 2 to Kraus Decl. Supp.)

The merger price to be paid by Con Edison, half in cash and half in Con Edison stock, was expected to be $26.50 per share of NU common stock assuming that the merger closed on December 31, 2000, by which time the parties anticipated receipt of the remaining regulatory approvals. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 17; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 17.; Joint Proxy at 6.) The merger price comprised three parts: 1) a $25 base price; 2) an additional $1 to be paid if, as expected (and as actually occurred), NU entered into a binding agreement to sell its Millstone nuclear power station to an unaffiliated third party; and 3) an "adjustment" payment of $0.0034 per day (or about $.10 per month) for each day from August 5, 2000 until the merger closed. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 18; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 18; Merger Agr. §§ 2.01(b)(i)(A), 2.05.)

The $26.50 anticipated merger price represented a premium of more than 40 percent over the "unaffected" $18.56 price at which NU's shares were trading prior to the time that rumors of the transaction began circulating in the marketplace. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 19; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 19.) The premium constituted more than $1 billion of the total $3.6 billion that Con Edison expected to pay for NU's 137 million then outstanding shares. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 20; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 20.) By the time Con Edison cancelled the merger on March 5, 2001, the $0.0034 per NU share, per day, adjustment payment rendered the merger price over $26.70 per share, and the premium had grown to over $1.1 billion. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 21; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 21.)

The parties dispute the reasons why Con Edison agreed to pay this premium and the degree to which Con Edison sought to downplay the price of the transaction when making the merger public. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 22-23; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 22-23.) As evidence of Con Edison's desire to make the price of the merger appear low, NU cites an e-mail from Freilich to a group of Con Edison employees in which she wrote, "[NU] can be expected to want [various factors] expressed in a way that makes the price sound higher--and we will want it to sound lower.... I know you all know how to lie in front of a truck ... this is one on which we may have to go through this exercise. Just remember who is buying whom...." (E-mail from Joan S. Freilich dated Oct. 12, 1999 attached as Ex. 46 to Kraus Decl. Supp.)

NU claims that Con Edison was willing to pay the substantial premium because the companies' similar businesses and adjacent service areas promised a smooth integration of their respective operations. *396 (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23.) Thus, NU and Con Edison made a good "fit". (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23.) Moreover, NU claims, because Con Edison viewed NU as an attractive acquisition target, offering a full price at the outset could preempt competing bidders. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 24; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 24.)

Con Edison contends that it offered only what it thought NU was worth in combination with Con Edison. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 24.) Con Edison also disputes NU's characterization of the premium as "substantial", and notes that it perceived the parties to be a good match in the fall of 1999 because synergies would be readily achievable and because Con Edison believed that NU had a similar risk tolerance to Con Edison. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23.) Both parties agree that no other bidders emerged after Con Edison and NU announced their proposed merger. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 25; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 25.)

During the due diligence, the parties jointly retained the accounting firm of Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte & Touche") to estimate the amount of savings, or "synergies", that might be achieved by combining Con Edison and NU. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 28; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 28.) Deloitte & Touche projected that if the companies combined they could save $1.3 billion and $180 million in their regulated and unregulated businesses respectively over a 10-year period. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 29-30; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 29-30.) After the parties signed the Merger Agreement, a joint transition team comprising personnel from both companies revised the estimated savings for the merged regulated businesses to $1.574 billion over ten years. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 31; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 31.) Con Edison Expert Kenneth Lehn estimates that the present value (as of April 13, 2001) of the combined regulated and unregulated synergies is $707 million. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 33; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 33; Expert Report and Disclosures of Kenneth M. Lehn ("Lehn Report") ¶ 37 n.14 attached as Ex. 61 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) The parties disagree as to the percentage of synergies that they would actually retain. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 34-35; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 34-35.)

The Merger Agreement itself contains a series of representations and warranties by NU, (Merger Agr. § 3.01), as well as numerous covenants circumscribing NU's conduct between the execution of the Merger Agreement and closing. (Merger Agr. § 4.01.) Included in the Merger Agreement is NU's commitment that "[e]xcept as otherwise expressly contemplated by this Agreement or as consented to in writing by [Con Edison], during the period from the date of this Agreement to the [time of closing], NU shall, and shall cause the NU Subsidiaries to, carry on their respective businesses in the ordinary course consistent with past practice...." (Merger Agr. § 4.01.) The Merger Agreement's representations, warranties, and covenants do not mention Select's risk management policies that Con Edison claims NU misrepresented during due diligence. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 27; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 27.)

Con Edison argues that on May 4, 2000, Select adopted new risk management policies ("May Policies"), which Select's President, William V. Schivley, described as "substantially modify[ing] the requirements that we had in the previous policies and procedures." (Deposition of William V. Schivley dated Nov. 1, 2001 ("Schivley Dep.") at 159 attached as Ex. 80 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Con Edison claims that NU never told Con Edison about the new policies *397 until December 2000. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 19.) The May Policies no longer required a hedge ratio, no longer set a one million megawatt limit on fixed price energy commitments, and no longer required that Value at Risk ("VaR") not exceed $20 million. (Schivley Dep. at 159-61; Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 17-18.) Con Edison argues that if the merger had actually been consummated, Con Edison's own risk management policies would have required Con Edison to close Select's open position at a cost of $400 million, a fact and figure that NU contests. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 22; Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 22.)

NU objects to characterizing the May Policies as "new", and instead describes the May Policies as revising the August Policies and deems the changes "replacements" rather than wholesale eliminations of portions of the August Policies. (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 14, 17-18.) NU also argues that Simon, Frost, and Weliky discussed the fact that Select was short on the CL & P Contract and that it "should have been obvious to anyone who [subsequently] read the policies that, at a minimum, an exception would be required for the Standard Offer Contract [with CL & P] and that other revisions would be required to accommodate the growth and changing nature of Select's business." (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 19.)

The parties dispute the degree to which rumors and the announcement of the proposed merger caused a subsequent decline in Con Edison's stock price. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 36-38; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 36-38.) However, in January 2000, Salomon Smith Barney, Con Edison's financial advisor, recommended to Con Edison potential modifications to the Merger Agreement. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 39-40; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 39-40.) The parties disagree about whether Con Edison sought out that advice or whether it came unsolicited. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 39; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 39-40.)

The parties filed a Joint Application for Approval of Change of Control by Connecticut Department of Public Utility Control with the Connecticut Department of Public Utility ("DPUC") on or about January 20, 2000. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 41; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 41.) The DPUC issued a Draft Decision approving the proposed merger on or about September 22, 2000, and issued a final approval approximately one month later. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 42-43; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 42-43.) In mid-February 2001, the United States Department of Justice granted the last of the principal regulatory approvals required to consummate the merger. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 44; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 44.) Both parties expected the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") to approve the merger as required by the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 44; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 44.)

On February 16, 2001, Con Edison's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") Eugene McGrath ("McGrath") advised Michael Morris ("Morris"), Chairman and CEO of NU, that Con Edison would not proceed with the merger on the terms set forth in the Merger Agreement and would only go forward at a substantial, unquantified discount to the previously agreed upon price. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 47; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 47.) During the meeting and subsequently, Con Edison identified several "material adverse changes" ("MACs") under the Merger Agreement that allegedly warranted the discount. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 48; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 48.) NU disputed Con Edison's entitlement to renegotiate the merger price. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 49; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 49.)

NU *398 contends that by mid-February of 2001, worsening market conditions meant that there was virtually no chance that a competing bidder would emerge who would pay close to the price agreed to by Con Edison. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 45-46.) Moreover, NU claimed that it was a stronger company in 2001 than it was in October 1999 when the parties executed the Merger Agreement. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 49.) Con Edison disputes this assertion. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 49.)

On February 27, 2001, one of NU's financial advisors, Morgan Stanley Dean Witter ("Morgan Stanley") made a presentation to NU's Board of Trustees. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23; Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 23; Morgan Stanley February 27, 2001 Presentation to NU ("MS Feb. Presentation") attached as Ex. 39 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Con Edison claims that Morgan Stanley's presentation showed that NU's current forecasted earnings for 2001-2005 had fallen to $1.094 billion from a total of $1.458 billion in earnings forecasted in October 1999 for that same period. (Pl.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 24.) Morgan Stanley also presented a discounted cash flow analysis that Con Edison claims showed a drop in NU's value between October 1999 and February 2001 from a range of $18.25-$23.50 per share to $15.25-$18.50. (Morgan Stanley Presentation to NU Board of Trustees dated Oct. 11, 1999 ("MS Oct. Presentation") at 33 attached as Ex. 12 to Gueli Decl. Supp.; MS Feb. Presentation at 4.) NU argues that the earnings forecasts cannot be compared as Con Edison has done because of differences in the ways that the figures were calculated. (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 24-25.) NU also contends that Morgan Stanley's discounted cash flow analysis was based on an inaccurate and unrealistic projection of NU's future earnings. (Def.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 25.)

On February 28, 2001, NU made a formal written demand on Con Edison to provide reasonable assurances that Con Edison would comply with its contractual obligations and consummate the merger in accordance with the terms of the Merger Agreement. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 51; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 51.) Con Edison responded by letter dated March 2, 2001 that, "Con Edison fully intends to abide by its obligations under the Merger Agreement and believes that it is and at all times has been in compliance with the terms of the Merger Agreement. Con Edison therefore is ready, willing, and able to close the transaction provided Northeast Utilities is able to satisfy all of the conditions precedent to closing." (Letter from Eugene McGrath to Michael Morris dated Mar. 2, 2001 attached as Ex. 51 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) Mr. McGrath of Con Edison subsequently advised Mr. Morris of NU on March 5, 2001 that Con Edison would not proceed on the terms set forth in the Merger Agreement, and that it would not pay NU more than $22.50 per share. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 52; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 52.) Con Edison contends that it could not agree to the previously offered price because NU had suffered a MAC that dramatically lowered NU's valuation. (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 52.)

NU's Board of Trustees considered the $22.50 offer and unanimously rejected it, concluding, based on the advice of their financial and legal advisors, that Con Edison had no grounds to renegotiate the merger terms. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 53; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 53.) NU announced thereafter that Con Edison had rejected its request for reasonable assurances and that NU was treating this rejection as an anticipatory repudiation of the Merger Agreement. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 54; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 54.) NU declared that it would take appropriate *399 action to recover the benefits of the merger for its shareholders. (Def.'s Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 54; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 54.)

Con Edison filed its original Complaint in this action on March 6, 2001 seeking a declaratory judgment that NU had breached the Merger Agreement and that, consequently, Con Edison was excused from performing its obligations thereunder. NU filed a separate action in this Court on March 12, 2001 asserting a claim for breach of the parties' Merger Agreement but later withdrew the action and asserted the claim as a counterclaim in this litigation.

Con Edison subsequently filed its Amended Complaint (the "Complaint") that asserts the following seven claims for relief: First, breach of contract based on NU's alleged breach of the covenants in Section 4.01 of the Merger Agreement; Second, breach of contract based on NU's alleged breach of the representation in Section 3.01(i) concerning the absence of certain material adverse changes or events; Third, failure of condition precedent under Section 6.02(b) of the Merger Agreement that NU had performed in all material respects all its obligations required to be performed under the Merger Agreement, specifically NU's obligations under Section 4.01 of the Merger Agreement; Fourth, alleged failure of condition precedent under Section 6.02(a) of the Merger Agreement that NU's representations and warranties were correct when made and as of the closing date; Fifth, alleged failure of condition precedent under Section 6.02(d) of the Merger Agreement based on NU's having suffered a "Material Adverse Change"; Sixth, fraudulent inducement; and Seventh, negligent misrepresentation. NU's Counterclaim charges Con Edison with breach of contract because Con Edison allegedly repudiated its obligation under the Merger Agreement by refusing to proceed with the merger as it was required to do.

This Court has jurisdiction based on the complete diversity of citizenship of the parties. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

The Merger Agreement is governed by New York law, (Merger Agr. § 8.07), and the parties agree that New York law governs all claims in this action.

Both parties have now moved for summary judgment on various claims.

III.

[1][2] NU moves for summary judgment dismissing Con Edison's claim for fraudulent inducement, the Sixth Claim for Relief. To state a claim for fraud under New York law, Con Edison must demonstrate (i) a representation of material fact; (ii) falsity; (iii) scienter; (iv) reasonable reliance; and (v) injury. See Wells Fargo Bank Northwest, N.A. v. Taca Int'l Airlines, S.A., 247 F.Supp.2d 352, 363 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (citing Manning v. Utilities Mut. Ins. Co., Inc., 254 F.3d 387, 400 (2d Cir.2001)); see also Computerized Radiological Servs. v. Syntex Corp., 786 F.2d 72, 76 (2d Cir.1986). To plead fraudulent inducement, Con Edison must allege that it reasonably relied on false representations made by NU. See Wells Fargo, 247 F.Supp.2d at 363 (collecting cases). Con Edison must prove each of the elements by clear and convincing evidence. Syntex, 786 F.2d at 76.

The Complaint alleges that:

NU represented to Con Edison that Select's fixed-price contractual supply obligations to CL & P were or would be sufficiently matched, or that other appropriate risk management techniques would be employed, so that Select could realize specified margins on *400 the CL & P Standard Offer. Further, NU represented to Con Edison that Select adhered to defined risk management policies that precluded Select from maintaining more than a specified limited number of megawatt hours in unmatched fixed-price contractual supply commitments in any given year....

(Compl.¶ 78.) Con Edison claims that these representations were false. (Compl.¶ 78.) The alleged representations were purported to have been made orally by NU personnel during due diligence and not as part of the representations and warranties contained in the Merger Agreement.

[3] NU contends that Con Edison cannot prove the element of reasonable reliance and thus cannot establish a valid claim for fraudulent inducement. NU denies making such representations, but that disputed issue of fact could not be a basis for summary judgment. Rather, NU claims that it is entitled to summary judgment because reasonable reliance on the extra-contractual representations in this case is foreclosed as a matter of law. NU bases this claim on the provisions of the Confidentiality Agreement and the Merger Agreement, and on allegedly well settled law.

First, NU argues, the Confidentiality Agreement's express disclaimer of reliance on any representations made during due diligence bars Con Edison's claim that it can and did rely on the alleged representations about Select's risk management policies. The Confidentiality Agreement's integration clause reads, "Only those representations and warranties made in a Definitive Agreement and subject to such limitations and restrictions as may be specified therein will have any legal effect." (Confid.Agr.¶ 6.) The Confidentiality Agreement also provides, in part:

The Parties (i) acknowledge that neither Party nor any Representative of either Party makes any representation or warranty, either express or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of any Evaluation Material, and (ii) agree, to the fullest extent permitted by law, except as may be provided in a Definitive Agreement ... that neither Party nor any Representative of either Party shall have any liability to the other Party or any of the other Party's Representatives on any basis ... as a result of the Parties' participation in evaluating a possible Transaction, the review by either Party of the other Party or the use of the Evaluation Material by either Party or its Representatives in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement. Each Party agrees that it is not entitled to rely on the accuracy or completeness of the Evaluation Material....

(Confid.Agr. ¶ 6 (emphases added).) [FN2] NU claims that the terms of the Confidentiality Agreement thus expressly bar Con Edison from relying on exactly the type of representations they allege. Therefore, Con Edison cannot support a claim of reasonable reliance. See, e.g., Banner Indus., Inc. v. Schwartz, 204 A.D.2d 190, 612 N.Y.S.2d 861 (1994) (upholding dismissal of causes of action for fraud because disclaimers in confidentiality agreement barred the relevant reliance on oral misrepresentations).

FN2. The Confidentiality Agreement defined the term "Evaluation Material" as "as all data, reports, interpretations, forecasts and records (whether oral or in written form, electronically stored or otherwise) containing or otherwise reflecting information" concerning one party and supplied by that party to the other. (Confid.Agr.¶ 1.) A "Definitive Agreement" provides for a transaction and has been executed and delivered. (Confid.Agr. ¶ 6.)

*401 Second, NU represents that the Merger Agreement's integration clause, combined with the document's representations, warranties, and covenants, bars reliance on any representations not explicitly set forth in the Merger Agreement. The Merger Agreement's integration clause provides that the "Agreement ... and the Confidentiality Agreement ... (i) constitutes [sic] the entire agreement, and supersedes [sic] all prior agreements and understandings, both written and oral, among the parties with respect to the subject matter of this Agreement...." (Merger Agr. § 8.06.) The Merger Agreement contains no representations or warranties about Select's risk policies. Thus, NU contends, Con Edison cannot successfully assert its claim for fraudulent inducement.

[4] Third, NU argues, Con Edison's purported reliance on any representations outside of the Merger Agreement is unreasonable as a matter of law. See Emergent Capital Investment Mgmt., LLC v. Stonepath Group, Inc., 165 F.Supp.2d 615 (S.D.N.Y.2001) (hereinafter Emergent Capital I) (finding that the plaintiff could not reasonably rely on statements not incorporated into a fully integrated, unambiguous stock purchase agreement); see also Emergent Capital Investment Mgmt., LLC v. Stonepath Group, Inc., 195 F.Supp.2d 551, 562 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (hereinafter Emergent Capital II) [FN3] ("when the contract states that the defendant makes no representations other than those contained in another more exhaustive clause of the contract, a fraud claim may be precluded"). "Under New York law, where a party specifically disclaims reliance upon a particular representation in a contract, that party cannot, in a subsequent action for common law fraud, claim it was fraudulently induced to enter into the contract by the very representation it has disclaimed reliance upon." Emergent Capital II, 195 F.Supp.2d at 561 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted) (collecting cases).

FN3. The Court will use the title "Emergent Capital" when referring to the facts of the case as a whole but will cite to the specific decisions in Emergent Capital I and Emergent Capital II.

[5] Con Edison replies that the integration clauses in Section 8.06 of the Merger Agreement and Paragraph 6 of the Confidentiality Agreement use general language and thus do not bar its claim of reasonable reliance. Con Edison is correct that under New York law, a general merger clause does not preclude a claim for fraudulent inducement. See, e.g., Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. v. Yanakas, 7 F.3d 310, 315 (2d Cir.1993); Citibank, N.A. v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 485 N.E.2d 974, 976 (1985); Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 598-99 (1959). Con Edison asserts that the sole exception to this rule is for contracts containing a disclaimer addressing the specific representation at issue in the case. See, e.g., Danann, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d at 599.

In this case, the specific disclaimer in the Confidentiality Agreement combined with the merger clause in the Merger Agreement defeat any claim of reasonable reliance on the alleged oral statements in the course of due diligence and the written August Policies. All of the oral statements were made during the course of due diligence and the August Policies were provided pursuant to the Confidentiality Agreement. The Confidentiality Agreement unambiguously provides that "Each party agrees that it is not entitled to rely on the accuracy or completeness of the Evaluation Material" supplied during due diligence. (Confid.Agr.¶ 6.) The alleged oral representations by NU employees and *402 the August Policies constitute such Evaluation Material. (Confid.Agr.¶ 1.) [FN4]

FN4. This fact distinguishes this case from Suez Equity Investors, L.P. v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, 250 F.3d 87 (2d Cir.2001), on which Con Edison relies. In Suez, the Second Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the district court's dismissal of a negligent misrepresentation claim on a motion to dismiss. The Court of Appeals found, in part, that the defendants could not rely on relevant portions of a confidentiality agreement that disclaimed any reliance on the accuracy or completeness of certain information transmitted from the defendants to the plaintiffs. Id. at 104. However, in that case, the alleged conflicting oral statements would not have been covered by the confidentiality agreement and thus the court found that the tension between the oral statement and the agreement could not be resolved on the pleadings. Id. Unlike Suez, there is no question that the alleged representations upon which Con Edison claims to have relied were Evaluation Materials as defined by the Confidentiality Agreement. Moreover, unlike the present case, Suez did not involve a Confidentiality Agreement followed by a Merger Agreement with a merger clause where the parties had the opportunity to include any representations or warranties on which they purported to rely.

The Merger Agreement went on to provide that the Merger Agreement and the Confidentiality Agreement were the entire agreement between the parties and superseded all prior understandings, both written and oral. Con Edison, advised by sophisticated financial and legal advisors in a multi-billion dollar transaction, was specifically advised that it could not rely on the oral representations and documents provided in due diligence. If it did believe that any such statements or documents were significant, it could have made them a basis for a specific representation and warranty in the Merger Agreement but it failed to do so. Pursuant to the documents in this case, Con Edison cannot establish that it reasonably relied on the alleged oral representations or the August Policies. See Harsco Corp. v. Segui, 91 F.3d 337, 343-48 (2d Cir.1996); Emergent Capital II, 195 F.Supp.2d at 562.

This case is an even stronger case for barring any finding of reasonable reliance than Harsco where the Court of Appeals found no basis for claims of fraud and negligent misrepresentation brought by an acquiring company, Harsco, against various officers and directors of MultiServ, the acquiree, because reasonable reliance could not be established. The plaintiff alleged that a "no other representations" clause in the parties' merger agreement used general terms that were insufficient to bar a claim for reasonable reliance. Harsco, 91 F.3d 337 at 345. [FN5] Harsco claimed that during a 14-day confirmatory due diligence, the defendants represented that one of their manufacturing plants in Russia would be operational within approximately six months while knowing that the foundation for the plant had not even been poured. Id. at 346. Like this case, no specific representations about the Russian plant were included in the relevant sections of the merger agreement (§§ 2.01-2.04). Despite this fact, the Court of Appeals found that, "We think Harsco should be treated as if it meant what it said when it agreed ... that there *403 were no representations other than those contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 that were part of the transaction." Id. The court concluded, "relying on the sophisticated context of this transaction, we hold that Harsco must be held to its agreement." Id.

FN5. A portion of Section 2.05 of the agreement stated that the Defendants "make no representation or warranty to Harsco regarding (a) any projections, estimates or budgets heretofore delivered to or made available to Purchaser of future revenues, expenses or expenditures, future results of operations ..., future cash flows or future financial condition ... of MultiServ or the future business of MultiServ; or (b) any other information or documents made available to Harsco or its counsel, accountants or advisors with respect to MultiServ or the business and operations of MultiServ, except as expressly covered by a representation and warranty contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof." Harsco, 91 F.3d 337 at 345 (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted).

As in Harsco, the August Policies and the alleged oral representations that NU gave Con Edison during due diligence were not mentioned by name in the Confidentiality Agreement or the Merger Agreement. But the Court of Appeals in Harsco found such explicit language unnecessary in part because "the exhaustive nature of the [Agreement's] representations adds to the specificity of [the Agreement's] disclaimer of other representations." Id. The same conclusion can be reached in this case because the Confidentiality Agreement made clear that neither party could rely on representations made in the course due diligence and the Merger Agreement provided that it and the Confidentiality Agreement were the entire agreement between the parties and superceded all other understandings. Like Harsco, the Confidentiality Agreement's disclaimer, as well as the integration clause in the Merger Agreement, are strengthened by the extensive and exclusive representations and warranties made in the Merger Agreement which failed to include the representations on which Con Edison now seeks to rely.

Similarly, in Emergent Capital, in dismissing a claim of fraudulent inducement, Judge Sweet of this court pointed to the 29 separate representations and warranties, and 16 separate covenants, favoring the plaintiff that were contained in the Stock Purchase Agreement at issue. Emergent Capital I, 165 F.Supp.2d at 622; see also Emergent Capital II, 195 F.Supp.2d at 562 ("If [the] merger clause stood alone, there would be no question that it would not by itself preclude reasonable reliance as a matter of law. In addition to the merger clause, however, the Stock Purchase Agreement makes 29 separate representations and warranties and 16 separate covenants in favor of [the plaintiff].") [FN6] Again, similar to this case, the Stock Purchase Agreement did not include any representations or warranties specifically addressing the subject matter of the alleged fraudulent representation. Nonetheless, the court found, "Even in the absence of a specific disclaimer, a fraudulent inducement claim will be barred whenever an express provision in a written contract contradicts the claimed oral representations in a meaningful fashion." Emergent Capital II, 195 F.Supp.2d at 561 (internal quotation marks omitted) (collecting cases). [FN7] Moreover, "[e]ven if an integration *404 clause is general, a fraud claim will not stand where the clause was included in a multimillion dollar transaction that was executed following negotiations between sophisticated business people and a fraud defense is inconsistent with other specific recitals in the contract." Emergent Capital I, 165 F.Supp.2d at 622.

FN6. The merger clause at issue read, "This Agreement, together with the exhibits and schedules hereto and ancillary Agreements, contains the entire understanding and agreement between or among [the signatories], and supersedes all prior understandings or agreements between or among any of [the signatories] with respect to the subject matter hereof." Emergent Capital II, 195 F.Supp.2d at 562.

FN7. Con Edison relies on JPMorgan Chase Bank v. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co., 189 F.Supp.2d 24 (S.D.N.Y.2002), in which Judge Rakoff denied a motion for summary judgment on the grounds of fraudulent inducement and/or fraudulent concealment in part because the broad disclaimer language in that case did not preclude a finding of reasonable reliance. However, the facts of this case more closely resemble those of Citibank, N.A. v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 485 N.E.2d 974 (1985), which the court in JPMorgan used to distinguish the facts of that case from those in which the New York Court of Appeals found that a disclaimer agreement barred a claim of reasonable reliance. In Plapinger, despite broad disclaimer language, the disclaimers of reliance were signed during the same negotiations during which certain relied upon promises were allegedly made. As Judge Rakoff explained, because of the proximity between the disclaimer and the alleged oral representations, "in agreeing to the disclaimers, the corporate officers had to know that, at a minimum, the disclaimers precluded reliance on any specific oral promises made during the defendants' negotiations with the [plaintiffs]." JPMorgan, 189 F.Supp.2d at 27. Similarly, the disclaimers in the Confidentiality Agreement in this case explicitly addressed the information provided to Con Edison during due diligence and Con Edison must have known, in agreeing to that provision, that it was giving up the right to rely on the August Policies turned over during due diligence or any alleged oral statements made during that same period unless Con Edison chose to include specific representations and warranties in the subsequent definitive agreement that covered those alleged representations.

Con Edison urges the Court to disregard Emergent Capital in view of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals' decision in Caiola v. Citibank, 295 F.3d 312 (2d Cir.2002). However, Caiola is not inconsistent with Emergent Capital or Harsco and is distinguishable from this case.

In Caiola, the plaintiff brought federal securities fraud and state law claims against the defendant, Citibank, which the district court dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Caiola, a sophisticated investor and major client of Citibank, undertook high volume equity trading and entrusted funds to Citibank which in turn engaged various outside brokerage firms. Id. at 315. As Caiola's trades grew, Citibank proposed synthetic trading as a way for Caiola, who was heavily concentrated in large positions of a single stock, to reduce the risks associated with large-volume trading. Id. at 316. Caiola took Citibank's advice and the parties documented the resulting transactions through an International Swap Dealers Master Agreement ("ISDA Agreement") dated March 25, 1994, which governed the overall synthetic trading relationship. Id. The ISDA Agreement contained an integration clause stating, in part, "This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement and understanding of the parties with respect to its subject matter and supersedes all oral communication and prior writings with respect thereto." Id. at 318. Each synthetic transaction was governed by an individualized Confirmation containing a number of disclaimers. Id. at 317. One such disclaimer provided that each party represented to the other that "it is not relying on any advice, statements or recommendations (whether written or oral) of the other party." Id.

In October 1998, Citibank's parent company merged with another corporation and Caiola feared that Salomon Smith Barney ("SSB"), an affiliate of that corporation, would become involved in his account. Id. When Citibank informed Caiola that this would in fact happen, Caiola threatened to terminate his relationship with Citibank. Id. In response, Citibank assured Caiola that SSB would not interfere and that his synthetic trading relationship with Citibank would remain unchanged. Id. Moreover, Citibank told Caiola that it would continue to control risks through delta hedging, a strategy that provides protection against small changes of an underlying asset over a short time period. Id. at 317, 330. Caiola allegedly relied on these assurances and continued doing business with Citibank.

Within approximately six months, Caiola discovered that Citibank had ceased treating *405 his investments synthetically as early as November 1998. Id. at 319. Instead, at SSB's direction, many of his trades had been executed on the physical market. Id. at 319. Caiola claims that he lost tens of millions of dollars in March 1999 alone because Citibank had secretly and unilaterally terminated synthetic trading. Id. The Court of Appeals rejected Citibank's argument that a reasonable investor of Caiola's sophistication would not have relied on the defendant's alleged oral misrepresentations in view of the disclaimers in the ISDA Agreement and Confirmation. Id. at 330.

The disclaimers in Caiola differ significantly from those contained in the Confidentiality Agreement and the Merger Agreement in this case. First, the ISDA Agreement was executed almost exactly five years before Caiola discovered that Citibank had stopped synthetic trading. Second, the ISDA Agreement governed the parties' relationship as a whole rather than the specific, relatively brief due diligence period governed by the Confidentiality Agreement in this case. Moreover, the disclaimer in the Confirmation in Caiola fell "well short of tracking the particular misrepresentations alleged by Caiola." Id. The Court of Appeals found that the Confirmation at issue in Caiola stated "only in general terms that neither party relies 'on any advice, statements or recommendation (whether written or oral) or the other part.'" Id. The disclaimer demonstrated no connection to Citibank's practice of delta hedging. In comparison, the Confidentiality Agreement in this case specifically disclaimed reliance on any Evaluation Material, which would include oral statements and the August Policies, supplied during due diligence. The Merger Agreement subsequently disclaimed reliance on any statement or information not memorialized in that document. The documents and transactions in Caiola are thus very different from those at issue in this case.

"In evaluating justifiable reliance, the plaintiff's sophistication and expertise is a principal consideration." Emergent Capital I, 165 F.Supp.2d at 623 (collecting cases). Con Edison, a sophisticated party advised by sophisticated financial and legal advisors, had ample opportunity during due diligence to obtain any necessary information about Select, and has not shown that NU ever denied access to such information. Nor has Con Edison demonstrated that it made sufficient efforts to obtain the type of information about Select and NU's risk management policies that it now claims were integral to the decision to merge with NU. See Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Ins. Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1543 (2d Cir.1997) ("Where, as here, a party has been put on notice of the existence of material facts which have not been documented and he nevertheless proceeds with a transaction without securing the available documentation or inserting appropriate language in the agreement for his protection, he may truly be said to have willingly assumed the business risk that the facts may be not as represented.") (quoting Rodas v. Manitaras, 159 A.D.2d 341, 343, 552 N.Y.S.2d 618 (1990)). See also Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 157 (2d Cir.1995) (affirming summary judgment dismissing a fraud claim when plaintiff could not prove reasonable reliance on a known and disclosed risk that was "readily available to [the plaintiff] or any interested party who cared to ask"); Grumman Allied Indus., Inc. v. Rohr Indus., Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 737-38 (2d Cir.1984) (plaintiff's expertise, unfettered access to relevant information, and failure to take advantage of that access precluded plaintiff's claim of justifiable reliance on alleged misrepresentations). "Where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major *406 transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance." Grumman, 748 F.2d at 737.

The plaintiff could have asked NU for additional documents as it saw fit, such as underlying Select contracts, but there is no evidence that Con Edison did so or that NU failed to provide any requested material. For example, Con Edison's Charles Weliky testified as follows at his deposition:

Q: Was there anything that you asked for that you didn't get [in order to evaluate Select's position from a volume or risk management perspective]?

A: Yes.

Q: What was that?

A: The actual documents, the contracts, actual documents.

Q: Which contracts are you referring to?

A: All contracts that Select had.

Q: Who did you ask?

A: I didn't--that's the type of thing that we needed.

Q: Did anyone at Con Ed ask for that?

A: I don't know.

(Weliky Dep. at 36.) Moreover, Con Edison employee John Perkins, Director of Financial Administration for Con Edison Company of New York, testified that Con Edison never expected to review Select's actual contracts in order to determine if the company was in compliance with its risk management policies. (Deposition of John Perkins dated Feb. 1, 2002 ("Perkins Dep.") at 19-20 attached as Ex. 86 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) Perkins explained:

I mean, from my own experience, contracts of that type ... are generally considered confidential, so it's not something that we, for example, would typically give to anybody else.... It's really you have to go and ask what contracts you're engaged in, what you are covering. It's unlikely, extremely unlikely that someone would go across the confidentiality barrier and give you the contract.

(Perkins Dep. at 19-20.)

Moreover, multiple high level Con Edison employees testified that NU never denied Con Edison any requested information during due diligence. Weliky testified that no one from Select ever told him that they would not supply Con Edison with the Select contracts. (Weliky Dep. at 38.) Nor did Weliky hear from anyone at Con Edison that such a request had been refused. (Id.) Weliky admitted that after meeting with Simon and Frost on September 23, 1999, he did not recall ever discussing the risk management policies with anyone at Select or NU. (Id. at 42.)

Joan Freilich's experience appears consistent with Weliky's and she testified at her deposition as follows:

Q: During the course of the due diligence process, was there any information that you had asked for that Northeast Utilities didn't provide?

A: Some of it may have been provided in discussion or informally as opposed to formally, but I don't recall that we specifically asked for any information that was not provided at all, or that at least we didn't have an explanation that we weren't able to accept as to why it might not be provided.

Q: So do you recall that there was information that wasn't provided, but there was an acceptable explanation that went along with it?

A: I don't recall specifically, but there might have been.

(Freilich Dep. at 36-37.)

And Finally, Luther Tai, the Vice President of Corporate Planning at Con Edison, *407 who maintained significant control over Con Edison's due diligence at Select, (Deposition of Luther Tai dated Nov. 28, 2001 ("Tai Dep. Nov. 28") at 29-30 attached as Ex. 88 to Kraus Decl. Supp.), testified as follows:

Q: Did it ever come to your attention that NU held back from Con Ed information that it thought was competitively sensitive?

A: I don't recall specifically.

Q: Do you have even a general recollection of something like that happening?

A: No.

(Tai Dep. Nov. 28 at 61.)

Con Edison has not demonstrated that it sought the information about how the Standard Offer Contract was covered or Select's risk management policies that it now claims was crucial to its decision to merge with NU. Nor has Con Edison pointed to evidence that NU ever denied such information to Con Edison. [FN8] (Deposition of Joseph Cunha dated Oct. 26, 2001 at 57 attached as Ex. 59 to Kraus Decl. Supp.; Deposition of Howard Kelley dated Aug. 20, 2001 at 100 attached as Ex. 72 to Kraus Decl. Supp.)

FN8. In spite of the testimony cited above, Con Edison contends that, "Because of confidentiality concerns, concerns about sharing potentially sensitive information, and concerns about potential leaks, NU limited the documents it would directly provide to Con Edison, and insisted that Con Edison's diligence respecting Select rely on discussions with and presentations by senior representatives of NU, such as John Forsgren and Gary Simon, to obtain the requested information." (Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 9.) However, the deposition testimony that Con Edison cites in support of this contention fails to identify any specific instances in which Con Edison actually requested specific information or documents and had that request denied due to confidentiality or other concerns. (Deposition of John D. McMahon dated Nov. 21, 2001 at 27-30 attached as Ex. 83 to Gueli Decl. Opp.; Freilich Dep. Gueli at 33-34, 64-66, 126-28; Weliky Dep. 36-38, 67-71, 129-30; Frost Dep. at 35-36, 81; Deposition of Nicholas Galletti dated Nov. 15, 2001 ("Galletti Dep.") at 88, 101-02, 106-07 attached as Ex. 74 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) There is limited deposition testimony cited by the plaintiff that alludes somewhat more clearly to information that NU did not provide. (Weliky Dep. at 88-89, 135-36; Frost Dep. at 136-37; Galletti Dep. at 195-96.) Even this testimony falls short of evidence that Con Edison asked for specific documents that NU refused to provide, particularly in view of the deposition testimony from Con Edison's own witnesses cited in the text. In any event, it would have been unreasonable in a multi-billion dollar transaction to have relied on oral representations about contracts that were not produced, particularly in the face of a Confidentiality Agreement that said no reliance could be placed on such representations and when no representations about the allegedly withheld contracts were included in the Merger Agreement. If the plaintiff was in fact concerned about its inability to view any contracts, this is exactly the type of concern that it could have hedged against by including a pertinent representation or warranty in the Merger Agreement.

If NU had refused to provide any information that Con Edison sought, Con Edison, a sophisticated party, could have structured the Merger Agreement to include additional representations and warranties addressing any reservations Con Edison maintained over risk management policies at Select or, for that matter, any other relevant concerns. Instead, Con Edison chose to enter into an agreement without including such language or specifically including any representations or warranties with respect to the August Policies or alleged oral representations made during due diligence, both of which were disclaimed by the Confidentiality and Merger Agreements. "Sophisticated parties to major transactions cannot avoid their disclaimers by complaining that they received less than all information, for they could have negotiated for fuller information or *408 more complete warranties." DynCorp v. GTE Corp., 215 F.Supp.2d 308, 322 (S.D.N.Y.2002). "It is not the role of the courts to relieve sophisticated parties from detailed, bargained-for contractual provisions that allocate risks between them, and to provide extra-contractual rights or obligations for one side or the other." Id.

Ultimately, Con Edison's claim that the disclaimers in the Confidentiality and Merger Agreements are too general to bar reasonable reliance is unpersuasive. The Confidentiality Agreement explicitly disclaimed reliance on the exact type of due diligence representations made in the August Policies and allegedly made orally by NU employees. The parties subsequently agreed to an integration clause in the Merger Agreement that barred reliance on any representations or information that was not specifically covered by the extensive and detailed representations, warranties and covenants in that contract. The Confidentiality Agreement facilitated the production of documents and information subject to the condition that such materials could not be relied upon unless they were specifically included in the subsequent definitive agreement. Considering the combined force of these two documents, no reasonable jury could conclude that Con Edison reasonably relied on the alleged misrepresentations. The sophistication of the parties, the arms-length nature of the transaction, and the inclusion of numerous representations and warranties covering other aspects of the merger all support this conclusion.

Because Con Edison cannot sustain a claim of reasonable reliance, NU's motion for summary judgment on Con Edison's fraudulent inducement claim is granted. Count VI of the Complaint is therefore dismissed.

Con Edison also seeks summary judgment on its claim that NU fraudulently induced Con Edison into entering into the Merger Agreement by misrepresenting Select's risk management policy. For the reasons already explained, Con Edison cannot demonstrate reasonable reliance to succeed on this claim. Therefore, Con Edison's motion for summary judgment on Count VI is denied.

IV.

NU seeks summary judgment dismissing Con Edison's Seventh Claim for Relief for negligent misrepresentation. Con Ed alleges that:

NU negligently misrepresented to Con Edison that Select was or would be matched on, or otherwise would employ appropriate risk management techniques with respect to, its fixed-price contractual supply obligations to CL & P and adhered to defined risk management policies that precluded Select from maintaining more than a specified limited number of megawatt hours in unmatched fixed-price contractual supply commitments in any given year. (Compl.¶ 83.) Con Edison contends that it factually and reasonably relied on those representations to its detriment in deciding to enter into the Merger Agreement and seeks declaratory judgment that the Merger Agreement is void or voidable, as well as money damages. (Compl.¶¶ 84-86.)

[6][7] The elements of a claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law are that "(1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; (2) the defendant made a false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect; (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiff for a serious purpose; (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied *409 on it to his or her detriment." Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000). Thus, to prove negligent misrepresentation under New York law the plaintiff must prove reasonable reliance on the alleged misrepresentation. For the reasons explained in Part III, Con Edison cannot demonstrate the necessary element of reasonable reliance. NU's motion for summary judgment on Con Edison's negligent misrepresentation claim is therefore granted.

[8] NU also alleges that Con Edison's negligent misrepresentation should be dismissed because there is no special relationship between the parties. Under New York law, a claim for negligent misrepresentation is not actionable without a special relationship of trust or confidence. See Suez, 250 F.3d at 102-03; Banque Arabe, 57 F.3d at 158; Village on Canon v. Bankers Trust Co., 920 F.Supp. 520, 531-32 (S.D.N.Y.1996). The determination of whether a special relationship existed is a factual inquiry. Suez, 250 F.3d at 103.

The Complaint alleges that "there existed between the parties a close degree of trust and reliance in connection with the due diligence process." (Compl.¶ 83.) Con Edison contends that NU violated this relationship by failing to provide correct information about Select, failing to make full, complete and accurate disclosures, and by remaining silent about Select's risk management policies despite a duty to speak that resulted from NU's superior knowledge of Select. NU argues, by contrast, that the parties were both sophisticated investors engaged in an arms' length transaction that did not give rise to a special relationship. See Village on Canon, 920 F.Supp. at 531; Cf. Suez, 250 F.3d at 103-04.

In this case, it is unnecessary to reach the question of whether a special relationship existed between the parties because Con Edison cannot prove the essential element of reasonable reliance, and therefore Con Edison cannot prevail on its Seventh Claim for Relief. NU's motion for summary judgment dismissing Con Edison's negligent misrepresentation claim is therefore granted.

V.

[9] Both parties move for summary judgment on Con Edison's First and Third Claims for Relief. The first count alleges that "Northeast has breached or failed to perform in a material respect its obligations under Section 4.01 of the Agreement." (Compl.¶ 52.) Con Edison seeks monetary damages on this claim. (Compl.¶ 55.) The third claim alleges the failure of a condition precedent under Section 6.02(a) of the Merger Agreement which provides that it is a condition of Con Edison's obligations that the "representations and warranties of NU set forth herein shall be true and correct both when made and at and as of the Closing Date...." (Merger Agr. § 6.02(a).) The third claim alleges "Northeast has failed to perform or caused to be performed in all material respects all obligations required to be performed by it and its subsidiaries under Section 4.01 of the Agreement." (Compl.¶ 62.) "By reason of the foregoing, there has been a failure of a condition precedent to Con Edison's obligation to proceed with and consummate the mergers contemplated by the Agreement." (Compl.¶ 64.) Con Edison seeks equitable relief on this claim. (Compl.¶ 65.)

Section 4.01 of the Merger Agreement provides that between the execution of the Merger Agreement on October 13, 1999 and the closing of the merger, "NU shall, and shall cause the NU Subsidiaries to, carry on their respective businesses in the ordinary course consistent with past practice...." (Merger Agr. § 4.01.) Con Edison *410 claims that NU's failure to do so constitutes a breach of the Merger Agreement and a failure of a condition precedent under Section 6.02. Thus, Con Edison argues, it may justifiably terminate the merger under Section 7.01(c) of the Merger Agreement.

Con Edison alleges, more specifically, that Select administered the CL & P Standard Offer Contract in violation of its past practices as set forth in the August Policies by failing to secure electricity supply for the duration of the contract. [FN9] Moreover, in further violation of Section 4.01, Select then adopted a new risk management policy on May 4, 2000, without informing Con Edison. (Select Energy Policies dated May 4, 2000 ("May Policies") attached as Ex. 20 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Con Edison contends that the May Policies deleted key volumetric and VaR limits and that these changes allowed Select to carry large uncovered positions that vastly exceeded anything that would have been allowed under the disclosed Policy.

FN9. The August Policies provided, in part, that "[t]he approved hedge ratio is 70-100% for NU's future energy commodities associated with fixed price energy commitments, integrated over the life of the portfolio. Additionally, in no year can more than one million MWh of fixed price energy commitments remain unhedged." (August Policies at 5.) The August Policies set forth volumetric limits regarding specific types of energy products and obligations in particular markets. (August Policies at 6-8.) They also provided that Select's risk exposure would be limited to a value at risk ("VaR") of no more than $20 million. (August Policies at 9.) However, the Policies also stated that "[t]hese Policies will be reviewed at regular intervals and changes will be approved by the Risk Oversight Council (ROC)." (August Policies at 2 (emphasis added).)

NU opposes Con Edison's motion and moves for summary judgment on the claims on the ground that NU's actions were in fact consistent with past practice. NU asserts that it did not adopt new policies in May 1999, but that the new document merely reflected modifications to the August Policies. Such changes were consistent with Select's risk management strategy because both the new and old policies state at the outset that "[t]hese Policies will be reviewed at regular intervals and changes will be approved by the Risk Oversight Council (ROC)." (August Policies at 2; May Policies at 2.) Thus, NU claims, it was fully consistent with past practice for Select to modify its risk management policies in accordance with changing business needs.

Moreover, NU argues, Select's short position was not inconsistent with past practice. The extent of Select's experience with standard offer contracts consisted of managing one requirements contract with Boston Edison beginning in 1998. As Con Edison knew, this contract had in fact proved "quite negative" for NU because Select was short electricity at a time when prices experienced an upward spike, resulting in a loss of over $20 million on the contract in the first half of 1999. (Freilich Dep. at 40; Deposition of John Forsgren dated Dec. 13, 2001 ("Forsgren Dep. Kraus") at 30-33 attached as Ex. 62 to Kraus. Decl. Supp.) Hence, NU's limited experience with standard offer contracts included the maintenance of short positions.

NU also alleges that Con Edison knew of NU's short position yet never protested prior to trying to renegotiate the Merger Agreement. For example, NU's Form 10-Q public filing with the SEC dated March 30, 2000 and filed May 15, 2000, stated:

The servicing of CL & P's standard offer load is a significant risk for Select Energy, as this contract is for a 4-year period at a fixed price. This risk is somewhat mitigated by Select Energy *411 entering into purchase contracts with other energy providers to supply a portion of the standard offer requirement. If Select Energy is unable to source this load requirement at prices below the standard offer contract price as a result of energy price increases, Select Energy's earnings would be impacted by these market fluctuations.

(NU Form 10-Q for Quarterly Period Ending March 31, 2000 at 15-16 attached as Ex. 21 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) NU claims that Con Edison must have been aware of the risks facing Select.

[10] Based on competing interpretations of the Merger Agreement, both parties ask the Court to resolve the question of whether Select failed to follow its past practice, potentially excusing Con Edison from performance. "Where the language used is susceptible to differing interpretations, each of which may be said to be as reasonable as another, then the interpretation of the contract becomes a question of fact" and cannot be resolved on a motion for summary judgment. Bourne v. Walt Disney Co., 68 F.3d 621, 629 (2d Cir.1995)(internal alterations and quotation marks omitted); see also Bank of America Nat'l Trust and Savings Assoc. v. Gillaizeau, 766 F.2d 709, 715 (2d Cir.1985) ("Where contract language is ambiguous, the differing interpretations of the contract present a triable issue of fact. Summary Judgment is therefore inappropriate.") The Court cannot determine as a matter of law that the contract is unambiguous. See Bourne, 68 F.3d at 629 ("If the language of the contract is 'unambiguous and conveys a definite meaning,' then the interpretation of the contract is a question of law for the court.") (quoting Sayers v. Rochester Tel. Corp. Supplemental Mgmt. Pension Plan, 7 F.3d 1091, 1094 (2d Cir.1993)).

The Court cannot determine as a matter of law whether a violation of Section 4.01 of the Merger Agreement did or did not occur. Questions of fact remain for a jury. As a result, the parties' cross-motions for summary judgment on the first and third claims are both denied.

VI.

[11] Con Edison moves for summary judgment on its Fifth Cause of Action alleging that there was a failure of a condition precedent to Con Edison's obligations pursuant to Section 6.02(d) of the Merger Agreement. Section 6.02(d) provides that "[f]rom and after the date of this Agreement, no Material Adverse Change with respect to NU (including the discovery of, any deterioration in, or any worsening of, any change, effect, event, occurrence or state of facts existing or known as of the date of the Agreement) shall have occurred." A Material Adverse Change ("MAC") is "any change, effect, event, occurrence or state of facts ... that is, or would reasonably be expected to be, materially adverse to the business, assets, properties, condition (financial or otherwise), results of operations or prospects of [NU] and its subsidiaries taken as a whole...." (Merger Agr. § 8.03(b).) Con Edison alleges that the MAC constitutes a failed condition precedent under Section 6.02(d) of the Merger Agreement and excuses Con Edison from performance.

Con Edison argues that Morgan Stanley's February 27, 2001 presentation to NU's Board of Trustees demonstrated that NU suffered a MAC, particularly that portion of the MAC definition that refers to NU's "prospects." [FN10] (MS Feb. Presentation.) *412 According to Con Edison, Morgan Stanley represented that NU's consolidated forecasted earnings for the five year period from 2001 through 2005 fell from $1.458 billion to $1.094 billion between October 1999 and September 2000. (MS Feb. Presentation at 3.) Morgan Stanley also allegedly dropped NU's per share valuation range from $18.25-$23.50 to $15.25-$18.50 between its October 1999 and February 2001 presentations to NU's Board. (MS Oct. Presentation at NU 235246; MS Feb. Presentation at MS 2273.) Con Edison also cites a report by NU Treasurer David McHale in which he noted "that between October 1999 and September 2000, Select lowered their average profit margins substantially, from 8.1% to 4.5%." (Report by David McHale to John Forsgren dated Jan. 6, 2001 at NU-182459 attached as Ex. 35 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Taken together, Con Edison claims, the evidence demonstrates a drastic decline in NU's financial condition and prospects. In other words, the company had undergone a material adverse change.

FN10. Con Edison claims to have relied on the opinions of Morgan Stanley, NU's own bankers, in making this motion in order to avoid a factual dispute over the accuracy of the analysis of Con Edison's bankers, SSB. Nevertheless, genuine questions of material fact still exist.

NU denies suffering a MAC and argues that such a determination presents quintessential issues of fact for a jury to decide. Demonstrating that questions of fact remain, Dan More, the Managing Director of Mergers and Acquisitions at Morgan Stanley who actually gave the February 2001 presentation to NU's Board, offered a different view of the presentation's meaning. (Deposition of Dan More dated Nov. 30, 2001 ("More Dep.") at 6 attached as Ex. 135 to Kraus Decl. Opp.) More attested that when asked by NU management, the NU Board of Trustees, and in conversations with SSB personnel, More was "emphatic that there was no material adverse change [at NU]." (More Dep. at 69.)

NU also offers a report by its own expert witness, Donna M. Hitscherich ("Hitscherich"), Adjunct Professor in the Finance and Economics Department at Columbia University's Graduate School of Business, concerning the meaning and effect of Morgan Stanley's February presentation. (Rebuttal Report of Donna M. Hitscherich dated Mar. 18, 2002 ("Hitscherich Rebuttal") attached as Ex. 146 to Kraus Decl. Supp.) NU asked Hitscherich to respond to the assertion of Con Edison's expert that:

Analyses prepared by Morgan Stanley, NU's own financial advisor, and presented to NU's board of trustees support the conclusion that NU's prospects changed substantially and materially from October 1999 to early 2001 and that a reasonable acquirer would consider the changes in the level and mix of NU's projected profits, as reflected in Morgan Stanley's February 2001 analysis to be a significant development. From a business and economic perspective, a change of this magnitude would constitute a material adverse change in the prospects of the acquiree.

(Hitscherich Rebuttal at 1-2 (internal alterations and quotation marks omitted).) Hitscherich found the contention that changes in NU's earning forecasts between October 1999 and early 2001 constitute a MAC to be "superficial and unsupportable" and that "no proper or meaningful analysis of NU's business prospects can be based on the mere mathematical differences in the numbers contained in the [Morgan Stanley] Presentation, and ... no reasonable acquirer would view those numbers in such a summary manner" as Con Edison's expert *413 had done. (Hitscherich Rebuttal at 3, 19-20.)

NU also challenges Con Edison's conclusions about NU's comparative financial prospects discussed above because John Forsgren allegedly explained to Joan Freilich that the information in the October 1999 forecast was "aspirational, optimistic and certainly should not be relied on." (Forsgren Decl. ¶ 5.) Forsgren also explained that Con Edison cannot make a valid comparison between the October 1999 forecast and Morgan Stanley's February 2001 presentation because the latter document was "prepared outside of the customary process by which NU compiles its official 5-year earnings projections" and was "created only for the limited purpose of deciding whether Select should make a $480 million investment" in certain other assets. (Forsgren Decl. ¶ 10.) Finally, NU notes that the price of NU's common stock as traded on the New York Stock Exchange was in fact slightly higher after Con Edison announced its withdrawal from the Merger Agreement than it was before rumors of the merger could affect NU's stock price. (Rebuttal Report of Gregg A. Jarrell dated Mar. 20, 2002 ¶¶ 10-12 attached as Ex. 93 to Kraus Decl. Supp.) Accordingly, no MAC was reflected in the trading price of NU's stock.

The parties present differing interpretations of NU's evolving financial condition and prospects. Each party has presented expert reports, deposition testimony from those involved in the merger, and various other documents purporting to support their case. The differing interpretations of the financial data and the competing testimony of the parties' experts create genuine issues of material fact that cannot be resolved on this motion for summary judgment. Therefore, Con Edison's motion for summary judgment on the Fifth Cause of Action is denied.

VII.

[12] Con Edison moves for summary judgment dismissing NU's counterclaim which alleges that Con Edison materially breached the Merger Agreement by repudiating its obligations under the contract and by refusing to proceed with the merger on the terms set forth in the Merger Agreement. (Counterclaim ¶ 60.) NU contends that the material breach occurred on or about March 5, 2001 when Con Edison notified NU that it would not proceed with the merger on the terms set forth in the Merger Agreement. (Counterclaim ¶ 7.) This breach allegedly caused NU and its shareholders substantial damages, including but not limited to the loss of the acquisition premium in the Merger Agreement; the difference between the merger consideration as established by the Merger Agreement and the current market value of NU's common stock; the expenditure of NU's time, money, and other resources in seeking regulatory approval of the merger and in preparing for consolidation of NU and Con Edison after consummation of the merger; and lost business opportunities during the time that NU's operations were restricted by provisions of the Merger Agreement. (Counterclaim ¶ 61.)

According to Con Edison, NU cannot obtain consequential damages for any alleged breach of contract because the Merger Agreement requires that such recovery be preceded by a "willful" breach which Con Edison claims did not occur. Section 7.02 of the Merger Agreement provides that in the event of termination of the Agreement by either party "as provided in Section 7.01," the Merger Agreement "shall forthwith become null and void and have no effect, without any liability or obligation on the part of [either party] [other than pursuant to certain sections *414 not here relevant]" Consequential damages are only available:

to the extent that such termination results from the willful and material breach by a party of any of its representations, warranties, covenants or agreements set forth in this Agreement, in which case such termination shall not relieve any party of any liability or damages resulting from its willful and material breach of this Agreement....

(Merger Agr. § 7.02 (emphasis added).) Con Edison argues that the sole way in which NU can obtain consequential damages for breach of contract is by satisfying the conditions of Section 7.

Con Edison defines "willful" breach as conduct undertaken with malice and in bad faith in accordance with the New York Court of Appeals decision in Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Noble Lowndes Int'l, Inc., 84 N.Y.2d 430, 618 N.Y.S.2d 882, 643 N.E.2d 504 (1994). At issue in Metropolitan Life was a contractual provision limiting liability for actions other than those involving "intentional misrepresentations, or damages arising out of [defendant's] willful acts or gross negligence." Id. 618 N.Y.S.2d 882, 643 N.E.2d at 506 (emphasis omitted) (alteration in the original). See also Kalisch-Jarcho, Inc. v. City of New York, 58 N.Y.2d 377, 461 N.Y.S.2d 746, 448 N.E.2d 413, 416-17 (1983) (finding an exculpatory clause unenforceable when the misconduct for which it granted immunity was "fraudulent, malicious or prompted by the sinister intention of one acting in bad faith.")

Con Edison contends that NU can point to no evidence of willful conduct or bad faith by Con Edison. Instead, Con Edison claims, it failed to go through with the merger due to the type of economic self-interest that Metropolitan Life held not to be willful. In support of this claim, Con Edison cites statements by two NU executives who testified that they thought Con Edison refused to go forward with the merger because of genuine financial concerns, and that Con Edison CEO McGrath acted in good faith in negotiating the merger. (Deposition of John Forsgren dated Dec. 13, 2001 ("Forsgren Dep. Gueli") at 330 attached as Ex. 59 to Gueli Decl. Supp.; Deposition of Michael G. Morris dated Dec. 20, 2001 at 219 attached as Ex. 74 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) At oral argument, counsel for NU characterized these statements as made without the benefit of full discovery and in accordance with deponents' desires to avoid accusing Con Edison of bad acts. (Tr. at 60.) Counsel also argued that the meaning of such statements should properly be fleshed out on cross examination at trial. (Tr. at 60.)

NU argues correctly that the definition of willful acts in Metropolitan Life is of little use in determining what constitutes a "willful and material breach" under Section 7.02 of the Merger Agreement. In Metropolitan Life, the New York Court of Appeals concluded that "the term willful acts as used in this contract was intended by the parties to subsume conduct which is tortious in nature, i.e., wrongful conduct in which defendant willfully intends to inflict harm on plaintiff at least in part through the means of breaching the contract between the parties." Metropolitan Life, 618 N.Y.S.2d 882, 643 N.E.2d at 508 (emphasis added). The Court of Appeals examined the entire contract in that case and concluded that the parties "intended to narrowly exclude from protection truly culpable, harmful conduct, not merely intentional nonperformance of the Agreement motivated by financial interest." Id. Under the contractual interpretation tool of "ejusdem generis", the court found that "willful acts" as used by the parties to the contract should be interpreted as "referring to conduct similar in nature to the *415 'intentional misrepresentation' and 'gross negligence' with which it was joined as exceptions to defendant's general immunity from liability for consequential damages." Id.

There is no evidence that the parties in this case intended a definition based on tort law to apply to Section 7.02 of the Merger Agreement. See VTech Holdings Ltd. v. Lucent Technologies Inc., 172 F.Supp.2d 435, 441-42 (S.D.N.Y.2001). In this case willfulness is tied only to a material breach of the contract and not to tort concepts such as "intentional misrepresentation" and "gross negligence." The terms of the Merger Agreement are not so unambiguous that the Court can determine that Con Edison's interpretation is correct as a matter of law or that Con Edison's actions do not rise to the level of willfulness required to recover consequential damages.

NU also argues that Section 7.02 simply does not govern its breach of contract claim and therefore it need not prove a willful breach to recover consequential damages. Section 7 of the Merger Agreement is a termination clause rather than a general provision for breach of contract damages, and applies "[i]n the event of termination of this Agreement by either NU or [Con Edison] as provided in Section 7.01." (Merger Agr. § 7.02.) Section 7.01 provides the conditions under which the Merger Agreement can be terminated. The actual procedures for termination are outlined in Section 7.05, which states that termination pursuant to Section 7.01:

shall, in order to be effective, require, in the case of NU, action by its Board of Trustees or the duly authorized committee or designee of its Board of Trustees to the extent permitted by law and the Trust Agreement and, in the case of [Con Edison], action by its Board of Directors or the duly authorized committee or designee of its Board of Directors to the extent permitted by law and its certificate of incorporation.

(Merger Agr. § 7.01.) NU argues that neither NU's Board of Trustees nor Con Edison's Board of Directors took any "action" to terminate the Merger Agreement and thus Section 7.02 does not apply to the Counterclaim. (See, e.g., Deposition of Michael J. Delguidice dated July 16, 2001 at 212-14 attached as Ex. 61 to Kraus. Decl. Supp.; Deposition of Joan Freilich dated Dec. 11, 2001 at 436 attached as Ex. 63 to Kraus Decl. Supp.; Deposition of Ellen V. Futter dated Nov. 9, 2001 at 97-98, 213 attached as Ex. 66 to Kraus. Decl. Supp.)

Con Edison attacks this assertion on two primary grounds. First, Con Edison argues that NU has defeated its claim for consequential damages by alleging that neither party terminated the Merger Agreement. Con Edison contends that such damages are available only if there is both a breach and a subsequent termination, which counsel for Con Edison stated would occur after a breach. (Tr. at 8.) It is true that the Merger Agreement contains no provision for relief in the event of a breach of contract without a valid termination. And it is possible that the parties intended Section 7's termination provisions to provide the exclusive coverage of the parties' liabilities in case of a breach.

Second, Con Edison argues that it did in fact terminate the Merger Agreement when McGrath informed Morris on March 5, 2001 that Con Edison would not proceed with the merger. Con Edison contends that NU conceded the fact of Con Edison's termination when Morris wrote to McGrath that same day that "Con Edison's unwillingness to proceed effectively terminates our Merger Agreement." (Letter from Morris to McGrath dated Mar. 5, 2001 ("Morris-McGrath Letter") attached as Ex. 41 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) The letter *416 also stated: "NU considers Con Edison's refusal to proceed with the merger at the agreed-upon price to constitute an anticipatory repudiation and breach of our Merger Agreement." (Morris-McGrath Letter.) As further evidence of termination, Con Edison cites an NU press release which stated that because Con Edison failed to provide assurances that it would abide by the terms of the Merger Agreement, "the agreement has effectively been terminated." (NU News Release dated Mar. 5, 2001 attached as Ex. 43 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) At oral argument, NU alleged that the uses of "terminates" and "terminated" in the above instances were merely colloquial and were not meant as contractual terms of art. (Tr. at 58.)

There are issues of fact as to the interpretation of Section 7 of the Merger Agreement. It is not clear that Section 7, which provided for a regularized method of termination of the Merger Agreement, provided the sole basis for a party to obtain damages if the other party breached the Merger Agreement by failing to abide by its terms. NU's argument is that Con Edison breached the Merger Agreement by failing to proceed with the merger in accordance with the terms of the Merger Agreement. There are also disputed issues whether the termination provision was substantially complied with. In any event, even if Section 7 were the exclusive means to obtain consequential damages, there would be issues of fact as to the intent of the parties in requiring a "willful and material breach" and whether such an event had occurred. Therefore, Con Edison's motion to dismiss NU's Counterclaim for breach of contract is denied.

VIII.

[13] Con Edison also moves for summary judgment dismissing NU's counterclaim for lack of standing to the extent that NU seeks to recover its shareholders' lost premium. Paragraph 61 of the counterclaim alleges, in part, "As a result of Con Ed's breach of the Merger Agreement, NU and its thousands of public shareholders have suffered substantial damages, including but not limited to the loss of the acquisition premium in the Merger Agreement...." (Counterclaim ¶ 61 (emphasis added).) The parties agree that NU could recover the takeover premium on behalf of its shareholders if they are intended third party beneficiaries of the Merger Agreement. However, Con Edison and NU disagree about whether this is the case.

According to Con Edison, Section 8.06 of the Merger Agreement makes explicit that there are no intended third party beneficiaries of the contract. Section 8.06 provides that "except for the provisions of Article II ... [the Merger Agreement is] not intended to confer upon any person other than the parties any rights or remedies." (Merger Agr. § 8.06.) Article II of the Merger Agreement outlines what would happen when Con Edison and NU merge (the "Effective Time"), including provisions for Con Edison to pay the merger consideration to NU shareholders. (Merger Agr. Art. 2.)

[14] NU can sue on behalf of its shareholders if they are intended third party beneficiaries of the Merger Agreement. See Associated Teachers of Huntington, Inc. v. Bd. of Educ., 33 N.Y.2d 229, 351 N.Y.S.2d 670, 306 N.E.2d 791, 794 (1973) ("the promisee has an undisputed right to enforce the contract made for the benefit of third parties"). Under New York law, NU's shareholders are intended (rather than incidental) beneficiaries of the Merger Agreement "if recognition of a right to performance in the beneficiary is appropriate to effectuate the intention of the parties and either (a) the performance *417 of the promise will satisfy an obligation of the promisee to pay money to the beneficiary; or (b) the circumstances indicate that the promisee intends to give the beneficiary the benefit of the promised performance...." Levin v. Tiber Holding Corp., 277 F.3d 243, 248 (2d Cir.2002) (quoting Restatement (Second) Contracts § 302). "An incidental beneficiary ... is not an intended beneficiary." LaSalle Nat'l Bank v. Ernst & Young LLP, 285 A.D.2d 101, 729 N.Y.S.2d 671, 676 (2001). While the Merger Agreement negated the existence of third party beneficiaries, it explicitly excepted Article II, thus creating third party beneficiaries in accordance with Article II. By its terms, the Merger Agreement thus explicitly made NU's shareholders third party beneficiaries of Con Edison's promise to pay the merger consideration.

Con Edison would limit third party beneficiary rights for the shareholders solely to the time after the merger had been completed, NU had ceased to exist, and the former NU shareholders were the only parties who could sue if they were not paid the merger consideration. However, there is no such limitation in the Merger Agreement. NU argues that the provision is in fact a common provision which is added to agreements precisely to permit a corporation to sue for damages when a merger has not been completed and where the bulk of damages will be the damages the shareholders suffered because the merger was not completed. (Tr. at 67-68.) There is no question under the Merger Agreement that the NU shareholders were third party beneficiaries and there is no basis in the Merger Agreement to limit their third party beneficiary status solely to the time after the merger had been completed. [FN11]

FN11. NU argues that provisions such as this were drafted to allow corporations to sue for the merger consideration for their shareholders after it was found that, without such a provision, shareholders were not third party beneficiaries. See In re Gulf Oil/Cities Service Tender Offer Litigation, 725 F.Supp. 712, 733 (S.D.N.Y.1989); Cities Serv. Co. v. Gulf Oil Corp., 797 P.2d 1009, 1011-12 (Okla.App.1990). As NU points out, the Effective Time never materialized because the merger was never completed. Where NU alleges that Con Edison unilaterally and unlawfully breached the Merger Agreement, Con Edison cannot avoid responsibilities that it may have to NU's shareholders relying on the argument that the Effective Time has not come to pass. See In re Enron Corp. No. 02 Civ. 4159 (AKH), 2002 WL 31374717, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Oct.22, 2002).

[15] Con Edison makes an independent argument that NU cannot recover damages on behalf of its shareholders because the shareholders released Con Edison from any and all claims relating to the merger in Brody v. Cleveland, No. 00 Civ. 2400 (S.D.N.Y. filed Mar. 29, 2000). [FN12] (Class Action Complaint filed Mar. 29, 2000 (Brody Complaint) attached as Ex. 52 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) Brody was a class action suit brought by NU shareholders against Con Edison, NU, and others for alleged violations of the federal proxy rules based on disclosures in the Proxy Statement issued by Con Edison and NU, as well as a claim against NU's trustees for breach of fiduciary duty. (Brody Complaint.) Brody terminated in a settlement agreement between the parties. (Order of Final Approval of Settlement and Final Judgment, and Order of Dismissal filed July 13, 2001 ("Brody Settlement") attached as Ex. 53 to Gueli Decl. Supp.) The plaintiffs (defined for purposes of the class as NU shareholders who were eligible to vote at an April 14, 2000 special shareholders meeting) agreed to release the "Released Claims," defined by the parties in a draft settlement agreement in January 2001 as:

FN12. The Honorable Denny Chin presided over Brody v. Cleveland.

*418 the allegations, claims and causes of action that have been asserted against the Released Persons in the [Brody litigation], as well as all claims that might have been or might be asserted that arise or potentially arise out of or relate in any way to the Merger Agreement, the merger of Con Edison and Northeast, the Initial Proxy and/or any of the transactions described in the Initial Proxy, other than those claims [for breach of fiduciary duty] asserted in Count II of the [Brody] Complaint.

(Declaration of Thomas J. Groark, Jr. sworn June 5, 2002 ("Groark Decl.") ¶ 10.) The Brody settlement also dismissed "all claims that might have been or might be asserted that arise or potentially arise out of or relate in any way to the Merger Agreement, the merger of Con Edison and Northeast, the Initial Proxy and/or any of the transactions described in the Initial Proxy...." (Brody Settlement ¶ 6.) The settlement provided that NU and Con Edison would mail their shareholders a supplement to their earlier Joint Proxy making certain additional disclosures. The plaintiffs received no monetary compensation from the settlement although Con Edison agreed to pay $600,000 for the class' attorneys' fees. (Groark Decl. ¶ 11.) [FN13]

FN13. The court dismissed Count II of the Complaint alleging breach of fiduciary duty as moot by Order filed March 30, 2001.

The settlement agreement was embodied in a Stipulation and Order dated April 5, 2000 which was endorsed by Judge Chin on April 11, 2000. (Groark Decl. ¶ 6.) When the parties reached their settlement, Con Edison had not advised NU that it would not proceed with the merger, an event that only occurred in March 2001. The parties negotiated over the amount of the attorney's fees to be paid and reported to Judge Chin in November 2000 that they had fully resolved all issues among them. (Groark Decl. ¶ 9.) The ultimate settlement was approved on July 13, 2001 and Judgment was entered.

[16][17][18][19] A release is a type of contract and is governed by principles of contract law.

Golden Pacific Bancorp v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 273 F.3d 509, 514 (2d Cir.2001) (internal quotation marks omitted). In determining the scope and validity of a release, courts should apply state law. See Olin Corp. v. Consolidated Aluminum Corp., 5 F.3d 10, 15 (2d Cir.1993); Prunella v. Carlshire Tenants, Inc., 94 F.Supp.2d 512, 517 (S.D.N.Y.2000). Under New York law, courts must "discern the intent of the parties to the extent their intent is evidenced by their written agreement." Olin Corp., 5 F.3d at 15 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Golden Pacific, 273 F.3d at 515. "Whether a contract is ambiguous is a question for the court. The interpretation of an unambiguous contract--including a release--is also a question of law for the court. Where the contract language is ambiguous, the differing interpretations of the contract present a triable issue of fact." Golden Pacific, 273 F.3d at 514-15 (internal quotation marks omitted). Moreover, a release that absolves one party from liability receives the "closest of judicial scrutiny." Id. at 515 (quoting Abramowitz v. N.Y. Univ. Dental Ctr., Coll. of Dentistry, 110 A.D.2d 343, 345, 494 N.Y.S.2d 721 (N.Y.App.Div.1985)).

NU argues that the Counterclaim does not constitute a Released Claim from Brody because the Released Claims related to alleged illegalities in the Joint Proxy. In other words, while the settlement agreement released Con Edison from responsibility for injuries arising from the allegedly *419 faulty Joint Proxy, the Brody settlement did not speak to the later injuries caused by Con Edison's repudiation of the Merger Agreement. Moreover, NU claims, the parties in Brody could not have anticipated the counterclaim brought in this action when signing the stipulation and order dismissing the Proxy-related claims in April 2000, approximately one year before Con Edison refused to proceed with the merger. (Stipulation and Order dated Apr. 5, 2000, filed May 2, 2000 attached as Ex. 97 to Kraus Decl. Supp.)

There is no evidence that Con Edison or NU intended the Brody settlement to have the preclusive effect advocated by Con Edison. Brody addressed violations of federal securities laws regarding statements in the Joint Proxy and an alleged breach of fiduciary duties by NU's Board of Trustees. It did not concern the alleged breach of contract by Con Edison. The litigation before this Court attempts to resolve issues arising from the subsequent failed merger between Con Edison and NU. Moreover, the plaintiffs in Brody settled that case without receiving any monetary award for the shareholders whereas over $1 billion is at stake in the current litigation. Indeed, Con Edison's failure to raise the affirmative defense of settlement or release before proceeding through discovery, with all the accompanying costs, undercuts Con Edison's assertion that its intent in Brody was for the Release in that case to cover claims of the NU shareholders to the merger consideration.

If Con Edison seriously thought that its non-monetary resolution of the Brody litigation was disposing of the claims of the NU shareholders to the alleged hundreds of millions of dollars in damages from the failed merger, that would raise a host of additional issues. It is sufficient at this point to find that Con Edison has not shown that it is entitled to summary judgment dismissing any claims by NU to the merger premium based on the Brody settlement.

NU also contends that Con Edison cannot rely on the Brody release at this stage of the litigation because Con Edison did not plead the affirmative defense in its answer. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(c); HCC, Inc. v. R H & M Machine Co., 96 Civ. 4920 (PKL), 1998 WL 765176, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Nov.2, 1998) (an affirmative defense not raised in an answer cannot form the basis for a dispositive motion). In fact, at the time that Con Edison answered the Counterclaim, on June 8, 2001, the Final Judgment in the Brody action had not been entered. However, Con Edison never moved to amend its Answer, nor asserted this affirmative defense to the Court in any form prior to the motion for summary judgment. At oral argument, counsel for Con Edison asked the Court to treat the motion for summary judgment as a motion for leave to amend its Answer to the counterclaim. (Tr. at 32.) See Monahan v. New York City Dept. of Corrections, 214 F.3d 275, 283 (2d Cir.2000) (district court has discretion to entertain defense of res judicata when raised in a motion for summary judgment by construing the motion as one to amend an answer). Con Edison never raised this argument in its papers and the application is of sufficient significance to warrant separate briefing supported by affidavits if Con Edison chooses to pursue this argument. The oral application to amend is denied without prejudice to a written motion to amend the Answer.

IX.

NU moves for summary judgment dismissing the First and Second counts of Con Edison's Complaint which seek "compensatory, consequential and incidental damages" for breach of Sections 4.01 and *420 3.01(i) of the Merger Agreement. (Compl. ¶¶ 52, 55, 57, 60.) In response to interrogatories asking Con Edison to quantify its damages from NU's alleged breach of the Merger Agreement, Con Edison answered:

The professional fees and expenses incurred by Con Edison in negotiating and attempting to consummate the Merger Agreement totaled at least $32.1 million. The damages suffered by Con Edison in the form of lost synergy savings equal the present value of Con Edison's approximately 82% share of (1) the expected $1,574,000,000 in synergy savings to be realized in the regulated businesses ... and (2) the expected $180,000,000 in synergy savings to be realized in the unregulated businesses....

(Con Edison's Resp. to [3d] Set of Interrog. dated Jan. 22, 2002 ("Interrog.Resp.") at 2-3 attached as Ex. 7 to Kraus Decl. Supp.) [FN14] NU contends that Con Edison is not entitled to such damages as a matter of law.

FN14. NU refers to these Interrogatories as the Third Set of Interrogatories and Con Edison states the same in the text of its Objections and Responses. However, the document title reflects that it relates to NU's Second Set of Interrogatories.

[20] NU claims that Con Edison cannot recover purported lost synergy savings because Con Edison has not suffered any legally cognizable damages net of acquisition costs. "[W]hen computing damages for a defendant's wrongful conduct, if any benefit or opportunity for benefit appears to have accrued to the plaintiff because of the breach, a balance must be struck between the benefit and loss, and the defendant is only chargeable with the net loss." Indu Craft, Inc. v. Bank of Baroda, 47 F.3d 490, 495 (2d Cir.1995) (internal quotation marks omitted). Thus, "revenues due a plaintiff because of a breached contract must be offset by any amount plaintiff saved as a result of the breach." Id.

NU's argument is premised on the assertion that Con Edison's agreement to pay $26.50 per share would have resulted in Con Edison vastly overpaying for NU. Because the Joint Proxy identified the unaffected price of NU shares at $18.56, (Joint Proxy at 34), NU contends that Con Edison would have paid a premium of at least $7.94 per share. When multiplied by roughly 137 million shares outstanding, (Merger Agr. § 3.01(c)), the premium would have amounted to approximately $1 billion in present value terms according to NU's calculations. (Report of Gregg A. Jarell dated Feb. 8, 2002 ¶¶ 39, 88 attached as Ex. 92 to Kraus Decl. Supp.) Thus, Con Edison would have had to pay this premium before capturing any "lost synergies." Because $1 billion greatly exceeds the $707 million in net merger savings estimated by Con Edison's own expert, (Expert Report and Disclosures of Kenneth M. Lehn dated Feb. 8, 2002 ¶ 37 n.14 attached as Ex. 94 to Kraus Decl. Supp.), (only 82% of which would accrue to Con Edison, or roughly $579.7 million) NU argues that Con Edison sustained no legally cognizable damages with respect to lost synergies.

Con Edison contends that any difference between NU's actual value and the $26.50 offered merger price is a question of fact for the jury to decide. In demonstrating the issues of fact precluding summary judgment, Con Edison argues that NU's intrinsic value to the company was much higher than its unaffected trading price. Thus, Con Edison's offer constituted exactly what it thought NU was worth in combination with Con Edison rather than greatly exceeding the value of NU's stock. For example, SSB calculated a value per NU share as high as $30.25, not including synergies. (Proxy Statement at 37.) If this *421 value were taken as correct it would clearly exceed NU's unaffected trading price, as well as the merger price offered by Con Edison.

NU also claims that Con Edison cannot recover the "professional fees and expenses incurred ... in negotiating and attempting to consummate the Merger Agreement" that it seeks. (Interrog. Resp. at 3.) The parties agreed that "[e]xcept as provided in this Section 5.09, all fees and expenses incurred in connection with the Mergers, this Agreement and the transactions contemplated by this Agreement shall be paid by the party incurring such fees and expenses, whether or not the Mergers are consummated...." (Merger Agr. § 5.09(a) (emphasis added).) The limited exceptions to this rule require a termination of the Merger Agreement pursuant to Section 7.01. (Merger Agr. § 5.09.)

NU asserts that Con Edison never terminated the Merger Agreement and cannot recover its fees or expenses. In support of this argument and in Con Edison's opposition papers the parties reargue the points discussed in Part VII. As the Court explained above, the question of whether a termination of the Merger Agreement occurred is one for the jury and cannot be decided on a motion for summary judgment. Because the motion for summary judgment dismissing the first and second counts of the Complaint present questions of fact and contract interpretation, the motion is denied.

X.

NU seeks summary judgment dismissing counts Two and Four of the Complaint which allege that NU breached Section 3.01(i) of the Merger Agreement, thus causing a failure of a condition precedent under Section 6.02(a).

Section 3.01(i) provides that between December 31, 1998 and October 13, 1999, when the parties signed the Merger Agreement, "(i) NU and each of the NU Subsidiaries have conducted their respective businesses only in the ordinary course of business consistent with past practice and (ii) there has not been, and no fact or condition exists which, individually or in the aggregate, would have a Material Adverse Effect on NU."

NU argues that even if Con Edison could prove that Select failed to operate in the "ordinary course of business consistent with past practice," such a violation could not have occurred between December 31, 1998 and October 13, 1999, the period covered by § 3.01(i). NU bases this assertion on the fact that Select signed the CL & P Standard Offer Contract on November 2, 1999, approximately three weeks after the date of the Merger Agreement. Furthermore, NU argues, to the extent that the second and fourth counts of the Complaint are premised on alleged MACs to NU's business or prospects, none of the events identified by Con Edison as constituting or contributing to a MAC occurred during the relevant time period. (See Compl. ¶¶ 42, 44-48.)

Con Edison counters NU's argument with a timeline of its own. Even though the CL & P Standard Offer Contract was not signed until November 2, 1999, Con Edison argues that Select's past practice was changed prior to October 13, 1999 by which time NU had already decided that Select would take on substantially greater risk than had been allowed previously. Con Ed claims not to have known about the policy change. To prove that the change preceded October 13, 1999, Con Edison contends that under Select's risk management policies in place on December 31, 1998, Select could not hold open positions on fixed-price energy obligations exceeding one million MWh in a given year. (NU Board of Trustees Wholesale Marketing *422 Overview dated Apr. 14, 1998 at NU-29479 attached as Ex. 1 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) Thus, prior to signing the CL & P Standard Offer Contract, NU knew that doing so would violate its current risk management policy. To support this contention, Con Edison cites Select's August Position Report which noted the upcoming CL & P Standard Offer Contract and stated that Select's "energy position is substantially short to the tune of 23 million MW/hrs." (Cover Memo to August Position Report dated Sept. 30, 1999 at NU-183307 attached as Ex. 14 to Gueli Decl. Opp.) Con Edison contends that in light of the evidence, a reasonable jury could conclude that Select altered its past practice prior to October 13, 1999.

END OF DOCUMENT

The events embodying or leading to alleged MACs cited by Con Edison raise issues of fact that cannot be decided on this motion for summary judgment. The Court cannot say as a matter of law that NU's alleged breach of Section 3.01(i) of the Merger Agreement could not have occurred, if it occurred at all, between December 31, 1998 and October 13, 1999. For this reason, the motion for summary judgment on counts Two and Four is denied.

CONCLUSION

The remaining arguments of the parties are either moot or without merit. For the reasons explained above: (1) NU's motion for summary judgment on Con Edison's fraudulent inducement claim is granted and Count VI of the Complaint is dismissed. Con Edison's motion for summary judgment on its fraudulent inducement claim is denied. (2) NU's motion for summary judgment on Con Edison's negligent misrepresentation claim is granted and Count VII is dismissed. (3) The parties' cross-motions for summary judgment on Counts I and III are denied. (4) Con Edison's motion for summary judgment on Count V of the Complaint declaring that a MAC occurred is denied. (5) Con Edison's motion to dismiss NU's counterclaim on all asserted grounds is denied. (6) NU's motion for summary judgment dismissing Counts I, II, and IV is denied.

SO ORDERED.

249 F.Supp.2d 387

19

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

CROMER FINANCE LTD. and Prival N.V., et al., Plaintiffs,

v.

Michael BERGER, Fund Administration
Services (Bermuda) Ltd., Ernst & Young International, Ernst & Young Bermuda, Kempe & Whittle Associates Limited,
Deloitte & Touche (Bermuda), Deloitte Touche
Tohmatsu, Deloitte & Touche
L.L.P., Bear Stearns & Co., Inc., Bear Stearns Securities Corp., Financial Asset Management, Inc., and John Does 1-100, Defendants.

ARGOS et al., Plaintiffs,

v.

Michael BERGER, Financial Asset Management, Inc., Fund Administration Services
(Bermuda) Ltd., Ernst & Young International,
Deloitte Touche, Deloitte Touche
Tohmatsu, Deloitte & Touche L.L.P., Bear
Stearns & Co., Inc., and Bear Stearns Securities Corp., Defendants.

Nos. 00 CIV. 2284(DLC), 00 CIV. 2498 (DLVC).

April 17, 2001.

Investors in an off-shore investment fund managed from New York brought securities fraud class action against the Bermuda accounting firms that served as the fund's administrators or auditors, as well as American and international affiliates of those Bermuda entities. Upon defendants' motions to dismiss, The District Court, Cote, J., held that: (1) court had personal jurisdiction over Bermuda-based fund administrators; (2) court had subject matter jurisdiction over claims against fund administrators; (3) federal securities fraud claims against one former fund administrator were time-barred but that administrator was subject to personal jurisdiction in New York on claims of common law fraud, aiding and abetting common law fraud, and negligent misrepresentation; (4) complaint adequately stated claim of controlling person liability against American accounting firm which owned Bermuda-based administrators; (5) investors failed to state claims under New York law for common law fraud, negligence, gross negligence, professional malpractice, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting common law fraud and aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty against American accounting firm; and (6) investors failed to adequately allege under New York law aiding and abetting common law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty claims against American accounting firm, which was affiliated with Bermuda-based auditor.

Motions granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Complaint alleging securities fraud must comport with rule setting forth special pleading requirements for claims involving fraud. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

To comply with rule setting forth special pleading requirements for claims involving fraud in alleging the misstatement, an allegation of fraud must specify: (1) those statements the plaintiff thinks were fraudulent, (2) the speaker, (3) where and when they were made, and (4) why plaintiff believes the statements fraudulent. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

In pleading a securities fraud violation, a complaint must allege that a defendant acted with scienter. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 21D(b)(2), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(b)(2).

[4] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

To satisfy scienter requirement in pleading a securities fraud violation, a complaint may (1) allege facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness, or (2) allege facts to show that defendants had both motive and opportunity to commit fraud. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 21D(b)(2), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(b)(2).

[5] Fraud 42
184k42

A plaintiff alleging fraud may sufficiently plead conscious misbehavior through allegations of deliberate illegal conduct.

[6] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

To plead recklessness, a plaintiff alleging fraud must allege facts showing conduct that was highly unreasonable, representing an extreme departure from the standards of ordinary care to the extent that the danger was either known to the defendant or so obvious that the defendant must have been aware of it.

[7] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

To plead facts supporting a strong inference of the requisite scienter by showing motive and opportunity, a securities fraud plaintiff must allege facts showing concrete benefits that could be realized by one or more of the false statements and wrongful nondisclosures alleged, and the means and likely prospect of achieving the concrete benefits by the means alleged. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 21D(b)(2), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(b)(2).

[8] Fraud 30
184k30

To state a claim for aiding and abetting fraud under New York law, a plaintiff must plead facts showing: (1) the existence of a fraud; (2) defendant's knowledge of the fraud; and (3) that the defendant provided substantial assistance to advance the fraud's commission.

[9] Fraud 30
184k30

Elements for a claim of aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty under New York law are: (1) a breach by a fiduciary of obligations to another, and (2) that the defendant knowingly induced or participated in the breach.

[10] Federal Courts 409.1
170Bk409.1

In a federal question action, a court looks to federal common law choice of law rules to decide which state's law governs the various legal claims.

[11] Fraud 25
184k25

With regard to claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty under New York law, substantial assistance requires the plaintiff to allege that the actions of the aider/abettor proximately caused the harm on which the primary liability is predicated; "but-for" causation is insufficient, rather, aider and abettor liability requires the injury to be a direct or reasonably foreseeable result of the conduct.

[12] Brokers 102
65k102

A clearing broker does not provide "substantial assistance" to or "participate" in a fraud when it merely clears trades.

[13] Brokers 102
65k102

A broker's failure to enforce margin requirements, or continuing to execute trades despite margin violations does not constitute substantial assistance for purposes of claim for aiding and abetting a fund manager's breach of fiduciary duty under New York law; furthermore, executing trades in order to reduce a loan of money under margin is insufficient to create liability.

[14] Securities Regulation 45.20
349Bk45.20

There is no private right of action for a violation of margin regulations, which are designed to protect the viability of brokerage houses and not to protect investors.

[15] Brokers 102

65k102

While Ponzi scheme may only have been possible because of clearing broker's actions, or inaction, clearing broker was not liable for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty under New York law since its conduct was not a proximate cause of the Ponzi scheme.

[16] Federal Courts 417
170Bk417

Where a case is brought pursuant to federal question jurisdiction and a defendant resides outside the forum state, a federal court applies the forum state's personal jurisdiction rules if the federal statute does not specifically provide for national service of process.

[17] Federal Courts 14.1
170Bk14.1

Pursuant to the doctrine of pendent personal jurisdiction, a district court can assert personal jurisdiction over parties on related state law claims where a federal statute authorizes nationwide service of process, and the federal and state claims derive from a common nucleus of operative fact, even where personal jurisdiction is not otherwise available.

[18] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Bermuda-based affiliates of United States-based accounting firm had continuous and systematic general business contacts with the United States sufficient to support a finding of general jurisdiction since affiliates acted as fund administrators of off-shore investment fund, which was managed from New York and which traded United States securities, and regularly solicited business in United States.

[19] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Specific jurisdiction existed over Bermuda-based administrators of off-shore investment fund, which was managed from New York and which traded United States securities, in suit alleging violations of the federal securities laws in connection with management of fund; administrators sent subscription documents to individuals in the United States soliciting investors for the fund, sent bills to fund manager in New York for approval prior to payment by the fund and received from the United States all of the information from which it prepared the statements it disseminated as fund administrators, and made countless mailings to investors or to the agents of investors residing in the United States.

[20] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Subjecting Bermuda-based administrators of off-shore investment fund to personal jurisdiction in United States in suit alleging violations of the federal securities laws in connection with management of fund would not be unreasonable; litigation would not impose undue burden on administrators, each of whom had substantial contacts with the United States and was part of a global enterprise managed from New York City.

[21] Federal Courts 207
170Bk207

[21] Securities Regulation 67.11
349Bk67.11

Effects test, which is one of two tests for determining whether court should entertain subject matter jurisdiction over a particular transnational securities fraud claim, looks to the effect of the fraudulent conduct that impacts on stock registered and listed on an American national securities exchange and is detrimental to the interests of American investors; impact on investors resident in the United States, whatever their nationality, is the focus of the effects test.

[22] Federal Courts 207
170Bk207

[22] Securities Regulation 67.11
349Bk67.11

A federal court has subject matter jurisdiction over a particular transnational securities fraud claim under the conduct test if (1) the defendant's activities in the United States were more than merely preparatory to a securities fraud conducted elsewhere, and (2) those activities or culpable failures to act within the United States directly caused the claimed losses; goal of the conduct test is to prevent the United States from being used as a base for manufacturing fraudulent security devices for export, even when these are peddled only to foreigners.

[23] Federal Courts 207
170Bk207

[23] Securities Regulation 67.11
349Bk67.11

Where defendants have undertaken significant steps in the United States in furtherance of a fraudulent scheme, United States courts have jurisdiction over suits arising from that conduct even if the final transaction occurs outside the United States and involves only foreign investors. Restatement (Second) of Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 416(d).

[24] Federal Courts 207
170Bk207

[24] Securities Regulation 67.11
349Bk67.11

Court had subject matter jurisdiction over suit alleging violations of the federal securities laws in connection with management of offshore fund; although the named plaintiffs were foreign citizens, and the fund operated as an offshore-fund, the fraud was run from the United States and it was the decisions made in the United States that led directly to the investors' losses.

[25] Securities Regulation 67.13
349Bk67.13

Investors adequately alleged a securities fraud claim against Bermuda-based administrators of off-shore investment fund; complaint alleged that administrators knowingly and/or recklessly used false data from fund manager, despite concurrent receipt of accurate financial statements from clearing broker, to prepare inflated NAV (net asset value) statements and disseminate them to investors who relied upon the information in their investment decisions regarding the fund and thereby suffered injury, and administrators further used the false NAV figures to process new subscriptions, issue new shares of the fund, and price investor redemptions. Securities Act of 1933, § 17(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 77q(a); Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[26] Securities Regulation 60.40
349Bk60.40

A primary violator of Section 10(b) is any actor who participated in the fraudulent scheme. Securities Act of 1933, § 17(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 77q(a); Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[27] Securities Regulation 60.40
349Bk60.40

[27] Securities Regulation 60.41
349Bk60.41

While private civil liability under Section 10(b) applies only to those who engage in the manipulative or deceptive practice and not to those who aid and abet the violation, a finding that the defendant communicated the misrepresentation directly to the plaintiff is not necessary; it is necessary, however, for the misrepresentation to have been attributed to the defendant at the time of dissemination; the necessity for that requirement is premised on the plaintiff's obligation to show reliance on the defendant's misstatement or omission to recover under 10b-5. Securities Act of 1933, § 17(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 77q(a); Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[28] Limitation of Actions 100(6)
241k100(6)

[28] Securities Regulation 134
349Bk134

Securities claims must be brought within one year of discovery of a violation and within three years of the actual violation.

[29] Securities Regulation 136
349Bk136

Federal securities fraud claims against former fund administrator were time-barred where investors failed to allege any material misrepresentation made by administrator within the statute of limitations period that was relied upon by the investors and thus failed to allege that administrator was a primary violator of the securities laws after it was replaced as fund's administrator.

[30] Courts 12(2.15)
106k12(2.15)

Under New York long-arm statute, a claim "arises out" of a party's transaction of business if it is sufficiently related to the business transacted that it would not be unfair to deem it to arise out of the transacted business, that is, if an articulable nexus exists between the claim and the transaction, and the defendant has purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting activities within New York and thereby invoked the benefits and protections of its laws. N.Y.McKinney's CPLR 302(a), par. 1.

[31] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Bermuda-based administrator of off-shore investment fund was subject to personal jurisdiction in New York on claims of common law fraud, aiding and abetting common law fraud, and negligent misrepresentation; administrator won the right to work as the administrator through face-to-face negotiations with fund manager in New York, allegedly ignored accurate financial statements received from clearing broker in New York and took direction from manager in New York for a fund managed in New York and trading securities on New York exchanges, and administrator solicited fund investors and/or their agents at New York addresses, and regularly sent NAV statements and other fund documents to investors or their managers in New York. N.Y.McKinney's CPLR 302(a), par. 1.

[32] Securities Regulation 35.15
349Bk35.15

To establish a prima facie case of controlling person liability under Securities Exchange Act, a plaintiff must show: (1) a primary violation by a controlled person; (2) control of the primary violator by the defendant; and (3) that the controlling person was in some meaningful sense a culpable participant in the primary violation. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a); 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2.

[33] Securities Regulation 35.15
349Bk35.15

Actual control over the wrongdoer and the transactions in question is necessary for control person liability. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a); 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2.

[34] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

A plaintiff seeking to plead a prima facie case of controlling person liability under Securities Exchange Act must state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the controlling person in some meaningful sense culpably participated in the controlled person's primary violation; burden is satisfied if plaintiff pleads facts giving rise to a strong inference that the controlling person knew or should have known that the controlled person was engaging in fraudulent conduct, but took no steps to prevent the primary violation. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a); 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2.

[35] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

Complaint adequately stated claim of controlling person liability against American accounting firm which owned Bermuda-based administrators of off-shore investment fund, which allegedly were primary violators of securities laws; investors alleged that administrators were the vehicles through which firm provided administrative services to its clients and that firm controlled administrators by exercising "direct, daily supervision, oversight and control" through common personnel and shared offices, and complaint was peppered with specific allegations of participation by firm's personnel in the fraud including, preparation of false NAV statements, and failure to investigate either the discrepancies between fund manager's statements and those received from clearing broker or the suspicious appearance of fund manager's statements on their face.

Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a); 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2.

[36] Securities Regulation 60.40
349Bk60.40

Fact that Bermuda-based administrators of off-shore investment fund were affiliates of American accounting firm was not sufficient to connect firm to the dissemination of false statements by fund administrators.

[37] Federal Courts 18
170Bk18

Even where the sole defendant with federal claims against it is dismissed from the case, the court still has power to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over the state claims against remaining defendants, provided the state and federal claims derive from a common nucleus of operative fact.

[38] Principal and Agent 79(4)
308k79(4)

Investors failed to state claims under New York law for common law fraud, negligence, gross negligence, professional malpractice, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting common law fraud and aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty against American accounting firm which owned Bermuda-based affiliates which acted as administrators of off-shore investment fund, complaint contained no specific allegations as to the conduct of accounting firm necessary to give rise to any of the elements of their state claims and failed to state their claims under an agency theory.

[39] Principal and Agent 96
308k96

[39] Principal and Agent 99
308k99

Under New York law, an agent must have authority, whether apparent, actual or implied, to bind his principal.

[40] Principal and Agent 99
308k99

Under New York law, actual authority arises from a manifestation from principal to agent.

[41] Principal and Agent 8
308k8

[41] Principal and Agent 14(2)
308k14(2)

Under New York law, consent for actual authority may be either express or implied from the parties' words and conduct as construed in light of the surrounding circumstances.

[42] Principal and Agent 99
308k99

For apparent authority to exist under New York law, there must be words or conduct of the principal, communicated to a third party, that give rise to the appearance and belief that the agent possesses authority to enter into a transaction on behalf of the principal.

[43] Principal and Agent 25(1)
308k25(1)

Equitable estoppel doctrine can bind the principal under New York law where the third party reasonably relies on the principal's knowing misrepresentations.

[44] Principal and Agent 166(1)
308k166(1)

[44] Principal and Agent 171(1)
308k171(1)

Under New York law, principal can be deemed to ratify an unauthorized transaction after the fact where the principal retains the benefit with knowledge of the material facts.

[45] Corporations 388(1)
101k388(1)

[45] Partnership 24
289k24

A corporation may be held liable under New York law under a partnership by estoppel theory. N.Y.McKinney's Partnership Law § 27.

[46] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Specific jurisdiction existed over Bermuda-based auditor of off-shore investment fund, which was managed from New York and which traded United States securities, in suit alleging violations of the federal securities laws in connection with management of fund; auditor used information it knew emanated from the United States to prepare its allegedly fraudulent audit reports, auditor relied in part on help from its United States based affiliates, who gathered information to mark the fund's securities to market, and auditor understood that its allegedly fraudulent audits would be mailed to fund's shareholders and would reach United States residents.

[47] Federal Courts 409.1
170Bk409.1

In addressing choice of law rules in a federal question case, the court should invoke federal common law choice of law analysis only where significant federal policy, calling for the imposition of a federal conflicts rule, exists; need for uniformity is not, by itself, a sufficient justification for displacing state choice of law rules.

[48] Accountants 9
11Ak9

[48] Negligence 204
272k204

Under New York choice of law rules, New York law governed aiding and abetting common law fraud and gross negligence claims against Bermuda-based auditor of off-shore investment fund which was managed from New York; while plaintiff investors were domiciled in the British Virgin Islands and the Netherland Antilles, a substantial portion of the fraudulent conduct occurred in New York, and the allegedly false audit reports were based on financial information emanating from New York and were disseminated to fund shareholders in many countries, including shareholders who either resided in the United States or whose affairs were managed from the United States.

[49] Securities Regulation 60.45(3)
349Bk60.45(3)

Use of American accounting firm's name on audit documents allegedly containing misleading information was, by itself, insufficient to constitute scienter for purposes of establishing securities fraud claim.

[50] Accountants 10.1
11Ak10.1

Investors failed to adequately allege under New York law aiding and abetting common law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty claims against American accounting firm, which was affiliated with Bermuda-based auditor of off-shore investment fund, under a partnership by estoppel theory; while the complaint alleges that each audit report displayed the American accounting firm's logo as well as its name, it failed to allege either that firm or anyone with its consent represented that firm was a "partner in an existing partnership" with Bermuda-based auditor, or that investors "gave credit" to any such representations in making their investment decisions. N.Y.McKinney's Partnership Law § 27.

[51] Negligence 202
272k202

[51] Negligence 273
272k273

[51] Negligence 321
272k321

Under New York law, a prima facie case of negligence, gross negligence, or professional malpractice requires the plaintiff to show: (1) a duty to the plaintiff; (b) a breach of duty; (c) a reasonably close causal connection between the contact and the resulting injury; and (d) actual loss, harm or damage.

[52] Accountants 9
11Ak9

Under New York law, an accountant owes a duty of care for services relied upon by plaintiffs who are part of a specific and identifiable group rather than a faceless or unresolved class of persons; conduct constitutes "linking conduct" if it is some form of direct contact between the accountant and the plaintiff, such as face-to-face conversation, the sharing of documents, or other substantive communication between the parties.

[53] Accountants 9
11Ak9

American accounting firm, which was affiliated with Bermuda-based auditor of off-shore investment fund, could not be held liable under New York law for negligence, gross negligence, or professional malpractice based on auditor's alleged preparation of audit documents containing misleading information since there was no privity between American accounting firm and the investors, or even any allegation that firm knew that its name and logo were used on the specific audit reports.

[54] Brokers 106
65k106

[54] Securities Regulation 306
349Bk306

Investors' allegations were sufficient to state claims under New York law against introducing broker for aiding and abetting common law fraud & aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty in connection with securities fraud committed by manager of off-shore fund; allegations that broker shared its offices with fund manager and collected "substantial commission income" gave rise to a fair inference that broker knew of manager's fraud, and investors also alleged that broker received the accurate financial statements as well as audit confirmation requests but ignored instructions to transmit audit confirmation responses directly to auditor and complied with manager's "highly irregular" request to send them to him.

*460 Richard L. Stone, Jeffrey H. Squire, Mark A. Strauss, Kriby, McInerney & Squire, LLP, New York City, for Plaintiffs Cromer Finance, Ltd. et al.

Steven S. Honigman, Richard P. Swanson, Jonathan E. Polonsky, Veronica E. Rendon, Alexandra Khlyavich (admission pending), Thelen Reid & Priest LLP, New York City, for Plaintiffs Cromer Finance, Ltd. et al.

Steven E. Greenbaum, Scott M. Berman, Berlack, Israels & Liberman LLP, New York City, for Plaintiffs Argos et al.

Daniel J. Kramer, Harry S. Davis, Adam J. Freedman, Schulte Roth & Zabel LLP, New York City, for Defendants Bear Stearns Securities Corp. and Bear Stearns & Co., Inc.

Gregg L. Weiner, Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, New York City, for Defendants Fund Administration Services (Bermuda), Ltd., Kempe & Whittle Associates Limited, and Ernst & Young Bermuda.

Richard A. Martin, Manuel A. Mercader, Heller Ehrman White & McAuliffe LLP, New York City, for Defendant Ernst & Young International.

Michael J. Dell, Gregory Horowitz, Susan D. Hawkins, Kramer Levin Naftalis & Frankel LLP, New York City, for Defendant Deloitte & Touche Bermuda.

John T. Behrendt, Mark B. Holton, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP, New York City, for Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu.

Timothy P. Harkness, Davis Polk & Wardwell, New York City, for Defendant Deloitte & Touche LLP.

Martin I. Kaminsky, Edward T. McDermott, Pollack & Kaminsky, New York City, for Defendant Financial Asset Management, Inc.

Roger Marting, Circleville, OH, for Defendant Financial Asset Management, Inc.

OPINION AND ORDER

COTE, District Judge.

These actions arise from alleged violations of the federal securities laws as well as related state law claims. Plaintiffs Cromer Finance Ltd. ("Cromer") and Prival N.V. ("Prival") (collectively, the "Cromer Plaintiffs") filed a class action complaint on March 24, 2000. Plaintiffs in the Argos action (collectively, the "Argos Plaintiffs") filed a complaint on April 3, 2000. The cases were accepted by this Court as related to SEC v. Berger, 00 Civ. 333.

The plaintiffs were investors in an off-shore investment fund managed from New York by Michael Berger ("Berger"). That fund traded United States securities, and the plaintiffs allege enormous losses based on Berger's fraudulent management of the fund. They have sued, among others, the Bermuda accounting firms that served as the fund's administrators or auditors, as well as American and international affiliates of those Bermuda entities. All of the defendants except Berger have moved to dismiss the complaints in these two actions. [FN1] The affiliates of the Bermuda accounting *461 firms do not contest that there is personal jurisdiction over them, but they do deny any involvement with Berger's fund or the fraud and contend that they have been sued in a search for "deeper pockets." The Bermuda entities argue, among other things, that there is neither subject matter jurisdiction over the claims against them nor personal jurisdiction over them individually.

FN1. After the motions were fully submitted, the Cromer plaintiffs and those defendants moving to dismiss based on lack of personal jurisdiction were permitted to submit additional briefing and record evidence regarding the allegations in the Cromer Complaint that defendant Fund Administration Services (Bermuda) Ltd. sent Net Asset Value statements to investors, investors' agents, or prospective investors in the Manhattan Investment Fund, Ltd. located in the United States.

The motions to dismiss by the affiliates of the Bermuda entities, as well as the United States clearing broker for the fund's trading, are granted. In brief, there are insufficient allegations that these defendants knew of or assisted in the alleged fraud. Each of the many theories asserted by the plaintiffs to impose derivative liability on them for the alleged misdeeds of Berger and the Bermuda-based entities fail. In addition, certain claims against one of the Bermuda-based fund administrators is dismissed as barred by the statute of limitations, and for other reasons. The remaining motions to dismiss the Cromer action are largely denied. In particular, the Court concludes it has both subject matter and personal jurisdiction over the Bermuda-based defendants. The parties shall have ten days in which to notify the Court why the analysis in this Opinion does not resolve the motions to dismiss the claims in the Argos Complaint as well.

BACKGROUND [FN2]

FN2. The information in this section derives primarily from the Complaint in the Cromer action, and "plaintiffs" refers to the Cromer Plaintiffs. The facts and allegations in the Argos action are substantially similar.

This lawsuit is brought as a securities class action on behalf of purchasers of securities of the Manhattan Investment Fund, Ltd. ("Fund") during the class period, defined as October 1, 1995, through January 18, 2000. As a result of the defendants' conduct, plaintiffs [FN3] and Class members have allegedly suffered damages of approximately $400,000,000.

FN3. The Cromer action has two proposed lead plaintiffs: Cromer, a British Virgin Islands registered investment corporation, and Prival, a Netherlands Antilles corporation. Both lead plaintiffs purchased shares in the Fund. Plaintiffs in the Argos action are twenty-eight Fund shareholders, each of whom invested between $400,000 and $16,000,000 in the Fund.

The facts alleged in the Complaint include the following. Berger, a 28 year-old investment manager, established the Fund as an "open end investment company" in or about December 1995, under the laws of the British Virgin Islands. The Fund was designed for foreign investors and United States tax-exempt investors (e.g., pension funds and trusts). Through his wholly-owned company, Manhattan Capital Management, Inc. ("MCM"), Berger served as the investment manager and advisor for the Fund. The Fund had no offices, employees or operations of its own. Berger made investment decisions at MCM's offices in New York, and all of the Fund's assets were held in custody in New York by defendants Bear Stearns & Co., Inc. and Bear Stearns Securities Corp. (collectively, "Bear Stearns"), an investment bank and registered broker dealer. [FN4]

FN4. At the Fund's inception, Berger opened an account in the Fund's name with the Bank of Bermuda as a depository for new investor monies. Moneys deposited in the account were transferred to the Fund's clearing account at Bear Stearns almost every month.

462 According to its confidential offering memorandum ("Offer Memo"), the Fund's investment objective was to "achieve capital appreciation, consistent with the preservation of capital" by investing "primarily in highly liquid listed issues." The Offer Memo informed investors that the Fund's investment technique included "short-selling" as well as the use of "leverage" or "margin." [FN5] It also explained that the Fund's administration services were provided by "Fund Administration Services (Bermuda) Limited, an affiliate of Ernst & Young International" or "Kempe & Whittle Associates Limited, an affiliate of Ernst & Young International," and that the Fund had retained "Deloitte & Touche" at a Bermuda address, as independent auditors. [FN6] The plaintiffs contend that defendants Ernst & Young International ("EYI"), Ernst & Young Bermuda ("EYB"), Kempe & Whittle Associates Ltd. ("K & W"), and Fund Administration Services (Bermuda) Ltd. ("FASB") held themselves out and functioned as "a single, unified company that performed administrative services on behalf of the Fund." Likewise, the plaintiffs allege that defendants Deloitte & Touche (Bermuda) ("DTB"), Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu ("DTT"), and Deloitte & Touche LLP ("DTUS") functioned as a "unified, multi-national accounting firm" in this case.

FN5. The Complaint alleges that the Federal Reserve Board ("FED") and the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE"), of which Bear Stearns is a member, regulate the use of margin debt. Under Regulation T, the FED sets the amount of margin credit which may be extended in connection with the initial purchase of a security, while NYSE Rule 431 regulates the "maintenance margin," or the minimum equity that must be maintained in a customer's account. The Complaint also alleges that the Offer Memo states that the Fund will use "concentration limitations," in that no more than 25% of the portfolio would be invested in a single sector and individual issues would never account for more than 15-20% of the portfolio's value. Finally, Bear Stearns, in its role as sole custodian of the Fund's assets, enforced its own maintenance margin requirement set initially at 35% of the Fund's total assets, subject to adjustment.

FN6. Contrary to the Complaint, the Fund's Offer Memo does not identify "Deloitte & Touche" generally as the Fund's independent auditor or "Ernst & Young" generally as the Fund's administrators.

The Fund commenced trading operations in or about Spring 1996, with an investment strategy that primarily involved the "concentrated short selling of securities of United States technology companies, including Internet companies, on the theory that those companies were trading at over-valued prices and were due for a correction." After an initial offering at $100 per share, with a minimum investment of 250 shares, the Fund offered its shares at a net asset value ("NAV") computed "to the penny" and determined on the basis of the listed prices on major securities exchanges of the securities held by the Fund. The NAV was calculated by EYB, K & W, and later FASB, on a monthly basis, based on daily, monthly, and yearly statements prepared by Bear Stearns. As sole custodian of the Fund's assets, Bear Stearns cleared all securities transactions. While Berger utilized many brokers, Bear Stearns was the only broker to extend margin credit in connection with the clearing and settlement of the Fund's trades. As of January 2000, the Fund had more than 200 investor accounts.

Berger utilized defendant Financial Asset Management, Inc. ("FAM") as an "introducing broker" which cleared all of its trades through Bear Stearns. Berger and FAM shared office space in New York, and the Complaint alleges that FAM collected "substantial commission income" as a result of its role in the Fund.

463 The Fraud

The plaintiffs allege that the fraudulent scheme began almost immediately after the Fund began trading operations in or about Spring 1996. According to the Bear Stearns monthly account statements and daily trading reports, Berger began losing money on a regular basis from the Fund's inception. [FN7] Rather than accurately reporting these losses, Berger created "fictitious monthly account statements, purportedly in the name of FAM, which showed profitable performance for the Fund." These actions continued until early 2000, when Berger, after the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") had initiated an investigation of the Fund, released a statement admitting to the fraud.

FN7. For example, the Bear Stearns statement for June 1996, reveals a loss of approximately $700,000, or almost 30% of the Fund's value in that month. In September 1996, the Fund lost over $5,000,000, an amount "equal to more than half the Fund's equity." In October and November 1996, the Fund lost 15% and 40% of the Fund's equity, respectively.

1. Involvement of Bear Stearns

Plaintiffs allege that Bear Stearns: (1) extended margin credit to the Fund which comprised "atypical, extraordinary and non-routine financing transactions" and exceeded the margin regulations established by the FED, NYSE, and Bear Stearns' own rules discussed above, and (2) tipped certain investors with whom Bear Stearns had social or business relationships as to the Fund's problems. As a result of these actions, Bear Stearns made "substantial profits" on margin interest and fees, enabled the Fund to continue its operations by obtaining new funds from investors and avoiding redemptions of investments, and assisted their own customers in withdrawing money from the Fund at the expense of remaining investors.

The plaintiffs allege that Bear Stearns' over-extension of margin credit to the Fund enabled Berger to trade on margin credit in excess of applicable margin rules throughout the Class Period and to violate the concentration limitations applied by Bear Stearns and set forth in the Offer Memo. [FN8] Even when Berger had outstanding unsatisfied margin calls, Bear Stearns extended "intra-day" margin credit to him which at times exceeded 100% of the Fund's capital. Because the margin deficits were not satisfied within the prescribed regulatory periods, Regulation T and Rule 431 required Bear Stearns to freeze the Fund's account. Bear Stearns failed to freeze the Fund. Bear Stearns further failed to apply Rule 431 by not enforcing the shorter periods given to cover margin calls by Rule 431 for day traders like Berger, allowing Berger to maintain the account in an under-margined state, and allowing Berger to meet margin calls by liquidating margined positions. In sum, Bear Stearns' actions contributed to a "cycle" in which Bear Stearns extended excessive margin credit to the Fund, Berger used the credit to trade and generate substantial losses, and those losses further increased the margin debt. Bear Stearns then agreed to await an influx of new investor monies to satisfy the debt, and once the new money was used to pay down the margin debt, the cycle recommenced. As a result of these activities, Bear Stearns earned "significant fees and margin interest" on the Fund's account.

FN8. For example, at one point the Fund was short 150% of the Fund's capital in a single stock, Earthlink.

The plaintiffs further note that Bear Stearns knew or was reckless in not knowing that new investors in the Fund, whose money was being used to satisfy pre-existing margin deficits and to mask Berger's *464 high trading losses, were unaware of the true financial condition of the Fund. [FN9] As a result, Bear Stearns enabled Berger to raise money from unsuspecting investors to pay off the Fund's margin debts, thereby gaining substantial profits for itself in the form of interest income on margin debt as well as commissions and fees on trading activity.

FN9. The plaintiffs allege that Bear Stearns' "risk control department" was aware of the Fund's "precarious position" both because of daily contact with Berger regarding the Fund's margin violations and as a result of an internal e-mail message dated December 28, 1999, which demonstrated long-time knowledge of the violations. Bear Stearns, however, only moved to require compliance with the margin rules in late December 1999.

The plaintiffs also allege that Bear Stearns used non-public material information regarding the Fund's inflated NAV--information known to Bear Stearns by virtue of its custody of the Fund--in order to warn those Fund investors with whom Bear Stearns and Bear Stearns executives shared "business and social relationships." Bear Stearns continued to over-extend margin credit to the Fund in order to keep the Fund liquid long enough to enable those investors to withdraw their money at artificially inflated NAVs. The plaintiffs allege that Bear Stearns thereby "enhanced its position" at the expense of "unsuspecting investors" who remained in the Fund, including plaintiffs and other Class members, whose interests were diluted as a result of the redemptions at artificially inflated NAVs.

2. Involvement of EYI, EYB, K & W, and FASB

The plaintiffs allege that the "Ernst & Young Defendants" used the fictitious statements created by Berger on FAM letterhead to prepare materially inflated NAV calculations and disseminate them to investors, despite receiving from Bear Stearns daily, monthly, and yearly statements accurately reflecting the Fund's losses and despite the Offer Memo's representation that Bear Stearns--and not FAM [FN10]--would have custody of all of the Fund's assets. For example, the NAV calculation overstated the market value of the Fund's assets by roughly $400,000,000 in August 1999. Plaintiffs allege that they and other Class members relied on the fictitious reports and "would not have purchased or maintained their shares in the Fund" if they had known that the monthly NAV statements were materially false and misleading.

FN10. The plaintiffs allege that if the Ernst & Young personnel had made "the most rudimentary inquiry" into FAM, they would have learned that FAM was a one-broker operation, with only $1,000,000 in assets, which cleared all of its clients' trades through Bear Stearns and that FAM did not meet the National Association of Securities Dealers ("NASD") requirements for broker-dealers concerning clearing trades and holding custody of third-party assets.

These defendants initially prepared an "apparently accurate NAV" in September 1996, reflecting the Fund's losses, which they sent to Berger. When one of Berger's employees asked them to "hold off" on the NAV issuance, the Ernst & Young defendants complied and then used Berger's fictitious statements to publish a revised--and inaccurate--NAV statement. This was contrary to the Ernst & Young defendants' own "checklist" of procedures for NAV calculation, which required an examination of the Bear Stearns account statement and provided a box to check once the task was completed. In addition, the fictitious statement prepared by Berger was "suspicious on its face" in that it was prepared using a plain spreadsheet on an ordinary wordprocessor without any *465 identifying letterhead, used the same account number as the Fund's account at Bear Stearns, and, unlike the Bear Stearns statements, contained no daily trading activity information or almost any other information aside from the purported equity in the account. The plaintiffs allege that these defendants continued to use the fictitious statements and to issue shares to new investors and redeem shares of existing investors at the inflated NAV even though they had concerns regarding possible fraud as early as Summer 1998. [FN11]

FN11. For example, the Argos plaintiffs allege that a shareholder asked FASB in September 1999, to "address certain questions concerning the Fund's NAV." FASB sent a letter to the Argos plaintiffs indicating that it had "received month-end position listings from the Fund's broker," which plaintiffs allege implied that the reported NAVs were consistent with the Bear Stearns statements.

3. Involvement of DTT, DTB, and DTUS

The plaintiffs allege that "Deloitte" issued

"clean," unqualified auditing reports for the years 1996-1999, attesting to the accuracy of the Fund's financial statements and including a statement that "[i]n our opinion, such financial statements represent fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the [Fund], in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America." The audit reports, discussed in the Complaint with an example attached as an exhibit, bear the names and logos of DTT as well as "Deloitte & Touche" with an accompanying Bermuda address. They are addressed to "the Shareholders" of the Fund and signed "Deloitte & Touche," in a cursive signature. The plaintiffs allege that Deloitte "pretended to have knowledge where it actually had none, and therefore its audits amounted to no audits at all." In particular, the Deloitte opinions were "materially inaccurate" and Deloitte failed to conduct its audits in accordance with United States generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS"), failed to plan and perform its audits to obtain "reasonable assurances that the Fund's financial statements were free of material misstatements," and did not include procedures "reasonably designed and conducted to obtain confirmation of the securities purportedly owned by the Fund."

The plaintiffs allege that Deloitte had "full and complete access" to the books and records of the Fund as maintained by the Ernst & Young defendants and therefore had access to the fictitious financial statements as well as the accurate Bear Stearns statements. The plaintiffs further allege that Deloitte ignored numerous warning signs regarding the Fund's financial difficulties. For example, the fictitious statements were inconsistent with the Bear Stearns statements, but Deloitte "recklessly followed Berger's unorthodox and suspicious instructions to ignore the accurate statements sent by Bear Stearns" which, according to Berger, did not reflect the Fund's entire portfolio while the fictitious statements did (emphasis in original). In addition, Deloitte noticed a discrepancy during its first audit between the Bear Stearns and fictitious financial statements, yet simply accepted Berger's direction to ignore the Bear Stearns statements without checking directly with Bear Stearns or with FAM to investigate further. Further, Deloitte accepted audit confirmation requests from Berger, instead of insisting and ensuring that they came directly from FAM, thus violating one of the "most basic responsibilities of an auditor." Finally, the fictitious statements represented that the securities were "held at FAM," which directly contradicted the Offer Memo. As with the Ernst & Young defendants, plaintiffs allege that if the Deloitte defendants *466 had made "even a rudimentary inquiry" into FAM, they would have discovered it to be incapable of serving as the clearing house for or custodian of the Fund's assets.

The plaintiffs also allege that even after Deloitte was "specifically alerted" to discrepancies and the possibility of fraud, it failed to take necessary investigative steps. The head of Bear Stearns' prime brokerage operations called a partner at DTUS in February 1999, to warn him of a discrepancy from what would be expected if the Fund were selling short internet stocks. While the DTUS partner sent a warning e-mail to partners in other offices and spoke to the DTB partner in charge of the Fund's audits, no follow up occurred and Deloitte completed and signed off on a "clean, unqualified" audit opinion in March 1999. Because shares of the Fund were not publicly traded, investors and prospective investors had "no independently verified third-party financial information" other than Deloitte's audit report and the audited financial statements. The plaintiffs allege that Deloitte "knew or should have known that its clean audit reports were material to investors' decisions to purchase shares in the Fund and to refrain from redeeming their investments, and that investors were placing substantial reliance on Deloitte's clean audit reports."

4. Involvement of FAM

FAM is a "relatively small brokerage firm" with its principal place of business in Ohio. Plaintiffs allege that FAM served as one of the Fund's introducing brokers, placing trades for customers which were then cleared or settled through Bear Stearns. Plaintiffs further allege that Berger had previously worked as a consultant for FAM in developing European clients and trading strategies and therefore had a prior relationship with FAM and its principal, James Rader ("Rader"). Berger continued his relationship when he established the Fund, sharing office space with FAM in New York and enabling the small firm to collect "substantial commission income." The Complaint alleges that when Deloitte requested that FAM reply directly to it concerning an audit confirmation, FAM instead complied with Berger's "highly irregular request" to provide its confirmation to him. FAM further provided Berger with an open, pre-addressed Airborne Express envelope and bill made out to DTB, falsely showing FAM in Ohio as the sender. Because it was receiving monthly account statements for the Bear Stearns account, FAM knew that the Fund was experiencing large losses but that investors were continuing to invest additional monies with the Fund.

Exposure of the Fraud

The plaintiffs allege that the defendants' fraudulent acts continued until the SEC initiated an investigation of the Fund in November 1999. On January 7, 2000, Deloitte withdrew its audit reports for the years ending December 31, 1996, 1997, and 1998, stating that the investors could no longer rely on the reports. On January 13, 2000, the Ernst & Young defendants resigned as the Fund's administrator. The following day Berger admitted to the fraud and was subsequently charged with violations of Title 17 of the securities laws and with fraud under the Investment Adviser's Act. The SEC also commenced an action in this Court, alleging that Berger, MCM, and the Fund violated various anti-fraud provisions of the federal securities laws.

Causes of Action

The Cromer plaintiffs bring twenty-one causes of action. Against all defendants submitting motions to dismiss, plaintiffs allege aiding and abetting both common *467 law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty. [FN12] Against FAM, the plaintiffs additionally allege gross negligence and negligence. Against all defendants except Bear Stearns and FAM, plaintiffs additionally allege violation of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act ("Exchange Act"), violation of Rule 10b-5, common law fraud, gross negligence, negligence, and professional malpractice. Against EYI, EYB, K & W, and FASB, plaintiffs additionally allege negligent misrepresentation. Finally, against EYI, EYB, and DTT, plaintiffs additionally allege violation of Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act under a "controlling person" theory. [FN13] FN12. These claims represent the entirety of claims alleged against Bear Stearns.

FN13. The Argos plaintiffs bring eight causes of action, substantially similar to the Cromer allegations with the following differences: (1) EYB and K & W are not defendants in the Argos action; (2) As against FASB and EYI, the Argos plaintiffs additionally allege breach of fiduciary duty but do not allege gross negligence or professional malpractice; (3) As against EYI, the Argos plaintiffs do not allege violation of Section 20(a); (4) As against DTT, DTB, and DTUS, the Argos plaintiffs do not allege gross negligence, negligence, or professional malpractice; and (5) As against FAM, the Argos plaintiffs do not allege gross negligence or negligence.

LEGAL STANDARDS FOR DISMISSAL

The defendants bring their motions to dismiss pursuant to one or more of Rules 12(b)(1), (b)(2), and (b)(6) and 9(b), Fed.R.Civ.P.

A. Rule 12(b)(1)

To determine jurisdiction in federal question cases, the court need only ask "whether--on its face--the complaint is drawn so as to seek recovery under federal law or the Constitution. If so, [the court should] assume or find a sufficient basis for jurisdiction, and reserve further scrutiny for an inquiry on the merits." Nowak v. Ironworkers Local 6 Pension Fund, 81 F.3d 1182, 1189 (2d Cir.1996). The standard is a "modest" one, allowing for subject matter jurisdiction so long as "the federal claim is colorable." Savoie v. Merchants Bank, 84 F.3d 52, 57 (2d Cir.1996) (citing Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 682-83, 66 S.Ct. 773, 90 L.Ed. 939 (1946)).

In assessing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, a court must "accept as true all material factual allegations in the complaint," Shipping Fin. Serv. Corp. v. Drakos, 140 F.3d 129, 131 (2d Cir.1998) (citing Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 94 S.Ct. 1683, 40 L.Ed.2d 90 (1974)), but refrain from "drawing from the pleadings inferences favorable to the party asserting [jurisdiction]." Id. (citing Norton v. Larney, 266 U.S. 511, 515, 45 S.Ct. 145, 69 L.Ed. 413 (1925)). Courts evaluating Rule 12(b)(1) motions "may resolve the disputed jurisdictional fact issues by reference to evidence outside the pleadings, such as affidavits." Zappia Middle East Constr. Co. v. Emirate of Abu Dhabi, 215 F.3d 247, 253 (2d Cir.2000). Where jurisdiction is "so intertwined with the merits that its resolution depends on the resolution of the merits," the court should use the standard "applicable to a motion for summary judgment" and dismiss only where "no triable issues of fact" exist. London v. Polishook, 189 F.3d 196, 198-99 (2d Cir.1999) (citation omitted); see also Europe and Overseas Commodity Traders, S.A. v. Banque Paribas London, 147 F.3d 118, 121 n. 1 (2d Cir.1998).

B. Rule 12(b)(2)

It is well established that on a Rule 12(b)(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal *468 jurisdiction, "the plaintiff bears the burden of showing that the court has jurisdiction over the defendant." Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Robertson-Ceco Corp., 84 F.3d 560, 566 (2d Cir.1996). The plaintiff's burden depends on the procedural posture of the litigation. Where there has been no discovery, "a plaintiff may defeat a motion to dismiss based on legally sufficient allegations of jurisdiction." Id. But where there has been discovery regarding personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff's burden is to make a prima facie showing which "must include an averment of facts that, if credited by the ultimate trier of fact, would suffice to establish jurisdiction over the defendant." Id. at 567 (citation omitted); SEC v. Euro Sec. Fund, Coim SA, No. 98 Civ. 7347(DLC), 1999 WL 76801, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 17, 1999).

C. Rule 12(b)(6)

A court may dismiss an action pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) only if "it appears beyond doubt, even when the complaint is liberally construed, that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts which would entitle him to relief." Jaghory v. New York State Dep't of Educ., 131 F.3d 326, 329 (2d Cir.1997) (citation omitted). The court must "accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true and draw inferences from those allegations in the light most favorable to the plaintiff." Id. The court is generally prohibited from considering matters outside the pleadings. Tewksbury v. Ottaway Newspapers, 192 F.3d 322, 325 n. 1 (2d Cir.1999). The court may consider, however, "any written instrument attached to [the Complaint] as an exhibit or any statements or documents incorporated in it by reference, ... and documents that the plaintiffs either possessed or knew about and upon which they relied in bringing the suit." Rothman v. Gregor, 220 F.3d 81, 88 (2d Cir.2000) (citation omitted). "General, conclusory allegations need not be credited, however, when they are belied by more specific allegations of the complaint." Hirsch v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 72 F.3d 1085, 1092 (2d Cir.1995).

D. Rule 9(b)

[1][2] Rule 9(b) sets forth special pleading requirements for claims involving fraud, and it is "well-settled" that a complaint alleging securities fraud must comport with Rule 9(b). Ganino v. Citizens Utilities Co., 228 F.3d 154, 168 (2d Cir.2000). Rule 9(b) requires that when alleging fraud "the circumstances constituting fraud ... must be stated with particularity," although "[m]alice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally." See also id. at 168. To comply with the requirements of Rule 9(b) in alleging the misstatement, an allegation of fraud must specify: "(1) those statements the plaintiff thinks were fraudulent, (2) the speaker, (3) where and when they were made, and (4) why plaintiff believes the statements fraudulent." Koehler v. Bank of Bermuda (New York) Ltd., 209 F.3d 130, 136 (2d Cir.2000).

[3][4] In pleading a securities fraud violation, a complaint must allege that a defendant acted with scienter. Novak v. Kasaks, 216 F.3d 300, 306 (2d Cir.2000) (collecting cases). When pleading scienter, "with respect to each act or omission" alleged to violate the securities laws, the complaint must "state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendant acted with the required state of mind." 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(2). To satisfy this scienter requirement, "a complaint may (1) allege facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness, or (2) allege facts to show that defendants had both motive and opportunity to commit fraud." Rothman, 220 F.3d at 90; see also *469 Ganino, 228 F.3d at 168-69; In re Carter-Wallace Sec. Litig., 220 F.3d 36, 39 (2d Cir.2000). The Second Circuit has cautioned, however, that we should not be "wedded to" the "motive and opportunity" standard in light of Congress' failure to include this specific language in its recent amendment to the securities laws. Novak, 216 F.3d at 310.

[5][6] A plaintiff may sufficiently plead conscious misbehavior through allegations of deliberate illegal conduct. See id. at 308. To plead recklessness, a plaintiff must allege facts showing conduct that was "highly unreasonable, representing an extreme departure from the standards of ordinary care to the extent that the danger was either known to the defendant or so obvious that the defendant must have been aware of it." Rothman, 220 F.3d at 90 (citation omitted). Recklessness has been sufficiently pled where there are specific allegations that a defendant knew of facts or had access to information contradicting his public statements, or where he failed to review information that he had a duty to monitor, or where he ignored obvious signs of fraud. Novak, 216 F.3d at 308. "Where plaintiffs contend [a] defendant [] had access to contrary facts, they must specifically identify the reports or statements containing this information." Id. at 309.

[7] To plead facts supporting a strong inference of the requisite scienter by showing motive and opportunity, a plaintiff must allege facts showing "concrete benefits that could be realized by one or more of the false statements and wrongful nondisclosures alleged," and "the means and likely prospect of achieving the concrete benefits by the means alleged." Press v. Chemical Inv. Serv. Corp., 988 F.Supp. 375, 390 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (quoting Shields v. Citytrust Bancorp, Inc., 25 F.3d 1124, 1129 (2d Cir.1994)). General allegations of motive "possessed by virtually all corporate insiders" are insufficient to raise a strong inference of fraudulent intent. [FN14] Novak, 216 F.3d at 307.

FN14. For example, acting to "sustain the appearance of corporate profitability, or of the success of an investment" or to "maintain a high stock price in order to increase executive compensation" is not sufficient to show that a defendant possesses the requisite motive, while publicly misrepresenting facts regarding company performance in order to inflate stock price and profit personally from insider sales is sufficient. Novak, 216 F.3d at 307-08 (internal quotation omitted).

In its recent decision in Novak v. Kasaks, 216 F.3d 300, after summarizing prior case law, the Second Circuit explained that a complaint pleads facts sufficient to raise a "strong inference" of fraudulent intent where it sufficiently alleges that defendants:

(1) benefitted in a concrete and personal way from the purported fraud ...; (2) engaged in deliberately illegal behavior ...; (3) knew facts or had access to information suggesting that their public statements were not accurate ...; or (4) failed to check information they had a duty to monitor.

Id. at 311.

DISCUSSION

A. Bear Stearns

Bear Stearns brings its motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), arguing that plaintiffs fail to state their only claims against Bear Stearns—that it aided and abetted Berger's fraud and breach of fiduciary duty. Bear Stearns asserts that, under the facts alleged by the plaintiffs, Bear Stearns' actions did not "substantially assist" Berger's fraud but rather made it more difficult to accomplish. As the *470 Complaint acknowledges, the reports issued by Bear Stearns accurately described the Fund's trading.

[8][9][10] To state a claim for aiding and abetting fraud under New York law, [FN15] a plaintiff must plead facts showing: (1) the existence of a fraud; (2) defendant's knowledge of the fraud; and (3) that the defendant provided substantial assistance to advance the fraud's commission. Wight v. Bankamerica Corp., 219 F.3d 79, 91 (2d Cir.2000). The elements for a claim of aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty under New York law are: (1) a breach by a fiduciary of obligations to another, and (2) that the defendant knowingly induced or participated in the breach. Id.

FN15. In a federal question action, a court looks to federal common law choice of law rules to decide which state's law governs the various legal claims. Fromer v. Yogel, 50 F.Supp.2d 227, 239 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (citing Corporacion Venezolana de Fomento v. Vintero Sales Corp., 629 F.2d 786, 795 (2d Cir.1980)). The Second Circuit applies the law "of the jurisdiction with the greatest interest in the substantive legal claim at hand." Id. (citing Corporacion Venezolana de Fomento, 629 F.2d at 795). Except as noted below in the discussion of DTB's motion to dismiss, all of the parties discussing state law claims cite to and rely on New York law. Additionally, as discussed below, New York has the greatest interest in adjudicating this claim arising as a result of a fraud created in and managed from New York.

[11] New York law has defined both "substantial assistance" and "participation" to exist where a defendant "affirmatively assists, helps conceal, or by virtue of failing to act when required to do so enables the fraud to proceed." Nigerian Nat'l Petroleum Corp. v. Citibank, N.A., No. 98 Civ. 4960(MBM), 1999 WL 558141, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. July 30, 1999) (citation omitted) (substantial assistance); see also Diduck v. Kaszycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 974 F.2d 270, 284 (2d Cir.1992) (participation); Estate of Ginor v. Landsberg, 960 F.Supp. 661, 671 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (participation); Kolbeck v. LIT Am., Inc., 939 F.Supp. 240 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (defining "participation" as "substantial assistance"). Substantial assistance requires the plaintiff to allege that the actions of the aider/abettor proximately caused the harm on which the primary liability is predicated. Diduck, 974 F.2d at 284; Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 249. "But-for" causation is insufficient; aider and abettor liability requires the injury to be a direct or reasonably foreseeable result of the conduct. Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 249. Inaction is "actionable participation only when the defendant owes a fiduciary duty directly to the plaintiff." Id. at 247.

There is no dispute regarding the first and second prongs of these tests. Bear Stearns does not deny the existence of an underlying fraud or that Berger breached his fiduciary duty to the plaintiffs, nor does it contest for the purposes of these motions that it had actual knowledge of those wrongs. Rather, the parties disagree as to whether the plaintiff has adequately alleged the "substantial assistance" and "participation" elements which, as discussed above, share largely identical requirements.

[12] A clearing broker does not provide "substantial assistance" to or "participate" in a fraud when it merely clears trades. "The simple providing of normal clearing services to a primary broker who is acting in violation of the law does not make out a case of aiding and abetting against the clearing broker." Greenberg v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 220 F.3d 22, 29 (2d Cir.2000). The plaintiffs have attempted to allege that Bear Stearns did more than just clear trades.

*471 [13] To meet their obligation to plead that Bear Stearns provided substantial assistance to the fraud, the plaintiffs have alleged that, in violation of the margin regulations of the FED, the NYSE, and its own institutional rules, it over-extended margin credit to Berger and permitted him to violate the concentration limitations ordinarily applied by Bear Stearns and described in the Offer Memo, and instead of freezing the Fund's account when it was required by regulations to do so, it allowed Berger to continue to trade. A failure to enforce margin requirements, or continuing to execute trades despite margin violations, however, does not constitute substantial assistance. Dillon v. Militano, 731 F.Supp. 634, 637, 639 (S.D.N.Y.1990); Stander v. Fin. Clearing & Serv. Corp., 730 F.Supp. 1282, 1287 (S.D.N.Y.1990). Similarly, executing trades in order to reduce "a loan of money under margin" is insufficient to create liability. Ross v. Bolton, 639 F.Supp. 323, 327 (S.D.N.Y.1986).

None of the cases on which the plaintiffs rely are sufficient to overcome these long established principles. Neither IIT v. Cornfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 922 (2d Cir.1980), nor the other cases cited by the plaintiffs permit allegations of heightened scienter to substitute for adequately alleged substantial assistance. Even the recent decision in Primavera Familienstiftung v. Askin, 130 F.Supp.2d 450, 510-13 (S.D.N.Y.2001), upon which the plaintiffs place particular reliance, does not change this conclusion. In Primavera, the court denied summary judgment for Kidder, Peabody & Co. ("Kidder") on the ground that there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Kidder had substantially assisted the alleged fraud. Kidder and other brokers created the mortgage-backed securities sold to the plaintiff's funds. Kidder also loaned the funds the purchase price for the securities, using the securities as collateral. By creating and selling the securities and financing the transactions, Kidder reaped huge profits. Investors were sent monthly performance reports which included Kidder's valuation of the securities, which were particularly important since the securities were not traded on any public exchange. Kidder revised its valuation 86 times based on requests from the person who issued the monthly performance reports. The court found that there were material issues of fact as to whether the revised valuations were fraudulent and material to investors. The court rebuffed Kidder's request to segregate the allegations concerning the "valuation" fraud from the "operations" fraud, noting that "[s]ubstantial assistance can take many forms," and that the allegations should be considered together. Id. at 511. Thus, the court's observation that "[e]xecuting transactions, even ordinary course transactions, can constitute substantial assistance under some circumstances, such as where there is an extraordinary motivation to aid in the fraud," id., must be understood in context. Moreover, nothing in the opinion suggests that the court intended any relaxation to the requirement of a showing of proximate cause.

The remaining cases cited by the plaintiffs are also readily distinguished. Graham v. SEC, 222 F.3d 994 (D.C.Cir.2000), addressed the obligations of a retail broker, and not a clearing broker. The cases on which the plaintiffs rely for the general proposition that "non-routine" financial transactions can constitute substantial assistance involve conduct far more nefarious and with more direct involvement in the underlying fraud than that alleged here. In Monsen v. Consolidated Dressed Beef Co., 579 F.2d 793, 803 (3d Cir.1978), a bank "insisted" that the wrongdoer continue the fraud. In ABF Capital Management v. Askin Capital Management, L.P., 957 F.Supp. 1308, 1329-30 (S.D.N.Y.1997), the *472 brokers were charged with creating "volatile and virtually unmerchantable securities," inducing their sales force to market the securities by multiplying their normal commission rates, and providing false and inflated "performance marks" to their customer for dissemination to investors. Finally, in In re Gas Reclamation, Inc. Securities Litigation, 659 F.Supp. 493, 504 (S.D.N.Y.1987), the brokers participated in the creation of the document which contained the false statements. Others substantially assisted the fraud by reviewing and approving that document, devising the marketing and financial scheme for the fraud, and engaging in "atypical" financing transactions. In sum, the plaintiffs have failed to point to any authority for holding a clearing broker liable to investors for aiding and abetting a fraud because it violated margin requirements or over-extended credit.

[14][15] The plaintiffs are unable to cure the defect in their pleading of substantial assistance by emphasizing that the alleged fraud included a Ponzi scheme that could not have functioned but for the extension of credit and margin violations. It is well established that there is no private right of action for a violation of margin regulations, which are designed to protect the viability of brokerage houses and not to protect investors. See Bennett v. U.S. Trust Co. of New York, 770 F.2d 308, 312 (2d Cir.1985); Gruntal & Co. v. San Diego Bancorp, No. 94 Civ. 5366(DC), 1996 WL 343079, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. June 21, 1996). Nor can the plaintiffs circumvent this principle by recasting their argument as one based on common law fraud. See Furer v. Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc., 1982 WL 1309, at *2 (C.D.Cal. Apr. 20, 1982). In any event, the plaintiffs have still failed to allege substantial assistance under this theory. While the Ponzi scheme may only have been possible because of Bear Stearns' actions, or inaction, Bear Stearns' conduct was not a proximate cause of the Ponzi scheme. [FN16] Bear Stearns' motion to dismiss is granted.

FN16. While Fromer could be read to relieve a plaintiff of the burden of showing proximate cause for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty, the court explicitly addressed the issues of proximate causation only in the context of a fiduciary's breach. 50 F.Supp.2d at 248. Given the sound reasons for imposing a heightened standard for a secondary actor's liability, see ABF Capital, 957 F.Supp. at 1331 n. 5, this court will follow those courts that have required allegations sufficient to support a finding of proximate causation not only for aiding and abetting a fraud, but also for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty. See, e.g., Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 249.

B. EYB, FASB, and K & W

FASB, K & W, and EYB bring their joint motion to dismiss pursuant to Rules 9(b) and 12(b)(1), (b)(2), and (b)(6), Fed.R.Civ.P., and the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 ("PSLRA"), 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(1) et seq. Alternatively, if the motion is denied, FASB, K & W, and EYB move for a more definite statement pursuant to Rule 12(e), Fed.R.Civ.P. These defendants make the following arguments: (1) This Court lacks personal jurisdiction over them because they lack the substantial, continuous and systematic contacts with the United States necessary to exercise personal jurisdiction over a foreign defendant; (2) This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the plaintiffs' securities law claims because foreign plaintiffs purchasing securities in a foreign fund outside the United States cannot assert a claim under United States securities laws against a foreign entity that is not alleged to have taken any action within the United States material to the completion of the fraud; (3) The securities claims are insufficient under Rule 9(b), and the PSLRA *473 because the plaintiffs fail to plead specific facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendants acted with scienter; (4) The securities laws claims against K & W are time-barred; (5) After the dismissal of the securities laws claims, the Court should decline to exercise subject matter jurisdiction over the common law claims. Finally, EYB further argues that the plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for controlling person liability.

1. Personal Jurisdiction

a. Legal Standard

[16] The Exchange Act "permits the exercise of personal jurisdiction to the limit of the Due Process Clause" SEC v. Unifund SAL, 910 F.2d 1028, 1033 (2d Cir.1990). [FN17] The due process jurisdictional inquiry has two parts, the "minimum contacts" inquiry and the "reasonableness" inquiry. Metropolitan Life Ins., 84 F.3d at 567. The minimum contacts analysis is governed by International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S.Ct. 154, 90 L.Ed. 95 (1945), and its progeny. While International Shoe dealt with minimum contacts with the forum state,

FN17. The parties incorrectly apply New York law to the personal jurisdiction issue. Where a case is brought pursuant to federal question jurisdiction and "a defendant resides outside the forum state, a federal court applies the forum state's personal jurisdiction rules 'if the federal statute does not specifically provide for national service of process.' " PDK Labs, Inc. v. Friedlander, 103 F.3d 1105, 1108 (2d Cir.1997) (citation omitted).

where, as here, the United States, and not the State of New York, is the only sovereign whose power to adjudicate is in question, it logically follows that the relevant 'minimum contacts' ... should be the defendant's contacts with the United States, and not his contacts with the State of New York.

SEC v. Softpoint, Inc., No. 95 Civ. 2951(GEL), 2001 WL 43611, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 2001); see also Chew v. Dietrich, 143 F.3d 24, 28 n. 4 (2d Cir.1998). Each defendant's contacts with the forum "must be assessed individually." Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc., 465 U.S. 770, 781 n. 13, 104 S.Ct. 1473, 79 L.Ed.2d 790 (1984).

Two types of jurisdiction should be analyzed in determining whether there are sufficient minimum contacts, specific jurisdiction and general jurisdiction.

Specific jurisdiction exists when "a State exercises personal jurisdiction over a defendant in a suit arising out of or related to the defendant's contacts with the forum"; a court's general jurisdiction, on the other hand, is based on the defendant's general business contacts with the forum state and permits a court to exercise its power in a case where the subject matter of the suit is unrelated to those contacts.

Metropolitan Life Ins., 84 F.3d at 567-68 (citing Helicopteros Nacionales de Colombia v. Hall, 466 U.S. 408, 414-16 & nn. 8-9, 104 S.Ct. 1868, 80 L.Ed.2d 404 (1984)); see also Aerogroup Int'l, Inc. v. Marlboro Footworks, Ltd., 956 F.Supp. 427, 439 (S.D.N.Y.1996).

To find specific jurisdiction, the Court must determine that "the defendant has 'purposefully directed' his activities at residents of the forum, and the litigation results from alleged injuries that 'arise out of or relate to' those activities." Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 472, 105 S.Ct. 2174, 85 L.Ed.2d 528 (1985). Although courts look to whether it was foreseeable to the defendant that its actions would cause injury in the forum State, the Supreme Court has made clear that foreseeability requires that " 'the defendant's conduct and connection with the forum State are such that he should reasonably *474 anticipate being haled into court there.' " Id. at 474, 105 S.Ct. 2174 (quoting World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson, 444 U.S. 286, 295, 100 S.Ct. 559, 62 L.Ed.2d 490 (1980)). In sum, a defendant must have " 'purposefully avail[ed] itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum State.' " Burger King Corp., 471 U.S. at 475, 105 S.Ct. 2174 (quoting Hanson v. Denckla, 357 U.S. 235, 253, 78 S.Ct. 1228, 2 L.Ed.2d 1283 (1958)). This requirement "ensures that a defendant will not be haled into a jurisdiction solely as a result of 'random,' 'fortuitous,' or 'attenuated' contacts." Burger King Corp., 471 U.S. at 475, 105 S.Ct. 2174. See also Agency Rent A Car Sys., Inc. v. Grand Rent A Car Corp., 98 F.3d 25, 32 (2d Cir.1996).

To find general jurisdiction, the defendant must have "continuous and systematic general business contacts" with the jurisdiction. Helicopteros, 466 U.S. at 416, 104 S.Ct. 1868. This is a fact-specific inquiry that requires courts to assess the defendant's contacts "as a whole." Metropolitan Life Ins., 84 F.3d at 570 (emphasis in original). Moreover, "[b]ecause general jurisdiction is not related to the events giving rise to the suit, courts impose a more stringent minimum contacts test" than that applicable to specific jurisdiction. Id. at 568; see also Aerogroup, 956 F.Supp. at 439.

The second part of the due process personal jurisdiction test is determining the reasonableness of the exercise of jurisdiction. In undertaking this analysis, the Supreme Court has identified the following factors:

- (1) the burden that the exercise of jurisdiction will impose on the defendant;
- (2) the interests of the forum state in adjudicating the case; (3) the plaintiff's interest in obtaining convenient and effective relief; (4) the interstate judicial system's interest in obtaining the most efficient resolution of the controversy; and (5) the shared interest of the states in furthering substantive social policies.

Metropolitan Life Ins., 84 F.3d at 568 (citing Asahi Metal Indus. Co. v. Superior Court of California, Solano County, 480 U.S. 102, 113-14, 107 S.Ct. 1026, 94 L.Ed.2d 92 (1987)); see also SEC v. Euro, 1999 WL 76801, at *3.

[17] Finally, pursuant to the doctrine of "pendent personal jurisdiction," a district court can assert personal jurisdiction over parties on related state law claims where "a federal statute authorizes nationwide service of process, and the federal and state claims 'derive from a common nucleus of operative fact' " even where personal jurisdiction is "not otherwise available." IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. Herrmann, 9 F.3d 1049, 1056 (2d Cir.1993) (quoting United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966)).

b. Application to K & W, FASB and EYB

2. Minimum Contacts Analysis

[18][19] K & W, FASB and EYB are alleged to have served as Fund administrators. K & W served as the Administrator beginning in September 1995, pursuant to an agreement signed by Berger and Jan Spiering, President of K & W and Managing Partner of EYB. FASB replaced K & W in February 1997, pursuant to an agreement signed by Berger and Derek Stapley, an EYB principal. These agreements provided that the Administrator would, among other things, maintain records of Fund transactions, disburse payments of the Fund's costs and expenses, collect subscription payments, keep the Fund's accounts and those records required by law, prepare monthly financial statements, file *475 any necessary tax returns, and allow the Fund's auditor to inspect the register and any other records. Plaintiffs allege that EYB, K & W, and FASB used fictitious statements received from Berger to prepare and disseminate materially inflated NAV calculations to investors, ignoring the accurate financial statements prepared by Bear Stearns.

The plaintiffs have shown through discovery that each of these defendants functions as an integrated member of the international Ernst & Young enterprise. During the period of the scheme alleged in the Complaint, this enterprise sought to develop brand recognition around the world for the name Ernst & Young, to coordinate the work of all the offices, and to market their work with the promise of effectively coordinated international work. EYI organizes the Ernst & Young enterprise from its executive office in New York. It functions as a Member Association. The Articles of Association, adopted in 1997, provide for "coordination and facilitation of the development of global strategies and initiatives ... [and] of investments and resources allocation." Members are urged to "promote an international identity" and to refer work to other Members. The "Member's Pledge" commits each member to market itself as part of an integrated entity capable of providing services around the globe. It reads, in part,

As a Member of Ernst & Young International, Ltd. (the "Company") we have bound ourselves to use our best efforts to carry out the purposes and follow the policies of the Company and to cooperate with the Company. [Members agree to] prepare regional and country strategic plans that conform to the international plan ... To promote an international identity, including adopting of the Ernst & Young name (wherever permitted by law) as soon as practicable ... To participate in worldwide initiatives ... to accept a commitment of worldwide resources and the establishment of fees for multinational engagements by multinational-client service executives, with appropriate communication and consultation ... to obtain work for the network of Members, to the extent practicable. (Emphasis added).

Jurisdictional discovery revealed that Ernst & Young is in the process of further integrating its various entities around the world. Jan Spiering, President of K & W and FASB and Managing Partner of EYB, described the integration as a process "to get more of a one firm, centralized firm approach." In March 1999, a "global advertising campaign" was launched in order to further "consistency of brand image." A "knowledge management initiative" aims "to insure as much information as possible is maintained on computers" from which the various Ernst & Young offices can "draw information." In addition, the Ernst & Young Global Site Project, as described in a 1999 Manual, aims to coordinate 35 different web sites in order to "unify the Ernst & Young Web presence to consistently support and build our global brand." The Project Overview cites the importance of a "consistent experience" for the audience such that "[f]rom the moment a person visually identifies our logo to the experience they have working with us, each point of contact we have with our many audiences must sing the same Ernst & Young song." Finally, the Global Exchange Program enables individuals from one global office to relocate temporarily to another office "almost anywhere in the world."

Despite this strong evidence of integration, coordinated from the New York offices of EYI, each of these defendants *476 argues that it is a foreign entity operating exclusively in Bermuda with no offices, employees or agents in the United States and further points out that it has no bank accounts, is not registered to do business, and pays no taxes in the United States. To the extent that personnel visit the United States, each defendant asserts that it is "on a limited and sporadic informational and solicitation basis." Each of these defendants further argues that its activities in relation to the Fund were "expressly limited and foreign based," in that they signed and performed service agreements outside of the United States, communicated with investors from Bermuda, dealt with bankers and auditors in Bermuda, maintained all record keeping and made all NAV calculations in Bermuda, and met with no investors in the United States. In effect, they ask this Court, in determining whether they have the minimum contacts with this country necessary to assert personal jurisdiction over them, to ignore their integration with a global firm, an integration on which they rely each day both to attract international business and to provide the resources necessary to perform that work.

Through jurisdictional discovery, however, the plaintiffs have established facts supporting a prima facie case that each Bermuda-based Ernst & Young defendant has the minimum contacts with the United States sufficient to support personal jurisdiction. Those facts in summary form include the following.

FASB

The plaintiffs have presented prima facie evidence of the existence of general jurisdiction over FASB. FASB provides administrative services principally for funds which are created, managed and operated from the United States. Between 66% and over 90% of FASB's annual revenues derive from funds with United States investment managers. As part of their services as fund administrators, FASB regularly calls investors or their advisors in the United States and sends them materials, including copies of monthly account valuations. Further, FASB's marketing materials emphasize that it has "[a]ccess to EYI's staff support and industry specialists" as well as "direct download connections with U.S. brokers." These facts--which constitute a prima facie showing of continuous and systematic general business contacts with the United States--are sufficient to support a finding of general jurisdiction.

The plaintiffs have also carried their burden of showing specific jurisdiction over FASB. As the Offer Memo described, the Fund was to be available to United States investors, specifically "U.S. entities subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended ("ERISA") or other entities exempt from U.S. tax," as well as foreign investors. Consequently, FASB sent approximately 80 letters on FASB letterhead with enclosed subscription documents to individuals in the United States soliciting investors for the Fund. As important, FASB signed a contract to serve as the administrator of a Fund which, while technically operating as an offshore-fund, was entirely managed out of New York by Berger. FASB well understood that the "decisionmaking authority was vested in" Berger in New York. Burger King Corp., 471 U.S. at 480, 105 S.Ct. 2174. Berger, through MCM, invested the Fund's assets in United States' securities traded on American exchanges. FASB sent bills to Berger in New York for approval prior to payment by the Fund and received from the United States all of the information from which it prepared the statements it disseminated as Fund administrators. In that role it made countless mailings to investors or to the *477 agents of investors residing in the United States. Given these activities, it is difficult to imagine how the Fund's administrator would lack the sufficient contacts with the United States to justify finding specific jurisdiction. These facts apply also to the existence of specific jurisdiction over K & W, [FN18] which FASB replaced in 1997, as the contracted administrator for the Fund, and EYB which, as discussed below, was heavily involved with the Fund through its intertwined relationship with FASB and K & W. None of these entities can credibly assert that the quality and nature of their relationship with the United States, arising out of their work for the Fund, was random, fortuitous or attenuated. Id.

FN18. In support of specific jurisdiction, the plaintiffs produced through discovery roughly 20 letters on K & W letterhead soliciting investors in the United States for the Fund with enclosed subscription documents.

K & W

Although the showing here is substantially weaker, the plaintiffs have also presented prima facie evidence sufficient to support a finding of general jurisdiction over K & W. First, as a fund administrator, K & W regularly calls investors and their advisors in the United States and sends them copies of monthly account valuations as well as other materials. Further, K & W signed the Member Pledge as well as a license agreement with EYI, by which K & W agreed to comply with EYI's rules and procedures, including quality control procedures, and allowed EYI to review its services to ascertain compliance with rules and procedures. [FN19] Further, K & W held itself out as part of Ernst & Young's international network. For example, in response to Berger's complaints about confusion stemming from faxes bearing the "Ernst & Young" letterhead rather than that of K & W, K & W stated: "My only mitigating comment in this regard is that [K & W] is part of Ernst & Young's international affiliation." Because of K & W's systematic solicitation of business in the United States, and its dependent and intertwined relationship with EYI, a United States run organization, prima facie evidence exists of continuous and systematic general business contacts with the United States.

FN19. The Pledge was signed: "Kempe and Whittle which also practices as Ernst & Young in Bermuda." The license includes a choice of law provision indicating that the license is "governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New York, U.S.A."

EYB

The plaintiffs have also produced prima facie evidence to warrant a finding of general jurisdiction over EYB. First, EYB regularly sends letters to individuals in the United States with promotional materials, soliciting them as new clients for EYB's offshore administrative service. EYB actively involves itself in the Ernst & Young international network. For example, as part of the Global Exchange Program, it has received two employees from United States offices who were maintained on the US-based payroll. More significantly, roughly 30% of EYB's business is for multinational clients where the overall account relationship is managed by a "global account partner" outside of Bermuda, some of whom are in the United States. The global account partner sets the final fee. When the Managing Partner of EYB serves as the global account partner in Bermuda, he travels to the United States with other EYB personnel for meetings. This has occurred at least five times in the last three years. Another EYB principal indicated in his affidavit that he travels to the United States approximately five times per year to meet with companies which *478 provide services to clients of EYB, FASB, and K & W and to attend industry conferences. Finally, since at least 50 EYB clients are audited in accordance with U.S. GAAP, EYB regularly consults various Ernst & Young offices in the United States on issues relating to U.S. GAAP, U.S. GAAS, U.S. income taxes, and U.S. securities laws. At least five EYB clients are public reporting companies that file their financial statements with the SEC. In many other cases, an EYB audit is consolidated with another Ernst & Young audit and filed as a consolidated statement with the SEC. These jurisdictional facts constitute continuous and systematic general business contacts with the United States sufficient to support a finding of general jurisdiction.

Finally, although EYB was not named as the Fund administrator, its intertwined relationship with FASB and K & W, and indeed its control of these entities, meant that it had its own significant and direct involvement with the Fund. Discovery revealed that these Bermuda defendants effectively function as a single entity. The Managing Partner of EYB is the President of K & W and FASB; the partners of EYB are the shareholders of K & W and FASB. K & W and FASB share offices with EYB and their employees are on the EYB payroll. The name plate for their common reception area reads only "Ernst & Young." Time and billing systems for the three entities are merged and a combined management report is generated on a monthly basis. Compensation is set by overall performance in the three entities. FASB and K & W identify themselves as interchangeable with or owned by EYB: K & W signed the Member's Pledge as "Kempe and Whittle which also practices as Ernst & Young in Bermuda," and FASB identified itself in two separate documents addressed to Berger as a "Bermuda incorporated company owned by the partners of EYB" and as an "affiliate of

EYB."

Despite EYB's contention that it had "no contractual, working or other relationship or connection with the Fund" or with Berger, discovery has shown the opposite. EYB has even identified itself to Berger as the entity in charge of the Fund's work. A letter sent in February 1997, by Spiering in his capacity as Managing Partner of EYB, informed Berger that FASB would replace K & W "as the corporate vehicle through which we provide fund accounting and administration services to existing and future clients" and discusses "our current services" and "our client base" (emphasis added). Discovery has shown numerous telephone calls and correspondence from EYB personnel to Berger in New York as well as four substantive business meetings in New York between Berger and EYB personnel. In February 1995, their joint discussions included the structure of the Fund, services available to clients, and fee negotiations. In a follow-up letter to Berger, an EYB employee emphasized that "our affiliation with Ernst & Young international network allows us to draw on the expertise both within our own Investment Fund Audit teams and the rest of our worldwide offices We can also draw on our other offices to assist with staffing requirements should the need arise." At a second meeting in New York in June 1996, the Investment Management Agreement was signed, allowing Berger to make trading and investment decisions on behalf of the Fund, and arrangements were discussed for the direct downloading of information from Bear Stearns in New York to the Ernst & Young computer system in Bermuda. Berger and the EYB representatives again discussed management and incentive fees. Two other New York meetings, in November 1996 and in 1999, included conversations about procedures *479 and fund administration services as well as requests of information from Berger.

In addition to the meetings in New York, EYB used Ernst & Young personnel in the United States for a variety of tasks related to the Fund. In March 1995, Spiering wrote to an individual in the "New York office," asking him if he knew of Berger or FAM, and whether he was "aware of any reasons which would influence our decision whether or not to accept appointment." In May 1999, EYB personnel requested that the investigative practice group at Ernst & Young in the United States do a review of FAM. In response, a partner at the office of "Ernst & Young, LLP," in Ohio visited the Columbus offices of FAM, and another "Ernst & Young, LLP" employee sent several e-mails to Derek Stapley relating to an investigation of FAM. Taken together, this evidence constitutes prima facie evidence that EYB purposefully directed its activities to residents of the United States such that it should have anticipated being haled into courts of this country to answer on claims arising out of the Fund's operations and its work for the Fund.

3. Reasonableness Inquiry

[20] K & W, FASB and EYB each argue that subjecting them to personal jurisdiction would be unreasonable because, among other things, jurisdiction would be unduly burdensome and the United States has little or no inherent interest in adjudicating the plaintiffs' claims. Their arguments are unconvincing. New York has a substantial interest in litigating a fraud which was conceived of and managed in New York. The United States has a substantial interest in the enforcement of its securities laws and the protection of investors in United States securities markets, even those who invest through participation in a fund. The plaintiffs reside in many countries such that the choice of the Southern District of New York for litigation provides both a convenient forum and one with expertise in this kind of litigation. The litigation will not impose undue burden on these defendants, each of whom has substantial contacts with the United States and is part of a global enterprise managed from New York City.

4. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The securities laws are silent regarding the issue of extraterritorial application. In analyzing transnational frauds, courts must determine "whether Congress would have wished the precious resources of the United States courts' to be devoted to such transactions." Alfadda v. Fenn, 935 F.2d 475, 478 (2d Cir.1991) (quoting Psimenos v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 722 F.2d 1041, 1045 (2d Cir.1983)); see also Carr v. Equistar Offshore, Ltd., No. 94 Civ. 5567(DLC), 1995 WL 562178, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 21, 1995). The Second Circuit has developed two tests to determine whether the Court should entertain subject matter jurisdiction over a particular transnational securities fraud claim, the conduct test and the effects test. Itoba Ltd. v. Lep Group PLC, 54 F.3d 118, 121-22 (2d Cir.1995). The two tests need not be applied "separately and distinctly," and "an admixture or combination of the two often gives a better picture of whether there is sufficient United States involvement to justify the exercise of jurisdiction by an American court." Id. at 122. Indeed, certain facts, such as making telephone calls or sending investment information to the United States, can be "characterized as either conduct or effects in the United States." Banque Paribas, 147 F.3d at 128 & n. 13.

[21] The effects test looks to the effect of the fraudulent conduct that "impacts on *480 'stock registered and listed on [an American] national securities exchange and [is] detrimental to the interests of American investors.'" Itoba, 54 F.3d at 124 (citation omitted). The impact on investors resident in the United States, whatever their nationality, is the focus of the effects test. Banque Paribas, 147 F.3d at 128 n. 12.

[22][23] A federal court has subject matter jurisdiction under the conduct test "if (1) the defendant's activities in the United States were more than 'merely preparatory' to a securities fraud conducted elsewhere, and (2) these activities or culpable failures to act within the United States 'directly caused' the claimed losses." Itoba, 54 F.3d at 122 (citations omitted); see also Banque Paribas, 147 F.3d at 129 (holding these factors to constitute the "key element" of the conduct test). The goal of the conduct test is to prevent the United States from being "used as a base for manufacturing fraudulent security devices for export, even when these are peddled only to foreigners.' " Itoba, 54 F.3d at 122 (quoting Psimenos, 722 F.2d at 1045). Consequently, where defendants have undertaken significant steps in the United States in furtherance of a fraudulent scheme, United States courts have jurisdiction over suits arising from that conduct even if the final transaction occurs outside the United States and involves only foreign investors. Alfadda, 935 F.2d at 478-79 (citing Restatement (Second) of Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 416(d) (1987)). The Second Circuit has found jurisdiction over a "predominantly foreign" securities transaction where, "in addition to communications with or meetings in the United States, there has also been a transaction on a U.S. exchange, economic activity in the U.S., harm to a U.S. party, or activity by a U.S. person or entity meriting redress." Banque Paribas, 147 F.3d at 130.

[24] The plaintiffs have alleged facts sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Although the named plaintiffs are foreign citizens, and the Fund operated as an offshore-fund, the fraud was run from the United States and it was the decisions made in the United States that led directly to the investors' losses. Specifically, the plaintiffs allege that the fraud was conceived and executed in New York by Berger, who implemented the scheme through his wholly-owned company, MCM, a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in New York. The Offer Memo advertises the Fund to "U.S. entities subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended ("ERISA") or other entities exempt from U.S. tax," among others. Berger's investment strategy principally involved the concentrated short selling on American exchanges of securities of United States technology companies. The Fund's securities transactions were cleared in New York by Bear Stearns and all of the Fund's assets were in Bear Stearns' custody in New York. Berger then prepared the fictitious financial statements, which were sent offshore to the Fund's administrators and auditors, and then re-transmitted back into this country and abroad to prospective investors, current shareholders, and their agents.

The defendants argue that courts cannot aggregate defendants' conduct and look at the scheme as a whole when analyzing subject matter jurisdiction but rather must look to the conduct of each defendant individually. Even were this Court to accept the defendants' argument, the result would be the same. Against EYB, FASB, and K & W in particular, the plaintiffs allege that as the Fund Administrators, these defendants disseminated materially inflated NAV statements to the Fund's shareholders *481 or to prospective investors, including addresses in the United States, a fact which K & W and FASB concede in their memorandum of law. Jurisdictional discovery revealed that recipients of monthly NAV statements included American residents who invested in the Fund through offshore vehicles but who received their NAV statements in the United States, either directly or through their investment managers. See Leasco Data Processing Equipment Corp. v. Maxwell, 468 F.2d 1326, 1338 (2d Cir.1972) (analyzing effect in the United States by looking at beneficial owner rather than off-shore vehicle used to purchase securities). Plaintiffs further allege that in addition to trips from Bermuda to New York for substantive business meetings with Berger, EYB, FASB, and K & W personnel were in regular, often daily, telephone/fax or correspondence contact with Berger seeking approval for NAV calculations, redemption requests, or other matters, or to negotiate additional fees.

5. Failure to Plead Section 10(b) Claim with Particularity

Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 prohibit fraudulent activities in connection with the purchase or sale of securities. The proscriptions of Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 were meant to be broad and inclusive. See, e.g., SEC v. First Jersey Sec., Inc., 101 F.3d 1450, 1466 (2d Cir.1996). To state a cause of action under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5, "a plaintiff must plead that in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, the defendant, acting with scienter, made a false material representation or omitted to disclose material information and that the plaintiff's reliance on defendant's action caused plaintiff injury." Rothman, 220 F.3d at 89 (citation omitted). Securities fraud claims are subject to the pleading requirements discussed above.

[25] Plaintiffs have adequately alleged a securities fraud claim against EYB, FASB, and K & W. As discussed above, the Complaint alleges that these defendants knowingly and/or recklessly used false data from Berger--despite concurrent receipt of accurate financial statements from Bear Stearns--to prepare inflated NAV statements and disseminate them to plaintiffs who relied upon the information in their investment decisions regarding the Fund and thereby suffered injury. These defendants further used the false NAV figures to process new subscriptions, issue new shares of the Fund, and price investor redemptions. Several examples of specific allegations adequately pleading at the very least reckless behavior on the part of these defendants are detailed in the background discussion and need not be repeated here.

[26][27] EYB asserts that because only FASB and K & W signed service agreements with the Fund to serve as administrators, the plaintiffs have failed to specify any statement made by EYB which is alleged to have been misleading and therefore make EYB a primary violator. A primary violator of Section 10(b) is any actor who "participated in the fraudulent scheme." SEC v. U.S. Env'tl., Inc., 155 F.3d 107, 112 (2d Cir.1998) (citation omitted). While it is clear from the Supreme Court's decision in Central Bank of Denver, N.A. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, N.A., 511 U.S. 164, 167, 114 S.Ct. 1439, 128 L.Ed.2d 119 (1994), that private civil liability under Section 10(b) applies only to those who "engage in the manipulative or deceptive practice" and not to those "who aid and abet the violation," a finding that the defendant communicated the misrepresentation directly to the plaintiff is not necessary. It is necessary, however, for the misrepresentation to have *482 been attributed to the defendant at the time of dissemination. Wright v. Ernst & Young LLP, 152 F.3d 169, 175 (2d Cir.1998). The necessity for this requirement is premised on the plaintiff's obligation to "show reliance on the defendant's misstatement or omission to recover under 10b-5." Central Bank, 511 U.S. at 180, 114 S.Ct. 1439.

The plaintiffs have presented documents to support a claim against EYB as a primary violator of Section 10(b). For example, FASB's mailings to investors were on letterhead that read "Fund Administration Services (Bermuda) Ltd., An Affiliate of Ernst & Young, Bermuda." At the bottom of the page, the document explained that FASB "is a company owned by the partners of" EYB. These statements are sufficient to tie EYB to each of the false NAVs disseminated by FASB through such mailings and to justify an investor's reliance on not just FASB but also EYB for the accuracy of the information contained in the mailings. "Any person or entity, including a lawyer, accountant, or bank, who employs a manipulative device or makes a material misstatement (or omission) on which a purchaser or seller of securities relies may be liable as a primary violator under 10b-5, assuming all of the requirements for primary liability under Rule 10b-5 are met." Id. at 191, 114 S.Ct. 1439 (emphasis in original). To the extent there is insufficient specificity in their first amended complaint, the plaintiffs will be permitted to cure the deficiency.

6. Statute of Limitations Bar to Section 10(b) Claim against K & W

[28] Securities claims must be brought within one year of discovery of a violation and within three years of the actual violation. Lampf, Pleva, Lipkind, Prupis & Petigrow v. Gilbertson, 501 U.S. 350, 360, 111 S.Ct. 2773, 115 L.Ed.2d 321 (1991); Rothman, 220 F.3d at 96. K & W argues that the plaintiffs' securities law claims against it are time barred because the Complaint was filed more than three years after February 1, 1997, the date on which the Complaint alleges that K & W was replaced by FASB as the Fund's administrator. Plaintiffs assert that because the Complaint alleges both that K & W is part of the single, unified "Ernst & Young" firm and that all of the defendants therefore acted as one entity from the inception through the discovery of the fraud, it is irrelevant for statute of limitations purposes that FASB replaced K & W in 1997.

[29] The Second Circuit has treated motions to dismiss based on statute of limitations under the same standard as motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Harris v. City of New York, 186 F.3d 243, 250 (2d Cir.1999). The plaintiffs have, however, failed to allege any material misrepresentation made by K & W within the statute of limitations period that was relied upon by the investors and have thus failed to allege that K & W was a primary violator of the securities laws after FASB replaced K & W as the Fund's administrator in February 1997. FASB and K & W's motion to dismiss the securities claims against K & W on statute of limitations grounds is granted. Similarly, three of the state law claims alleged against K & W, namely negligence, gross negligence, and professional malpractice, are dismissed based on three year statutes of limitations.

Because the federal claims against K & W have been dismissed, it may be held in this action for common law fraud, aiding and abetting common law fraud, and negligent misrepresentation, all of which have six year statutes of limitations under New York law, [FN20] only if the plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that K & W is amenable to service of process under New York's long-arm statute, in addition to the federal due process test discussed above. Kernan v. Kurz-Hastings, 175 F.3d 236, 240 (2d Cir.1999).

FN20. The parties have not addressed whether any other jurisdiction's statute of limitations must be considered under New York's borrowing statute.

[30] The plaintiffs have adequately met their burden under Section 302(a)(1), N.Y. C.P.L.R. (McKinney 1990), whereby a defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction in New York if it "transacts any business within the state" and the cause of action "arises out of" that transaction. PDK Labs, Inc. v. Friedlander, 103 F.3d 1105, 1109 (2d Cir.1997). A claim "arises out" of a party's transaction of business if it is " 'sufficiently related to the business transacted that it would not be unfair to deem it to arise out of the transacted business,' " id. 1109 (citation omitted), that is, if an " 'articulable nexus' " exists between the claim and the transaction, Credit Lyonnais Sec. (USA), Inc. v. Alcantara, 183 F.3d 151, 153 (2d Cir.1999) (citation omitted), and the defendant has " 'purposefully availed [itself] of the privilege of conducting activities within New York and thereby invoc[ed] the benefits and protections of its laws.' " Fort Knox Music Inc. v. Baptiste, 203 F.3d 193, 196 (2d Cir.2000) (citation omitted).

[31] K & W argues that this Court lacks jurisdiction because its contacts with New York were infrequent. Even if that were true, as discussed in the very case on which K & W relies, it is not the "quantity of contacts with New York, but rather the nature and quality of the contacts" that are the focus of the Section 302(a)(1) analysis. Lawrence Wisser & Co. v. Slender You, Inc., 695 F.Supp. 1560, 1563 (S.D.N.Y.1988). K & W won the right to work as the administrator of the Fund through face-to-face negotiations with Berger in New York. K & W allegedly ignored accurate financial statements received from Bear Stearns in New York and took direction from Berger in New York for a Fund managed in New York and trading securities on New York exchanges. Jurisdictional discovery also produced roughly 20 letters from K & W soliciting Fund investors and/or their agents at New York addresses. It regularly sent NAV statements and other Fund documents to investors or their managers in New York. Looking at the "totality of the circumstances concerning [K & W's] connections to [New York]," id., and given K & W's conduct and connection to New York as discussed earlier in this Opinion, it should reasonably have anticipated being haled into court here. [FN21] Accordingly, the claims of common law fraud, aiding and abetting common law fraud, and negligent misrepresentation against K & W remain in this action.

FN21. As discussed above, the plaintiffs have met their jurisdictional burden against K & W under a due process analysis.

7. Section 20(a) Claim: Controlling Person Liability

[32] EYB argues in abbreviated form that the plaintiffs have failed to allege adequately a claim for controlling person liability. To establish a prima facie case of controlling person liability under Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a), a plaintiff must show:

(1) a primary violation by a controlled person; (2) control of the primary violator by the defendant; and (3) "that the controlling person was in some meaningful sense a culpable participant" in the primary violation.

*484 Boguslavsky v. Kaplan, 159 F.3d 715, 720 (2d Cir.1998) (quoting SEC v. First Jersey, 101 F.3d at 1472); see also In re Livent, 78 F.Supp.2d 194, 221 (S.D.N.Y.1999).

[33] The second element, or control over a primary violator, may be established by showing that "the defendant possessed 'the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise.'" SEC v. First Jersey, 101 F.3d at 1473 (quoting 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2); see also Gabriel Capital, L.P. v. NatWest Fin., Inc., 122 F.Supp.2d 407, 426 (S.D.N.Y.2000). Actual control over the wrongdoer and the transactions in question is necessary for control person liability. See In re Blech Sec. Litig., 961 F.Supp. 569, 586-87 (S.D.N.Y.1997). Thus, officer or director status alone does not constitute control. See In re Livent, 78 F.Supp.2d at 221 (collecting cases). A plaintiff "need only plead facts supporting a reasonable inference of control" to survive a motion to dismiss. Gabriel Capital, 122 F.Supp.2d at 426-27.

[34] The third element--the culpable participation element--is subject to the PSLRA's heightened pleading standard. That is, plaintiffs must "state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that [the controlling person] in some meaningful sense culpably participated in [the controlled person's] primary violation." Gabriel Capital, 122 F.Supp.2d at 427. This burden is satisfied if plaintiffs plead facts "giving rise to a strong inference that the controlling person knew or should have known that [the controlled person] was engaging in fraudulent conduct," but "took no steps to prevent the primary violation." Gabriel Capital, 122 F.Supp.2d at 428-29.

[35] The Complaint adequately alleges both actual control and culpable participation. In particular, the plaintiffs allege that EYB identified FASB and K & W as "the corporate vehicle[s] through which" EYB provided administrative services to its clients and that EYB "owned and controlled" FASB and K & W by exercising "direct, daily supervision, oversight and control" through common personnel and shared offices. Further, the Complaint is peppered with specific allegations of participation by EYB personnel in the fraud including, among other examples noted throughout this Opinion, the preparation of false NAV statements by two EYB personnel alleged to be overseeing administration services for the Fund, and their failure to investigate either the discrepancies between Berger's statements and those received from Bear Stearns or the suspicious appearance of Berger's statements on their face. Accordingly, EYB's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claim of controlling person liability is denied.

Finally, the motion brought by the three Bermuda entities pursuant to Rule 12(e) for a more definite statement is granted. Any amended pleading must identify the specific defendant or defendants against whom an allegation is being made, and may not rely on collective assertions.

C. EYI

EYI moves to dismiss the actions pursuant to Rules 9(b) and 12(b)(6). [FN22] EYI argues that the Cromer plaintiffs fail to state a claim for a violation of federal securities law as either a primary violator or under a theory of controlling person liability. In particular, EYI argues that the plaintiffs have attempted to hold it liable through a *485 "single, unified company" theory, grouping EYI with EYB, FASB, and K & W and ignoring the "separate legal identity" of EYI. EYI argues that it is not a professional services firm which provides accounting, auditing or other professional services to clients, but rather a "membership association" of separately organized accounting firms throughout the world which agree to conduct their individual practices in accordance with EYI's Articles of Association. Finally, EYI argues that the Court should not exercise jurisdiction over the pendent claims should the federal securities claims be dismissed.

FN22. EYI initially moved for both dismissal and summary judgment. In its reply brief, however, EYI limited its motion to the dismissal arguments.

1. Federal Claims

[36] The plaintiffs have failed to state a claim against EYI for securities fraud. First, the plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for securities fraud as a primary violator. As discussed above, a secondary actor may be held liable for securities fraud where "the misrepresentation [is] attributed to that specific actor at the time of public dissemination, that is, in advance of the investment decision," Wright, 152 F.3d at 175. While the plaintiffs have alleged that EYI was part of the global Ernst & Young enterprise, the sole allegation linking EYI to this fraud was the Offer Memo's indication that FASB or K & W, the identified administrators of the Fund, were "affiliates of EYI." That alone is not sufficient to connect EYI to the dissemination of false statements by FASB or K & W. [FN23] Unlike EYB, there was no reference to EYI in the documents in which the false statements were contained. Accordingly, EYI's motion to dismiss the Section 10(b) claim against it is granted.

FN23. Plaintiffs argue that, in the alternative, EYI may be held liable for securities fraud through a piercing-the-veil theory. Even if this theory remains valid in the aftermath of Central Bank, the plaintiffs have not alleged facts sufficient to hold EYI liable under this theory. Under New York law, plaintiffs may pierce the corporate veil where they show: "(i) that the owner exercised complete domination over the corporation with respect to the transaction at issue; and (ii) that such domination was used to commit a fraud or wrong that injured the party seeking to pierce the veil." Thrift Drug, Inc. v. Universal Prescription Adm'rs, 131 F.3d 95, 97 (2d Cir.1997) (emphasis in original) (citation omitted). Complete domination has been found where the dominated company held no shareholder meetings, maintained no records of directors' meetings, was inadequately capitalized, or lent money to the dominated company without corporate purpose, or where the dominated company/individual was the sole shareholder and director of the dominated company. Id. Using domination to commit fraud has been interpreted to require a showing that "the owners, through their domination, abused the privilege of doing business in the corporate form to perpetrate a wrong or injustice against that party such that a court in equity will intervene." Id. While the plaintiffs have alleged that Ernst & Young operated as a global, financially interdependent enterprise and that EYI provided executive management and strategic direction for its members, it has not alleged that FASB, K & W or EYB lacked any corporate form or that EYI used its control to perpetrate a fraud.

The elements of a prima facie case of controlling person liability are discussed above. The plaintiffs have failed to allege "culpable participation" by EYI with the particularity required under the law. The plaintiffs point to the Complaint's allegations that an e-mail sent in February 1999, from a DTB partner to a DTUS partner stated: "Having spoken to the Administrator (it is Ernst & Young Fund Administration Company) here in Bermuda. Off the record, the Administrator advised that they had heard something similar [about fraudulent conduct] via an U.S. Ernst & Young Partner." This allegation is insufficient to support a "strong inference" that EYI knew or should have known that the other Ernst & Young defendants were engaging in fraud. The plaintiffs' claim for *486 controlling person liability against EYI is dismissed.

2. State Law Claims

[37] EYI argues that without a claim of federal securities fraud, the plaintiffs' state claims against EYI should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, or alternatively for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) and, for claims sounding in fraud, for failure to meet Rule 9(b) pleading requirements. Where no federal claims exist against a defendant, the Court may nonetheless exercise jurisdiction over a pendent state claim, where [t]he state and federal claims ... derive from a common nucleus of operative fact. If, considered without regard to their federal or state character, a plaintiff's claims are such that he would ordinarily be expected to try them all in one judicial proceeding, then there is power in federal courts to hear the whole.

Baylis v. Marriott Corp., 843 F.2d 658, 664 (2d Cir.1988) (quoting United Mine Workers, 383 U.S. at 725-26, 86 S.Ct. 1130). Even where the sole defendant with federal claims against it is dismissed from the case, the court still has power to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over the state claims against remaining defendants, provided the state and federal claims derive from a common nucleus of operative fact. Mizuna, Ltd. v. Crossland Federal Sav. Bank, 90 F.3d 650, 657 (2d Cir.1996).

Here, the plaintiffs' surviving federal claims against other defendants and state claims against EYI derive from a common nucleus of operative facts. They each stem from the preparation and dissemination of the Fund's allegedly fraudulent NAV statements. The plaintiffs, however, fail to allege adequately their state law claims against EYI.

[38] The plaintiffs have asserted seven state law claims against EYI: common law fraud, negligence, gross negligence, professional malpractice, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting common law fraud and aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty. The Complaint contains no specific allegations as to the conduct of EYI--apart from the inadequate, generalized references to the "Ernst & Young Defendants"--necessary to give rise to any of the elements of their state claims. Further, the plaintiffs have failed to state their claims under an agency theory.

[39][40][41] Under New York law, "an agent must have authority, whether apparent, actual or implied, to bind his principal." Merrill Lynch Interfunding, Inc. v. Argenti, 155 F.3d 113, 122 (2d Cir.1998). Actual authority "arises from a manifestation from principal to agent." Carte Blanche (Singapore) PTE., Ltd. v. Diners Club Int'l, Inc., 758 F.Supp. 908, 919 (S.D.N.Y.1991); see also Empire Communications Consultants, Inc. v. Pay TV, 126 A.D.2d 598, 510 N.Y.S.2d 893, 895 (2d Dep't 1987). The consent for actual authority may be "either express or implied from 'the parties' words and conduct as construed in light of the surrounding circumstances.'" Carte Blanche, 758 F.Supp. at 919 (quoting Riverside Research Inst. v. KMGa, Inc., 108 A.D.2d 365, 489 N.Y.S.2d 220, 223 (1st Dep't 1985)).

[42] For apparent authority to exist, there must be "'words or conduct of the principal, communicated to a third party, that give rise to the appearance and belief that the agent possesses authority to enter into a transaction'" on behalf of the principal. Standard Funding Corp. v. Lewitt, 89 N.Y.2d 546, 656 N.Y.S.2d 188, 191, 678 N.E.2d 874 (1997) (quoting Hallock v. State, 64 N.Y.2d 224, 485 N.Y.S.2d 510, 513, 474 N.E.2d 1178 (1984)). "In such circumstances, the third party's reasonable *487 reliance upon the appearance of authority binds the principal." Id.; see also Marfia v. T.C. Ziraat Bankasi, 100 F.3d 243, 251 (2d Cir.1996).

[43][44] A related equitable estoppel doctrine can also bind the principal where the third party reasonably relies on the principal's knowing misrepresentations. Cinema N. Corp. v. Plaza At Latham Assocs., 867 F.2d 135, 141 (2d Cir.1989). Similarly, the principal can be deemed to ratify an unauthorized transaction after the fact "where the principal retains the benefit ... with knowledge of the material facts." Standard Funding Corp., 656 N.Y.S.2d at 191, 678 N.E.2d 874; see also New Haven Radio, Inc.

v. Meister (In re Martin-Trigona), 760 F.2d 1334, 1341 (2d Cir.1985).

The Complaint alleges no facts to support the existence of actual authority bestowed upon the Bermuda entities by EYI. While the Complaint points to a letter indicating that K & W and FASB functioned as the "corporate vehicle[s] through which" EYB and EYI provided administrative services to its clients, the letter itself, incorporated in the Complaint by reference, identifies only EYB, not EYI. Specifically, its heading reads "Ernst & Young" accompanied by a Bermuda address and it is signed by a managing partner of EYB. The conclusory allegations that the entities "are each agents and/or mere departments of the other," that EYI "owned and controlled [EYB], FASB, and [K & W]," and that EYI's "office in Bermuda is defendant [EYB]" are insufficient to allege actual authority.

The plaintiffs also fail to allege adequately apparent authority. The Complaint alleges that the four Ernst & Young defendants "held themselves out" as a single global entity but do not specify any express or implied communication by EYI to third parties giving the appearance that the Bermuda entities were acting on behalf of EYI as Fund administrator. The plaintiffs argue that investors understood from the Offer Memo that "an affiliate of Ernst & Young International" would provide services for the Fund. The Offer Memo, however, was a communication by the Fund to the investors, not from EYI to investors. While the plaintiffs do allege a common marketing and advertising scheme in the name of "Ernst & Young," including a global website at "www.ey.com," they do not allege that this advertising scheme was orchestrated by EYI. Even if it were, however, the allegation of a general advertising scheme is not sufficient to create the appearance of authority for EYB, FASB, or K & W to act for EYI as the Fund's administrator.

The only New York case cited by the plaintiffs, Fogel v. Hertz Int'l, Ltd., 141 A.D.2d 375, 529 N.Y.S.2d 484 (1st Dep't 1988), involved not only a general advertising scheme by the principal, in this case Hertz, but also the making of a reservation through Hertz and the identification of Hertz on the agent's contract with the plaintiff. Id. at 485. Other cases cited by the plaintiff also involve more than the advertising that is alleged in the Complaint. In Wood v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 508 F.2d 167 (5th Cir.1975), Holiday Inns, Inc. exercised such control over the appearance and operation of its franchisee that there was "virtually no way [the plaintiff] could have known that the servants in the [local] facility were servants of [the franchisee], not of Holiday Inns, Inc." Id. at 176. In Gizzi v. Texaco, Inc., 437 F.2d 308, 310 (3d Cir.1971), in addition to national advertising by Texaco, Texaco exercised control over the local service station and the Texaco insignia and slogan were "prominently *488 displayed" there. [FN24]

FN24. The plaintiffs also cite cases where customers were "led to believe" through logos or advertisements that they were dealing with the principal. See Drexel v. Union Prescription Ctrs., Inc., 582 F.2d 781, 795 (3d Cir.1978); Momen v. United States, 946 F.Supp. 196, 203 (N.D.N.Y.1996). These cases, however, involved logos or advertisements at retail locations or on products. The Cromer plaintiffs do not allege that EYI's logo appeared on any NAV statements disseminated by the Bermuda entities. Allegations that specific letters went out on "Ernst & Young" letterhead are insufficient. Many of those documents are incorporated by reference into the Complaint, all of which reveal letterhead that reads "Ernst & Young" accompanied by a Bermuda address.

[45] The plaintiffs also fail to allege sufficiently the state common law claims against EYI under a partnership by estoppel theory. Pursuant to Section 27 of New York's Partnership Law, when a person by words spoken or written or by conduct, represents himself, or consents to another representing him to any one, as a partner in an existing partnership ..., he is liable to any such person to whom such representation has been made, who has, on the faith of such representation, given credit to the actual or apparent partnership. (emphasis supplied). See also Milano v. Freed, 64 F.3d 91, 98 (2d Cir.1995). A corporation may be held liable under Section 27. Ranieri v. Leavy, 180 A.D.2d 723, 580 N.Y.S.2d 366, 367 (1992). A person has "given credit" to the partnership not only where he has "extended financial credit, but also [where he] has relied on another party's representations regarding the existence of a partnership." Four Star Capital Corp. v. Nynex Corp., 183 F.R.D. 91, 105 (S.D.N.Y.1997).

The plaintiffs have alleged that, together with EYB, FASB, and K & W, EYI is part of a "unified global pro[fe]ssional services firm" which "function[s] essentially as a global partnership." The Complaint alleges that this partnership is "financially interdependent," globally allocates certain revenues and expenses, shares clients, abides by common operational policies, and uses one another to render services in other jurisdictions. Through common marketing and advertising, Ernst & Young is alleged to represent itself to the public as a unified firm. Further, according to the Complaint, the Offer Memo led investors to believe that they were dealing with an "affiliate of [EYI]." An affiliate, however, is not necessarily a partner. These allegations are insufficient to allege either that EYI represented itself or consented to another representing it as a "partner in an existing partnership" with any of the Bermuda entities, or that the investors "gave credit" to any representations of partnership in making decisions regard to the Fund. Accordingly, EYI's motion to dismiss the entire Complaint against it is granted.

D. DTB

DTB moves to dismiss these actions pursuant to Rules 12(b)(1), (b)(2) and (b)(6). DTB makes the following arguments: (1) This Court lacks personal jurisdiction over DTB because DTB does not engage in continuous and systematic business in the United States, did not have sufficient contact with the United States in connection with the Fund, and cannot be subject to jurisdiction by virtue of its relationship with DTUS and DTT; (2) This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction because the Exchange Act does not apply to activities occurring outside of the United States with only a tangential effect inside the United States; and (3) New York choice of law requires this Court to apply Bermuda law to the plaintiffs' claims of aiding and abetting common law fraud and gross negligence, *489 under which these claims do not exist.

1. Personal Jurisdiction

DTB served as the Fund's auditor. Pursuant to the engagement letter signed for each of the years 1996-1999, "Deloitte & Touche" agreed to audit the Fund "to evaluate the fairness of presentation of the statements in conformity with the accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America." The plaintiffs allege that while DTB issued "clean" reports each year, the audits were materially inaccurate and were issued without reasonable assurances that the Fund's financial statements were free of material misstatements.

Before discussing the jurisdictional facts as they relate to DTB individually, it should be noted that DTB functions as an integrated member of the international Deloitte & Touche enterprise. DTB is a "member firm" of DTT, a Swiss Verein with executive offices in New York. The "Articles of the Verein," dated October 1999, detail the Verein's purposes, including, to further international alignment, cooperation, and cohesion among the Member Firms; to assure that Member Firms' practices conform to professional standards of the highest quality; to advance the international and national leadership of the Member Firms in rendering Professional Services; to foster the shared beliefs, mission, and common vision for the Member Firms.

The Articles direct Member Firms to "align national plans, strategies, businesses, and operations with global plans, strategies, business, and operations" and to contribute toward the Verein's operating expenses and "make every reasonable effort" to refer business to other Member Firms. The Verein's Board of Directors is to address "global strategies [and] major transactions" and to "determine the major policies of the Verein." The CEO is invested with the duty of "setting [the Verein's] strategic course" and reviewing and consolidating Member Firms' business and operating plans as well as with reviewing Member Firms' partner compensation processes in order to "ensure consistency with global strategies and goals." If a Member Firm withdraws or is expelled from the Verein, it must "cooperate ... in arranging for the orderly transfer of clients from which it was the receiving Member Firm to another Member Firm." Discovery revealed that over 50% of DTB's business constitutes such "received" business.

DTT's "Globalization Prospectus," dated April 1999, discusses the goal of becoming a "true global firm." It describes the integration process as "evolutionary," having begun in 1989, and proceeding through stages. In a section entitled "Economic Interdependence," the prospectus discusses how aligned practices will "participate in global cost-savings programs to capture savings and facilitate greater uniformity and compatibility throughout the global firm." DTB signed a Global Alignment Resolution in April 1999, pledging to "transform our international organization into a truly global firm."

Finally, a press release issued in December 1999, on the DTT website (www.deloitte.com) counted "advancing its globalization strategy" as one of the "key factors contributing to Deloitte's growth in 1999," and touted its own "seamless, consistent services wherever our clients operate." On a 1999 copyrighted version of its website (www.bermuda.bm), DTB describes itself as "the Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu practice in Bermuda" and boasts of "more than 90,000 people in over 130 countries" delivering "seamless, consistent services wherever our clients operate."

*490 DTB argues that it is not subject to personal jurisdiction because it has no office, telephone number or mailing address in the United States, is not authorized to do business in the United States, and has no bank account, pays no taxes and owns no property in the United States. DTB further argues that its personnel travel infrequently to the United States in connection with client work and render services almost entirely in Bermuda.

In addition to evidence of DTB's participation in the worldwide DTT Verein, however, the plaintiffs have offered additional facts in support of a finding of general jurisdiction. DTB partners, for example, travel to the United States for business-related meetings. [FN25] At least 50% of DTB's work is for "exempt companies," which are majority-controlled by another company located outside of Bermuda. Over 50% of those exempt companies are located in the United States. DTB audits a captive insurance company located in Bermuda for DTUS' clients and passes the audit to DTUS, which consolidates it with the parent corporations' financial statements and files the papers with the SEC. Further, U.S. GAAS mandates that an auditor have an actuary under the auditor's control to review reserves. Until 1998, DTB had no actuary on staff and "most often" used DTUS for those services. Even after hiring an actuary, DTB has continued to use DTUS actuaries. Based on bills for actuarial consulting and other services, the plaintiffs represent that between 1997 and 2000, DTUS billed DTB over $350,000 for actuarial services and over $2.5 million for substantive services, such as assistance in common control presentations, tax consultation, and consultation regarding financial statements. As a member of the Verein, DTB was required to participate in a practice review which was conducted by a "team leader" located in Wilton, Connecticut. DTT acts as a purchasing agent for DTB for such things as office supplies, subscriptions, conferences, and software licenses, and DTB uses telephone-based technical support in Wilton, Connecticut, for U.S. GAAP and U.S. GAAS assistance. Finally, DTB regularly solicits business from the United States. The solicitation letter sent to Berger was a "template" used for solicitation of "Bermuda-domiciled funds that had U.S. investment managers." It is unnecessary, however, to decide whether this is prima facie evidence of continuous and systematic general business contacts with the United States, since the plaintiffs have made such a showing in support of a finding of specific jurisdiction over DTB.

FN25. According to DTB materials sent to Berger, Bill Jack, a "Deloitte & Touche" partner in Bermuda, "regularly attends international conferences and is in constant contact with our network of Investment company specialists in the U.S. to ensure that we are abreast of current developments in the industry." Another partner of "Deloitte & Touche" in Bermuda regularly travels to Miami for meetings of partners assigned to the Deloitte Latin American, Caribbean Regional Organization within DTT, of which DTB is a part. He also attended a "Best Practices" meeting in New York in 1997, between smaller Deloitte entities and DTT representatives, as well as an annual world meeting of Member Firms in San Francisco in 1998.

[46] For many of the same reasons discussed in connection with the parallel motion by the Bermuda-based Ernst & Young entities, the work for the Fund was tied directly to Berger in New York, and impacted United States residents, among others. DTB sent its "Proposal of Professional Services" to Berger in New York. The proposal identified "Deloitte & Touche" as "part of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu International" with partners and offices worldwide. While DTB argues that *491 it did not receive the various financial statements it used to complete the audits directly from Berger or Bear Stearns but rather from FASB, DTB was using information it knew emanated from the United States to prepare its allegedly fraudulent audit reports. To perform its work, DTB relied in part on help from its United States based affiliates, who gathered information to mark the Fund's securities to market. DTB next argues that it sent its audits to FASB for dissemination to shareholders, and did not directly mail any of them to the United States. The Offer Memo, however, promised that "Deloitte & Touche," located at a Bermuda address, would be the Fund's independent auditors and explained that the Fund would be marketed to certain classes of United States investors, among others. The audits DTB prepared for the Fund, which the plaintiffs allege contained material misrepresentations about the Fund's financial health, are addressed to "the Shareholders of the Manhattan Investment Fund Ltd." DTB understood that its allegedly fraudulent audits would be mailed to the Fund's shareholders and would reach United States residents. To ignore this reality and focus exclusively on which entity placed the envelope in the mailbox would only serve to elevate form over substance. Finally, the Complaint alleges that a DTB partner spoke with and e-mailed a DTUS partner in February 1999, about a report from Bear Stearns regarding discrepancies in the Fund, and discovery revealed records of phone calls from DTB personnel to FAM and Berger in December 1999, just after the SEC commenced its investigation of the Fund in November 1999, and shortly before Deloitte withdrew its audit reports for 1996-1998 in January 2000. Also in December 1999, at least one DTB partner traveled to meet with Berger in New York to investigate the Fund. While these activities, occurring as they do at the very end of the alleged fraud, would not by themselves create jurisdiction, they do serve to underscore DTB's understanding from the beginning of its work that it was serving a fund managed entirely from New York. Taken together, these facts constitute prima facie evidence of Fund-connected activity purposefully directed at the United States. Again, as with the Ernst & Young Bermuda-based entities, DTB would be hard-pressed to argue that its relationship with the United States, or even with New York state, arising out of its work auditing the Fund, was random, fortuitous or attenuated. Burger King Corp., 471 U.S. at 480, 105 S.Ct. 2174.

2. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The law governing subject matter jurisdiction is discussed above, as are the fraud's connection to the United States and DTB's communications with the United States. The plaintiffs have alleged facts adequate to find subject matter jurisdiction over DTB under the conduct and effects test.

3. Aiding and Abetting Common Law Fraud & Gross Negligence Claims

DTB argues that Bermuda law applies to the claims of aiding and abetting common law fraud and gross negligence and that Bermuda law does not recognize such causes of action. [FN26] Plaintiffs contend that under a choice of law analysis, New York law governs.

FN26. Claims of aiding and abetting common law fraud and gross negligence are brought only by the Cromer plaintiffs.

[47] In addressing choice of law rules in a federal question case, the court should 492 invoke federal common law choice of law analysis only where "significant federal policy, calling for the imposition of a federal conflicts rule, exists." In re Gaston & Snow, 243 F.3d 599, 2001 WL 266058, at *6 (2d Cir. Mar. 19, 2001). The need for uniformity is not, by itself, a sufficient justification for "displacing" state choice of law rules. Id. Accordingly, New York choice of law analysis governs this action.

[48] New York first analyzes whether there is a conflict between the laws of the states. Curley v. AMR Corp., 153 F.3d 5, 12 (2d Cir.1998). If there is, New York undertakes a choice of law analysis. Id. The plaintiffs and DTB have submitted evidence regarding Bermuda law. Bermuda, a common law jurisdiction, apparently has no authority directly addressed to the common law negligence and fraud claims asserted here, but would follow British law and to a lesser extent United States law. Based primarily on an analysis of British precedent, and the degree to which Bermuda courts adhere to it, it appears that there would be liability under Bermuda law for a claim of negligence against DTB for their audits of the Fund if the plaintiff alleged that DTB knew that its audits would be communicated to the plaintiffs individually or as an identifiable class in connection with a specific transaction, such as, an investment in the Fund, and also knew that those audits would very likely be relied upon by those persons in deciding whether to engage in the transaction. A claim for aiding and abetting fraud would only survive in Bermuda if the pleading alleged that DTB had conspired with Berger or procured or induced his fraud or that DTB joined in the common design of the fraud, none of which is alleged here. It is necessary, therefore, to perform a choice of law analysis for at least the claim that DTB aided and abetted the fraud.

New York law employs an "interest analysis" in choice of law analysis of tort claims, under which courts apply "the law of the jurisdiction having the greatest interest in the litigation." Curley, 153 F.3d at 12 (applying New York law). The significant contacts are generally the parties' domiciles and the locus of the tort. Id. In particular, for claims based on fraud, a court's "paramount" concern is the locus of the fraud, that is, " 'the place where the injury was inflicted,' as opposed to the place where the fraudulent act originated." Rosenberg v. Pillsbury Co., 718 F.Supp. 1146, 1150 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (citing Sack v. Low, 478 F.2d 360, 365-66 (2d Cir.1973) (interpreting New York law)). The place in which the injury is deemed to have occurred "is usually where the plaintiff is located." Odyssey Re (London) Ltd. v. Stirling Cooke Brown Holdings Limited, 85 F.Supp.2d 282, 292 (S.D.N.Y.2000) (citation omitted).

DTB argues that Bermuda law should govern because the Cromer plaintiffs as well as DTB are domiciled outside the United States and the locus of DTB's alleged torts is Bermuda. The Cromer plaintiffs contend that because a number of countries have limited and dispersed contacts with the fraud, the Court should apply New York law as the jurisdiction where the fraud originated and where substantial activities in furtherance of the fraud were committed. This Court agrees that New York law should be applied.

Because the Cromer plaintiffs are domiciled in the British Virgin Islands and the Netherland Antilles, injury has occurred in locations with only limited connection to the conduct at issue, while a substantial portion of the fraudulent conduct has occurred in New York. DTB's actions were in furtherance of a fraud created and perpetuated in--with its "locus" in--New York. DTB's audit reports were based on *493 financial information emanating from New York and were disseminated to Fund shareholders in many countries, including shareholders who either resided in the United States or whose affairs were managed from the United States. Finally, as discussed above, jurisdictional discovery revealed DTB to be a member of an international verein whose global strategy and policies are set in New York. DTB relies on its membership in the verein to generate business, submits to review by the verein, and the logo of the verein's leader, DTT, appeared on each of DTB's audit reports for the Fund. While it is true, as DTB argues, that Bermuda has an interest in regulating the conduct of its domiciliary, New York also has a strong interest in regulating the conduct of an entity which relies in its marketing and in the performance of its work on the implicit representation that it has conformed its conduct to the standards set in New York at the executive offices of the verein. Given the extent to which DTB's business course is determined by decisions made in New York, it is appropriate to apply New York law to these claims. DTB does not contend that the Complaint's state law causes of action are deficient when analyzed under New York law.

E. DTT

DTT argues that plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for violation of Section 10(b), for controlling person liability, and for the common law claims of common law fraud, aiding and abetting common law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty, gross negligence, negligence, and professional malpractice. [FN27]

FN27. The claims of gross negligence, negligence, and professional malpractice are asserted only by the Cromer plaintiffs.

1. Federal Claims

DTT argues that the plaintiffs have failed to allege adequately that DTT itself is a "primary violator" of Section 10(b) and, in light of the Supreme Court's decision in Central Bank N.A. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, 511 U.S. 164, 114 S.Ct. 1439, 128 L.Ed.2d 119 (1994), cannot rely on allegations against "Deloitte" generally to hold DTT individually liable for securities fraud claims. DTT is correct.

The Cromer Complaint alleges that the audit reports materially misrepresented the financial condition of the Fund, that DTT's name and logo were affixed to the audit reports "in knowing or reckless disregard that such audit reports were materially false or misleading and/or omitted to state material facts necessary in order to make the statements made ... not misleading," that the plaintiffs would not have purchased the securities of the Fund had they known the audit reports were false, and that they were thereby damaged. While the Complaint does allege that "DTT affixed its name and logo to the audit reports," this conclusory statement is not asserted as a factual allegation but as a legal conclusion.

[49] The plaintiffs have not alleged that DTT knew that the audit reports contained false information, and their allegations are insufficient to infer that DTT was reckless. The Complaint does not allege that DTT was even aware of the reports, much less aware that its name and logo were included on the audit reports. There are no allegations that it failed to review or check information that it had a duty to monitor, that it was aware of any danger that the audit reports included misleading information, or that it was on notice of such a danger. See Novak, 216 F.3d at 308. The use of DTT's name on the audit *494 reports was undoubtedly of great importance to investors, providing a well-respected international organization's imprimatur on the audits and lending credence to the work of a small, relatively unknown Bermuda entity. Nonetheless, the use of a defendant's name on a document containing misleading information is, by itself, insufficient to constitute scienter. In the absence of sufficient allegations of scienter, DTT's motion to dismiss the securities fraud claims is granted. For these same reasons, the plaintiffs have failed to allege adequately that DTT was a "culpable participant" in the primary violation and the Section 20(a) claim must be dismissed.

2. State Law Claims

a. Common Law Fraud

The elements of common law fraud under New York law are "essentially the same" as those required to state a claim under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5. Gabriel Capital, 122 F.Supp.2d at 425-26 (citation omitted). The elements of a fraud claim under New York law are as follows: (1) defendant made "a material, false representation;" (2) defendant intended to defraud the plaintiff thereby; (3) plaintiff reasonably relied upon the representation; and (4) plaintiff suffered damage as a result of the reliance. Chanayil v. Gulati, 169 F.3d 168, 171 (2d Cir.1999) (citation omitted). Because plaintiffs have failed to allege an intent to defraud, DTT's motion to dismiss the common law fraud claim is granted.

b. Aiding and Abetting Common Law Fraud & Aiding and Abetting Breach of Fiduciary Duty

The elements required to state a claim for aiding and abetting common law fraud or breach of fiduciary duty are listed above. DTT does not dispute the existence of an underlying fraud or breach of fiduciary duty. Rather, it contends that plaintiffs have not adequately alleged the knowledge and substantial assistance/participation elements.

To satisfy the knowledge requirement of these claims, New York law requires that a defendant have "actual knowledge" of the underlying fraud. [FN28] A.N. Wight, 219 F.3d at 91 (noting that New York law requires "knowledge of the underlying wrong" for claims of aiding and abetting fraud and breach of fiduciary duty); see also Renner v. Chase Manhattan Bank, No. 98 Civ. 926(CSH), 2000 WL 781081, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. June 16, 2000)

(fraud); Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 246 (fiduciary duty). The defendant's knowledge and intent, however, need only be "averred generally." A.N. Wight, 219 F.3d at 91 (citing Rule 9(b), Fed.R.Civ.P.). A plaintiff satisfies the scienter pleading requirement where it identifies "circumstances indicating conscious behavior by the defendant," Dreieck Finanz AG v. Sun, No. 89 Civ. 4347(MBM), 1990 WL 11537, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 9, 1990) (quoting Beck v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 820 F.2d 46, 50 (2d Cir.1987)), or a clear opportunity and a motive to aid the fraud, *A.N. 495 Wight, 219 F.3d at 92 (New York law). Ordinary economic motive, however, is insufficient to support the latter alternative. Primavera Familienstiftung v. Askin, 173 F.R.D. 115, 127-28 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (citing Shields, 25 F.3d at 1130). The plaintiffs have failed to plead that DTT had actual knowledge of the fraud.

FN28. Plaintiffs argue that the knowledge requirement is satisfied with a lesser standard, such as recklessness. The cases relied upon, however, seem largely to be based on claims of aiding and abetting securities fraud, which is no longer viable in light of the Supreme Court's decision in Central Bank of Denver, N.A. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, N.A., 511 U.S. 164, 167, 114 S.Ct. 1439, 128 L.Ed.2d 119 (1994). See Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 246-47 (collecting cases). The plaintiffs also rely on Diduck v. Kaszycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 974 F.2d 270, 283 (2d Cir.1992), which premised its knowledge discussion on federal common law and ERISA law. See Kolbeck, 939 F.Supp. at 246 (noting that the Diduck rule of constructive knowledge does not apply to cases under New York common law).

[50] The plaintiffs have also failed to allege adequately the aiding and abetting claims under a partnership by estoppel theory. The law of partnership by estoppel is discussed above. The plaintiffs have alleged that DTT is part of a "single unified global professional services firm" operating under the name "Deloitte & Touche" and functioning as a "global partnership." The various Deloitte offices are "financially interdependent," reporting assets and liabilities together, globally allocating certain revenues and expenses, using other Deloitte offices as agents for various services, abiding by common operational policies, and engaging in quality cross-checks of one another. Through a common marketing and advertising scheme, the Deloitte entities portray themselves as a unified multinational practice. While the Complaint further alleges that each audit report displayed the DTT logo as well as "Deloitte & Touche," it fails to allege either that DTT or anyone with its consent represented that DTT was a "partner in an existing partnership" with DTB, or that investors "gave credit" to any such representations in making their investment decisions. Accordingly, DTT's motion to dismiss the aiding and abetting claims is granted.

c. Negligence, Gross Negligence and Malpractice

[51] Under New York law, a prima facie case of negligence, gross negligence, or professional malpractice requires the plaintiff to show: (1) a duty to the plaintiff; (2) a breach of duty; (3) "a reasonably close causal connection between the contact and the resulting injury;" and (4) "actual loss, harm or damage." Integrated Waste Servs., Inc. v. Akzo Nobel Salt, Inc., 113 F.3d 296, 299 (2d Cir.1997) (negligence); see Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 15 (2d Cir.2000) (noting that New York law labels professional malpractice a "'species of negligence' ") (citation omitted); Renner, 2000 WL 781081, at *21 (negligence); Scone Invs., L.P. v. American Third Mkt. Corp., No. 97 Civ. 3802(SAS), 1998 WL 205338, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 28, 1998) (negligence). To constitute gross negligence, "the act or omission must be of an aggravated character, as distinguished from the failure to exercise ordinary care." Curley, 153 F.3d at 13 (citation omitted). That is, gross negligence "is conduct that evinces a reckless disregard for the rights of others or smacks of intentional wrongdoing." Id. (citation omitted).

[52] The Second Circuit has held that plaintiffs alleging negligent misrepresentation [FN29] under New York law against a professional with whom they have no contractual relationship--and thus no privity giving rise to a duty--must establish the following elements: "(1) the accountant must have been aware that the reports would be used for a particular purpose; (2) in furtherance of which a known party was intended to rely; and (3) some conduct by the accountant 'linking' him or her to that known party." *Securities Investor Protection Corp. v. BDO Seidman, 496 LLP, 222 F.3d 63, 73 (2d Cir.2000); see also Vanguard Mun. Bond Fund, Inc. v. Cantor, Fitzgerald, L.P., 40 F.Supp.2d 183, 190 (S.D.N.Y.1999). Plaintiffs are "known parties" if they are members of "a known group possessed of vested rights, marked by a definable limit and made up of certain components." Securities Investor Protection Corp., 222 F.3d at 74 (citation omitted). An accountant owes a duty of care for services relied upon by plaintiffs who are part of a specific and identifiable group rather than "a faceless or unresolved class of persons." Id. (quoting White v. Guarente, 43 N.Y.2d 356, 401 N.Y.S.2d 474, 372 N.E.2d 315, 318-19 (1977)). [FN30] Conduct constitutes "linking conduct" if it is "some form of direct contact between the accountant and the plaintiff, such as face-to-face conversation, the sharing of documents, or other 'substantive communication' between the parties." Id. at 75 (citation omitted).

FN29. While the plaintiffs do not specifically allege negligent misrepresentation against DTT, the substance of their negligence-related claims is that DTT's negligent conduct led to audit reports which misrepresented the Fund's financial condition.

FN30. The Court of Appeals in White specifically held that, where plaintiffs are members of a "limited class whose reliance on the audit ... was, or at least should have been, specifically foreseen," then a duty "is imposed by law and it is not necessary to state the duty in terms of contract or privity." White, 372 N.E.2d at 319.

[53] There was no privity between DTT and the plaintiffs, and as already discussed, no allegation that DTT even knew that its name and logo were used on the specific audit reports at issue here. Consequently, there was no substantive communication between DTT and the investors to constitute conduct linking DTT to an identifiable class of persons. DTT's motion to dismiss is granted. [FN31]

FN31. DTT argues that the plaintiffs' claims of negligence and gross negligence are also precluded by the Martin Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law., art. 23-A, §§ 352 et seq. Because DTT raised this argument for the first time in its reply brief it will not be considered. See Strom v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 202 F.3d 138, 142 (2d Cir.1999) (holding that it would not consider arguments raised in a reply brief because "[w]e repeatedly have said that we will not consider contentions first advanced at such a late stage.")

F. DTUS

DTUS moves to dismiss the securities fraud claim as well as each of the state law claims brought against it for failure to state a claim. The elements necessary to state a cause of action for securities fraud are discussed above. The plaintiffs have not alleged that DTUS made any misstatements on which they relied. As such, DTUS' motion to dismiss the securities fraud claim is granted. [FN32]

FN32. Plaintiffs argue that, in the alternative, DTUS may be held liable for securities fraud through a piercing-the-veil theory. The elements of a piercing-the-veil cause of action are discussed above. The plaintiffs have not alleged that DTB lacked any corporate form, or that DTUS used its control of DTB to perpetrate a fraud.

The standards for adequately pleading the state law claims against DTUS are discussed above. The plaintiffs' common law fraud claim suffers from the same infirmities as their Section 10(b) claim. Again, plaintiffs have failed to allege any misrepresentation by DTUS upon which they reasonably relied. Nor have plaintiffs succeeded in alleging their common law fraud claim against DTUS under an agency argument. Plaintiffs point to no manifestation from DTUS to DTB indicating bestowal of authority to DTB nor to any express or implied communication by DTUS to a third party from which it would be reasonable to infer that DTB had DTUS' authority to perform its audits. [FN33]

FN33. For the reasons elucidated in the discussion of DTT's motion to dismiss, the plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for this or any other state claim against DTUS under a partnership by estoppel theory.

*497 Similarly, plaintiffs have insufficiently pled aiding and abetting both common law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty because they have not alleged that DTUS substantially assisted the perpetration of that fraud. Finally, plaintiffs' negligence, gross negligence and malpractice claims fail. The plaintiffs contend that investors were "entitled to presume" that DTUS issued the audits because the reports are signed "Deloitte & Touche" and represented that the audits had been conducted in conformity with U.S. GAAS and GAAP regulations. As discussed above, however, neither the Offer Memo nor the audit reports mention DTUS or include its logo. Accordingly, all claims against DTUS are dismissed.

G. FAM

FAM argues generally that as a small broker who served only as an executing broker for some of the Fund's trades, its role was too small and too tangential to subject it to liability by the plaintiffs. While it brings its motion to dismiss under Rules 12(b)(1) and (b)(6), and 9(b), FAM makes two main arguments: (1) Plaintiffs have failed adequately to allege the "actual knowledge" and "substantial assistance" required for aiding and abetting both common law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty; and (2) Plaintiffs' negligence and gross negligence claims should be dismissed because of failure to allege that FAM owed a duty to the plaintiffs or that its actions caused any damage to them. FAM also argues that the Court should decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over FAM as a pendent party should the Court dismiss the other parties in this action. This argument, however, is mooted by the decisions already rendered here.

1. Aiding and Abetting Common Law Fraud & Aiding and Abetting Breach of Fiduciary Duty

[54] FAM argues that as a small broker, serving as an executing broker for some of the Fund's trades, it neither knew of nor played a substantial role in Berger's fraud. The plaintiffs have, however, alleged that FAM received the accurate Bear Stearns statements as well as audit confirmation requests from Deloitte. Because the Deloitte audits were based on Berger's fictitious financial statements, they materially misrepresented the Fund's financial condition and differed from the Bear Stearns statements. Plaintiffs have also alleged that Berger shared its offices with FAM and that, as the introducing broker, FAM collected "substantial commission income." These facts give rise to a fair inference that FAM knew of Berger's fraud.

Further, the plaintiffs allege that FAM ignored Deloitte's instructions to transmit its audit confirmation responses directly to Deloitte and complied with Berger's "highly irregular" request to send them to him. FAM sent unsealed Airborne Express envelopes to Berger, together with waybills made out to DTB and falsely showing FAM as the sender. According to the plaintiffs, Berger subsequently replaced the Bear Stearns financial statements with his own fraudulent statements before sending them on to DTB. While FAM contests the seriousness of these actions, they are sufficient at the pleading stage to show that FAM affirmatively and substantially assisted Berger in committing his fraud on the plaintiffs.

2. Negligence and Gross Negligence

The necessary elements for pleading negligent misrepresentation in the absence of a contractual relationship are discussed above. Plaintiffs have failed to allege any conduct linking FAM to the investors. Accordingly, the negligence and gross negligence claims against FAM are dismissed.

For the reasons discussed above, the motions by Bear Stearns & Co., Inc., Bear Stearns Securities Corp., Ernst & Young International, Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu, and Deloitte & Touche LLP to dismiss the Cromer action are granted in their entirety. The negligence and gross negligence claims are dismissed against Financial Asset Management, Inc. The federal claims and the claims of negligence, gross negligence, and professional malpractice are dismissed against Kempe & Whittle Associates Ltd.

The remaining motions to dismiss the Cromer action are denied. The parties shall have ten days in which to notify the Court why the analysis in this Opinion does not resolve the motions to dismiss the claims in the Argos Complaint as well.

SO ORDERED.

137 F.Supp.2d 452, 189 A.L.R. Fed. 593, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 91,434

END OF DOCUMENT

*498 CONCLUSION

20

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third
Department, New York.

Anton CURANOVIC, Appellant,

v.

NEW YORK CENTRAL MUTUAL FIRE
INSURANCE COMPANY et al., Respondents.

July 3, 2003.

Insured homeowner brought action against homeowner's insurer and independent insurance agent, after fire totally destroyed home and its contents, alleging breach of contract against insurer, and negligent misrepresentation against agency. The Supreme Court, Broome County, Rumsey, J., granted summary judgment in favor of defendants. Insured appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Kane, J., held that: (1) insured was bound by the information he provided in his application for homeowner's insurance; (2) affidavits of insurer's employees and agent were insufficient to establish that misrepresentations in application were material; and (3) special relationship did not exist between insured and agent, barring negligent misrepresentation claim.

Affirmed in part, and reversed in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Insurance 1968
217k1968

[1] Insurance 2959
217k2959

Rescission of an insurance policy is available even if a material misrepresentation by the insured was innocently or unintentionally made to insurer in applying for insurance. McKinney's Insurance Law § 3105(a, b).

[2] Contracts 93(2)
95k93(2)

The signer of a contract is conclusively bound by it regardless of whether he or she actually read it.

[3] Insurance 2954

217k2954

[3] Insurance 2959
217k2959

An insured cannot remain silent while cognizant that his insurance application contains misleading or incorrect information; rather the insured has a duty to review the entire application and to correct any incorrect or incomplete answers provided to insurer.

[4] Insurance 2988
217k2988

Insured homeowner who could not read or write English was bound by the information he provided in his application for homeowner's insurance, even though some information was inaccurate, where he failed to ask anyone to read or explain the completed application to him after he provided the information, and he failed to correct the inaccuracies after he discovered them.

[5] Insurance 2958
217k2958

Misrepresentations made by an insured in an insurance application must be proven material before the insurer can avoid payment under the policy. McKinney's Insurance Law § 3105(a, b).

[6] Insurance 2980
217k2980

Conclusory statements by insurer's employees, unsupported by documentary evidence, are insufficient to establish materiality of an insured's misrepresentation in an insurance application, as a matter of law, in order for insurer to avoid payment under the policy. McKinney's Insurance Law § 3105(a, b).

[7] Judgment 185.3(12)
228k185.3(12)

Affidavits of homeowner's insurer's employees and affidavit of independent insurance agent were insufficient to establish that misrepresentations made by insured homeowner in his application for homeowner's insurance regarding prior losses were material, for purpose of insurer's motion for summary judgment, in homeowner's breach of contract claim, where insurer had no written underwriting policies on topic of insured misrepresentations. McKinney's Insurance Law § 3105(a, b).

[8] Insurance 1669
217k1669

[8] Insurance 1671
217k1671

Insurance agents generally are not liable for anything more than obtaining the requested coverage, unless there is a special relationship with the insurance customer justifying reliance on the agent's speech.

[9] Insurance 1672
217k1672

Special relationship did not exist between insured homeowner and insurance agent, barring insured's action against agent for negligent misrepresentation, arising out of homeowner's insurer's failure to pay damages after home was destroyed in fire, on grounds that insurance application contained inaccuracies; insured's only encounter with insurer was single appointment to obtain the policy, insured made no payments beyond the premium, and insured did not inform agent that he was unable to read English.

[10] Trial 140(1)
388k140(1)

Although credibility questions are generally reserved for the jury, in certain circumstances credibility may be properly determined by the court as a matter of law.

*149 Douglas R. Dollinger, Warwick, for appellant.

O'Connor, Gacioch, Pope & Tait L.L.P., Binghamton (Hugh B. Leonard of counsel), for New York Central Mutual Fire Insurance Company, respondent.

Lustig & Brown L.L.P., Buffalo (Troy S. Flascher of counsel), for Partners Insurance Agency, respondent.

Before: SPAIN, J.P., CARPINELLO, ROSE, LAHTINEN and KANE, JJ.

435 KANE, J.

Appeal from an order of the Supreme Court (Rumsey, J.), entered July 1, 2002 in Broome County, which granted defendants' motions for summary judgment dismissing the complaint.

436 In November 1997, plaintiff sustained a fire at his house, which had been uninsured *150 for several months. A code enforcement officer determined that certain structural and electrical repairs needed to be completed and inspected before the house could be occupied. Plaintiff completed the electrical repairs and, on December 17, 1997, an inspector authorized reoccupancy of the premises. Prior to and after this fire, plaintiff had been staying with his sons at a home deeded to plaintiff as custodian for his minor son. In December 1997, plaintiff and one of his sons went to the offices of defendant Partners Insurance Agency to obtain homeowner's insurance. Partners' insurance agent, Mary Oliver, asked plaintiff questions and typed the answers on an application for insurance with defendant New York Central Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Plaintiff can neither read nor write English, but did not inform Oliver of this. Oliver handed plaintiff the completed application, asked him to read and sign it if no corrections were necessary, then plaintiff signed it. An insurance binder was issued. Shortly after leaving the office, plaintiff's son told plaintiff that there were some inaccurate answers on the application. One was the negative answer to the question, "[A]ny losses, whether or not paid by insurance, during the last 3 years, at this or any other location?" Oliver later admitted that when she read this question, she merely asked whether there were any losses in the prior three years. Many other misstatements by plaintiff were also alleged. Plaintiff never spoke to Oliver again and these misstatements were never corrected.

On January 18, 1998, plaintiff's house and its contents were totally destroyed by a fire. New York Central denied plaintiff's claim on the bases that it was arson and there were material misrepresentations on plaintiff's policy application. Plaintiff commenced this action against New York Central for breach of contract and against Partners for negligent misrepresentation. Both defendants moved for summary judgment dismissing the complaint. Plaintiff appeals from Supreme Court's order granting both motions.

(Cite as: 307 A.D.2d 435, *436, 762 N.Y.S.2d 148, 150)

[1][2][3][4] Plaintiff first argues that New York Central was required to show that any misrepresentation was intentional and material in order to void the policy. An insurer may avoid an insurance contract if the insured made a false statement of fact as an inducement to making the contract and the misrepresentation was material (see Insurance Law § 3105[a], [b]). "Rescission is available even if the material misrepresentation was innocently or unintentionally made" (Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Pascarella, 993 F.Supp. 134, 136 [1998] [citation omitted]; see Holloway *437 v. Sacks & Sacks, 275 A.D.2d 625, 713 N.Y.S.2d 162 [2000], lv. denied 95 N.Y.2d 770, 722 N.Y.S.2d 473, 745 N.E.2d 394 [2000]; Meagher v. Executive Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 200 A.D.2d 720, 720, 607 N.Y.S.2d 361 [1994]; Tennenbaum v. Insurance Corp. of Ireland, 179 A.D.2d 589, 592, 579 N.Y.S.2d 351 [1992]; see also Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. v. JMR Elecs., 848 F.2d 30, 32 [1988]). Despite plaintiff's claims that the misrepresentations were innocent, he signed the application indicating that all information was correct. The signer of a contract is conclusively bound by it regardless of whether he or she actually read it (see Maines Paper & Food Serv. v. Adel, 256 A.D.2d 760, 761, 681 N.Y.S.2d 390 [1998]). The inability to understand the English language is insufficient to avoid this general rule (see id. at 761, 681 N.Y.S.2d 390). Here, although portions of the application were read to plaintiff by Oliver, he made no effort to have someone else read or explain the entire document to him. "An insured cannot remain silent while cognizant that his insurance application contains misleading or incorrect information" (North Atl. Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. 151 Katz, 163 A.D.2d 283, 284, 557 N.Y.S.2d 150 [1990] [citations omitted]), but "ha[s] a duty to review the entire application and to correct any incorrect or incomplete answers" (id. at 285, 557 N.Y.S.2d 150). Whether or not plaintiff intended to provide inaccurate statements or misrepresentations at the time he filled out the application is irrelevant, as he was bound by those answers and swore to their accuracy by signing the application although he knew he could not read it, yet did not ask Oliver or his son to read the completed application to him. Additionally, when he discovered inaccuracies shortly after leaving Partners' office, he failed to comply with his duty to correct that information (compare Holloway v. Sacks & Sacks, supra at 626, 713 N.Y.S.2d 162).

[5][6] While it is clear that plaintiff's application contained misrepresentations, as found by Supreme Court, those misrepresentations must be proven material before New York Central can avoid payment under the contract. Materiality is generally a question of fact (see Carpinone v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., 265 A.D.2d 752, 754, 697 N.Y.S.2d 381 [1999]). To establish materiality of misrepresentations as a matter of law, the insurer must present documentation concerning its underwriting practices, such as underwriting manuals, bulletins or rules pertaining to similar risks, to establish that it would not have issued the same policy if the correct information had been disclosed in the application (see id. at 754, 697 N.Y.S.2d 381; see also Insurance Law § 3105[c]; Iacovangelo v. Allstate Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 300 A.D.2d 1132, 1133, 750 N.Y.S.2d 920 [2002]). Conclusory statements by insurance company employees, unsupported by documentary evidence, are insufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law (see Carpinone v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., supra at 755, 697 N.Y.S.2d 381; but cf. North Atl. Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Katz, supra at 285, 557 N.Y.S.2d 150).

[7] *438 Here, New York Central has no written underwriting policies on the topic of plaintiff's misrepresentations and the conclusory affidavits by its employees are insufficient. The affidavit of the independent insurance broker is likewise deficient since it, like the affidavits of the employees and the testimony of Oliver, neither identifies a written underwriting policy nor does it identify any specific applicants with similar histories that were denied coverage (see Iacovangelo v. Allstate Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., supra at 1133, 750 N.Y.S.2d 920; Church of Transfiguration v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 207 A.D.2d 1039, 1039, 616 N.Y.S.2d 843 [1994], lv. denied 1994 WL 712777 [4th Dept.1994]; Alaz Sportswear v. Public Serv. Mut. Ins. Co., 195 A.D.2d 357, 358, 600 N.Y.S.2d 63 [1993]). Thus, there is a question of fact regarding the materiality of the misrepresentations here which requires denial of the insurer's motion for summary judgment.

[8][9] Plaintiff further contends that Partners is liable for negligent misrepresentation because a special relationship existed. Insurance agents generally are not liable for anything more than obtaining the requested coverage, unless there is a special relationship with the insurance customer justifying reliance on the agent's speech (see Murphy v. Kuhn, 90 N.Y.2d 266, 270, 660 N.Y.S.2d 371, 682 N.E.2d 972 [1997]; Catalanotto v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 285 A.D.2d 788, 790, 729 N.Y.S.2d 199 [2001], lv. denied 97 N.Y.2d 604, 736 N.Y.S.2d 308, 761 N.E.2d 1035 [2001]). New York courts disfavor finding such a relationship, but can recognize an additional duty in exceptional situations, for example where the agent receives compensation for consultation beyond the premium payments, the insured relies on expertise of the agent regarding a raised question of 152 coverage, or there is an extended course of dealing sufficient to put objectively reasonable agents on notice that their advice was being specially relied upon (see Murphy v. Kuhn, supra at 272, 660 N.Y.S.2d 371, 682 N.E.2d 972). Plaintiff's only encounter with Oliver was the single appointment to obtain the subject policy; he made no payments beyond the premium and he never informed her that he could not read English even when she asked him to read over the application, so this was akin to a normal insurance agent/customer relationship. Plaintiff is bound by the application after signing it and his duty to correct inaccuracies once discovered applies to Partners as well as

New York Central.

[10] Plaintiff also contends that there are questions of fact regarding his attempts to notify Oliver of the misstatements on his application and correct them. Plaintiff's deposition testimony indicated that he believed he and his son called Partners several times but Oliver was never available, that they left messages for Oliver and told the receptionist there were mistakes *439 on the application, and they informed the receptionist of inaccuracies when plaintiff dropped off another document at Partners' office. His son, however, testified at his deposition that he never spoke to or called anyone at Partners after the application appointment, and he was not present when plaintiff later went to Partners' office. Additionally, Partners' records contain no mention of any contact by or on behalf of plaintiff regarding any inaccuracies. Although credibility questions are generally reserved for the jury, in certain circumstances credibility may be properly determined as a matter of law (see Bushman v. Di Carlo, 268 A.D.2d 920, 922, 702 N.Y.S.2d 426 [2000], lv. denied 94 N.Y.2d 764, 708 N.Y.S.2d 53, 729 N.E.2d 710 [2000]; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lapi, 192 A.D.2d 927, 929, 596 N.Y.S.2d 885 [1993]; Rickert v. Travelers Ins. Co., 159 A.D.2d 758, 759, 551 N.Y.S.2d 985 [1990], lv. denied 76 N.Y.2d 701, 557 N.Y.S.2d 878, 557 N.E.2d 114 [1990]). Supreme Court properly determined that plaintiff's statements were self-serving and incredible on these points, permitting summary judgment in favor of Partners.

ORDERED that the order is modified, on the law, without costs, by reversing so much thereof as granted defendant New York Central Mutual Fire Insurance Company's motion for summary judgment; said motion denied; and, as so modified, affirmed.

SPAIN, J.P., CARPINELLO, ROSE and LAHTINEN, J.J., concur.

307 A.D.2d 435, 762 N.Y.S.2d 148, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 15779

762 N.Y.S.2d 148
(Cite as: 307 A.D.2d 435, *439, 762 N.Y.S.2d 148, 152)

Page 238

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2005 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Wo

Westlaw®

16div002272

21

United States District Court,
S.D. Florida,

Miami Division.

Robert CZARNECKI, Plaintiff,

v.

Laurence ROLLER, Woods and Oviatt, Inc.,
Merrill-Stevens Dry Dock Co., Jack
Reynolds, Inc., New Horizons Marine Surveyors, Defendants.

No. 88-1667-CIV.

Nov. 15, 1989.

Buyer of yacht that was ultimately determined to have sustained damage as result of earlier sinking brought action against brokerage that facilitated purchase and against seller, asserting claims for fraudulent misrepresentation, fraudulent concealment, conspiracy, and breach of warranties of merchantability and fitness for particular purpose. On motions for summary judgment, the District Court, Spellman, J., held that: (1) buyer could not have reasonably relied on alleged misrepresentations in view of his own independent investigation; (2) inasmuch as brokerage acted in fiduciary capacity, material fact issues existed with respect to fraudulent concealment claim and brokerage's alleged knowledge of yacht's history and condition; but (3) buyer did not have viable fraud or warranty claim against seller.

Summary judgment granted in part, denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Brokers 38(4)
65k38(4)

In context of buyer's claim under Florida law for fraudulent misrepresentation against brokerage that facilitated purchase of yacht, buyer failed to demonstrate justifiable reliance upon alleged misrepresentation about yacht's earlier sinking; purchase contract stated that brokerage could not guarantee accuracy of any information passed on by sellers and that buyer would make own independent investigation, and purchase decision was in fact based on buyer's own inspections, sea trials, and acceptable independent marine surveys.

[2] Brokers 19
65k19

Under Florida law, brokerage acted in fiduciary capacity when it undertook to facilitate buyer's purchase of yacht, and it was incumbent upon brokerage to act in utmost good faith and make full disclosure at all times of any matters that might adversely affect buyer.

[3] Federal Civil Procedure 2490
170Ak2490

Genuine issues of material fact existed under Florida law regarding yacht brokerage's alleged superior knowledge of yacht's history and condition at time it acted in fiduciary capacity in facilitating purchase, precluding summary judgment for brokerage on buyer's claim that it fraudulently concealed earlier sinking.

[4] Brokers 19
65k19

Under Florida law, broker stands as fiduciary to buyer when he undertakes to act on behalf of buyer, and such relationship demands utmost good faith and full disclosure.

[5] Fraud 18
184k18

Under Florida law, failure to disclose mere possibilities cannot constitute failure to disclose material facts sufficient to support action for fraudulent misrepresentation.

[6] Conspiracy 1.1
91k1.1

(Formerly 91k1)

Under Florida law, an act which does not constitute basis for an action cannot serve as basis for conspiracy claim.

[7] Brokers 22

65k22

Under Florida law, buyer of yacht that was ultimately determined to have sustained damage as result of earlier sinking did not have viable claim for negligence against brokerage that facilitated purchase for failing to discover such circumstance; brokerage did not have duty to investigate each and every item of information provided by seller or seller's broker regarding yacht's condition and history, and buyer had benefit of independent marine surveyors' reports, which did not reveal evidence of prior sinking.

[8] Fraud 58(2)
184k58(2)

Buyer of yacht that was ultimately determined to have sustained damage as result of earlier sinking failed to establish prima facie case of fraudulent misrepresentation against seller under Florida law; all buyer's allegations related to what seller did not say rather than to any fraudulent representations he made.

[9] Fraud 23
184k23

Buyer of yacht that was ultimately determined to have sustained damage as result of earlier sinking did not have viable claim for fraudulent misrepresentation against seller because buyer's investigation, including independent marine surveys and sea trials, foreclosed a claim of detrimental reliance.

[10] Sales 272
343k272

Yacht seller was not "merchant" for purposes of imposing liability for breach of implied warranty of merchantability either by virtue of fact that he may have sold five boats during one-year period or that he hired broker to facilitate sale of yacht. West's F.S.A. § 672.314(1); U.C.C. § 1-101 et seq.

[11] Sales 273(3)
343k273(3)

Yacht buyer did not have viable claim against seller under Florida warranty for fitness for particular purpose; even if buyer intended to use yacht for particular purpose, he failed to adduce evidence that seller knew of such purpose or that he relied on seller's skill or judgment. West's F.S.A. §§ 672.314, 672.315.

*833 Alex F. Lankford, III, Mobile, Ala., Michael R. Karcher, Miami, Fla., for plaintiff.

Rae M. Crowe, Mobile, Ala., G. Morton Good, Richard J. McAlpin, Miami, Fla., Jack Reynolds, Sunrise, Fla., Roger L. Shaffer, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., for defendants.

*834 MEMORANDUM OPINION; ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART
MERRILL-STEVENS DRY DOCK COMPANY'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT; AND ORDER GRANTING LAURENCE ROLLER'S MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY
JUDGMENT

SPELLMAN, District Judge.

THIS CAUSE comes before the Court upon Defendant Merrill-Stevens Dry Dock Company's [hereinafter referred to as "Merrill-Stevens"] Motion for Summary Judgment filed with this Court on May 30, 1989, and Defendant Laurence Roller's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment filed with this Court on September 8, 1989.

Merrill-Stevens seeks summary judgment as to Count I [fraudulent misrepresentation]; Count II [fraudulent concealment]; Count III [conspiracy as it pertains to fraudulent misrepresentation and fraudulent concealment]; Count IV [negligence]; and Count V [breach of fiduciary duty]. [FN1] Upon review of Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment, Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition, and Merrill-Stevens' Reply thereto, it is the opinion of this Court that partial summary judgment should be entered in favor of Merrill-Stevens.

FN1. While Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment is directed towards all counts of the Complaint, its brief in support of its Motion for Summary Judgment fails to address Plaintiff's claim for negligence and breach of fiduciary duty.

Laurence Roller seeks summary judgment as to Count I; Count III [conspiracy as it pertains to fraudulent misrepresentation]; and Count VII [breach of implied warranty of merchantability and breach of warranty for a particular purpose]. Upon careful review of Roller's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment, Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition, and Roller's Reply thereto, it is the opinion of this Court that Roller is entitled to summary judgment as to Counts I, III and VII. [FN2]

FN2. By Order dated August 7, 1989, this Court granted partial summary judgment as to Counts I and III in favor of Roller's co-Defendant, Woods and Oviatt, Inc. The very same issues of fact and law now raised in Roller's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment were also raised in Woods and Oviatt's Motion. Accordingly, based on the findings of fact and conclusions of law made by this Court in said Order, and for the reasons more fully set forth below, this Court finds that Roller is entitled to partial summary judgment.

BACKGROUND

This is a diversity action arising out of the purchase of a Bertram yacht, the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, [FN3] by Plaintiff Robert Czarnecki. The controversy between the parties revolves around a prior sinking or submersion of the yacht which Plaintiff learned of subsequent to the sale. [FN4] Plaintiff *835 instituted this action against Roller, the previous owner of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU; Woods and Oviatt, Inc., and Merrill-Stevens, yacht brokerage firms; and against Jack Reynolds, Inc., and New Horizons, independent marine surveyors.

FN3. At the time of its sinking and at the time of Plaintiff's purchase, the yacht was named XANADU. Plaintiff changed the name to IMPULSE after completing the sale.

FN4. According to the affidavits of Michael Myles and Richard Carmack, the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU sank in September of 1985 in Soldiers Creek, a saltwater inlet located in Baldwin County, Alabama, near the municipality of Orange Beach, Alabama. The yacht took on water through a broken off fathometer transducer and sank to the bottom. The water level was slightly above the deck level in the main salon covering the yacht's twin diesel engines, generator and auxiliary equipment. The recessed cabin was flooded to approximately three feet above the deck. The yacht was subsequently raised and hauled out of the water at Orange Beach Marina in Orange Beach, Alabama. The submersion of the yacht caused extensive damage which required repairs estimated as high as $171,000.00. In November of 1986, Roller purchased the yacht from its owner, German Town Savings Bank. Roller was aware of the prior sinking of the yacht and had the yacht cleaned, the engines reconditioned, and made some minor repairs. The yacht was subsequently transported to South Florida where Roller listed the yacht for sale with Woods and Oviatt, Inc., a yacht brokerage company in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. After completing a survey and sea trials of the yacht, the yacht was sold to Plaintiff. The yacht thereafter spent several days at Merrill-Stevens' repair yard undergoing various repairs totally approximately $20,000.00. Plaintiff and his family subsequently transported the yacht to Mobile, Alabama expecting to travel up the Tombigbee waterway to their home in Pennsylvania. During the course of the voyage, Plaintiff experienced a number of mechanical difficulties with the yacht and put in at Dog River Marina in Mobile to have repair work performed. It was at Dog River Marina where Plaintiff was informed for the first time by Marina personnel that the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had previously sank near Orange Beach, Alabama.

STANDARD FOR MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Rule 56(c), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, provides that summary judgment shall be rendered "forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." A ruling on a summary judgment motion should be guided by the substantive evidentiary standard of proof that would apply at the trial on the merits. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). Summary judgment is mandated against a party who, after adequate time for discovery and upon motion, fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to the party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, it is the Court's obligation to view the facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party and to allow the non-moving party the benefit of all reasonable inferences to be drawn from the evidence. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 1608, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970); Thrasher v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 734 F.2d 637, 638 (11th Cir.1984). If there is no genuine issue of material fact, summary judgment is proper because it avoids needless and costly litigation and promotes judicial efficiency. Trustees of Plumbers Local No. 519 Health and Welfare Trust Fund v. Garcia, 677 F.Supp. 1554, 1556 (S.D.Fla.1988). However, because summary judgment is an extreme remedy, it should not be granted unless the moving party has established the right to judgment beyond controversy.

FACTS

This Court finds that there is no genuine issue of material fact as to the following:

1. Woods and Oviatt, Inc., listed the yacht M/V IMPULSE/XANADU for sale on behalf of Laurence Roller.
2. Plaintiff approached Merrill-Stevens requesting assistance in the purchase of a pleasure yacht.
3. Merrill-Stevens located the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU for Plaintiff.
4. Merrill-Stevens showed Plaintiff the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU.
5. Plaintiff negotiated the purchase of the yacht through Scott Hasselbring, a broker with Merrill-Stevens, and Roller negotiated through Jeff Stanley, a broker with Woods and Oviatt.

6. Plaintiff hired independent surveyors, Jack Reynolds, Inc., and New Horizons Marine Surveyors, to survey the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU.

7. Jack Reynolds and New Horizons, as independent surveyors, inspected the hull and machinery of the yacht and submitted survey reports to Plaintiff.

8. No evidence of sinking was specifically looked for by the surveyors.

9. According to these survey reports, neither Jack Reynolds nor New Horizons detected any evidence that the yacht had sank or had been partially submerged, nor did the reports suggest that the yacht had previously been submerged.

10. Plaintiff submitted a bid to purchase the yacht.

11. Negotiations followed and an agreement upon a sale price was reached.

12. Plaintiff's contract to purchase the yacht was contingent upon a successful sea trial and survey.

*836 13. Plaintiff or his agents, subsequently caused sea trials to be performed on the yacht.

14. The yacht performed to the satisfaction of both Plaintiff and the marine surveyors.

15. Plaintiff personally inspected the yacht, and based on his independent inspections, the inspections by the independent marine surveyors, and successful sea trials, found the yacht to be acceptable and completed the transaction.

16. Laurence Roller made no misrepresentations to Plaintiff regarding the history or condition of the yacht.

17. Plaintiff's decision to purchase the yacht was not made in reliance on any representation made by Merrill-Stevens, Laurence Roller, or Roller's broker, Woods and Oviatt, regarding the history or condition of the vessel.

MERRILL-STEVENS' MOTION FOR
SUMMARY JUDGMENT
Count I--Fraudulent Misrepresentation

[1] Plaintiff is unable to establish a prima facie case of fraudulent misrepresentation against Merrill-Stevens. To establish a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation, Plaintiff must demonstrate that: (1) Merrill-Stevens knowingly made false statements concerning material facts; (2) that Plaintiff relied on these statements; and (3) that Plaintiff was damaged as a result of relying upon these false representations. Hauben v. Harmon, 605 F.2d 920 (5th Cir.1979); Stowell v. Ted S. Finkel Inv. Servs., Inc., 641 F.2d 323 (5th Cir.), reh'g denied, 647 F.2d 1123 (1981). [FN5]

FN5. In Bonner v. City of Prichard, 661 F.2d 1206, 1209 (11th Cir.1981) (en banc), the Eleventh Circuit adopted as binding precedent all decisions of the former Fifth Circuit handed down prior to the close of business on September 30, 1981.

There is a genuine issue of material fact whether Merrill-Stevens knowingly made false representations regarding the history or condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU. Plaintiff adduces evidence that during the course of negotiations, Jeff Stanley, a broker employed with Woods and Oviatt, advised Merrill-Stevens' broker, Scott Hasselbring, of the yacht's prior sinking. [FN6] Stanley purportedly learned this through conversations with Michael Myles at Orange Beach Marina. [FN7]

FN6. Stanley's deposition reads in pertinent part:
Q. What did you tell Mr. Hasselbring about the boat, other than the asking price? A. I told him that there had been a rumor that the boat had been sunk.
Q. You heard that rumor? A. Yes, I had. Q. Who did you hear that rumor from? A. I don't know.
When a person has his boat listed with hundreds of different brokers, you know, it could have come from anyone. It was just talk in the business.

* * *

Q. Do you recall specifically what your discussions were with Mr. Hasselbring about, about this rumor about the boat previously sinking? A. Basically just what I just said, that I heard rumor that the boat had sunk, and I didn't believe it. Stanley Deposition, p. 22, 24 (emphasis added).

FN7. The substance of their conversation was as follows: Sometime in the Spring of 1986, I received a call from a boat broker named Jeff Stanley with Woods & Oviatt in Fort Lauderdale. He told me that he understood that Orange Beach Marine had done work on a Bertram boat that they were brokering called the XANADU owned by Laurence Roller. I told Mr. Stanley that the vessel had been sunk and that Orange Beach Marine had nothing to do with any engine work on the vessel and that the vessel had been basically "patched up" by Roller in the yard at Orange Beach Marina. Our conversation was very brief since I did not want to have anything to do with this boat, however, I definitely told Mr. Stanley that the boat had been sunk. Affidavit of Michael Myles, p. 2-3 (emphasis added).

While the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU was undergoing sea trials, Plaintiff purportedly overheard Stanley and Hasselbring discussing the sinking of a boat. Plaintiff approached them and asked whether they were discussing the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU and whether the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had ever sunk before. Hasselbring denied that the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had previously sunk. Plaintiff described the conversation as follows:
*837 Prior to the purchase of the vessel, at the Merrill-Stevens Boat Yard, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, I overheard Scott Hasselbring, Merrill-Stevens, and Jeff Stanley, Woods and Oviatt, discussing the sinking of a boat. I asked both men whether the vessel XANADU had ever sunk. Scott Hasselbring stated no, that they were talking about another boat. This statement was made in the presence of Jeff Stanley who said nothing. I only asked whether my boat had previously been sunk when I overheard the conversation and simply wished to assure myself that my boat had never sunk.

Plaintiff Interrogatory Response No. 1 (emphasis added).

Plaintiff also refers to the deposition of Scott Hasselbring, wherein he states unequivocally that Plaintiff asked him directly whether the M/V IMPULSE/XANDADU had ever sank. The deposition reads in pertinent part:

Q: Do you recall if Mr. Czarnecki ever asked you, prior to the phone call of May 2, 1988, had the boat ever sunk?

A: Yes, I do.

* * *

Q: Do you recall specifically what Mr. Czarnecki asked you?

A: Yes, I do.

Q: What was that?

A: Had this boat been sunk.

Q. Do you recall your answer to him?

A. I did not make an answer, as I have no knowledge that it did; but the surveyor who had inspected the vessel would be in a position to render more of an opinion. That why he's there.

Hasselbring Deposition, pp. 39-40 (emphasis added).

Merrill-Stevens asserts that its yacht broker, Scott Hasselbring, never represented that the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had not previously been sunk or submerged. It does, however, concede that Plaintiff approached Hasselbring and Jeff Stanley after overhearing them converse about the sinking of a vessel. But Merrill-Stevens contends that Plaintiff merely inquired whether they were referring to the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, whereupon he was told they were referring to a different vessel. Merrill-Stevens bases this contention on Plaintiff's deposition which reads in pertinent part:

A. No, I only brought that [the sinking] up once, I think that I can remember.

Q. Where was that?

A. That was before we went out on the sea trial, while the boat was sitting on land, and I overheard Scott Hasselbring and Jeff Stanley talking, and I heard them say something about a boat being sunk, and I asked Scott Hasselbring, "You are not talking about this boat being sunk, are you." He said "No we are talking about a boat that sunk either on the Gulf Coast or West Coast," and when he said that I said, "Good" and I dropped it.

Czarnecki Deposition, p. 37 (emphasis added).

Merrill-Stevens contends that based on Plaintiff's deposition, it is clear that Merrill-Stevens, nor its broker, Scott Hasselbring, knowingly made false representations regarding the history or condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU. Rather, according to Merrill-Stevens, Plaintiff was merely advised that the conversation which he had overheard did not relate to his yacht. This Court must disagree with Merrill-Stevens' interpretation of Hasselbring's response to Plaintiff's inquiry.

A reasonable interpretation of Hasselbring's statements is that his response, at a minimum, implicitly denied that the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had previously sank. Hence, genuine issues of material fact exist as to whether Plaintiff asked Hasselbring whether the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had previously sank, and if so, whether Hasselbring explicitly or implicitly denied that it previously sank.

Even though this Court finds that genuine issues of material fact exist as to whether Merrill-Stevens knowingly made false representations regarding the sinking of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, Plaintiff fails to demonstrate justifiable reliance upon these alleged misrepresentations. *838 Detrimental reliance is an essential element in stating a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentations. Fote v. Reitano, 46 So.2d 891, 892 (Fla.1950). Failure to demonstrate justifiable and detrimental reliance upon the alleged misrepresentations constitutes sufficient basis for entering summary judgment against Plaintiff. Id.

In the instant action the evidence conclusively demonstrates that Plaintiff did not rely upon representations made by Merrill-Stevens' broker, Scott Hasselbring, regarding the history or condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU. Facts adduced in support of Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment demonstrate that Plaintiff based his decision to purchase the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU upon his own inspections, sea trials, and acceptable marine surveys.

The purchase contract for the yacht signed by Plaintiff stated that the broker could not guarantee the accuracy of any information regarding the yacht passed on by the sellers, and that the buyer would make his own independent investigation of such details as he might desire. [FN8] Plaintiff understood precisely the investigation contemplated in the purchase agreement and availed himself of the opportunity to obtain surveys and to conduct sea trials. Any damages which he may have suffered were clearly the result of his own exercise of business judgment following the surveys and sea trials and not the result of any independent representation of the yacht's history or condition made by Hasselbring.

FN8. The contract provided that: The Broker offers details of the vessel in good faith but cannot guarantee the accuracy of this information nor warrant the condition of the vessel. It is understood and agreed that the Purchaser may instruct his agents or surveyors to investigate such details as the Purchaser desires validated.

In actions such as this, where the decision to engage in a transaction is the result of independent inspection and evaluation, rather than an alleged misrepresentation, no claim for fraudulent misrepresentation will lie. H & W Enter., Inc. v. Ellis, 467 So.2d 790, 793 (1st DCA 1985) (maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is not liable where the decision to engage in a transaction is the result of independent investigation by another).

Addressing this issue under facts identical to those of the instant case, the former Fifth Circuit held in Coon v. Charles W. Bliven &

Co, 534 F.2d 44 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 980, 97 S.Ct. 491, 50 L.Ed.2d 588 (1976), that where a buyer had secured the services of an independent marine surveyor who examined the vessel and submitted his report to the buyer, neither the broker nor the seller were liable for any misrepresentations regarding the condition of the vessel.

The Restatement (Second) of Torts (1976) specifically addresses situations where an individual's decision to engage in a transaction is based upon independent investigation made by him or her. Section 547 of the Restatement provides in pertinent part:

Recipient Relying on His Own Investigation

(1) Except as stated in subsection (2), the maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is not liable to another whose decision to engage in the transaction that the representation was intended to induce is not caused by his belief in the truth of the representation but is the result of an independent investigation made by him.

(2) The fact that the recipient of a fraudulent misrepresentation is relying upon his own investigation does not relieve the maker from liability if he by false statement, or otherwise intentionally prevents the investigation from being effective.

With regards to subsection (2), this Court finds that any misrepresentation which Merrill-Stevens may have made regarding the previous sinking of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU would not have prevented Plaintiff from thoroughly and effectively surveying the yacht. Plaintiff has not claimed, nor is there evidence, that Merrill-Stevens prevented Plaintiff from inquiring from anyone else about this fact, nor is there evidence that Merrill-Stevens prevented Plaintiff from personally inspecting or surveying the yacht. At most, Plaintiff can claim that knowledge of the prior sinking *839 would have sparked a more thorough investigation of the yacht. Notwithstanding this fact, this Court finds that neither Plaintiff nor the independent surveyors which he employed were prevented from thoroughly and effectively inspecting the yacht. Accordingly, Merrill-Stevens is entitled to summary judgment as to Plaintiff's claim for fraudulent misrepresentation on the basis, that in purchasing the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, Plaintiff could not have justifiably relied on any material misrepresentations made by Merrill-Stevens.

Count II--Fraudulent Concealment

[2][3] Summary judgment must be denied as to Count II, for genuine issues of material fact exist regarding Merrill-Stevens' knowledge of the yacht's history and condition. To establish a cause of action for fraudulent concealment, Plaintiff must demonstrate the existence of a fiduciary relationship or superior knowledge on the part of Merrill-Stevens. Ramel v. Chasebrook Constr. Co., 135 So.2d 876, 882 (Fla. 2d DCA 1962). Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged that Merrill-Stevens owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff, and has further demonstrated that a genuine issue of material fact exists whether Merrill-Stevens had superior knowledge regarding the yacht's history and condition.

[4] The law in Florida is that when a broker undertakes to act on behalf of a buyer he stands as a fiduciary to this client. This relationship demands the utmost good faith and full disclosure. Bush v. Palermo Realty, Inc., 443 So.2d 104 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983); Van Woy v. Willis, 153 Fla. 189, 14 So.2d 185 (Fla.1943); and Chisman v. Moylan, 105 So.2d 186 (Fla. 2d DCA 1958). In Chisman, the District Court of Appeal stated that:

The Supreme Court of Florida has indicated the high standard demanded of a broker as being comparable to that of a lawyer or banker in that his relationship to the public exacts the highest degree of trust and confidence.... Because of the close relationship which calls for trust and confidence, the broker must act in good faith and with loyalty towards his principal.... A broker has imposed upon him during the period of such relationship with his principal the legal obligation to inform with fairness, promptness, and completeness, concerning all facts within his knowledge which are or may be material to the situation in connection with which he is employed.

105 So.2d at 189.

It is the opinion of this Court that Merrill-Stevens acted in a fiduciary capacity, such that it was incumbent upon Merrill-Stevens to act in utmost good faith and at all times make full disclosure of any matters that might have adversely affected Plaintiff as its principal. Merrill-Stevens gladly accepted its position as Plaintiff's broker and will now be held to the standard set forth above.

Secondly, this Court finds that a genuine issue of material facts exists whether Merrill-Stevens had superior knowledge regarding the history and condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, specifically, whether the yacht had previously sank or been submerged. Superior knowledge requires that one be aware of a fact or condition that is not discernible by ordinary observation. Statements of a party having exclusive or superior knowledge may be regarded as statements of fact although they would be considered opinion if the parties were dealing on equal terms. Ramel, 135 So.2d at 882. Both Plaintiff and Merrill-Stevens have presented conflicting evidence as to whether Merrill-Stevens had knowledge superior to that of Plaintiff regarding the sinking of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU.

Plaintiff has adduced the deposition of Michael Myles, formerly with the Orange Beach Marina, wherein he states that he informed Jeff Stanley, prior to the sale of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU, that this yacht had been sunk. [FN9] In addition, Jeff Stanley stated unequivocally in his deposition that, prior to the sale, he discussed the previous sinking of the M/V IMPULSE/ *840 XANADU with Scott Hasselbring, a broker with Merrill-Stevens. [FN10]

FN9. Affidavit of Michael Myles, p. 3.

FN10. Stanley Deposition, p. 22.

Merrill-Stevens contends that Hasselbring at most heard a "rumor" that the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU had previously sank, and that Hasselbring saw absolutely no evidence to support this rumor and, in fact, was given every indication to the contrary. Merrill-Stevens asserts that Roller and Stanley advised Hasselbring prior to the purchase of the yacht that the yacht's engines had been rebuilt due to water having "gone up the exhaust." In addition, Merrill-Stevens points out that Hasselbring had not seen the yacht prior to showing it to Plaintiff and apart from the surveys and sea trials, Hasselbring was entirely dependent upon information received from the seller and his broker regarding the yacht's history and that he advised Plaintiff of this fact and helped arrange the surveys.

According to the affidavit of Earle Long, [FN11] a rumor or reputation in the boating industry that a vessel has previously sunk is a critical and material fact which a buyer should be aware of as it typically bears heavily upon the market value of the vessel. In fact, the reputation or rumor about the vessel may be as important as the actual sinking of the vessel in the way it affects the market value of the vessel. According to Long, this is a fact that any prudent broker should disclose to his client and is customary in the industry.

FN11. Earle Long is president of Bluewater Yacht Sales and Service, Inc., an authorized Bertram dealer, located in Mobile, Alabama. Long has worked in the yacht sales and brokerage business for approximately seventeen years.

It is undisputed that the yacht itself did not exhibit the rust or corrosion which follows from a sinking, and that its appliances were not recently replaced, indicating possible earlier submersion damage. In addition, neither of the surveys reports produced by Reynolds and New Horizons contained any suggestion that the yacht had previously sank. Merrill-Stevens maintains that based on the foregoing information and condition of the yacht, Hasselbring refrained from discussing the unsubstantiated rumor that the vessel had previously sank.

[5] Under Florida law, a failure to disclose mere possibilities cannot constitute a failure to disclose material facts sufficient to support an action for fraudulent misrepresentation.

Hauben, 605 F.2d at 925. However, upon careful review of the record, this Court finds that there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Hasselbring had superior knowledge regarding the previous sinking of the yacht by way of either actual knowledge, or a reason to believe the yacht had sank, and whether he intentionally concealed this fact from Plaintiff. Accordingly, summary judgment must be denied as to Count II.

Count III-Conspiracy

[6] Count III states a claim against Merrill-Stevens and other Defendants, for conspiracy to conceal and misrepresent material facts. Civil conspiracy is a derivative of the underlying claims which form the basis of the conspiracy. The "gist of a civil conspiracy is not the conspiracy itself but the civil wrong which is done through the conspiracy which results in injury to the Plaintiff." Buckner v. Lower Florida Keys Hosp. Dist., 403 So.2d 1025, 1027 (Fla. 3d DCA 1981). An act which does not constitute a basis for an action cannot serve the basis for a conspiracy claim. Id.

Inasmuch as Count I fails to state a claim against Merrill-Stevens for fraudulent misrepresentation, Count III must be dismissed to that extent. Renpak, Inc. v. Oppenheimer, 104 So.2d 642 (Fla. 3d DCA 1958); Coon, 534 F.2d 44. However, Count III states a claim for conspiracy to the extent that Count II states a cause of action against Merrill-Stevens for fraudulent concealment.

Plaintiff has adduced evidence that Stanley obtained actual knowledge of the yacht's prior sinking and discussed the question of the sinking with Hasselbring, both during the time of negotiations and on the deck of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU during its sea trials, when they were confronted *841 by Plaintiff on this matter. It is therefore open to the trier of fact to infer from these circumstances that Merrill-Stevens and Woods and Oviatt had a meeting of the minds and reached an understanding that they would conceal the prior sinking from Plaintiff. This inference could be made in light of the fact that at the time Plaintiff inquired, there was a clear motive in not disrupting a deal which was about to be consummated and which would have allowed both Stanley and Hasselbring to pocket a sizeable brokerage fee.

Count IV--Negligence

[7] There is no legal basis for Plaintiff's claim for negligence against Merrill-Stevens for allegedly failing to discover that the yacht had previously sank. Plaintiff has not set forth, nor can this Court unearth, any legal basis upon which to impose on Merrill-Stevens a duty to investigate each and every item of information provided by Roller or his broker, Woods and Oviatt, regarding the yacht's condition and history. Rather, given that the surveyors' reports prepared for Plaintiff did not reveal evidence of a prior sinking, and if in fact they should have discovered highwater marks, rust, or corrosion, consistent with a sinking, then Plaintiff may have a claim against the surveyors for negligence. However, any claim for negligence against Merrill-Stevens would be misdirected. Accordingly, summary judgment must be granted as to Count IV.

Count V--Breach of Fiduciary Duty

In light of this Court's finding that Merrill-Stevens owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff, and that a genuine issue of material fact exists whether it breached such duty by either knowingly making false representations regarding the prior sinking of the yacht, or by concealing this fact, Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment shall be denied as to Count V.

LAURENCE ROLLER'S MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT
Count I--Fraudulent Misrepresentation

Plaintiff is unable to establish a prima facie case of fraudulent misrepresentation against Laurence Roller. As previously stated, to establish a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation, Plaintiff must demonstrate that: (1) Laurence Roller knowingly made false statements concerning material facts; (2) that Plaintiff relied on these statements; and

(3) that Plaintiff was damaged as a result of relying upon these false representations. Hauben, 605 F.2d 920; Stowell, 641 F.2d 323.

[8] These is no genuine issue of material fact whether Laurence Roller knowingly made false representations regarding the history or condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU. Facts adduced in support of Roller's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment conclusively establish that Roller made no misrepresentations to Plaintiff regarding the history or condition of the yacht. Roller directs this Court to Plaintiff's deposition which reads in pertinent part:

Q. During the course of that sea trial, did you have any conversation with Mr. Roller where nobody else was present?

A. No.

Q. Somebody else was present when you talked to Mr. Roller?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did not talk to Mr. Roller about the sinking of the vessel at all?

A. No.

Q. Did that topic ever come up during your conversations?

A. No.

* * *

Q. And you never mentioned anything about the sinking of the vessel with Mr. Roller on the sea trials?

A. No.

* * *

Q. You specifically recall Mr. Roller telling you about the new starters and generator during the sea trial?

*842 A. I am not positive, but it was small talk, we were making small talk, nothing.

Q. Do you recall any other specifics about this small talk with Mr. Roller during the sea trial?

A. I said very little to Mr. Roller.

Q. Do you recall any specifics at all about that small talk?

A. No.

* * *

Q. Did Mr. Roller make any specific representations to you regarding the condition of the Xanadu?

A. I do not remember if he did or did not.

Q. So you cannot say whether you relied on any representations he may have made in the purchase of the boat?

A. I don't know what he said, to be truthful. He didn't say much, that is what I am trying to say, the man said very little.

Czarnecki Deposition, pp. 110, 127, 128, 135-36 (emphasis added). Plaintiff fails to adduce any evidence to the contrary. Rather than attempting to demonstrate that Roller made false representations, Plaintiff restricts his argument to what Roller did not say. Accordingly, summary judgment is proper on this basis alone.

[9] Even if this Court were to assume arguendo, that Roller did in fact misrepresent material facts to Plaintiff regarding the history or condition of the yacht, summary judgment would still be warranted based upon Plaintiff's failure to demonstrate reliance upon such misrepresentations. In confusing fraudulent misrepresentation with fraudulent concealment, Plaintiff fails to address the reliance requirement for fraudulent misrepresentation. Detrimental reliance is an essential element in stating a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation. Fote, 46 So.2d at 892. Plaintiff's failure to demonstrate justifiable and detrimental reliance upon said misrepresentations constitutes sufficient basis for entering summary judgment in favor of Roller. Id.

As previously stated, the evidence conclusively establishes that Plaintiff did not rely upon any misrepresentations made by Roller regarding the history or condition of the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU. As with Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment, facts adduced in support of Roller's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment demonstrate that Plaintiff based his decision to purchase the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU upon his own inspections, sea trials, and acceptable marine surveys. Accordingly, any damages which he may have suffered were clearly the result of his own exercise of business, and not the result of any independent representation of the yacht's history or condition made by Roller.

Count III--Conspiracy

Count III fails to state a claim against Roller for conspiracy to misrepresent material facts. As previously stated, civil conspiracy is a derivative of the underlying claims which form the basis of the conspiracy, and an act which does not constitute a basis for an action cannot serve the basis for a conspiracy claim. Buckner, 403 So.2d 1025. Inasmuch as Count I fails to state a claim against Roller for fraudulent misrepresentation, Roller is entitled to partial summary judgment on Count III. Renpak, 104 So.2d 642; Coon, 534 F.2d 44.

Count VII--Breach of Implied Warranty of Merchantability and Breach of Warranty for Fitness for a Particular Purpose

Plaintiff fails to set forth sufficient facts to support his claims for breach of implied warranty of merchantability and breach of warranty for fitness for a particular purpose.

implied warranty of merchantability

[10] Under the Uniform Commercial Code, a claim for implied warranty of merchantability requires that the seller be a merchant. Section 672.314(1), Fla.Stat., provides in pertinent part:

Unless excluded or modified, a warranty that the goods shall be merchantable is implied in a contract for their sale if the seller is a merchant with respect to the goods of that kind....

*843 Section 672.104(1), Fla.Stat., defines a "merchant" as:

a person who deals in goods of the kind or otherwise by his occupation holds himself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved in the transaction or to whom such knowledge or skill may be attributed by his employment of an agent or broker or other intermediary who by his occupation holds himself out as having such knowledge or skill.

Plaintiff directs this Court to Jeff Stanley's deposition wherein he states that Roller sold five boats over the three, four or five years that Stanley has known Roller. [FN12] However, notwithstanding this fact, this Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to adduce evidence that Roller was a "merchant" for purposes of imposing liability for breach of implied warranty of merchantability under the Commercial Code.

FN12. Stanley Deposition, pp. 7-11.

The concept of a "merchant" is broad, and although it is somewhat nebulous in that there is no bright line separating those who are merchants from those who are not, this Court is of the opinion that even if Roller had sold five boats during one-year's time, this alone is an insufficient basis upon which to find that Roller was a merchant. The Uniform Commercial Code provides that:

A person making an isolated sale of goods is not a "merchant" within the meaning of the full scope of this section and, thus, no warranty of merchantability would apply.

U.C.C. § 2-314 official comment 3. A person who buys a boat and sells their old boat once a year is not a merchant. See Joyce v. Combank/Longwood, 405 So.2d 1358 (Fla. 5th DCA 1981) (bank was held not to be merchant by having sold five repossessed cars in one year); see also Donald v. City Nat'l Bank of Dothan, 295 Ala. 320, 329 So.2d 92 (Ala.1976) (holding that a seller of a boat was not a merchant).

Finally, Plaintiff argues that by hiring a broker (Woods and Oviatt), Roller became a merchant. However, if this Court were to agree with this premise, then everyone who listed their house or boat for sale with a broker would be a merchant. Such a rule would render Section 672.314, Fla.Stat., meaningless. Accordingly, this Court finds that Roller was not a merchant for purposes of imposing liability for breach of implied warranty of merchantability, and that Roller is entitled to summary judgment as to this claim.

breach of warranty for fitness for a particular purpose

[11] Plaintiff fails to state a claim for breach of warranty for fitness for a particular purpose. The applicable Florida Statute reads in part:

Where the seller at the time of contracting has reason to know any particular purpose for which the goods are required and that the buyer is relying on the seller's skill or judgment to select or furnish suitable goods, there is unless excluded or modified under the next section an implied warranty that the goods shall be fit for such purpose.

Fla.Stat. § 672.315 (emphasis added). In Royal Typewriter Co. v. Xerographic Supplies Corp., 719 F.2d 1092 (11th Cir.1983), the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals stated that "[a] 'particular purpose' differs from an ordinary purpose in that it envisages a specific use by the buyer which is peculiar to the nature of his business." Id. at 1100. The record in the instant action reveals that Plaintiff did not purchase the M/V IMPULSE/XANADU for any particular purpose other than to use it as a pleasure craft. Although after buying the yacht, Plaintiff intended to take a long trip aboard it, this amounts to nothing more than ordinary use.

Even if Plaintiff had intended to use the yacht for a "particular purpose," Plaintiff fails to adduce evidence that Roller knew of such purpose for which the yacht was going to be used, or that he relied on Roller's skill or judgment. Plaintiff's conversations with Roller were confined to "small talk" [FN13], and based his decision to purchase the yacht on his own inspections, *844 sea trials, and acceptable marine surveys. Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons, Roller is entitled to summary judgment as to the claim for breach of warranty for fitness for a particular purpose.

FN13. Czarnecki Deposition, p. 128.

Based on the above and foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. Defendant Merrill-Stevens' Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART in that

A. Summary judgment is GRANTED as to Count I.

B. Summary judgment is DENIED as to Count II.

C. Summary judgment is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART as to Count III insofar as Plaintiff states a claim for conspiracy to conceal material facts.

D. Summary judgment is GRANTED as to Count IV.

E. Summary judgment is DENIED as to Count V.

2. Summary judgment is GRANTED in favor of Laurence Roller as to:

A. Count I.

B. Count III as it pertains to fraudulent misrepresentation.

C. Count VII.

DONE AND ORDERED.

726 F.Supp. 832, 1990 A.M.C. 2110, 11 UCC
Rep.Serv.2d 829

END OF DOCUMENT

22

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

DALLAS AEROSPACE, INC., Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant,
v.
CIS AIR CORPORATION, Defendant-
Counter-Claimant-Appellee.

Docket No. 02-9347.

Argued Oct. 7, 2003.
Decided Dec. 19, 2003.

Background: Buyer of aircraft engine sued seller for breach of contract, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation and unconscionability. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, Barbara S. Jones, J., 2002 WL 31453789, granted summary judgment for seller, and buyer appealed.

Holdings: The Court of Appeals, John M. Walker, Jr., Chief Judge, held that: (1) purchase order, which buyer sent to seller when it wired payment to seller, "materially altered" the parties' contract as to warranties, without express consent of seller, and thus modification contained in purchase order was ineffective; (2) seller's acceptance of payment for engine did not constitute unambiguous overt admission that the parties' contract had been modified by terms of buyer's purchase order, so as to overcome New York's statute of frauds; (3) even if modification in purchase order satisfied statute of frauds, modification was not based on agreement between the parties to modify, and thus it was not enforceable; (4) buyer could not show justifiable reliance on seller's alleged misrepresentation that engine was airworthy, as required for fraudulent misrepresentation claim; (5) provisions of sale agreement disclaiming warranties were not procedurally or substantively unconscionable under New York law; and (6) buyer did not establish negligent misrepresentation claim.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Aviation 14
48Bk14

Purchase order which buyer of aircraft engine sent to seller when it wired payment to seller "materially altered" the parties' contract as to warranties, without express consent of seller, and thus modification contained in purchase order was ineffective under New York's Uniform Commercial Code (UCC). N.Y.McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code § 2-207(2)(b).

[2] Frauds, Statute Of 131(1)
185k131(1)

Seller's acceptance of payment for aircraft engine from buyer did not constitute unambiguous overt admission that the parties' contract had been modified by terms of purchase order that buyer purportedly sent when it wired payment, so as to overcome New York's statute of frauds and make modification effective; seller's acceptance of payment was entirely consistent with its pre-existing obligations under the parties' contract. N.Y.McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code §§ 2-201(3)(c), 2-209.

[3] Aviation 14
48Bk14

Even if modification of contractual warranties contained in purchase order, which buyer of aircraft engine sent to seller when it wired payment to seller, satisfied New York's statute of frauds, modification was not based on agreement between the parties, and thus it was not enforceable under New York's Uniform Commercial Code (UCC); seller, by accepting payment for engine, did not engage in course of conduct indicating its assent to modify contract. N.Y.McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code §§ 2-201(3)(c), 2-209.

[4] Sales 89
343k89

Under New York law, parties may modify a contract for sale of goods by another agreement, by course of performance, or by conduct amounting to waiver or estoppel.

[5] Contracts 236
95k236

Fundamental to establishment of contract modification, under New York law, is proof of each element requisite to formulation of a contract, including mutual assent to its terms.

[6] Contracts 236
95k236

Under New York law, for course of performance to demonstrate mutual assent to contract modification, it must be "unequivocally referable" to modification.

[7] Estoppel 52.10(3)
156k52.10(3)

[7] Estoppel 78(1)
156k78(1)

Under New York law, for conduct to amount to waiver or estoppel, it must not otherwise be compatible with agreement as written, rather conduct of the parties must evidence indisputable mutual departure from written agreement.

[8] Fraud 3
184k3

To succeed on theory of fraudulent misrepresentation under New York law, plaintiff must show that defendant made false representation of material fact to plaintiff and that plaintiff suffered injury as result of justifiable reliance upon that fact.

[9] Fraud 58(1)
184k58(1)

Under New York law, each element of fraud claim must be proven by clear and convincing evidence.

[10] Aviation 13
48Bk13

Buyer of aircraft engine could not demonstrate that it justifiably relied on seller's alleged misrepresentation that engine was airworthy, as required for fraudulent misrepresentation claim under New York law, given the parties had signed agreement wherein seller explicitly disclaimed any representations regarding airworthiness of engine, and airworthiness of engine was not information that was peculiarly within seller's knowledge.

[11] Fraud 36
184k36

Although under New York law, general boilerplate disclaimer of a party's representations cannot defeat a claim for fraud, a party cannot justifiably rely on representation that is specifically disclaimed in agreement.

[12] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, if allegedly misrepresented facts are peculiarly within misrepresenting party's knowledge, even specific disclaimer will not undermine another party's allegation of reasonable reliance on misrepresentations.

[13] Aviation 13
48Bk13

Under New York law, whether buyer of aircraft engine was reckless or on inquiry notice to investigate airworthiness of engine was not relevant to its action for fraudulent misrepresentation against seller, given buyer had signed agreement containing disclaimer of very representation alleged to have been fraudulently made.

[14] Sales 1(1)
343k1(1)

While decisions about unconscionability of contract for sale of goods are for court to decide as matter of law, under New York law, the parties must be afforded reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to a contract term's commercial setting, purpose and effect to aid court in making determination. N.Y.McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code § 2-302(2).

[15] Aviation 14
48Bk14

Provisions of aircraft engine sale agreement disclaiming warranties were not procedurally unconscionable under New York law, though the engine was not airworthy, where the parties to the agreement were two sophisticated entities of equal bargaining power and agreement specifically and conspicuously disclaimed any warranties about airworthiness of engine.

[16] Aviation 14
48Bk14

Provisions of aircraft engine sale agreement disclaiming any representations by seller regarding airworthiness of engine were not substantively unconscionable under New York law, even though engine was not airworthy; engine was neither worthless nor a good of essentially no value, despite fact that it was not airworthy, and if buyer ended up with contract it did not like, it was "real-world" consequence of its own failure to complete adequate inquiry into engine.

[17] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, elements of negligent misrepresentation are: (1) carelessness in imparting words, (2) upon which others were expected to rely, (3) and upon which they did act or failed to act, (4) to their damage, and (5) the declarant must express the words directly, with knowledge or notice that they will be acted upon, to one to whom declarant is bound by some relation or duty of care.

[18] Fraud 17
184k17

[18] Fraud 23
184k23

Under New York law, not all representations made by a seller of goods will give rise to a duty to speak with care, but instead law of negligent misrepresentation requires closer degree of trust between the parties than that of ordinary buyer and seller in order to find reliance on such statements justified.

[19] Aviation 13
48Bk13

Buyer of aircraft engine could not recover from seller for negligent misrepresentation under New York law, absent showing that the parties had a special relationship, which caused buyer to rely on seller's representations.

*778 Stuart A. Jackson, R e, Parser &

Partners, New York, NY, for Plaintiff-Appellant.

Patrick P. Salisbury, Salisbury & Ryan, New York, NY, for Defendant-Appellee.

Before: WALKER, Chief Judge, NEWMAN and CARDAMONE, Circuit Judges.

JOHN M. WALKER, Jr., Chief Judge.

Plaintiff-appellant Dallas Aerospace, Inc. ("Dallas"), a buyer of a used jet engine from defendant-appellee CIS Air Corporation ("CIS"), appeals from the judgment of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York (Barbara S. Jones, District Judge), granting summary judgment to CIS.

Dallas and CIS are both corporations in the business of buying, selling, and leasing aircraft and aircraft engines. The various claims at issue in this appeal arose out of CIS's sale to Dallas of a JT8D engine in August 1997 under a written agreement. Months after the purchase, Dallas discovered that the engine had been involved in a hard landing years earlier that rendered the engine not "airworthy." "Airworthy" is a term of art in the aviation industry indicating that an engine is safe and that it comports with FAA requirements. Dallas brought this diversity action alleging various claims under New York law to recover the $1.15 million it paid for the engine.

The district court agreed with CIS that there was no genuine issue of material fact precluding a grant of summary judgment in CIS's favor and concluded that, as a matter of law: (1) for the purposes of Dallas's breach of contract claim, the agreement between Dallas and CIS, which disclaimed all representations about the engine, had not been modified; (2) for the purposes of its fraud claim, Dallas could not show it justifiably relied on any purported misrepresentation under the contract because (a) the contract specifically disclaimed the very representation alleged to be fraudulent, and (b) the truth of the allegedly misrepresented matter was easily discoverable by Dallas; (3) the contract terms were not unconscionable; and (4) no special relationship existed between the parties that would trigger a duty to disclose *779 on CIS's part, for the purposes of Dallas's negligent misrepresentation claim.

I. BACKGROUND

A Japan Air Systems ("JAS") aircraft experienced a hard landing in Japan in April 1993. While the ensuing fire substantially destroyed the aircraft, the engine remained intact and was salvaged from the wreckage. The insurance company that took title to the engine sold it to Charlotte Aircraft Corporation ("Charlotte"). In 1996, American Air Ventures, Inc. ("AAV"), a broker, negotiated the sale of the engine to CIS and took title from Charlotte pursuant to a separate contract before transferring it to CIS for $425,000, which was paid directly by CIS to Charlotte. CIS paid AAV a finder's fee of $10,000.

CIS understood that it would have to overhaul the engine to get it back into "serviceable" condition under guidelines established by the engine's manufacturer, Pratt & Whitney ("P & W"), for returning a used engine to service in compliance with FAA regulations. CIS claims that it had no specific knowledge of the hard landing, however, and undertook a less expensive overhaul that was appropriate for used, but not incident-related, engines. CIS sent the engine for overhaul to ST Aerospace ("ST"), a reputable repair shop authorized by the FAA, with overhaul instructions that had been provided by AAV. CIS asserts that it relied on AAV because CIS has no internal technical staff. CIS paid approximately $350,000 for the overhaul and, in due course, ST returned the engine to CIS, certifying it--mistakenly as it turned out--as airworthy. ST was not aware of the engine's incident-related status, which, under the P & W guidelines, would have necessitated a $500,000 overhaul.

Upon return of the engine to CIS, CIS found Dallas as a willing buyer in August 1997, and the two parties quickly reduced their agreement to a written contract, subject to Dallas's inspection of the engine and its records. While the contract between Charlotte and AAV expressly stated that the engine had been involved in an accident, neither the contract between AAV and CIS, nor the one between CIS and Dallas contained any such provision. The extent of CIS's own knowledge about the hard landing and CIS's corporate relationship with AAV are both disputed. It is undisputed, however, that Dallas was not told prior to its purchase about the hard landing in Japan or that ST's overhaul was other than adequate. Dallas's extensive baroscopic physical inspection of the engine prior to purchase revealed no defects and its month-long "back-to-birth" review of the engine's records did not bring the fact of the JAS accident to light. Accordingly, Dallas consummated its purchase of the engine from CIS.

Dallas's contract with CIS, dated August 26, 1997, (the "Agreement") disclaimed that CIS had made any representations regarding the engine. It specifically disclaimed any representation as to the engine's airworthiness in Paragraph 8 and obligated plaintiff to accept delivery of the engine and its records "as-is, where-is" in Paragraph 7. All of the exclusions and disclaimers in the Agreement were "conspicuous," as required by § 2-316 of the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC"), [FN1] and the Agreement contained an integration clause stating that "no warranties, representations or undertakings have been made by either party except as expressly set forth herein." On August 29, 1997, Dallas signed the Agreement as well as an Engine Delivery Receipt, which recited *780 that Dallas "accepted delivery of" the engine and "confirms its acceptance of the [engine], in 'AS IS' 'WHERE IS' condition."

FN1. Throughout this opinion we discuss provisions of the UCC, all of which have been adopted by New York, effective September 27, 1964.

Dallas did not pay for the engine until September 9, 1997 or thereabout. Dallas claims that at the time it wire-transferred payment, it also delivered to CIS a purchase order that, after stating that "[a]ll the terms and conditions of this purchase are stated in the contract dated August 28, 1997," purported to modify the contract by requiring CIS to deliver a serviceable and airworthy engine that had "not been subjected to extreme stress or heat as in a major engine failure[,] accident, incident or fire." The status of the purchase order is a disputed issue and is discussed more fully in connection with Dallas's breach of contract claim below.

Dallas subsequently leased the engine to Sky Trek Airlines, and the engine was flown in daily service for several months without incident. In 1999, Dallas attempted to sell the engine, but the prospective buyer walked away from the negotiations after informing Dallas that the engine was incident-related. P & W confirmed this information to Dallas; P & W had always known about the engine's history because it keeps records on every engine it manufactures, including data related to incidents and accidents. While just who had access to the P & W records at the time of Dallas's negotiations with CIS is disputed, it is not disputed that both JAS and Charlotte knew about the engine's incident-related history and would not have withheld the information if they had been asked about it by Dallas at any time.

After unsuccessfully trying to recover its purchase price from CIS, Dallas filed suit against CIS for breach of contract, fraudulent misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation in the district court. Applying New York law, pursuant to the Agreement of the parties, the district court granted summary judgment in favor of CIS on all of Dallas's claims. This appeal followed.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Standard of Review

We review a grant of summary judgment de novo. Summary judgment is appropriate only if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c); see Celotex Corp. v.

Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986). When ruling on a summary judgment motion, the district court must construe the facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party and must resolve all ambiguities and draw all reasonable inferences against the movant. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986).

B. The Breach of Contract Claim

Dallas alleges that CIS breached their agreement by delivering an engine that was falsely represented as airworthy based on an airworthiness inspection for non-incident-related engines performed by ST. CIS responds that two clear and unambiguous contractual provisions in the Agreement disclaim any representation as to airworthiness. Paragraph 8 of the Agreement states (with emphasis in the original):

DISCLAIMER OF WARRANTY Seller has not made and does not make, nor shall Seller be deemed to have made or given, and hereby expressly disclaims, any warranty, guaranty or representation, express or implied, as to ... the [engine's] title, airworthiness, design, value, operation, condition, quality, *781 durability, suitability, merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose

Paragraph 13D of the Agreement states:

This Agreement contains the entire understanding of the parties with respect to the purchase and sale of the [e]ngine, and no warranties, representations or undertakings have been made by either party except as expressly set forth herein. Any other previous oral or written communications, representations, agreements or understanding between the parties are no longer of any force and effect, and are superseded and replaced in their entirety by the provisions of this Agreement.

Dallas asserts that the foregoing disclaimer provisions were nullified by a subsequent purchase order it claims to have delivered to CIS with its payment on September 9, 1997. The record, however, contains no affirmative testimonial or documentary evidence that the purchase order was ever sent by Dallas or that it was ever received by CIS. While we assume that it was sent and received for the purposes of summary judgment, Dallas's claim still fails as a matter of law.

The district court applied the standard "battle of the forms" analysis set forth in UCC § 2-207. [FN2] Accordingly, the district court rejected Dallas's purported modification because the new contract term contained in the purchase order "materially alter[ed]" the contract "without the express consent of [d]efendant;" it was therefore ineffective pursuant to UCC § 2-207(2)(b). Dallas argues that the district court erred in applying § 2-207 to construe the purported modification, and that the applicable provision is UCC § 2-209.

FN2. Section 2-207 reads, in relevant part, as follows: (1) A definite and seasonable expression of acceptance or a written confirmation which is sent within a reasonable time operates as an acceptance even though it states terms additional to or different from those offered or agreed upon, unless acceptance is expressly made conditional on assent to the additional or different terms. (2) The additional terms are to be construed as proposals for addition to the contract. Between merchants such terms become part of the contract unless: (a) the offer expressly limits acceptance to the terms of the offer; [or] (b) they materially alter it

We need not decide whether § 2-207 or § 2-209 is the proper provision under which Dallas's purchase order should be construed; [FN3] under either provision the purported modification was ineffective.

FN3. Indeed, the answer to this question is not entirely clear under New York law. Compare Lorbrook Corp. v. G & T Indus., Inc., 162 A.D.2d 69, 562 N.Y.S.2d 978, 980 (1990) (applying § 2-207 to determine if purchase order modified "pre-existing binding contract"); Marcus Bros. Textiles, Inc. v. Avondale Mills, Inc., 78 A.D.2d 800, 433 N.Y.S.2d 114, 115-16 (1980) (applying § 2-207 to determine if confirmation orders modified signed "sales notes" that constituted "valid contracts"), with CT Chems. (U.S.A.) Inc. v. Vinmar Impex, Inc., 81 N.Y.2d 174, 597 N.Y.S.2d 284, 613 N.E.2d 159, 162 (1993) (holding that "[o]nce a contract is formed, ... we look to UCC [§§] 2-208 and 2-209, not 2-207," to determine if alleged modifications are enforceable); Marlene Indus. Corp. v. Carnac Textiles, Inc., 45 N.Y.2d 327, 408 N.Y.S.2d 410, 380 N.E.2d 239, 241 (1978) (explaining that § 2-207 is "intended to include at least two distinct situations:" (1) where the parties have reached a prior oral contract and the writing containing the additional term is a confirmation of that contract; and (2) where no actual contract has yet formed and the writing containing the additional term is an acceptance of an outstanding offer).

1. UCC § 2-207

[1] Dallas does not dispute the district court's conclusion that under § 2-207 the additional terms contained in its purchase order "materially altered" the terms of the Agreement, and thus were ineffective absent *782 CIS's express assent. Nor could it, given that the terms contained in the purchase order voided the express disclaimers contained in the Agreement, thereby altering the allocation of risk expressly agreed upon by the parties.

Lorbrook Corp. v. G & T Indus., Inc., 162 A.D.2d 69, 562 N.Y.S.2d 978 (App.Div.1990), cited by the district court, reinforces the point. There, a party's attempt to add a forum non conveniens clause by means of a purchase order that was issued without the express consent of the other party was held to be an ineffective material alteration under § 2-207. As was the case in Lorbrook, Dallas's attempt here to undo the agreed-upon disclaimer of representations can only be considered "an unsuccessful ploy ... unilaterally to add a term not covered by the preexisting binding contract." Id. at 980.

2. UCC § 2-209

[2] UCC § 2-209, entitled "Modification, Rescission and Waiver," states, in relevant part:

- (1) An agreement modifying a contract within this Article needs no consideration to be binding.
- (2) A signed agreement which excludes modification or rescission except by a signed writing cannot be otherwise modified or rescinded

(3) The requirements of the statute of frauds section of this Article (Section 2-201) must be satisfied if the contract as modified is within its provisions.

As Dallas notes, the Agreement does not exclude modifications, so § 2-209(2) does not apply. However, because the Agreement as purportedly modified is a sale of goods for $500 or more, it does fall within UCC § 2-201, the statute of frauds. The relevant portions of UCC § 2-201 read:

(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section a contract for the sale of goods for the price of $500 or more is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless there is some writing sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale has been made between the parties and signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought ...

...

(3) A contract which does not satisfy the requirements of subsection (1) but which is valid in other respects is enforceable ... (c) with respect to goods for which payment has been made and accepted or which have been received and accepted

Dallas argues that the modification satisfies § 2-201 because although CIS did not sign the modification embodied in the purchase order after it purportedly received it, CIS accepted payment for the engine after it received the purchase order with the modification, signifying its intention to be bound by it under § 2-201(3)(c). Thus, Dallas urges, §§ 2-209 and 2-201(3)(c), when applied together, give effect to the terms of the purchase order.

This argument is misguided. The function of § 2-201(3)(c) is to preclude a party from raising a statute of frauds defense where the parties have already performed their obligations under the alleged contract. The rationale underlying the exception is that "[r]eceipt and acceptance either of goods or of the price constitutes an unambiguous overt admission by both parties that a contract actually exists." N.Y. UCC § 2-201, Official Comment ¶ 2. Accordingly, partial performance of contractual obligations validates a contract, but only to the extent of such partial performance. Id. Here, however, because acceptance of payment for the engine was entirely consistent with CIS's pre-existing rights and obligations under the unmodified Agreement, it cannot be said that CIS's performance "constitute[d] an unambiguous *783 overt admission" that the contract had been modified.

[3] But even if the purchase order did satisfy § 2-201(3)(c), that fact is insufficient alone to render it an enforceable modification under § 2-209. Compliance with § 2-201 is only one of the requirements a purported modification must meet; its purpose is solely "to remove the bar of the [s]tatute of [f]rauds." Bazak Int'l Corp. v. Mast Indus., Inc., 73 N.Y.2d 113, 538 N.Y.S.2d 503, 535 N.E.2d 633, 637 (1989); N.Y. UCC § 2-201, Official Comment ¶ 3.

[4][5] To be enforceable under § 2-209, the purported modification must still be based on an agreement to modify, as required under § 2-209, as well as be "valid in other respects," as required under § 2-201. Under New York law, parties may modify a contract "by another agreement, by course of performance, or by conduct amounting to a waiver or estoppel." CT Chems. (U.S.A.) Inc. v. Vinmar Impex, Inc., 81 N.Y.2d 174, 597 N.Y.S.2d 284, 613 N.E.2d 159, 162 (N.Y.1993); see Martin v. Peyton, 246 N.Y. 213, 158 N.E. 77, 78 (1927). Indeed, "[f]undamental to the establishment of a contract modification is proof of each element requisite to the formulation of a contract, including mutual assent to its terms." Beacon Terminal Corp. v. Chemprene, Inc., 75 A.D.2d 350, 429 N.Y.S.2d 715, 718 (1980); see also Becker v. Faber, 280 N.Y. 146, 19 N.E.2d 997, 998 (1939) (holding that contractual obligations cannot be modified without the consent of the party that has assumed the obligation).

Dallas does not contend that the purchase order constituted a mutual agreement to modify. Instead, it argues that CIS's course of performance demonstrated mutual assent to the modification. Dallas relies primarily on Hunt Oil Co. v. FERC, 853 F.2d 1226, 1240-41 (5th Cir.1988), where the court applied

UCC § 2-209 together with § 2-201(3)(c) and held that a contract modification was enforceable under Mississippi and Texas law. There, however, the parties' subsequent course of performance of the contract confirmed a prior oral modification. Here, Dallas concedes that there was no oral modification. Rather, it contends that CIS's acceptance of payment amounted to a course of performance signifying its assent. However, a single act of accepting payment is not a course of performance sufficient to demonstrate mutual assent. See UCC § 2-208(1); 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code, § 1-6(c), at 48 & n. 39 (4th ed.1995); cf. CT Chems., 597 N.Y.S.2d 284, 613 N.E.2d at 162 (requiring "repeated occasions for performance and opportunity for objection") (emphasis added).

[6][7] Moreover, for a course of performance to demonstrate mutual assent to a modification, it must be "unequivocally referable" to the modification. Rose v. Spa Realty Assocs., 42 N.Y.2d 338, 397 N.Y.S.2d 922, 366 N.E.2d 1279, 1283 (1977); All-Year Golf, Inc. v. Prods. Investors Corp., 34 A.D.2d 246, 310 N.Y.S.2d 881, 885 (1970). Similarly, for conduct to amount to a waiver or estoppel, it "must not otherwise be compatible with the agreement as written;" rather, "the conduct of the parties [must] evidence [] an indisputable mutual departure from the written agreement." Rose, 397 N.Y.S.2d 922, 366 N.E.2d at 1283. Here, because CIS's acceptance of payment after having delivered the engine was wholly consistent with the Agreement, it fails to demonstrate mutual assent to the modification. See Beacon Terminal, 429 N.Y.S.2d at 717-18 (fact that defendant paid bills charging higher rate did not demonstrate mutual assent to higher rate).

While we have assumed for summary judgment purposes that the purchase order *784 was sent and received at some point, that assumption cannot be used to bootstrap a finding of mutual assent absent some evidence that CIS received it prior to accepting payment and issuing the bill of sale. See Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323-24, 106 S.Ct. 2548 ("One of the principal purposes of the summary judgment rule is to isolate and dispose of factually unsupported claims or defenses"). Because Dallas's payment was sent by wire transfer, the purchase order was necessarily sent through other channels. Dallas's witness testified that, as a general matter, Dallas "mailed [purchase orders] out. [It] often fax[es] them out beforehand." Thus, even if we assumed that the purchase order and payment were sent simultaneously, there is no evidence to support a finding that CIS received the purchase order prior to its accepting payment and issuing the bill of sale the next day. In any case, Dallas signed an Engine Delivery Receipt on August 29, 1997 representing that it accepted the engine "WHERE-IS," rendering the purchase order an attempt to accept anew, with a new condition, something it had already accepted more than a week before; Dallas plainly doesn't contend that it revoked its acceptance of August 29, 1997.

Finally, we note that while CIS's course of conduct was at all times consistent with the terms of the Agreement, Dallas's own conduct was inconsistent with the belief that the Agreement had been modified. As noted by the district court, Dallas did not assert that the Agreement had been modified until it filed its opposition to CIS's motion for summary judgment, some twenty-one months after the litigation began. In addition, Dallas's Complaint admitted that the Agreement was the contract between the parties; numerous witnesses for Dallas acknowledged that its contract with CIS was the one announced in the Agreement, without mentioning the purported modification; and Dallas's inventory receipt of September 16, 1997--well after CIS accepted payment--makes reference to the purchase order but still recites that the terms and conditions associated with the engine are contained in the Agreement of August 1997. While this conduct falls largely beyond the course of contract performance, it reinforces our conclusion here that the asserted modification was ineffective. Cf. CT Chems., 597 N.Y.S.2d 284, 613 N.E.2d at 162 (refusing to enforce alleged modification where parties' subsequent course of conduct was inconsistent with terms of modification).

Under all of the circumstances, no reasonable jury could find that the parties agreed to modify the Agreement so as to nullify its disclaimer provisions. Accordingly, for all the foregoing reasons, the district court's grant of summary judgment on the appellant's breach of contract claim is affirmed.

C. The Fraudulent Misrepresentation Claim

[8][9][10] To succeed on a theory of fraudulent misrepresentation under New York law, a plaintiff must show that the defendant made a false representation of a material fact to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff suffered injury as a result of justifiable reliance upon that fact. See Sec. Investor Prot. Corp. v. BDO Seidman, L.L.P., 95 N.Y.2d 702, 723 N.Y.S.2d 750, 746 N.E.2d 1042, 1047 (2001); Brackett v. Griswold, 112 N.Y. 454, 20 N.E. 376, 379 (1889) ("[The] elements ... requisite to sustain an action for [fraud are] ... a false representation, known [by defendant] to be such, made by the defendant, calculated and intended to influence the plaintiff, and which came to his knowledge, and in reliance upon which he, in good faith, ... [suffered] the injury of which he complains."). Under New York law, each element of a fraud claim must be proven by *785 clear and convincing evidence. See Hutt v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 95 A.D.2d 255, 466 N.Y.S.2d 28, 30 (1983).

Dallas alleges that "[w]hen CIS Air delivered to [plaintiff] the [e]ngine [r]ecords, CIS Air knew that the [e]ngine [r]ecords falsely certified the [e]ngine as airworthy." Plaintiff's Complaint ¶ 25. Dallas offers evidence, hotly disputed by CIS, that CIS knew the engine was involved in a hard landing, though there is no dispute that CIS failed to disclose that fact. For the purposes of this appeal and CIS's motion for summary judgment, we accept as true Dallas's elaborate conspiracy theory--that CIS and AAV were in cahoots to defraud Dallas--and we thus assume that CIS made a material misrepresentation. Dallas's fraud claim founders, nevertheless, because Dallas cannot demonstrate justifiable reliance on the misrepresentation given the Agreement's explicit disclaimers and Dallas's ability to discover the truth about the misrepresentation.

[11] For the reasons discussed in connection with Dallas's breach of contract claim, we conclude that the relevant agreement on the fraud claim is the Agreement signed by both parties in August 1997, unmodified by Dallas's purchase order. That Agreement precludes Dallas from claiming reliance on any asserted misrepresentation because a party cannot justifiably rely on a representation that has been disclaimed by agreement. See Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 599 (1959). To be sure, it is well established that a general, boilerplate disclaimer of a party's representations cannot defeat a claim for fraud. See id. at 598-99 (citing Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N.Y. 424, 38 N.E. 458 (1894)). However, a party cannot justifiably rely on a representation that is specifically disclaimed in an agreement, as occurred here. Id. In this case, the Agreement, in Paragraph 8, explicitly disclaims any representations about the airworthiness of the engine. In addition to Paragraph 8, 'the Agreement's integration clause, Paragraph 13D, specifies that the written Agreement "supersede[s] and replace[s] in their entirety" "[a]ny other previous oral or written communications, representations, agreements or understanding between the parties." Moreover, the Engine Delivery Receipt contains a conspicuous "'AS IS' 'WHERE IS' " acknowledgment of receipt of the engine in its then-current condition, a receipt the Agreement required Dallas to execute at Paragraph 7. Section 2-316(3)(a) of the UCC provides that the term "as is," when used in a contract for the sale of goods, negates all implied warranties concerning the condition of the goods. See also UCC § 2-316(3), Official Comment ¶ 7. As we recognized in Grumman Allied Indus., Inc. v. Rohr Indus., Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 735 (2d Cir.1984), Danann "stands for the principle that where the parties to an agreement have expressly allocated risks, the judiciary shall not intrude into their contractual relationship."

[12] Dallas argues that its case comes within a recognized exception to Danann for misrepresented facts that are "peculiarly within" the knowledge of the declarant. See Warner Theatre Assocs. Ltd. P'ship v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 149 F.3d 134, 136 (2d Cir.1998); Danann, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d at 600. "That exception holds that if the allegedly misrepresented facts are peculiarly within the misrepresenting party's knowledge, even a specific disclaimer will not undermine another party's allegation of reasonable reliance on the misrepresentations." Warner Theatre, 149 F.3d at 136.

This exception raises the question of what it means for a fact to be "peculiarly within" someone's knowledge, a question *786 that New York case law does not clearly answer. The district court agreed with Dallas that to defeat the "peculiarly within" exception, the plaintiff must have a means to ascertain the truth underlying a misrepresentation that has been made by the defendant.

Dallas claims that it could not have directly obtained P & W's Engine Event History ("EEH") because they were exclusively accessible only to owners at the relevant time period at issue. Therefore, Dallas argues, it should be irrelevant that the P & W report exposed the fact that the engine was incident-related. We are inclined to agree with Dallas (and disagree with the district court) that the EEH's direct availability to Dallas presented an open factual question that could not be resolved on summary judgment. Nevertheless, the existence of this factual dispute does not defeat CIS's entitlement to summary judgment because Dallas had independent means of learning about the engine's history. As Dallas conceded at oral argument, both Charlotte and JAS knew about the hard landing and would have disclosed it to anybody if asked. Of course, Dallas knew of their prior ownership of the engine. Finally, even if Dallas is correct that only owners could procure the P & W reports, Dallas could have asked CIS to procure one for it. Accordingly, we agree with the district court that the hard landing was not "peculiarly within" CIS's knowledge because Dallas had "available the means of ascertaining the truth," which "was readily accessible to any interested party who cared to make inquiry." Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 156-57 (2d Cir.1995) (internal quotation marks omitted).

[13] Dallas counters that it was not put on inquiry notice about the misrepresentation and, therefore, that it was not "reckless" in failing to investigate further the airworthiness of the engine. Under the law of New York, however, whether Dallas was reckless or on inquiry notice is not relevant in this buyer-seller context involving a signed agreement containing a disclaimer of the very representation alleged to have been fraudulently made. The "recklessness" standard invoked by Dallas is drawn from the Section 10b-5 securities fraud context; it is inapposite in the context of an ordinary fraud action between two experienced and sophisticated parties. See, e.g., Royal Am. Managers, Inc. v. IRC Holding Corp., 885 F.2d 1011, 1015-16 (2d Cir.1989) (using the "recklessness" standard in the context of a securities fraud action). Moreover, even the cases involving the recklessness standard in the securities fraud context do not involve a signed disclaimer for the very representation alleged to have been fraudulent. Indeed, the disclaimer in the Agreement alone would satisfy an inquiry notice requirement if there were one. Dallas's failure to discover a fact that it reasonably could have brought to light with minimal effort, when combined with the fact that Dallas signed an agreement disclaiming that any representations as to airworthiness had been made, defeats its claim for fraudulent misrepresentation. We thus affirm the district court's grant of summary judgment to CIS on the fraud claim.

D. The Unconscionability Claim

[14][15] Dallas also filed a claim asserting that the Agreement with CIS is unenforceable because the disclaimer provisions were (or are) unconscionable. We agree with the district court that this claim lacks merit. While decisions about unconscionability are for the court to decide as a matter of law, the parties must be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to a contract term's "commercial setting, purpose and effect to aid the court in making the determination." UCC § 2- *787 302(2). We conclude that Dallas, having been given such an opportunity, has presented no basis for declaring any aspect of the Agreement unconscionable.

The district court ruled that the disclaimers could not be found unconscionable because of the "sophisticated" nature of the parties and their "equal bargaining power." Appellant suggests that this ruling was an error of law because the district court failed to make specific findings about "procedural" and "substantive" unconscionability. Since our review is de novo, we may fill any gaps left by the district court's analysis.

In Gillman v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 73 N.Y.2d 1, 537 N.Y.S.2d 787, 534 N.E.2d 824, 828 (1988), the New York Court of Appeals held that in order to determine whether there has been procedural unconscionability in the contract formation process, a court must assess such factors as: (1) the size and commercial setting of the transaction; (2) whether there was a "lack of meaningful choice" by the party claiming unconscionability; (3) the "experience and education of the party claiming unconscionability;" and (4) whether there was "disparity in bargaining power." Id. The court added that "deception," "high-pressured tactics," and the "use of fine print" were also appropriate factors to consider in the analysis. Id.

As the district court observed, the Dallas-CIS transaction was between two sophisticated parties, both of whom had meaningful choice and relevant experience and education. Furthermore, there was little disparity in their relative bargaining power; if anything, Dallas had an advantage in its technical ability to investigate an engine and its history because it had a technical department and knew that CIS did not. Dallas properly argues that any alleged "misrepresentation and fraud on the part of the seller" should be considered in determining whether the disclaimer was unconscionable. However, the Agreement's conspicuous and specific provisions disclaiming any representation as to airworthiness, the very thing about which appellant alleges a misrepresentation, render it especially difficult to find procedural unconscionability under New York law. Indeed, the case Dallas relies upon, Price Bros. Co. v. Olin Constr. Co., 528 F.Supp. 716, 720 (W.D.N.Y.1981), states that " 'if the written contract included a specific disclaimer of the very representation later alleged to be the foundation for rescission ... proof [of the misrepresentation is to] be barred.' " Id. (quoting Centronics Fin. Corp. v. El Conquistador, 573 F.2d 779, 782 (2d Cir.1978)).

[16] Nor is there merit in Dallas's claim that the contract provision disclaiming CIS's representations is substantively unconscionable. Dallas claims that contractual terms may be rejected for substantive unconscionability alone when "the terms of a bargain are unconscionable in their actual, real-world application or effects." But Gillman emphasizes that it is only in the truly "exceptional case[]" that substantive unconscionability alone can vitiate a contractual duty. 537 N.Y.S.2d 787, 534 N.E.2d at 829. This is not such a case.

Assuming, however, that we should look to real-world effects, we note that Dallas cannot rebut CIS's assertion that the engine was neither "worthless" nor a "good[] of essentially no value," as Dallas asserts. Because Dallas itself leased the engine to Sky Trek Airlines for several months, Dallas was able to recoup a part of the purchase price. Moreover, the engine-related costs to CIS were substantial: $425,000 for its own purchase of the engine, approximately $350,000 for the overhaul, and $200,000 in other costs. CIS's net profit of 18 percent on its investment plainly does not rise to the level of substantive unconscionability. *788 If Dallas ended up with a contract it does not like, that is the "real-world" consequence of its own failure to complete an adequate inquiry into an engine that it agreed to accept in an " 'AS-IS' 'WHERE-IS' " condition.

In any event, the UCC's unconscionability provision, UCC § 2-302, explicitly states that unconscionability is to be assessed "at the time" of the contract. UCC § 2-302(1). Dallas offers Industralease Automated & Scientific Equip. Corp. v. R.M.E. Enters., Inc., 58 A.D.2d 482, 396 N.Y.S.2d 427, 432 (1977), for the proposition that, notwithstanding the express provisions of § 2-302, we may assess unconscionability by considering later developments. Treatises dutifully cite Industralease as the lone exception to the general rule set forth in § 2-302, see, e.g., E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts, § 4.28 n. 52 (2d ed.1990), and a search for other cases applying this exception in New York has yielded only a single decision issued by a small claims court. See La Vere v. R.M. Burritt Motors, Inc., 112 Misc.2d 225, 446 N.Y.S.2d 851 (1982). But even if we were to accept Dallas's invitation to examine later developments in assessing substantive unconscionability, this approach would be unavailing because, as Industralease makes clear, the plaintiff still must demonstrate a level of procedural unconscionability, something we have found it cannot show.

Accordingly, we affirm the grant of summary judgment on Dallas's unconscionability claim.

E. The Negligent Misrepresentation Claim

[17][18][19] Finally, we turn to Dallas's claim of negligent misrepresentation. It is settled New York law that the elements of negligent misrepresentation are: (1) carelessness in imparting words; (2) upon which others were expected to rely; (3) and upon which they did act or failed to act; (4) to their damage. White v. Guarente, 43 N.Y.2d 356, 401 N.Y.S.2d 474, 372 N.E.2d 315, 319 (1977). Most relevant, the action requires that (5) the declarant must express the words directly, with knowledge or notice that they will be acted upon, to one to whom the declarant is bound by some relation or duty of care. Id. In New York, "not all representations made by a seller of goods ... will give rise to a duty to speak with care." Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 652

N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d 450, 454 (1996). Instead, the law of negligent misrepresentation requires a closer degree of trust between the parties than that of the ordinary buyer and seller in order to find reliance on such statements justified. Id.

Dallas urges that Kimmell enunciated a new standard, exacting liability whenever the relationship between the parties is "such that in morals and good conscience the one has the right to rely upon the other for information." Id. This is a misreading of the case. The court did not depart from the traditional understanding that "liability for negligent misrepresentation has been imposed only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party." Id. Indeed, the assertedly "new" standard stated in Kimmell was a quotation from a New York Court of Appeals decision that preceded it by seven decades. See Int'l Prods. Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., 244 N.Y. 331, 155 N.E. 662, 664 (1927), quoted in Kimmell, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d at 454. Thus, Kimmell can hardly be understood to be novel or to have shifted New York law. In sum, Kimmell, which has since been limited by the New York Court of Appeals, see, e.g., Murphy v. Kuhn, 90 N.Y.2d 266, 660 N.Y.S.2d 371, 682 N.E.2d 972, 974-76 (N.Y.1997), does nothing to undermine the basic requirement *789 of a "special relationship" for a negligent misrepresentation tort action.

It is also worth noting that Kimmell's finding that the defendant in that case was liable because there was a special relationship between the parties rested largely on the fact that the defendant testified that "he expected plaintiffs to rely on [his] projections," that he informed plaintiffs "that he could provide 'hot comfort' should plaintiff[s] entertain any reservations about investing," and that he "represented" his projections as "reasonable." 675 N.E.2d at 454-55. No similar fact pattern is alleged in the case before us here. To the contrary, CIS disclaimed any representations and made reasonable efforts to alert Dallas of its intention to make no representation as to airworthiness. Moreover, as we have stated, Dallas cannot claim it relied on CIS's special expertise because it is clear that Dallas itself had the relevant expertise at issue.

Accordingly, we also affirm the grant of summary judgment to CIS on Dallas's negligent misrepresentation action.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of appellee CIS is affirmed.

352 F.3d 775, 52 UCC Rep.Serv.2d 295

END OF DOCUMENT

23

Danann Realty Corp., Respondent,
v.
David A. Harris et al., Appellants.

Court of Appeals of New York

Argued November 12, 1958;

decided March 5, 1959.

HEADNOTES

Fraud--oral fraudulent representations--contract of sale of lease of building provided that purchaser had examined premises, that seller had not made representations as to matters affecting premises, that purchaser agreed to take premises "as is", that all agreements were merged in contract and that neither party relied upon any representations not embodied in contract--complaint in action in which plaintiff alleged it was induced to enter into contract by false oral representations of defendants as to operating expenses and profits dismissed--specific disclaimer destroys allegations that agreement was executed in reliance upon contrary, oral representations. (1) In the first cause of action, plaintiff alleged that it was induced to enter into a contract of sale of a lease of a building held by defendants because of oral representations, falsely made by defendants, as to the operating expenses of the building and as to the profits to be derived from the investment. The contract contained the following provisions: "The Purchaser has examined the premises agreed to be sold and is familiar with the physical condition thereof. The Seller has not made and does not make any representations as to the physical condition, rents, leases, expenses, operation or any other matter or thing affecting or related to the aforesaid premises, except as herein specifically set forth, and the Purchaser hereby expressly acknowledges that no such representations have been made, and the Purchaser further acknowledges that it has inspected the premises and agrees to take the premises 'as is' * * * It is understood and agreed that all understandings and agreements *318 heretofore had between the parties hereto are merged in this contract, which alone fully and completely expresses their agreement, and that the same is entered into after full investigation, neither party relying upon any statement or representation, not embodied in this contract, made by the other. The Purchaser has inspected the buildings standing on said premises and is thoroughly acquainted with their condition." An order of the court at Special Term dismissing the complaint is reinstated. (2) Plaintiff has, in the plainest language, stated that it is not relying on any representations as to the very matter as to which it now claims it was defrauded. Such a specific disclaimer destroys the allegations in the complaint that the agreement was executed in reliance upon contrary, oral representations.

Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 6 A D 2d 674, reversed.

SUMMARY

Appeal, by permission of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial Department, from an order of said court, entered May 13, 1958, which (1) reversed, on the law, an order of the Supreme Court at Special Term (Owen McGivern, J.), entered in New York County, granting a motion by defendants for an order dismissing the first cause of action pursuant to rule 106 of the Rules of Civil Practice, and (2) denied the motion. The following question was certified: "Does the first cause of action in the complaint state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action?"

POINTS OF COUNSEL

George E. Netter, Morris A. Marks and Milton Waxenfeld for appellants. I. The Appellate Division erred in refusing to follow its own holding and that of this court in Cohen v. Cohen(3 N Y 2d 813), which is directly applicable to this case. Sabo v. Delman(3 NY2d 155), relied on by the Appellate Division, is not applicable. (Goldsmith v. National Container Corp.,287 N. Y. 438; Merry Realty Co. v. Shamokin & Hollis Real Estate Co.,230 N. Y. 316.) II. There is no authority which supports the holding of the Appellate Division herein. (Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N. Y. 424; Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N. Y. 165; Angerosa v. White Co., 248 App. Div. 425, 275 N. Y. 524; Kamerman v. Curtis, 285 N. Y. 221; Jackson v. State of New York, 210 App. Div. 115.) III. Sound public policy requires a reversal of the holding of the Appellate Division herein. (Fogelson v. Rackfay Constr. Co., 300 N. Y. 334; Becker v. Colonial Life Ins. Co., 153 App. Div. 382.)

David Haar for respondent. I. Counsel has misconstrued the language of this court in the case of Sabo v. Delman (3 NY2d 155). (Goldsmith v. National Container Corp., 287 N. Y. *319 438; Vail v. Reynolds, 118 N. Y. 297.) II. Appellant's contention, that this action at law for damages, because of fraud in the inducement, constitutes an affirmation of the whole contract and is virtually an estoppel on the claim of fraud, is contrary to law. (Sager v. Friedman, 270 N. Y. 472; 422 W. 15th St. v. Estate of Johnson, 258 App. Div. 227; Benedict Co. v. McKeage, 201 App. Div. 161; Bennett v. Burch-Buell Motor Corp., 221 App. Div. 517.) III. The argument that "sound public policy requires a reversal" of the order of the Appellate Division in this case is contrary to a ruling by this court in a similar situation. (Sabo v. Delman, 3 NY2d 155; Fogelson v. Rackfay Constr. Co., 300 N. Y. 334; Cohen v. Cohen, 1 A D 2d 586, 3 NY2d 813; Crowell- Collier Pub. Co. v. Josefowitz, 5 NY2d 998.)

OPINION OF THE COURT

Burke, J.

The plaintiff in its complaint alleges, insofar as its first cause of action is concerned, that it was induced to enter into a contract of sale of a lease of a building held by defendants because of oral representations, falsely made by the defendants, as to the operating expenses of the building and as to the profits to be derived from the investment. Plaintiff, affirming the contract, seeks damages for fraud.

At Special Term, the Supreme Court sustained a motion to dismiss the complaint. On appeal, the Appellate Division unanimously reversed the order granting the dismissal of the complaint. Thereafter the Appellate Division granted leave to appeal, certifying the following question: "Does the first cause of action in the complaint state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action?"

The basic problem presented is whether the plaintiff can possibly establish from the facts alleged in the complaint (together with the contract which was annexed to the complaint) reliance upon the misrepresentations (Cohen v. Cohen, 1 A D 2d 586, affd. 3 NY2d 813).

We must, of course, accept as true plaintiff's statements that during the course of negotiations defendants misrepresented the operating expenses and profits. Such misrepresentations are undoubtedly material. However, the provisions of the written contract which directly contradict the allegations of oral representations are of equal importance in our task of reaching a decisive answer to the question posed in these cases. *320

The contract, annexed to and made a part of the complaint, contains the following language pertaining to the particular facts of representations: "The Purchaser has examined the premises agreed to be sold and is familiar with the physical condition thereof. The Seller has not made and does not make any representations as to the physical condition, rents, leases, expenses, operation or any other matter or thing affecting or related to the aforesaid premises, except as herein specifically set forth, and the Purchaser hereby expressly acknowledges that no such representations have been made, and the Purchaser further acknowledges that it has inspected the premises and agrees to take the premises 'as is' * * * It is understood and agreed that all understandings and agreements heretofore had between the parties hereto are merged in this contract, which alone fully and completely expresses their agreement, and that the same is entered into after full investigation, neither party relying upon any statement or representation, not embodied in this contract, made by the other. The Purchaser has inspected the buildings standing on said premises and is thoroughly acquainted with their condition." (Emphasis supplied.)

Were we dealing solely with a general and vague merger clause, our task would be simple. A reiteration of the fundamental principle that a general merger clause is ineffective to exclude parol evidence to show fraud in inducing the contract would then be dispositive of the issue (Sabo v. Delman, 3 NY2d 155). To put it another way, where the complaint states a cause of action for fraud, the parol evidence rule is not a bar to showing the fraud -- either in the inducement or in the execution -- despite an omnibus statement that the written instrument embodies the whole agreement, or that no representations have been made. (Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N. Y. 424; Angerosa v. White Co., 248 App. Div. 425, affd. 275 N. Y. 524; Jackson v. State of New York, 210 App. Div. 115, affd. 241 N. Y. 563; 3 Williston, Contracts [Rev. ed.], § 811A.)

Here, however, plaintiff has in the plainest language announced and stipulated that it is not relying on any representations as to the very matter as to which it now claims it was defrauded. Such a specific disclaimer destroys the allegations in plaintiff's complaint that the agreement was executed in reliance *321 upon these contrary oral representations (Cohen v. Cohen, supra). The Sabo case (supra) dealt with the usual merger clause. The present case, as the Cohen case, additionally, includes a disclaimer as to specific representations.

This specific disclaimer is one of the material distinctions between this case and Bridger v. Goldsmith (supra) and Crowell-Collier Pub. Co. v. Josefowitz (5 NY2d 998). In the Bridger case, the court considered the effect of a general disclaimer as to representations in a contract of sale, concluding that the insertion of such a clause at the insistence of the seller cannot be used as a shield to protect him from his fraud. Another material distinction is that nowhere in the contract in the Bridger case is there a denial of reliance on representations, as there is here. Similarly, in Crowell-Collier Pub. Co. v. Josefowitz (supra), decided herewith, only a general merger clause was incorporated into the contract of sale. Moreover, the complaint there additionally alleged that further misrepresentations were made after the agreement had been signed, but while the contract was held in escrow and before it had been finally approved.

Consequently, this clause, which declares that the parties to the agreement do not rely on specific representations not embodied in the contract, excludes this case from the scope of the Jackson, Angerosa, Bridger and Crowell-Collier cases (supra). (See Foundation Co. v. State of New York, 233 N. Y. 177.)

The complaint here contains no allegations that the contract was not read by the purchaser. We can fairly conclude that plaintiff's officers read and understood the contract, and that they were aware of the provision by which they aver that plaintiff did not rely on such extra-contractual representations. It is not alleged that this provision was not understood, or that the provision itself was procured by fraud. It would be unrealistic to ascribe to plaintiff's officers such incompetence that they did not understand what they read and signed. (Cf. Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N. Y. 165, 171.) Although this court in the Ernst case discounted the merger clause as ineffective to preclude proof of fraud, it gave effect to the specific disclaimer of representation clause, holding that such a clause limited the authority of the agent, and hence, *322 plaintiff had notice of his lack of authority. But the larger implication of the Ernst case is that, where a person has read and understood the disclaimer of representation clause, he is bound by it. The court rejected, as a matter of law, the allegation of plaintiffs "that they relied upon an oral statement made to them in direct contradiction of this provision of the contract." The presence of such a disclaimer clause "is inconsistent with the contention that plaintiff relied upon the misrepresentation and was led thereby to make the contract." (Kreshover v. Berger, 135 App. Div. 27, 28.)

It is not necessary to distinguish seriatim the cases in other jurisdictions as they are not, in the main, in point or, in a few instances, clash with the rule followed in the State of New York. The marshaling of phrases plucked from various opinions and references to generalizations, with which no one disagrees, cannot subvert the fundamental precept that the asserted reliance must be found to be justifiable under all the circumstances before a complaint can be found to state a cause of action in fraud. We must keep in mind that "opinions must be read in the setting of the particular cases and as the product of preoccupation with their special facts" (Freeman v. Hewit, 329 U. S. 249, 252). When the citations are read in the light of this caveat, we find that they are generally concerned with factual situations wherein the facts represented were matters peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge, as in the cases of Sabo v. Delman (supra) and Jackson v. State of New York (supra).

The general rule was enunciated by this court over a half a century ago in Schumaker v. Mather (133 N. Y. 590, 596) that "if the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations. (Baily v. Merrell, Bulstrode's Rep. Part III, p. 94; Slaughter v. Gerson, 13 Wall. 383; Chrysler v. Canaday, 90 N. Y. 272.)"

Very recently this rule was approved as settled law by this court in the case of Sylvester v. Bernstein (283 App. Div. 333, affd. 307 N. Y. 778). *323

In this case, of course, the plaintiff made a representation in the contract that it was not relying on specific representations not embodied in the contract, while, it now asserts, it was in fact relying on such oral representations. Plaintiff admits then that it is guilty of deliberately misrepresenting to the seller its true intention. To condone this fraud would place the purchaser in a favored position. (Cf. Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. Y. 506, 511, 512.) This is particularly so, where, as here, the purchaser confirms the contract, but seeks damages. If the plaintiff has made a bad bargain he cannot avoid it in this manner.

If the language here used is not sufficient to estop a party from claiming that he entered the contract because of fraudulent representations, then no language can accomplish that purpose. To hold otherwise would be to say that it is impossible for two businessmen dealing at arm's length to agree that the buyer is not buying in reliance on any representations of the seller as to a particular fact.

Accordingly, the order of the Appellate Division should be reversed and that of Special Term reinstated, without costs. The question certified should be answered in the negative.

Fuld, J.

(Dissenting). If a party has actually induced another to enter into a contract by means of fraud -- and so the complaint before us alleges -- I conceive that language may not be devised to shield him from the consequences of such fraud. The law does not temporize with trickery or duplicity, and this court, after having weighed the advantages of certainty in contractual relations against the harm and injustice which result from fraud, long ago unequivocally declared that "a party who has perpetrated a fraud upon his neighbor may [not] * * * contract with him in the very instrument by means of which it was perpetrated, for immunity against its consequences, close his mouth from complaining of it and bind him never to seek redress. Public policy and morality are both ignored if such an agreement can be given effect in a court of justice. The maxim that fraud vitiates every transaction would no longer be the rule but the exception." (Bridger

v. Goldsmith,143 N. Y. 424, 428.) It was a concern for similar considerations of policy which persuaded Massachusetts to repudiate the contrary rule which it had initially espoused. "The *324 same public policy that in general sanctions the avoidance of a promise obtained by deceit", wrote that state's Supreme Judicial Court in Bates v. Southgate(308 Mass. 170, 182), "strikes down all attempts to circumvent that policy by means of contractual devices. In the realm of fact it is entirely possible for a party knowingly to agree that no representations have been made to him, while at the same time believing and relying upon representations which in fact have been made and in fact are false but for which he would not have made the agreement. To deny this possibility is to ignore the frequent instances in everyday experience where parties accept * * * and act upon agreements containing * * * exculpatory clauses in one form or another, but where they do so, nevertheless, in reliance upon the honesty of supposed friends, the plausible and disarming statements of salesmen, or the customary course of business. To refuse relief would result in opening the door to a multitude of frauds and in thwarting the general policy of the law."

It is impossible, on either principle or reasoning, to distinguish the present case from the many others which this court has decided. (See, e.g., Bridger v. Goldsmith,143 N. Y. 424, 428, supra.; Jackson v. State of New York,210 App. Div. 115, affd. 241 N. Y. 563; Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N. Y. 165, 169; Angerosa v. White Co.,248 App. Div. 425, 431, affd. 275 N. Y. 524; Sabo v. Delman,3 NY2d 155, 162; Crowell-Collier Pub. Co. v. Josefowitz,5 NY2d 998, also decided today.) As far back as 1894, we decided, in the Bridger case (143 N. Y. 424, supra), that the plaintiff was not prevented from bringing an action for fraud, based on oral misrepresentations, even though the written contract provided that it was "understood and agreed" that the defendant seller had not made,

"for the purpose of inducing the sale * * * or the making of this agreement * * * any statements or representations * * * other than" the single one therein set forth (pp. 426-427). And, just today, we are holding, in the Crowell-Collier Publishing case, that the plaintiffs were not barred from suing the defendants for fraud in inducing them to make the contract, despite its recital that *325

"This Agreement constitutes the entire understanding between the parties, [and] was not induced by any representations * * * not herein contained".

In addition, in Jackson v. State of New York(210 App. Div. 115, affd. 241 N. Y. 563, supra), the contract provided that the contractor (plaintiff's predecessor in interest) agreed that he had satisfied himself by his own investigation regarding all the conditions of the work to be done and that his conclusion to enter into the contract was based solely upon such investigation and not upon any information or data imparted by the State.

It was held that even this explicit disavowal of reliance did not bar the plaintiff from recovery. In answering the argument that the provision prevented proof either of misrepresentation by the defendant or reliance on the part of the plaintiff, the Appellate Division, in an opinion approved by this court, wrote: "A party to a contract cannot, by misrepresentation of a material fact, induce the other party to the contract to enter into it to his damage and then protect himself from the legal effect of such misrepresentation by inserting in the contract a clause to the effect that he is not to be held liable for the misrepresentation which induced the other party to enter into the contract. The effect of misrepresentation and fraud cannot be thus easily avoided" (pp. 119-120).

Although the clause in the contract before us may be differently worded from those in the agreements involved in the other cases decided by this court, it undoubtedly reflects the same thought and meaning, and the reasoning and the principles which the court deemed controlling in those cases are likewise controlling in this one. Their application, it seems plain to me, compels the conclusion that the complaint herein should be sustained and the plaintiff accorded a trial of its allegations.

It is said, however, that the provision in this contract differs from those heretofore considered in that it embodies a specific and deliberate exclusion of a particular subject. The quick answer is that the clause now before us is not of such a sort. On the contrary, instead of being limited, it is all-embracing, encompassing every representation that a seller could possibly make about the property being sold and, instead of representing *326 a special term of a bargain, is essentially "boiler plate." (See Contract of Sale, Standard N. Y. B. T. U. Form 8041; Bicks, Contracts for the Sale of Realty [1956 ed.], pp. 79-80, 94-95.) The more elaborate verbiage in the present contract cannot disguise the fact that the language which is said to immunize the defendants from their own fraud is no more specific than the general merger clause in Sabo v. Delman (3 NY2d 155, supra) and far less specific than the provision dealt with in the Jackson case (210 App. Div. 115, affd. 241 N. Y. 563, supra) or in Crowell-Collier.

In any event, though, I cannot believe that the outcome of a case such as this, in which the defendant is charged with fraud, should turn on the particular language employed in the contract. As Judge Augustus Hand, writing for the Federal Court of Appeals, observed, "the ingenuity of draftsmen is sure to keep pace with the demands of wrongdoers, and if a deliberate fraud may be shielded by a clause in a contract that the writing contains every representation made by way of inducement, or that utterances shown to be untrue were not an inducement to the agreement," a fraudulent seller would have a simple method of obtaining immunity for his misconduct. (Arnold v. National Aniline & Chem. Co., 20 F. 2d 364, 369.)

The guiding rule -- that fraud vitiates every agreement which it touches -- has been well expressed not only by the courts of this state, but by courts throughout the country and by the House of Lords in England. And, in recognizing that the plaintiff may assert a cause of action in fraud, the courts have not differentiated between the type or form of exculpatory provision inserted in the contract. It matters not, the cases demonstrate, whether the clause simply recites that no representations have been made or more fully stipulates that the seller has not made any representations concerning certain enumerated subjects and that the purchaser has made his own investigation and has not relied upon any representation by the seller, not embodied in the writing. (See, e.g., Sabo v. Delman, 3 N Y 2d 155, 161-162, supra.; Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N. Y. 165, 169, supra.; Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N. Y. 424, 428, supra.; Angerosa v. White Co., 248 App. Div. 425, 431, affd. 275 N. Y. 524, supra.; Jackson v. State of New York, 210 App. Div. 115, affd. 241 N. Y. 563, supra.; Pearson *327 & Son v. Dublin Corp., [1907] A. C. 351, 353-354, 362; Arnold v. National Aniline & Chem. Co., 20 F. 2d 364, 369, supra.; Lutfy v. Roper & Sons Motor Co., 57 Ariz. 495, 506; Omar Oil Co. v. MacKenzie Oil Co., 33 Del. 259, 289-290; Jordan v. Nelson, 178 N. W. 544 [Iowa]; Bryant v. Troutman, 287 S. W. 2d 918, 921 [Ky.]; Bates v. Southgate, 308 Mass. 170, 182, supra.; Ganley Bros. v. Butler Bros. Bldg. Co., 170 Minn. 373, 376-377; Brown v. Ohman, 42 So. 2d 209, 212-213 [Miss.]; Martin v. Harris, 121 Neb. 372; Blacknall v. Rowland, 108 N. C. 554, 557-558; Pennsylvania Turnpike Comm. v. Smith, 350 Pa. 355, 361-362; Dallas Farm Mach. Co. v. Reaves, 307 S. W. 2d 233, 239 [Texas]; Dieterich v. Rice, 115 Wash. 365; see also, 3 Williston, Contracts [Rev. ed., 1936], §§ 811, 811A; Corbin, Contracts [1951], Vol. 3, § 578; Vol. 6, § 1516; Restatement of Contracts, § 573.)

In England, in the Pearson case ([1907] A. C. 351, supra), the contract to perform certain construction work provided that the contractor "should satisfy himself" as to various specified items connected with the job and that the defendant corporation "did not hold itself responsible for the accuracy of [such] information" (p. 351).

After performing the contract, the plaintiffs brought a deceit action, claiming damages for false representations as to the very items concerning which they had agreed they would satisfy themselves. The House of Lords reversed the judgment directed for the defendants and held that the action could be maintained; the Lord Chancellor, after noting that "The contract contained clauses * * * to the effect that the contractors must not rely on any representation * * * but must ascertain and judge of the facts for themselves" (p. 353), went on to say (pp. 353-354):

"Now it seems clear that no one can escape liability for his own fraudulent statements by inserting in a contract a clause that the other party shall not rely upon them."

Lord Ashbourne, concurring with the Lord Chancellor, pointed out that the clause relied upon "might in some cases be part of a fraud, and might advance and disguise a fraud" (p. 360) and Lord Hereford, also concurring, declared (p. 362) that, if the "protecting clause" be inserted fraudulently, *328

"When the fraud succeeds, surely those who designed the fraudulent protection cannot take advantage of it. Such a clause would be good protection against any mistake or miscalculation, but fraud vitiates every contract and every clause in it."

In the Dieterich case (115 Wash. 365, supra), the contract contained the provision that

"The land is sold to [the plaintiff buyer] * * * with the understanding that he has personally and carefully inspected said premises, and is purchasing the same by said inspection and not from any other sayings or inducements by [the seller] * * * and there has been no other inducements other than recited herein".

Despite this explicit disclaimer of reliance and inducement, the Washington Supreme Court decided that the recital did not bar the plaintiff from showing "the fraudulent nature of the contract" (p. 373) and, in the course of its opinion, observed (p. 368) that the contention of the defendants to the contrary was "effectually answered by the court of appeals of New York, in the case of Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N. Y. 424".

In Martin v. Harris (121 Neb. 372, supra), the agreement recited:

"There have been no representations of the reasonable value of any of the properties herein described made by or to either party to this contract. Each party is relying upon his own judgment of such values after a personal inspection of the properties."

The plaintiff, alleging that the defendant fraudulently misrepresented the value of the property, sought damages. Again, despite the explicit statement that such a representation had not been made and the specific disavowal of reliance thereon, the court upheld the plaintiff's right to bring the action (p. 376).

In the Ganley case (170 Minn. 373, supra), too, the disclaimer was quite specific, reading in this way:

"The [plaintiff] contractor has examined the said contracts * * * and the specifications and plans forming a part thereof, and is familiar with the location *329 of said work and the conditions under which the same must be performed * * * and is not relying upon any statement made by the company in respect thereto."

In deciding that a defendant could not protect himself against liability for fraud by such a provision or, indeed, by any language, the court wrote in no uncertain terms (p. 377):

"The law should not and does not permit a covenant of immunity to be drawn that will protect a person against his own fraud. Such is not enforceable because of public policy. Industrial & General Trust, Ltd. v. Tod, 180 N. Y. 215 * * *. Language is not strong enough to write such a contract. Fraud destroys all consent. It is the purpose of the law to shield only those whose armor embraces good faith. Theoretically, if there is no fraud the rule we announce is harmless. If there is fraud the rule we announce is wholesome. Whether the rule is effective depends upon the facts. Public interest supports our conclusion."

And, said the court, while the argument that a party should have the right "to let his work to a certain person because the other will therein agree that he relies and acts only upon his own knowledge and not upon the representations of his adversary", might on first thought seem plausible, it does not stand analysis. "It may be desirable in dealing with unscrupulous persons to have this clause as a shield against wrongful charges of fraud. But, if there is no fraud, that fact will be established on the trial. The merits of defendant's claim reach only the expense and annoyance of litigation. But every party should have his day in court. * * * We are unable to formulate a rule of law sustaining defendant's contention which would not at the same time give opportunities for the commission of fraud for which the wronged party would have no redress" (p. 376).

And in the Lutfy case (57 Ariz. 495, supra), the contract of sale contained as specific a disavowal of reliance upon a particular representation as could be written:

"It is understood and agreed that there is no representation or warranty that the 'year model' of said *330 property, as hereinbefore stated, correctly states the year in which said property was manufactured, but is merely used by the parties hereto for convenience in describing it. * * * Purchaser agrees that he has made an independent investigation of the property and has relied solely upon his own investigation with reference thereto in entering into this contract, and has placed no reliance and acted upon no representations or warranties upon the part of the Seller."

The plaintiff, suing for damages, alleged that the defendant had falsely represented the year model of the automobile which he purchased, and the high court of Arizona held that he could prove that such a representation had been made and that he had relied upon it, notwithstanding the contract's most explicit recital to the contrary (p. 506):

"If binding upon [plaintiff] appellant, it would protect appellee from the consequences of any fraudulent misrepresentations it might have made to appellant to induce him to sign the contract and, as we see it, any provision in a contract making it possible for a party thereto to free himself from the consequences of his own fraud in procuring its execution is invalid and necessarily constitutes no defense."

The cases cited -- all upholding the sufficiency of a complaint based on fraud no matter how the exculpatory language in the contract is phrased -- show how firmly established the rule is, and the passages quoted show how compelling are the reasons for the rule. Nor is their force or value weakened or impaired by the decisions upon which the court now appears to rely. Except for Cohen v. Cohen (3 NY2d 813), no one of them has anything to do with the adequacy of the complaint as a pleading; two are concerned with the proof adduced at the trial (Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N. Y. 590; Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N. Y. 165, supra), while the third deals with the subject of res judicata (Sylvester v. Bernstein, 283 App. Div. 333, affd. 307 N. Y. 778).

In the Ernst Iron Works case, the appeal was, as I have noted, taken after trial and was concerned with the proof and not, as is the present appeal, with the sufficiency of the complaint. *331 The contract contained both a blanket merger clause and a recital that the defendant "makes no representation regarding previous sales" in Buffalo, where the plaintiff did business. Notwithstanding that provision, the plaintiff claimed that he had relied upon a representation by the defendant's salesman that the product had not been sold in that city, and testimony to that effect was received at the trial. The court did reverse the judgment for the plaintiff, but not on any theory that the specific disclaimer clause barred suit or that the evidence was inadmissible because of it. It was the court's conclusion, based on the evidence adduced at the trial, first, that the false representation attributed to the defendant had not been made (270 N. Y., at pp. 169-170); second, that, in any event, the defendant's salesman did not have authority to make such a representation and the plaintiff knew this (pp. 170-171); and, finally, that "it [was] clear [from the proof at the trial] that the plaintiff did not rely upon the statement" (pp. 171-172). And, most significantly, the court did not question the general principle but affirmed it, stating that "A rogue cannot protect himself from liability for his fraud by inserting a printed clause in his contract" (270 N. Y., at p. 169).

As to Cohen v. Cohen, I dissented from the decision there made and still consider it to have been wrongly decided. Constrained to accept it, I do so, but I cannot subscribe to extending its application beyond its own peculiar fact setting. A husband and wife had separated; there were bitter mutual recriminations followed by three separate lawsuits. The parties were ultimately reconciled and their lawyers drew a settlement agreement, which they executed, reciting that the husband had not made any representations "as to the continuation of the marital status". The wife sometime later brought another action, alleging that her husband had falsely represented that he "would effect a reconciliation with [her], return to live with her * * * permanently, and permanently resume their marital relationship". As is quite evident, the Cohen case is a most unusual one, not only because it involved an agreement designed to settle pending marital litigation, but because of the extraordinary and promissory nature of the misrepresentation alleged. Indeed, the only resemblance claimed for the cases -- that is, and the present one -- is that in both *332 there is a specific disclaimer by the plaintiff of the very representations charged against the defendant. However, as noted above (pp. 325-326), since the provision in the contract before us encompasses every representation which a seller of real estate could possibly have made, including those alleged, even the asserted similarity does not in fact exist.

Contrary to the intimation in the court's opinion (p. 323), the nonreliance clause cannot possibly operate as an estoppel against the plaintiff. Essentially equitable in nature, the principle of estoppel is to be invoked to prevent fraud and injustice, not to further them. The statement that the representations in question were not made was, according to the complaint, false to the defendant's knowledge. Surely, the perpetrator of a fraud cannot close the lips of his victim and deny him the right to state the facts as they actually exist. Indeed, the contention that a person, such as the defendant herein, could urge an estoppel was considered and emphatically disposed of in Bridger v. Goldsmith with this statement: "The question now is whether [the no-representation non-inducement clause] can be given the effect claimed for it by the learned counsel for the defendant, to preclude the plaintiff from alleging fraud in the sale and pursuing in the courts the remedies which the law gives in such cases. It cannot operate by way of estoppel for the obvious reason that the statements were false to the defendant's knowledge. He may, indeed, have relied upon its force and efficacy to protect him from the consequences of his own fraud, but he certainly could not have relied upon the truth of any statement in it. A mere device of the guilty party to a contract intended to shield himself from the results of his own fraud, practiced upon the other party, cannot well be elevated to the dignity and importance of an equitable estoppel" (143 N. Y. 424, 427-428, emphasis supplied; see, also, Angerosa v. White Co., 248 App. Div. 425, 433-434, affd. 275 N. Y. 524, supra).

The rule heretofore applied by this court presents no obstacle to honest business dealings, and dishonest transactions ought not to receive judicial protection. The clause in the contract before us may lend support to the defense and render the plaintiff's task of establishing its claim more difficult, but it should not be held to bar institution of an action for fraud. Whether *333 the defendants made the statements attributed to them and, if they did, whether the plaintiff relied upon them, whether, in other words, the defendants were guilty of fraud, are questions of fact not capable of determination on the pleadings alone. The plaintiff is entitled to its day in court.

Chief Judge Conway and Judges Desmond, Dye, Froessel and Van Voorhis concur with Judge Burke; Judge Fuld dissents in a separate opinion.

Order reversed, etc.

Copr. (c) 2004, Randy A. Daniels, Secretary of State, State of New York.

N.Y. 1959.

Danann Realty Corp., Respondent, v. David A. Harris et al., Appellants.

END OF DOCUMENT

24

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

DIAMOND STATE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff,

v.

WORLDWIDE WEATHER TRADING LLC and Harold Mollin, Defendants.

No. 02 Civ.2900 LMM GWG.

Dec. 16, 2002.

Insurance company sued weather derivative trading company and company's owner, alleging fraud, conversion, and other offenses in connection with defendants' purported scheme to enter "weather derivative" contracts on behalf of plaintiff. Defendant company filed motion to dismiss. The District Court, McKenna, J., held that, under New York law: (1) plaintiff stated a claim for vicarious liability against defendant company; (2) plaintiff adequately alleged fraud, as well as a conspiracy to commit fraud; (3) plaintiff stated a claim for aiding and abetting fraud; (4) plaintiff's allegations satisfied the specificity requirements for pleading fraud; (5) plaintiff sufficiently pleaded the basis of its claim against defendant company for tortious interference with contractual relations; (6) plaintiff stated a claim for conspiracy to commit conversion; (7) plaintiff set forth sufficient facts to support its claim for aiding and abetting conversion; and (8) plaintiff failed to state a claim against defendant company for unjust enrichment.

Motion granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Corporations 360(1)
101k360(1)

Allegations that defendant weather derivative trading company's owner, who was also the chairman of its board of directors, made material misrepresentations and concealed material facts from plaintiff insurance company while acting in the scope of his employment, that, specifically, owner issued 11 "dummy" commercial inland marine weather insurance policies while engaged in the business of defendant company, and that owner's actions were done in furtherance of defendant company's business, stated a claim for vicarious liability under New York law.

[2] Insurance 1648
217k1648

Allegations that defendant weather derivative trading company's owner and chairman of the board falsely represented that he would not produce or would strictly limit weather derivative business, with the intent that plaintiff insurance company would rely on this representation, that defendant company and owner issued "dummy" policies to conceal unauthorized reinsurance policies, which, in effect, covered weather derivative contracts, and that, as a result of these actions, plaintiff suffered economic injury, stated a claim for fraud under New York law.

[3] Conspiracy 9
91k9

[3] Conspiracy 18
91k18

Allegations that defendant weather derivative trading company, its owner, and insurance agency specializing in weather-related business each rendered substantial assistance to one another in committing fraud, that there was an agreement among defendant company, owner, and agency in furtherance of a common objective, to issue and hide unauthorized reinsurance policies on behalf of plaintiff insurance company in order to collect premiums and commissions they would otherwise have been unable to receive, that, in order to accomplish this goal, "dummy" policies were issued, fraudulently using third party's money in order to obtain the policies, and that defendant company knowingly agreed to pay any sums received under the dummy policies to third party, stated a claim for conspiracy to commit fraud under New York law.

[4] Insurance 1648

217k1648

Allegations that defendant weather derivative trading company's owner and chairman of the board falsely represented that he would not produce or would strictly limit weather derivative business, with the intent that plaintiff insurance company would rely on this representation, that defendant company and owner issued "dummy" policies to conceal unauthorized reinsurance policies, which, in effect, covered weather derivative contracts, that, as a result of these actions, plaintiff suffered economic injury, that defendant company had knowledge of the fraud, and that defendant company knowingly agreed to pay any proceeds obtained under the dummy policies to third party in order that plaintiff would never know about the reinsurance policies, stated a claim for aiding and abetting fraud under New York law.

[5] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Allegations which stated the time, place, speaker, and content of the alleged misrepresentations, as well as each defendant's alleged participation, satisfied the specificity requirements for pleading fraud. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rules 8(a), 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[6] Torts 12
379k12

Allegations that plaintiff insurance company had a contractual agreement with insurance agency specializing in weather-related business, that pursuant to the agreement, agency's owner was to produce weather-related business on behalf of plaintiff, that weather derivative business was not to be written, that defendant weather derivative trading company had knowledge of this agreement and its restrictions, that defendant company and owner intentionally and improperly induced agency to breach the agreement and issue unauthorized reinsurance policies in order to collect premiums and commissions that were otherwise unattainable, and that, as a result of these actions, plaintiff suffered economic injury, stated a claim for tortious interference with contractual relations under New York law.

[7] Conspiracy 8
91k8

[7] Conspiracy 18
91k18

Allegations that insurance agency specializing in weather-related business was contractually and legally obligated to remit premiums to plaintiff insurance company for the issuance of plaintiff's policies, and that agency, its owner, and defendant weather derivative trading company allegedly conspired and assisted each other in hiding unauthorized reinsurance policies and did not remit premiums collected under those policies to the rightful possessor, plaintiff, stated a claim for conspiracy to commit conversion under New York law.

[8] Insurance 1649
217k1649

Allegations that individual who owned both insurance agency specializing in weather-related business and defendant weather derivative trading company, who was the primary wrongdoer, allegedly misrepresented to plaintiff insurance company that only weather-related insurance business, and not weather derivative business, would be produced, that, upon issuing unauthorized reinsurance policies, the primary wrongdoer apparently hid those policies by issuing similar policies to another entity that would effectually cover the same losses as the reinsurance policies, that plaintiff did not know of the existence of the policies, so the premiums collected for those policies were never properly transferred to the rightful owner, that defendant company and primary wrongdoer had actual knowledge of the conversion of the premiums obtained by agency, and that they actively participated in the conversion of those premiums, stated a claim for aiding and abetting conversion under New York law.

[9] Implied and Constructive Contracts 81
205Hk81

Insurance company failed to state unjust enrichment claim against weather derivative trading company based on fraudulent scheme purportedly engaged in by company and its owner, by failing to establish that defendant company retained an enrichment at insurance company's expense; insurance company asserted in its own complaint that the subject $7.4 million premium was paid by third party to insurance agency, not to defendant company, and that, although the money should have been returned to defendant company, insurance company did not know what was done with the money.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

MCKENNA, J.

*1 Defendant, Worldwide Weather Trading LLC ("WWT"), brings this motion to dismiss the complaint brought by Diamond State Insurance Company ("Diamond State") alleging vicarious liability, conspiracy to commit fraud, aiding and abetting fraud, tortious interference with contractual relations, conspiracy to commit conversion, aiding and abetting conversion and unjust enrichment. The motion is brought pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), and with respect to the fraud allegations, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). For the reasons set forth below, WWT's motion is granted in part and denied in part.

BACKGROUND

A. The Agreement Between CWW Agency and Diamond State

The following factual allegations, as stated in Diamond State's amended complaint, are assumed to be true for the purpose of considering this motion. [FN1] Harold Mollin ("Mollin") was the owner of Customized Worldwide Weather Insurance Agency, Inc. ("CWW Agency"), an insurance agency specializing in weather-related business. (Am.Compl.¶¶ 6, 7.) Diamond State, an insurance company, entered into a Program Administration Agreement (the "agreement") with CWW Agency authorizing CWW Agency to act as its agent. (Id. ¶ 8, Ex. A.) Mollin led Diamond State to believe that he would produce "weather-related business," as opposed to "weather derivative business," on behalf of Diamond State. (Id. ¶ 11, 15; Ex. C,

"Multiple Line Quota Share Reinsurance Contract" § II, at 1 (describing business covered as "weather-related inland marine or property insurance"). "Weather-related business" generally covers outdoor concerts, snow removal programs, hurricane risks and weather-related promotions that are vulnerable to cancellation or rescheduling due to adverse weather conditions. (Id. ¶ 11.) "Weather derivative business" generally involves a trader who, in exchange for a fee, agrees to pay an energy-related company a specified amount if the temperature in a geographic area averages above or below a certain specified temperature during a period of time. (Id. ¶ 14.)

FN1. When considering a motion to dismiss, the allegations in the complaint are assumed to be true. See Kopec v. Coughlin, 922 F.2d 152, 153 (2d Cir.1991).

B. Mollin and WWT

Mollin also either owned or was a principal owner of WWT, a weather derivative trading company. (Id. ¶¶ 3, 29.) He was Chairman of WWT's Board of Directors as well, and therefore authorized to act on WWT's behalf. (Id. ¶ 28.) WWT brokers weather derivative contracts and sometimes acts as the trader on weather derivative trades. (Id. ¶ 29.) When the agreement between Mollin and Diamond State was entered into, Diamond State did not know of WWT's existence. (Id.)

C. The Alleged Scheme

As described below, Diamond State alleges that Mollin, CWW Agency and WWT participated in a scheme to enter "weather derivative" contracts on behalf of Diamond State. This would enable the parties to collect lucrative commissions and premiums beyond those received if only producing "weather-related business." They accomplished this by issuing two series of policies: (1) Reinsurance Policies and (2) "dummy" policies.

1. The Reinsurance Policies

*2 The first step in the alleged scheme was to have CWW Agency, as Diamond State's agent, issue a series of "Facultative Reinsurance Policies" ("Reinsurance Policies") to Platinum Indemnity Ltd. ("Platinum"). (Id. ¶ 17.) In effect, these policies reinsured weather derivative contracts. (Id. ¶¶ 17, 20, 21, 23.) CWW Agency, Mollin and WWT intended to hide the unauthorized Reinsurance Policies from Diamond State, and never turned over to Diamond State the $7.4 million premium allegedly received from Platinum. (Id. ¶¶ 24, 31-39.)

2. The Dummy Policies

The next step in the alleged scheme was to bind Diamond State to eleven "Commercial Inland Marine Weather Insurance Policies" (the "dummy policies"), with an entity Mollin called "Worldwide Weather," covering precisely the same risks as the Platinum Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶¶ 32, 33, Ex. E.) Unlike the Reinsurance Policies, Mollin did not attempt to hide the dummy policies from Diamond State. However, Diamond State did not learn about the specifics of the policies, including the fact that WWT was the actual insured, until Diamond State conducted an audit in February 2000. (Id. ¶ 33.)

Under the scheme, the premium sent to Diamond State for the dummy policies was actually the premium that Mollin had collected for the Platinum Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 34.) Hence, WWT never actually paid any premium for the dummy policies. If a loss occurred under the Reinsurance Policies, CWW Agency, Mollin and WWT planned to have Diamond State billed for that loss under a WWT dummy policy, and not a Platinum Reinsurance Policy. (Id. ¶ 36.) Diamond State would then pay out money for the loss to "Worldwide Weather," the listed insured on the dummy policy. (Id. ¶ 36, Ex. E.) Subsequently, monies collected by WWT, through the dummy policies, would be sent to Platinum for the same loss under the Reinsurance Policy. (Id. ¶ 36.) Platinum would therefore be paid for any losses covered by the Reinsurance Policies, without Diamond State knowing that the Reinsurance Policies existed.

In February 2000, Diamond State audited CWW Agency and found the dummy policies. (Id. ¶ 33.) When asked about the policies, Mollin revealed to Diamond State that the insured listed as "Worldwide Weather" was actually WWT. (Id. ¶¶ 33, 38.) Mollin offered to cancel all eleven dummy policies flat, therefore rendering them void ab initio. (Id. ¶ 38.) After cancellation endorsements were issued for the dummy policies, Diamond State, unaware of the Reinsurance Policies, returned the $7.4 million premium for the WWT dummy policies to CWW Agency. (Id. ¶ 39.) Presumably, this money should have been returned to WWT, but Diamond State does not know what was done with it, and Mollin has apparently fled the country. (Pl.'s Memo. at 7.)

D. Platinum's Demand To Diamond State

Two months later, in April 2000, Platinum sent to Diamond State a demand for reimbursement for losses under the Reinsurance Policies. (Am.Compl.¶ 17.) This was the first time Diamond State learned of the alleged Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 18.) Through the demand for reimbursement, Diamond State also found out that an additional ten Reinsurance Policies had been issued to Platinum, on Diamond State's behalf, after Diamond State suspended CWW Agency and Mollin's authority. (Id. ¶ 40, Ex. G.) Platinum has since sued Diamond State in order to collect under some of the alleged Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 39, Ex. D.) Diamond State contends that CWW Agency, Mollin and WWT knew, or should have known, that CWW Agency was not authorized to issue the Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 30.) Nonetheless, they acted in a concerted effort to issue and hide these policies in order to receive premiums and commissions from Platinum to which they would otherwise not be entitled. (Id. ¶ 31.)

STANDARD OF REVIEW

*3 When considering a motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), the court must accept the allegations of plaintiff's complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in plaintiff's favor. Irish Lesbian &

Gay Org. v. Giuliani, 143 F.3d 638, 644 (2d Cir.1998). The question is not whether plaintiff will ultimately prevail, but whether plaintiff is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims. Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 198 (2d Cir.2001) (citation omitted). "[A] complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957).

When alleging fraud, the circumstances constituting the fraud "shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally." Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b). This particularity requirement must be read together with Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(a). See DiVittorio v. Equidyne Extractive Indus., Inc., 822 F.2d 1242, 1247 (2d Cir.1987). Rule 8(a) states that a pleading should contain "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(a).

"Rule 9(b) pleadings cannot be based upon information and belief." DiVittorio, 822 F.2d at 1247. The exception to this rule is that "fraud allegations may be so alleged as to facts peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge, in which event the allegations must be accompanied by a statement of the facts upon which the belief is based." Id. (citations omitted). "[F]raud allegations ought to specify the time, place, speaker, and content of the alleged misrepresentations" and "inform each defendant of the nature of his alleged participation." Id. (citations omitted).

DISCUSSION

A. Vicarious Liability

[1] Diamond State contends that WWT is vicariously liable for the actions of Mollin who, as an owner of WWT, as well as Chairman of the Board of Directors, made material misrepresentations and concealed material facts from Diamond State while acting in the scope of his employment. (Am.Compl. ¶¶ 3, 28, 29, 51-56.) WWT contends, however, that the "adverse interest" exception to vicarious liability is applicable here. (Def.'s Memo. at 12-14.)

For WWT to be found vicariously liable for Mollin, Diamond State must show that Mollin's underlying acts were: (1) performed while engaged generally in the business of WWT, or (2) reasonably necessary or incidental to his employment with WWT. See Smith v. Midwood Realty Assocs., 289 A.D.2d 391, 734 N.Y.S.2d 237, 238 (App.Div.2001).

As a general rule, "knowledge acquired by an agent acting within the scope of his agency is imputed to his principal and the latter is bound by such knowledge although the information is never actually communicated to it." Center v. Hampton Affiliates, Inc., 66 N.Y.2d 782, 784, 497 N.Y.S.2d 898, 488 N.E.2d 828 (1985) (citations omitted); see also Adams v. New York City Transit Auth., 88 N.Y.2d 116, 119, 643 N.Y.S.2d 511, 666 N.E.2d 216 (1996) ("employers are held vicariously liable for their employees' torts only to the extent that the underlying acts were within the scope of the employment"). This general rule is due to an underlying presumption that the "agent has discharged his duty to disclose to his principal all the material facts coming to his knowledge with reference to the subject of his agency." Center, 66 N.Y.2d at 784, 497 N.Y.S.2d 898, 488 N.E.2d 828 (internal quotation and citations omitted).

*4 However, courts have recognized an "adverse interest" exception to the general rule. The exception has been described as follows:

[W]hen an agent is engaged in a scheme to defraud his principal, either for his own benefit or that of a third person, the presumption that knowledge held by the agent was disclosed to the principal fails because he cannot be presumed to have disclosed that which would expose and defeat his fraudulent purpose.

Id. (citations omitted). For the exception to apply, "the agent must have totally abandoned his principal's interests and be acting entirely for his own or another's purposes. It cannot be invoked merely because he has a conflict of interest or because he is not acting primarily for his principal." Id. at 784-85, 497 N.Y.S.2d 898, 488 N.E.2d 828 (citations omitted). Therefore, if Mollin was acting to further the interests of WWT, then the adverse interest doctrine would not be applicable, even though Mollin's own interests or those of a third party were also being advanced through the alleged scheme.

Here, Mollin issued the eleven WWT dummy policies while engaged in the business of WWT, his principal. Allegedly, this was done in furtherance of WWT business. (Am.Compl.¶ 53, 55.) If Diamond State can prove the truth of these allegations, then the exception would not apply because the scheme also benefitted WWT. See Center, 66 N.Y.2d at 784-85, 497 N.Y.S.2d 898, 488 N.E.2d 828. Therefore, the Court will allow the action for vicarious liability to proceed.

B. Conspiracy To Commit Fraud & Aiding and Abetting Fraud

1. Conspiracy To Commit Fraud

In order for there to be a valid claim for conspiracy to commit fraud, there must be a valid underlying fraud claim. See Missigman v. USI Northeast, Inc., 131 F.Supp.2d 495, 517 (S.D.N.Y.2001). To find fraud, one must have knowingly made a false representation or intentionally concealed material facts with the intent that another would rely on such to his detriment. See Baker v. R.T. Vanderbilt Co., 260 A.D.2d 750, 688 N.Y.S.2d 726, 729 (App.Div.1999). Additionally, the elements of a conspiracy claim are: (1) an agreement among two or more parties, (2) a common objective, (3) acts in furtherance of the objective and (4) knowledge. See United States v. De Biasi, 712 F.2d 785, 793 (2d Cir.1983).

[2] Diamond State has adequately alleged fraud. It has alleged that Mollin falsely represented that he would not produce or would strictly limit weather derivative business, with the intent that Diamond State would rely on this representation. (Am.Compl.¶¶ 11, 15, 58.) In addition,

Diamond State alleges that WWT and Mollin issued the dummy policies to conceal the unauthorized Reinsurance Policies, which, in effect, covered weather derivative contracts. (Id. ¶¶ 17-39, 58, Ex. C.) Finally, Diamond State contends that as a result of these actions, it has suffered economic injury. (Id. ¶ 60.)

[3] Diamond State also claims that Mollin, CWW Agency and WWT each rendered substantial assistance to one another in committing the fraud. Allegedly, there was an agreement among Mollin, CWW Agency and WWT in furtherance of a common objective--to issue and hide unauthorized Reinsurance Policies on behalf of Diamond State in order to collect premiums and commissions they would otherwise be unable to receive. (Id. ¶¶ 30-39, 57-59.) In order to accomplish this goal, dummy policies were issued to "Worldwide Weather," fraudulently using Platinum's money in order to obtain the policies, and WWT knowingly agreed to pay any sums received under the dummy policies to Platinum. (Id. ¶¶ 3, 31-34, 58, 59.)

*5 Diamond State has adequately alleged a conspiracy to commit fraud and may therefore go forward with its claim.

2. Aiding and Abetting Fraud

[4] The elements of an aiding and abetting fraud claim are: "(1) a fraud, (2) defendant's knowledge of the fraud, and (3) defendant's knowing rendition of substantial assistance thereto." In re Investors Funding Corp. of New York Sec. Litig., 523 F.Supp. 533, 545 (S.D.N.Y.1980).

As noted above, Diamond State has adequately alleged a fraud claim. Furthermore, WWT allegedly had knowledge of the fraud since it knew that the Reinsurance Policies were unauthorized and that the premiums sent for the dummy policies were not its own monies, but those of Platinum's. (Am.Compl.¶¶ 61, 62, 64.) Finally, WWT knowingly agreed to pay any proceeds obtained under the dummy policies to Platinum in order that Diamond State would never know about the Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 63.) The Court will allow Diamond State to prove the truth of these allegations.

3. Specificity Requirements for Pleading Fraud

[5] The Court also notes that Diamond State's allegations satisfy the specificity requirements for pleading fraud. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(a) & 9(b). As described above, the time, place, speaker, content of the alleged misrepresentations and each defendant's alleged participation have been stated. Further details that may be peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge do not need to be pleaded at the complaint stage. See DiVittorio, 822 F.2d at 1247.

C. Tortious Interference With Contractual Relations

[6] The elements of a tortious interference claim are: "(a) that a valid contract exists; (b) that a 'third party' had knowledge of that contract; (c) that the third party intentionally and improperly procured the breach of contract; and (d) that the breach resulted in damage to the plaintiff." Finley v. Giacobbe, 79 F.3d 1285, 1294 (2d Cir.1996) (citing Israel v. Wood Dolson Co., 1 N.Y.2d 116, 120, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97 (1956)).

Diamond State had a contractual agreement with CWW Agency. (Am.Compl., Ex. A.) Pursuant to the agreement, Mollin was to produce weather-related business on behalf of Diamond State. (Id. ¶ 11, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97.) Diamond State further contends weather derivative business was not to be written. (Id. ¶ 15, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97.) WWT had knowledge of this agreement and its restrictions. (Id. ¶¶ 30, 68, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97.) It is further alleged that WWT and Mollin intentionally and improperly induced CWW Agency to breach the agreement and issue the unauthorized Reinsurance Policies in order to collect premiums and commissions that were otherwise unattainable. (Id. ¶ 17-39, 69, 70, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97.) As a result of these actions, Diamond State has suffered economic injury. (Id. ¶ 71, 151 N.Y.S.2d 1, 134 N.E.2d 97.)

Therefore, Diamond State has sufficiently pleaded the basis of its claim against WWT for tortious interference with contractual relations.

D. Conspiracy To Commit Conversion

[7] To sustain a claim for conspiracy to commit conversion, Diamond State would have to set forth facts supporting an allegation that WWT either conspired to unlawfully convert property or consciously assisted in the unlawful conversion. See Primex Plastics Corp. v. Lawrence Prods., Inc., No. 89 Civ. 2944(JSM), 1991 WL 183367, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Sept.12, 1991).

*6 CWW Agency was contractually and legally obligated to remit premiums to Diamond State for the issuance of Diamond State policies. (Am.Compl.¶ 79.) CWW Agency, Mollin and WWT allegedly conspired and assisted each other in hiding the Platinum Reinsurance Policies and did not remit premiums collected under those policies to the rightful possessor, Diamond State. (Id. ¶¶ 24, 80.) The details of this scheme were previously mentioned.

The motion to dismiss Diamond State's conspiracy to commit conversion claim is denied.

E. Aiding and Abetting Conversion

[8] To state a claim for aiding and abetting conversion, Diamond State must show: (1) the existence of wrongful conduct by the primary wrongdoer; (2) WWT's knowledge of the wrongful conduct; and (3) WWT's substantial assistance in achieving the wrongdoing. See Liberian v. Worden, No. 601357/97, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 717, at *9 (Sup.Ct. July 23, 1998); see also Williams v. Bank Leumi Trust Co. of New York, No. 96 Civ. 6695(LMM), 1997 WL 289865, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. May 30, 1997). New York law requires actual knowledge of the wrongful conduct. See Liberian, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 717, at *9;

see also Williams, 1997 WL 289865, at *5. Constructive knowledge and/or allegations that WWT "recklessly disregarded" or "should have known" of the wrongdoing will not withstand a motion to dismiss. See Williams, 1997 WL 289865, at *5; Liberman, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 717, at *9-10.

In this case, Mollin, the primary wrongdoer, allegedly misrepresented to Diamond State that only weather-related insurance business, and not weather derivative business, would be produced. (Am.Compl. ¶¶ 11, 15.) Then, upon issuing unauthorized Reinsurance Policies, the primary wrongdoer apparently hid those policies by issuing similar policies to "Worldwide Weather" that would effectually cover the same losses as the Reinsurance Policies. (Id. ¶ 17, 20, 21, 23, 31-39.) Because Diamond State did not know of the existence of the policies, the premiums collected for those policies were never properly transferred to the rightful owner. (Id. ¶¶ 24, 83.) Diamond State alleges that WWT and Mollin had actual knowledge of the conversion of the premiums obtained by CWW Agency and that WWT and Mollin actively participated in the conversion of those premiums, as evidenced by the detailed scheme. (Id. ¶ 84.) Thus, Diamond State has set forth sufficient facts to support its claim.

F. Unjust Enrichment

[9] The elements of an unjust enrichment claim are: "(1) the defendant was enriched; (2) enrichment was at plaintiff's expense; and (3) the defendant's retention of the benefit would be unjust." Dubai Islamic Bank v. Citibank, N.A., 126 F.Supp.2d 659, 669 (S.D.N.Y.2000) (internal quotations and citations omitted).

Should Diamond State be found liable for the Platinum Reinsurance Policies, it requests that the $7.4 million premium for those policies be paid by WWT in order to prevent WWT from being unjustly enriched. (Am.Compl. ¶¶ 87, 88.) The Court, however, does not find that WWT has retained an enrichment at Diamond State's expense.

*7 Diamond State asserts in its own complaint that the $7.4 million premium was paid by Platinum to CWW Agency, not WWT. (Id. ¶ 24 .) Furthermore, the complaint also states that the subsequent return of the $7.4 million as a result of the dummy policies being cancelled flat, was sent to and received by CWW Agency, not WWT. (Id. ¶ 39.) Diamond State further admits that although the money should have been returned to WWT, it does not know what was done with the money. (Pl.'s Memo. at 7.) Therefore, there is no basis for the claim that WWT was enriched in the amount of $7.4 million and that retention of that money in the event that Diamond State should be found liable for the losses under the Reinsurance Policies would be unjust. The Court therefore dismisses the claim brought against WWT for unjust enrichment.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, WWT's motion to dismiss the claims of vicarious liability, conspiracy to commit fraud, aiding and abetting fraud, tortious interference with contractual relations, conspiracy to commit conversion, and aiding and abetting conversion is denied. Diamond State is permitted to proceed with these claims. WWT's motion to dismiss the unjust enrichment claim brought against it is granted for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

2002 WL 31819217 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

25

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Fourth District.

Fannie Gordon DIAMOND, Appellant,
v.
Herman ROSENFELD and Rose Rosenfeld,
Appellees.
Herman ROSENFELD and Rose Rosenfeld, Appellants,
v.
Leslie J. HENION and Elizabeth S. Henion,
Appellees.

Nos. 4-86-1204, 4-86-1221.

Aug. 5, 1987.
On Motion for Rehearing
Sept. 23, 1987.

Action was instituted for civil conspiracy, malicious prosecution, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, resulting from seven-year squabble between neighbors. The jury found for plaintiffs on all counts, and awarded damages. All defendants moved for judgment n.o.v. on all counts. The Circuit Court, Palm Beach County, R. William Rutter, Jr., J., granted motion of one set of defendants, but denied other defendant's motion. Plaintiffs and other defendant both appealed, and appeals were consolidated. The District Court of Appeal, Webster, Peter D., Associate Judge, held that: (1) there was insufficient evidence to support intentional infliction of emotional distress and conspiracy claims; (2) there was sufficient evidence to support malicious prosecution actions; and (3) where verdict form did not differentiate adequately, the "two-issue" rule did not apply, requiring new trial for damages.

Affirmed in part; reversed in part;
remanded with instructions.

West Headnotes

[1] Conspiracy 19
91k19

Evidence was insufficient to support judgment for civil conspiracy to maliciously prosecute, where circumstantial inference did not outweigh all reasonable inferences to the contrary.

[2] Damages 192
115k192

Evidence was insufficient to support judgment for intentional infliction of emotional distress in connection with alleged harassment of plaintiffs by neighbors, where conduct was not shown to be so extreme and outrageous as to go beyond all bounds of decency.

[3] Malicious Prosecution 64(1)
249k64(1)

Evidence was sufficient to support judgment on malicious prosecution claim in favor of retired man who had been acquitted of hitting neighbors, despite contrasting evidence.

[4] Conspiracy 19
91k19

Where evidence was insufficient to support verdict of conspiracy to maliciously prosecute as to two out of three defendants, consistency required conclusion it was insufficient to support verdict against third.

[5] Malicious Prosecution 69
249k69

Award of $20,000 was not excessive for malicious prosecution of plaintiff on claims he hit neighbors.

[6] New Trial 39(5)
275k39(5)

A new trial on damages was necessary where verdict form did not differentiate between malicious prosecution damages and intentional infliction of emotional distress damages, where each claim was distinct and had separate measure of damages, and evidence sustained verdict against defendants for malicious prosecution only; the "two-issue" rule did not apply.

*1032 Frank G. Cibula, Jr., of Cibula, Gaunt & Pratt, West Palm Beach, for appellant Diamond.

Kevin J. Carroll of Davis, Critton, Hoy & Diamond, West Palm Beach, for appellees/appellants Rosenfeld.

Richard A. Kupfer of Cone, Wagner, Nugent, Johnson, Roth & Romano, West Palm Beach, for appellees Henion.

WEBSTER, PETER D., Associate Judge.

These two consolidated appeals have their genesis in a dispute among neighbors. All are elderly, and all resided in the same condominium.

In 1979, shortly after the Rosenfelds moved to the condominium, the Henions complained about the Rosenfelds' dog's barking. The Rosenfelds gave the dog away, but this proved to be only the beginning of the dispute. Mr. Rosenfeld, a retired cabinet maker, did woodworking, as a hobby, in his laundry room. The Henions complained about the noise generated by the woodworking, eventually bringing the matter before the board of the condominium association. At a meeting of the association, the board agreed to allow Mr. Rosenfeld to continue his hobby, subject to certain restrictions.

According to the Henions and Mrs. Diamond, as the parties were leaving the association meeting, Mr. Rosenfeld struck Mr. Henion without provocation, causing Mr. *1033 Henion to fall to the ground. A criminal complaint was made against Mr. Rosenfeld, alleging a battery. The ensuing criminal trial resulted in an acquittal. The Henions then filed a civil action against Mr. Rosenfeld, alleging a battery. It ended with a jury verdict in favor of Mr. Rosenfeld. Mrs. Diamond testified at both trials that Mr. Rosenfeld had hit Mr. Henion.

About six months after the Henion civil trial, Mrs. Diamond filed a criminal complaint against Mr. Rosenfeld, alleging that he struck her repeatedly as she was leaving the Henions' condominium. At the criminal trial that followed, Mr. Rosenfeld was again acquitted. Mrs. Diamond then filed a civil action against Mr. Rosenfeld, which ended with a jury verdict in favor of Mr. Rosenfeld. Mrs. Henion testified in both trials that Mr.

Rosenfeld had hit Mrs. Diamond.

The present appeals are from round five of the litigation. The Rosenfelds sued the Henions and Mrs. Diamond. The complaint was in six counts. In Counts I and II, Mr. Rosenfeld sought damages from the Henions for malicious prosecution. In Counts III and IV, Mr. Rosenfeld sought damages from Mrs. Diamond for malicious prosecution. In Count V, Mr. Rosenfeld sought damages from the Henions and Mrs. Diamond for conspiracy to prosecute him maliciously. Finally, in Count VI, the Rosenfelds sought damages from the Henions and Mrs. Diamond for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

At trial, the evidence was in conflict on virtually all issues. On the malicious prosecution claims against the Henions, there was testimony that Mr. Rosenfeld deliberately and without provocation struck Mr. Henion. However, there was also testimony that Mr. Rosenfeld never touched Mr. Henion but that, rather, Mr. Henion tripped and fell. Similarly, on the malicious prosecution claims against Mrs. Diamond, there was testimony that Mr. Rosenfeld struck Mrs. Diamond. However, there was also testimony that Mr. Rosenfeld never touched her. Essentially the same evidence was relied on to support the claim that the Henions and Mrs. Diamond had conspired to prosecute Mr. Rosenfeld maliciously, together with the inferences Mr. Rosenfeld argued could be drawn from the evidence.

On the claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, there was evidence that Mr. Henion had threatened to shoot the Rosenfelds' dog; that the Henions repeatedly complained about noise from the Rosenfelds' apartment; that the Henions made anti-Semitic remarks about the Rosenfelds; and that the Henions succeeded in alienating some of the neighbors from the Rosenfelds. However, most of the evidence regarding this Count involved Mrs. Diamond. There was evidence that Mrs. Diamond constantly harassed Mr. Rosenfeld, calling him a cripple and a criminal and accusing him of having tried to rape her; that she repeatedly made threatening and/or harassing telephone calls to the Rosenfelds; that she cursed the Rosenfelds and their children; that she directed prayers for the dead at the Rosenfelds, their children and grandchildren; and that, in general, she did her best to make the lives of the Rosenfelds, and of Mr. Rosenfeld in particular, as miserable as possible.

By special verdict, the jury found for the Rosenfelds on all claims. With respect to the claims against the Henions, it awarded each of the Rosenfelds $5,000; and with respect to the claims against Mrs. Diamond, it awarded Mr. Rosenfeld $20,000 and Mrs. Rosenfeld $15,000.

The Henions and Mrs. Diamond moved for entry of judgments notwithstanding the verdict. As to the Henions, the trial court concluded that it should have directed a verdict in their favor at the close of the evidence because "there was insufficient evidence upon which the jury could have rendered a verdict against these Defendants." Accordingly, the trial court entered a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the Henions on all claims. However, the trial court denied Mrs. Diamond's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, as well as her motions for new trial and for a remittitur.

The Rosenfelds have appealed the judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the Henions, and Mrs. Diamond has appealed the judgment against her. She argues that there was no evidence to support the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim and that, therefore, the trial court should have directed a verdict on that claim; that the damages awarded were not supported by the evidence, and were excessive; and that, because the trial court granted a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the Henions, the jury's verdict has become inconsistent. The two appeals have been consolidated.

First, addressing the Rosenfelds' appeal of the trial court's judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the standard of review is as follows:

When, after the entry of a jury verdict, the trial court grants a motion for judgment in accordance with the movant's prior motion for directed verdict, the ruling constitutes a deferred decision on the earlier motion for a directed verdict.... Accordingly, our task in reviewing the propriety of an order granting such a motion is identical to that where an ordinary motion for directed verdict is involved. Presented with such a motion, the court must view all of the evidence in a light most favorable to the non-movant, and, in the face of evidence which is at odds or contradictory, all conflicts must be resolved in favor of the party against whom the motion has been made.... Similarly, every reasonable conclusion which may be drawn from the evidence must also be construed favorably to the non-movant.... Only where there is no evidence upon which a jury could properly rely, in finding for the plaintiff, should a directed verdict be granted.

Collins v. School Board of Broward County, 471 So.2d 560, 563 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985). Applying this standard, we are of the opinion that the trial court correctly granted the Henions a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the conspiracy and the intentional infliction of emotional distress claims.

[1] As to the conspiracy claim, all of the evidence was circumstantial. "[C]ircumstantial evidence is sufficient, if it meets the standards required in civil cases generally, to sustain a verdict for a plaintiff in an action for damages arising out of an alleged conspiracy." Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. Campbell, 306 So.2d 198, 200 (Fla. 1st DCA 1975). However, in a civil case, a fact may be established by circumstantial evidence alone only when the inference sought to be created by such circumstantial evidence outweighs all reasonable inferences to the contrary. Tucker Brothers, Inc. v. Menard, 90 So.2d 908 (Fla.1956). The circumstantial evidence offered to establish a conspiracy to prosecute Mr. Rosenfeld maliciously fails to create such an inference.

[2] As to the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, the facts must be " 'so outrageous in character, and so extreme in degree, as to go beyond all possible bounds of decency.' " Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. McCarron, 467 So.2d 277, 279 (Fla.1985). "[I]t is for the court to determine, in the first instance, whether the defendant's conduct may reasonably be regarded as so extreme and outrageous as to permit recovery." Scheller v. American Medical International Inc., 502 So.2d 1268, 1271 (Fla. 4th DCA 1987). The trial court correctly concluded that, viewed in a light most favorable to the Rosenfelds, as a matter of law, the evidence presented did not satisfy this test.

[3] However, we believe that it was error to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the Henions on the malicious prosecution claims. True, the evidence was in sharp conflict. However, viewed in a light most favorable to Mr. Rosenfeld, there was sufficient evidence from which the jury might conclude, as it did, that the criminal and civil actions instituted by the Henions amounted to malicious prosecution.

We next address Mrs. Diamond's appeal of the judgment entered against her pursuant to the jury's verdict. We agree, first, that the trial court should have directed a verdict in her favor on the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim. While it is true that, viewed in a light most favorable to the Rosenfelds, Mrs. Diamond's conduct *1035 was reprehensible, we do not believe that her conduct can be said to have been " 'so outrageous in character, and so extreme in degree, as to go beyond all possible bounds of decency.' " Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. McCarron, 467 So.2d 277, 279 (Fla.1985). All of the appellate decisions in this State addressing the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress have clearly suggested that it be narrowly construed and applied only when the facts would be sufficient to arouse such overwhelming aversion in the average person that he or she would exclaim, "Outrageous!" No decision has extended this tort to fact situations such as that presented here; nor are we prepared to do so.

[4] Mrs. Diamond argues that, when the trial court granted the Henions a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the conspiracy claim, it created an inconsistency in the verdict because there was no longer anyone with whom she could have conspired. Because we believe that the trial court was correct in its conclusion that there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict against the Henions on the conspiracy claim, it becomes necessary, for purposes of consistency, to likewise conclude that there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict on that claim as to Mrs. Diamond. Therefore, it was error for the trial court to decline to grant a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of Mrs. Diamond on that claim.

[5] We come next to Mrs. Diamond's arguments regarding the amount of damages awarded. There was ample evidence to support the jury's verdict that she had maliciously prosecuted Mr. Rosenfeld. The jury awarded Mr. Rosenfeld $20,000 in damages. We do not find this amount excessive on the facts, despite Mrs. Diamond's argument to the contrary. However, there is another, much more troubling, problem regarding damages. It is created by the form of the verdict.

The verdict form had six questions. The first three related to the claims against Mrs. Diamond, and the last three related to the claims against the Henions; otherwise, the first three questions and the last three questions were identical. Questions 1 and 4 asked whether Mrs. Diamond and the Henions, respectively, had "maliciously and without probable cause institut[e]d or continue[d] or conspire[d] to institute or continue any of the legal proceedings against HERMAN ROSENFELD." The jury answered both questions in the affirmative. Questions 2 and 5 asked whether Mrs. Diamond and the Henions, respectively, had "wrongfully and outrageously inflict[ed] emotional distress on HERMAN ROSENFELD and ROSE ROSENFELD." Again, the jury answered both questions in the affirmative. Finally, questions 3 and 6 asked for "the total amount of damages ... sustained by PLAINTIFFS HERMAN ROSENFELD AND ROSE ROSENFELD" as a result of the actions of Mrs. Diamond and the Henions, respectively. The jury answered question 3 by awarding $20,000 to Mr. Rosenfeld and $15,000 to Mrs. Rosenfeld, and question 6 by awarding $5,000 to Mr. Rosenfeld and $5,000 to Mrs. Rosenfeld.

[6] As we have already indicated, only the malicious prosecution claims of Mr. Rosenfeld against Mrs. Diamond and the Henions should have been presented to the jury. The problem arises because the verdict form does not differentiate between damages awarded for malicious prosecution and damages awarded for intentional infliction of emotional distress, although each claim is distinct and has a separate measure of damages. In a very recent decision involving a similar problem, the Supreme Court has held that, in such a situation, the "two-issue rule" [see Colonial Stores, Inc. v. Scarbrough, 355 So.2d 1181 (Fla.1977)] does not apply, and that reversal is required. First Interstate Development Corp. v. Ablanedo, 511 So.2d 536 (Fla.1987). There, the Supreme Court said:

This rule [i.e., the "two-issue rule"] applies to those actions that can be brought on two theories of liability, but where a single basis for damages applies. For instance, in products liability, the claim can be brought on both negligence and *1036 breach of implied warranty, but the measure of damages for the resulting personal injury is the same. That is not the circumstance in the instant case. Here, the fraud claim for failure to construct a nature trail and the claim for damages because of reduction in value of respondents' properties for the failure to complete the trail is distinct from the claim of diminished property values for the misrepresentation of the project as oceanfront. Each claim is distinct and has a separate measure of damages. Finding liability on one claim does not entitle the respondents to receive the total amount of damages attributable to both theories of liability. We will not presume that petitioners were not prejudiced by the improper submission of the nature trail issue to the jury. Consequently, the jury's compensatory damage award must be reversed.

511 So.2d at 538. Thus, while we do not believe that the awards of $20,000 and $5,000 against Mrs. Diamond and the Henions, respectively, are excessive on the malicious prosecution claims, because First Interstate Development Corp. appears to be on point, we are constrained to remand the malicious prosecution claims against both Mrs. Diamond and the Henions for a new trial on damages.

In summary, regarding the Henions, we affirm the trial court's judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the conspiracy and the intentional infliction of emotional distress claims; reverse the judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the malicious prosecution claims; and remand for a new trial on damages as to the latter claims. Regarding Mrs. Diamond, we reverse the trial court's denial of a directed verdict on the conspiracy and the intentional infliction of emotional distress claims and remand with directions that a judgment be entered in favor of Mrs. Diamond on those claims; affirm the denial of a directed verdict on the malicious prosecution claims; and remand the latter claims for a new trial on damages.

AFFIRMED IN PART; REVERSED IN PART; and REMANDED, with directions.

GUNTHER and STONE, JJ., concur.

ON MOTION FOR REHEARING

WEBSTER, PETER D., Associate Judge.

In its opinion in these two consolidated appeals, filed on August 5, 1987, the Court, inter alia, reversed in part the trial court's judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of appellees Mr. and Mrs. Henion. Reversing the judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the malicious prosecution claims only, we held that, "viewed in a light most favorable to Mr. Rosenfeld, there was sufficient evidence from which the jury might conclude, as it did, that the criminal and civil actions instituted by the Henions amounted to malicious prosecution." Because the special verdict returned by the jury did not segregate damages attributable to the malicious prosecution claims from damages attributable to other claims which should not have been submitted to the jury, we directed that a new trial be held, limited to the issue of damages sustained by virtue of the malicious prosecution.

In their motion for rehearing, the Henions have for the first time brought to the Court's attention the fact that, in addition to their motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict which the trial court granted, they had filed a motion for new trial addressed to all claims, which was not ruled upon by the trial court. They request that we modify our opinion so that, on remand, the trial court will be free to consider and to rule upon their motion for new trial.

The Henions' request appears meritorious. See, e.g., Kilburn v. Davenport, 286 So.2d 241 (Fla. 3d DCA 1973); McCloskey v. Louisville & Nashville R.R. Co., 122 So.2d 481 (Fla. 1st DCA 1960). Accordingly, we are constrained to amend our previous opinion to the extent that, in Rosenfeld v. Henion, Case No. 4-86-1221, on remand the trial court should first consider and rule upon the Henions' motion for new trial. If it decides to deny that motion, it should then proceed with a new trial on the issue of damages only arising from the *1037 malicious prosecution claims, consistent with our original opinion.

We feel that it is appropriate to point out that the preferred approach when granting a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict in an action in which a motion for new trial has also been filed is to alternatively rule upon the motion for new trial as well. Such an approach avoids the need for piecemeal appeals, thereby promoting judicial economy. See Frazier v. Seaboard System R.R., Inc., 508 So.2d 345 (Fla.1987); Ligman v. Tardiff, 466 So.2d 1125 (Fla. 3d DCA 1985); Stupp v. Cone Brothers Contracting Co., 135 So.2d 457 (Fla. 2d DCA 1961).

The Henions have raised an additional point in their motion for rehearing, which we find is without merit and does not require discussion.

The Henions' motion for rehearing in Case No. 4-86-1221 is GRANTED IN PART and the original opinion is modified to the extent that, on remand, the trial court should first consider and rule upon the Henions' motion for new trial.

GUNTHER and STONE, JJ., concur.

511 So.2d 1031, 12 Fla. L. Weekly 1896, 12 Fla. L. Weekly 2302

END OF DOCUMENT

26

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

DIMON INCORPORATED, et ano., Plaintiffs,
v.
FOLIUM, INC., et al., Defendants.

No. 98 Civ. 6732(LAK).

May 3, 1999.

Buyer of stock of corporation sued sellers, and individuals controlling sellers, alleging that it was fraudulently induced to pay too much for corporation by sophisticated accounting scheme that resulted in overstatement of earnings and net worth. Various motions to dismiss were made. The District Court, Kaplan, J., held that: (1) corporation, based in Zimbabwe, had consented to suit in federal district court sitting in New York; (2) court had personal jurisdiction over persons who controlled sellers, living in South Africa, United Kingdom and Zimbabwe; (3) buyer had not signed release precluding suit; (4) information tending to show existence of accounting scheme would be deemed exclusive knowledge of sellers, precluding claim under New York law that buyer had contractually surrendered right to rely on financial condition representation not expressly stated in agreement; (5) buyer stated claim of common law fraud, under New York law; (6) buyer stated claim of negligent misrepresentation, under New York law; and (7) breach of fiduciary duty claim could be made by buyer against controlling persons of sellers who were currently in employ of buyer.

Motions granted in part, denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 392
170Ak392

Failure to grant leave to amend complaint, to add or subtract parties, is an abuse of discretion in absence of prejudice to remaining defendants. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1332.

[2] Federal Courts 306

170Bk306

Court would recognize plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of claims, undertaken in order to provide diversity of citizenship on both sides for jurisdictional purposes, although better practice was to move to drop plaintiff under rule governing misjoinder of parties. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rules 21, 41, 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Federal Courts 95
170Bk95

Corporation incorporated and having its principal place of business in Zimbabwe consented to suit in district court in New York, by signing coordinating agreement, covering sale of its assets and stock of related corporation, which provided for suit in New York for actions arising out of, relating to or contemplated by coordinating agreement, and which further recited that objects of agreement were coordination of related stock and asset purchase agreements.

[4] Federal Courts 86
170Bk86

Federal district court sitting in New York had personal jurisdiction over individuals living in South Africa, United Kingdom and Zimbabwe, in suit alleging breach of contract, fraud and related theories in connection with sale of stock and assets of corporations controlled by them; individuals participated in New York negotiations leading to sales in questions, and there was nexus between subject matter of negotiations and claims raised in suit. N.Y.McKinney's CPLR 302(a), par. 1.

[5] Release 33
331k33

Buyer of stock of corporation was not foreclosed from suing sellers, alleging existence of accounting scheme resulting in overstatement of earnings and net worth of corporation, even though seller signed stock purchase agreement providing for adjustment of sales price in event final net worth of corporation did not reach specified sum, and adjustment was made pursuant to that provision; there was no language in provision consistent with release of all claims, and buyer alleged accounting ruse was unknown at time agreement was signed.

[6] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, even when the parties have executed a specific disclaimer of reliance on a seller's representations, a purchaser may not be precluded from claiming reliance if the facts allegedly misrepresented are peculiarly within the seller's knowledge.

[7] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, rule that party to contract may rely on representations of other party even when there is contractual disclaimer of representations, applies not only when the facts allegedly misrepresented literally were within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant, but also when the truth theoretically might have been discovered, though only with extraordinary effort or great difficulty.

[8] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, degree to which party to contract may rely upon representations of other party, despite contractual disclaimers of liability, when knowledge needed to verify representations is not exclusively under control of defendant but is difficult to obtain, depends upon sophistication of relying party and availability of access to information underlying representation.

[9] Fraud 36
184k36

Buyer of stock of corporation stated reliance element of fraud claim against sellers, under New York law, by alleging misrepresentations as to net worth and earnings of corporation, despite signing stock purchase agreement containing provision disclaiming all representations other than those expressly made in agreement; exception to nonliability due to disclaimer of reliance, when information needed to verify representation was in control of party making representation or was difficult to obtain, was applicable, as extremely sophisticated accounting scheme under which recognition of expenses was avoided was ultimately discovered only after complex computer program was applied to financial statements and corresponding accounting journals.

[10] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Pleading of scienter requirement for common-law fraud, under New York law, can be accomplished by alleging facts tending to show that defendant had both motive and opportunity to commit fraud, or by alleging facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[11] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Buyer of stock of corporation alleged common-law fraud by sellers and their principals under New York law with sufficient particularity; buyer explained in detail undisclosed fraudulent accounting scheme artificially inflating net worth and earnings of corporation, and sellers' and principals' participation in misrepresentations of value, and motive for their conduct was palpable. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[12] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

In order to recover on claim of negligent misrepresentation, under New York law, a plaintiff must establish that (1) the parties stood in some special relationship imposing a duty of care on the defendant to render accurate information, (2) the defendant negligently provided incorrect information, and (3) the plaintiff reasonably relied upon the information given.

[13] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

In order to state claim of negligent misrepresentation arising out of sale of business, under New York law, parties must enjoy a relationship of trust and reliance closer than that of the ordinary buyer and seller.

[14] Fraud 7
184k7

[14] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Requirement for stating claim of negligent misrepresentation under New York law, that there be special relationship between parties, was satisfied in suit by buyer of stock of corporation alleging misrepresentations by sellers with exclusive knowledge of facts showing representations to be false, who accepted buyer's debentures as part payment, and whose representatives assumed some managerial positions with buyer after sale was complete.

[15] Corporations 215
101k215

Buyer of corporation could maintain breach of fiduciary duty claim against employees who formerly controlled corporation, based upon nondisclosure after they became employees of fraud allegedly perpetrated upon buyer prior to sale.

361 Robert Brooks, Robert Merhige, Richmond, VA, Benjamin V. Madison, III, Norfolk, VA, Jack Wilson, III, Richmond, VA, Robert M. Tata, Norfolk, VA, Benita Ellen, Hunton & Williams, Richmond, VA, for Plaintiff.

Charles W. Gerdts, III, Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP, New York City, for Defendant Folium, Inc.

James E. Tolan, Catherine A. Duke, Dechert Price & Rhodes, New York City, for Defendant Blair Investments (Private) Ltd.

Matthew Gluck, Mara Leventhal, Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, New York City, for Defendants Anthony, Charles and Paul Taberer.

John C. Canoni, Whitman Breed Abbott & Morgan LLP, New York City, for Tabacalera S.A.

MEMORANDUM OPINION

KAPLAN, District Judge.

Plaintiff DIMON Incorporated ("DIMON")

and a wholly owned subsidiary purchased all of the stock of Intabex Holdings Worldwide, S.A. ("Intabex") and the assets of Tabex (Private) Limited, now Blair Investments (Private) Limited ("Tabex") in April 1997 for a total of $264,190,000. DIMON now alleges it was fraudulently induced to overpay for the acquisition and brings this action against the sellers for breach of contract, fraud, negligent misrepresentation, civil conspiracy, breach of duty of loyalty and breach of warranty. Defendants in various permutations move to dismiss many of the claims.

Background

In the fall of 1996, the shareholders of Intabex, a leaf tobacco merchant, began efforts to sell their stock in combination 362 with the tobacco assets of Tabex. [FN1] Intabex then was owned 63.6 percent by Folium, Inc. ("Folium"), 31.8 percent by Tabacalera S.A. ("Tabacalera"), and 4.6 percent by Leaf Management Investments Ltd. ("LMI"). Tabex was a wholly owned subsidiary of Folium. [FN2] Folium allegedly is an investment vehicle for the benefit and control of Anthony, Charles and Paul Taberer, [FN3] who allegedly controlled Intabex and Tabex through Folium. [FN4] LMI allegedly held shares of Intabex on behalf of key management within Intabex. [FN5] Tabacalera, according to the complaint, was an outside investor with no relationship to the Taberers external to Intabex.

FN1. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 24.

FN2. Id. ¶¶ 33, 53.

FN3. Id. ¶ 37-39.

FN4. Id. ¶ 39, 53.

FN5. Id. ¶ 52.

In their pursuit of an acquirer, Intabex and Tabex hired the New York investment banking firm, CS First Boston, and provided it with financial information that was used in the preparation of an offering memorandum that was made available to potential buyers.

[FN6] Upon learning that Intabex was on the market, DIMON, an international leaf tobacco merchant based in Danville, Virginia, [FN7] began negotiations to acquire Intabex and the tobacco related assets of Tabex. [FN8] Thus commenced a sequence of meetings and conversations, lasting from October 1996 through the closing of the deal in April 1997, and involving numerous representatives of DIMON, Intabex, Folium, Tabacalera, Tabex, and Anthony and Paul Taberer. [FN9]

FN6. Id. ¶¶ 25, 28, 144.

FN7. Id. ¶¶ 3, 20.

FN8. Id. ¶ 24.

FN9. Id. ¶¶ 161, 166, 173, 174, 178, 182, 185.

The negotiations culminated in a series of agreements: (1) the Stock Purchase Agreement ("SPA") among DIMON and the shareholders of Intabex, (2) the Asset Purchase Agreement ("APA") between Dibrell Brothers Zimbabwe (Private) Limited ("Dibrell"), a wholly owned subsidiary of DIMON, and Tabex, and (3) the Coordinating Agreement ("CA") between and among DIMON, Dibrell, Intabex, Folium, LMI, Tabex and Tabacalera. [FN10] Pursuant to those agreements, DIMON and Dibrell purchased all of the stock of Intabex and the assets of Tabex in April 1997, respectively, for a total of $264,190,000. The purchase price was paid in the form of 1.7 million shares of DIMON common stock, $140 million in 10-year, 6.25% DIMON convertible subordinated debentures, and $86,120,000 in cash.

FN10. Id. ¶ 61; see Brooks Decl. in Support of Prelim. Inj. Exs. A(SPA), B(APA), C(CA).

The complaint asserts that DIMON and Dibrell were tricked into paying more than the stock and assets were worth because the financial statements provided to them did not accurately reflect the financial performance of Intabex. Specifically, DIMON alleges, inter alia, that the Taberers-through their control of Folium and its control of Intabex-operated a carefully masked accounting scheme which led to the overstatement of Intabex's earnings and net worth.

The most critical aspect of the alleged fraud was that certain expenses of Intabex S.A. ZUG ("Intabex S.A."), Intabex's primary trading company [FN11], were debited during the fiscal years 1995-96 and 1996-97 to a so-called "Blank Account" instead of to the appropriate expense accounts, [FN12] thus artificially inflating income and net worth. [FN13] The complaint alleges that Intabex's income for the year ended March 31, 1996 and its net worth at that date consequently were overstated by $22.7 million *363 and $58.7 million, respectively. [FN14] The operation of this Blank Account, according to DIMON, was that it was carefully concealed and discovered only with great effort after the closing of the acquisition.

FN11. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 87.

FN12. Id. ¶ 95.

FN13. Id. ¶ 106.

FN14. Id.

At the outset of this action, DIMON and Dibrell sought damages of more than $110 million for alleged breaches of the SPA and APA, violation of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [FN15] and Rule 10b-5 thereunder, [FN16] violation of the Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), [FN17] common law fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty. Subject matter jurisdiction was alleged to rest on diversity of citizenship and the federal questions presented by the RICO claim. Defendants moved to dismiss the complaint.

FN15. 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b).

FN16. 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

FN17. 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq.

In response to the motions to dismiss, Dibrell took a voluntary dismissal, and DIMON dropped its federal securities law and RICO claims. DIMON filed a second amended complaint which contains six causes of action, with jurisdiction premised exclusively on alienage. [FN18] With the agreement of the parties, the motions to dismiss the earlier pleadings have been deemed applicable to the second amended complaint, and the parties were given an opportunity to brief any new issues raised by that pleading. At this point, Tabex and the Taberers seek dismissal of the entire action as to them. Folium and LMI concede the sufficiency of the indemnification and injunctive relief claims, but seek dismissal of the common law tort claims. The motions now are ripe for decision.

FN18. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(2).

Discussion

Subject Matter Jurisdiction

DIMON is a citizen of Virginia. Dibrell and all of the defendants are aliens. [FN19] Tabex and the Taberer defendants initially maintained that the three causes of action arising under federal statutes were insufficient as a matter of law and that the rest of the case therefore should have been dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, as the presence of aliens on both sides destroys complete diversity.

FN19. Dibrell is incorporated, and has its principal place of business, in Zimbabwe, Am. Cpt. ¶ 5; Folium and LMI are incorporated, and have their principal places of business, in the British Virgin Islands, Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 4, 6; Tabacalera is incorporated, and has its principal place of business, in the Kingdom of Spain, id. ¶ 5; Tabex is incorporated, and has its principal place of business, in Zimbabwe, id. ¶ 7; Anthony C.B. Taberer resides in South Africa, id. ¶ 8; Paul A.B. Taberer resides in the United Kingdom, id. ¶ 9; and Charles M.B. Taberer resides in Zimbabwe, id. ¶ 10.

[1] The presence or absence of jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332 ordinarily is assessed as of the filing of the complaint.

Nevertheless, the rule is not without exceptions, and federal courts have the power to permit the addition or deletion of parties where necessary to preserve jurisdiction. [FN20] Leave is freely granted. Indeed, the failure to grant leave absent prejudice to the remaining defendants is an abuse of discretion. [FN21]

FN20. E.g., Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 109 S.Ct. 2218, 104 L.Ed.2d 893 (1989); Cooper v. Parsky, 140 F.3d 433, 442 (2d Cir.1998).

FN21. E.g., Samaha v. Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York, 757 F.2d 529, 531 (2d Cir.1985).

[2] Here, defendants have failed to show any prejudice from the dropping of Dibrell as a plaintiff. In consequence, while the better course would have been for plaintiffs to move pursuant to Rule 21 to drop Dibrell, [FN22] the Court treats Dibrell's *364 notice of dismissal pursuant to Rule 41 as such an application and grants the motion.

FN22. See Sheldon v. PHH Corp., No. 96 Civ. 1666(LAK), 1997 WL 91280, at *3 & nn. 6-7 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 4, 1997), aff'd, 135 F.3d 848 (2d Cir.1998).

The dismissal of Dibrell leaves DIMON as the only remaining plaintiff. As DIMON's citizenship is diverse from that of all of the defendants, subject matter jurisdiction exists with respect to all of DIMON's claims.

Personal Jurisdiction

Tabex and the Taberers question the existence of personal jurisdiction over them. While DIMON ultimately will bear the burden of establishing in personam jurisdiction, its only obligation at this pleading stage is to demonstrate a prima facie case. [FN23] This it has done.

FN23. E.g., Kernan v. Kurz-Hastings, Inc., 175 F.3d 236, 239-40 (2d Cir.1999).

[3] First, Tabex has consented to suit here.

The CA, in which Tabex irrevocably consented to suit in this Court "for any actions, suits or proceedings arising out of or relating to this Agreement and the transactions contemplated hereby," recites that its objects include coordinating "the performance of the Stock Purchase Agreement and the Asset Purchase Agreement and to provide for certain additional obligations of Tabex ..." [FN24] While Tabex asserts in entirely conclusory fashion that the claims against it "do not relate to, or arise out of, the" CA, [FN25] its argument elides the critical words from the CA clause submitting to jurisdiction. Tabex submitted to jurisdiction in this Court not only with respect to claims relating to or arising out of the CA, but also with respect to claims relating to or arising out of "the transactions contemplated" by the CA. [FN26] DIMON's purchase of the shares of Intabex undeniably was one of the transactions contemplated by the CA.

FN24. CA at 1.

FN25. Blair Mem. 12. In light of the fact that each party now has submitted each motion paper in duplicate, the Court refers to the initial filings simply as "Mem.," and the supplemental filings as "Supp. Mem."

FN26. See CA at 1.

[4] Second, N.Y. CPLR § 302(a), subd. 1, provides in substance that there is personal jurisdiction under New York law with respect to claims arising out of the transaction of business in New York, directly or through an agent, by a non-domiciliary. [FN27] Here, DIMON alleges that the Taberers, through Intabex and Tabex, retained a New York firm, CS First Boston, to market this deal, that the offering memorandum by which the transaction was promoted contained the Taberers' recommendation that the acquirer of Intabex acquire also the assets of Tabex, that important preparations and primary negotiations occurred here, that Anthony and Paul Taberer personally participated in negotiations in New York in their respective corporate capacities and in their own behalf, and that these activities ultimately resulted, among other things, in Anthony Taberer being elected to the DIMON board and Paul and Charles Taberer receiving management positions with DIMON. [FN28]

FN27. N.Y. CPLR § 302(a)(1) (McKinney 1990).

FN28. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 25, 28-32, 147, 166-72.

In these circumstances, DIMON manifestly has alleged that Tabex and the Taberers have transacted business in New York. [FN29] And the question whether the claims arise out of this transaction of business here is not troublesome. The dispositive question is whether there is "some articulable nexus between the business *365 transacted and the cause of action sued upon" [FN30]

FN29. See Kreutter v. McFadden Oil Corp., 71 N.Y.2d 460, 467, 527 N.Y.S.2d 195, 198-99, 522 N.E.2d 40 (1988) (CPLR 302(a)(1) "is a 'single act statute' and proof of one transaction in New York is sufficient to invoke jurisdiction ... so long as the defendant's activities here were purposeful and there is a substantial relationship between the transaction and the claim asserted.").

FN30. Beacon Enterprises, Inc. v. Menzies, 715 F.2d 757 (2d Cir.1983) (quoting McGowan v. Smith, 52 N.Y.2d 268, 272, 437 N.Y.S.2d 643, 645, 419 N.E.2d 321 (1981)).

The essence of the tort claims asserted here against Tabex and the Taberers is that they were culpable participants in a scheme to defraud DIMON in the sale of Intabex shares--a transaction which involved extensive activities, including negotiations, in New York. In particular, DIMON claims that Tabex and the Taberers conspired with others in the effort to misrepresent, or at the very least negligently misrepresented, the financial condition of Intabex and its relationship with Tabex, inducing DIMON to consummate the sale.

"A cause of action can be said to arise from transaction of business in New York when ... the New York business discussions were essential to the birth of the contract and fiduciary relationship that [allegedly] have ... been breached." [FN31] DIMON alleges that was the case here. Plaintiff thus has articulated the requisite connection between its tort claims and the business defendants transacted in New York to ground this Court with personal jurisdiction over these claims. Whether it can prove this at trial remains to be seen, but the allegations are sufficient at this stage of the case.

FN31. National Cathode Corp. v. Mexus Co., 855 F.Supp. 644, 647 (S.D.N.Y.1994) (quoting Nee v. HHM Fin. Serv., Inc., 661 F.Supp. 1180, 1185 (S.D.N.Y.1987)).

The Alleged Release

[5] Folium, LMI and Tabacalera contend that DIMON's entire case "is premised on the assertion that DIMON was induced to pay more for Intabex than Intabex was really worth" and that its case therefore is barred by a 1997 release given in connection with a purchase price adjustment under the SPA. [FN32]

FN32. Folium Mem. 23.

The SPA provided in substance that the purchase price set forth in the agreement would be reduced in the event the final net worth of Intabex was less than $142 million, as adjusted, and set out a procedure pursuant to which a proposed balance sheet would be tendered to DIMON, an opportunity for objections afforded, and any dispute resolved. [FN33] A proposed balance sheet was prepared, DIMON voiced objections, and the parties resolved the dispute by entering into an agreement dated as of August 14, 1997 and denominated Agreement and Amendment No. 1 to Stock Purchase Agreement (the "SPA Amendment"). The SPA Amendment provided for the payment by Folium, LMI and Tabacalera to DIMON of $18,850,000 as well as other consideration. It provided also that "[t]he parties intend and agree that this Agreement shall constitute a full and final settlement with respect to Section 1.05 of the [SPA] regarding payments in respect of the Final Net Worth of [Intabex] and each party waives any and all rights to seek a further adjustment to the Purchase Price based on the Final Net Worth of" Intabex. [FN34] It went on to state that "[n]o claim may be asserted under Article XII of the [SPA] or otherwise by DIMON based on factual allegations made by DIMON to support its proposed net worth adjustments" with certain exceptions not here relevant. [FN35] It is this agreement upon which Folium, LMI and Tabacalera rest their position. There are, however, a number of problems with this contention.

FN33. SPA §§ 1.05, 9.01(a).

FN34. SPA Amend. § 7.01(a).

FN35. Id. §§ 7.01(b), 7.01(c).

Defendants' argument depends in significant part upon the false premise that the outcome of the purchase price adjustment mechanism, whether by compromise or by determination of a contested matter, was, or was intended to be, a determination of "what Intabex was really worth." The purchase price here was a negotiated figure *366 which may or may not have been a function of the accounting book value. While the purchase price was subject to a reduction in the event the accounting book value turned out to be less than a specific amount, the fact that the parties reached an agreement as to the accounting book value thus may have only a tangential bearing on whether DIMON overpaid for the shares of Intabex by reason of the alleged breaches of warranty and fraud. Certainly it cannot be said at this stage that the agreement they reached necessarily forecloses DIMON's present claim. And this conclusion is borne out by the language of the release. The parties agreed only that the SPA Amendment "shall constitute a full and final settlement with respect to Section 1.05 of the [SPA] regarding payments in respect of the Final Net Worth of" Intabex--not that it settled any and all claims relating to the acquisition.

This result is supported also by another line of analysis. While it is well settled that a general release ordinarily bars even claims of which the releasor was unaware when the release was executed, [FN36] the rule is inapplicable in cases of fraud or where the releasee "is silent after becoming aware that the releasor is acting upon a mistaken belief as to a material fact." [FN37] Here the release was limited, not general, and its language did not clearly release claims (a) of which the releasor was unaware, or (b) arising from matters other than the historical book value of the company. Indeed, the second amended complaint clearly relies upon alleged fraud as to a number of matters other than net worth, including the quite different issue of profitability. [FN38] Moreover, to the extent that the second amended complaint relies on misrepresentations as to net worth, it alleges fraud. And although it does not in terms allege that the balance sheet that was tendered following the closing as part of the purchase price adjustment determination was fraudulent, it does allege that the "Blank Account" and other irregularities first were discovered in 1998 and that most of the defendants intentionally misrepresented the financial condition of Intabex to induce DIMON to accept the settlement of the purchase price adjustment. [FN39] Hence, the plaintiff at least implicitly asserts that the final financial statements tendered on behalf of the defendants were fraudulent as well. [FN40]

FN36. E.g., Pickwick Comm., Inc. v. Weinberg, No. 91 Civ. 1642(AGS), 1994 WL 620950 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 8, 1994); Barrett v. United States, 622 F.Supp. 574, 584 (S.D.N.Y.1985), aff'd, 798 F.2d 565 (2d Cir.1986); Lucio v. Curran, 2 N.Y.2d 157, 161-62, 157 N.Y.S.2d 948, 952, 139 N.E.2d 133 (1956); Mergler v. Crystal Prop. Assoc. Ltd., 179 A.D.2d 177, 583 N.Y.S.2d 229 (1st Dept.1992); G.S.C. Holding Corp. v. Cervoni, 69 A.D.2d 809, 810, 415 N.Y.S.2d 57, 58 (2d Dept.), leave to appeal denied, 47 N.Y.2d 710, 419 N.Y.S.2d 1026, 393 N.E.2d 1049 (1979); St. James Church, City of Brooklyn, Rector, Church Wardens & Vestrymen Of v. City of New York, 261 A.D. 614, 617, 26 N.Y.S.2d 762, 764 (2d Dept.1941).

FN37. Barrett, 622 F.Supp. at 584; see also Mangini v. McClurg, 24 N.Y.2d 556, 563, 301 N.Y.S.2d 508, 513, 249 N.E.2d 386 (1969) (inapplicable where fraud alleged); G.S.C. Holding

Corp., 69 A.D.2d at 810, 415 N.Y.S.2d at 58 (same).

FN38. E.g., Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 144-154.

FN39. Id. ¶¶ 82-118, 221.

FN40. The Court notes that the financial statements on the basis of which the purchase price adjustment were to be determined were to be prepared as of the closing date. SPA §§ 1.05, 9.01(a) (definitions of Final Financial Statements and Closing Date). In view of the allegation that Tabex transferred $37 million in cash to Intabex and that Intabex wrote off a payable of $6.5 million owed to Tabex after the closing in order to eliminate the debit balance in the blank account (Sec.Am.Cpt.¶ 114), the clear suggestion is that the balance sheet as of the Closing Date, and hence the final financial statements, overstated the net worth of Intabex as of that date.

In all the circumstances, the situation is too murky to permit dismissal on the basis of the release at this stage of the proceedings.

367 Fraud and Negligent Misrepresentation

Tabex

To begin with, the common law fraud claims brought against Tabex as a principal are insufficient. Tabex is not alleged to have made any material misrepresentations or omissions with regard to Intabex. DIMON merely alleges that the offering memorandum prepared by CS First Boston stated that it "was prepared 'from materials supplied to CS First Boston by Intabex Holdings Worldwide S.A.... and Tabex.'" [FN41] But this is not enough. Representations regarding Tabex's financial condition are irrelevant in light of Dibrell's voluntary dismissal. And apart from the conspiracy theory set forth in the civil conspiracy claim, DIMON has advanced no basis for holding Tabex responsible for the alleged fraud or negligent misrepresentation with respect to Intabex. Accordingly, DIMON's fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims must be dismissed insofar as they are brought against Tabex.

[FN42]

FN41. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 146.

FN42. DIMON fails also to allege sufficiently the requisite special relationship between it and Tabex to support the negligent misrepresentation claim. See Silva Run Worldwide Ltd. v. Gaming Lottery Corp., No. 96 CIV. 3231(RPP), 1998 WL 167330, *11 (S.D.N.Y.1998).

Reasonable Reliance

Folium, LMI and the Taberers seek dismissal of DIMON's claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation on the ground that reasonable reliance is an element of both of these claims and that DIMON cannot establish it.

Section 3.13 of the SPA recited that DIMON had conducted its own review of Intabex. It went on to provide in pertinent part that:

"In entering into this Agreement, [DIMON] has relied solely upon its own investigation and analysis and the representations and warranties contained herein, and [DIMON]

"(a) except as otherwise set forth in this Agreement, acknowledges that none of [Intabex], its Subsidiaries, the Shareholders [Folium, LMI and Tabacalera] or any of their respective directors, offices, employees, Affiliates, agents or representatives makes any representation or warranty, either express or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of any of the information provided or made available to [DIMON] or its agents or representatives prior to the execution of this Agreement; and

* * * * *

"(c) agrees, to the fullest extent permitted by law, that none of [Intabex], its Subsidiaries, the Shareholders or any of their respective directors, officers, employees, Affiliates, agents or representatives shall have any liability or responsibility whatsoever to [DIMON] on any basis (including, without limitation, in contract or tort ...) based upon any information provided or made available, or statements made, to [Intabex] prior to the execution of this Agreement, except that the foregoing limitations shall not apply to [Intabex] or any Shareholder to the extent [Intabex] or such Shareholder makes the specific representations and warranties set forth in this Agreement and in the Disclosure Schedule, but always subject to the limitations and restrictions contained in this Agreement and in the Disclosure Schedule."

In other words, all of those covered by Section 3.13 are protected from liability except to the extent that an individual or entity made specific representations set forth in the SPA. The Taberers allegedly controlled Folium and Tabex, and Folium allegedly controlled Intabex, [FN43] so the Taberers are Affiliates of Intabex and thus within Section 3.13 as well. [FN44]

FN43. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 33-34, 53.

FN44. SPA § 9.01(a), at 33.

DIMON essentially acknowledges that its disclaimer of reliance on any representations *368 other than those made in the SPA forecloses its fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims relating to events prior to the execution of the SPA under Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris [FN45] and Harsco Corp. v. Segui [FN46] unless it can bring itself within some exception to the Danann-Harsco rule. [FN47] It argues, however, that its claim is sufficient on the theory that "even a specific disclaimer will not undermine another party's allegation of reasonable reliance" if the allegedly misrepresented facts "are peculiarly within the misrepresenting party's knowledge." [FN48]

FN45. 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597 (1959).

FN46. 91 F.3d 337 (2d Cir.1996).

FN47. It does not contend that the disclaimer is insufficiently specific to come within Danann.

FN48. Pl. Mem. 14 (quoting Warner Theatre Assoc. Ltd. Partnership v. Metropolitan Life Ins.

Co., 149 F.3d 134, 136 (2d Cir.1998)).

[6] The peculiar knowledge exception to the Danann-Harsco doctrine holds that "even where the parties have executed a specific disclaimer of reliance on a seller's representations, a purchaser may not be precluded from claiming reliance on any ... misrepresentations if the facts allegedly misrepresented are peculiarly within the seller's knowledge" [FN49] It finds its theoretical basis in the premise that "[w]hen matters are ... peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge, ... plaintiff may rely without prosecuting an investigation, as he has no independent means of ascertaining the truth." [FN50] And the inquiry as to whether the defendant has peculiar knowledge of the facts at issue, of course, goes to the reasonableness of the plaintiff's reliance [FN51]-if the plaintiff has the means of learning the facts and disclaims reliance on the defendant's representations, there simply is no reason to relieve it of the consequences of both its failure to protect itself and its bargain to absolve the defendant of responsibility. On the other hand, if the plaintiff has conducted the appropriate due diligence and reasonably believes that it has corroborated the defendant's representations, then a different result may be warranted.

FN49. Tahini Investments, Ltd. v. Bobrowsky, 99 A.D.2d 489, 470 N.Y.S.2d 431, 433 (2d Dept.1984).

FN50. Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Ins. Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1542 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 864, 118 S.Ct. 169, 139 L.Ed.2d 112 (1997) (quoting Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 80 (2d Cir.1980)); see also Tahini, 99 A.D.2d at 490, 470 N.Y.S.2d at 432-33.

FN51. See Lazard, 108 F.3d at 1541.

[7][8] The New York cases recognize that the peculiar knowledge exception applies not only where the facts allegedly misrepresented literally were within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant, but also where the truth theoretically might have been discovered, though only with extraordinary effort or great difficulty. [FN52] As the peculiar knowledge inquiry addresses the reasonableness of a plaintiff's claimed reliance, this makes a good deal of sense; the effort necessary to discover the truth bears on the reasonableness of a plaintiff's reliance on a defendant's statements. [FN53] And the factors relevant to this inquiry include the buyer's (1) level of sophistication and (2) access to the information underlying the alleged misrepresentation. *369 [FN54] While not articulating it in these terms, the case law intimates the need for inquiring into these matters. [FN55]

FN52. See, e.g., Tahini, 99 A.D.2d 489, 470 N.Y.S.2d at 432-33 (reliance arguably justified where plaintiff had no practical way of knowing that purchased land had been used as industrial waste dump); Todd v. Pearl Woods, Inc., 20 A.D.2d 911, 248 N.Y.S.2d 975, 977 (2d Dept.1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 817, 257 N.Y.S.2d 937, 205 N.E.2d 861 (1965) (facts discoverable by review of public records held peculiarly within defendant's knowledge), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 817, 257 N.Y.S.2d 937, 205 N.E.2d 861. 15 N.Y.2d 817, 257 N.Y.S.2d 937, 205 N.E.2d 861 (1965). See also Lazard, 108 F.3d at 1542 & n. 9.

FN53. See Warner Theatre Assoc., 149 F.3d 134 (citing Yurish v. Sportini, 123 A.D.2d 760, 507 N.Y.S.2d 234, 235 (2d Dept.1986)).

FN54. See Grumman Allied Industries, Inc. v. Rohr Industries, Inc., 748 F.2d 729 (2d Cir.1984) (justifiable reliance rejected in light of unfettered access to information and buyer's sophistication to make use of that access).

FN55. In general, the more sophisticated the buyer, the less accessible must be the information to be considered within the seller's peculiar knowledge. See, e.g., Jackson v. State, 210 A.D. 115, 205 N.Y.S. 658 (4th Dept.1924) (although a sophisticated buyer, access was limited); Tahini Investments, 99 A.D.2d 489, 470 N.Y.S.2d 431 (a triable issue of fact whether buyer could have ascertained that industrial waste drums were buried on the property bought); Yurish, 123 A.D.2d 760, 507 N.Y.S.2d 234 (gross receipts of delicatessen business in the peculiar knowledge of sellers where buyer alleged it had "virtually no way of confirming" seller's representations); Todd, 20

A.D.2d 911, 248 N.Y.S.2d 975 (reliance justified notwithstanding that information ascertainable in public records); OnBank & Trust Co. v. F.D.I.C., 967 F.Supp. 81, 86 (W.D.N.Y.1997) (although a sophisticated buyer, a question of fact whether information was made available during due diligence and whether the loan irregularities would have been detected anyway); Patell Indus. Mach. Co., Inc. v. Toyoda Machinery U.S.A., Inc., 880 F.Supp. 96, 98 (N.D.N.Y.1995) (a question of fact whether in peculiar knowledge where substantial cost to fly out to inspect machinery and inspection might not have disclosed problem); Compania Sud-Americana de Vapores, S.A. v. IBJ Schroder Bank & Trust Co., 785 F.Supp. 411 (S.D.N.Y.1992) (information not in seller's peculiar knowledge where plaintiff had access to the information and would have been able to discover the alleged misrepresentations with ordinary due diligence).

[9] This case involves extremely sophisticated parties. DIMON had or had access to the resources and specialized skills necessary to conduct a quite thorough review of the financial records of Intabex and Tabex. Both sides were represented by able counsel who carefully crafted an extraordinarily detailed agreement in which the disclaimer in Section 3.13 obviously reflected bargained-for language agreed to by parties of comparable bargaining power as opposed to boilerplate imposed by a clearly dominant party upon a much weaker one.

It appears also that DIMON had complete access to the books and records of Intabex and Tabex prior to entering into the controlling agreements or, at least, could have declined to go forward with the transactions if such access had been denied. In consequence, it seems reasonable to assume that a sufficiently intensive review prior to the signing of the agreements would have revealed that which was discovered later. But the fundamental question is whether the difficulty of conducting a sufficiently intensive review, given the information otherwise available, was so great that reliance upon the defendants' representations was reasonable notwithstanding the disclaimer.

At first blush, DIMON's sophistication and the theoretical discoverability of the alleged fraud prior to the closing militate strongly in favor of holding that any reliance by DIMON on any oral or written representations by the defendants was unjustified as a matter of law. [FN56] But it must be borne in mind that this is a motion to dismiss, not even a motion for summary judgment. The test here is whether it now can be said with certainty that plaintiff could prove no facts under this pleading that would permit a recovery. [FN57] And it is not clear that that is the case.

FN56. Section 3.13 does not preclude reliance as against Intabex and the selling shareholders (Folium, LMI and Tabacalera) on the representations by each of them, respectively, made in the SPA. But the fraud and negligent misrepresentations claims against the defendants on those counts do not seek recovery for misrepresentations by them in the SPA.

FN57. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957).

The complaint details the manner in which the chief irregularity complained of was discovered after the transaction closed. Under Article XII of the SPA, DIMON was entitled to indemnification from Folium, Tabacalera and LMI through *370 September 30, 1998 for losses resulting from breaches of the representations and warranties in the SPA. [FN58] Following the closing, DIMON embarked on an intensive search for such breaches. During that period, DIMON found that the accounting system of Intabex S.A. allowed entries to be "audited-off." That is, the transaction detail for entries so treated no longer was available for review in the general ledger or in the account analysis. Moreover, the audited-off entries were stored in a data file that was virtually inaccessible without special access codes. [FN59] FN58. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 73, 74. The SPA provided that any losses or liabilities would be set off against $90 million of the convertible debentures. Id. ¶¶ 75, 82.

FN59. Id. ¶ 89.

To understand the purpose and effect of the "audited off entries," DIMON required accounting personnel to review journal entries and other source documents and to reconstruct accounting entries. [FN60] It then contacted the software consultant who had serviced the Intabex S.A. accounting system, and the consultant ultimately was able to restore the entries for certain periods through a complicated computer process. [FN61] The restoration of the general ledger in turn led to the discovery of the so-called Blank Account and to the fact that there had been substantial activity in the account despite the fact that it previously reflected no beginning balance and no activity. [FN62] The activity had been concealed by crediting the Blank Account at the end of each fiscal year in aggregate amounts sufficient to eliminate the debit balance created by charging expenses to that account and recording fictitious debits to supplier payable accounts or customer advance accounts. [FN63] Shortly after the end of each fiscal year, after the outside auditors had completed their work, the Blank Account was "revived" by reversing the March 31 transactions. [FN64]

FN60. Id. ¶ 90.

FN61. Id. ¶ 91.

FN62. Id. ¶¶ 92, 94.

FN63. Id. ¶ 96.

FN64. Id. ¶ 98.

One would expect that the discovery of such a fraud shortly after the closing, if not earlier, would have been inevitable, notwithstanding the measures detailed above, because the large debit balance carried in the Blank Account presumably would have made it impossible to reconcile the reported balance sheet with the general ledger accounts. [FN65] But the complaint details the manner in which this allegedly was avoided. According to DIMON, the Taberers shortly before the closing eliminated the balance in the Blank Account by fraudulently generating accounts receivable from parties related to them.

[FN66] These fraudulent receivables then were "paid" at or about the time of the closing. [FN67] And while these payments eliminated the net worth deficiency that had been created by the defendants' activities, they allegedly were insufficient to avoid the damage complained of because DIMON already had been induced by false and misleading financial statements to pay more for Intabex than it otherwise would have. [FN68]

FN65. See id. ¶ 109.

FN66. Id. ¶ 110.

FN67. Id. ¶¶ 111-14.

FN68. Id. ¶ 114. The principal claim appears to be that the payment of the fraudulent receivables cured the balance sheet shortfall but did not undo the misleading impression as to the profitability of Intabex created by the earlier fraudulent income statements.

In the last analysis this Court must decide if the allegations of the complaint, construed in the light most favorable to DIMON, permit the conclusion that the alleged accounting scheme detailed above was within the peculiar knowledge of the Intabex shareholders. That is, taking into consideration DIMON's level of sophistication *371 and access to the financial records of Intabex, might a trier of fact be permitted to find that it was reasonable for DIMON not to discover the alleged Blank Account fraud?

Defendants argue that Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Insurance Co. [FN69] dictates a negative answer to that question. In Lazard, an insurance company agreed to purchase $10 million of bank debt from a New York investment bank. [FN70] The representative for the buyer orally agreed to the transaction while on vacation after an eleven minute telephone conversation with the seller during which the seller described the contents of a report concerning the securities, a report the buyer never had seen, and told the buyer that it would have to act right away, before the report became public, in order to buy at an advantageous price. [FN71] The Circuit assumed that the buyer was bound upon its oral commitment and, in consequence, that the pivotal report then was within the peculiar knowledge of the seller. [FN72] It nevertheless held, in light of the buyer's sophistication, that the buyer's failure to protect itself by insisting that its examination of the report be made a condition of its obligation to close rendered its reliance unjustified as a matter of law [FN73] noting that:

FN69. 108 F.3d 1531.

FN70. Id. at 1534.

FN71. Id.

FN72. Id. at 1542.

FN73. Id. at 1543.

"[w]here, as here, a party has been put on notice of the existence of material facts which have not been documented and he nevertheless proceeds with a transaction without securing the available documentation or inserting appropriate language in the agreement for his protection, he may truly be said to have willingly assumed the business risk that the facts may not be as represented." [FN74]

FN74. Id. (citing Rodas v. Manitaras, 159 A.D.2d 341, 552 N.Y.S.2d 618, 620 (1st Dept.1990)).

Lazard does not go nearly as far as the defendants contend. Although DIMON, like the buyer in Lazard, was sophisticated and had a duty to protect itself, the cases are not entirely parallel. The buyer in Lazard knew that it was going forward on the basis of the seller's summary of an important report, yet failed to protect itself against the possibility that the representations were false. DIMON, however, allegedly thought it had full access to the information underlying the defendants' representations and that the information corroborated them. Its alleged reliance therefore was not knowingly blind, as was that of the buyer in Lazard. Moreover, unlike the buyer in Lazard, DIMON did seek to protect itself against possible misrepresentations. It bargained for a post-closing adjustment in the event the accounting net worth of Intabex proved to be at variance with the sellers' representations. [FN75] Moreover, it obtained an indemnity from the Intabex shareholders, secured by $90 million in debentures, "for any misrepresentation, breach of warranty or breach of any covenant or agreement contained in" the SPA. [FN76]

FN75. See SPA § 1.05 and Article XII. The Court does not fail to note that the alleged misrepresentations were made by Foliium, Tabex and the Taberers, and that DIMON's protection was against misrepresentations made by Intabex. This, however, is of no moment. As discussed infra, there was, in fact, little distinction in identity between Intabex, Foliium, Tabex and the Taberers.

FN76. Id. § 12.04.

In the last analysis, the facts here cut both ways. On the one hand, DIMON's sophistication, the language and carefully crafted nature of the disclaimer, and the finely honed contractual remedies for breach of warranties and representations offer substantial support for defendants' contention that DIMON knowingly bargained away some of the protections that otherwise might have been available to it, *372 that DIMON did not rely on the alleged misrepresentations and, in any case, that it did not do so justifiably. On the other hand, the allegations, if proved, might permit a trier of fact to find that the fraud was so well concealed that the truth must be regarded as having been within the exclusive knowledge of the defendants notwithstanding DIMON's sophistication and access to the Intabex books. Among other things, the complaint suggests the likelihood that Intabex's 1995 and 1996 financial statements had been audited by Ernst & Young, [FN77] whose apparent failure to detect the scheme lends credence to DIMON's contention that the scheme was so well concealed that DIMON was justified in relying on the information provided to it. Only a more extensive development of the facts will permit a fully informed judgment. As the Court on this record cannot exclude the possibility that plaintiff might prove facts under the current pleading that would entitle it to relief, [FN78] defendants' motion to dismiss these claims must be denied at this stage.

FN77. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 25.

FN78. See, e.g., Conley, 355 U.S. at 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99.

Particularity of Fraud Claims

Folium and the Taberer defendants next contest the particularity with which DIMON has pleaded its common law fraud claims. Specifically, they argue that DIMON has not alleged with particularity any connection between the fraudulent activity and defendants. [FN79] The Court disagrees.

FN79. Folium contends that "DIMON's pleading still provides no specific basis for its allegations that Folium had a role in the alleged fraudulent conduct or any knowledge that any of Intabex's financial information was incorrect." Folium Supp. Mem. 14.

[10][11] Rule 9(b) requires that "the circumstances constituting fraud ... be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally." [FN80] Plaintiffs must provide actual fraudulent statements or conduct and a basis for its allegations of scienter. [FN81] The latter can be accomplished by "(1) alleging facts to show that defendant[] had both motive and opportunity to commit fraud, or by (2) alleging facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness." [FN82] Here, DIMON sufficiently alleges fraud against Folium and the Taberers.

FN80. fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

FN81. E.g., Stevelman v. Alias Research Inc., No. 97-9544, 1999 WL 187646, *4 (2d Cir. Apr.5, 1999); Chill v. General Elec. Co., 101 F.3d 263, 267 (2d Cir.1996) (citations omitted).

FN82. S.Q.K.F.C., Inc. v. Bell Atlantic TriCon Leasing Corp., 84 F.3d 629, 634 (2d Cir.1996).

DIMON has detailed the alleged fraudulent activity regarding Intabex's manipulation of its accounting system [FN83] and the dissemination of the fraudulent financial statements via CS First Boston. [FN84] DIMON alleges also that the Taberers made statements in New York regarding the false financial statements in their capacities as representatives of Folium despite their knowledge of the operation of the Blank Account. [FN85]

FN83. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 73-114.

FN84. Id. ¶¶ 25, 146, 148, 161-65. Defendants argue that they cannot be held responsible for the information in the offering memorandum because of a specific disclaimer of reliance on the first page of the document. This argument fails, at least at this stage, for the reasons discussed above with respect to DIMON's disclaimer of defendants' extra-contractual representations. The Court finds no reason to accord less force to a disclaimer made and signed by DIMON in the SPA than to a disclaimer in CS First Boston's offering memorandum unacknowledged by DIMON.

FN85. Id. ¶¶ 166-172.

Defendants argue that DIMON has alleged nothing more than that they "must have known of alleged Intabex accounting *373 irregularities," [FN86] even assuming as we must that the foregoing allegations are accepted as true. But this simply is not the case. First, DIMON alleges a nexus between the alleged fraud and these defendants, detailing throughout the second amended complaint Folium's control of Intabex, and the Taberers' control of Folium. [FN87] According to these allegations, the Taberers, through Folium, directed the accounting practices detailed above. [FN88] Second, the fraudulent activity alleged here includes the intentional misrepresentation by Folium and the Taberers of "the condition of Intabex Worldwide and its subsidiaries to induce DIMON to purchase the stock of Intabex Worldwide." [FN89] Third, the Taberers motive to engage in the alleged fraud is palpable. In consequence, DIMON has alleged with adequate particularity that Folium and the Taberers engaged in fraudulent activity.

FN86. Folium Supp. Mem. 15.

FN87. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 33-51, 56-59, 107-110.

FN88. Id. ¶¶ 107-08.

FN89. Id. ¶ 220.

Alleged Absence of a Special Relationship

[12] Defendants Folium and the Taberers next move to dismiss DIMON's negligent misrepresentation claim for failure to state a claim. In order to recover on such a claim, a plaintiff must establish that (1) the parties stood in some special relationship imposing a duty of care on the defendant to render accurate information, (2) the defendant negligently provided incorrect information, and (3) the plaintiff reasonably relied upon the information given. [FN90] Defendants, at this stage, do not contest that the information was incorrect and relied upon by plaintiff. The issue is whether a special relationship existed between defendants and DIMON prior to the sale of Intabex.

FN90. E.g., Pappas v. Harrow Stores, Inc., 140 A.D.2d 501, 504, 528 N.Y.S.2d 404, 407 (2d Dept.1988).

[13] The essential aspects of the requisite special relationship, as Judge Walker wrote not long ago, "may not be precisely defined." [FN91] "[T]he parties must enjoy a relationship of trust and reliance 'closer ... than that of the ordinary buyer and seller,' " [FN92] and an "arm's length business relationship is not enough." [FN93] But little more can be said in the way of articulating a rule of broad application; the matter is one "for case-by-case analysis." [FN94] Moreover, at least two cases have found sufficient complaints alleging the existence of a special relationship between buyer and seller in corporate acquisitions involving lengthy negotiations. [FN95]

FN91. Polycast Technology Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., No. 87 Civ. 3297(JMW), 1988 WL 96586, *10 (S.D.N.Y. Aug.31, 1988).

FN92. Id. (citing Coolite Corp. v. American Cyanamid Co., 52 A.D.2d 486, 384 N.Y.S.2d 808, 811 (1st Dept.1976)); see also American Protein Corp. v. AB Volvo, 844 F.2d 56, 63 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 852, 109 S.Ct. 136, 102 L.Ed.2d 109 (1988) (special relationship required for a negligent misrepresentation claim is one that "suggests a closer degree of trust and reliance than that of the ordinary buyer and seller").

FN93. United Safety of Am., Inc. v. Consolidated Edison Co., 213 A.D.2d 283, 623 N.Y.S.2d 591, 593 (1st Dept.1995).

FN94. Polycast, at *10.

FN95. Id.; Delta Holdings, Inc. v. Nat'l Distillers & Chem. Corp., No. 85 Civ. 3439(JFK), 1988 WL 36330 (S.D.N.Y. Apr.11, 1988).

[14] This transaction was more than a simple sale. The parties engaged in lengthy negotiations prior to the acquisition of Intabex in which the defendants allegedly made representations-based on their superior information-regarding Intabex's financial condition. [FN96] Moreover, as *374 part of the purchase price, DIMON issued to the Intabex shareholders $90 million of DIMON convertible subordinated debentures, thus creating at least the possibility of a long-term involvement between the shareholders and DIMON. Paul, Charles and Anthony Taberer received positions of trust within DIMON, thus establishing a continued relationship with DIMON. [FN97] For all these reasons, the Court cannot exclude at this early stage the possibility that the relationship among the parties was sufficient to impose a duty of due care upon the defendants in making representations about the subjects of the transaction. In consequence, the motion to dismiss the negligent misrepresentation claim is denied.

FN96. Polycast Technology Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., No. 87 Civ. 3297(JMW), 1988 WL 96586, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. August 31, 1988) (special relationship existed where extended negotiation period between the parties before purchase of seller's subsidiary, seller vouched for the earnings projections and had superior information regarding the subsidiary throughout the negotiation).

FN97. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 235.

Alleged Breach of Fiduciary Duty

[15] The Taberers next argue that DIMON has not stated a claim for breach of fiduciary duty because they owed DIMON no duty at the time of the alleged breach. [FN98] But DIMON's allegation is not limited to breaches prior to the Taberers' affiliation with DIMON. DIMON alleges that the Taberers breached their fiduciary duties after they became employees of or consultants to DIMON by "failing to reveal to DIMON that the value of Intabex had been overstated and by permitting DIMON to make decisions and filings based on that fraud" even though they were aware of it. [FN99]

FN98. See Paul and Charles Taberer were hired by DIMON, and Anthony Taberer received a seat on DIMON's Board of Directors, following DIMON's acquisition of Intabex. Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶¶ 30-32.

FN99. Pl. Supp. Mem. 15; Sec. Am. Cpt. ¶ 236.

On this record the Court cannot say to a legal certainty that no breach occurred if, in fact, the Taberers withheld knowledge regarding Intabex's accounting system which affected--as plaintiff contends--DIMON's corporate decisions and filings.

The Conspiracy Claim

Defendants' final contention is that DIMON's civil conspiracy claim must be dismissed for failure to state an underlying tort.

New York does not recognize a claim for conspiracy in the abstract. [FN100] Nevertheless, "[a]llegations of conspiracy are permitted ... to connect the actions of separate defendants with an otherwise actionable tort." [FN101] As discussed above, DIMON adequately has pleaded underlying torts against Folium and the Taberers. DIMON alleges also that Tabex conspired and acted in concert with Folium and the Taberers in effectuating those torts. In consequence, this branch of defendants' motion is without merit.

FN100. Alexander & Alexander of New York, Inc. v. Fritzen, 68 N.Y.2d 968, 969, 510 N.Y.S.2d 546, 547, 503 N.E.2d 102 (1986) (citations omitted).

FN101. Id.

Conclusion

In sum, the defendants' motions to dismiss are denied in all respects except that Counts II and III of the second amended complaint are dismissed as to defendant Blair Investments (Private) Ltd.

SO ORDERED.

48 F.Supp.2d 359

END OF DOCUMENT

27

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second
Department, New York.

Frank DIODATO, et al., Respondents,
v.
EASTCHESTER DEVELOPMENT
CORPORATION, et al., Appellants.

May 20, 1985.

Purchasers brought action against development corporation and others to recover damages for fraud in inducement to enter into contract, for breach of that contract, and for specific performance. The Supreme Court, Westchester County, Delaney, J., refused to dismiss fraud claim, and defendants appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that contractual provision concerning purchaser's reliance on vendor's representation could be reasonably interpreted to allow such reliance instead of prohibiting it and, thus, ambiguity was to be construed against party who drafted contract, namely vendor.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 41
184k41

Allegations that defendants falsely promised to equip new residence with elevator at no extra charge and that this misrepresentation was designed to and did in fact induce plaintiffs to sign contract of sale were sufficient to state cause of action to recover damages for fraud in inducement, notwithstanding contractual provision concerning representations of seller.

[2] Vendor and Purchaser 46
400k46

Contractual provision concerning purchaser's reliance on vendor's representation could be reasonably interpreted to allow such reliance instead of prohibiting it and, thus, ambiguity was to be construed against party who drafted contract, namely vendor.

[3] Contracts 155

95k155

Ambiguous clause which appears in contract is to be construed against party who drafted it.

*293 Goodhue Banks Arons & Pickett, Mount Kisco (John L. Arons, Mount Kisco, of counsel), for appellants.

John C. Wirth, Jr., White Plains (Maria Joy Frank, White Plains, of counsel), for respondents.

Before TITONE, J.P., and BRACKEN, RUBIN and LAWRENCE, JJ.

MEMORANDUM BY THE COURT.

In an action, inter 304 alia, to recover damages for fraud in the inducement to enter into a contract, to recover damages for breach of that contract, and for specific performance thereof, defendants appeal, as limited by their brief, from so much of an order of the Supreme Court, Westchester County, entered August 16, 1983, as denied that branch of their motion which was to dismiss the plaintiffs' cause of action to recover damages for fraud in the inducement.

*294 Order affirmed insofar as appealed from, with costs.

[1][2][3] The plaintiffs' allegations that defendants falsely promised to equip their new residence with an elevator at no extra charge, and that this misrepresentation was designed to and did in fact induce plaintiffs to sign a contract of sale, were sufficient to state a cause of action to recover damages for fraud in the inducement. We reject defendants' contention that the fraud action is barred by the following clause which appeared in the contract of sale:

"16. LIMITATION ON REPRESENTATIONS AND PURCHASER'S RELIANCE--Purchaser represents to the Seller that the Purchaser knows, has examined and has investigated to the full satisfaction of the Purchaser the plans or the model (less any displayed EXTRAS) house type and the lot to be sold; that neither the Seller nor any agent, officer, employee or representative of the Seller has made any representation whatsoever regarding the subject matter of this sale or any part thereof or of any matter or thing pertaining thereto, or concerning any right, privilege or license in connection therewith, and the Purchaser in executing, delivering and/or performing this Agreement does not rely upon any statement and/or information except the list of displayed EXTRAS to whomsoever made or given, directly or indirectly, verbally or in writing by advertisement, except the Offering Plan for TOWNHOUSES AT LAKE ISLE ASSOCIATION, INC., incorporated herein by reference. The parties further agree that this instrument contains the entire agreement of the parties and that there shall be no modifications hereof or agreements for changes in construction allowances on account of the purchase price or otherwise, in favor of Purchaser, unless in writing duly signed" (emphasis added).

(Cite as: 111 A.D.2d 303, *304, 489 N.Y.S.2d 293, 294)

Although defendants urge that we interpret this clause as a disclaimer by plaintiffs of any reliance on verbal representations concerning "extras", we find that the clause could also be reasonably interpreted to allow such reliance instead of prohibiting it (i.e., that plaintiffs were entitled to rely on any verbal list of extras). Since it is susceptible to two reasonable interpretations, we find the above clause ambiguous. It is a well-settled rule of law that an ambiguous clause which appears in a contract is to be construed against that party who drafted it, in this *305 case the defendant Eastchester Development Corporation (see, Rentways, Inc. v. O'Neill Milk & Cream Co., 308 N.Y. 342, 126 N.E.2d 271; Interested Underwriters at Lloyds v. Ducor's, Inc., 103 A.D.2d 76, 478 N.Y.S.2d 285; Tougher Heating & Plumbing Co. v. State of New York, 73 A.D.2d 732, 423 N.Y.S.2d 289). Therefore, Special Term properly denied the motion to dismiss plaintiffs' fraud in the inducement claim as a matter of law.

In any event, the purported disclaimer would not inure to the benefit of defendant L'Hommedieu as he was not a party to the contract (see, Wittenberg v. Robinov, 9 N.Y.2d 261, 213 N.Y.S.2d 430, 173 N.E.2d 868). We have reviewed the remaining contentions raised by the defendants and find them to be without merit.

111 A.D.2d 303, 489 N.Y.S.2d 293

END OF DOCUMENT

28

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Second District.

Dorothy DONOFRIO, Appellant,
v.
Pasquale MATASSINI, Robert E. Rodriguez, and Howard Bernstein, Appellees.

No. 85-2726.

Jan. 28, 1987.
Rehearing Denied March 11, 1987.

Shareholder brought action against two other shareholders and purchaser of corporate assets alleging that they conspired to deprive her of the value of her stock. The Circuit Court for Hillsborough County, Ralph Steinberg, J., granted directed verdicts in favor of two other shareholders and purchaser, and appeal was taken. The District Court of Appeal held that: (1) whether two other shareholders and purchaser participated in scheme to deny shareholder any compensation for her interest in corporation was question for jury; (2) trial court erred in concluding that action was time barred because it should have been brought within three years of corporation's dissolution; and (3) shareholder could bring action personally and was not required to bring it as shareholder's derivative suit.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Conspiracy 13
91k13

Conspirator need not take part in planning, inception, or successful conclusion of conspiracy; conspirator need only know of scheme and assist it in some way to be held responsible for all of acts of his coconspirators.

[2] Conspiracy 19
91k19

Existence of conspiracy and individual's participation in it may be inferred from circumstantial evidence.

[3] Conspiracy 21
91k21

Whether two corporate shareholders and purchaser of corporate assets participated in scheme to deny third shareholder compensation for her interest in corporation was question for jury in third shareholder's conspiracy action.

[4] Corporations 630(2)
101k630(2)

In corporate shareholder's action alleging conspiracy to deprive her of value of her stock, trial court erred concluding that suit was time barred because suit had to be filed within three years of corporation's dissolution, as statute providing for three-year limitations period affects only those claims existing prior to dissolution and as shareholder's cause of action accrued after corporation's dissolution. West's F.S.A. § 607.271(5).

[5] Corporations 190
101k190

Shareholder could personally maintain action against two other shareholders for conspiracy to deprive her of value of her stock, and was not required to bring action as derivative suit on behalf of corporation, as at time corporation was dissolved involuntarily by order of Department of State shareholder lacked authority to apply for reinstatement of corporation necessary to institute suit on corporation's behalf.

*1279 Stevan T. Northcutt of Levine, Hirsch, Segall, Northcutt & Hanlon, P.A., Tampa, for appellant.

Pasquale Matassini, pro se.

Thomas A. Smith, Tampa, for appellee Rodriguez.

Michael A. Linsky of Linsky, Reiber & Scruggs, Tampa, for appellee Bernstein.

PER CURIAM.

Appellant Dorothy Donofrio, plaintiff below, seeks reversal of the directed verdicts granted in favor of appellees, defendants in the trial court. Because appellant attacks the trial court's entry of directed verdicts, we review and recite the facts in the light most favorable to her.

Throja, Inc. was a Florida corporation which owned one asset, a parcel of commercial real estate located in Tampa, Florida, encumbered by a first mortgage. Appellant Dorothy Donofrio and appellees Pasquale Matassini and Robert E. Rodriguez each owned one-third of the stock in Throja. They were also sole officers and directors of Throja. Throja's parcel of real estate was leased to Deep South Plantation Foods, Inc., which operated a bar on the premises. The stock in Deep South was owned equally by Matassini, Rodriguez, and Donofrio's husband, James.

In late 1973 and early 1974, discord arose among the parties. James Donofrio had been convicted of a felony, and this resulted in the revocation of Deep South's license to sell alcoholic beverages. Without the liquor license, Deep South was unable to make rental payments to Throja which, in turn, was unable to make the mortgage payments on its property. Additionally, the Donofrios had been unwilling to invest capital or work in either Throja or Deep South throughout the existence of these two corporations.

In June 1974, Matassini and Rodriguez formed Hillsborough Investments, Inc., each owning one-half of the stock and being its sole officers and directors.

In July 1974, Matassini and Rodriguez removed Mrs. Donofrio as a director and officer of Throja. Her removal was admittedly motivated by the desire of Matassini and Rodriguez to exclude her from subsequent transactions. In September of that year, Matassini and Rodriguez caused Throja to sell and Hillsborough Investments to buy the real estate owned by Throja on which Deep South had operated the bar. A total purchase price of $110,000 was agreed upon, which included Hillsborough Investments assuming a $14,000 first mortgage, and executing an $88,000 purchase money second mortgage and a $7,400 unsecured note to Throja.

In October 1974, Throja was involuntarily dissolved for failure to file its annual report with the Secretary of State.

Hillsborough Investments made monthly payments on the mortgage to Throja by depositing the monies into a Throja bank account on which Rodriguez and Matassini were the sole signatories. In February 1976, Matassini and Rodriguez caused Throja to purchase two $5,000 certificates of deposit. Thereafter, Matassini and Rodriguez each obtained a $5,000 personal loan, using Throja's certificates of deposit as collateral. These loans were not repaid, and on April 1, 1976, the bank redeemed the certificates of deposit.

In March 1976, Rodriguez sold his shares in Deep South, Throja, and Hillsborough Investments to appellee Howard Bernstein. Bernstein replaced Rodriguez as a director and officer in the three corporations. Thereafter, Hillsborough Investments ceased making payments on its mortgage to Throja. On April 2, 1976, Matassini withdrew about $4,300 which remained in Throja's bank account.

*1280 As a part of the transaction to purchase the corporate shares from Rodriguez, Bernstein approached Joseph Licata, Jr., who is not a party to this appeal. Licata agreed to transfer a liquor license he owned to the property and operate a bar with Bernstein and Matassini. These three then proceeded to arrange for the purchase of the property from Hillsborough Investments. Bernstein had been under the impression that Matassini and Rodriguez were to "take care of" the mortgage to Throja so that Hillsborough Investments would own the real estate free and clear of any obligations. He agreed to complete the purchase provided he could review a title binder. Because the title binder reflected Throja's mortgage as an encumbrance against the property, it was necessary to obtain a satisfaction of that mortgage before Bernstein and Licata would agree to proceed with the transaction. A satisfaction of mortgage was presented by Bernstein and executed on behalf of Throja by Matassini and Rodriguez as its officers. At this point, Rodriguez was apparently no longer an officer of Throja, although he had not yet received remuneration from Bernstein for his shares in Deep South, Throja, and Hillsborough Investments. Later, Rodriguez, on advice of counsel, marked this satisfaction "void," and on April 15, 1976, Matassini executed a new satisfaction as president of Throja. Bernstein witnessed Matassini's signature on the second satisfaction. Bernstein was aware that no money was paid to Throja in exchange for the satisfaction.

On April 20, 1976, Matassini and Bernstein caused Hillsborough Investments to transfer the real estate to Bernstein and his wife, Licata and his wife, and Matassini's son in trust for Matassini. The property was valued at $225,000 for purposes of the sale; however, Bernstein and Matassini paid no consideration. Licata paid $25,000 in cash and transferred his liquor license to the property. The cash was apparently used for repair and improvement of the bar. The owners began operating a bar on the property but it failed, and the property was eventually sold to a third party for $225,000. Net proceeds from this sale were divided among Matassini, the Bernsteins, and the Licatas.

The net effect of the series of transactions was that Mrs. Donofrio, who retained a one-third interest in Throja, received nothing.

Mrs. Donofrio was unaware of these events until 1977. In November of that year, more than three years after dissolution of Throja, she filed her lawsuit for compensatory and punitive damages, alleging the existence of a conspiracy to deprive her of the value of her stock in Throja, and seeking imposition of an equitable lien against the property to compensate her for her losses.

Following several amendments to the initial complaint, the case came on for jury trial in 1985 on the conspiracy theory. [FN1] At the conclusion of Mrs. Donofrio's case, the trial judge granted a directed verdict in favor of Bernstein on the ground that there was insufficient evidence to show his participation in the alleged conspiracy. Rodriguez and Matassini rested without presenting any evidence. The trial judge granted directed verdicts in their favor on the theory that Mrs. Donofrio's suit was actually a stockholder's derivative claim that by law should have been filed within three years of Throja's dissolution. The judge further ruled that the evidence was insufficient to show Rodriguez and Matassini participated in any alleged conspiracy. On this appeal, Mrs. Donofrio challenges the trial court's entry of these directed verdicts.

FN1. The property was sold to a third party while the lawsuit was pending. Therefore, the equitable lien theory was not tried.

Mrs. Donofrio argues that there was sufficient evidence of appellees' participation in the alleged scheme to render her Throja stock worthless to withstand their motions for directed verdict. Additionally, she asserts that she has a personal cause of action against appellees which was timely filed. We agree with her contentions.

We believe the trial court erred in granting motions for directed verdict on the evidence. *1281 Matassini admitted that the reason for removing Mrs. Donofrio as an officer and director of Throja was to force her and her husband out of the business. Hillsborough Investments was created by Matassini and Rodriguez to eliminate any interest the Donofrios had in the bar operated on the premises. Rodriguez and Matassini secured personal loans collateralized by certificates of deposit owned by Throja, resulting in Throja assets being used to pay their personal debts. Moreover, Matassini withdrew the balance of funds remaining in Throja's bank account.

A jury could infer that Rodriguez signed the satisfaction of the Throja mortgage to defraud Mrs. Donofrio in order to receive payment from Bernstein. In addition, Matassini attempted to justify his signing the satisfaction of mortgage on behalf of Throja without receiving consideration by saying he was only getting even with the Donofrios for the loss of Deep South's liquor license and resulting failure of that business.

Turning to the claim against Bernstein, the evidence is conflicting concerning his participation in the alleged conspiracy. Reviewing the evidence in the light most favorable to Mrs. Donofrio, Bernstein testified that at the time he became an officer, director, and stockholder in Throja he was aware of the existence of a controversy between the Donofrios and Matassini and Rodriguez. Matassini told Bernstein that the satisfaction of mortgage was being recorded without consideration to Mrs. Donofrio because of the economic loss to Deep South caused by Mr. Donofrio. Bernstein acted to help secure the satisfaction of mortgage. Thus, there was evidence that Bernstein had direct knowledge of the scheme to deprive Throja of its sole asset which would effectively render Mrs. Donofrio's shares in Throja worthless and that he participated in the scheme. Furthermore, as a result of the satisfaction being issued, Bernstein received an interest in the property unencumbered by the Throja mortgage.

[1][2][3] From the evidence presented, a jury could infer Bernstein, Matassini, and Rodriguez participated in a scheme to deny Mrs. Donofrio any compensation for her interest in Throja. A conspirator need not take part in the planning, inception, or successful conclusion of a conspiracy. The conspirator need only know of the scheme and assist in it in some way to be held responsible for all of the acts of his coconspirators. Karnegis v. Oakes, 296 So.2d 657 (Fla. 3d DCA 1974), cert. denied, 307 So.2d 450 (Fla.1975). The existence of a conspiracy and an individual's participation in it may be inferred from circumstantial evidence. Northwestern National Insurance Co. v. General Electric Credit Corp., 362 So.2d 120 (Fla. 3d DCA 1978), cert. denied, 370 So.2d 459 (Fla.1979).

When ruling on a motion for directed verdict, the trial court must evaluate the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and must indulge all inferences in that party's favor. Cutchins v. Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co., 101 So.2d 857 (Fla.1958); see Reinhart v. Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Co., 422 So.2d 41 (Fla. 2d DCA 1982), petition for review denied, 431 So.2d 989 (Fla.1983). Based on the evidence recited above, we believe Mrs. Donofrio's case was sufficient to withstand appellees' motions for directed verdict grounded on insufficiency of the evidence.

We next address the issue of whether Mrs. Donofrio's action was time barred. As a starting point, we deem her cause of action to have accrued in April 1976. It was then that Throja suffered a loss of the certificates of deposit and corporate funds withdrawn by Matassini, and the satisfaction of mortgage was executed. This latter event caused Throja's interest in the property, which was the corporation's only asset, to vanish and Mrs. Donofrio's stock to be rendered valueless.

The trial court ruled that the suit was time barred on the basis of section 607.297, Florida Statutes (1985), which provides:

The dissolution of a corporation either:

- (1) By the issuance of a certificate of dissolution by the Department of State;
- (2) By a decree of court; or
- (3) By expiration of its period of duration

*1282 shall not take away or impair any remedy available to or against such corporation or its directors, officers, or shareholders for any right or claim existing, or any liability incurred, prior to such dissolution if action or other proceeding thereon is commenced within 3 years after the date of such dissolution. Any such action or proceeding by or against the corporation may be prosecuted or defended by the corporation in its corporate name. The shareholders, directors, and officers shall have power to take such corporate or other action as shall be appropriate to protect such remedy, right, or claim. If such corporation was dissolved by the expiration of its period of duration, such corporation may amend its articles of incorporation at any time during such period of 3 years so as to extend its period of duration.

[4] This statute by its terms affects only those claims existing prior to dissolution. As we have observed, Mrs. Donofrio's cause of action accrued in April 1976 when corporate irregularities occurred, which was long after dissolution of the corporation. Consequently, the trial court erred in concluding that Mrs. Donofrio's suit had to have been filed within three years of dissolution of the corporation.

[5] The trial court ruled that Mrs. Donofrio's claim was in the nature of a shareholder's derivative suit and should have been brought on behalf of the corporation. We agree that it was a corporate cause of action. See Alario v. Miller, 354 So.2d 925 (Fla. 2d DCA 1978). Throja, however, was dissolved in 1974, and to have instituted suit on behalf of it, it would have been necessary to reinstate the corporation. See Cosmopolitan Distributors, Inc. v. Lehnert, 470 So.2d 738 (Fla. 3d DCA 1985), review denied, 486 So.2d 596 (Fla.1986). Section 607.271(5), Florida Statutes (Supp.1984), provides that any corporation dissolved involuntarily by order of the Department of State "may be reinstated by the Department of State at any time upon approval of an application for reinstatement signed by an officer or director of the dissolved corporation." At the time of Throja's dissolution, Mrs. Donofrio was neither an officer nor a director, having been earlier removed from those positions by Rodriguez and Matassini. Therefore, she had no authority to apply for reinstatement of Throja. Consequently, we hold that Mrs. Donofrio could personally maintain the claim. To rule otherwise would leave Mrs. Donofrio without a remedy and allow Matassini and Rodriguez to take advantage of their removing Mrs. Donofrio as an officer and director of Throja.

We reverse the trial court's judgment and remand for further consideration consistent with this opinion.

GRIMES, A.C.J., and SCHEB and LEHAN, JJ., concur.

503 So.2d 1278, 12 Fla. L. Weekly 427

END OF DOCUMENT

29

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

EED HOLDINGS, Plaintiff,
v.
PALMER JOHNSON ACQUISITION CORP.
and Andrew J. McKelvey, Defendants.

No. 04 Civ. 0505(RWS).

Oct. 20, 2004.

Friedman, Wittenstein & Hochman, New York, NY, By: Stuart I. Friedman, Ivan O. Kline, for Plaintiff, of counsel.

Levi Lubarsky & Feigenbaum, New York, NY, By: Steven B. Feigenbaum, for Defendants, of counsel.

OPINION

SWEET, J.

*1 The defendants Palmer Johnson Acquisition Corp. ("PJAC") and Andrew J. McKelvey ("McKelvey") (collectively the "Defendants") have moved under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) and 9(b) to dismiss the complaint of plaintiff EED Holdings ("EED") against McKelvey and under Rule 12(b)(2), Fed.R.Civ.P., to dismiss the claim against PJAC for lack of jurisdiction, and, alternatively, under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a) to transfer the claim to the Eastern District of Wisconsin. For the reasons set forth below, the motion to dismiss the claims against McKelvey is granted in part and denied in part. The motion to dismiss PJAC for lack of jurisdiction is denied with leave to move for summary judgment after jurisdictional discovery.

I. Prior Proceedings

This diversity action was filed on January 22, 2004. On that day, a complaint was filed against defendants McKelvey and PJAC by EED, a Cayman Island corporation whose chief asset is a Cayman Island flag vessel. The above-referenced motions were heard and marked as fully submitted on June 2, 2004.

II. Facts Alleged In The Complaint

The allegations of the complaint, which are accepted as true for the purpose of these motions, describe the relationship of the parties and the nature of the dispute.

For several decades prior to 2000, Palmer Johnson, Inc. ("PJI") constructed yachts in Wisconsin. (Compl.¶ 7). In 2000, McKelvey formed PJAC, and on September 29, 2000, PJAC acquired 100% of the stock of PJI and two other Palmer Johnson companies (the "PJAC Acquisition"). (Compl.¶ 8). McKelvey has at all times been the sole shareholder and director of PJAC. (Compl.¶ 9).

For some time prior to the PJAC Acquisition, PJI had experienced considerable financial and operating difficulties. (Compl.¶ 8). Following the acquisition, PJI's condition worsened. PJI incurred operating losses in the amounts of approximately $1.7 million during the last three months of 2000, and $8.5 million during 2001. (Compl.¶ 11). In addition, during 2001, PJI was required to recognize a loss of approximately $12.4 million, consisting of 100% of its goodwill, so that PJI's total loss for 2001 was approximately $20.9 million. (Compl.¶ 11).

In the spring of 2001, Marc Goldman ("Goldman"), the sole owner of EED, met with McKelvey at the New York Yacht Club in Manhattan. Goldman, who was considering several yacht construction companies, discussed with McKelvey the type of yacht he wanted. (Compl.¶¶ 13, 14). McKelvey was then aware that PJI was undercapitalized, was facing significant financial difficulties, and would not be able to properly perform under a yacht construction agreement. (Compl.¶ 15). Nonetheless, in order to convince Goldman to contract with PJI, McKelvey spoke at length about the attributes of PJI, and specifically stated that it had the capability and wherewithal to properly construct in a timely manner the yacht Goldman sought. (Compl.¶

14). McKelvey also assured Goldman that PJI would be building the "greatest boats" and that he was personally "committed to PJI." Id. In reliance on these representations, Goldman decided to have EED contract with PJI. (Compl.¶ 16).

*2 EED entered into a Yacht Construction and Sale Agreement (the "Construction Agreement") with PJI on August 3, 2001, pursuant to which PJI agreed to construct and deliver to EED, on or before November 30, 2002, an aluminum alloy motor yacht (the "Yacht") in accordance with specifications and plans for a fixed price of $10,785,000. The Construction Agreement provided that if PJI failed to complete the Yacht on time, it would owe EED liquidated damages of $2,000 per day for each day of delay in delivery of the Yacht, beginning on the thirty-first day following the due date. (Compl.¶ 16).

The Construction Agreement contained a number of warranties by PJI, including a warranty to repair or replace any defects in workmanship and/or materials for a period of thirty-six months following delivery of the Yacht, and warranties with respect to the speed of the Yacht. (Compl.¶ 17). The Construction Agreement further provided for the sale of an existing yacht (the "Interim Vessel") to EED for use while the Yacht was being constructed. (Compl.¶ 18). EED paid $2.2 million to PJI for the Interim Vessel, which was delivered to EED after execution of the Construction Agreement. (Compl.¶ 18). The Construction Agreement provided that EED would return the Interim Vessel for repurchase by PJI when the Yacht was complete or near completion, and EED would thereupon receive a $2.2 million credit to be applied to the last several payments by EED to PJI for the Yacht. (Compl.¶ 18).

In order to further induce EED to contract with PJI, PJAC executed a Parent Guaranty dated August 3, 2001 (the "Guaranty"), pursuant to which PJAC unconditionally and irrevocably guaranteed to EED the performance of, and compliance with, all obligations, covenants, warranties, and undertakings of PJI in the Construction Agreement. (Compl.¶ 19). The Guaranty provided that PJAC's liability to EED would not be affected as a result of any agreement entered into by EED and PJI, or by the cessation for any reason of the liability of PJI to EED, other than through completion and delivery of the Yacht pursuant to the Construction Agreement. Id.

After a number of months, PJI fell behind on its performance. (Compl.¶ 20). By the end of 2002, PJI was in default on various obligations under the Construction Agreement, and by early 2003, it was unable to continue to work on the Yacht without EED making additional payments not owed under the terms of the Construction Agreement. (Compl.¶ 21).

In February 2003, a representative of PJI advised Goldman that PJI would likely soon be in bankruptcy, and suggested that EED agree to immediately accept title to the Yacht, release PJI from further obligations under the Construction Agreement, and then contract with PJI to continue work on the Yacht on a time and material basis. (Compl.¶ 22). To effectuate this, EED assigned all of its rights, title, and interest in and to the Construction Agreement to MG Vessel Construction LLC ("MG Vessel"), a limited liability company owned by Goldman (Compl.¶ 23), and PJI transferred title to the Yacht to MG Vessel in satisfaction of its obligations to MG Vessel under the Construction Agreement. (Compl.¶ 24). Notably, PJAC consented to the assignment, acknowledged and agreed that PJI was in default under the Construction Agreement, and irrevocably agreed that the Guaranty would remain "in full force and effect." (Compl.¶ 23).

*3 On March 6, 2003, an involuntary petition under the Bankruptcy Code was filed against PJI in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin. (Compl.¶ 25). MG Vessel thereafter contracted with PJI for the completion of the Yacht on a time and material basis, with MG Vessel making certain payments to PJI and other payments directly to third party vendors. (Compl.¶ 26). In late April 2003, the Yacht, although still not completed, was floated at Sturgeon Bay, and brought to a facility in Michigan for further work by PJI. On or about July 1, 2003--approximately six months after the completion date in the Construction Agreement as extended by change orders--MG Vessel took possession of the Yacht from PJI in Michigan, though additional work was still required. (Compl. ¶ 27). [FN1]

FN1. MG Vessel subsequently transferred title to the Yacht to EED and assigned to EED its rights under the Guaranty. (Compl. ¶ 33).

Because of PJI's financial condition, it was not able to accept the return of the Interim Vessel and provide a credit to EED or MG Vessel in the amount of $2.2 million as provided in the Construction Agreement. (Compl. ¶ 28). Instead, EED was forced to retain possession of the Interim Vessel, and incurred additional expenses in connection therewith after it had the use of the Yacht. Id. In December 2003, EED was able to sell the Interim Vessel, but for less than half of the $2.2 million credit that was to have been provided by PJI. (Compl. ¶ 29).

The Yacht, as delivered, failed to meet certain specifications and warranties in the Construction Agreement, including some for which the agreement provides liquidated damages. PJI has also not complied with its warranty for the repair of defects, thereby requiring EED to make further payments to third parties. (Compl. ¶ 30). As a result of PJI's numerous breaches, including those related to the Interim Vessel, EED has incurred damages in excess of $2.45 million. (Compl. ¶¶ 31, 32).

III. Discussion

Four causes of action have been asserted by EED in the complaint: (1) a breach of guaranty claim against PJAC (Compl. ¶¶ 35-39), (2) a claim of piercing the corporate veil and alter ego liability against McKelvey (Compl. ¶¶ 40-46), (3) a fraud claim against McKelvey, (Compl. ¶¶ 47-50), and (4) a negligent misrepresentation claim against McKelvey (Compl. ¶¶ 51-53).

As stated above, defendants PJAC and McKelvey have moved under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) and 9(b) to dismiss EED's complaint against McKelvey and under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(2) to dismiss the claim against PJAC for lack of jurisdiction, and, alternatively, under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a) to transfer the claim to the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

A. Standard of Review

A motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12 must be denied "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236 (1974) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957)). For purposes of a Rule 12 motion, all well pleaded allegations are accepted as true, and all inferences are drawn in favor of the pleader. Mills v. Polar Molecular Corp., 12 F.3d 1170, 1174 (2d Cir.1993).

B. Dismissal Of PJAC For Lack Of Personal Jurisdiction Denied

*4 Co-defendant PJAC has moved for dismissal of EED's contract claim against it on the grounds that this Court lacks personal jurisdiction over PJAC. In a diversity action, the law of the state in which the district court sits governs personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant. Fed.R.Civ.P. 4(k)(1)(A), United States v. First National City Bank, 379 U.S. 378, 381-82 (1965). Here, EED argues that the defendants are amenable to suit under New York's corporate presence doctrine and under its long arm statute. See N.Y. C.P.L.R. §§ 301, 302(a)(1). [FN2]

FN2. For the reasons discussed below, it is not necessary to consider EED's argument that personal jurisdiction exists because PJAC is merely McKelvey's alter ego.

1. Corporate Presence Doctrine

Pursuant to caselaw codified by section 301 of New York's Civil Practice Law and Rules ("CPLR"), an unlicensed foreign corporation is subject to the general personal jurisdiction of the courts of New York if such corporation is "doing business" in the state. See Landoil Resources Corp. v. Alexander & Alexander Servs., Inc., 77 N.Y.2d 28, 33, 563 N.Y.S.2d 739, 741, 565 N.E.2d 488, 490 (1990); accord Wiwa v. Royal Dutch Petroleum Co., 226 F.3d 88, 95 (2d Cir.2000). A defendant corporation is deemed to be "doing business" in New York if it has engaged in "such a continuous and systematic course of [business] here that a finding of its 'presence' in this jurisdiction is warranted[.]" Landoil, 77 N.Y.2d at 33, 563 N.Y.S.2d at 741, 565 N.E.2d at 490 (citing Laufer v. Ostrow, 55 N.Y.2d 305, 309-310, 449 N.Y.S.2d 456, 458, 434 N.E.2d 692, 694 (1982); Delagi v. Volkswagenwerk AG, 29 N.Y.2d 426, 430-31, 328 N.Y.S.2d 653, 655-56, 278 N.E.2d 895, 896 (1972); Frummer v. Hilton Hotels Int'l, 19 N.Y.2d 533, 536, 281 N.Y.S.2d 41, 43, 227 N.E.2d 851, 853 (1967).

PJAC argues that it cannot be found to have been "doing business" in New York because it possessed "none of the factors indicative of presence" in New York. Mareno v. Rowe, 910 F.2d 1043, 1046 (2d Cir.1990). That is, PJAC states that it had no offices, employees, banking accounts, or activities in the state. Furthermore, PJAC argues that McKelvey merely resided in New York during the relevant time period, and that such conduct is insufficient, as a matter of law, to support a finding that PJAC was doing business in-state. See Fremay, Inc. v. Modern Plastic Mach. Corp., 15 A.D.2d 235, 241-42, 222 N.Y.S.2d 694, 700-01 (1st Dept.1961) (holding that for the purpose of determining whether defendant corporation was doing business in New York, it was of "no particular moment" that (1) the defendant's corporate officers resided in New York and (2) that such officers used their personal offices for incidental transactions relating to their status as officers/investors.)

EED argues that it has made a prima facie showing that PJAC was "doing business" in New York by its allegations that McKelvey, PJAC's sole shareholder and director, lives and works in New York. EED argues that under applicable corporate law, Del. CODE ANN. tit. 8 § 141(a) (2004), the responsibility for managing PJAC's affairs rests with its board of directors. Since McKelvey was PJAC's only director, EED argues, PJAC was necessarily managed in New York, thereby subjecting it to New York's corporate presence doctrine.

2. Long Arm Jurisdiction

*5 CPLR section 302(a)(1) gives the courts of New York personal jurisdiction over a cause of action involving a nondomiciliary defendant who, in person or through an agent, "transacts any business within the state [,]" provided that the cause of action arises from such transaction. For the purpose of determining whether a given foreign corporation defendant transacted business in New York, "what counts is not the quantity of contacts with New York, but rather the nature and quality of the contacts." Lawrence Wissner & Co., Inc. v. Slender You, Inc., 695 F.Supp. 1560, 1563 (S.D.N.Y.1988). This inquiry focuses on whether the defendant " 'engaged in some purposeful activity [here] ... in connection with the matter in suit.' " Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc. v. Franklyn, 26 N.Y.2d 13, 16, 308 N.Y.S.2d 337, 340, 256 N.E.2d 506, 507 (1970) (quoting Longines-Wittnauer Watch Co. v. Barnes & Reinecke, 15 N.Y.2d 443, 457, 261 N.Y.S.2d 8, 18-19, 209 N.E.2d 68, 75 (1965)).

With respect to long arm jurisdiction, EED argues that the Court must conclude, for the purposes of this motion, that PJAC transacted business in New York because (1) McKelvey, who is alleged to live and work in New York, approved the Guaranty and (2) the initial discussions between McKelvey and Goldman concerning the Construction Agreement occurred in-state at the New York Yacht Club. In opposition, PJAC argues that EED has failed to allege that PJAC transacted any business related to the Guaranty in New York. In particular, PJAC states that McKelvey and Goldman did not discuss the possibility of a PJAC guaranty during the course of their 2001 meeting at the New York Yacht Club.

3. Jurisdictional Discovery Is Warranted

It is well established in this circuit that prior to discovery, plaintiff can avoid Rule 12(b)(2) dismissal by making a prima facie showing that personal jurisdiction exists. Jazini by Jazini v. Nissan Motor Co., 148 F.3d 181, 184 (2d Cir.1998) (quoting Ball v. Metallurgie Hoboken-Overpelt, S.A., 902 F.2d 194, 197 (2d Cir.1990)); Hoffritz for Cutlery, Inc. v. Amajac, Ltd., 763 F.2d 55, 57 (2d Cir.1985).

Based on the properly-pleaded allegations contained in the complaint, which this Court must accept as true for the purpose of this motion, EED appears to have made a prima facie showing that PJAC either (1) was doing business in New York pursuant to CPLR section 301 or (2) transacted business in New York pursuant to CPLR section 302(a)(1).

In light of the foregoing, it is appropriate to deny PJAC's 12(b)(2) motion and to grant EED's request for jurisdictional discovery. Once jurisdictional discovery is completed, PJAC may choose to move for summary judgment, pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 56, for lack of personal jurisdiction.

C. The Veil Piercing/Alter Ego Claim Is Dismissed

The New York Court of Appeals [FN3] has described the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil:

FN3. Although the law of the state of incorporation, here Delaware, ordinarily governs whether to disregard the corporate form, New York and Delaware law on that issue are substantially similar. See Harrison v. NBD Inc., 990 F.Supp. 179, 184 (E.D.N.Y.1998) (stating that a plaintiff asserting a veil-piercing claim under Delaware law must show "that the controlling corporation wholly ignored separate status of controlled corporation and so dominated and controlled its affairs that separate existence was a sham.")

The doctrine ... is typically employed by a [claimant] seeking to go behind the corporate existence in order to circumvent the limited liability of the owners and to hold them liable for some underlying corporate obligation [citations omitted]. The concept is equitable in nature and assumes the corporation itself is liable for the obligation sought to be imposed [citation omitted]. Thus, an attempt of a [claimant] to pierce the corporate veil does not constitute a cause of action independent of that against the corporation; rather it is an assertion of facts and circumstances which will persuade the court to impose the corporate obligation on its owners [citation omitted].

*6 Matter of Morris v. New York State Dep't of Taxation and Fin., 82 N.Y.2d 135, 140-41, 603 N.Y.S.2d 807, 810, 623 N.E.2d 1157, 1160 (1993). The Second Circuit has stated that veil piercing is a narrow exception to the doctrine of limited liability for corporate entities, and that courts should permit veil-piercing only under "extraordinary circumstances." Murray v. Miner, 74 F.3d 402, 404 (2d Cir.1996).

Under New York law, a party seeking to pierce the corporate veil must generally show that: "(1) the owners exercised complete domination of the corporation in respect to the transaction attacked; and (2) that such domination was used to commit a fraud or wrong against the plaintiff which resulted in plaintiff's injury." Matter of Morris, 82 N.Y.2d at 141, 603 N.Y.S.2d at 810-11, 623 N.E.2d at 1160-61 (1993). The New York Court of Appeals has held that both of these elements must be established in order to justify application of the veil-piercing doctrine. See TNS Holdings, Inc. v. MKI Secs. Corp., 92 N.Y.2d 335, 339, 680 N.Y.S.2d 891, 893, 703 N.E.2d 749, 751, 703 N.E.2d 749, 751 (1998) ("Evidence of domination alone does not suffice without an additional showing that it led to inequity, fraud or malfeasance.") (citing Matter of Morris, 82 N.Y.2d 135 at 140-41, 603 N.Y.S.2d 807 at 810, 623 N.E.2d at 1160).

In this district, veil-piercing claims are subject to the pleading requirements imposed by Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(a), which requires only "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." See Rolls-Royce Motor Cars, Inc. v. Schudroff, BBS, 929 F.Supp. 117, 122 (S.D.N.Y.1996); see also In re Currency Conversion Fee Antitrust Litig., 265 F.Supp.2d 385, 426 (S.D.N.Y., 2003) ("[W]here ... veil-piercing claims are not based on allegations of fraud, the liberal 'notice pleading' standard of Rule 8(a) applies.") To avoid dismissal, a party seeking application of the doctrine must come forward with factual allegations as to both elements of the veil-piercing claim. See, e.g., JSC Foreign Econ. Ass'n Technostroyexport v. Int'l Dev. & Trade Servs., 295 F.Supp.2d 366, 379 (S.D.N.Y.2003) (stating that both elements of a veil-piercing claim must be alleged); Zinaman v. USTS New York, Inc., 798 F.Supp. 128, 131 (S.D.N.Y.1992) (same). Furthermore, it is well established that "purely conclusory allegations cannot suffice to state a claim based on veil-piercing or alter-ego liability, even under [Rule 8(a)'s] liberal notice pleading standard ." In re Currency Conversion Fee Antitrust Litig., 265 F.Supp.2d at 426; see also De Jesus v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 87 F.3d 65, 70 (2d Cir.1996) (dismissing alter-ego claim where complaint was "devoid of any specific facts or circumstances supporting" plaintiff's conclusory allegations concerning defendant's domination of its subsidiary); Zinaman, 798 F.Supp. at 132 (S.D.N.Y.1992) (dismissing alter ego claim on the grounds that "[c]omplaint [was] conclusory at best and fail[ed] to plead to requisite elements of an alter ego theory"). [FN4]

FN4. It should be noted that in its motion papers, EED appears to suggest, via citation to two cases from this district, that conclusory allegations as to the elements of veil-piercing may be sufficient to avoid dismissal for failure to state a claim. However, in both of these cases, the court's refusal to dismiss a veil-piercing claim was based on its determination that sufficient facts, and not mere conclusions, had been alleged. See Rolls-Royce Motor Cars Inc. v. Schudroff, BBS, 929 F.Supp. 117, 122 (S.D.N.Y.1996) ("Plaintiff has alleged the fact of complete domination and the use of that domination to commit a wrong against creditors.") (emphasis added); Citicorp Int'l Trading Co. v. Western Oil & Refining Co., 771 F.Supp. 600, 608 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (holding that party seeking veil-piercing had set forth "a short and concise statement of facts which are necessary to support their claim to pierce the veil") (emphasis added).

*7 EED has adequately alleged the first element of a veil-piercing claim--i.e., that McKelvey dominated PJAC. The complaint contains factual allegations concerning how McKelvey dominated PJAC (see Compl. ¶¶ 9, 42, 44), how he "used PJAC to further his own interest, at the expense of creditors of PJAC and its subsidiaries" (id. at ¶ ¶ 9, 42, 43), and how he "directed PJI to conceal information from EED as to its operating difficulties and delays." (id. ¶ 20).

However, EED has failed to properly allege the second element of the veil-piercing claim--i.e., that McKelvey used his domination over PJAC to commit a fraud or wrong against EED that which resulted in plaintiff's injury. To satisfy this element, EED alleges only that McKelvey "knowingly undercapitalized [PJAC and PJI] to avoid obligations that would arise from their operations, including the obligations to EED under the Construction Agreement and the Guaranty," (Compl.¶ 41). However, EED fails to provide any factual allegations as to why the undercapitalization of PJAC, which undertook the Guaranty, defrauded or otherwise harmed EED. EED has similarly failed to allege that either McKelvey or PJAC had anything to do with the PJI's construction of EED's Yacht. According to the complaint, this yacht construction, the subject of the Guaranty, was done by others at PJI's facilities in Wisconsin. Without such allegations concerning the undercapitalization of PJAC, EED's veil piercing/alter ego claim fails to establish that McKelvey's domination of PJAC was the means by which wrong was done to EED. See, e.g., TNS Holdings, 92 N.Y.2d at 340, 680 N .Y.S.2d at 893, 703 N.E.2d at 751 (dismissing alter ego claim for lack of "showing that through its domination [defendant] misused the corporate form for its personal ends so as to commit a fraud or wrongdoing or avoid any of its obligations." [citation omitted]).

None of the decisions cited by plaintiff--all of which support the proposition that both elements of a veil-piercing claim must be properly alleged in order to defeat a 12(b)(6) motion--warrant a different result. [FN5]

FN5. See JSC Foreign Econ. Ass'n

Technostroyexport v. International Dev. & Trade Servs., Inc., 295 F.Supp.2d 366, 379 (S.D.N.Y.2003) (denying 12(b)(6) motion on the grounds that the complaint contained factual allegations as to both elements of the veil-piercing claim); Fugazy Int'l Travel Group, Inc. v. Stargazer, Ltd., No. 02 Civ. 3373(HB), 2003 WL 115220 at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 10, 2003) (holding that corporate officer who knowingly causes a trademark infringement is personally liable "without regard to piercing the corporate veil") (emphasis in original); Accordia Northeast, Inc. Thesesus Int'l Asset Fund, N.V ., 205 F.Supp.2d 176, 182 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (denying dismissal that plaintiff had plead facts as to both elements of the veil-piercing claim); Rolls-Royce, 929 F.Supp. at 122 (same); Citicorp Int'l Trading Co. v. Western Oil & Ref. Co., 771 F.Supp. at 608 (same).

D. The Fraud Claim Against McKelvey Survives

The New York Court of Appeals has stated that:

[i]n an action to recover damages for fraud, the plaintiff must prove a misrepresentation or a material omission of fact which was false and known to be false by defendant, made for the purpose of inducing the other party to rely upon it, justifiable reliance of the other party on the misrepresentation or material omission, and injury[.]

Lama Holding Co. v. Smith Barney, Inc., 88 N.Y.2d 413, 421; 646 N.Y.S.2d 76, 80; 668 N.E.2d 1370, 1373 (1996) (citing New York Univ. v. Continental Ins. Co., 87 N.Y.2d 308, 318, 639 N.Y.S.2d 283, 289, 662 N.E.2d 763, 769 (1995); Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, Inc., 4 N.Y.2d 403, 406-07, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 262, 151 N.E.2d 833, 835 (1958)); see also 60A William H. Danne, Jr., N.Y. Jur. § 14 (2d ed. 2003) ("N.Y.Jur.") (The elements of the fraud cause of action are "representation of a material fact, falsity, scienter, reliance, and injury or damage.").

*8 McKelvey has moved for dismissal of EED's fraud claim on the following grounds: (1) that the allegedly fraudulent statements are non-actionable "puffery," (2) that the fraud claim violates the economic loss rule, (3) that the fraud claim is indistinguishable from the breach of contract claim, and (4) that the complaint fails to allege scienter with sufficient particularity pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P 9(b). A review of the complaint in light of relevant authority leads to the conclusions that (1) McKelvey's statement as to PJI's present wherewithal was not puffery, (2) the economic loss rule does not apply to this allegedly fraudulent statement, (3) the fraud claim is distinguishable from plaintiff's contract claim, and (4) the complaint has adequately plead scienter.

1. McKelvey's Statement Concerning PJI's Present Wherewithal are Actionable

EED alleges that McKelvey made three fraudulent statements at the 2001 New York Yacht Club meeting: (1) that PJI "would be building the 'greatest boats'" (Compl.¶ 14); (2) that PJI "had the capability and wherewithal to properly construct the yacht sought by Goldman in a timely manner" (id.); and (3) that McKelvey "was personally 'committed to PJI.'" (id.). McKelvey argues that all three of these statements are non-actionable puffery.

It is well established in New York that "a seller's mere general commendations of the product sought to be sold, commonly known as 'dealer's talk,' 'sales talk,' or 'puffery,' do not amount to actionable misrepresentations[.]" 60A William H. Danne, Jr., N.Y. Jur. § 34 (2d ed. 2003) ("N.Y.Jur.") (collecting cases). However, the doctrine of non-actionability for puffery does not apply "to false representations of material facts which are in their nature calculated to deceive and are made with the intent to deceive." 60A N.Y. Jur. § 34 (collecting cases).

The first and third of the statements allegedly made by McKelvey during the course of the 2001 New York Yacht Club meeting are not actionable because they are mere expressions of advertising, a well recognized form of puffery. See, e.g., Quasha v. American Natural Beverage Corp., 171 A.D.2d 537, 567 N.Y.S.2d 257 (1st Dep't 1991) (dismissing fraud claim where documents withheld from plaintiff "contain nothing more than speculation, advertising puffery and the defendants' hopes for the future of the company"); Simon v. Cunard Line Ltd., 75 A.D.2d 283, 288, 428 N.Y.S.2d 952, 955 (1st Dep't 1980) (representation that the QEII was "the greatest ship in the world" was "mere puffing and not actionable").

In contrast, the second of the three statements involves McKelvey's alleged misrepresentation as to the present condition of defendant PJI's finances and operations. As such, this statement is not mere puffery. It is actionable as fraud. See e.g., Cohen v. Koenig, 25 F.3d 1168, 1172 (2d Cir.1994) (stating that under New York law, defendant's alleged intentional overstatements of its net income and the value of its current and capital assets were actionable as fraud); Channel Master Corp., 4 N.Y.2d 403, 407, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 262 (1958) (holding that defendant's allegedly false statement that it had the capacity to sell to plaintiff 400,000 pounds of aluminum was actionable as fraud).

*9 The cases cited by the defendants to support their puffery argument all involved types of statements that are analytically distinct from the one at issue here. One group of cases cited by the defendants addressed the actionability of general claims made in the context of advertisements to the general public. See, e.g., Sample, Inc. v. Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc., 704 F.Supp. 498, 505 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (defendant's advertisement offering "relationships that last a lifetime" constituted non-actionable puffery); Serbalik v. General Motors Corp., 246 A.D.2d 724, 726 667 N.Y.S.2d 503, 504 (3d Dep't 1998) (defendant's advertisement claiming that car "would perform excellently" constituted mere puffery); Scaringe v. Holstein, 103 A.D.2d 880, 881, 477 N.Y.S.2d 903, 904 (3d Dep't 1984) (defendant's advertisement claiming that car was in "excellent condition" constituted puffery). A second group of cases cited by the defendants holds that projections of future earnings are not generally actionable. See Rombach v. Chang, 355 F.3d 164, 174 (2d Cir.2004) (holding that a financial analyst's earning projections were non-actionable under federal securities law); Shields v. Citytrust

Bancorp., Inc., 25 F.3d 1124, 1129 (2d Cir.1994) (stating that under federal securities law, forward-looking statements are not actionable merely because they turn out to be misguided); Highlands Insurance Co. v. PRG Brokerage, Inc., No. 01 Civ. 2272(GBD), 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2004) (holding that defendants' promises concerning future profitability are not actionable as fraud under New York law); Sheth v. New York Life Insurance Co., 273 A.D.2d 72, 74, 709 N.Y.S.2d 74, 75 (1st Dep't 2000) (holding that claims based on "conclusory" statements and opinions of "future expectations" are not actionable as fraud); Quasha, 171 A.D.2d 537, N.Y.S.2d 257 (holding that statements concerning "hopes for the future of the company" are not actionable as fraud). [FN6]

FN6. Defendants also cite two cases involving omissions of facts, see Elghanian v. Harvey, 249 A.D.2d 206, 206-07 671 N.Y.S.2d 266 (1st Dep't 1998); Lesavoy v. Lane, 304 F.Supp.2d 520, 530 (S.D.N.Y.2004), in support of an argument that McKelvey had no duty to disclose PJI's financial difficulties to Goldman/EED. Regardless of whether such a duty existed, this argument ignores the fact that EED's fraud claim is premised on McKelvey's affirmative misrepresentations. Furthermore, once McKelvey made claims as to PJI's wherewithal, he was Obligated not to omit material facts. See Banque Arabe Et Internationale D'Investissement v. MD. Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 155 (2d Cir.1995) ("In business negotiations, an affirmative duty to disclose material information may arise from the need to complete or clarify one party's partial or ambiguous statement.").

In short, McKelvey's specific misrepresentations concerning the wherewithal of PJI is a proper basis for a fraud claim.

2. The Fraud Claim Does Not Violate the Economic Loss Rule

New York's economic loss rule restricts "plaintiffs who have suffered 'economic loss,' but not personal or property injury, to an action for the benefits of their bargain. If the damages suffered are of the type remediable in contract, a plaintiff may not recover in tort." Carmania Corp., N.V. v. Hambrecht Terrell Int'l, 705 F.Supp. 936, 938 (S.D.N.Y.1989); see also Schiavone Constr. Co. v. Elgood Mayo Corp., 56 N.Y.2d 667, 669, 436 N.E.2d 1322, 1323, 451 N.Y.S.2d 720, 721 (1982) (holding that under the economic loss rule, if an alleged product malfunction is alleged to have caused purely economic loss, then the end-purchaser is limited to contract claims against the manufacturer and may not seek damages in tort).

McKelvey argues that pursuant to the economic loss rule, plaintiff cannot assert a fraud claim alongside a contract claim unless personal injury or property damage has been alleged. In support of this premise, McKelvey relies heavily on a single decision from this district, Orlando v. Novurania of Am., Inc, 162 F.Supp.2d 220, 225 (S.D.N.Y.2001). In Orlando, the disappointed buyer of a boat that developed cracks in its hull sued the seller/manufacturer, asserting, inter alia, both contract and fraud claims. With regard to the fraud claim, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant's false representations prior to the time that the sales contract was entered induced the purchase of the boat. The Orlando court held that plaintiff's fraud claim, which it determined to be "separate and distinct" from the contract claim, id. at 225, was nonetheless barred by New York's economic loss rule. However, the Orlando court failed to identify any New York cases addressing the applicability of the economic loss rule to a fraud claim. Rather, it reasoned that since New York courts had failed to carve out any applicable exceptions to the rule, it must be interpreted to bar a fraud claim for pure economic loss. Id. at 226.

*10 This Court has previously declined to adopt the Orlando court's reasoning, holding instead that "[i]n the absence of any articulation to the contrary by the New York courts, the economic loss doctrine will not be presumed to extend to fraud claims." CompuTech Int'l Inc. v. Compaq Computers Corp., No. 02 Civ. 2628(RWS), 2004 WL 1126320 at *10 (S.D.N.Y. May 21, 2004) (observing that "[t]he parties have not cited to any case in the New York courts applying the economic loss doctrine to an intentional tort, nor has one been found by the Court. [citations omitted]"). McKelvey has failed to point to any such cases, [FN7] and this Court's renewed canvas of New York cases once again reveals no authority for the application of the economic loss doctrine to claims, such as this one, that sound in fraud.

FN7. The cases cited by defendants on this point all stand for the uncontroversial (and entirely irrelevant) proposition that the economic loss rule prevents the assertion of negligence or strict liability claims where plaintiff's injury is purely economic. See PPI Enterprises (U.S.), Inc. v. Del Monte Foods Co., No. 99 Civ. 3794(BSJ), 2003 WL 22118977 at * 27 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2003) (dismissing negligence claim for failure to claim personal injury or property damage); Robehr Films, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc., No. 85 CIV. 1072(RPP), 1989 WL 111079 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 1989) (denying motion to amend complaint to add negligence claim alleging economic loss only); Carmania Corp., 705 F.Supp. at 939 (dismissing malpractice and negligent misrepresentation claims based on pure economic loss); Schiavone, 56 N.Y.2d at 669, 436 N.E.2d at 1323, 451 N.Y.S.2d at 721 (reversing grant of leave to amend to add strict liability claim for pure economic injury).

Moreover, as discussed in greater detail below, New York courts have routinely permitted fraud and contract claims to proceed in tandem for the purpose of recovering pure economic loss. See, e.g., Deerfield Comm. Corp. v. Cheseborough-Ponds, Inc., 68 N.Y.2d 954, 956, 502 N.E.2d 1003, 1004, 510 N.Y.S.2d 88, 89 (1986) (affirming lower court's denial of motion to dismiss fraudulent concealment counterclaim where another counterclaim sounded in contract and the only alleged damages were purely economic); First Bank of Americas v. Motor Car Funding, Inc., 257 A.D.2d 287, 291, 690 N.Y.S.2d 17, 21-22 (1st Dep't 1999); Steigerwald v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 107 A.D.2d 1026, 1027, 486 N.Y.S.2d 516, 518 (4th Dep't 1985).

Based on the foregoing, the Court concludes that the economic loss rule presents no bar to the assertion of EED's fraud claim.

3. The Fraud and Breach of Contract Claims are Distinguishable

Defendants argue that Plaintiff's tort claims should be dismissed because the fraud claim is indistinguishable from the breach of guaranty claim. Under New York law, a fraud cause of action generally does not arise where the alleged fraud merely relates to a breach of contract. Salvador v. Uncle Sam's Auctions & Realty, Inc. ex rel. Passonno, 307 A.D.2d 609, 611, 763 N.Y.S.2d 360, 362 (3d Dep't 2003); River Glen Assocs., Ltd. v. Merrill Lynch Credit Corp., 295 A.D.2d 274, 275, 743 N.Y.S.2d 870, 871 (1st Dep't 2002); Bazerman v. Edwards, 295 A.D.2d 115, 742 N.Y.S.2d 822 (1st Dep't 2002). However, this general rule is subject to the corollary that "a party who has breached a contract may be charged with separate tort liability for fraud arising from a breach of duty that is distinct from, or in addition to, the breach of contract." 60A N.Y. Jur. § 7 (citing Freedman v. Pearlman, 271 A.D.2d 301, 304 706 N.Y.S.2d 405, 408 (1st Dep't 2000); Licette Music Corp. v. A.A. Records, Inc., 196 A.D.2d 467, 601 N.Y.S.2d 297, 297-98 (1st Dep't 1993); Steigerwald, 107 A.D.2d at 1027, 486 N.Y.S.2d at 518 (4th Dep't 1985); Bernstein v. Polo Fashions, Inc., 55 A.D.2d 530, 531, 389 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370 (1st Dep't 1976)).

*11 In particular, it is well established that a misrepresentation of present fact which is the inducement for a contract is collateral to said contract, and can support a separate fraud claim. See, e.g., Deerfield, 68 N.Y.2d at 956, 502 N.E.2d at 1004, 510 N.Y.S.2d at 89; see also Primavera Familienstiftung v. Askin, 130 F.Supp.2d 450, 491, reconsidered on other grounds, 137 F.Supp.2d 438 (S.D.N.Y.2001) (stating that "a false representation that induces one to enter into a contract supports a fraud claim"); First Bank of Americas v. Motor Car Funding, 257 A.D.2d 287, 292, 690 N.Y.S.2d 17, 21 (1st Dep't 1999) ("[A] misrepresentation of present facts is collateral to the contract (though it may have induced the plaintiff to sign the contract) and therefore involves a separate breach of duty.").

Here, the contract claim seeks to recover the damages sustained by EED as a result of the breaches of the Construction Agreement by PJI, based on the Guaranty executed by PJAC. (See Compl. ¶¶ 36-38). In contrast, the fraud claim seeks to recover the damages EED has allegedly sustained as a result of being induced to enter into the Construction Agreement by McKelvey's alleged misrepresentations of fact concerning the present conditions of PJI's finances and operations. These statements, which allegedly were made to induce the contract, are collateral to the actual terms of the contract. Furthermore, the damages that EED seeks to recover in its fraud claim are distinct from the "benefit of the bargain" damages sought in the contract claim. While there is no specification of these damages in the complaint, no such specification is required. See G-I Holdings Inc. v. Baron & Budd, 179 F.Supp.2d 233, 269 (S.D.N.Y.2001). [FN8]

FN8. In G-I Holdings, this Court stated that, to sustain a claim for fraudulent inducement alongside a claim for breach of contract, one must plead any one of the following: (i) a legal duty separate from the duty to perform under the contract; or (ii) a fraudulent misrepresentation collateral or extraneous to the contract; or (iii) special damages that are caused by the misrepresentation and unrecoverable as contract damages. 179 F.Supp.2d at 269 (emphasis added) (citing Blank v. Baronowski, 959 F.Supp. 172, 180 (S.D.N.Y.1997)).

4. The Fraud Claim Satisfies Rule 9(b)

Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b) states that "in all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity." The Second Circuit "has read Rule 9(b) to require that a complaint '(1) specify the statements that the plaintiff contends were fraudulent, (2) identify the speaker, (3) state where and when the statements were made, and (4) explain why the statements were fraudulent.'" Rombach, 355 F.3d at 170 (quoting Mills v. Polar Molecular Corp., 12 F.3d 1170, 1175 (2d Cir.1993)).

With respect to the alleged misrepresentations concerning PJI's present financial and operational capacity, McKelvey does not dispute that the complaint satisfies the first three requirements set forth in Mills. Rather, McKelvey contends only that the complaint does not meet the fourth requirement, arguing that EED has not alleged facts that "give rise to a strong inference of fraudulent intent," as required by Second Circuit decisions. See, e.g., San Leandro Emergency Med. Group Profit Sharing Plan v. Philip Morris Cos., 75 F.3d 801, 812 (2d Cir.1996). However, the "strong inference" requirement is tempered by the recognition that a plaintiff "cannot be expected to plead a defendant's actual state of mind[,] and thus need not allege the defendant's requisite intent with any great specificity. Chill v. General Elec. Co., 101 F.3d 263, 267 (2d Cir.1996); Cohen, 25 F.3d at 1173 (stating that under Rule 9(b), (" 'plaintiffs have the burden of pleading circumstances that provide at least a minimal factual basis for their conclusory allegations of scienter")) (quoting Connecticut National Bank v. Fluor Corp., 808 F.2d 957, 962 (2d Cir.1987)); Jordan (Bermuda) Inv. Co. v. Hunter Green Invs. Ltd., 154 F.Supp.2d 682, 692 (S.D.N.Y.2001) (stating that "Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff plead the intent element of fraud only in general terms").

*12 Although EED has suggested in its papers that McKelvey intended a Ponzi scheme (EED's Memorandum of Law, p. 13), that allegation is absent from the complaint. However, a plaintiff can establish a strong inference of fraudulent intent "by alleging facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness." Chill, 101 F.3d at 267 (quoting Shields, 25 F.3d at 1128). Here, the complaint contains specific allegations (1) that PJI was experiencing financial difficulties and undercapitalization at the time of McKelvey's meeting with Goldman, and (2) that McKelvey had knowledge of such difficulties. (Compl. ¶¶ 11-12, 15). Such allegations satisfies the scienter pleading requirement. See Degulis v. LXR Biotechnology, Inc., 928 F.Supp. 1301, 1312 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (holding that the scienter pleading requirement was satisfied simply by alleging that the defendants were directors of companies that disseminated misleading financial information); Sperber Adams Assoc. v. JEM Management Assoc. Corp., No. 90 Civ. 7405(JSM), 1992 WL 138344 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Jun. 4, 1992) (holding that scienter was adequately plead where private placement memoranda and investment summaries were alleged to contain material omissions and defendants were alleged to have prepared such documents) (citing ITT v. Cornfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 923-24 (2d Cir.1980) (holding that scienter was sufficiently plead where the complaint included both general allegations of knowledge of a fraud and specific allegations of misrepresentations)).

Therefore, EED has adequately pled a fraud claim against McKelvey arising out of the statement relating to PJI's present financial and operational wherewithal.

E. The Negligent Misrepresentation Claim Is Dismissed

Under New York law, the elements of a claim for negligent misrepresentation are that:

- (1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information;
- (2) the defendant made a false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect;
- (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiff for a serious purpose;
- (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and
- (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment.

Greenberg v. Chrust, 198 F.Supp.2d 578, 584 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (citing Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000)).

Defendants have moved for dismissal of EED's negligent misrepresentation claim on the grounds that (1) there was no privity or near privity between McKelvey and EED and (2) that there was no special relationship between these parties.

The New York Court of Appeals has held that "a special duty giving rise to a negligent misrepresentation claim must arise out of a contract or some ... relationship approaching ... privity of contract." Id. (citing Parrot v. Coopers & Lybrand, L.L.P., 95 N.Y.2d 479, 483 718 N.Y.S.2d 709, 711 741 N.E.2d 506, 508 (2000)). The Court of Appeals has set forth the following criteria for determining the existence of a "near privity" relationship: (1) defendant's awareness that the statement in question was to be used for a particular purpose, (2) reliance on the statement by some identifiable parties in furtherance of that purpose, and (3) some conduct linking defendant to the parties and evincing defendant's awareness of their reliance. Ossining Union Free School Dist. v. Anderson, 73 N.Y.2d 417, 425, 541 N.Y.S.2d 335, 339; 539 N.E.2d 91, 95 (1989). Applying this criteria to EED's allegations concerning the meeting between McKelvey and Goldman at the New York Yacht Club, EED has sufficiently plead the existence of a near-privity relationship. It should be noted that the case cited by defendants in support of the proposition that EED has failed to satisfy this pleading requirement is inapposite because it addresses the separate question of whether a plaintiff had come forward with sufficient proof to avoid summary judgment. See Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. v. Peat Marwick Main & Co., 79 N.Y.2d 695, 705, 586 N.Y.S.2d 87, 92, 597 N.E.2d 1080, 1085 (1992).

*13 The next step in New York's negligent misrepresentation analysis is to determine whether this near-privity relationship imparted a duty on McKelvey to provide correct information. Under New York law, a statement made in the context of an arms-length commercial transaction, without more, cannot give rise to such a duty. See Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 263, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 719, 675 N.E.2d 450, 454 (1996). [FN9] Rather, an arms-length commercial transaction can only give rise to a negligent misrepresentation claim if a special relationship exists between the parties such that plaintiff's reliance on defendant's representation was justifiable. Id. A special relationship can arise where the defendant either (1) possesses "unique or specialized expertise" or (2) occupies a "special position of confidence and trust" with the injured party. Id.

FN9. The Kimmell court made clear that the vast majority of arms-length commercial transactions, which are comprised of "casual statements and contacts" will not give rise to negligent misrepresentation claims. See Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 263, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 719, 675 N.E.2d at 454. Since Kimmell, New York courts have followed the general rule of non-actionability for negligent misstatements made in the context of arms-length business transactions. See, e.g., Sheridan v. Trustees of Columbia Univ., 296 A.D.2d 314, 316, 745 N.Y.S.2d 18, 19 (1st Dep't 2002) (negligent misrepresentation claim dismissed "since, at the time of the alleged misrepresentation, the parties were clearly acting at arm's length"), leave to appeal denied, 99 N.Y.2d 505, 755 N.Y.S.2d 711, 785 N.E.2d 733, cert. denied, 539 U.S. 904 (2003); WIT Holding Corp. v. Klein, 282 A.D.2d 527, 529, 724 N.Y.S.2d 66, 68 (2d Dep't 2001) (modifying court order to dismiss negligent misrepresentation claim on grounds that arm's length business relationship had not given rise to special relationship.).

EED has relied on Kimmell as authority to establish that McKelvey possessed unique and special expertise with regard to the PJI/EED transaction. The Kimmell court upheld a judgment against a corporate officer/director on the grounds that he made negligent misrepresentations to investors that he had solicited into a limited partnership. Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 266, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 720, 675 N.E.2d at 455. The false statements at issue were a series of written and oral profit projections provided by the defendant to the plaintiffs. Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 261, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 717-18, 675 N.E.2d at 452-53. The defendant apparently urged the plaintiffs on multiple occasions to rely on the accuracy of these projections. Id.

The Kimmell defendant was an attorney and certified public accountant ("CPA") who had formerly served as chief financial officer ("CFO") for Pepsico. Id. During the relevant time period, he served as chair and CFO of Cogenic Energy Systems, Inc ("CESI"). Id.

Furthermore, the plaintiffs knew that defendant had been the general partner in similar previous ventures and apparently assumed that he possessed unique business and operational knowledge concerning the venture that the plaintiffs had been recruited into. Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 265, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 719, 675 N.E.2d at 454.

Based on these facts--i.e., defendant's calculated and repeated efforts to disseminate his statements to the plaintiffs, his efforts to induce reliance on these statements, and plaintiffs' knowledge of defendant's unique professional skills and business experience--the Kimmell court determined that a special relationship had arisen between the parties.

McKelvey is not alleged to have any special professional training or past business experience that would have given him the type of unique expertise possessed by the Kimmell defendant. The complaint does not allege that he was personally involved in the operations of PJI, or that he claimed to have expertise in the design, construction, or financing of yachts or any aspect of yacht-building. There is no allegation that EED believed that McKelvey had unique professional ability or expertise. Furthermore, McKelvey's alleged casual statement to Goldman is analytically distinct from the Kimmell defendant's communications campaign, which was calculated to induce reliance.

*14 Because no special relationship has been adequately alleged, the negligent misrepresentation claim is dismissed.

F. The Motion To Transfer Is Denied

The PJAC motion, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), to transfer this action to the Eastern District of Wisconsin, where PJI constructed the yacht for Goldman, raises the customary issue of balancing:

(1) the plaintiff's choice of forum; (2) the locus of the operative facts; (3) the convenience and relative means of the parties; (4) the convenience of witnesses; (5) the availability of process to compel the attendance of witnesses; (6) the location of physical evidence, including documents; (7) the relative familiarity of the courts with the applicable law; (8) the interests of justice, including the interests of trial efficiency.

Billings v. Commerce One, Inc., 186 F.Supp.2d 375, 377 (S.D.N.Y.2002). It appears that as between these parties, the balance tips slightly in PJAC's favor at this early stage of the action. However, since the fraud claim against McKelvey remains and since McKelvey has not sought transfer, such transfer is not warranted. See Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Country Chrysler, Inc., 928 F.2d 1509, 1518 (2d Cir.1991) (stating that "[s]ection 1404(a) only authorizes the transfer of an entire action, not individual claims.").

The motion to transfer is therefore denied.

Conclusion

The motion to dismiss the Guaranty cause of action against PJAC for want of personal jurisdiction is denied at this time with leave to move for summary judgment after jurisdictional discovery has been completed. The motion to dismiss the veil piercing/alter ego cause of action is granted. The motion to dismiss the fraud cause of action against McKelvey as to his statement concerning PJI's wherewithal is denied but granted as to the remaining statements. The motion to dismiss the negligent misrepresentation cause of action is granted. The motion to transfer is denied.

EED is granted leave to replead within twenty (20) days.

It is so ordered.

2004 WL 2348093 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

30

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

John H. ELLIOT, Plaintiff,
v.
James L. NELSON, Orbit Capital
Corporation, and Orbitex Management, Inc.,
Defendants.

No. 03 Civ. 5653(VM).

Jan. 29, 2004.

Background: Fired capital corporation executive filed state court action against corporation and director under theories of negligent misrepresentation and promissory estoppel, alleging that director lured executive into accepting position with false assurance that corporation was close to raising $40 million venture capital fund. Action was removed to federal court on basis of diversity jurisdiction. Defendants moved for summary judgment.

Holdings: The District Court, Marrero, J., held that: (1) employer did not engage in negligent misrepresentation, as alleged representations were not false when made and executive's alleged reliance on those representations was unreasonable, and (2) executive also could not prevail on promissory estoppel theory.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, elements for negligent misrepresentation claim are that (1) defendant had duty, as result of special relationship, to give correct information, (2) defendant made false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect, (3) information supplied in representation was known by defendant to be desired by plaintiff for serious purpose, (4) plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it, and (5) plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment.

[2] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

[2] Fraud 23
184k23

Under New York law, director of capital corporation did not engage in negligent misrepresentation to lure executive into accepting position with false assurance that corporation was close to raising $40 million venture capital fund, as alleged representations were not false when made and executive's alleged reliance on those representations was unreasonable; director and corporation took steps toward raising money such as preparing detailed private placement memorandum under consultation with elite Manhattan firm, distributing that memorandum to many potential investors and hiring several employees thought to have good contacts with potential investors, and executive's employment contract specifically contemplated possibility that full amount of fund would not be raised.

[3] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Although promises of future conduct are not actionable under New York law as negligent misrepresentation, promise made with preconceived and undisclosed intention of not performing it constitutes misrepresentation of material existing fact.

[4] Federal Civil Procedure 2539
170Ak2539

Party may not create issue of fact by submitting affidavit in opposition to summary judgment motion that, by omission or addition, contradicts affiant's previous deposition testimony. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56(f), 28 U.S.C.A.

[5] Fraud 23
184k23

Under New York law, where there is meaningful conflict between written contract and prior oral representations, party will not be deemed to have justifiably relied on the prior oral representations.

[6] Estoppel 85

156k85

Reasonable reliance is necessary element of promissory estoppel.

285 Jeffrey J. Mirman, Farmington, CT, for Plaintiff.

Daniel L. Schwartz, Day, Berry & Howard, L.L.P., Stamford, CT, for Defendants.

DECISION AND ORDER

MARRERO, District Judge.

Plaintiff John Elliot ("Elliot") alleges that defendant James Nelson ("Nelson"), a director of defendant Orbit Capital Corporation ("Orbit"), lured him into accepting an executive position at Orbit with the false assurance that Orbit was close to 286 raising a $40 million venture capital fund. Orbit never raised the funds and ultimately fired Elliot, who now seeks to recover damages against Nelson, Orbit, and Orbitex Management, Inc., ("Orbitex," and collectively, "Defendants") under the theories of negligent misrepresentation and promissory estoppel. Defendants move for summary judgment. The motion is granted.

I. BACKGROUND [FN1]

FN1. The factual summary derives from (1) the complaint; (2) Elliot's Local Rule 56.1 statement ("Elliot 56.1"); and (3) Defendants' Local Rule 56.1 statement, as well as the affidavits and exhibits attached to those documents. Except where necessary, the Court will not cite these sources further.

Orbit was a venture capital firm that invested in Internet start-up companies. Beginning in February 1999, Paul Stefunek ("Stefunek"), an executive recruiter, began discussing with Elliot the possibility of placing him in an executive position with Orbit. Stefunek gave Elliot a "position profile" for the position of General Partner. That document stated that Orbit was affiliated with "the Orbitex Group of Companies," which had "over $1.2 billion under management." Elliot 56.1 Ex. B. It also stated that Orbit had "potential to access over $400 million in venture funding." Id. Stefunek, relying on Nelson's representations to him, told Elliot that Orbit was close to raising a $40 million venture capital fund.

Elliot and Nelson met on June 9, 1999, and Nelson reassured Elliot that Orbit was close to raising the $40 million. Nelson also highlighted the intimate relationship between Orbit and Orbitex (which apparently had access to vast capital), leading Elliot to believe that there would be no problem raising the money. On June 29, Nelson faxed Elliot an employment agreement, under which Orbit would have paid Elliot an annual salary of $200,000. Orbit rescinded the offer the next day, however, because Orbitex officials did not want Orbit to fill the position until the venture capital fund was raised. Elliot met with Nelson again on July 2, 1999, to see about reviving the possibility of his employment. Nelson again assured Elliot that there would be no problem raising the money. Elliot agreed to accept a reduced salary of $100,000, which would be elevated to the original $200,000 when the venture capital fund was raised. By entering the employment agreement with Orbit, Elliot passed up at least one other firm offer of employment with another internet company.

Elliot's employment contract permitted either Elliot or Orbit to terminate the agreement, with 30 days' notice, if the venture capital fund was not raised within five months of the contract date. Under those circumstances, the contract obligated Orbit to pay Elliot 60 days' salary and benefits. Five months later, Orbit had not raised the fund and exercised its option to terminate its employment agreement with Elliot.

Elliot brought this lawsuit in Connecticut state court, seeking damages against Defendants on the basis of negligent misrepresentation and promissory estoppel. Defendants removed the case to federal court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction, and the District Court in Connecticut transferred the case to this district. Defendants now move this Court for summary judgment on all claims.

II. STANDARD FOR A SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION

The Court may grant summary judgment only "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party *287 is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). The Court must first look to the substantive law of the action to determine which facts are material; "[o]nly disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). Even if the parties dispute material facts, summary judgment will be granted unless the dispute is "genuine." Id. at 249, 106 S.Ct. 2505. "The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the [non-moving party's] position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the [non-moving party]." Id. at 252, 106 S.Ct. 2505.

Throughout this inquiry, the Court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-moving party and must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of that party. See Hanson v. McCaw Cellular Communications, Inc., 77 F.3d 663, 667 (2d Cir.1996).

III. DISCUSSION

[1][2] "Under New York law, the elements for a negligent misrepresentation claim are that (1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; (2) the defendant made a false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect; (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiff for a serious purpose; (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment." Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000). Elliot's negligent misrepresentation claim fails as a matter of law because, first, Defendants' alleged representations were not false when made, and, second, Elliot's alleged reliance on those representations was unreasonable.

[3] Although "[p]romises of future conduct are not actionable as negligent misrepresentations," Murray v. Xerox Corp., 811 F.2d 118, 123 (2d Cir.1987) (applying New York law), a promise "made with a preconceived and undisclosed intention of not performing it ... constitutes a misrepresentation of 'a material existing fact.'" Sabo v. Delman, 3 N.Y.2d 155, 164 N.Y.S.2d 714, 143 N.E.2d 906, 908 (1957) (citation omitted). Here, Elliot casts Defendants' assurances that Orbit would raise the venture capital fund as assertions that Defendants intended to try to raise the money. These assurances were false, according to Elliot, because Defendants actually made no efforts to raise the fund, thereby indicating that Defendants never intended to raise any money at the time they were pursuing Elliot. Elliot highlights the fact that Orbit did not actually raise any money towards the venture capital fund, nor did Orbit actually create the legal entity which would have held the money.

The Court disagrees with Elliot's argument because the uncontradicted record evidence demonstrates that Defendants did take steps, although ultimately unfruitful, towards raising money. For instance, Orbit prepared a detailed private placement memorandum under consultation with an elite Manhattan law firm, and Nelson distributed that memorandum to many potential investors. Nelson also hired several employees whom he thought would have good contacts with potential investors. In light of this evidence, no reasonable juror would conclude that Orbit had lured Elliot into the elaborate and expensive ruse of pretending to raise capital while intending not to do so, for no apparent purpose.

*288 [4] Elliot is correct that alleged representations that Orbit was "close" to raising the money would be actionable in the ordinary case. That representation would suggests that Orbit had raised at least some funds towards the $40 million goal. However, this allegation directly contradicts Elliot's deposition testimony from eight months earlier:

Q: And did Mr. Nelson make any representations to you on July 2, 1999 as to what the current status was of the efforts to raise the Venture Capital Fund?

A: Not that I recall.

Q: Did you have any reason to believe that as of July 2, 1999 any money had been raised for the Venture Capital Fund?

A: I had no idea how much money was raised at that time for the Venture Capital Fund.

Q: So it's fair to say that you didn't know if any money had been raised as of July 2, 1999.

A: Yes.

See Reply in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, Ex. A at 174-75. Elliot has not identified anywhere in his deposition where any Defendant told him that Orbit was "close" to raising the venture capital fund, or otherwise indicated to him any particular amount of money which had actually been raised. A "party may not create an issue of fact by submitting an affidavit in opposition to a summary judgment motion that, by omission or addition, contradicts the affiant's previous deposition testimony." Hayes v. New York City Dept. of Corr., 84 F.3d 614, 619 (2d Cir.1996); see also Perma Research & Dev. Co. v. Singer Co., 410 F.2d 572, 578 (2d Cir.1969) ("If a party who has been examined at length on deposition could raise an issue of fact simply by submitting an affidavit contradicting his own prior testimony, this would greatly diminish the utility of summary judgment as a procedure for screening out sham issues of fact.").

[5] Alternatively, the Court concludes that any alleged reliance upon the Defendants' statements would be unreasonable as a matter of law. Elliot certainly should not have relied on assurances that Orbit would raise the full amount of the venture capital fund because his employment contract specifically contemplated the possibility that it would not. Where there is a "meaningful" conflict between a written contract and prior oral representations, a party will not be deemed to have justifiably relied on the prior oral representations. Bango v. Naughton, 184 A.D.2d 961, 584 N.Y.S.2d 942, 944 (3d Dep't 1992) ("[T]he conflict between the provisions of the written contract and the oral representations negates the claim of reliance upon the latter."). To the extent that Elliot claims to have justifiably relied on the implicit assertion that Defendants intended to raise money, the Court, for the same reasons discussed above, concludes that the uncontradicted evidence demonstrates that Defendants did intend to raise the money.

[6] It follows that Elliot's claim for relief under a theory of promissory estoppel must fail, as well. Reasonable reliance is "a necessary element of promissory estoppel," Tri-Land Properties, Inc. v. 115 West 28th Street Corp., 238 A.D.2d 206, 656 N.Y.S.2d 863, 864 (1st Dep't 1997), and, for the reasons discussed, Elliot's alleged reliance was unreasonable as a matter of law.

IV. ORDER

For the reasons stated, it is hereby ORDERED that the motion of defendants James Nelson, Orbit Capital Corporation, and Orbitex Management, Inc. (collectively, *289 "Defendants") for summary judgment is granted and the case is dismissed with prejudice. The Clerk of Court is directed to enter judgment on Defendants' behalf.

The Clerk of Court is directed to close this case.

SO ORDERED.

301 F.Supp.2d 284

END OF DOCUMENT

31

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Claudia ESTEVEZ-YALCIN, individually and as parent and natural guardian of N.M., an infant, and J.M., an infant, Plaintiffs,

v.

The CHILDREN'S VILLAGE, Westchester County Health Care Corporation, and Samuel Toffel, Defendants.

No. 01 Civ. 8784(JGK).

Aug. 11, 2004.

Background: Parent brought action alleging that her children had been sexually abused by volunteer of county juvenile treatment and rehabilitation centers. County moved for summary judgment.

Holdings: The District Court, Koeltl, J., held that: (1) county did not negligently hire volunteer; (2) county did not negligently retain or supervise volunteer; and (3) county was not liable for sexual abuse committed after victim was transferred from its facility.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Infants 273
211k273

Under New York law, failure of county health care facility to conduct background check on volunteer before hiring him at its juvenile treatment and rehabilitation center did not amount to negligent hiring, even though volunteer later sexually molested children he met at center, absent evidence that routine background check would have revealed that volunteer had propensity to harm children.

[2] Infants 273
211k273

Under New York law, county health care facility did not have sufficient notice of volunteer's dangerous propensities towards children to render it liable for negligent retention or supervision of volunteer at juvenile treatment and rehabilitation center, even though volunteer on one occasion played with children other than those with whom staff member had told him to play, and volunteer later sexually molested children he met at center, where children never told anyone about inappropriate physical contact between him and volunteer at center, and there was no indication that anyone saw, or should have seen, that physical contact.

[3] Infants 273
211k273

Under New York law, county health care facility was not liable for sexual abuse committed by former volunteer at its juvenile treatment and rehabilitation center, even though volunteer met victims at center, where volunteer's abuse of victims occurred after they had been transferred to another facility, and after volunteer had quit work at center to work at other facility.

[4] Infants 273
211k273

Under New York law, county health care facility did not negligently misrepresent that volunteer at its juvenile treatment and rehabilitation center was safe and commendable person, and thus could not be held liable on that basis for volunteer's subsequent sexual abuse of children he met at center, absent evidence that facility had any reason to know that volunteer had propensity for injurious conduct, or that it knew children's mother would use any of its representations to give volunteer access to children.

[5] Federal Civil Procedure 2553
170Ak2553

Party resisting summary judgment on grounds that party needs additional discovery must submit affidavit showing: (1) what facts are sought to resist motion and how they are to be obtained, (2) how those facts are reasonably expected to create genuine issue of material fact, (3) what effort affiant has made to obtain them, and (4) why affiant was unsuccessful in those efforts. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56(f), 28 U.S.C.A.

*171 David Gilman, Gilman & Schneider, New York City, for plaintiffs.

Gregory F. Meehan, General Counsel, Elizabeth T. Hill, Sr. Assistant General Counsel, Office of the General Counsel, Hawthorne, NY, for defendants.

OPINION and ORDER

KOELTL, District Judge.

This diversity action arises out of the alleged sexual abuse of two minor children, N.M. and J.M., by defendant Samuel Toffel ("Toffel"). The children's mother, Claudia Estevez-Yalcin ("Estevez-Yalcin"), brought this action on behalf of herself and on behalf of N.M. and J.M. against Toffel, The Children's Village ("CV"), and Westchester County Health Care Corporation ("WCHCC"). Toffel was a volunteer at both WCHCC and CV at times when N.M. was a patient at each of the institutions.

The Amended Complaint asserts nine claims for relief against the defendants. WCHCC is named only in the fifth claim for relief, which asserts that WCHCC and CV are liable, jointly and severally, for negligently hiring, retaining, and supervising Toffel. In their opposition papers to the current motion, the plaintiffs contend that they have also fairly asserted a claim for negligent misrepresentation against WCHCC in connection with Toffel's transfer from WCHCC to CV as a volunteer. CV asserts a cross-claim against WCHCC for contribution and indemnity.

WCHCC moves pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 for summary judgment on all claims pending against it. The plaintiffs and CV both oppose the motion. As part of their opposition to the motion, the plaintiffs and CV move pursuant to Rule 56(f) for additional discovery.

I

The standard for granting summary judgment is well established. Summary judgment may not be granted unless "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986); Gallo v. Prudential Residential Services Ltd. P'ship, 22 F.3d 1219, 1223 (2d Cir.1994). "The trial court's *172 task at the summary judgment motion stage of the litigation is carefully limited to discerning whether there are genuine issues of material fact to be tried, not to deciding them. Its duty, in short, is confined at this point to issue-finding; it does not extend to issue-resolution." Gallo, 22 F.3d at 1224. The moving party bears the initial burden of "informing the district court of the basis for its motion" and identifying the matter that "it believes demonstrate[s] the absence of a genuine issue of material fact." Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548. The substantive law governing the case will identify those facts which are material and "only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986).

In determining whether summary judgment is appropriate, a court must resolve all ambiguities and draw all reasonable inferences against the moving party. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986) (citing United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655, 82 S.Ct. 993, 8 L.Ed.2d 176 (1962)); see also Gallo, 22 F.3d at 1223. Summary judgment is improper if there is any evidence in the record from any source from which a reasonable inference could be drawn in favor of the nonmoving party. See Chambers v. TRM Copy Ctrs. Corp., 43 F.3d 29, 37 (2d Cir.1994). If the moving party meets its burden, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to come forward with "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e).

The nonmoving party must produce evidence in the record and "may not rely simply on conclusory statements or on contentions that the affidavits supporting the motion are not credible." Ying Jing Gan v. City of New York, 996 F.2d 522, 532 (2d Cir.1993); see also Scotto v. Almenas, 143 F.3d 105, 114-15 (2d Cir.1998) (collecting cases).

II

Unless otherwise noted, the following facts are not in dispute. WCHCC is a public benefit corporation created in 1977 under the New York State Public Authorities Law. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 1; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 1; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 1.) CV is a New York not-for-profit corporation located in Dobbs Ferry, New York, that provides residential treatment and rehabilitation programs for male juveniles with psychological problems. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 2; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 2; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 2.) N.M. and J.M. are brothers, and they were born on December 15, 1985 and March 14, 1993, respectively. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 3, 6; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶¶ 3, 6; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶¶ 3, 6.) N.M. and J.M. currently reside in Florida, but both resided in New York when the majority of the alleged injuries occurred. (Id.) Estevez-Yalcin is the mother of N.M. and J.M., and she also currently resides in Florida, although she resided in New York when the majority of the alleged injuries occurred. [FN1] *173 (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 7; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 7; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 7.)

FN1. Estevez-Yalcin is no longer a plaintiff in the action against WCHCC because she failed to file a timely Notice of Claim against WCHCC. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 7; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 7; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 7.) Estevez-Yalcin has appealed the order of the New York State Supreme Court denying her petition to file a late Notice of Claim, and that appeal is still pending. At the argument of the current motion, the parties informed the Court that WCHCC has appealed that part of the order of the New York State Supreme Court granting the petition by J.M. and N.M. to file a late Notice of Claim, and that appeal is also still pending.

From February 11, 1997 to June 30, 1997, N.M. was an in-patient at WCHCC's Psychiatric Institute. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 4; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 4; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 4.) From June 30, 1997 to August 27, 1998 and from October 29, 1998 to June 25, 1999, N.M. was a resident at CV. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 5; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 5; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 5.) J.M. was never a patient at WCHCC and was never a resident at CV. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 6; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 6; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 6.)

N.M. was an in-patient on the pediatric ward at WCHCC from February 11, 1997 to June 30, 1997. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 18; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 18; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 18.) Toffel was a volunteer at WCHCC from approximately January 24, 1997 until the end of December 1997. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 19; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 19; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 19.) WCHCC concedes that it did not do a background check on Toffel before it hired him as a volunteer. (WCHCC's Response to Interrogatories attached as Ex. N to Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St., at 1, 4.) WCHCC contends that Toffel was trained as a volunteer by two recreational therapists on staff at WCHCC and that Toffel was rarely, if ever, left alone with patients. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 20.) The plaintiffs, however, contend that Toffel was neither trained nor supervised at WCHCC, and that Toffel was left alone with N.M. for substantial periods of time. (Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 20.)

N.M. testified that while at WCHCC he was alone with Toffel on three occasions either in the living room at WCHCC or on walks around the building. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 22; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 22; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 22; Deposition of N.M. attached as Ex. D to Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ("N.M.Dep.") at 38, 42, 192.) On more than one occasion, Toffel periodically rubbed N.M.'s shoulder and neck while talking to N.M. (N.M. Dep. at 39-40.) On one occasion, Toffel touched N.M. on his leg at the thigh while N.M. was seated next to him at a table. (Id. at 40-41, 193.) During at least one of the walks outside the building, Toffel rubbed N.M. on the shoulder. (Id. at 42-43.) N.M. did not tell anyone about the three incidents of physical contact he had with Toffel at WCHCC. (WCHCC Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 22; Pl.'s Resp. Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 22.) N.M. testified that while he was at WCHCC he "didn't really know [Toffel]," and that Toffel "was like a counselor that I had to see..." (N.M. Dep. at 39.)

On June 26, 1997, Estevez-Yalcin signed a Voluntary Placement Agreement transferring custody and care of N.M. to the Commissioner of Social Services of the City of New York. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 25; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 25; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 25.) On June 30, 1997, N.M. was discharged from WCHCC and delivered into the care of a case worker for the New York City Administration for Social Services. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 26; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 26; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 26.) Also on June 30, 1997, N.M. was committed to CV by the New York City Department of Social Services. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 28; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 28; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 28.) Estevez-Yalcin testified that she met Toffel for the first time on the day that N.M. was transferred to CV, and that a WCHCC staff member who "looked like a nurse" said that Toffel was a "nice guy" who had been helping N.M. as a volunteer at WCHCC and would continue to do so at CV. (Deposition of Claudia Estevez-Yalcin attached as Ex. I to WCHCC Rule 56.1 St. ("Estevez-Yalcin Dep.") at 82-83, 181.)

On July 9, 1997, Toffel submitted an application to CV for a position as a volunteer; *174 none of the references on the application are people employed at WCHCC. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 31; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 31; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 31.) There is no evidence in the record that CV sought from WCHCC, or that WCHCC actually provided, a reference or recommendation for Toffel as part of his application to be a volunteer at CV. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶¶ 29-33; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶¶ 29-33; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 29-33.) However, Estevez-Yalcin testified that when she and N.M. arrived at CV, a CV staff member informed her that Toffel was a volunteer who would be working with N.M. and that Toffel had been "recommended from" WCHCC. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 34; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 34; Estevez-Yalcin Dep. at 178.) Toffel was discharged by WCHCC as a volunteer in December 1997 because he contacted a parent, conduct that constituted a breach of patient confidentiality under WCHCC rules. (Deposition of Maribeth Abrenica dated Sept. 29, 2003 attached as Ex. A to Affirmation of Barbara F. Kukowski dated Nov. 9, 2003, at 63-66.)

Toffel sexually molested N.M. while N.M. was a resident at CV. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 13; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 13; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 13.) The abuse continued throughout N.M.'s stay at CV, often when N.M. went for overnight visits to Toffel's apartment. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 40; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 40; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 40; N.M. Dep. 88, 91-94.) During this time, Toffel developed a relationship with Estevez-Yalcin, through which he gained access to J.M., whom Toffel also sexually molested. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 43; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 43; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 43.) Toffel later pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with sexually molesting N.M. during the time when N.M. was a resident at CV and with sexually molesting J.M. during the time after N.M.'s release from CV. (WCHCC's Rule 56.1 St. ¶ 8; Pl.'s Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 8; CV's Resp. 56.1 St. ¶ 8.)

III

WCHCC first moves for summary judgment on the plaintiffs' negligent hiring, retention, and supervision claims. The plaintiffs claim that WCHCC's alleged negligence in hiring, retaining, and supervising Toffel renders WCHCC liable for the injuries that Toffel allegedly inflicted on N.M. at WCHCC, as well as for Toffel's sexual abuse of N.M. and J.M. after N.M. was transferred to CV. The plaintiffs do not assert that WCHCC is liable for Toffel's conduct under theories of respondeat superior or vicarious liability. Rather, the plaintiffs assert that WCHCC is liable, jointly and severally with CV, for negligently hiring, retaining, and supervising Toffel. [FN2] See Kenneth R. v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, 229 A.D.2d 159, 654 N.Y.S.2d 791, 793 (2d Dep't 1997) ("In instances where an employer cannot be held vicariously liable for its employee's torts, the employer can still be held liable under theories of negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision.")

FN2. The parties agree that New York law governs this action.

However, a necessary element of causes of action for negligent hiring, retention, and supervision "is that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensity for the conduct which caused the injury." Kenneth R., 654 N.Y.S.2d at 793-94 (collecting cases); see also Gomez v. City of New York, 304 A.D.2d 374, 758 N.Y.S.2d 298, 299 (1st Dep't 2003); Oliva v. City of New York, 297 A.D.2d 789, 748 N.Y.S.2d 164, 166 (2d Dep't 2002). "There is no common-law duty to institute specific procedures for hiring employees unless the employer knows of facts that would lead a reasonably *175 prudent person to investigate the prospective employee." Kenneth R., 654 N.Y.S.2d at 795; see also Doe v. Whitney, 8 A.D.3d 610, 779 N.Y.S.2d 570, 571-72 (2d Dep't 2004) (reversing denial of summary judgment where "the plaintiffs failed to raise a triable issue of fact showing that the School was aware of facts that would have led a reasonably prudent person to further investigate [the defendant]"). "An employer is under no duty to inquire as to whether an employee has been convicted of crimes in the past. Liability will attach on such a claim only when the employer knew or should have known of the employee's violent propensities." Yeboah v. Snapple, Inc., 286 A.D.2d 204, 729 N.Y.S.2d 32, 33 (1st Dep't 2001); see also Day v. J. Vlachos Hellenic Service Station, 2 A.D.3d 482, 767 N.Y.S.2d 893, 893 (2d Dep't 2003); T.W. v. City of New York, 286 A.D.2d 243, 729 N.Y.S.2d 96, 97-98 (1st Dep't 2001) ("[A]n employer has a duty to investigate a prospective employee when it knows of facts that would lead a reasonably prudent person to investigate that prospective employee."). Therefore, "recovery on a negligent hiring and retention theory requires a showing that the employer was on notice of the relevant tortious propensities of the wrongdoing employee." Gomez, 758 N.Y.S.2d at 299.

[1] In this case, WCHCC concedes that it did no background check on Toffel before it hired him as a volunteer. However, without some evidence that WCHCC knew or should have known that Toffel posed a risk of injury to children, WCHCC's failure to investigate Toffel further was not negligent. See, e.g., Gomez, 758 N.Y.S.2d at 298 (affirming summary judgment dismissing complaint for negligent hiring and retention where defendants failed to submit evidence that the moving defendants had knowledge of the relevant tortious propensities of the wrongdoing employee); Oliva, 748 N.Y.S.2d at 166 (reversing denial of summary judgment on negligent hiring claim where defendant Police Athletic League did not know or have reason to know of youth counselor's propensity to cause plaintiff's injury).

Moreover, the plaintiffs have not shown that WCHCC would have discovered anything indicating Toffel's propensity to engage in the alleged tortious conduct had WCHCC actually carried out a background check on him. See Murray v. Research Found. of State Univ. of N.Y., 283 A.D.2d 995, 723 N.Y.S.2d 805, 807 (4th Dep't 2001) ("Contrary to plaintiff's contention, there is no evidence in the record that a routine background check would have revealed that [the defendant employee] had a propensity to harm children."); Koran I. v. New York City Bd. of Educ., 256 A.D.2d 189, 683 N.Y.S.2d 228, 230 (1st Dep't 1998) ("Whether or not the principal could have been more thorough in checking [the abuser's] background, his actions do not support a claim of negligent hiring because a routine background check would not have revealed his propensity to molest minors."). No reasonable jury could find that, at the time WCHCC hired Toffel, WCHCC knew or should have known that Toffel had a propensity for the injurious conduct alleged in this case or that a background check would have revealed such a propensity. Therefore, no reasonable jury could find that WCHCC was negligent in hiring Toffel as a volunteer, and summary judgment should be granted to WCHCC on the plaintiffs' negligent hiring claim.

[2] The plaintiffs contend that WCHCC was sufficiently on notice of Toffel's dangerous propensities after Toffel began working as a volunteer at WCHCC, such that it should be liable for negligent retention or supervision of Toffel. The plaintiffs maintain that WCHCC knew that Toffel was someone who flouted the rules. They note that on at least one occasion *176 Toffel was told by a WCHCC staff member to engage in recreation with particular children but that he did so with entirely different children. (Pl. Mem. Opp. at 10.) They also contend that someone at WCHCC should have seen Toffel touch N.M. on the shoulders and neck, physical contact that could not have been hidden beneath a table, as when Toffel allegedly touched N.M.'s leg. However, none of this alleged conduct was sufficient to put WCHCC on notice that Toffel had the propensity to engage in the injurious conduct alleged in this case. The fact that Toffel on one occasion played with children other than those with whom a staff member had told him to play would not put a reasonable person on notice that Toffel posed a danger of sexual assault or battery of children. Moreover, N.M. testified that he never told anyone about the physical contact between him and Toffel at WCHCC, and there is no indication in the record that anyone saw, or should have seen, that physical contact. See Gomez, 758 N.Y.S.2d at 299-300. No reasonable jury could conclude based on the record in this case that WCHCC knew or should have known facts that would lead a reasonable person to suspect that Toffel posed a risk to children. Therefore, summary judgment should be granted in favor of WCHCC on the plaintiffs' negligent retention and supervision claim. See Murray, 723 N.Y.S.2d at 807 (affirming summary judgment dismissing complaint against employer for negligent retention of employee where the employer neither knew nor had reason to know that the employee posed a risk to children).

The plaintiffs contend that WCHCC should be held to a higher standard of care because WCHCC had children in its care. The existence of a heightened duty would not change the outcome in this case, however, because the injuries allegedly incurred by N.M. were not reasonably foreseeable by WCHCC. See N.X. v. Cabrini Med. Center, 280 A.D.2d 34, 719 N.Y.S.2d 60, 66 (1st Dep't 2001) ("[W]hether there is a heightened duty or not, liability may not ensue unless it can be said that the harm was foreseeable.") The parties agree that any injury N.M. suffered while at WCHCC resulted when Toffel allegedly touched N.M. on his neck, shoulders, and thigh. [FN3] For the reasons explained above, Toffel's conduct was not reasonably foreseeable by WCHCC. There is nothing in the record to suggest that WCHCC knew or should have known that Toffel had a propensity to engage in such conduct. For this reason as well, therefore, WCHCC is entitled to summary judgment on the claims of negligent hiring, retention, and supervision. See N.X., 719 N.Y.S.2d at 64-65 ("[A] mere possibility of improper conduct is insufficient to impose liability since, historically, liability for negligence has been determined by what is probable, not merely by what is possible.... Here, the possibility that a surgical resident with no history of sexual misconduct would enter a surgical recovery room and assault a patient is too remote to be considered legally foreseeable."); see also Cornell v. State of New York, 60 A.D.2d 714, 401 N.Y.S.2d 107, 108 (3d Dep't 1977) (affirming dismissal of negligence claim against state after trial where sexual assault on child by attendant *177 at state hospital was not reasonably foreseeable where state neither knew nor should have known of attendant's dangerous propensity), aff'd, 46 N.Y.2d 1032, 416 N.Y.S.2d 542, 389 N.E.2d 1064 (1979).

FN3. The parties dispute whether Toffel's physical contact with N.M. at WCHCC constituted sexual abuse. The plaintiffs maintain that Toffel touched N.M. on his neck, shoulders, and thigh in a "familiar" and "sexualized" way. WCHCC, however, contends that, as a matter of New York law, such contact does not amount to sexual abuse. However, it is not necessary to decide whether Toffel's conduct constituted sexual abuse or no injury at all, because the unconsented physical contact between Toffel and N.M. was not reasonably foreseeable.

[3] The plaintiffs' claims for negligent hiring, retention, and supervision also cannot provide a basis for liability against WCHCC for the injuries suffered by N.M. and J.M. after N.M. left WCHCC. It is undisputed that Toffel sexually abused N.M., and then J.M. as well, after N.M. had been transferred to CV. However, the injuries caused by Toffel at CV were not proximately caused by any negligent hiring, retention, or supervision by WCHCC. Even though N.M. first met Toffel at WCHCC, Toffel's abuse of N.M. at CV was outside the scope of Toffel's employment with WCHCC. The abuse occurred while N.M. was in the custody of CV and while Toffel was under CV's supervision, and primarily during N.M.'s overnight visits to Toffel's apartment. Toffel's abuse of J.M. occurred after Toffel developed a relationship with Estevez-Yalcin at CV in such a way that he was able to gain access to J.M. Because of the intervening independent acts of CV, Estevez-Yalcin, and Toffel, as well as the separation in time and place, Toffel's abuse of N.M. and J.M. following N.M.'s departure from WCHCC could not have been proximately caused by any negligence by WCHCC in its hiring, retention, and supervision of Toffel. See Anonymous v. Dobbs Ferry Union Free School, 290 A.D.2d 464, 736 N.Y.S.2d 117, 118 (2d Dep't 2002) (reversing denial of summary judgment on negligent hiring and supervision claims where school district, superintendent, and principal established that "any nexus between [abusive teacher's] employment at the District and his alleged sexual molestation of the infant plaintiffs was severed by time, distance, and the intervening independent actions of their parents," where parents invited teacher to attend New Year's Eve party and then to stay overnight in their home); Cardona v. Cruz, 271 A.D.2d 221, 705 N.Y.S.2d 368, 369 (1st Dep't 2000) ("As the officer was not acting within the scope of his employment or under the City's control, any alleged deficiency in its hiring or training procedures could not have proximately caused plaintiff's injuries."); Koran I., 683 N.Y.S.2d at 230 ("Here, though it happened that plaintiff first met [his abuser] through the school, plaintiff's personal encounters with his abuser were not set up through school channels, and occurred in [the abuser's] apartment after his volunteer work at the school had ceased. Accordingly, defendant cannot be held liable because any nexus between [the abuser's] volunteer activities at the school and his assault upon plaintiff was severed by time, distance and [the abuser's] intervening independent actions." (internal citations omitted)); Lemp v. Lewis, 226 A.D.2d 907, 641 N.Y.S.2d 158, 159 (3d Dep't 1996) (tavern's negligent hiring of bouncer was not proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries where bouncer punched plaintiff 20 miles from bar, 30 minutes after bouncer left bar, and when bouncer was no longer within scope of his employment or under bar's supervision and control).

IV

WCHCC also moves for summary judgment on the plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation claim. This claim is not set forth explicitly in the Amended Complaint, but the plaintiffs contend that it can fairly be inferred from the factual allegations in the Amended Complaint. The plaintiffs contend that, in granting Toffel access to both N.M. and J.M., Estevez-Yalcin justifiably relied on WCHCC's alleged misrepresentation that Toffel was a safe and commendable person.

To prevail on a claim of negligent misrepresentation, "a plaintiff must establish *178 that, because of some special relationship with the defendant which generally implies a closer degree of trust than the ordinary buyer-seller relationship, the law imposes on that defendant a duty to use reasonable care to impart correct information, that the information is false or incorrect, and that the plaintiff reasonably relied upon the information given." Pappas v. Harrow Stores, Inc., 140 A.D.2d 501, 528 N.Y.S.2d 404, 407 (2d Dep't 1988). The negligent statement upon which the plaintiff relies "must also be a proximate cause of the injury for which he or she seeks recovery." Id.

The New York Court of Appeals has explained that the determination of whether defendant, by negligent misrepresentation, breached a duty to plaintiff and proximately caused the injury turns on the reasonableness of both parties' conduct. Defendant must have imparted the information under circumstances and in such a way that it would be reasonable to believe plaintiff will rely upon it; plaintiff must rely upon it in the reasonable belief that such reliance is warranted.

Heard v. City of New York, 82 N.Y.2d 66, 603 N.Y.S.2d 414, 623 N.E.2d 541, 546 (1993). A prima facie case for negligent misrepresentation can be made out, for example, "when one familiar with a hazard offers direct assurances of safety to one who is unfamiliar with the hazard and who foreseeably relies upon those assurances." Id. at 545. It is well established, however, that "[t]he mere recommendation of a person for potential employment is not a proper basis for asserting a claim of negligence where another party is responsible for the actual hiring." Cohen v. Wales, 133 A.D.2d 94, 518 N.Y.S.2d 633, 634 (2d Dep't 1987); see also Jurgens v. Poling Transp. Corp., 113 F.Supp.2d 388, 398 (E.D.N.Y.2000); Koran I., 683 N.Y.S.2d at 230.

[4] On the record in this case, the plaintiffs cannot prevail on a negligent misrepresentation claim. Even assuming a special relationship between the plaintiffs and WCHCC, there is no evidence to support a finding that WCHCC made a negligent misrepresentation, or that WCHCC knew that the plaintiffs intended to rely upon its representations concerning Toffel, or that the plaintiffs reliance on the representations was reasonable.

For the reasons explained above, WCHCC was not on notice, at the time it made any alleged misrepresentations, that Toffel had a propensity for the injurious conduct alleged in this case. Because WCHCC did not know, and did not have reason to know, that Toffel posed any risk of danger to the plaintiffs, WCHCC's words and conduct suggesting that Toffel was safe and commendable could not have constituted a negligent misrepresentation. As explained above, WCHCC was under no obligation to investigate Toffel any further than it did, and even if it had done so, there is no evidence that WCHCC would have learned any facts that would have put it on notice concerning Toffel's dangerous propensities. For these reasons, no reasonable jury could find that WCHCC made a statement to the plaintiffs that it knew or should have known was false or incorrect. Moreover, the fact that WCHCC employed Toffel as a volunteer and may have encouraged his interaction with N.M. is insufficient to support a finding of liability on the part of WCHCC for the injuries inflicted by Toffel, because a mere recommendation does not support a finding of liability. See Koran I., 683 N.Y.S.2d at 230 ("[P]laintiff seeks to hold the Board vicariously liable for the alleged negligence of plaintiff's teachers and school principal in recommending [an abusive volunteer], availing themselves of his volunteer services, and encouraging the relationship between him and plaintiff. This cause of *179 action must fail."); see also Cohen, 518 N.Y.S.2d at 634.

The evidence also would not support a finding that WCHCC knew that any representations concerning Toffel would be used by Estevez-Yalcin in deciding to give Toffel access to N.M. and J.M. Nor would the evidence support a finding that any reliance on Estevez-Yalcin's part was reasonable. Estevez-Yalcin testified that someone from WCHCC told her on the day that N.M. was transferred from WCHCC to CV that Toffel was a "nice guy" and that he had been helping N.M. at WCHCC and would continue to do so at CV. [FN4] Although these statements were allegedly made on June 30, 1997, the day that N.M. was discharged from WCHCC, Toffel did not apply to become a volunteer at CV until July 9, 1997. Moreover, it is clear from Estevez-Yalcin's testimony that the statements, if indeed they were made, were made by way of introducing Estevez-Yalcin to Toffel, not in order to induce her reliance on the statements in deciding whether to give Toffel access to her sons. (See Estevez-Yalcin Dep. at 82-83.) For the same reason, any reliance by Estevez-Yalcin on these statements would not have been reasonable. Estevez-Yalcin also claims that she relied on the fact that a reputable institution like WCHCC had employed Toffel as a volunteer in deciding to give Toffel access to her sons. But there is no evidence that WCHCC employed Toffel as a volunteer knowing that Estevez-Yalcin would rely on that fact in making the particular decision she made in giving Toffel access to her sons. For the same reason, any reliance by Estevez-Yalcin on that fact would have been unreasonable. Because there is no evidence that WCHCC's words or conduct actually constituted a misrepresentation, or that its words and conduct could reasonably be construed as inducing Estevez-Yalcin's reasonable reliance in granting Toffel access to N.M. and J.M., summary judgment must be granted to WCHCC on the plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation claim.

FN4. WCHCC maintains that this testimony contains inadmissible hearsay, but the issue need not be decided because, even if admissible, the testimony would not support a claim for negligent misrepresentation.

Furthermore, for the reasons explained above, the plaintiffs could not succeed on their negligent misrepresentation claim because they cannot establish that the alleged misrepresentations proximately caused their injuries. See Hayes v. Baker, 232 A.D.2d 371, 648 N.Y.S.2d 158, 159 (2d Dep't 1996) (town not liable on negligent misrepresentation claim for injuries caused to child by babysitter referred by town's community service referral program because no showing of a special relationship and no showing that injuries were proximately caused by alleged misstatement).

V

Because WCHCC cannot be held liable for the injuries suffered by the plaintiffs, WCHCC must also be granted summary judgment on CV's cross-claim for contribution or indemnity. See Patterson v. New York City Transit Auth., 5 A.D.3d 454, 773 N.Y.S.2d 417, 419-20 (2d Dep't 2004); Cochrane v. Warwick Assocs., Inc., 282 A.D.2d 567, 723 N.Y.S.2d 506, 508 (2d Dep't 2001).

VI

The plaintiffs and CV move pursuant to Rule 56(f) to request that the Court defer deciding WCHCC's summary judgment motion pending further discovery. The request is denied.

[5] It is well-established that a party resisting summary judgment on the grounds that the party needs additional *180 discovery must submit an affidavit showing (1) what facts are sought to resist the motion and how they are to be obtained, (2) how those facts are reasonably expected to create a genuine issue of material fact, (3) what effort affiant has made to obtain them, and (4) why the affiant was unsuccessful in those efforts. See Gurary v. Winehouse, 190 F.3d 37, 43 (2d Cir.1999); Cooney v. Consolidated Edison, 220 F.Supp.2d 241, 247-48 (S.D.N.Y.2002), aff'd, 63 Fed.Appx. 579, 2003 WL 21105351 (2d Cir.2003). Neither the plaintiffs nor CV indicate any facts that, if obtained, would create a genuine issue of material fact concerning WCHCC's liability to the plaintiffs. The issues that the plaintiffs and CV seek to pursue further concerning Toffel's hiring, supervision, and subsequent discharge from WCHCC have been fully developed on the existing record. [FN5] WCHCC, for example, concedes that it did no background check at all on Toffel, so further discovery on that issue is unnecessary. The plaintiffs merely speculate that further discovery concerning Toffel's retention and supervision at WCHCC would create a genuine issue of material fact with respect to WCHCC's knowledge of Toffel's dangerous propensities. CV's request for further information concerning Toffel's discharge from WCHCC is equally unsupported and conclusory. See Smith v. Keane, No. 96 Civ. 1629, 1998 WL 146225, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 1998) ("Rule 56(f) is not a device for a fishing expedition or a means to avoid summary judgment on the mere hope that further evidence will develop."). Therefore, the application by the plaintiffs and CV to deny the motion by WCHCC or to stay it pending further discovery is denied.

FN5. In a scheduling order dated June 2, 2003, Magistrate Judge Eaton required that all fact discovery in this case be completed by September 19, 2003. (Ex. C to affidavit of John D. Katz, Esq., dated Oct. 31, 2003 ("Katz Aff.")). In an order dated September 9, 2003, Magistrate Judge Eaton extended the deadline to September 30, 2003, to permit the plaintiffs and CV to depose Maribeth Abrenica, but he declined the plaintiffs' and CV's request to extend the deadline by sixty days and to allow about fifteen further depositions. The Magistrate Judge also set a briefing schedule for WCHCC's motion for summary judgment and stayed discovery pending the disposition of that motion. (Ex. E to Katz Aff.) In an order dated October 8, 2003, Magistrate Judge Eaton denied a further request by the plaintiffs and CV for additional discovery and adhered to the previous schedule for WCHCC's motion for summary judgment. (Ex. F. to Katz Aff.)

CONCLUSION

Defendant WCHCC's motion for summary judgment dismissing the claims against it is granted.

SO ORDERED.

331 F.Supp.2d 170

END OF DOCUMENT

32

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Peter FELFE, Plaintiff,

v.

CIBA VISION CORPORATION, Defendant.

No. 03 Civ.3357 LAK JCF.

March 19, 2004.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

KAPLAN, Magistrate J.

*1 The plaintiff, Peter Felfe, brings this action alleging that CIBA Vision Corporation ("CIBA") engaged in intentional and negligent misrepresentation in connection with a settlement agreement reached between CIBA and a third party, Detlev Baur-Krey. The agreement concerned Mr. Baur-Krey's claims against CIBA for royalties from the sale of contact lenses. The plaintiff alleges that CIBA misrepresented the value of those claims in a letter issued to Mr. Baur-Krey, and that the plaintiff relied on CIBA's misrepresentation to settle his own claims against Mr. Baur-Krey for a lower amount than what he was entitled to receive.

CIBA has moved to dismiss the Complaint pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for failure to state a claim for relief. For the reasons that follow, I recommend that the defendant's motion be granted.

Background

The plaintiff, a patent attorney, provided legal representation in the late 1970's to a predecessor of CIBA, a German company. [FN1] (Amended Complaint ("Am.Compl."), ¶¶ 8, 12). At the time, Mr. Baur-Krey was a personal acquaintance of the plaintiff, providing consultation to foreign pharmaceutical companies that sought to obtain regulatory approvals from the United States. (Am.Compl., ¶ 13). Mr. Felfe introduced Mr. Baur-Krey to the defendant in exchange for an agreement that the plaintiff would receive one-third of any commissions, royalties, or other profits that Mr. Baur-Krey might garner by serving as a consultant to CIBA. (Am.Compl., ¶ 14).

FN1. The defendant does not appear to dispute the successor relationships between CIBA and the predecessor companies named in the Complaint. Accordingly, both CIBA and its predecessors-in-interest will be referred to as "CIBA" or "the defendant."

On or about August 18, 1978, Mr. Baur-Krey entered into a separate agreement with CIBA entitling him to receive royalties from the sale of various products, including soft contact lenses made from CIBA's "Weicon-38" material. (Am.Compl., ¶ 16). The "Weicon-38" contact lenses proved to be a popular product, and as the sales of those lenses increased, so did the value of Mr. Baur-Krey's royalties. (Am.Compl., ¶ 17).

In 1983, CIBA offered to provide Mr. Baur-Krey a lump sum payment in exchange for terminating his right to continued royalties. (Am.Compl., ¶ 20). Following a series of negotiations, Mr. Baur-Krey ultimately agreed to a one-time payment of $3.4 million, and a settlement agreement was signed on March 22, 1985 ("the 3/22/85 Settlement"). (Am.Compl., ¶ 26).

On March 21, 1985, the defendant issued a letter to Mr. Baur-Krey ("the 3/21/85 Letter") stating the following:

As requested we confirm that, in our negotiations concerning the buy-out of Baur-Krey Associates, Inc. from the contract of 18 August 1978, which we had taken up in June 1984, we represented that the discounted present value of the commission claims of Baur-Krey Associates for the contact lenses made from WEICON 38 material and sold in the USA was to be estimated at U.S. $799,000.00 in consideration of all relevant circumstances. (Am. Compl., ¶ 31 & Exh. 6).

Following his settlement with the defendant, Mr. Baur-Krey represented to Mr. Felfe that the amount of the settlement was $1.8 million. (Am.Compl., ¶ 33). Mr. Baur-Krey showed the plaintiff a copy of the 3/21/85 Letter, and he stated that the difference between $1.8 million and the $799,000 cited in the letter was attributable to amounts due to him other than for the royalties. (Am.Compl., ¶ 33). Mr. Baur-Krey stated that confidentiality provisions in the settlement agreement prevented him from disclosing the terms of the settlement to Mr. Felfe. (Am.Compl., ¶ 40). Mr. Felfe thereafter settled his claims against Mr. Baur-Krey for $288,000, or roughly one-third of $799,000. (Am.Compl., ¶ 35).

*2 Nearly 15 years later, in September 2000, Mr. Felfe was told by Mr. Baur-Krey's estranged wife that Mr. Baur-Krey had lied to the plaintiff about the amount of his settlement with the defendant. (Am.Compl., ¶ 42). Upon further investigation, the plaintiff obtained evidence suggesting that Mr. Baur-Krey had received over $3 million from the defendant. (Am.Compl., ¶ 43). He commenced a lawsuit against Mr. Baur-Krey in August 2001. (Am.Compl., ¶ 44).

Beginning in October 2000, the plaintiff communicated with the defendant's in-house counsel, seeking to obtain information relating to the 3/22/85 Settlement. (Am.Compl., ¶ 48). In response to a subpoena issued on January 11, 2002, the defendant produced, among other papers, internal documents and notes reflecting the defendant's valuations of Mr. Baur-Krey's royalty claims during the period of January to June 1985. (Am. Compl., ¶¶ 52, 53 & Exhs. 1-5). The plaintiff commenced this action on May 12, 2003.

Discussion

In considering a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the court must accept as true all factual allegations in the complaint and must draw all inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 164 (1993); York v. Association of the Bar of the City of New York, 286 F.3d 122, 125 (2d Cir.2002); Hernandez v. Coughlin, 18 F.3d 133, 136 (2d Cir.1994). Accordingly, the complaint may not be dismissed "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957) (footnote omitted).

A. Adequacy of the Pleadings

1. Intentional Misrepresentation

The defendant contends that the plaintiff's pleadings are inadequate in alleging the falsity of CIBA's representation and reasonable reliance by the plaintiff. (Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendant CIBA Vision Corporation's Motion to Dismiss the Amended Complaint ("Def.Memo.") at 14-18).

a. Falsity

Under New York law, the elements of a fraud claim premised on an intentional misrepresentation are that: (1) the defendant made a false statement of material fact, (2) with knowledge of its falsity, (3) and with intent to defraud the plaintiff, (4) the plaintiff reasonably relied on the misrepresentation, and (5) the plaintiff suffered damages as a result of the misrepresentation. See Kaye v. Grossman, 202 F.3d 611, 614 (2d Cir.2000). The "circumstances constituting fraud" must be pled with particularity. Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b).

The defendant contends that its statement in the 3/21/85 Letter is not false because it merely sets forth a "negotiating position" taken by the defendant during its settlement discussions with Mr. Baur-Krey, not the ultimate amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement or any "internal beliefs or estimates" by CIBA. (Def. Memo. at 14). The plaintiff asserts that the 3/21/85 Letter reflects the defendant's internal valuation of Mr. Baur-Krey's royalties at $799,000 as of the date of the letter, and that the falsity of CIBA's statement is shown by the fact that just two months earlier, CIBA had valued the royalties at $3.06 million. (Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss the Amended Complaint ("Pl.Memo.") at 20-21; Am. Compl., ¶ 23 & Exh. 2).

*3 The dispute over the proper interpretation of the 3/21/85 Letter need not be resolved because, under either interpretation, the plaintiff has adequately alleged the falsity of the defendant's statement in that letter. The theory of Mr. Felfe's case is not that CIBA directly misrepresented the amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement-i.e., the figure on which the plaintiff's own settlement with Mr. Bours-Krey was based-but that it falsely stated an alternative figure (either a prior negotiating position or prior valuation of royalties by CIBA) that enabled Mr. Bours-Krey to misrepresent the settlement amount and induce Mr. Felfe into a reduced settlement. (Am.Compl., ¶¶ 33-34). The allegation of falsity is based on an inference that the plaintiff draws from CIBA's internal documents, which purportedly show that CIBA did not value Mr. Bours-Krey's royalties in the range of $799,000 around the time of the 3/22/85 Settlement; the inference, therefore, is that contrary to its statement in the 3/21/85 Letter, CIBA never represented to Mr. Bours-Krey during their settlement negotiations that it valued the disputed royalties at $799,000, nor did CIBA ever take a "negotiating position" at that level. Therefore, the plaintiff's theory of the case is consistent with either party's interpretation of the 3/21/85 Letter. Even if the plaintiff ultimately fails to prove his theory at trial, his allegations of falsity are sufficient at this stage of litigation. See Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 511 (2002) ("The issue [at the pleading stage] is not whether a plaintiff will ultimately prevail but whether the claimant is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims.") (citation omitted).

b. Reasonable Reliance

The plaintiff's allegations, however, are insufficient on the issue of reasonable reliance. Under New York law, "[w]hen matters are held to be peculiarly within defendant's knowledge, it is said that plaintiff may rely without prosecuting an investigation, as he has no independent means of ascertaining the truth." Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Insurance Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1542 (2d Cir.1997) (quoting Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 80 (2d Cir.1980)). However, even if a party does not have access to information, a sophisticated plaintiff is "under a further duty to protect itself from misrepresentation":

[W]here, as here, a party has been put on notice of the existence of material facts which have not been documented and he nevertheless proceeds with a transaction without securing the available documentation or inserting appropriate language in the agreement for his protection, he may truly be said to have willingly assumed the business risk that the facts may not be as represented. Succinctly put, a party will not be heard to complain that he has been defrauded when it is his own evident lack of due care which is responsible for his predicament.

Id. at 1543 & n.11 (quoting Rodas v. Manitaras, 159 A.D.2d 341, 343, 552 N.Y.S.2d 618, 620 (1st Dep't 1990)) (emphasis omitted); see also Emergent Capital Investment Management, LLC v. Stonepath Group, Inc., 343 F.3d 189, 195-96 (2d Cir.2003).

*4 Here, Mr. Felfe principally contends that he had no means of verifying the defendant's statement in the 3/21/85 Letter because the statement related to information solely within CIBA's control and possession, namely, CIBA's internal valuations of Mr. Bours-Krey's royalties. (Pl. Memo. at 25). Also, Mr. Bours-Krey purportedly told the plaintiff that the confidentiality provisions of the 3/22/85 Settlement prevented him from disclosing the settlement documents to the plaintiff. (Pl. Memo. at 25-26).

While all this may be true, the plaintiff was also a sophisticated party with respect to business matters, as he was a patent attorney representing large companies like CIBA and its predecessors-in-interest. (Am.Compl., ¶ 12).

Moreover, the plaintiff was obviously on notice that the amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement was a material fact relevant to his claims against Mr. Baur-Krey; indeed, Mr. Felfe's very assertion here is that he settled his claims based on the amount Mr. Baur-Krey had purportedly received in royalties as part of the 3/22/85 Settlement. (Am.Compl., ¶¶ 33-35). Yet, the plaintiff chose to rely solely on Mr. Baur-Krey's oral representations as to that amount, and on CIBA's statement in the 3/21/85 Letter, which Mr. Baur-Krey allegedly portrayed to be documentary evidence of the royalty amount. [FN2]

FN2. As noted above, Mr. Baur-Krey allegedly represented to the plaintiff that the difference between the $799,000 cited in the 3/21/85 Letter and $1.8 million, the purported amount of the settlement, was attributable to sums due to Mr. Baur-Krey other than for the royalties. (Am.Compl., ¶ 33). The plaintiff therefore settled his claims for $288,000, roughly one-third of $799,000. (Am.Compl., ¶ 35).

Mr. Felfe's reliance on CIBA's representation was unreasonable as a matter of law because he made no efforts to verify the amount of Mr. Baur-Krey's royalties or to "insert[] appropriate language in the agreement for his protection." Lazard, 108 F.3d at 1543 (quotation marks and citation omitted). For instance, the plaintiff could have conditioned his settlement on Mr. Baur-Krey's obtaining permission to disclose the amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement to him, or he could have negotiated a lump sum mark-up on his own settlement as compensation for the lack of disclosure. Instead, the plaintiff chose to rely on the 3/21/85 Letter, which he concedes does not directly report the amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement and which merely reiterates a representation about estimated royalties made by CIBA during its negotiations with Mr. Baur-Krey. [FN3] These circumstances demonstrate that Mr. Felfe "willingly assumed the business risk that the facts may not be as represented." Id. Moreover, in the absence of a fiduciary relationship, the personal friendship between the plaintiff and Mr. Baur-Krey does not render Mr. Felfe's reliance on the 3/21/85

Letter reasonable. Emergent Capital, 343 F.3d at 196.

FN3. The defendant's contention that he had no direct relationship with CIBA and therefore could not have protected himself from CIBA's misrepresentations (Def. Memo. at 25) misses the point because it is the amount of the 3/22/85 Settlement, not CIBA's internal valuations, that was material to the plaintiff's settlement with Mr. Baur-Krey. The plaintiff relied on CIBA's letter insofar as it suggested to him--and as it was portrayed by Mr. Baur-Krey as showing--the amount Mr. Baur-Krey received in royalties as part of the 3/22/85 Settlement.

2. Negligent Misrepresentation

To prove negligent misrepresentation under New York law, a plaintiff must show that: (1) the defendant had a duty to give correct information pursuant to a "special relationship" with the plaintiff, (2) the defendant made a false statement that it should have known was incorrect, (3) the defendant knew that the plaintiff wanted the information for a serious purpose, (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act on the information, and (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied to his detriment. Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000).

*5 For the same reasons stated above, the plaintiff's pleadings do not adequately allege that Mr. Felfe reasonably relied on CIBA's representation in the 3/21/85 Letter. Accordingly, the plaintiff's negligent misrepresentation claim fails.

B. Statute of Limitations

The defendant also contends that the plaintiff's claims of intentional and negligent misrepresentation are untimely as they were not brought within six years of the alleged misrepresentation or, alternatively, within two years of the plaintiff's discovery of fraud. (Def. Memo. at 6-13). Having found that Mr. Felfe's pleadings are inadequate to state a claim for relief on both of his claims, the issue of timeliness need not be reached.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, I recommend that the defendant's motion be granted and that the plaintiff's Amended Complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) and Rules 72, 6(a), and 6(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the parties shall have ten (10) days from this date to file written objections to this Report and Recommendation. Such objections shall be filed with the Clerk of the Court, with extra copies delivered to the chambers of the Honorable Lewis A. Kaplan, Room 1310, and to the chambers of the undersigned, Room 1960, 500 Pearl Street, New York, New York 10007. Failure to file timely objections will preclude appellate review.

2004 WL 551200 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

33

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First
Department, New York.

FIRST NATIONWIDE BANK, Plaintiff-
Appellant,

v.

965 AMSTERDAM, INC., Defendant-Respondent,

and Cornelia Associates, et al., Defendants.

Feb. 23, 1995.

Lender sought to foreclose on property after borrower defaulted on mortgage. Borrower counterclaimed, alleging that lender fraudulently induced it to purchase property. The Supreme Court, New York County, Lehner, J., denied lender's summary judgment motion and dismissed counterclaims. Lender appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that borrower failed to prove it reasonably relied on lender's alleged representation that property was sound investment.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Contracts 94(2)
95k94(2)

[1] Contracts 94(3)
95k94(3)

[1] Contracts 94(5)
95k94(5)

To make out defense of fraud, party must establish that material representation, which is known to be false, has been made with intention of inducing reliance on misstatement, and that the false representation caused it to reasonably rely on misrepresentation, as result of which it sustained damage.

[2] Fraud 20
184k20

For purposes of proving fraudulent inducement to purchase property, borrower was precluded from establishing reliance on lender's alleged misrepresentation that borrower's use of loan proceeds to purchase property was sound investment where lender expressly stated that it would rely on borrower's representations as to income and condition of property when it determined whether to extend loan.

[3] Fraud 20
184k20

While general merger clause will not operate to bar parol evidence of fraud in the inducement, if party alleging fraud has made its own specific representation indicating that it is not relying on alleged inducement, it is foreclosed from establishing its asserted reliance on ground that it has misrepresented its true intention.

*200 A.M. Calamari, for plaintiff-appellant.

J.R. Butterman, for defendant-respondent.

Before SULLIVAN, P.J., and WALLACH,
RUBIN, ROSS and TOM, JJ.

469 MEMORANDUM DECISION.

Order of the Supreme Court, New York County (Edward H. Lehner, J.), entered May 31, 1994 which, inter alia, denied plaintiff's motion seeking summary judgment and dismissal of the defenses and counterclaims interposed by defendant 965 Amsterdam, Inc., unanimously reversed, on the law, the motion granted, with costs, and the matter remanded to Supreme Court for assignment to a Special Referee for an assessment of damages.

Defendant 965 Amsterdam, Inc. acquired the subject premises as the assignee of co- *201 defendant Amsterdam Realty Associates, the purchaser under a contract of sale from co-defendant Cornelia Associates dated June 12, 1986. The purchase by 965 Amsterdam was facilitated by pre-approved and pre-packaged financing brokered by Gelt Funding Corp. and underwritten by plaintiff First Nationwide Bank. The bank extended a non-recourse, first-mortgage loan under a consolidation, modification and extension agreement and issued a promissory note in the principal amount of $700,000 dated September 26, 1986. After making payment for nearly four years, 965 Amsterdam, Inc. defaulted on the loan, and plaintiff invoked the acceleration clause of its note. The sum due on the instrument at the commencement of this action was $684,016.31, together with interest from June 1, 1990. This action was commenced in October 1990. The debtor interposed, as its sole defense to the amended verified complaint, the assertion that it was fraudulently induced to acquire the property.

(Cite as: 212 A.D.2d 469, *469, 623 N.Y.S.2d 200, 201)

965 Amsterdam, Inc. does not contend that plaintiff made any material misrepresentation upon which it relied in making the purchase. The fraudulent utterances are ascribed to the seller and particularly the mortgage broker, Gelt Funding *470 Corp., and its principal, Allen I. Gross, who is alleged to have misrepresented the operating revenues of the property. The debtor's fraud theory against plaintiff is predicated upon plaintiff's approval of financing for the transaction, the availability of which is asserted to have induced 965 Amsterdam, Inc. to make the purchase.

Before proceeding with an analysis of the debtor's novel theory, it is pertinent to note that plaintiff commenced its own action (First Nationwide Bank v. Gelt Funding Corp., 820 F.Supp. 89 [S.D.N.Y.], affd. 27 F.3d 763 [2 nd Cir.], cert. denied 513 U.S. 1079, 115 S.Ct. 728, 130 L.Ed.2d 632) in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, against Gelt Funding Corp., Gross and others, alleging that the bank was induced to extend some $900,000,000 in non-recourse loans to purchasers of commercial property represented by Gelt Funding Corp., as commercial mortgage broker. The complaint, predicated on the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (18 U.S.C. § 1962[c]; [d]) asserted that 31% of these loans are in default, as opposed to 9.5% of loans extended to other commercial borrowers by the bank. It alleged that Gelt Funding Corp. misrepresented net operating revenues, concealed "flip" transactions and failed to disclose additional financing secured by the properties. Of 30 loans specifically identified in the complaint, the alleged misrepresentations were claimed to have resulted in a loss to First Nationwide Bank of approximately $4.2 million on 10 loans that were foreclosed, sold or restructured. An additional $10.2 million was said to be required to cure outstanding defaults on the other 20 loans, which were not foreclosed sold, or restructured. Federal Court substantially attributed the losses sustained to the collapse of the real estate market in 1990 and dismissed the complaint for failure to state a cause of action (27 F.3d 763, 772).

The gravamen of the defense to this mortgage foreclosure action seems to be the proposition that by allowing Gelt Funding Corp., in the person of Allen I. Gross, to induce it to extend non-recourse loans based upon fraudulent misrepresentations, plaintiff is therefore answerable to a mortgagor who obtained such a loan, upon the mortgagor's default in payment. Supreme Court credited the debtor's argument on the rationale that "a principal is liable to third parties for the acts of an agent operating within the scope of his authority even if the agent commits fraud and acts solely to benefit himself" (citing, American Socy. of Mech. Engrs. v. Hydrolevel Corp., 456 U.S. 556, 566, 102 S.Ct. 1935, 1942, 72 L.Ed.2d 330).

[1][2][3] To make out a defense of fraud, a party must establish that *471 a material representation, known to be false, has been made with the intention of inducing its reliance on the misstatement, which caused it to reasonably rely on the misrepresentation, as a result of which it sustained damages (Megaris Furs v. Gimbel Bros., 172 A.D.2d 209, 213, 568 N.Y.S.2d 581). The record on appeal contains two affidavits dated September 26, 1986, subscribed by defendant debtor's principal, Mr. Robert Danial, containing representations as to the condition of the property 202 and its revenue, together with the explicit acknowledgement that plaintiff will rely on the statements in the affidavit in extending the loan. Under these circumstances, any misrepresentation is attributable to the borrower (see, First City

(Cite as: 212 A.D.2d 469, *471, 623 N.Y.S.2d 200, 202)

Fed. Sav. Bank v. Dennis, 680 F.Supp. 579, 585 [S.D.N.Y.]

Under the circumstances of this matter, the Court is constrained to grant summary judgment to plaintiff because defendant debtor is precluded from establishing reliance on the claimed misrepresentation. While a general merger clause will not operate to bar parol evidence of fraud in the inducement (Sabo v. Delman, 3 N.Y.2d 155, 164 N.Y.S.2d 714, 143 N.E.2d 906), where the party alleging fraud has made its own specific representation indicating that it is not relying on the alleged inducement, it is foreclosed from establishing its asserted reliance on the ground that it has misrepresented its true intention (Citibank, N.A. v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 94-95, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 485 N.E.2d 974, citing Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 323, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597). Having expressly stated that plaintiff bank would rely on its representations as to the income and condition of the property, the debtor is precluded from attempting to demonstrate the contrary proposition that it relied upon representations made by the bank or its asserted agent, Allen I. Gross.

Defendant debtor attaches great significance to allegations contained in the bank's complaint in its federal action against Gelt Funding Corp. First Nationwide's complaint states, in its ninth cause of action, that Gross was "a fiduciary and attorney" and that he is guilty of breaching a duty of undivided loyalty to the bank. While the exact nature of his relationship to First Nationwide is not entirely clear, given Gross's interest in securing financing for clients of Gelt Funding Corp., it seems highly irregular that the bank would place him in a fiduciary capacity with respect to the underwriting of mortgage loans to those same clients. Be that as it may, merely because the bank might have been improvident in relying on representations made by Gross with respect to the evaluation of a credit risk does not render it liable to a purchaser that may have employed similar criteria in reaching *472 the decision to acquire a property. There is no suggestion that First Nationwide Bank, in making a favorable assessment of creditworthiness, thereby intended to make any warranty to the purchaser that the property was a sound investment (see, Prudential Ins. Co. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 384, 590 N.Y.S.2d 831, 605 N.E.2d 318). The failure of defendant debtor to make an independent analysis of the suitability of the property for its purpose is governed by the doctrine of caveat emptor, and the instant appeal does not present circumstances that fall within the narrow exception to the application of the doctrine recognized by this Court (Stambovsky v. Ackley, 169 A.D.2d 254, 572 N.Y.S.2d 672).

We conclude that the debtor's counterclaim sounding in fraud is deficient (CPLR 3013; 3016[b]). Furthermore, the record is devoid of allegations from which a court could infer that the bank entered into an agreement with Gross or others at Gelt Funding Corp. to participate in a fraudulent scheme, so as to permit defendant mortgagor to proceed under a conspiracy theory (Abrahami v. UPC Constr. Co., 176 A.D.2d 180, 574 N.Y.S.2d 52). Neither is there any allegation from which it might be inferred that the bank was aware of any scheme to defraud 965 Amsterdam, Inc. so as to be liable on a theory of aiding and abetting fraud (National Westminster Bank USA v. Weksel, 124 A.D.2d 144, 147, 511 N.Y.S.2d 626, lv. denied 70 N.Y.2d 604, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 513 N.E.2d 1307). The magnitude of losses alleged to have been sustained by the bank as a result of lending funds to the clientele of Gelt Funding Corp. strongly suggests that First Nationwide was unaware that the bank itself, let alone its borrower, was the object of a fraudulent scheme (see, Quintel Corp. v. Citibank, 606 F.Supp. 898, 913 [S.D.N.Y.]). Finally, this can hardly be said to be an appropriate matter warranting equitable intervention to impose the full burden of loss due to fraud upon plaintiff (see, e.g., Curiale v. AIG Multi-Line Syndicate, 204 A.D.2d 237, 238-239, 613 N.Y.S.2d 360).

212 A.D.2d 469, 623 N.Y.S.2d 200

END OF DOCUMENT

34

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second
Department, New York.

George FORD, et al., appellants,

v.

Philip SIVILLI, et al., defendants,
Michael Gregory, et al., respondents.

Dec. 29, 2003.

Background: Real estate purchasers sued vendors, architect who prepared drawings of extensions to home, and contractor hired by architect to expedite certificate of occupancy for extensions to home prior to sale, seeking to recover damages for fraud and negligent misrepresentation after portion of roof on extensions collapsed. The Supreme Court, Nassau County, Phelan, J., granted motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim filed by contractor and architect, and purchasers appealed.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that: (1) purchasers were not known parties to architect and contractor, and thus, purchasers' claim of negligent misrepresentation was not cognizable, and (2) purchasers' allegations that defects in extensions built to house were known to architect and individual failed to include particularized factual assertion that supported inference of scienter, as required to state claim of fraud against individual and architect.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

The elements of a cause of action sounding in negligent misrepresentation include: (1) an awareness by the maker that the statement is to be used for a particular purpose; (2) reliance by a known party on the statement in furtherance of that purpose; and (3) some conduct by the maker of the statement linking it to the relying party and evincing its understanding of that reliance.

[2] Fraud 21
184k21

Real estate purchasers were not known parties to architect and contractor hired by architect to expedite application for certificate of occupancy for extensions added to house by vendors 40 years earlier, as required to support purchasers' claim of negligent misrepresentation against architect and contractor based on allegation that certificate of occupancy issued by town certifying that extensions were in compliance with building code was based on false plans submitted to town; purchasers were at best part of an indeterminate class of persons who presently or in the future could rely upon alleged misrepresentations of architect and contractor, which was not the equivalent of known parties.

[3] Fraud 42
184k42

An allegation of fraud that repeats an assertion of negligence and adds a general claim of reckless disregard of the facts or actual knowledge is insufficient to plead scienter.

[4] Pleading 18
302k18

Real estate purchasers' allegations, that defects in extensions built to house were known to architect and contractor hired by architect to expedite an application for certificate of occupancy for vendors from town, failed to include particularized factual assertion that supported inference of scienter, as required to state claim of fraud against contractor and architect when roof over extension collapsed after purchasers took title; purchasers merely alleged that defects in structure were known or should have been known by contractor and architect had they performed their duties of obtaining certificate and visually inspecting extensions built 40 years earlier with due care, while contractor and architect disclosed to purchasers that they relied on information provided by vendors.

415 Beck, Gewurz and Strauss, PLLC, Uniondale, NY, (Leland Stuart Beck of counsel), for appellants.

Miller, Rosado & Algois, LLP, Mineola, NY, (Neil A. Miller and Christopher Rosado of counsel), for respondents.

MYRIAM J. ALTMAN, J.P., GLORIA GOLDSTEIN, STEPHEN G. CRANE, and WILLIAM F. MASTRO, JJ.

*773 In an action, inter alia, to recover damages for fraud, the plaintiffs appeal from an order of the Supreme Court, Nassau County (Phelan, J.), dated March 17, 2003, which granted the motion of the defendants Michael Gregory and Michael A. Angelone to dismiss the complaint insofar as asserted against *774 them pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action.

ORDERED that the order is affirmed, with costs.

During the course of negotiations in July 2002 to sell their house in Oceanside to the plaintiffs, the defendant owners Philip Sivilli and Antoinette Sivilli (hereinafter the owners) hired the defendant Michael Gregory to expedite their application for a certificate of occupancy for extensions to their house. The owners had built the extensions approximately 40 years earlier. Gregory hired the defendant Michael A. Angelone, an architect, to prepare architectural drawings.
In August 2002 the drawings were submitted to the Town of Hempstead with a letter signed by both Gregory and Angelone, stating that the extensions were built by the owners
"approximately 40 years ago," the drawings were based upon visual inspection of the finished structures with "non-destructive testing," and the owners "provided some insight into the dimensions of some questionable hidden members."

On September 4, 2002, the plaintiffs and the owners entered into a contract of sale which required the owners to provide the plaintiffs with a certificate of occupancy or certificate of zoning compliance at the closing. Thereafter, on October 8, 2002, the Town issued a certificate stating that its Department of Buildings had inspected the structures and found them "to be substantially in compliance with the provisions of the Town of Hempstead Buildings Zone Ordinance." Shortly after the plaintiffs took title to the property, a roof on the extensions collapsed and the plaintiffs commenced this action to recover damages for fraud and negligent misrepresentation alleging, inter alia, that Gregory and Angelone submitted false plans to the Town and either knew of their falsity or should have known of their falsity "had they performed their duties honestly and with due care."

[1][2] The elements of a cause of action sounding in negligent misrepresentation include: (1) an awareness by the maker that the statement is to be used for a particular purpose, (2) reliance by a known party on the statement in furtherance of that purpose, and
(3) some conduct by the maker of the statement linking it to the relying party and evincing its understanding of that reliance (see Securities Investor Protection Corp. v.
BDO Seidman, 95 N.Y.2d 702, 711, 723
N.Y.S.2d 750, 746 N.E.2d 1042; Parrott v.
Coopers & Lybrand, 95 N.Y.2d 479, 484, 718
N.Y.S.2d 709, 741 N.E.2d 506; Prudential
Ins. Co. of Am. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 384, 590
416 N.Y.S.2d 831, 605 N.E.2d 318). At best, the plaintiffs were part of an "indeterminate class of persons who, presently or in the future" may rely upon Gregory and *775 Angelone's alleged misrepresentations, which are not the equivalent of known parties (Marcellus Constr. Co. v. Village of Broadalbin, 302 A.D.2d 640, 641, 755
N.Y.S.2d 474; see Westpac Banking Corp. v.
Deschamps, 66 N.Y.2d 16, 19, 494 N.Y.S.2d
848, 484 N.E.2d 1351; Metral v. Horn, 213
A.D.2d 524, 526, 624 N.Y.S.2d 177).

[3][4] The plaintiffs' cause of action sounding in fraud required "a particularized factual assertion which supports the inference of scienter" (Houbigant Inc. v. Deloitte & Touche, 303 A.D.2d 92, 98, 753 N.Y.S.2d 493).
An allegation that repeats an assertion of negligence and adds a general claim of reckless disregard of the facts or actual knowledge is insufficient to plead scienter (see Credit Alliance Corp. v. Andersen & Co., 65 N.Y.2d 536, 554, 493 N.Y.S.2d 435, 483 N.E.2d 110). The plaintiffs' allegations that "the defects in the structure were known" to Gregory and Angelone or "should have been known" by them "had they performed their duties honestly and with due care" were insufficient to state a cause of action sounding in fraud. Further, the documentary evidence established that Gregory and Angelone relied upon information provided by the owners and disclosed their reliance.

2 A.D.3d 773, 770 N.Y.S.2d 414, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 19957

END OF DOCUMENT

35

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Sheldon FRIEDMAN, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
ARIZONA WORLD NURSERIES LIMITED
PARTNERSHIP, et al., Defendants.
Roger L. FROST, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
ARIZONA WORLD NURSERIES LIMITED
PARTNERSHIP, et al., Defendants.
F.N. LaCORTE, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
ARIZONA WORLD NURSERIES LIMITED
PARTNERSHIP, et al., Defendants.
K.G. MILLS, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
ARIZONA WORLD NURSERIES LIMITED
PARTNERSHIP, et al., Defendants.
John Casey CLARK, Plaintiffs,
v.
ARIZONA WORLD NURSERIES LIMITED
PARTNERSHIP, et al., Defendants.

Nos. 86 Civ. 9834(KC), 88 Civ. 2212(KC), 88
Civ. 6306(KC), 88 Civ. 8795(KC) and 89 Civ. 5194(KC).

Jan. 24, 1990.

Investors in limited partnership sued accountants, attorneys and other defendants involved in sale of limited partnership interests, alleging violation of federal securities laws, RICO and state common law. Defendants moved to dismiss. The District Court, Conboy, J., held that: (1) § 10(b) claim against accountants involved in preparation of documents accompanying offering memorandum failed to adequately plead element of scienter; (2) element of scienter was also inadequately pled against attorneys who prepared offering memorandum; (3) allegations were also inadequate to attribute particular misrepresentation or fraudulent act to corporation which received finders' fee for selling business assets which made up limited partnership from group of defendants to another; (4) § 10(b) fraud allegations were pleaded with sufficient particularity with respect to other defendants; (5) allegations failed to show reliance upon projections in offering memorandum so as to state § 10(b) claim, but allegations regarding then-existing condition and value of nursery business forming limited partnership were sufficient; (6) attorneys, corporation that received finders' fee, and accountants could not be deemed statutory sellers for purposes of action under § 12(b) of Securities Act; (7) § 12(2) claims commenced more than three years after sale of securities were untimely; (8) fraudulent concealment and diligence in discovering fraud were adequately plead with respect to claims that were not brought within one year of sale; (9) no implied private cause of action existed under § 17(a) of Securities Act; (10) predicate acts of racketeering activity stated claim under § 1962(c) of RICO; and (11) RICO conspiracy claim and claim that injury was somehow caused by investment of racketeering proceeds were insufficient.

Ordered accordingly.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Fraud complaint must apprise each individual defendant of specific nature of his or her participation in fraud, particularly where there are multiple defendants. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Although complaint need only aver intent generally, it must nonetheless allege facts which give rise to strong inference that defendants possessed requisite fraudulent intent--either intent to defraud, knowledge of falsity, or reckless disregard for truth. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Specific requirements for pleading fraud regarding exactly what statements were made, and when, where and by whom are "somewhat relaxed" when complaint is based on offering memorandum. Fed.Rules

Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[4] Securities Regulation 60.30
349Bk60.30

Counsel who draft offering memorandum are not ordinarily liable for general statements in offering memorandum absent attribution of specific misstatements or omissions to them. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[5] Securities Regulation 60.45(3)
349Bk60.45(3)

Accountants who prepared financial projections and compilation reports as well as tax opinion letter analyzing tax implications of investment in limited partnership could not be held liable for securities fraud under § 10(b) where element of scienter was adequately plead; no indication was given that accountants knew of alleged "unreasonableness" of assumptions contained in appraisal of business, "falsity" of appraisal, and "fact" that underlying business was "failing," nor was there any indication of either gross negligence or recklessness, and alternative method for demonstrating scienter--motive--was not established by mere allegation that accountants were compensated for their professional services. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[6] Securities Regulation 60.30
349Bk60.30

Professionals.

Complaint did not state § 10(b) securities fraud claim against attorneys who prepared offering memorandum for limited partnership, where individual attorneys were not given notice of specific allegations against them individually or against firm and no specific misrepresentations were attributed to attorneys; misrepresentations and conduct not tied to offering memorandum also were deficient with regard to time, place and content of alleged misrepresentations; even assuming arguendo that attorneys could be deemed insiders, allegations were insufficient with respect to scienter element, since there were no facts which would fairly support strong inference that any of attorneys acted with intent to defraud or with reckless disregard for truth. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[7] Securities Regulation 302
349Bk302

Investor's complaint against attorney whose law firm prepared allegedly misleading offering memorandum in connection with limited partnership did not state claim against attorney under New York law where they did not allege that he worked on offering memorandum or that other attorneys in his firm, who did work on memorandum, were under his direct supervision or control. N.Y.McKinney's Business Corporation Law § 1505(a).

[8] Securities Regulation 60.40
349Bk60.40

Investors' complaint against attorney whose law firm prepared allegedly misleading offering memorandum regarding limited partnership investment did not state claim under federal vicarious liability principles against attorney to hold him liable as "control person" absent facts supporting inference of knowledge or reckless disregard of fraud; complaint alleged that other attorneys in firm worked on offering memorandum but did not allege that defendant attorney participated in work or that other attorneys worked under his direct supervision or control. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a).

[9] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Investor's complaint against corporation that received finder's fee for selling assets to defendants who offered them as limited partnership investment was insufficient to state securities fraud claim under § 10(b) in the absence of any facts and complaint from which inference could be drawn that corporation knew of any fraud in offering of limited partnership investment to public. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[10] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Investors' § 10(b) fraud claims against managers or owners of businesses pleaded fraud with sufficient particularity in alleging that owners engaged in scheme to defraud as parties to purchase and sale of businesses, in which investors eventually purchased limited partnership interests, in order to realize immediate profit and to mollify earlier investors in businesses. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[11] Federal Civil Procedure 1831
170Ak1831

Federal district court was not precluded from deciding reliance issue involved in § 10(b) claims as matter of law on motion to dismiss for failure to state claim and was not required to wait until summary judgment phase of case where requisite documents necessary to decide motion were attached to and incorporated in complaint by reference. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[12] Securities Regulation 60.27(5)
349Bk60.27(5)

Limited partnership investors failed to state § 10(b) securities fraud claims based on alleged misrepresentations of limited partnership's future expectations and performance contained in offering memorandum or its attachments, where warnings and disclaimers contained in those documents limited degree to which investors could rely on documents as forecast of future, and resulted in no assurances being made regarding such things as availability of income tax deductions or accuracy of appraisal. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[13] Securities Regulation 60.27(5)
349Bk60.27(5)

Limited partnership investors stated § 10(b) claim for misrepresentations, omissions, and fraudulent conduct against sellers regarding then-existing condition in value of nursery business sold to limited partnership where disclamatory language contained in offering memorandum and accompanying documents stated that projections contained in memorandum were based on appraisal procured by sellers and on assumptions provided by general partner. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[14] Securities Regulation 60.30
349Bk60.30

Professionals.

Limited partnership investors did not state § 10(b) claim against either accountants or attorneys who assisted in preparation of offering memorandum and accompanying documentation for alleged misrepresentations, omissions and fraudulent conduct regarding then-existing condition and value of nursery business in which limited partnership was engaged, given limited role, if any, such defendants had regarding documentation and authentication of then-existing conditions in value and fact that scienter element was not properly pleaded with respect to them. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.; Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[15] Securities Regulation 25.62(1)
349Bk25.62(1)

Under § 12(2) of Securities Act, there is no need for plaintiff to establish causal connection between misrepresentation and damage suffered, if any. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771(2).

[16] Securities Regulation 25.61(2)
349Bk25.61(2)

"Statutory seller" under § 12(2) of Securities Act is one who is alleged to have sold, offered to sell, or solicited sale of securities for financial gain. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771(2).

[17] Securities Regulation 25.62(1)
349Bk25.62(1)

There is no need to prove scienter or loss causation in order to hold statutory seller liable under § 12(2) of Securities Act. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[18] Securities Regulation 25.61(9)
349Bk25.61(9)

Limited partnership investors failed to state claim under § 12(2) of Securities Act against attorneys who prepared offering memorandum, accountants who prepared supporting documentation, or corporation eligible to receive "finders' fee" for introducing original owners and managers to intermediate buyers of partnership assets where there were no allegations showing that any of those defendants solicited sale of limited partnership interests within meaning of Securities Act; to extent that it was alleged that attorneys rendered "assistance" to brokers in sale of interests, or that accountants engaged in "high degree of effort to sell" securities through identified partners, allegations were insufficient to show either when or where such aid was rendered, statements made, or time and place of efforts. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2); Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[19] Securities Regulation 134
349Bk134

To satisfy statute of limitations for bringing claim under § 12(2) of Securities Act, in addition to setting forth time and circumstance of discovery of allegedly fraudulent statements or omissions, plaintiffs must plead facts demonstrating efforts they made to discover alleged fraud and reasons why they could not have done so sooner. Securities Act of 1933, §§ 12(2), 13, 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2), 77m.

[20] Securities Regulation 134
349Bk134

Claims under § 12(2) of Securities Act that were commenced more than three years after sale of securities were untimely due to absolute three-year statute of limitations, regardless of whether limited partnership investors discovered alleged fraudulent statements or omissions with due diligence. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 13, 15 U.S.C.A.

§ 771 (2), 77m.

[21] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Allegations of fraudulent concealment for purposes of tolling statute of limitations, like all fraud allegations, must be pled with particularity. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[22] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

If plaintiffs allege that discovery of fraud was delayed by actions of particular defendant, they must set forth in complaint essential facts supporting such allegations. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[23] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Limited partnership investors adequately pleaded fraudulent concealment by defendants of alleged misstatements and omissions in offering memorandum to explain their failure to discover alleged fraud within one year following sale of securities. Securities Act of 1933, §§ 12(2), 13, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 771 (2), 77m.

[24] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Where limited partnership investors' complaint properly pleaded fraudulent concealment of alleged misstatements and omissions in offering memorandum, claims under § 12(2) of Securities Act would not be dismissed for failure to adequately plead due diligence with respect to investors' efforts to discover fraud by reason of their failure to identify which investors actually engaged in acts that tended to show diligence; however, further motion practice by defendants on timeliness of claim would be appropriate with respect to individual investors after discovery had been concluded and record was complete. Securities Act of 1933, §§ 12(2), 13, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 771 (2), 77m.

[25] Securities Regulation 27.27
349Bk27.27

There is no implied private right of action under § 17 of Securities Act of 1933. Securities Act of 1933, § 17, 15 U.S.C.A. § 77q.

[26] Postal Service 35(2)
306k35(2)
(Formerly 83k82.72)

[26] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

Limited partnership investors failed to state RICO claim for relief against attorneys and accountants who assisted in preparing offering memorandum for legal partnership interests due to their failure to adequately plead securities fraud or mail fraud predicates against such defendants. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c).

[27] Postal Service 35(2)
306k35(2)

In order to state claim for mail fraud, plaintiffs must allege existence of scheme to defraud, defendant's knowing or intentional participation in that scheme, and use of interstate mails in furtherance of fraudulent scheme.

[28] Postal Service 35(2)
306k35(2)
(Formerly 83k82.72)

Investors in limited partnership adequately pleaded predicate act of mail fraud to support RICO claim against certain defendants involved in sale of limited partnership interests. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c).

[29] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 11
319Hk11
(Formerly 83k82.71)

Securities violations against 70 individual investors in limited partnership each constituted one predicate act for purposes of RICO cause of action. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c).

[30] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 31
319Hk31
(Formerly 83k82.72)

[30] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 32
319Hk32

(Formerly 83k82.72)

Limited partnership investors sufficiently alleged that predicate crimes were related to and amounted to, or posed threat of, continuity such that they constituted pattern of racketeering activity, where acts consisted of alleged mail fraud, whereby defendants transmitted offering memorandum to each of individual investors, which was unquestionably related to alleged fraud in connection with sale of securities to each investor, with each acting temporarily proximate to others; continuity could be inferred from all surrounding circumstances where, although specific acts alleged in complaint related to sale of interests in one particular investment vehicle, complaint also clearly alleged that defendants were involved in business of selling similar interests to public on continuing basis and that those offerings were also fraudulent. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c, d).

[31] Conspiracy 18
91k18

Limited partnership investors did not adequately allege conspiracy claim under RICO where they did not adequately allege that each defendant personally agreed to two or more predicate acts in connection with alleged fraudulent offering of limited partnership units. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(d).

[32] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 16
319Hk16
(Formerly 83k82.72)

Limited partnership investors failed to state RICO claim under section prohibiting use or investment of income received from pattern of racketeering activity in acquisition, establishment or operation of enterprise arising out of investment due to alleged securities and mail fraud where they did not adequately allege damages other than loss of their investments, since it was clear that those injuries arose out of commission of predicate acts, and not from investment by defendants of racketeering proceeds. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(a, c, d).

*526 Beigel & Sandler, Ltd., Lewis S.

Sandler and Marilyn Neiman, New York City, for plaintiffs.

Morrison Cohen Singer & Weinstein, Malcolm I. Lewin and Donald Chase, New York City, for Western defendants.

Gold & Wachtel, Elliot Silverman and Anthony Pennachio, New York City, for World defendants.

Jones Day Reavis & Pogue, Barry R. Satine and Carl F. Goodman, New York City, for Partnership defendants.

Rosenman & Colin, Arthur S. Linker and Terri L. Weiss and Fulbright Jaworski & Reavis McGrath, Marc S. Dreier and Glen Banks, New York City, for Friedman & Shaftan defendants.

Stein, Zauderer, Ellenhorn, Frischer & Sharp, Sidney H. Stein, Robin Kaufman and Eric M. Schmidt, New York City, for Andersen defendants.

Chekow & Kisner, Ronald Kisner, Great Neck City, for defendant Bryce Corp.

OPINION AND ORDER

CONBOY, District Judge:

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs, seventy in all, have brought this action against the twenty-nine named defendants, claiming that their investment in defendant Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership ("AWNLP") was induced by the assertedly misleading Private Placement Memorandum (the "Memorandum" or "Offering Memorandum"), appended to which were the allegedly misleading Tax Opinion Letter and Financial Projections and Compilation Reports (the "Financial Projections"), which documents were prepared by some or all of the defendants. Plaintiffs have alleged violations of the Federal Securities laws, including Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. 240.10b-5, Sections 12(2) and 17(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act"), the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 et seq., and claims of common law fraud, negligence, and breach of fiduciary responsibility, and seek injunctive as well as declaratory relief in addition to the imposition of a constructive trust.

All of the defendants have moved to dismiss the Consolidated Complaint pursuant to Rules 9(b) and 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

A. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The procedural history of this litigation is long and complex. The action entitled Friedman, et al. v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 86 Civ. 9834(EW) was commenced on or about December 24, 1986 on behalf of 24 plaintiffs. In lieu of responding to various motions to dismiss, plaintiffs in Friedman filed an amended complaint on or about May 24, 1987, adding new plaintiffs and defendants as well as its equitable claims for relief. Various defendants renewed their motions to dismiss. At oral argument before the late Honorable Edward Weinfeld, to whom this matter was assigned prior to his death, plaintiffs' application for leave to file another amended complaint was granted. A Second Amended Complaint, on behalf of fifty-five plaintiffs, was served on or about October 1, 1987, adding another defendant and furnishing additional detail regarding the plaintiffs' claims.

On or about October 8, 1987, another action was filed in this Court entitled Schumate, et al. v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 87 Civ. 7237(EW), the complaint of which, with the exception of the 15 new plaintiffs, was identical to the Second Amended Complaint in the Friedman action. On November 13, *527 1987, plaintiffs in Schumate amended their complaint as of right to add still more parties and to amend various allegations regarding the plaintiffs' discovery of the alleged fraud. On January 12, 1988, after Judge Weinfeld had granted a motion to consolidate, the Consolidated Complaint, upon which the defendants' pending motions are directed, was filed. As stated above, the Consolidated Complaint was filed on behalf of seventy plaintiffs and added still more details to the allegations in the original complaint.

In addition to these actions, four other actions were filed with complaints substantially similar to the Consolidated Complaint herein, with the exception of the naming of additional plaintiffs. Frost, et al. v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 88 Civ. 2212(KC), LaCorte, et al. v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 88 Civ. 6306(KC), Mills, et al. v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 88 Civ. 8795(KC), and Clark v. Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership, et al., 89 Civ. 5194(KC). The parties in each of these actions have stipulated that our decision with respect to the Friedman Consolidated Complaint shall be binding upon them.

B. THE ALLEGATIONS

The voluminous Consolidated Complaint, which we will hereafter refer to simply as the complaint, comprises 93 pages and 171 paragraphs and incorporates by reference the Memorandum and the exhibits that were attached to it, including the tax opinion letter and the financial projections. We will attempt to briefly summarize the allegations, which, for the purposes of the pending Rule 12(b)(6) motions, [FN1] we must accept as true and which must be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs. Airlines Reporting Corp. v. Aero Voyagers, Inc., 721 F.Supp. 579, 581 (S.D.N.Y.1989); see Scheur v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 94 S.Ct. 1683, 1686, 40 L.Ed.2d 90 (1974); Dacey v. New York County Lawyers' Assoc., 423 F.2d 188, 191 (2d Cir.1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 929, 90 S.Ct. 1819, 26 L.Ed.2d 92 (1970).

FN1. In its recent opinion in Cosmas v. Hassett, 886 F.2d 8, 11 (2d Cir.1989), the Second Circuit has stated that the standard for Rule 9(b) motions is similar to the standard for Rule 12(b)(6) motions, that is "that on motions to dismiss, complaints should be read generously, and all inferences drawn in favor of the pleader." Id.

Plaintiffs are individuals who have invested various sums totalling $3,552,500 in defendant Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership ("AWNLP"). ¶¶ 3-4. [FN2] We will sometimes refer to the plaintiffs as the limited partners.

FN2. Paragraph references herein to the Consolidated Complaint are designated by "¶ ___".

The complaint alleges that all twenty-nine defendants participated in a "scheme to defraud" and attempts to categorize the defendants into several groups. First, there are the so-called "Western defendants" which are a number of individuals and entities who were the former owners and/or managers of the nursery business. The plaintiffs allege the "Western defendants" include the following: Beardsley Holdings, Inc., Western United Nurseries, Inc., Sonora Nursery Sales, Inc., Fountainhead Nurseries Inc., Diversified Agronomics, Ltd., Phoenix Sunbelt Nurseries, Ltd., Great western Nurseries Ltd., Arizona United Nurseries, Ltd., Phoenix Sunbelt Nurseries II, Ltd., Phoenix Sunbelt Nurseries III, Ltd., White Tanks Nurseries, Ltd., Western Group Nurseries, Tyrone Kinder, Joseph Tyler, Bryce Corporation and Sonora Nursery Management, Inc. ¶ 6. The defendant Bryce Corporation has filed a motion to dismiss separate from the rest of the Western defendants. Accordingly, for the purposes of this opinion, "Western defendants" refers to all of the Western defendants except Bryce. [FN3] Next, there are *528 the "World defendants" who acquired the nursery business from the Western defendants and sold it two weeks later to the AWNLP. ¶ 5. Counsel representing these defendants have broken down the group further: the "World defendants" are defined as World Nurseries, Inc., Worldco Services Group, Inc., M & J Holding Corp., Herman Finesod and James Haber; and the "Partnership defendants" are defined as AWNLP and its general partner, Harvey Minars. All of these defendants are alleged to be the promoters of Awnlp. ¶ 6.

FN3. There seems to be some confusion over whether Harold Schwartz, the president of the Bryce Corporation, is a defendant in this action. Some of the defendants have stated in their memoranda of law that he is a defendant, e.g., Western Defendants' Memorandum of Law at 7; Friedman & Shaftan Defendants' Memorandum of Law at 7, however, he is not in the caption of the complaint. In addition, counsel for plaintiffs, in its memorandum addressed to the motion of Bryce, does not contend that Schwartz is a defendant. Accordingly, we conclude that the Schwartz is not a defendant in the case and was only carelessly referred to as such.

Finally, there are what have been referred to as the professional defendants. The first of these are the accountants, the accounting firm Arthur Andersen & Co. and one of its partners, Ivan Faggen (the "Andersen defendants"), who prepared the tax opinion letter and certain financial projections for Awnlp. ¶ 7. The other professional defendants are the law firm of Friedman & Shaftan, P.C., and some of the firm's lawyers, Wilfred T. Friedman, Michael E. Greene, and Marcia Shaftan, as the executrix of the Estate of Robert P. Shaftan (the "Friedman & Shaftan defendants"), who are alleged to have been counsel for the Awnlp and to have drafted the Memorandum, including the Federal Income Tax Factors section and the legal opinion. ¶ 8.

The complaint alleges that all of the foregoing parties entered into a "scheme" to sell an unsuccessful nursery business in Arizona to Awnlp at an inflated price. The scheme was purportedly conceived by defendants Tyler and Kindor (who allegedly controlled the Western defendants), as the nursery business which the Western defendants allegedly owned and operated, and in which various limited partnership interests had been sold, was failing, so the investors needed to be "mollified." ¶ 40. Thus, Kindor and Tyler allegedly arranged for the Andersen defendants to prepare various financial projections and a "favorable tax opinion letter" and to structure a sale to provide apparent tax write-offs that Kindor thought necessary to induce investors to purchase interests in Awnlp. ¶¶ 7B, 19, 44. Kindor gave Harold Schwartz, the president of the defendant Bryce Corporation, a memorandum of selling points that was prepared by Kindor, purportedly on the advice of the Andersen defendants, and Schwartz agreed to try to locate a purchaser, for which service he would receive a finder's fee. ¶¶ 43, 44. Schwartz, in turn, gave the proposal to his son-in-law, defendant Haber, who was employed by defendant Finesod, the asserted "control person" of the World defendants. ¶ 45.

Sometime in November of 1984, the World defendants are alleged to have agreed "to join Tyler, Kindor and Arthur Andersen in endeavoring to sell the nursery business to Awnlp through the intermediary purchaser" World Nurseries. ¶ 46. All allegedly agreed to structure the sale of the nursery business from the Western sellers to Awnlp "at an inflated purchase price through the use of a false appraisal and the use of World Nurseries as a sham intermediary purchaser." ¶ 47. Thus, pursuant to the purported "scheme," the Western defendants, in mid-December, sold the nursery business to World Nurseries for a total purchase price of $22 million, paid in the form of a $3 million "cash note" and a $17 million non-recourse note which was payable only from nursery income. Another $2 million was paid out of net sales of the nursery's "plant materials." ¶ 70. Then, on December 31, 1984, World Nurseries "contemporaneously" sold the business to Awnlp for approximately $33 million-$6.57 million in cash and a $26.43 million partnership note that was "wrapped around" the note given by World nurseries to the Western defendants. ¶ 71. Plaintiffs apparently admit that the offering memorandum provided to each of them fully disclosed the details of this transaction, including the $11 million step-up in purchase price from World Nurseries to *529 Awnlp, as they cite to the offering memorandum itself in the complaint. ¶ 70B.

Plaintiffs purchased their limited partnership interests in AWNLP sometime in December 1984. ¶ 3A. Plaintiffs claim to have done so in reliance on certain misrepresentations in, and omissions from, the Memorandum and the exhibits appended thereto. ¶¶ 88-94. The alleged misrepresentations include (a) the overvaluation of the nursery stock and plant materials; (b) representation of a tax deduction in a year prior to eligibility; (c) unreasonably high sales projections; (d) unreasonably low expense projections; and (e) representation of reliance on an independent inspection. ¶ 88. The alleged omissions include the failure to disclose that the appraisal referred to was "arbitrary" and "unreasonable"; that the purchase price of the nursery stock was "inflated"; that the projections were based on unreasonable assumptions; that the investment in AWNLP had no real economic substance; that the sale was structured so as to leave control and benefits of ownership with the Western defendants; that the nursery business had an unprofitable history; that certain orders recorded in the books and records were fictitious; that much of the inventory was unmarketable; that the Western defendants had a poor reputation; that the business was "in jeopardy of collapse"; that the defendants knew that the projections were improper; that the defendants had falsified records and inflated receivables; that prior businesses run by the Western defendants had failed to meet their obligations to creditors and limited partners; that the defendants had previously structured similar limited partnerships which had been denied deductions by the IRS; that tax opinion letters for the prior partnerships in which the deductions had been disallowed had been prepared by the Friedman & Shaftan defendants; and that AWNLP was controlled not by the designated general partner but by Finesod who had been the promoter of other limited partnerships in which the deductions were disallowed. ¶ 93.

The plaintiffs further allege that the "Western Sellers have contended in various litigation ... that each limited partner assumed personal liability on AWNLP's note to World Nurseries in proportion to each limited partner's share of interest in AWNLP." ¶ 74. They do not, however, forthrightly concede what some of the defendants allege and what is readily apparent from the offering documents: that each limited partner was required to guarantee a pro rata portion of the partnership's note in order to obtain the tax deductions that were the goal of their investment. See, e.g., Andersen Defendants' Memorandum of Law at 7.

Plaintiffs claim to have been damaged "in the amount of their investments." E.g., ¶¶ 119, 127, 131, 138, 143, 152.

II. ANALYSIS

In their motions, all of the defendants essentially assert that plaintiffs have attempted to charge all 29 defendants with a failure to disclose that the purchase price of the nursery business was too high and, hence, that the business could not make a profit. This "excessive" price was based on a appraisal of the value of the business which the plaintiffs claim all of the defendants should have known was not a true and fair appraisal. ¶ 61. We will proceed to analyze each defendant's liability, first under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5, then under Section 12(2), then under Section 17(a), then under RICO, and finally under the common law.

A. LIABILITY UNDER SECTION 10(B)

It is well settled that in order to state a claim under Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b) (1982) or Rule 10b-5, promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5 (1986), the first of plaintiffs' causes of action that we will consider, six elements must be established. These necessary elements are: (1) a material misstatement or omission, (2) indicating an intent to deceive or defraud (scienter), (3) in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, (4) through the use of interstate commerce or a national securities exchange, (5) upon which the plaintiff detrimentally *530 relied, and (6) that the fraud in fact caused the injuries. Luce v. Edelstein, 802

F.2d 49, 55 (2d Cir.1986); Feinman v. Schulman Berlin & Davis, 677 F.Supp. 168, 170 (S.D.N.Y.1988); First Federal Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Oppenheim, Appel, Dixon & Co., 629 F.Supp. 427, 438 (S.D.N.Y.1986).

The motions to dismiss the Section 10(b) claims are founded on two grounds. First, the defendants, primarily the Andersen defendants, assert that the plaintiffs cannot state a claim under Section 10(b) because any misrepresentations in the offering materials are negated by the express language of the offering memorandum itself, the tax opinion letter and the report on the projections. While the Western defendants have also moved to dismiss for failure to state a claim, [FN4] they and all of the other groups of defendants have focussed primarily on the second ground for dismissal--that the plaintiffs have not adequately alleged the element of scienter as to each defendant or group of defendants, which will require us to examine the complaint pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b). We will examine the 9(b) arguments first.

FN4. The World and Partnership defendants in the last page of their primary memorandum of law have adopted the arguments of all the other defendants which are not inconsistent with their own.

1. Rule 9(b) Motions

[1] Rule 9(b) requires that "[i]n all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Motive, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of mind of a person may be averred generally." The specificity requirement of Rule 9(b) has been found to serve several purposes: "(1) to provide a defendant with fair notice of the plaintiff[s]' claims, (2) to protect a defendant from harm to his or her reputation or goodwill, and (3) to reduce the number of strike suits." Cosmas v. Hassett, 886 F.2d 8, 11 (2d Cir.1989); (quoting Stern v. Leucadia Nat'l Corp., 844 F.2d 997, 1003 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 852, 109 S.Ct. 137, 102 L.Ed.2d 109 (1988)). Although each determination of compliance with Rule 9(b) "necessarily rests on its particular facts," Denny v. Barber, 576 F.2d 465, 470 (2d Cir.1978), as a general rule, courts in this circuit have required that:

[P]laintiff must specify: (1) precisely what statements were made in what documents or oral misrepresentations or what omissions were made, (2) the time and place of each such statement and the person responsible for making (or, in the case of omissions, not making) the same, (3) the context of such statements and the manner in which they misled the plaintiffs, and (4) what the defendants obtained as a consequence of the fraud.

Todd v. Oppenheimer & Co., Inc., 78 F.R.D. 415, 420-21 (S.D.N.Y.1978); see also Posner v. Coopers & Lybrand, 92 F.R.D. 765, 769 (S.D.N.Y.1981), aff'd, 697 F.2d 296 (2d Cir.1982); Fidenas A.G. v. Honeywell, Inc., 501 F.Supp. 1029 (S.D.N.Y.1980); Gross v. Diversified Mortg. Investors, 431 F.Supp. 1080, 1087-88 (S.D.N.Y.1977), aff'd, 636 F.2d 1201 (2d Cir.1980). A fraud complaint must also apprise each individual defendant of the specific nature of his or her participation in the fraud, Sanderson v. Roethenmund, 682 F.Supp. 205, 207 (S.D.N.Y.1988), particularly where there are multiple defendants. DiVittorio v. Equidyne Extractive Indus. Inc., 822 F.2d 1242, 1247 (2d Cir.1987). These requirements have been applied stringently, especially where allegations of securities fraud are involved. Tobias v. First City Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 709 F.Supp. 1266, 1276-77 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (collecting cases). However, the Second Circuit has recently repeated its admonition that "a court must read the complaint generously, and draw all inferences in favor of the pleader." Cosmas v. Hassett, supra, 886 F.2d at 11, 12.

[2] Although under the second sentence of Rule 9(b) a complaint need only aver intent generally, it must nonetheless allege facts which give rise to a strong inference that the defendants possessed the requisite fraudulent intent--either intent to defraud, knowledge of falsity, or reckless disregard *531 for the truth. Beck v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 820 F.2d 46, 50 (2d Cir.1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1005, 108 S.Ct. 698, 98

L.Ed.2d 650 (1988), overruled on other grounds, United States v. Indelicato, 865 F.2d 1370 (2d Cir.1989) (en banc), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 811, 110 S.Ct. 56, 107 L.Ed.2d 24 (1989). There are essentially two ways to establish a strong inference of scienter. A plaintiff may allege facts showing a motive for committing fraud and a clear opportunity for doing so. Beck, 820 F.2d at 50. Or, "[w]here motive is not apparent, it is possible to plead scienter by identifying circumstances indicating conscious behavior by the defendant, though the strength of the circumstantial allegations must be correspondingly greater." Id.

[3] The specific requirements regarding exactly what statements were made, and when, where and by whom are "somewhat relaxed" when the complaint is based on an offering memorandum. Stevens v. Equidyne Extractive Indus. 1980, 694 F.Supp. 1057, 1061 (S.D.N.Y.1988). The memorandum "satisfies 9(b)'s requirements as to identification of the time, place, and content of the alleged misrepresentation ... Furthermore, no specific connection between fraudulent representations in the Offering Memorandum and particular defendants is necessary where ... defendants are insiders or affiliates participating in the offer of the securities in question." Luce v. Edelstein, supra, 802 F.2d at 55 (citations omitted). While it is clear that general partners offering limited partnerships are considered insiders for purposes of Rule 9(b), the standard is less clear with respect to other types of defendants, particularly professional defendants. Stevens, 694 F.Supp. at 1061.

[4] There is, however, authority for the proposition that where counsel drafted the offering memorandum and were acting on behalf of the general partner, they are not, without more, corporate insiders or affiliates to whom the relaxed pleadings standards are applicable. See DiVittorio, supra, 822 F.2d at 1249; Stevens, 694 F.Supp. at 1062. Thus, they are not ordinarily liable for the general statements in the offering memorandum but rather plaintiffs must specifically attribute misstatements or omissions to them.

(a) The Andersen defendants

[5] Utilizing this as the standard for both groups of professional defendants, see Stevens, 694 F.Supp. at 1062, we determine that plaintiffs have specifically attributed statements to the Andersen defendants such that the time and place elements of 9(b) are satisfied. For example, the Andersen defendants performed two tasks in connection with the AWNLP offering memorandum: they prepared financial projections and compilation reports (based upon assumptions provided by the general partner) as well as a tax opinion letter analyzing the tax implications of the investment. Plaintiffs contend that both the tax opinion letter and the projections were materially false and misleading at the time they were made. The Andersen defendants argue, however, that plaintiffs have failed to allege facts which give rise to a strong inference of scienter, as required in this Circuit. Reading the complaint generously, we agree that plaintiffs have not alleged facts which give rise to a strong inference that the Andersen defendants possessed the requisite fraudulent intent. Taking the allegations as true that the Andersen defendants, in preparing the tax opinion letter and the projections, failed to disclose (1) the falsity of the World Information Systems ("W.I.S.") appraisal of the nursery business sold to AWNLP, ¶ 93(1); (2) the unreasonableness of the assumptions upon which the projections were based, ¶ 93(f); (3) the formulas and methods of calculation of the projections, ¶ 93(g), (4) the fact that the nursery business was failing at the time of the sale to the AWNLP, ¶ 93(r), (t), (u), and (5) the large projected operational expenses for 1985, ¶ 93(cc), we believe that the allegations as to the Andersen defendants' state of mind are merely conclusory and that there are no factual allegations which indicate that they knew of the alleged "unreasonableness" of the assumptions, the "falsity" of the appraisal, and the *532 "fact" that the nursery business was "failing."

There is no indication in the complaint of how or when either the Andersen firm or defendant Faggen supposedly knew that the projections were indeed based upon unreasonable assumptions and that the appraisal was incorrect and misleading. While the complaint repeatedly alleges that all of the defendants knew or should have known that the appraisal of the nursery business was inaccurate "because of each defendant's experience, skill, expertise and training," ¶¶ 61, 62A, 63 and 94, it does not allege that Andersen or Faggen had anything to do with the appraisal, or indeed, that they had any reason to know or believe that it was inaccurate. For example, it is not alleged that they had access to specific information showing that the appraisal was wrong. Nor is it alleged that they conducted an audit from which they should have learned that the appraisal or other documents provided by the general partner were false. Although it is alleged that the accounting firm of Peat Marwick conducted an examination in November of 1983 of the financial condition of the nursery business as of the year ending 1982, which examination was not completed, and that Peat Marwick's work papers show that Peat Marwick found some accounting irregularities, ¶¶ 54, 57, significantly, plaintiffs have not alleged that Andersen ever reviewed Peat Marwick's work papers. Even if the Andersen defendants had conducted a full audit, it is well settled that an inference of fraud does not arise from the mere fact that an auditor reported on allegedly inaccurate data. The Limited, Inc. v. McCrory Corp., 683 F.Supp. 387, 394 (S.D.N.Y.1988); see Dannenberg v. Dorison, 603 F.Supp. 1238, 1241 (S.D.N.Y.1985); Ross v. Warner, 480 F.Supp. 268, 272 (S.D.N.Y.1979). Furthermore, a purported failure to investigate "[does] not rise above the level of negligence, which is legally insufficient." O'Brien v. National Property Analysts Partners, 719 F.Supp. 222, 229 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (quoting The Limited, Inc., 683 F.Supp. at 394).

Although proof of reckless conduct will satisfy the scienter requirement, see Goldman v. McMahon, Brafman, Morgan & Co., 706 F.Supp. 256, 259 (S.D.N.Y.1989), and despite the fact that "an egregious refusal to see the obvious, or to investigate the doubtful may, in some cases, give rise to an inference of gross negligence which can be the functional equivalent of recklessness," see id., we do not believe there are any allegations in the complaint from which we can infer either gross negligence or recklessness.

Furthermore, as to the alleged failure to disclose some of the operating expenses, there is no indication that these figures were provided by the general partner to the Andersen defendants in the first place, and thus we cannot infer that the Andersen defendants knowingly failed to disclose them to the limited partners. The same can be said with respect to the allegation that the Andersen defendants knowingly failed to disclose the prior unsuccessful history of the nursery business.

Finally, with respect to the Andersen defendants' intent, we find that the alternative method of demonstrating scienter--motive--has not been established. Plaintiffs contend that the Andersen defendants were motivated to participate in the fraud because of personal gain. However, they have alleged no gain other than the fact that the Andersen firm was compensated for its professional services. It would defy common sense to hold that the motive element of the Beck scienter analysis would be satisfied merely by alleging the receipt of normal compensation for professional services rendered, because to do so would effectively abolish the requirement, as against professional defendants in a securities fraud action, of pleading facts which support a strong inference of scienter. Cf. Wilson v. Saintine Exploration and Drilling Corp., 872 F.2d 1124 (2d Cir.1989) (holding that professional defendants who merely perform their usual professional functions and receive their normal compensation are not liable under the "draconian" provisions of Section 12(2)). Accordingly, the Section 10(b) claim is dismissed with respect to the Andersen defendants for *533 failure to adequately plead the element of scienter. [FN5]

FN5. Dismissal of the primary liability on the ground of failure to allege adequately the requisite fraudulent intent also requires us to dismiss the aiding and abetting claim. As stated in Bloor v. Carro, Spanbock, Londin, Rodman & Fass, 754 F.2d 57, 62 (2d Cir.1985), a plaintiff bringing an aiding and abetting claim must show: (1) the existence of a securities law violation by the primary (as opposed to the aiding and abetting) party; (2) "knowledge" of this violation on the part of the aider and abettor; and (3) "substantial assistance" by the aider and abettor in the achievement of a primary violation. Plaintiffs must satisfy the 9(b) requirements when pleading aiding and abetting of securities fraud, see Goldman v. McMahon, Brafman, Morgan & Co., 706 F.Supp. at 260. As plaintiffs failed to show a sufficient basis to support an inference that the Andersen defendants were, at least, reckless in their preparation of the projections or the opinion letter, they likewise fail to satisfy the knowledge element necessary to predicate a claim for aiding and abetting. See id. Furthermore, the common law conspiracy allegations must also be dismissed for this same deficiency. In order to establish liability for a conspiracy to commit fraud, "a plaintiff must plead and prove (1) an agreement between the conspirator and the wrongdoer; and (2) a wrongful act committed in furtherance of the conspiracy." Bresson v. Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc., 641 F.Supp. 338, 348 (S.D.N.Y.1986). "[A] bare bones statement of 'conspiracy' ... without any supporting facts permits dismissal." Heart Disease Research Foundation v. General Motors Corp., 463 F.2d 98, 100 (2d Cir.1972). Accordingly, "[a] claim of conspiracy to defraud must allege, inter alia, facts sufficient to support a finding of an agreement among those alleged to be a part of the conspiracy." Troyer v. Karcagi, 476 F.Supp. 1142, 1153 (S.D.N.Y.1979). " 'Conspiracy liability will require knowledge plus an agreement with the wrongdoer.' " Id. (citation omitted); see also Terra Resources I v. Burgin, 664 F.Supp. 82, 89 (S.D.N.Y.1987) (conspiracy to defraud requires knowledge of the underlying scheme). Thus, even if we assume arguendo that an agreement is sufficiently pled, because plaintiffs did not adequately allege the scienter of the Andersen defendants, they cannot be held liable as co-conspirators.

(b) The Friedman & Shaftan defendants

[6] As to the other professional defendants, the attorneys, we conclude that the Section 10(b) claims are also not adequately pled pursuant to Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

First, plaintiffs have not satisfied the rule that each of the Friedman & Shaftan defendants be given notice of the specific allegations against him, her or it. DiVittorio, supra, 822 F.2d at 1247. Although plaintiffs have sued the Friedman firm itself (Friedman & Shaftan, P.C.), plaintiffs have also joined the professional services corporations' shareholders, Wilfred T. Friedman, Michael E. Greene and Marcia Shaftan as executrix of the Estate of Robert P. Shaftan. The complaint, however, constantly refers to "Friedman & Shaftan" without indicating who did what and when. Furthermore, where the plaintiffs have attempted to identify acts of the individual defendants, they were unsuccessful in so doing. For example, in paragraph 26, it is alleged that Friedman & Shaftan, through Shaftan and Greene, "engaged in a high degree of individual effort to sell interests in AWNLP" and that they answered plaintiffs' inquiries and assured plaintiffs of the bona fides, inducing them to purchase interests. However, even if we assume that the attorney defendants are "insiders" for Luce purposes, this paragraph alleges misrepresentations and conduct not tied to the offering memorandum, and therefore, specificity as to time, place and the content of the alleged misrepresentations is required. See Tobias v. First City Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 709 F.Supp. 1266, 1277 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Since paragraph 26 contains no such specificity, we conclude that these allegations are inadequately pled.

With regard to the allegations concerning the preparation of the offering memorandum itself, as we stated above, counsel who merely draft the memorandum cannot be held liable for the general statements in the offering memorandum not specifically attributed to them. See supra at 531. Thus, plaintiffs must plead the time, place and content requirements of Rule 9(b). Plaintiffs do not attribute any specific misrepresentations to counsel; indeed, with respect to the tax assistance letter and the opinion regarding the legality of the partnership units provided by the law firm, the only parts of the memorandum which arguably *534 contain representations from Friedman & Shaftan to the limited partners, no breach is alleged.

Even if we assume arguendo that the attorneys are insiders for Luce purposes, the allegations are deficient with respect to the scienter element. Plaintiffs have not pled facts which would fairly support a strong inference that any of the attorney defendants, either the firm itself or the named individuals, acted with an intent to defraud, or at least with reckless disregard for the truth. Beck, supra, 820 F.2d at 50. Assuming that the offering memorandum contained false and misleading information, plaintiffs do not allege any specific facts as to how and when any of the Friedman & Shaftan defendants learned that the offering memorandum contained such false and misleading information. Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 568-69 (2d Cir.1987); Vereins-Und Westbank AG v. Carter, 639 F.Supp. 620, 623 (S.D.N.Y.1986). There are no allegations that they had any specific communications or that they had met with any specific individuals, which facts would have created the necessary strong inference that each of the attorney defendants had the requisite fraudulent intent. Schwartz v. Novo Industries, A/S, 658 F.Supp. 795, 799 (S.D.N.Y.1987). We will not assume that clients as a matter of course communicate their allegedly fraudulent schemes, in whole or in part, to their attorneys. Furthermore, the mere fact that the Friedman firm had worked with the defendant Finesod on other offerings in the past does not raise a strong inference of fraud here in that plaintiffs do not allege that the Friedman & Shaftan defendants were ever accused of or determined to have committed any wrongdoing with respect to any of the prior tax shelters. Dannenberg v. Dorison, 603 F.Supp. 1238, 1241 (S.D.N.Y.1985). [FN6]

FN6. The aiding and abetting and conspiracy allegations against the attorney defendants fail for the same reasons articulated with reference to the Andersen defendants, supra footnote 5.

[7][8] In addition, we conclude that the entire complaint does not state a claim against Wilfred Friedman under either New York or federal vicarious liability principles. New York's Business Corporation Law § 1505(a) provides that "[e]ach shareholder, employee or agent of a professional service corporation shall be personally and fully liable and accountable for any negligent or wrongful act or misconduct committed by him or by any person under his direct supervision and control while rendering professional services on behalf of such corporation." (McKinney's 1986). While plaintiffs allege that defendants Shaftan and Greene worked on the offering memorandum and/or participated in the offering, they do not allege any such work by attorney Friedman or any direct supervision or control by him over the others. Accordingly, reading the plain words of the statute, We're Associates v. Cohen, Stracher & Bloom, 65 N.Y.2d 148, 151, 490 N.Y.S.2d 743, 744, 480 N.E.2d 357 (1985), the complaint does not state a claim under New York law on the part of Wilfred Friedman. Federal law, 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a), dictates the same result, for in order to be held liable as a "control person" there must be facts alleged supporting an inference of knowledge or reckless disregard of the fraud, see Harrison v. Enventure Capital Group, Inc., 666 F.Supp. 473, 478-79 (W.D.N.Y.1987); O'Connor & Assocs. v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 529 F.Supp. 1179, 1195 (S.D.N.Y.1981), and the defendant must "in some meaningful sense" be a culpable participant in the fraud perpetrated. See Lanza v. Drexel & Co., 479 F.2d 1277, 1299 (2d Cir.1973) (en banc).

To summarize, the Section 10(b) claims are dismissed as to all of the Friedman & Shaftan defendants for failure to plead scienter, and the entire complaint is dismissed as to Wilfred Friedman for failure to plead facts alleging supervision or control.

(c) The Bryce Corporation

[9] As to the defendant Bryce Corporation, we also conclude that the plaintiffs' complaint is inadequately pleaded pursuant to Rule 9(b). The only specific allegations in the complaint directed at Bryce are in paragraphs 6F, 42, 43, and 45. These allegations *535 do not, however, attribute any particular misrepresentation or fraudulent act or omission to defendant Bryce. Furthermore, the plaintiffs concede that Bryce is not a "Western Seller," ¶ 6A, and therefore the allegations regarding fraud by the Western Sellers are not applicable to Bryce. Moreover, accepting the allegations against Bryce as true, there are no facts in the complaint from which we could draw any inference, let alone a strong one, that Bryce knew of any fraud. As eloquently stated by Judge Leisure, "plaintiffs cannot satisfy Rule 9(b) by masking the lack of factual allegations against each defendant through broad allegations which combine the acts of several defendants to create the impression that all engaged in every aspect of the alleged fraud." O'Brien v. National Property Analysts Partners, 719 F.Supp. 222, 229 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Therefore, we reject plaintiffs' attempt in their memorandum in opposition to insert the name "Bryce" where the complaint does not do so and where the complaint indicates involvement of parties other than Bryce, such as the Western Sellers. Accordingly, the section 10(b) claims against Bryce are dismissed.

(d) The Western, World and Partnership defendants

[10] With regard to the Western defendants, we conclude that the Section 10(b) claims are adequately pleaded. Plaintiffs allege that defendants Kindor and Tyler, who are alleged to control the rest of the Western defendants, conceived the scheme to defraud because they needed to mollify other investors. ¶ 40. Kindor and Tyler are alleged to have persuaded Finesod, Haber and Minars (of the World and Partnership defendants) to join in a fraudulent scheme, ¶ 46, whereby the nursery business would be resyndicated to a new limited partnership. ¶ 41. Specifically, plaintiffs allege that all of the above parties agreed to structure the sale of the nursery business from the Western Sellers to AWNLP "at an inflated purchase price through the use of a false appraisal and the use of World Nurseries as a sham intermediary purchaser."

¶ 47. Each of these defendants was motivated by the ability to earn immediate cash profits and the Western defendants were further motivated by the ability to "mollify" their other investors. Furthermore, we find that there was a clear opportunity to commit fraud. Beck, supra, 820 F.2d at 50.

Although the Western defendants claim that they had no duty to disclose anything to the plaintiffs and therefore that they cannot be held liable under Section 10(b), we conclude that they may indeed be held liable for they are alleged to be parties to the purchase or sale, to have substantially participated in the concealment of material facts, or in the alternative to have been aiders and abettors to the sale. See Murphy v. McDonnell & Co., Inc., 553 F.2d 292, 295 (2d Cir.1977). For example, the Western Sellers are alleged to have created the scheme, and despite their protestations to the contrary, to have assisted in the preparation of the offering materials. They are also alleged to have knowingly provided the sham appraisal and other false information, which they knew were either to be the basis for the projections or actually used in the offering memorandum. Furthermore, paragraph 93 is replete with allegations of their acts or omissions from which we can infer that the Western defendants acted with the requisite fraudulent intent both with respect to the projections and other fraud. For example, paragraph 93(m) essentially alleges that the Western defendants "cooked the books" by including sham purchase orders. Paragraph 93(o) alleges that the Western Sellers prematurely shifted plants to over-sized containers for sale to AWNLP to inflate their market value. Paragraph 93(w) accuses the Western defendants of artificially inflating receivables. Paragraphs 93(n) and (s) allege that the Western Sellers prepared the sham customer list attached to the offering memorandum. Accordingly, the Western defendants motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 9(b) is denied.

As to the World and Partnership defendants, many allegations described above also support an inference that the World and Partnership defendants acted with the *536 requisite fraudulent intent, particularly the fact that Finesod and Haber were able to realize an immediate cash profit of $3.57 million, ¶¶ 53, 48, in the resale to AWNLP without any risk and without performing any function. ¶ 93(j). Beck, supra, 820 F.2d at 50 (inference of scienter where motive and clear opportunity to commit fraud). While it is true that the allegations regarding the procurement of the appraisal, ¶ 59, could probably be more particularly stated, we find that they are sufficient to give the World, Western and Partnership defendants notice of the acts for which plaintiffs seek to hold them liable. Furthermore, while it is true that these groups of defendants actually comprise over twenty individuals or entities, we cannot, at this point, in view of our obligation to accept the allegations in the complaint as true, dismiss any of these entities as not being controlled by or affiliates of either Kindor and Tyler or Haber and Finesod. Accordingly, in light of all of the foregoing and in view of the fact that the Partnership and World defendants are insiders, we find that the Section 10(b) fraud allegations are pleaded with the particularity required by Rule 9(b).

2. Rule 12(b)(6)

We will now address the Andersen, Western and World defendants' motions to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). In challenging the sufficiency of the complaint under rule 12(b)(6), the defendants bear the burden of proving that under no interpretation of the facts set forth in the complaint can the plaintiffs succeed. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 101-02, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957). As expressed above, supra at 527, for the purposes of this motion, all of the plaintiffs' allegations are accepted as true, and no claim can be dismissed "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff[s] can prove no set of facts in support of [their] claim which would entitle [them] to relief." Id.; Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 10, 101 S.Ct. 173, 176, 66 L.Ed.2d 163 (1980).

In these motions, the defendants assert that the plaintiffs cannot state a claim under Section 10(b) because any misrepresentations in the offering memorandum are negated by the express language of the offering memorandum itself, the tax opinion letter and the report on the projections. These defendants assert that there is a line of cases in this Circuit which holds that, as a matter of law, extensive cautionary language in the offering documents will preclude Section 10(b) claims based on those documents. Luce v. Edelstein, 802 F.2d 49, 56-57 (2d Cir.1986); see also Feinman v. Schulman Berlin & Davis, 677 F.Supp. 168, 170 (S.D.N.Y.1988); Andreo v. Friedlander, Gaines, Cohen, Rosenthal & Rosenberg, 651 F.Supp. 877, 881 (D.Conn.1986). While we do not agree with the assertion that this line of cases precludes all claims of misrepresentation, we do recognize that it mandates dismissal of many of the Section 10(b) claims alleged here, specifically, those founded upon the projections and other expectations which were expressed in the offering memorandum or in the attachments thereto.

[11] Plaintiffs have requested that we defer this motion until the summary judgment phase of the case, citing Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566 (2d Cir.1987). Devaney, however, does not so require; it merely stands for the proposition that courts should not consider the reasonableness of plaintiffs' reliance on a Rule 9(b) motion, as the issue goes to the merit of the plaintiffs' claims. Id. at 569. Devaney does not preclude a court from deciding the reliance issue as a matter of law on a motion pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). Indeed, it is well settled that although a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is addressed to the face of the pleading, the pleading has been interpreted by the Second Circuit as "includ[ing] any document attached to it as an exhibit or any document incorporated in it by reference." Goldman v. Belden, 754 F.2d 1059, 1065-66 (2d Cir.1985) (citations omitted). Here, the Memorandum is attached to the complaint as Exhibit A, to which, in turn, the tax opinion letter and the financial projections are appended as Exhibits B and F, respectively. It is clear from the papers submitted in this action that all parties *537 consider these voluminous documents to be part of the complaint, as do we.

Before we examine the arguments made by the defendants, we believe it is necessary to highlight the relevant portions of the offering memorandum and its attachments which will be applicable to such examination.

(a) The Offering Materials

On the front page of the Offering Memorandum, in large bold and block letters, the following statement appears:

THESE SECURITIES INVOLVE A HIGH DEGREE OF RISK
(See "Risk Factors")

The next four pages of the Memorandum, which we will label the "foreword" section and which are paginated i-iv, contain very specific warnings, all of which are repeated in greater detail in the Memorandum itself. These cautionary instructions are also in block letters, and we will set forth those that are most germane to the instant action. For example, on page i, it is stated that "AN INVESTMENT IN THE PARTNERSHIP ENTAILS SIGNIFICANT RISKS." SEE "RISK FACTORS," AND "FEDERAL INCOME TAX FACTORS." This admonition continues by listing seven of the potential risks, including:

4. SUBSTANTIAL COMPENSATION WILL BE PAID TO WORLD NURSERIES AND ITS AFFILIATES IN CONNECTION WITH THIS OFFERING AND THE ACQUISITION OF THE NURSERY ASSETS BY THE PARTNERSHIP, INCLUDING SUBSTANTIAL COMPENSATION PAID FROM THE PROCEEDS OF THIS OFFERING.

5. POTENTIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST EXIST BETWEEN THE PARTNERSHIP AND THE GENERAL PARTNER, WORLD NURSERIES, BEARDSLEY AND THEIR AFFILIATES AND COUNSEL TO THE PARTNERSHIP.

7. THERE ARE OTHER SUBSTANTIAL RISKS RELATING TO THE AVAILABILITY AND AMOUNT OF TAX

BENEFITS RESULTING FROM AN INVESTMENT IN THE PARTNERSHIP. NO RULINGS HAVE BEEN SOUGHT FROM THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE ("SERVICE") WITH RESPECT TO ANY OF THE TAX MATTERS DESCRIBED IN THIS MEMORANDUM. IF FOR FEDERAL INCOME TAX PURPOSES [one or more of seven enumerated events occurs], ALL OR A SUBSTANTIAL PART OF THE TAX BENEFITS DESCRIBED HEREIN WOULD NOT BE AVAILABLE TO THE INVESTORS. IN ADDITION, OTHER AUDIT ADJUSTMENTS MAY AFFECT BOTH THE TIMING AND THE AMOUNT OF THE TAX BENEFITS AVAILABLE.

Offering Memorandum at ii.

After these statements, specific and detailed warnings with reference to the tax opinion letter appear, after which the following, also in block letters, appears:

THE TAX OPINION IS NOT BINDING ON THE SERVICE OR ANY COURT OF LAW.

NO REPRESENTATION OR WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND ARE MADE OR INTENDED, WITH RESPECT TO THE ECONOMIC RETURN OF THE TAX BENEFITS WHICH MAY ACCRUE TO INVESTORS. NO ASSURANCE CAN BE GIVEN THAT EXISTING TAX LAWS WILL NOT BE CHANGED OR INTERPRETED ADVERSELY. A CHANGE IN OR ADVERSE INTERPRETATION OF EXISTING TAX LAWS MAY DENY THE INVESTORS ALL OR A PORTION OF THE TAX BENEFITS CONSIDERED HEREIN. EACH INVESTOR MUST CONSULT WITH HIS OWN COUNSEL AND OTHER ADVISERS WITH RESPECT TO THE TAX AND OTHER CONSEQUENCES OF AN INVESTMENT IN THE PARTNERSHIP, AND MUST REPRESENT THAT HE HAS DONE SO *538 PRIOR TO THE PURCHASE BY HIM OF ANY UNITS.

Offering Memorandum at iii.

The final cautionary words in the "foreword" section of the Memorandum relate to representations made by the general partner and other than the general partner. Basically, it is stated that only the general partner, and no one else, is authorized to supply potential investors with information. Further, there is a disclaimer that

ANY INFORMATION NOT SO SUPPLIED OR ANY STATEMENT NOT CONTAINED HEREIN CANNOT BE RELIED UPON AS HAVING BEEN AUTHORIZED BY THE PARTNERSHIP OR THE GENERAL PARTNER, ANY AFFILIATES OF THEM OR ANY PROFESSIONAL ADVISERS THERETO.

Offering Memorandum at iii. In addition, regarding the statements and representations made, there is a disclaimer that

THE STATEMENTS CONTAINED HEREIN ARE BASED ON INFORMATION BELIEVED BY THE GENERAL PARTNER TO BE RELIABLE. NO WARRANTY CAN BE MADE AS TO THE ACCURACY OF SUCH INFORMATION OR THAT CIRCUMSTANCES MAY NOT HAVE CHANGED SINCE THE DATE SUCH INFORMATION WAS SUPPLIED.

Offering Memorandum at iii-iv.

The "Risk Factors" section of the Offering Memorandum outlines in considerable detail (eleven pages), the potential risks of investing in the partnership. A number of the risks are then enumerated in further detail in other sections of the memorandum. In this section, the admonition is repeated that there is no representation made, nor can any be inferred, regarding the accuracy or completeness of the financial projections or the underlying assumptions. Offering Memorandum at 19. It is also stated in this section that there was no audit of the Partnership's financial statement performed by independent accountants, id. at 21, that there are or may be significant conflicts of interest between the "General Partner, the Partnership, World Nurseries, Beardsley, the Manager, and their respective Affiliates and their counsel," id. at 18, that there are significant tax risks, id. at 22-27.

Regarding the existing or potential conflicts of interest, these are delineated, in detail, in one and one-half pages of the memorandum. Specifically relevant for the purpose of the pending motions is the statement therein that "[t]he terms of the [agreement between World Nurseries and the Partnership for the acquisition of the Nursery Assets by the Partnership] are not the result of arm's length bargaining, although certain terms included therein are based on the Western Agreement which was negotiated at arm's length between the Western Group and World Nurseries." Offering Memorandum at 51 (emphasis added). Also germane is the paragraph regarding the defendant Friedman & Shaftan's role, It provides in part that:

Friedman & Shaftan, P.C. is acting as counsel to the Partnership in connection with this Offering and may render future legal services to the Partnership. Friedman & Shaftan, P.C. has acted as counsel to World Nurseries and its Affiliates. No independent counsel representing solely the Limited Partners has been involved in the negotiation of this offering or of the transaction proposed hereby and the partnership does not intend to retain such counsel in the future.

Id. at 52 (emphasis added).

The actual Tax Opinion Letter issued by the defendant Arthur Andersen contained the following statement:

The tax analysis with which we concur is not binding on the Internal Revenue Service and there can be no assurance that the service will not take a position contrary to any of the opinions expressed therein or that if the Service took such a position, it would not be sustained by the courts. In addition, prospective investors are urged to seek the advice of their personal tax advisors. (emphasis added)

Id. Furthermore, on the subject of expected tax benefits, it was expressly stated in the introduction to the Federal Income Tax *539 Factors section of the Memorandum, on which the tax opinion is, in large part, based, that "there can be no assurance that some of the deductions and credits claimed by the partnership will not be challenged by the Service.... A PROSPECTIVE INVESTOR SHOULD OBTAIN PROFESSIONAL GUIDANCE FROM HIS OWN TAX ADVISER IN EVALUATING THE TAX RISKS INVOLVED." Offering Memorandum at 53 (emphasis in original). In this "Tax Factors" section of the memorandum, which comprises thirty four pages, numerous potential risks are enumerated and discussed in detail, and several possible resolutions by the IRS for each issue are presented. Id. at 53-86.

As for the Financial Projections prepared by the Andersen defendants, they contain the express admonition that they were generated based on these assumptions and upon appraisals of the nursery items as well as the sales of the nursery items. Some assumptions may not materialize, and unanticipated events and circumstances may occur subsequent to the date of the projections. Accordingly, the actual results achieved during this projection period may vary from the projections and the variations may be substantial.

Id. The cover letter which accompanied the projections, dated December 14, 1984, likewise states that the projections "are based on appraisals, assumptions and estimates which were made by the representatives of Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership...." The letter further states that Andersen's sole undertaking with respect to the projections was to satisfy itself "as to the mathematical accuracy of the projections and that they fairly reflect the estimates and assumptions contained therein." The letter then recites extremely explicit warnings as to the accuracy and achievability of the projections:

The selection of estimates and assumptions requires the exercise of judgment and is subject to uncertainties relating to the effect that changes in legislation or economic or other circumstances may have on future events. There can be no assurance that the assumptions or data upon which they are based are accurate. Variations of such assumptions could significantly affect the projections. To the extent that the assumed events do not occur, the outcome may vary significantly from that projected. Accordingly, we express no opinion on the achievability of the results presented in the projections, and no representation to the contrary may be made or implied. (emphasis added)

The Subscription Agreement, located at Exhibit J to the Offering Memorandum, signed by each of the plaintiffs, contains the following relevant representations and warranties by the investors: "I have been informed that my investment is a high risk investment, and in evaluating such investment I have consulted with my own investment and/or legal and/or tax advisor" ¶ 2(c); "With respect to the tax and other legal aspects of my investment I have relied solely upon the advice of my own tax and legal advisors" ¶ 2(i); and "I recognize that the Partnership is newly organized and has no history of operations or earnings and is a speculative venture ...," ¶ 2(j).

Finally, we note that the Offering Memorandum fully discloses the details of the sale of the nursery from the Western Sellers to World Nurseries and the subsequent sale, two weeks later, by World Nurseries to the Partnership, including the $11 million step-up in purchase price from World Nurseries to the Partnership. Offering Memorandum at 36-37. In fact, plaintiffs' complaint pleads the details of the sale and cites to the offering memorandum, thus implicitly conceding that there was indeed full disclosure of the sales.

(b) Analysis

[12] In view of all of the foregoing warnings and cautionary language contained in the tax opinion letter, the projections, and the offering memorandum itself (particularly the foreword and tax factors sections), we conclude that Luce and its progeny are applicable here so as to preclude liability for misrepresentations regarding expected or future tax benefits or *540 profits. In fact, Luce specifically involved allegations that statements in the offering memorandum regarding financial projections of future cash flow and expected tax benefits were materially misleading. Luce v. Edelstein, 802 F.2d at 56-57. The projections in Luce, like those in issue here, contained warnings that they were "necessarily speculative in nature," that "[n]o assurance [could] be given that these projections [would] be realized," and that "[a]ctual results may vary from the predictions and that these variations may be material." Luce, supra, at 56. Accordingly, the Luce court stated that it "was not inclined to impose liability on the basis of statements that clearly 'bespeak caution' ". Id.

Relying on Luce, the court in Feinman v. Schulman Berlin & Davis, 677 F.Supp. 168, 170-71 (S.D.N.Y.1988), rejected plaintiffs' Section 10(b) claims relating to projected tax benefits. There, after detailing the cautionary language in the offering memorandum, which we note is quite similar to that in issue here, the court stated that the "offering memorandum warned plaintiffs not to rely on the misrepresentations which the defendants allegedly made. Plaintiffs' reliance on these representations, if made, was unjustified and dismissal is appropriate." Id. at 171. See also Andreo v. Friedlander, Gaines, Cohen, Rosenthal & Rosenberg, 651 F.Supp. 877, 881 (D.Conn.1986) (dismissing Section 10(b) claims because "the language of the document in question limited the degree to which investors should rely on it").

The projections in issue here make clear that they "are based upon assumptions made by Arizona World Nurseries Limited Partnership of the income and expenses and cash flow from the operations of the nursery." Offering Memorandum, Ex. F: "Notes and Assumptions" section of the Financial Projections at 1. Furthermore, the projections expressly cautioned that they were based upon these assumptions and appraisals, and that some of the assumptions may not materialize, and thus, that the actual results achieved could then vary from the projections substantially. In addition, the cover letter which accompanied the projections made clear the limited role that the Andersen defendants assumed with reference to the projections (that they did not perform an audit and that they did not verify the assumptions provided by the general partner), and once again, explicitly warned, as set out above, as to the accuracy and achievability of the projections. Certainly, then, no misrepresentation claim can be predicated upon the fact that the projections did not bear out. Luce, supra, at 57; Feinman, supra, at 170-71; Andreo, supra, at 881-82.

Likewise, the tax opinion letter states only that Andersen had "reviewed" the material in the private offering memorandum, and particularly the "Federal Income Tax Factors" section (which we note includes a lengthy discussion of the deductibility of the purchase price of the nursery stock and the potential challenges by the IRS). Based on this review, Andersen had determined that, in its opinion, "all material Federal tax issues have been considered and have been fully and fairly discussed," that "the Partnership will more likely than not prevail on each material tax issue presented," and that "in the aggregate the tax benefits of an investment in the Partnership will more likely than not be realized." Offering Memorandum, Ex. B. Andersen never stated that the limited partners were certain to receive their desired tax deduction; rather, the accountants issued warnings to the contrary, as set forth in full above. It is clear, from the tax opinion letter, the Tax Factors section of the offering memorandum, and the warning pages in block letters in the "foreword" section of the memorandum, that no assurances were made by the Andersen defendants regarding the availability of the deductions or the accuracy of the appraisal.

Furthermore, as can be seen from the warnings in the front of the offering memorandum also quoted above, as well as the "Tax Risks" section of the Memorandum, and as stated on page two of the tax opinion letter, Andersen relied on the factual information provided to it by the management of the partnership. Tax Opinion Letter at 2 (Andersen "relied on management and their legal counsel for business and *541 legal matters"); Offering Memorandum at 22 ("INVESTORS ARE CAUTIONED THAT THE CONCLUSIONS IN THE TAX OPINION ARE BASED UPON CERTAIN REPRESENTATIONS TO ARTHUR ANDERSEN BY THE GENERAL PARTNER"). We conclude that, given all of the cautionary language, Andersen's tax opinion cannot be read to mean that Andersen undertook to make representations of any kind regarding the value of the nursery stock. Furthermore, we find that, to the extent that plaintiffs relied on the tax opinion letter as representing otherwise, such reliance was not reasonable. Thus, plaintiffs cannot state a claim based upon the fact that the IRS disallowed the deductions.

Accordingly, those Section 10(b) claims that must be, and are hereby, dismissed against all the defendants are the claims of misrepresentation based on the future expectations and performance of the limited partnership contained in the offering memorandum or its attachments. The warnings and disclaimers discussed above clearly limited the degree to which an investor could reasonably rely on these documents as a forecast of the future. Luce v. Edelstein, 802 F.2d at 56-57.

[13][14] We believe, however, that there are several asserted misrepresentations that can not be dismissed on the instant record. For example, the cautionary language may not be sufficient to disclaim liability on the part of either the World, Partnership or Western defendants for the misrepresentations, omissions and fraudulent conduct regarding the then-existing condition and value of the nursery business, to wit: the nursery stock and plant materials, the equipment, the customer lists and so forth, as the disclamatory language quoted above states that the projections were based on the appraisal procured by the World and Western defendants and on assumptions provided by the general partner. All of the Section 10(b) claims regarding then-existing misrepresentations are, however, dismissed as to the Andersen defendants, see Andreo, 651 F.Supp. at 881, as well as the Friedman & Shaftan defendants and the Bryce Corporation, because of both the limited role, if any, these defendants had regarding the documentation and authentication of the then-existing conditions and value, and our conclusion above that the scienter element was not properly pleaded with respect to these three groups of defendants. On the other hand, claims of misrepresentation relating to then-existing conditions and value are sustained for the purposes of the present motion as to the World, Partnership, and Western defendants.

B. LIABILITY UNDER SECTION 12(2) OF THE SECURITIES ACT

[15] Section 12(2) of the Securities Act provides purchasers with a cause of action against a person who "offers or sells a security" by means of a defective prospectus. 15 U.S.C. § 771 (2). If a security is sold "by means of" a misstatement or omission, the purchaser may tender the security to the seller and recover the purchase price plus interest, less income, or if the purchaser no longer owns the security, he or she may recover equivalent rescissory damages. Randall v. Loftsgaarden, 478 U.S. 647, 655-56, 106 S.Ct. 3143, 3148-49, 92 L.Ed.2d 525 (1986). There is no need for reliance by the plaintiffs on the misrepresentation, L. Loss, Fundamentals of Securities Regulation 889 (2d ed. 1988) (citing, inter alia, Wigand v. Flo-Tek, Inc., 609 F.2d 1028, 1034 (2d Cir.1979)), and there is no need for plaintiffs to establish a causal connection between the misrepresentation and the damage suffered, if any. Loss, supra; see also Wilson v. Saintine Exploration and Drilling Corp., 872 F.2d 1124, 1127 (2d Cir.1989).

Plaintiffs here allege that all of the defendants are statutory sellers of the limited partnership interests, or in the alternative, that they are aiders and abettors to a statutory seller. The Second Circuit has held that "persons who do not meet the Pinter test for statutory sellers may not be held liable under Section 12 as aiders and abettors."

Wilson, supra, 872 F.2d at 1127 (construing Pinter v. Dahl, 486 U.S. 622, 108 S.Ct 2063, 2083, 100 L.Ed.2d 658 (1988) (which interpreted Section 12(1))). Accordingly, unless we find a defendant or a *542 group of defendants to be a "statutory seller," the definition of which has been expanded by the Second Circuit in its interpretation of Pinter v. Dahl, the Section 12(2) claims ought to be dismissed as to that defendant or group of defendants. In addition, most of the defendants claim that the Section 12(2) claims are not timely, another issue which we must address.

1. Statutory Seller

[16][17] A statutory seller under Section 12(2) is one who is alleged to have sold, offered to sell, or solicited the sale of the securities for financial gain. Wilson, 872 F.2d at 1126 (applying the Section 12(1) analysis of Pinter to Section 12(2)). There is no need to prove scienter or loss causation in order to hold a statutory seller liable. Id. Thus, it is clear that any person or entity that passes title or offers to pass title in a security for value may be found liable. The question of when a party will be liable for solicitation is somewhat murkier. As stated in Wilson, it is not solicitation to recommend the purchase of a security to benefit the buyer. "[L]iability extends only to the person who successfully solicits the purchase, motivated at least in part by a desire to serve his own financial interests or those of the securities owner." Id. at 2079 (emphasis added) [quoting Pinter, 108 S.Ct. 2063, 2079]. It also is clear that mere participation in the solicitation by another is not solicitation, id. at 2081 n. 27, which is why the lawyers performing "only ... their professional services" are not liable under § 12. Id. at 2081. The proper focus of the analysis appears to be on the "defendant's relationship with the plaintiff-purchaser", rather than "the defendant's degree of involvement in the securities transaction and its surrounding circumstances." Id.

Wilson, 872 F.2d at 1129 (Timbers, J., dissenting).

[18] Under this analysis, we conclude, for the reasons immediately following, that the plaintiffs have not stated a claim under this section as against the Andersen defendants, the defendant Bryce, or the Friedman & Shaftan defendants.

With respect to the Andersen defendants, only paragraph 19B of the complaint could possibly be construed to allege solicitation. However, neither relevant subparagraph, (i) or (iii), does so with the particularity required by Rule 9(b), the standards of which were set out above. For example, it is alleged that certain Andersen partners assisted the brokers in the sale of the interests; however, when or where such "assistance" was rendered and to whom exactly is not alleged. Essentially, this assertion constitutes an allegation that the Andersen defendants assisted the solicitation efforts of another, which the Supreme Court has held to be insufficient to allege seller status. Pinter v. Dahl, 108 S.Ct at 2081 n. 27 (interpreting Section 12(1), but applied by the Second Circuit to Section 12(2)).

Furthermore, although it is alleged that "Andersen engaged in a high degree of effort to sell the securities through the [] identified partners, and was in actual contact with investors and their representative", this allegation fails since it does not identify the statements themselves, the time and place they were made, or the investors. We do not even know that any of the plaintiffs in this action comprise the investors purportedly in contact with the Andersen defendants. Finally, plaintiffs have not satisfied the element in Wilson that requires the solicitation "for a financial gain." Id. at 1126. The Wilson court stated that "the draconian provisions of Section 12 must not be extended to include [professionals] who have performed only their usual professional functions in preparing documents for an offering." Id. Other than the usual fees for professional services rendered in connection with the provision of the tax opinion letter and the projections, no financial gain, i.e., commissions or finders' fees, is alleged. Accordingly, we dismiss the Section 12(2) claim as to the Andersen defendants.

As to the defendant Bryce Corporation, the foregoing analysis also applies. Although Bryce is alleged to have been eligible to receive a finders' fee from the Western *543 defendants for "finding" the World defendants, ¶¶ 42, 43, there are no allegations that Bryce in any way sold limited partnership interests to, or solicited such sales of, any of the plaintiffs. Therefore, the Section 12(2) claim is dismissed as against Bryce.

The above analysis is also germane with respect to the Friedman and Shaftan defendants. Although plaintiffs attempt to allege "solicitation for financial gain" by the allegation in paragraph 109 that "Friedman & Shaftan received sales commissions in connection with its finding investors to become limited partners in AWNLP," this paragraph, like paragraph 26 discussed supra, at 533-34, is not sufficiently particular under Rule 9(b) as there are no facts alleged which support it. For example, plaintiffs have not alleged that any of the Friedman & Shaftan defendants introduced any of the plaintiffs to the general partner or actually "brokered" the sale of any of the AWNLP interests. This is information which the plaintiffs have access to and which should have been alleged. Accordingly, we dismiss the Section 12(2) claim against the Friedman & Shaftan defendants. [FN7]

FN7. Even if we were to find these allegations of "solicitation for financial gain" sufficient, the Section 12(2) claim against the Friedman & Shaftan defendants would not pass muster under the analysis of Section 13, infra at 543-44, as plaintiffs have not sufficiently implicated them in the fraudulent concealment.

It is clear that the Section 12(2) claim cannot be dismissed against either the World or Partnership defendants on the grounds that they were not statutory sellers. In fact, these defendants have not addressed the claim in their briefs (save for the footnote to the conclusion that they join in the motions made by the other parties where they are applicable), indicating by their silence that they recognize that they could not prevail on the argument. Nor do the Western defendants argue that they are not statutory sellers [FN8]; rather, they argue only that the claim is pleaded deficiently in that the requirements of Section 13 of the Securities Act have not been met. Thus, we must now examine this assertion before we can determine whether the plaintiffs have stated section 12(2) claims against the World, Partnership, and Western defendants.

FN8. Whether or not these defendants are statutory sellers is a question we will leave for another day when the issue has been properly briefed.

2. Statute of Limitations

Section 13 of the Act provides that Section 12(2) allegations, even if otherwise sufficient, can state a cognizable claim only if they establish on their face that the claim was "brought within one year after the discovery of the untrue statement or omission or after such discovery should have been made by the exercise of reasonable diligence.... In no event shall any action be brought ... more than three years after the sale." It has been held that plaintiffs have the burden of pleading compliance with statute of limitations in Section 13, Krome v. Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc., 637 F.Supp. 910, 914, vacated in part on other grounds, 110 F.R.D. 693 (S.D.N.Y.1986), and that a complaint which does not adequately do so is subject to dismissal. Id. at 913-15; see Quantum Overseas N.V. v. Touche Ross, 663 F.Supp. 658, 662 (S.D.N.Y.1987).

[19][20] To satisfy Section 13, in addition to setting forth (1) the time and circumstances of the discovery of the allegedly fraudulent statements or omissions, plaintiffs must (2) plead facts demonstrating the efforts they made to discover the alleged fraud and (3) the reasons why they could not have done so sooner. Sanderson v. Roethenmund, 682 F.Supp. 205, 208 (S.D.N.Y.1988); Quantum, 663 F.Supp. at 662. Plaintiffs allege that they purchased their partnership interests, in reliance upon the allegedly false offering memorandum, in or around December 1984. ¶ 3. Thus, because more than one year from the commission of the fraud elapsed prior to plaintiffs' filing of this action, plaintiffs must plead their diligence. Boley v. Pineloch Assocs., Ltd., 700 F.Supp. 673, 676 (S.D.N.Y. *544 1988). As a preliminary matter, we observe that the Section 12(2) claims in the actions commenced after December 1987, three years after the sale of the securities, are untimely due to the absolute three year statute of limitations provided by Section 13. Miller v. Grigoli, 712 F.Supp. 1087, 1091 (S.D.N.Y.1989); see also Krome v. Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc., supra, 637 F.Supp. at 914 ("Where the very statute that creates the cause of action also contains a limitations period, the statute of limitations not only bars the remedy but also destroys the liability."). Thus, the Section 12(2) claims in the Frost, LaCorte, Mills, and Clark actions are time-barred. They are also time-barred under the one year provision of Section 13 as the latest date plaintiffs claim to have discovered the fraud is November of 1986. ¶ 112.

[21][22] As to the plaintiffs in the original Friedman and Schumate actions (on whose behalf the consolidated complaint was filed), only twenty eight of these plaintiffs commenced an action in December 1986, two years after they purchased their interests in AWNLP by means of the allegedly fraudulent offering memorandum. All of the plaintiffs in the consolidated complaint assert that they failed to discover the fraud within one year of the sale because of the defendants' so-called "fraudulent concealment" as alleged in paragraphs 111-19. Allegations of fraudulent concealment, like all fraud allegations, must be stated with particularity. Sanderson, 682 F.Supp at 208 n. 7. If plaintiffs allege that discovery of the fraud was delayed by the actions of a particular defendant, they must set forth in the complaint the essential facts supporting such allegations. Krome, 637 F.Supp. at 914. Thus, the complaint must show that a particular defendant "took positive steps after the commission of the initial fraud to keep it concealed." Id.

[23] We conclude that the plaintiffs have arguably satisfied the above standards of pleading fraudulent concealment against the Western, Partnership and World defendants due to the allegations in paragraphs 111, 113-

116. These paragraphs specifically delineate how these defendants allegedly concealed the fraud from the plaintiffs. For example, although the allegations in paragraphs 111(a), 115, and 116 concern offerings in investment vehicles allegedly controlled by the Western defendants or the World defendants other than AWNLP, it is alleged that these investments were promoted to the plaintiffs. ¶ 111(a). Plaintiffs adequately explain why the offering memoranda for these investments precluded them from discovering the facts upon which their claims are predicated. Although certain of the allegations, such as those in paragraph 111(b), could be more precise, we believe that the fraudulent concealment section, taken as a whole, gives the World, Partnership, and Western defendants fair notice as to the plaintiffs' contentions and the grounds upon which they rest.

[24] We acknowledge that we may not decide on a motion to dismiss whether or not the plaintiffs were indeed diligent, yet we must decide whether the issue has been properly pleaded. Krome, supra at 914; Hill, N. Der, 521 F.Supp. 1307 1388-89 (D. Del. 1981). -89. Although we have concluded that fraudulent concealment is properly pleaded, we do not believe that plaintiffs have literally satisfied the other requirements of Section 13, as their allegations with respect to their efforts to discover the fraud are quite vague. For instance, it is not specifically alleged which plaintiffs "read information" sent by which defendants or what the information was, which plaintiffs actually visited the nursery and what those individuals saw that misled them in what way, and which retained "legal and financial advisors" and what the plaintiffs were told by them. Furthermore, it strains credulity to believe that all seventy plaintiffs performed all of these acts. Assuming for a moment that these allegations were adequately alleged and that a handful of the plaintiffs did all of these things, we cannot permit all of the plaintiffs to profit from the diligent efforts of but a few. At this point, however, we decline to dismiss the Section 12(2) claims against the Western, World and Partnership defendants on this ground, in light of *545 the fact that the fraudulent concealment is properly pleaded. E.g., In re Gas Reclamation, Inc. Securities Litigation, 659 F.Supp. 493, 508 (S.D.N.Y.1987); see Boley, supra, 700 F.Supp. at 677. We also recognize that the plaintiffs' own pleadings indicate several different dates that they could have discovered the fraud, to wit: February 7, 1986, the "middle of 1986", November of 1986, and December of 1986. Thus, although we decline to dismiss the Section 12(2) claims against them at this time, we anticipate further motion practice by the Western, World and Partnership defendants on the timeliness of this claim with respect to each plaintiff after discovery has concluded and the record is complete.

In sum, the Section 12(2) claims are dismissed with prejudice as against the Bryce, Andersen and remaining Friedman & Shaftan defendants, but retained as against the Western, World and Partnership defendants.

C. LIABILITY UNDER SECTION 17(A)

[25] We have previously been confronted with the question of whether Section 17 of the Securities Act of 1933 provides for a private cause of action. In Tobias v. First City Nat'l Bank and Trust Co., 709 F.Supp. 1266, 1274-76 (S.D.N.Y.1989), we recognized the split in authority in both the Circuit courts as well as the courts within the Southern District. After carefully reviewing the cases, we held that there is no implied right of action provided under Section 17. Id. We see no reason to depart from this conclusion at this time, and accordingly, plaintiffs' Section 17(a) claims are dismissed with prejudice.

D. LIABILITY UNDER RICO

Plaintiffs' sixth claim for relief alleges violations of RICO, specifically 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), (c) and (d), by all of the defendants. "The law surrounding the RICO statutory frame is a rapidly shifting, evolving corpus, whose practical interpretation presents a continual challenge to the courts." Goldman v. McMahon, Brafman, Morgan & Co., 706 F.Supp. 256, 261 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Because Beauford v. Helmsley, 865 F.2d 1386 (2d Cir.1989) (en banc), vacated for further consideration, 492 U.S. 914, 109 S.Ct. 3236, 106 L.Ed.2d 584 (1989), upheld by Order of September 15, 1989, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 992, 110 S.Ct. 539, 107 L.Ed.2d 537 (1989) and H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., 492 U.S. 229, 109 S.Ct. 2893, 1899, 106 L.Ed.2d 195 (1989), redefined and recharacterized the standards for the enterprise, the pattern and continuity, we asked the parties to rebrief the portions of their motions concerning RICO in light of these changes.

Addressing first the claim under section 1962(c), it is well established that to state a cause of action under this section plaintiffs must show "(1) conduct (2) of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of racketeering activity." Sedima S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 496, 105 S.Ct. 3275, 3284, 87 L.Ed.2d 346 (1985) (footnote omitted). Racketeering activity is the commission of certain predicate acts, specified in the statute, for which a defendant could be convicted, id. at 488, 105 S.Ct. at 3280, and a pattern of activity requires proof of at least two such acts, 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5), "that were related and that amounted to, or threatened the likelihood of, continued criminal activity." H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., 109 S.Ct. at 1899.

All of the defendants originally based their motions to dismiss the RICO claims on (1) their assertions that plaintiffs had failed to adequately allege any predicate acts and (2) that the enterprise element was not adequately alleged. [FN9] In light of Beauford and H.J. Inc., they continue to argue the former and, apparently conceding that the enterprise element is met, now claim that the pattern element is not alleged satisfactorily.

FN9. Only the Friedman & Shaftan and World and Partnership defendants specifically addressed the other RICO claims alleged under Sections 1962(a) and (d).

[26][27] Regarding the first argument for dismissal, we find that some of the defendants' motions must be denied and some must be granted. We reach this result *546 based upon our conclusion that plaintiffs have stated some securities fraud violations only against some of the defendants, and because the plaintiffs allege that these violations (in addition to allegations of mail fraud) constitute the predicate acts of racketeering activity. Accordingly, the motions, made by the Western, World, and Partnership defendants, to dismiss the RICO claims for failure to adequately plead the predicate acts are denied, as plaintiffs have adequately pleaded the securities fraud predicates against these defendants. However, as we have dismissed plaintiffs' securities law claims against the Friedman & Shaftan defendants, the Andersen defendants and the Bryce defendants, and because we find that the elements of mail fraud [FN10] have not been adequately pleaded as against these defendants in that plaintiffs have not alleged facts giving rise to a strong inference of intentional fraud on the part of these defendants, see Beck v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., supra, 820 F.2d at 49, we dismiss the Section 1962(c) claims against the Bryce, Andersen and Friedman & Shaftan defendants. Moss v. Morgan Stanley Inc., 719 F.2d 5, 17-19 (2d Cir.1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1025, 104 S.Ct. 1280, 79 L.Ed.2d 684 (1984).

FN10. In order to state a claim for mail fraud, plaintiffs must allege (1) the existence of a scheme to defraud; (2) defendant's knowing or intentional participation in that scheme; and (3) use of the interstate mails in furtherance of the fraudulent scheme. See Beck v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 820 F.2d 46, 49 (2d Cir.1987), overruled on other grounds, United States v. Indelicato, 865 F.2d 1370 ((2d Cir.) (en banc), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 811, 110 S.Ct. 56, 107 L.Ed.2d 24 (1989); United States v. Von Barta, 635 F.2d 999, 1005 n. 14 (2d Cir.1989), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998, 101 S.Ct. 1703, 68 L.Ed.2d 199 (1981); Soper v. Simmons Int'l, Ltd., 632 F.Supp. 244 (S.D.N.Y.1986).

[28] We turn now to the defendants' other chief ground for dismissal--that the plaintiffs have failed to allege predicate offenses possessing the "continuity" needed to establish a pattern of racketeering activity. We have already concluded that the Section 12(2) and certain of the Section 10(b) securities fraud predicates can not be dismissed as against the Western, World and Partnership defendants. Plaintiffs have alleged, in addition, that these defendants also committed mail fraud by "transmitt[ing] the Private Placement Memorandum to the plaintiffs at their residences or offices in the States hereinabove stated [in ¶ 4] in December, 1984." ¶ 147. [FN11] We find that the predicate acts of mail fraud are not deficient as against these same defendants, in light of our previous determination that plaintiffs have adequately pleaded scienter against these defendants, and our conclusion that plaintiffs have also adequately pleaded the other requirements of mail fraud--the existence of a fraudulent scheme and the use of the mails to further the scheme. [FN12]

FN11. Although plaintiffs also allege wire fraud, they do not specify any such wire transmissions. Because allegations of wire fraud must be pleaded with the specificity required by Rule 9(b), and in light of the fact that the time, place and content of such alleged wire transmissions have not been pleaded, we conclude that the wire fraud claims are deficient.

FN12. "Where one does an act with knowledge that the use of the mails will follow in the ordinary course of business, or where such use can reasonably be foreseen, even though not actually intended, then he 'causes' the mails to be used." Pereira v. United States, 347 U.S. 1, 8-9, 74 S.Ct. 358, 362-63, 98 L.Ed. 435 (1954).

[29] Although none of the defendants have raised the issue of whether there are at least two predicate acts charged, we believe it incumbent upon us to do so in light of a recent case in this district. In Polycast Technology Corporation v. Uniroyal, Inc., 728 F.Supp. 926 (S.D.N.Y.1989), the Court, examined, apparently for the first time in this Circuit, the issue of whether two separate violations of the securities laws which arise from a single act, such as misrepresentations made in one document in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, can be regarded as charging two predicate acts. Finding no authority in this Circuit, the Court looked to cases in other circuits, and was persuaded by two cases in the Eighth and Ninth Circuits. United States v. Walgren, 885 F.2d 1417, 1425 (9th Cir.1989); United States v. Kragness, 830 F.2d 842, 861 (8th *547 Cir.1987). Although neither of these cases involved fraud in the sale of securities, it is true that both these cases stand for the proposition that it is not proper under RICO to charge two predicate acts where one action violates two statutes. Walgren, 885 F.2d at 1425; Kragness, 830 F.2d at 861. The Polycast opinion does not, however, discuss the cases in other circuits where the courts have held otherwise. See, e.g., United States v. Watchmaker, 761 F.2d 1459, 1475 (11th Cir.1985) (the standard is "whether each act constitutes a separate violation of the [state or federal] statute governing the conduct in question. If distinct statutory violations are found, the predicate acts will be considered distinct irrespective of the circumstances under which they arose."), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1100, 106 S.Ct. 880, 88 L.Ed.2d 917 (1986); see also United States v. Licavoli, 725 F.2d 1040, 1046 (6th Cir.1984), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1252, 104 S.Ct. 3535, 82 L.Ed.2d 840 (1984).

If we were to follow the position adopted in Polycast, then the Section 12(2) and Section 10(b) violations could be construed as only one predicate act in that they are both arguably based on the same set of misrepresentations in the offering memorandum. However, even assuming arguendo that these two violations only support one predicate act, there nonetheless appear to be at least two predicate acts charged in the consolidated complaint. First, we observe that in Polycast, there was only one plaintiff, i.e., victim. Here, we have over seventy plaintiffs/victims (including those in the related cases), each of whom alleges securities fraud violations. Thus, even if there is only one predicate act per plaintiff for the securities violations, there are still more than seventy different predicate acts. See United States v. Kaplan, 886 F.2d 536, 541-42 (2d Cir.1989) (bribes offered to two persons in a conversation with one of them stated two predicate acts) petition for cert. filed, 58

U.S.L.W. 3431 (U.S. December 13, 1989) (No. 89-1000); Beauford v. Helmsley, 865 F.2d 1386, 1391-92 (2d Cir.1989) (en banc), vacated for further consideration, --- U.S. ---, 109 S.Ct. 3236, 106 L.Ed.2d 584 (1989), upheld by Order of September 15, 1989 (finding each act of fraudulent mailing, over 8,000 of them, separately indictable and therefore sufficient to support independent predicate acts); United States v. Indelicato, 865 F.2d 1370, 1381-85 (2d Cir.) (en banc) (nearly simultaneous shooting and killing of three persons constituted more than one predicate act), cert. denied, --- U.S. ---, 110 S.Ct. 56, 107 L.Ed.2d 24 (1989). Second, as discussed above, the consolidated complaint does not merely allege securities fraud violations; there are also cognizable mail fraud violations. Beauford, supra. Accordingly, we conclude that the requirement of charging at least two predicate acts is satisfied.

[30] We must now consider whether these predicates are sufficiently related and amount to, or pose a threat of, continuity such that they constitute a pattern of racketeering activity. H.J. Inc., 109 S.Ct. at 2900. Adopting a provision from the Dangerous Special Offender Sentencing Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3575, et seq., the Supreme Court defined "relatedness" as "'criminal acts that have the same or similar purposes, results, participants, victims, or methods of commission, or otherwise are interrelated by distinguishing characteristics and are not isolated events.'" H.J. Inc., 109 S.Ct. at 2901 (quoting 18 U.S.C. § 3575(d)). Thus, the necessary relationship between predicate acts may be established in a number of ways, including "temporal proximity, or common goals, or similarity of methods, or repetitions." United States v. Indelicato, 865 F.2d 1370, 1382 (2d Cir.) (en banc), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 811, 110 S.Ct. 56, 107 L.Ed.2d 24 (1989).

Clearly, the requirement of relatedness is satisfied. The alleged mail fraud, whereby defendants transmitted the offering memorandum to each of the plaintiffs, is unquestionably related to the alleged fraud in connection with the sale of securities to each plaintiff, with each act being temporally proximate to the others. Similarly, the purposes of the acts as well as the methods of commission were the same.

*548 The question of continuity is much more difficult. The Supreme Court, in H.J. Inc., recognized the difficulty of defining the concept of "continuity," and offered the following guidance:

"Continuity" is both a closed- and open-ended concept, referring either to a closed period of repeated conduct, or to past conduct that by its nature projects into the future with a threat of repetition.... It is, in either case, centrally a temporal concept- and particularly so in the RICO context, where what must be continuous, RICO's predicate acts or offenses, and the relationship these predicates must bear one to another, are distinct requirements. A party alleging a RICO violation may demonstrate continuity over a closed period by proving a series of related predicates extending over a substantial period of time. Predicate acts extending over a few weeks or months and threatening no future criminal conduct do not satisfy this requirement: Congress was concerned in RICO with long-term criminal conduct. Often a RICO action will be brought before continuity can be established in this way. In such cases, liability depends on whether the threat of continuity is demonstrated....

H.J. Inc., 109 S.Ct. at 2902 (citations omitted) (emphasis in original). Continuity may be inferred from all of the surrounding circumstances, including the acts themselves or the nature of the enterprise. H.J. Inc., 109 S.Ct. at 2902; see Beauford, 865 F.2d at 1391-92 (inferring threat of continuity from the acts); Indelicato, 865 F.2d at 1384 (inferring threat of continuity from the enterprise).

Although the specific acts charged in the Consolidated Complaint relate to the sale of interests in one particular investment vehicle, the complaint also clearly alleges that the World, Western and Partnership (save the AWNLP itself which is bankrupt) defendants are involved in the business of selling similar interests to the public on a continuing basis and that these offerings are also alleged to be fraudulent. See, e.g., ¶ 8G (allegations of fraudulent offerings prior to the AWNLP offering), ¶¶ 6I and 111, 150-51 (allegations relating to the attempted fraudulent resyndication of the AWNLP nursery business), and ¶¶ 115-16 (allegations for fraudulent offerings since the AWNLP offering). Thus, despite the fact that the particular predicate acts complained of spanned only a few months, we conclude that the plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged at least the threat of continuity by demonstrating that the predicates are a part of these defendants' regular way of doing business. H.J. Inc., 109 S.Ct. at 2902; Amsler v. Corwin Petroleum Corp., 715 F.Supp. 103, 103-04 (S.D.N.Y.1989); see also Reinfeld v. Ricklis, 722 F.Supp. 1077, 1083 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (threat of continuity found from allegations that relatively short-lived scheme was part of a larger pattern of misconduct). Accordingly, the Section 1962(c) claims cannot be dismissed against the World, Partnership and Western defendants.

[31] Turning now to the determination of whether the RICO conspiracy is adequately alleged, we conclude that it is not. In order to properly plead such a conspiracy under Section 1962(d), plaintiffs must allege that the " 'defendant himself at least agreed to commit two or more predicate crimes.' " United States v. Teitler, 802 F.2d 606, 613 (2d Cir.1986) (quoting United States v. Ruggiero, 726 F.2d 913, 921 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 831, 105 S.Ct. 118, 83 L.Ed.2d 60 (1984)). The commission of the acts is not necessary; only the agreement is required. Teitler, 802 F.2d at 613. Furthermore, "the commission of the acts is distinct from an agreement to commit them, and a violation of § 1962(d) requires different proof than a violation of § 1962(c)." United States v. Bonanno Organized Crime Family, 683 F.Supp. 1411, 1441 (E.D.N.Y.1988), appealed from on other grounds and aff'd, 879 F.2d 20 (2d Cir.1989) (citations omitted). While plaintiffs allege that each of the defendants committed two or more of the predicate acts, ¶ 146, the complaint merely states that FN13. We note that even if an agreement had been properly alleged, the Bryce, Andersen and Friedman & Shaftan defendants could not be held to be RICO conspirators. Mere allegations of agreement are not enough to support a charge of RICO conspiracy. Morin v. Trupin, 711 F.Supp. 97, 111 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Plaintiffs must also show that the "defendants understood the scope of the enterprise and knowingly agreed to further its affairs through the commission of various offenses." Id. (citation omitted). No facts are set forth supporting the contention that these defendants "knowingly agreed" to commit the predicates, see supra at 531-35 (finding that the plaintiffs were unable to demonstrate that these defendants had the requisite fraudulent intent). Accordingly, even if we had found that the RICO conspiracy was properly alleged, the Section 1962(d) claims against these defendants would have to be dismissed nonetheless. Department of Economic Development v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 683 F.Supp. 1463, 1482 (S.D.N.Y.1988); Andreo v. Friedlander, Gaines, Cohen, Rosenthal & Rosenberg, 660 F.Supp. 1362, 1372 (D.Conn.1987); Laterza v. American Broadcasting Co., 581 F.Supp. 408, 413 (S.D.N.Y.1984).

[c]ommencing in or about November 1984, the defendants and each of them, conspired to and did participate in the *549 conduct of the above enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity as alleged in hereinabove, in violation of 18 U.S.C. Sections 1962(c) and 1962(d).

¶ 151. The complaint does not adequately allege that each defendant personally agreed to commit two or more of the predicate acts. Reinfeld v. Ricklis, 722 F.Supp. at 1084 (emphasis added). It is not enough to agree that the crimes should be committed by others. Zola v. Gordon, 685 F.Supp. 354, 377 (S.D.N.Y.1988). Accordingly, the motions to dismiss the Section 1962(d) claims are granted. [FN13]

[32] Finally, we address the defendants' argument that the Section 1962(a) claim must be dismissed. Section 1962(a) prohibits the use or investment of income received from a pattern of racketeering activity in the acquisition, establishment or operation of an enterprise. Thus, the violation under 1962(a) is not the engaging in a pattern of racketeering activity, but rather it consists in using or investing the proceeds derived from such a pattern of activity. The World and Partnership as well as the Friedman & Shaftan defendants argue that plaintiffs have not alleged, as they must, that their injury has somehow been caused by the investment of the racketeering proceeds. See In re Gas Reclamation Inc. Securities litigation, 659 F.Supp. 493, 511 (S.D.N.Y.1987); DeMuro v. E.F. Hutton, 643 F.Supp. 63, 66 (S.D.N.Y.1986). We agree. As the complaint does not adequately allege any damages other than the loss of their investments, and since it is clear that these injuries arise out of the commission of the predicate acts, and not from any investment by the defendants of the racketeering proceeds, see DeMuro v. E.F. Hutton, 662 F.Supp. 308 (S.D.N.Y.1986), the Section 1962(a) claims are dismissed.

To summarize our disposition of the RICO claims, we dismiss the Section 1962(c) claims against the Bryce, Andersen and Friedman & Shaftan defendants, but sustain them against the World Partnership and Western defendants. We dismiss the Section 1962(a) and (d) claims.

E. OTHER CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

Plaintiffs' third, fourth and fifth claims assert common law claims for damages for fraud, negligent misrepresentation and fiduciary duty respectively. Plaintiffs' ninth claim for relief seeks a declaration that all of the defendants hold the proceeds from plaintiffs' investments in constructive trust for the benefit of the plaintiffs. Assuming that all of the federal claims would be dismissed, all of the defendants moved to dismiss these claims [FN14] for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Almost all the briefs cite the language of the Supreme Court in United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966) that "[c]ertainly, if the federal claims are dismissed before trial, even though not insubstantial in a jurisdictional sense, the state claims should be dismissed as well." Id. at 726, 86 S.Ct. at 1139 (citations omitted).

FN14. The Western defendants also moved to dismiss the seventh and eighth claims, which seek declaratory and injunctive relief only against the Western defendants, on the same grounds.

None of the defendants briefed the result that we have reached today: dismissing the federal claims against only some of *550 the defendants. Nonetheless, regarding those defendants against whom we have sustained federal claims, it is clear that we have pendent-claim jurisdiction over the nonfederal claims against each which "derive from a common nucleus of operative fact." Gibbs, 383 U.S. at 725, 86 S.Ct. at 1138. The difficulty arises regarding those defendants (the Andersen, Friedman & Shaftan, and Bryce defendants) who were successful on their motions to dismiss. Plaintiffs have not and cannot base subject matter jurisdiction on diversity of citizenship, for it is indisputable that the requirement of complete diversity cannot be established. Owen Equipment & Erection Co. v. Kroger, 437 U.S. 365, 373-74, 98 S.Ct. 2396, 2402, 57 L.Ed.2d 274 (1978) (diversity jurisdiction requires that each defendant be a citizen of a different state than each of the plaintiffs). Accordingly, as to these defendants, we must examine the doctrine of pendent-party jurisdiction: "jurisdiction over parties not named in any claim that is independently cognizable by the federal court." Finley v. United States, 490 U.S. 545, 109 S.Ct. 2003, 2006, 104 L.Ed.2d 593 (1989).

"The doctrine of pendent-party jurisdiction provides a much narrower basis for jurisdiction than the doctrine of pendent-claim jurisdiction...." 640 Broadway Renaissance Co. v. Cuomo, 714 F.Supp. 686, 689 (S.D.N.Y.1989). Indeed, although the Supreme Court, in its recent pronouncement on the subject, did not explicitly reject the doctrine, as set forth in its prior opinion in Aldinger v. Howard, 427 U.S. 1, 96 S.Ct. 2413, 49 L.Ed.2d 276 (1976), it certainly cast negative aspersions on it, holding that pendent-party jurisdiction is not permissible in cases arising under the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b). Finley v. United States, 109 S.Ct. at 2009-10; see also Bruce v. Martin, 724 F.Supp. 124, 128-30 (S.D.N.Y.1989) (discussing the "negative implications" of Finley on the doctrine). Indeed, our Circuit Court recently stated, in dicta, that "pendent-party jurisdiction is apparently no longer a viable concept," citing Finley. Staffer v. Bouchard Transportation Co., 878 F.2d 638, 643 n. 5 (1989).

Because of the complexity of this area of the law, and in light of all of the nuances relating to each of the common law claims alleged and the fact that the parties did not brief the issue, we will allow the parties to supplement their papers on this question. Specifically, we would like the parties to address the question according to the insightful three-tier analysis of Judge Walker in 640 Broadway Renaissance Co. v. Cuomo, 714 F.Supp. at 690, looking first, at whether we have Article III power to exercise jurisdiction over the claims; second, at whether Congress, in the statutes conferring jurisdiction, has not expressly or by implication negated the existence of jurisdiction; and third, at whether, there are discretionary considerations which indicate that jurisdiction should or should not be exercised. The submissions of the defendants should be filed within 30 days of the date of this Order, with the plaintiffs' submission being due 30 days thereafter.

With regard to the Western defendants' motion to dismiss plaintiffs' seventh and eighth claims for relief, wherein declaratory and injunctive relief is sought against the Western defendants, we deny the motion without prejudice to renew, as we are not apprised of the status of the prior actions that were commenced in Arizona and, thus, are unable to adjudicate the motion at this time. Furthermore, we observe that the issues appear not to have been fully briefed, again we surmise in anticipation of complete success on their federal claims. If the Western defendants so desire, the motion shall be renewed in accordance with the schedule set out in the above paragraph.

III. CONCLUSION

The motions of the Andersen, Friedman & Shaftan, and Bryce defendants to dismiss the federal securities fraud claims, pursuant to Section 10(b) of the 1934 Act, Section 12(2) and Section 17 of the 1933 Act, and the RICO claims are granted in their entirety. The motions of the World, Partnership and Western defendants to dismiss the claims pursuant to Section 12(2) and 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) are denied, but the *551 motions to dismiss the Section 17(a) claims and the RICO claims pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a) and (d) are granted, and the motions to dismiss the Section 10(b) claims are granted in part and denied in part, as explained supra at 35-40. In light of the fact that the present incarnation of the complaint represents plaintiffs' fourth attempt to adequately state federal causes of action, we believe that it would be inappropriate to allow plaintiffs to replead yet another time. See Armstrong v. McAlpin, 699 F.2d 79, 93-94 (2d Cir.1983) (district court's refusal to give plaintiffs a fourth attempt to restate defective allegations was proper); Decker v. Massey-Ferguson, Ltd., 681 F.2d 111, 115 (2d Cir.1982) (district court's refusal to give plaintiffs a third attempt to restate defective allegations was proper); Denny v. Barber, 576 F.2d 465, 470-71 (2d Cir.1978) (same). Accordingly, all of the above dismissals are with prejudice.

The Andersen, Friedman & Shaftan, and Bryce defendants have thirty days to renew their motions to dismiss the remaining claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction or on discretionary grounds, and the Western defendants have thirty days to renew their motion to dismiss the equitable claims for relief.

SO ORDERED.

730 F.Supp. 521, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 94,902, RICO Bus.Disp.Guide 7423

END OF DOCUMENT

36

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court, E.D. New York.

GENERAL MOTORS CORP., Plaintiff,

v.

VILLA MARIN CHEVROLET, INC.,
Defendant.

ARGONAUT HOLDINGS, INC., Plaintiff,

v.

VILLA MARIN GMC, INC., Defendant.
VILLA MARIN CHEVROLET, INC., Villa
Marin GMC, Inc., Plaintiffs,

v.

GENERAL MOTORS CORP., Argonaut
Holdings, Inc., Defendants.

VILLA MARIN CHEVROLET, INC., Villa
Marin GMC, Inc., Spencer Hondros, Plaintiffs,

v.

Ronald C. SCHLEMMER, Building Analytics,
Inc., L & A Architects, Inc.,
Defendants.

Nos. 98-CV-5206 (JG), 98-CV-5208 (JG), 98-
CV-6167 (JG), 99-CV-3750 (JG).

March 7, 2000.

Thomas G. Russomano, the Margolis Law Firm, PA, Verona, NJ, for Villa Marin
Chevrolet, Inc., and Villa Marin GMC, Inc.

Daniel L. Goldberg, Bingham Dana LLP,
Boston, MA, for General Motors Corp. and Argonaut Holdings, Inc.

Suzanne M. Berger, Robinson Silverman
Pearce Aronsohn & Berman LLP, New York,
New York, for Ronald C. Schlemmer.

Lon Hughes, Newman Fitch Altheim
Meyers, PC, New York, New York, for Building Analytics, Inc.

Glen Kennedy, Gogick Byrne & O'Neill,
New York, New York, for L & A Architects, Inc.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

GLEESON, J.

*1 The above-captioned actions arise out of a complex business transaction between an automobile manufacturer, General Motors Corporation ("GM"), and its dealers, Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. ("VMC") and Villa Marin GMC, Inc. ("VMGMC"), of Staten Island, New York. In November 1996, the parties executed a series of agreements by which VMC voluntarily terminated its Chevrolet franchise, GM appointed VMGMC to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer, and VMGMC subleased business premises from GM's wholly-owned subsidiary, Argonaut Holdings, Inc. ("Argonaut"), to house a new Buick-Pontiac-GMC dealership. Soon thereafter, VMGMC began to complain about the physical condition of the property. The parties' relationship subsequently deteriorated and these lawsuits ensued. First, GM initiated a declaratory judgment action seeking a declaration that it lawfully terminated VMC's Chevrolet franchise. Second, Argonaut commenced suit against VMGMC for nonpayment of rent. Third, VMC and VMGMC (collectively "Villa Marin") sued GM and Argonaut for, among other things, damages arising out of GM's termination of VMC's Chevrolet franchise and the condition of VMGMC's subleased premises. Lastly, VMC, VMGMC, and Spencer Hondros, a Villa Marin principal, brought suit against Ronald C. Schlemmer, the president of the entity that owns the subleased premises, and L & A Architects, Inc. ("L & A") and Building Analytics, Inc. ("BA"), the engineering and architectural firms that evaluated the premises, for damages related to the condition of the premises. Currently before the Court are GM's and Argonaut's motion for summary judgment in all actions in which they are parties, L & A's and BA's motions for summary judgment, and Schlemmer's motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6). For the reasons set forth below, the motions are granted.

BACKGROUND

Prior to 1996, VMC and VMGMC were franchised Chevrolet and GMC Truck dealers, respectively, on Staten Island, New York. David Villamarin, Louis Villamarin, and Spencer Hondros were the shareholders of both dealerships.

A. GM's Plan to Consolidate Dealerships

In 1996, GM sought to consolidate three independent Buick, Pontiac, and GMC dealerships on Staten Island into one dealership under the control of a single franchisee on Hylan Boulevard. As noted, VMGMC already had the GMC dealership. GM had previously taken steps to make the Buick franchise available for consolidation. Accordingly, in order to provide the third piece of the new triple dealership, GM turned its attention to Pontiac. In early 1996, Jerry Walton of GM commenced negotiations with Ronald C. Schlemmer, the president of Star Pontiac ("Star"), regarding the acquisition of Star's Pontiac assets and the use of its business premises on Hylan Boulevard ("Hylan premises") as the location for the proposed Buick-Pontiac-GMC dealership. GM sought to have (1) Star transfer its Pontiac dealership assets to GM and (2) C & R Realty of Richmond, Inc. ("C & R"), which was controlled by Schlemmer and owned the Hylan premises, lease the Hylan premises to Argonaut, a wholly-owned subsidiary of GM. (See Statement of Undisputed, Material Facts in Support of Motion of General Motors Corporation and Argonaut Holdings, Inc. for Summary Judgment ("GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt.") ¶¶ 7, 8, 10; Responding Statement of Material Facts of Villa Marin Chevrolet and Villa Marin GMC in Opposition to the GM Motion for Summary Judgment ("Villa Marin 56.1 Resp.") ¶¶ 7, 8, 10.) GM further contemplated that Argonaut would sublease the Hylan premises to the new, consolidated dealer--VMGMC.

B. GM's Pre-Contract Representations to Villa Marin

*2 In April 1996, Walton initiated discussions with the principals of Villa Marin regarding the proposed triple dealership. Walton asked whether VMGMC would be interested in executing an agreement whereby

GM would appoint VMGMC to be an authorized Buick and Pontiac dealer in exchange for VMC's voluntary termination of its Chevrolet franchise. Under the proposed agreement, VMC would receive a credit of $600,000 from GM for its Chevrolet franchise, which GM would apply toward VMGMC's Buick and Pontiac appointments. VMGMC would also sublease the Hylan premises from Argonaut for the new triple dealership. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 11-14; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 11-14.)

The parties began to carry out this proposed transaction. On August 29, 1996, C & R and Argonaut executed an Agreement to Lease ("Agreement to Lease") the Hylan premises. This document set forth the rights and duties of C & R and Argonaut concerning the inspection of the premises prior to the execution of the Prime Lease. (See Joint Summary Judgment Appendix ("J.A.") Tab 27.) Among other things, the Agreement to Lease provided that Argonaut had the right to inspect the premises and that C & R had to deliver a certificate of occupancy to Argonaut. [FN1]

FN1. More specifically, the Agreement to Lease stated that Argonaut had a right to inspect the premises for 90 days; that C & R had to deliver to Argonaut all permits, such as certificates of occupancy, engineering plans, and all other materials related to the physical condition of the property by September 8, 1996; that C & R had received no notice that the premises were not in compliance in all respects with applicable statutes, ordinances, rules, and regulations; that until closing C & R was required to notify Argonaut of any violation of any law, ordinance, regulation, or law; and that Argonaut would not be obligated to close the transaction unless C & R's representations and warranties were true and C & R had performed all of its obligations as of closing. (See J.A. Tab 27 ¶¶ 2.2, 3.2.3, 3.3, 5.5, 7.2.3, 8.1.2, 8.1.5.)

Villa Marin asserts that, even though VMGMC would be subleasing the Hylan premises from Argonaut, Argonaut prohibited VMGMC from engaging its own experts to examine the premises. (See Counter Statement of Material Facts of Villa Marin Chevrolet and Villa Marin GMC in Opposition to the GM Motion for Summary Judgment ("Villa Marin Counter 56.1 Stmt.") ¶ 8-9.) However, Villa Marin concedes that VMGMC's principals toured the premises on a Sunday afternoon in August when Star was closed, and that David Villamarin observed that the building was "old" and "rundown." Still unsatisfied with their minimal access to the premises they would be leasing, the VMGMC principals met with Schlemmer approximately two to three weeks later "to evaluate independently the status of the facility and Star's business operations." Villa Marin claims to have relied on Schlemmer's representations when VMGMC later executed the Sublease with Argonaut. (GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 15-16, 18-19; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 15-16, 18-19; see also Deposition of David Villamarin of July 28, 1999 ("Villamarin Dep.") at 157-58, 172-73, located at J.A. Tab 2; Deposition of Spencer Hondros of Oct. 20, 1999 ("Hondros Dep.") at 393, 405-06, located at J.A. Tab 39.) Prior to closing, VMGMC also received detailed dealership operating reports for the years 1995 and 1996. Although the name of the dealership was redacted, VMGMC presumed that the reports related to Star's Pontiac operations. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 17; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 17.)

C. The Transaction

The parties closed the transaction on November 21, 1996. Throughout the negotiations, VMC and VMGMC were represented by their outside counsel of fourteen years, John Marangos, and their outside accountant of seven years, Michael Koteen. Prior to the closing, Marangos reviewed and negotiated the provisions of the various agreements. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 20-21; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 20-21.)

*3 The transaction consisted of the following agreements:

1. The Termination and Release Agreement

VMC signed and delivered the Termination and Release Agreement ("TRA") by which VMC agreed to voluntarily terminate its Chevrolet franchise as of September 30, 1997 (or earlier, by written notice of either party) in exchange for VMGMC's appointment to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 26; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 26.) The TRA provides, in relevant part, that:

In consideration of [VMC's] execution and delivery to GM of this Termination and Release Agreement, and [VMC's] voluntary termination of the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement in accordance with Article 14.2 thereof (as set forth in Paragraph 2 of this Termination and Release Agreement), GM, by separate agreements, shall (a) enter into a Dealer Sales and Service Agreement with [VMGMC] for the sale and service of Buick motor vehicles on Staten Island, NY, and (b) enter into a Dealer Sales and Service Agreement with [VMGMC] for the sale and service of Pontiac motor vehicles on Staten Island, NY.... [VMC] hereby expressly agrees that GM's agreement to enter into the Buick and Pontiac Dealer Agreements with [VMGMC] will result in a direct benefit to the shareholders of [VMGMC], who are also the shareholders of [VMC], and, therefore, GM's agreement to enter into the Buick and Pontiac Dealer Agreements is valid and sufficient consideration for [VMC's] execution and delivery of this Termination and Release Agreement.

(J.A. Tab 4 ¶ 1.) The TRA further provides that VMC has reviewed the agreement "with its legal, tax or other advisors, and is fully aware of all of its rights and alternatives" and that "its decisions and actions are entirely voluntary and free from any mental, physical, or economic duress." (Id. ¶ 5.) GM appointed VMGMC to be an authorized Pontiac and Buick dealer on the same day the TRA was executed, November 21, 1996. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 29; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 29.) This was accompanied by the execution of a Buick Motor Division Dealer Sales and Service Agreement, (see J.A. Tab 34), and a Pontiac Division Dealer Sales and Service Agreement, (see J.A. Tab 35), both of which incorporate by reference a document entitled "Standard Provisions of the Dealer Sales and Service Agreement" ("GM Standard Provisions"), (see J.A. Tab 12; J.A. Tab 34 pt. 11; J.A. Tab 35 pt. 2).

2. The Prime Lease

As contemplated by the Agreement to Lease, C & R and Argonaut executed a Prime Lease of the Hylan premises. Pursuant to the Prime Lease, C & R covenants that Argonaut shall have quiet and peaceful possession of the premises and that Argonaut shall not use or occupy the premises in a manner which would violate the certificate of occupancy. (See J.A. Tab 36 § 2.5, 5.) In addition, C & R is required to make repairs resulting from ordinary wear and tear and its own negligence. (See id. §§ 6.2, 6.3.) Argonaut, however, has the right to perform such repairs, after ten days' notice or in case of emergency, and to deduct the costs incurred from the rent due. (See id. §§ 18.1, 18.2.)

3. The Sublease

*4 Argonaut simultaneously subleased the Hylan premises to VMGMC. Section 2.2 of the Sublease provides that VMGMC inspected the Hylan premises to its satisfaction, that it would take the premises "as is," and that Argonaut did not make any representation or warranty as to the condition of the premises. Specifically, section 2.2 states the following in all capital letters:

Landlord leases and tenant takes the premises as is. Tenant acknowledges that, except as expressly set forth in section 2.3, [FN2] neither landlord nor any landlord affiliate (as hereinafter defined) has made any warranty or representation, express or implied, with respect to any of the premises, including any warranty or representation as to (i) its fitness, design or condition for any particular use or purpose, (ii) the quality of the material or workmanship therein, (iii) the existence of any defect, latent or patent, (iv) compliance with laws, (v) location, (vi) use, (viii) operation or (ix) the existence of any hazardous substance; and all risks incident thereto are to be borne by tenant. Tenant acknowledges that the premises have been investigated and inspected by tenant and are satisfactory to tenant. In the event of any defect or deficiency in any of the premises of any nature, whether latent or patent, landlord shall not have any responsibility or liability for any damages, including incidental or consequential damages. Tenant expressly waives any right of rescission hereunder and releases and discharges landlord from any and all claims or causes of action that tenant may now have or hereafter have against landlord, and tenant shall indemnify, protect, defend and hold landlord and all landlord affiliates harmless from and against all costs, claims, or causes of action, arising in connection with or out of the condition of the premises. Tenant's waivers and indemnification obligations hereunder shall survive the termination of this lease.

FN2. Section 2.3 states: "Landlord represents and warrants to Tenant that Landlord is validly seized of a leasehold estate in the Premises, free and clear of all matters affecting title except for the Permitted Exceptions and the provisions of the Prime Lease." (J.A. Tab 5 § 2.3.) (J.A. Tab 5 § 2.2 (footnote added).)

The Sublease also contains provisions regarding rent and improvements. In section 3.1, VMGMC agrees to pay basic rent on the first day of the month "without setoff, counterclaim, or deduction of any kind." (Id. § 3.1.) Argonaut promises that it will improve the premises by adding a showroom as well as other renovations to bring the premises in compliance with the GM image requirements. (See id. §§ 5.1-5.4.) The Sublease states that Argonaut "shall bear the hard and soft costs" of developing the plans and constructing the improvements "up to a maximum amount of $700,000," but that such costs constitute a loan and shall be repaid by VMGMC, pursuant to a 19-year note, as an increase in its monthly rent once the improvements are completed. (See id. § 5.5.)

Lastly, the Sublease contains an integration clause. Section 21.4 provides:

This Lease and any documents executed by Tenant on or about the effective date hereof at Landlord's request constitute the entire agreement between the parties and supercede all prior understandings and agreements, whether written or oral, between the parties relating to the Premises and the transactions provided for herein. Landlord and Tenant are business entities having substantial experience with the subject matter of this Lease and have each fully participated in the negotiation and drafting of this Lease. Accordingly, this Lease shall be construed without regard to the rule providing that ambiguities in a document are to be construed against the drafter.

*5 (Id. § 21.4.)

4. The Assignment

In addition to the aforementioned documents, GM and VMGMC executed an Assignment by which GM assigned to VMGMC the Pontiac assets (vehicles, parts, and accessories) GM acquired from Star. The Assignment also states that VMGMC takes Argonaut's rights against and obligations to C & R under the Agreement to Lease and the Prime Lease. Section 8 provides, in relevant part:

As of closing, [VMGMC] accepts the obligations and receives the rights under a certain Agreement to Lease and Lease between C & R Realty of Richmond, Inc. as Landlord and Argonaut Holdings, Inc. as Tenant by assignment and agrees to perform all the obligations of Argonaut Holdings, Inc. pursuant to that Agreement to Lease and Lease. (J.A. Tab 28 § 8.) Pursuant to this section and the integration clause in the Sublease, Villa Marin now claims that VMGMC may enforce the Agreement to Lease and the Prime Lease.

D. The Post-Contract Events

1. The Buick-Pontiac-GMC Dealership at the Hylan Premises

On January 7, 1997, approximately six weeks after the closing, VMGMC notified Walton that it intended to stop paying rent because it was unsatisfied with the condition of the computer system at the Hylan premises. VMGMC resumed its payment schedule four months later. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 38-39; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 38-39.)

In August of that year, VMGMC advised GM and Argonaut that the Hylan premises lacked a valid certificate of occupancy due to the owner's previous alterations. On August 21, 1997, however, the City of New York issued a "no-objection letter," allowing

VMGMC's operations to continue for one year. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 40-41; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 40-41.)

VMGMC again stopped paying rent in December 1997. According to VMGMC, nonpayment was justified because Argonaut owed VMGMC reimbursements that far exceeded the rental amounts due. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 42; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 42.) It is undisputed that VMGMC owes Argonaut $257,177 in unpaid and delinquent rent, late charges, and default interest for the period up to December 8, 1999. [FN3] Villa Marin contends, however, that Argonaut owes VMGMC amounts in excess of $258,000 for repairs and improvements that Argonaut was obligated to perform pursuant to the Sublease. As of February 2000, VMGMC continues to occupy the Hylan premises and sell and service Buick, Pontiac, and GMC vehicles from that location. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 42-44; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 42-44.)

FN3. The parties cannot agree as to the amount of rent, late charges, and default interest that has accrued since that time.

2. VMC's Chevrolet Franchise

Meanwhile, GM's Chevrolet Motor Division extended the effective date of VMC's termination from September 30, 1997 to June 30, 1998. (See J.A. Tab 13.) Shortly before the extended termination date, VMC relocated its Chevrolet sales operations. VMC's Chevrolet Dealer Agreement provides that VMC may not change the location of its operations without Chevrolet's "prior written authorization." After learning of the relocation, Chevrolet notified VMC that it was in default of its obligations under the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement and requested certain information in order to evaluate the new location. VMC neither submitted the requested information nor received Chevrolet's written approval to relocate. Chevrolet ultimately terminated VMC's Chevrolet franchise on August 15, 1998. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 46-50; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 46-50.)

E. Procedural History

1. The Actions

*6 On August 13, 1998, GM commenced a declaratory judgment action against VMC for a declaration that it lawfully terminated VMC's Chevrolet franchise. See General Motors Corp. v. Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc., No. 98-CV-5206 (E.D.N.Y. filed Aug. 13, 1998). On the same date, Argonaut brought suit against VMGMC for back rent. See Argonaut Holdings, Inc. v. Villa Marin GMC, Inc., No. 98-CV-5208 (E.D.N.Y. filed Aug. 13, 1998). VMC and VMGMC brought counterclaims in both actions. Then, on October 5, 1998, VMC and VMGMC initiated an action against GM, Argonaut, and C & R in state court in Staten Island, alleging various breach of contract claims. See Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167 (E.D.N.Y. removed Oct. 8, 1998). GM and Argonaut removed the case to this Court on October 8, 1998, based on diversity of citizenship. On June 24, 1999, VMC, VMGMC, and Spencer Hondros (a Villa Marin principal) commenced an action against Schlemmer (the owner and principal of C & R), L & A, and BA (engineering and architectural firms) alleging claims of misrepresentation, fraud, prima facie tort, and breach of contract as against Schlemmer and claims of negligent misrepresentation as against L & A and BA. See Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. Schlemmer, No. 99-CV-3750 (E.D.N.Y. filed June 24, 1999).

2. The Prior Rulings

Villa Marin moved to remand its action, Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167, back to state court, claiming that diversity of citizenship does not exist because Villa Marin and C & R are both citizens of the State of New York. In an opinion dated October 21, 1998, I held that because there was no possibility that Villa Marin could articulate a cause of action against C & R, Villa Marin fraudulently joined C & R to defeat diversity jurisdiction. Accordingly, I denied the motion to remand. Soon thereafter, on December 23, 1998, the parties stipulated to the dismissal of C & R with prejudice. [FN4]

FN4. Villa Marin had asserted two claims against C & R: (1) damages for breach of the Prime Lease between Argonaut and C & R; and (2) rescission of the Prime Lease based on fraudulent inducement. I concluded that Villa Marin failed to allege sufficient factual foundations to support either of those claims because Villa Marin is neither a party to nor an intended third-party beneficiary of the Prime Lease. I therefore denied the motion to remand. See Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 20, 1998). Villa Marin did not assert, and thus I was not aware, that it arguably had a right to enforce the Prime Lease against C & R by virtue of the Assignment. (The Assignment confers on VMGMC all of Argonaut's rights and obligations under the Agreement to Lease and the Prime Lease. Thus, the Assignment may have provided VMGMC with a basis to sue C & R for breach of those documents.) Villa Marin now contends, in opposition to Schlemmer's motion to dismiss on res judicata grounds (No. 99-CV-3750), that it was unaware of the Assignment in October 1998 because GM and Schlemmer fraudulently concealed the document. (See Brief in Opposition to the Motion to Dismiss of Defendant Ronald Schlemmer at 10-12.) When questioned at oral argument on January 14, 2000, counsel for Villa Marin claimed that, although a Villa Marin principal executed the Assignment on November 21, 1996, GM and Argonaut never provided Villa Marin with a copy of the document. However, Villa Marin's principal, and presumably its counsel at closing, were on notice as to the existence of the Assignment on November 21, 1996. In addition, when Villa Marin's current counsel became aware of the Assignment (sometime prior to August 25, 1999, when Villa Marin attached the document as Exhibit E to its First Amended Complaint), no application was made for reconsideration of my conclusion that Villa Marin could not sue C & R. Therefore, I reject Villa Marin's contention that GM and Argonaut fraudulently concealed the document and reaffirm my prior ruling.

On August 25, 1999, Villa Marin filed its First Amended Complaint in that action, alleging among other things breaches of contract, fraud, misrepresentation, and violations of the federal and state automobile dealers' acts. GM and Argonaut moved to dismiss the fraud and misrepresentation claims, which was granted on November 18, 1999. See Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167, 1999 WL 1052494 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 18, 1999).

Finally, in General Motors Corp. v. Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc., No. 98-CV-5206, Villa Marin sought a preliminary injunction prohibiting GM from establishing another Chevrolet dealership on Staten Island. The theory of the application was that GM's action for a declaratory judgment that it had lawfully terminated Villa Marin's Chevrolet dealership estopped GM from altering the status quo until the declaratory judgment action was resolved. I denied the motion in an order dated December 2, 1999. See General Motors Corp. v. Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc., No. 98-CV-5206 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 2, 1999).

3. The Pending Motions

*7 GM and Argonaut now move for summary judgment as to all claims in all three lawsuits in which they are parties. [FN5] In the fourth action, L & A and BA move for summary judgment on the negligent misrepresentation claims and Schlemmer moves to dismiss all of the claims against him for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6). [FN6] The following discussion addresses each of these motions in turn.

FN5. At oral argument on January 21, 2000, Villa Marin clarified that it has withdrawn its counterclaims for intentional interference with contracts and intentional interference with business relations. (See No. 98-CV-5206 Answer and Counterclaims ¶¶ 79-86; Transcript of January 21, 2000, at 49-52). Villa Marin confirmed the withdrawal of its counterclaim for intentional interference with business relations in a letter to the Court dated January 24, 2000. The letter made no mention, however, of Villa Marin's other counterclaim for intentional interference with contracts. In light of Villa Marin's agreement to withdraw such claim at oral argument on January 21, 2000, I assume that the letter's omission was merely an oversight.

FN6. Villa Marin consents to the dismissal of prima facie tort claim, but contests the dismissal of the remaining counts.

DISCUSSION

I.

GM AND ARGONAUT

A. The Summary Judgment Standard

Summary judgment is appropriate where "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). In determining whether material facts are in dispute, courts must resolve all ambiguities and draw all inferences in favor of the non-moving party. See Kerzer v. Kingly Mfg., 156 F.3d 396, 400 (2d Cir.1998).

The moving party bears the initial burden of demonstrating the absence of any genuine issues of material fact. See Gallo v. Prudential Residential Servs., L.P., 22 F.3d 1219, 1223 (2d Cir.1994). "When the moving party has carried its burden under Rule 56(c), its opponent must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts. In the language of the Rule, the nonmoving party must come forward with 'specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986) (quoting Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e)) (citations and footnote omitted). The non-moving party cannot survive a properly supported motion for summary judgment by resting on its pleadings without offering "any significant probative evidence tending to support the complaint." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249 (1986) (quoting First Nat'l Bank v. Cities Serv. Co., 391 U.S. 253, 290 (1968)). Moreover, the moving party is not required to affirmatively disprove unsupported assertions made by the non-movant. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). "Conclusory allegations, conjecture, and speculation ... are insufficient to create a genuine issue of fact." Kerzer, 156 F.3d at 400 (citing D'Amico v. City of New York, 132 F.3d 145, 149 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 911 (1998)).

B. The Termination and Release Agreement

GM seeks a declaratory judgment that it has lawfully terminated VMC's Chevrolet franchise pursuant to the terms of the Termination and Release Agreement ("TRA"). Villa Marin likewise asks for a summary resolution of this issue, claiming that GM has breached the TRA by failing to perform a condition precedent to performance of the contract. GM is entitled to summary judgment on this issue.

Under New York law, [FN7] a court must give effect to the intent of the parties as indicated by the clear and unambiguous language used in a contract. See Breed v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 46 N.Y.2d 351, 355 (1978). Such intent is clear if the contract conveys a distinct idea with plain language and there is no reasonable basis for a difference of opinion. See Chimart Assocs. v. Paul, 66 N.Y.2d 570, 573 (1986). In such circumstances, a court should not look beyond the four corners of the agreement to extrinsic evidence. See Teitelbaum Holdings, Ltd. v. Gold, 48 N.Y.2d 51, 56 (1979). Indeed, "[a] court may neither rewrite, under the guise of interpretation, a term of the contract when the terms is clear and unambiguous, nor redraft a contract to accord with its instinct for the dispensation of equity upon the facts of a given case." Cruden v. Bank of New York, 957 F.2d 961, 976 (2d Cir.1992) (citations omitted). Further, when a contract is executed by sophisticated, counseled business persons, "a presumption that a deliberately prepared and executed agreement manifests the true intention of the parties ... appl[ies] with even greater force." See Quantum Chem. Corp. v. Reliance Group, Inc., 580 N.Y.S.2d 275, 276 (1st Dep't 1992) (per curiam) (citations omitted).

FN7. The parties agree that New York law governs all of the common law claims.

*8 The TRA provides that VMC agrees to voluntarily terminate its Chevrolet Dealer Agreement in exchange for GM's agreement to appoint VMGMC to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer. Specifically, the TRA states:

Villa Marin hereby expressly agrees that GM's agreement to enter into the Buick and Pontiac Dealer Agreements with [VMGMC] will result in a direct benefit to the shareholders of [VMGMC], who are also the shareholders of [VMC], and, therefore, GM's agreement to enter into the Buick and Pontiac Dealer Agreements is valid and sufficient consideration for [VMC's] execution and delivery of this [TRA].

(J.A. Tab 4 ¶ 1.) Further, the TRA provides that, in the absence of written notice by GM or VMC establishing an earlier effective date, the termination of the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement shall be effective on September 30, 1997, (see id. ¶ 2), a date that was later extended to June 30, 1998. Lastly, VMC represented in the agreement that it "has reviewed this [TRA] with its legal, tax, and other advisors, and is fully aware of all of its rights and alternatives" and acknowledges that "its decisions and actions are entirely voluntary and free from any mental, physical, or economic duress." (See id. ¶ 5.) It is undisputed that GM delivered Buick and Pontiac appointments to VMGMC on November 21, 1996, the same day VMC executed and delivered the TRA. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 29; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 29.) The parties also agree that VMC's Chevrolet franchise was ultimately terminated on August 15, 1998--approximately six weeks after the June 30, 1998 effective date. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 50; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶ 50.)

I find that the terms of the TRA are clear and unambiguous. The parties, sophisticated and counseled businesses with a prior course of dealing with each other, plainly contracted to terminate VMC's Chevrolet franchise in exchange for VMGMC's appointment to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer. Their agreement is not susceptible to any other reasonable interpretation. There is no dispute that GM fully performed its appointment obligation and timely terminated the Chevrolet franchise. No rationale juror could conclude that GM breached the TRA by terminating VMC's Chevrolet Dealer Agreement on August 15, 1998.

In response, Villa Marin argues that GM may not enforce the TRA because of the nonoccurrence of a condition precedent. [FN8] Taking the argument from the beginning, Villa Marin asserts that the TRA incorporates by reference the Buick and Pontiac Dealer Sales and Service Agreements ("Dealer Agreements"), which in turn incorporate by reference the GM Standard Provisions. Thus, the argument continues, GM's promise to appoint VMGMC to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer is conditioned on VMGMC fulfilling the requirements in the GM Standard Provisions that the dealer (VMGMC) provide facilities of appropriate appearance and quality for the dealership. Section 17 of the Sublease also provides that Argonaut may terminate the Sublease if VMGMC is not the holder of valid dealer agreements on November 21, 1996. Therefore, Villa Marin continues, because a conforming premises is a prerequisite to the Dealer Agreements, which are allegedly incorporated by reference into the TRA, and franchise approval is a prerequisite to the Sublease, GM is somehow obliged to provide VMGMC with a lawful, improved business premises and that obligation is a condition precedent to GM's ability to enforce the TRA. Accordingly, Villa Marin concludes, GM's failure to provide such premises constitutes a nonoccurrence of a condition precedent which goes to the "heart" of the transaction, and, thus, GM has no authority under the TRA to terminate VMC's Chevrolet franchise.

FN8. "A condition precedent is an act or event, other than a lapse of time, which, unless the condition is excused, must occur before a duty to perform in the agreement arises." Oppenheimer & Co. v. Oppenheim, Appel, Dixon & Co., 86 N.Y.2d 685, 690 (1995) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

*9 To state this convoluted argument is to defeat it. Villa Marin's tortured reading of the documents does not establish that GM's acquisition of conforming business premises is a condition precedent to GM's enforcement of the TRA. First, the TRA, by its express terms, does not condition termination on anything, let alone GM obtaining business premises for VMGMC. Second, even accepting the dubious assertion that the Dealer Agreements (and the GM Standard Provisions) have been "incorporated by reference" into the TRA, [FN9] thus incorporating some obligation to acquire suitable facilities, such burden is squarely on VMGMC, not GM. The documents require the dealer--not the manufacturer--to provide suitable premises. [FN10] Third, even if those documents were incorporated by reference into the TRA and even if they conditioned the appointment of a dealership on GM's provision of suitable premises (or on VMGMC's acquisition of them), GM and VMGMC clearly waived any such requirement by nonetheless going forward with the appointment of VMGMC to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer. See T.G.I. E. Coast Constr. Corp. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 600 F.Supp. 178, 181 (S.D.N.Y.1985) (noting that conduct inconsistent with enforcement impliedly waives a condition precedent). Finally, to the extent that GM's obligation stems from the Sublease, Villa Marin has offered no explanation as to how GM, a non-party to that agreement, has any duties thereunder. In sum, I conclude that GM's acquisition of conforming business premises was not a condition precedent to GM's ability to terminate the Chevrolet franchise under the TRA. Accordingly, Villa Marin has failed to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether GM breached the TRA.

FN9. In this regard, the TRA states only that: "General Motor's entry into such Dealer Sales and Service Agreements shall be subject to [VMGMC's] agreement to such terms and conditions as are established by the Buick Motor Division and Pontiac-GMC Division of General Motors...." (J.A. Tab 4 § 1.) This is not an incorporation by reference.

FN10. The Buick Dealer Agreement provides: "Dealer, therefore, agrees to provide facilities which are consistent in appearance and environment with Buick's reasonable requirements." (J.A. Tab 34 pt. 6.) The Pontiac Dealer Agreement states: "Dealer therefore agrees to provide facilities that meet, in appearance and quality, PONTIAC's reasonable requirements." (J.A. Tab 35 pt. 9.) The GM Standard Provisions incorporated into both provide: "Dealer therefore agrees that its Premises will be properly equipped and maintained, and that the interior and exterior retail environment and signs will comply with any reasonable requirements Division may establish to promote and preserve the image of Division and its dealers." (J.A. Tab 12 art. 4.4.4.)

C. The Sublease

1. Rent

Argonaut has initiated an action for back rent under the Sublease and for a declaratory judgment that the Sublease is enforceable. Villa Marin claims, in response, that VMGMC is entitled, pursuant to the Prime Lease, to set off the cost of repairs from the rent due under the Sublease.

First, to the extent Villa Marin seeks to deduct the cost of repairs from rent due under the Sublease, it is expressly forbidden from doing so by the Sublease's terms. Section 3.1 of the Sublease provides that VMGMC shall pay rent "without setoff, counterclaim, or deduction of any kind." (J.A. Tab 5 § 3.1.) In addition, it is well-settled that the obligation to pay rent is independent of a covenant to make repairs. See Thomson-Houston Elec. Co. v. Durant Land Improvement Co., 144 N.Y. 34, 43-44 (1894); S.E. Nichols, Inc. v. American Shopping Ctrs., Inc., 515 N.Y.S.2d 638, 639 (3d Dep't 1987); Drago v. Mead, 51 N.Y.S. 360, 360-61 (2d Dep't 1898). Thus, a landlord's failure to perform a covenant to make repairs or improvements does not excuse or relieve a tenant from his obligation to pay rent and, likewise, a tenant's default in rent is not a defense to an action for damages arising out the landlord's breach of the covenant to repair. See Nichols, 515 N.Y.S.2d at 639.

*10 Here, it is undisputed that pursuant to the Sublease VMGMC owes Argonaut at least $257,177, of which $245,594 is unpaid and delinquent rent and $11,583 is late charges and default interest. [FN11] (See Homic Aff. ¶ 6; GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 42-44; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 42-44.) As Argonaut's alleged breach of its obligation to make improvements under the Sublease is no defense to its action for back rent, VMGMC has breached the Sublease by withholding rent.

FN11. As discussed supra, the parties dispute the precise amount of rent, interest, and taxes due under the terms of the Sublease. There is no dispute, however, that Villa Marin has withheld rent.

Second, to the extent that Villa Marin seeks to deduct the cost of repairs pursuant to the terms of the Prime Lease from the rent due under the Sublease, it has no authority to do so. Section 8 of the Assignment provides that VMGMC "accepts the obligations and receives the rights" under the Agreement to Lease and Prime Lease between C & R and Argonaut and "agrees to perform all the obligations of Argonaut" pursuant to those documents. (J.A. Tab 28 § 8.) Under the Prime Lease, C & R is required to make repairs resulting from ordinary wear and tear and its own negligence. (See J.A. Tab 36 §§ 6.2, 6.3.) Argonaut, however, has the right to perform such repairs, after ten days' notice or in the case of emergency, and to deduct the costs incurred from the rent due. [FN12] (See id. §§ 18.1, 18.2.) Thus, pursuant to the rights VMGMC acquired under the Assignment, Villa Marin contends that VMGMC has properly deducted the cost of repairs from the rent due.

FN12. Section 18.1 states: "Notwithstanding any provision hereof to the contrary, each party shall have the right at any time, after ten (10) days notice to the other party or without notice in case of emergency (or in case any fine, penalty, interest, cost or expense may otherwise be imposed or incurred), to make any payment including but not limited to Taxes or perform any act required of such other party under any provision of this Lease, and in exercising such right, to incur necessary or incidental costs and expenses, including reasonable counsel fees. Nothing herein shall imply any obligation on the part of either party to make any payment or perform any act required of the other party, and the exercise of the right to do so shall not constitute a release of any obligations or a waiver of any default." (J.A. Tab 36 § 18.1.)

Section 18.2 provides: "All payments made and all costs and expenses incurred in connection with any exercise of such right shall be reimbursed by the other party to the party making or incurring the same within ten (10) days after notice, together with interest at the Default Rate from the respective dates of the making of such payments or the payment of such costs and expenses. In addition to any other rights and remedies available to either party, Landlord shall have, in respect of Tenant's failure to make reimbursement of any amount as aforesaid, the same rights and remedies as in the case of default by Tenant in the payment of the Rent, and Tenant shall have, in respect of Landlord's failure to make reimbursement of any amount as aforesaid, the right to deduct such amount from Rents due and payable or to become due and payable hereunder." (Id. § 18.2.)

If the parties had observed the terms of the Assignment in this regard, VMGMC would have paid rent directly to C & R under the Prime Lease, eliminating Argonaut as the middleman. However, the parties' relationships do not appear to have been governed by the Assignment. [FN13] Since November 21, 1996, VMGMC has paid rent only to Argonaut under the Sublease and has demanded that Argonaut make repairs. Argonaut, in turn, has paid rent only to C & R under the Prime Lease. (See Transcript of Feb. 8, 2000.) Thus, VMGMC has made no rent payment under the Prime Lease from which it may deduct the cost of repairs. Accordingly, the Prime Lease's deduction provisions are irrelevant to VMGMC's obligation to pay rent to Argonaut under the Sublease. Argonaut is, therefore, entitled to summary judgment for its back rent and declaratory judgment claims.

FN13. This may account for Villa Marin's belated reliance on the Assignment. As set forth in footnote four, supra, Villa Marin failed even to mention the Assignment until after C & R had been dismissed from the case.

2. Improvements

Villa Marin also claims (both as a counterclaim and as a direct claim in its own action) that Argonaut breached the Sublease. Although a tenant may not defend an action for rent by alleging a breach of covenant of the lease, a tenant may recover damages by bringing a counterclaim to that action or by commencing an independent suit. See Goelet v. Goldstein, 242 N.Y.S. 586, 588 (1st Dep't 1930) (per curiam). As mentioned, Villa Marin has done both. Because these claims are redundant, I will address them both in the context of Villa Marin's direct claim for breach of the Sublease.

Villa Marin claims that Argonaut has breached the Sublease in three different respects. First, it contends that Argonaut breached section 2.2 of the Sublease by failing to provide VMGMC with a premises that lawfully could be used and occupied. In relevant part, section 2.2 states in all capital letters:

*11 Tenant acknowledges that, except as expressly set forth in section 2.3, neither landlord nor any landlord affiliate (as hereinafter defined) has made any warranty or representation, express or implied, with respect to any of the premises, including any warranty or representation as to (i) its fitness, design or condition for any particular use or purpose, ... (iv) compliance with laws, ... (vi) use, ... and all risks incident thereto are to be borne by tenant.

(J.A. Tab 5 § 2.2.) Section 2.3 provides: "Landlord represents and warrants to Tenant that Landlord is validly seized of a leasehold estate in the Premises, free and clear of all matters affecting title except for the Permitted Exceptions and the provisions of the Prime Lease." (Id. § 2.3.) According to Villa Marin, the term "leasehold estate" means an "asset which represents the tenant's right to use the leased premises." Thus, the argument continues, the carve-out of section 2.3 from section 2.2 establishes an affirmative representation and warranty by Argonaut that Argonaut and VMGMC are entitled to use and occupy the premises as provided in the Prime Lease. The Prime Lease, in turn, provides that the tenant (Argonaut) must use and occupy the premises in a lawful manner and not in any way that would violate the certificate of occupancy. (See J.A. Tab 36 §§ 5.1, 5.2.) On the basis of these provisions, Villa Marin contends that Argonaut is in breach of the Sublease because Villa Marin is using and occupying the premises in an unlawful manner.

I find this labored attempt to reconstruct the Sublease--and by doing so to construct a breach of it--unavailing. In interpreting a written agreement under New York law, a court must consider the entire contract and attempt to reconcile provisions to avoid any inconsistency. See Laba v. Carey, 29 N.Y.2d 302, 308 (1971). Moreover, "[i]t is a generally accepted rule of construction that an agreement must be construed to accord a meaning and purpose to each of its parts" and to avoid "an interpretation which renders a clause absolutely meaningless." Kahn v. New York Times Co., 503 N.Y.S.2d 561, 565 (1st Dep't 1986) (per curiam) (quoting Graphic Scanning Corp. v. Citibank, N.A., 499 N.Y.S.2d 712, 714 (1st Dep't 1986)). It is plain that the carve-out of section 2.3 from the specific and detailed disclaimer in section 2.2 does not establish an affirmative warranty about the use or occupancy of the premises. By its unambiguous terms, section 2.3 provides that Argonaut has a leasehold estate in the premises. In other words, the section warrants that Argonaut, who is not the owner of the property, has an interest in the property such that it may sublease the premises to VMGMC. This section does not make any warranty about the premises's use, fitness, or compliance with laws. Indeed, if I were to give effect to Villa Marin's construction, the detailed disclaimer in section 2.2 would be rendered meaningless. Accordingly, I conclude that Argonaut is not in breach of section 2.2 of the Sublease.

*12 Second, Villa Marin asserts that Argonaut breached the Sublease by neglecting to perform due diligence of the premises. In support of this argument, Villa Marin points to the Agreement to Lease, which provides that Argonaut may inspect the premises, (see J.A. Tab 27 §§ 2.2, 3.3), that C & R shall deliver to Argonaut all permits, such as a certificate of occupancy (see id. § 3.2.3(d)), and that Argonaut shall not be obligated to close the transaction unless it has obtained all necessary permits upon closing (see id. §

8.1.4). Moreover, as VMGMC was not permitted to conduct its own due diligence, Villa Marin argues, Argonaut had the exclusive obligation to perform due diligence on VMGMC's behalf. Therefore, according to Villa Marin, Argonaut's failure to obtain an certificate of occupancy breached the Sublease.

Again, I am not persuaded. As an initial matter, the Sublease does not create any obligation on the part of Argonaut to conduct due diligence for VMGMC. Moreover, even if the Agreement to Lease was somehow incorporated into the Sublease, the Agreement to Lease only provides Argonaut with the right and opportunity to conduct due diligence on its own behalf. Pursuant to its terms, Argonaut had the right to inspect and receive a certificate of occupancy from C & R prior to closing the transaction on November 21, 1996. It also had the right to refuse to close the transaction if it had not obtained the permits necessary to use the premises as an automobile dealership. None of these terms imposes any affirmative obligation on Argonaut. Indeed, once Argonaut executed the Prime Lease without exercising its right to inspect and receive the certificate of occupancy under the Agreement to Lease, the option was arguably waived. See DeFreitas v. Holley, 461 N.Y.S.2d 351, 352 (2d Dep't 1983) (per curiam) ("It is well established that a party for whose benefit a provision is inserted in a contract may waive that provision and accept performance of the contract as is."). Accordingly, Argonaut's alleged failure to conduct due diligence does not breach the Sublease.

Lastly, Villa Marin claims that Argonaut breached the Sublease by failing to make initial improvements to the premises by 1997. It is undisputed that Argonaut has failed to make any improvements on the premises. Villa Marin's claim for breach turns on whether Argonaut's obligation to perform has come due or whether it may be excused. As set forth above, under New York law, a tenant's failure to pay rent does not ordinarily relieve the landlord of an obligation to make repairs or improvements on the premises. The covenant to make repairs and the covenant to pay rent are independent of one another. See Nichols, 515 N.Y.S.2d at 639. Just as "a failure to repair is not a valid defense to an action for rent," "[t]here would seem to be no reason why the converse of the proposition should not be equally true." Drago, 51 N.Y.S. at 360.

*13 Argonaut contends, however, that the parties have explicitly contracted around the doctrine of independent covenants. Section 21.3 states, in relevant part: "Landlord shall have no obligation to perform any act required hereunder if an Event of Default has occurred and is then existing." (J.A. Tab 5 § 21.3.) Under section 15.1, an "Event of Default" is defined as a "Failure to Pay Rent" where "Tenant fails to pay any Rent payable by Tenant under the provisions of this Lease within five (5) days following written notice to Tenant that such payment was not made when due." (Id. § 15.1(a).) Thus, Argonaut argues, because the parties have expressly conditioned the landlord's covenant to make repairs on the tenant's covenant to pay rent, Argonaut was under no contractual obligation to perform any improvements once VMGMC defaulted by failing to pay rent.

Here, VMGMC first notified Walton on January 7, 1997 that it intended not to pay rent when due that month. (See J.A. Tab 6.) On January 24, 1997, Argonaut's counsel responded that VMGMC's "failure to pay basic rent within five (5) days following written notice may be deemed a default under the Lease." (J.A. Tab 7.) The letter further stated that "[n]otice is hereby given that rent for the month of January, 1997 is overdue." (Id.) It is undisputed that VMGMC did not pay rent for four months thereafter, and that it again stopped paying rent in December 1997. (See GM and Argonaut 56.1 Stmt. ¶¶ 38-39, 42; Villa Marin 56.1 Resp. ¶¶ 38-39, 42.) VMGMC, therefore, defaulted under the Sublease as of January 29, 1997, by failing to pay rent within five days following written notice, and Argonaut had no obligation to perform its covenant to make improvements so long as that "Event of Default" remained "then existing." (J.A. Tab 5 § 21.3.) Accordingly, Argonaut's breach, if any, could only have occurred between November 21, 1996 (the execution of the Sublease) and January 29, 1997 (VMGMC's default).

Presumably recognizing that VMGMC's early failure to pay rent substantially limited the scope of Argonaut's duty to make improvements, Villa Marin contends that Argonaut breached the Sublease by failing to perform two work items by 1997. According to Villa Marin, at least two items in the exhibit attached to the Sublease, items 7 and 8, were to be completed by 1997. [FN14] Villa Marin apparently reached this conclusion because there is a "1996" notation in the exhibit's margin next to those work items, notwithstanding the absence of any elaboration in the Sublease or any other document as to the meaning of that notation. Villa Marin thus concludes that Argonaut is in breach the Sublease by failing to perform those items by 1997. In response, Argonaut claims that these items only were to be included in proposed plans, and were not required to be performed by a specific deadline. I agree.

FN14. Item 7 states: "Provide an allowance for service work on the service area, body shop, and toilet room fans. Operations personnel were unsure of their condition." (J.A. Tab 5 Ex. C.) Item 8 states: "Modify showroom area toilet to be accessible. The toilet room requires enlargement, new finishes and accessible hardware, and accessories. Provide concrete disabled ramp at the double showroom door. Renovate the employee toilet." (Id.) Although item number 5 also lists the year 1996, Villa Marin does not rely on that item in its defense of this summary judgment motion.

Section 5 of the Sublease provides that the initial improvements shall consist of a new showroom and other "improvements necessary to bring existing buildings ... into compliance with the GM image requirements." [FN15] (J.A. Tab 5 § 5.1.) The Sublease further states that Argonaut shall have prepared "complete finished, detailed architectural and engineering plans and specifications for construction" of the improvements, and such plans "shall, in any event, include items 2-8 set forth in Exhibit C hereto." (Id. § 5.2.) The Sublease does not establish any specific deadline for completion of the improvements or the plans. Section 5.3 merely states that Argonaut "shall commence construction of the Initial Improvements in accordance with the Plans after completion of the Plans." (Id. § 5.3.) Section 21.3 also provides: "Any act that Landlord is permitted to perform under this Lease may be performed at any time and from time to time by Landlord or any Person designated by Landlord." (Id. § 21.3.)

FN15. Specifically, section 5.1 states: Landlord and Tenant acknowledge that Landlord shall, at its sole cost and expense, develop the Premises with Buildings and related Improvements (together, the "Initial Improvements") in accordance with the Plans (as hereinafter defined) for operation of a General Motors Corporation authorized automobile and/or truck dealership and related purposes. The Initial Improvements shall consist of (a) a showroom of approximately 2,500 square feet (the "New Showroom"); and (b) improvements necessary to bring the existing buildings (including, without limitation, the existing showroom and the exterior of the existing buildings) into compliance with the GM image requirements. (J.A. Tab 5 § 5.1.)

*14 On the basis of these provisions, I conclude that the only reasonable construction of the Sublease is that Exhibit C simply sets forth proposed improvements to be included in the final plans, not items Argonaut must complete by a specific deadline. Indeed, the Sublease only states that the plans shall include items 2-8 and that construction shall begin upon completion of the plans. These provisions plainly do not impose any obligation on Argonaut to perform items 7 and 8 by 1997. Nor could they, as Argonaut executed the Sublease on November 21, 1996--only five weeks before the supposed deadline for completion. I, therefore, conclude that no reasonable jury could find that Argonaut breached the Sublease by failing to perform items 7 and 8 by December 31, 1996.

D. The Agreement to Lease and the Prime Lease

Villa Marin claims that GM and Argonaut breached the Agreement to Lease and the Prime Lease. Villa Marin has previously attempted to enforce these documents by pointing to the Assignment, which provides that VMGMC takes all of Argonaut's rights and duties under the Agreement to Lease and Prime Lease. (See J.A. Tab 28 § 8.) Thus, as I previously discussed in footnote 5 of GM's and Argonaut's motion to dismiss, the Assignment confers upon VMGMC only those rights Argonaut has against C & R. [FN16] It does not provide an independent basis on which Villa Marin may sue GM and Argonaut.

FN16. See Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167, 1999 WL 1052494, at *5 n. 5 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 18, 1999).

GM and Argonaut have moved for summary judgment on these claims for precisely the same reasons. Villa Marin has failed to respond to this argument in its opposition brief. Thus, although I remain convinced that Villa Marin may not assert these claims, in any event, they are deemed abandoned.

E. The Standard Provisions of the Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement

Villa Marin also claims that GM breached the GM Standard Provisions incorporated by reference into the 1992 Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement by refusing to provide VMC with motor vehicles necessary to fulfill fleet contracts that were outstanding on the effective date of termination, August 15, 1998. Again, I disagree.

On February 14, 1992, GM and VMC entered into a Dealer Sales and Service Agreement for its Chevrolet franchise. Article 14.7.2 of the GM Standard Provisions incorporated into that agreements provides:

If this Agreement is voluntarily terminated by Dealer ..., Division will use its best efforts consistent with its distribution procedures to furnish Dealer with Motor Vehicles to fill Dealer's bona fide retail orders on hand on the effective date of termination or expiration, not to exceed, however, the total number of Motor Vehicles invoiced to Dealer for retail sale during the three months immediately preceding the effective date of termination.

(J.A. Tab 12 art. 14.7.2.) On November 21, 1996, however, GM and VMC executed the TRA, by which VMC voluntarily terminated its Chevrolet franchise. (See J.A. Tab 4.) In that agreement, VMC released all claims against GM with only three exceptions. Paragraph 3 states:

*15 Villa Marin, for itself, its agents, successors, and assigns, hereby releases, settles, cancels, discharges, and acknowledges to be fully satisfied any and all claims, demands, damages, debts, liabilities, obligations, costs, expenses, liens, actions, and causes of action of every kind and nature whatsoever, whether known or unknown, foreseen or unforeseen, suspected or unsuspected ("Claims"), which Villa Marin or anyone claiming through or under Villa Marin may now or hereafter have against GM, or any officer, director, employee, agent, or affiliate of GM, arising out of or relating to the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement, or any predecessor agreement thereto, or to the relationship between GM and Villa Marin relating to the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement, or any predecessor agreement thereto, provided, however, that the foregoing release shall not extend to (a) reimbursement to Villa Marin of unpaid warranty claims, (b) the payment to Villa Marin of any incentives currently owing to Villa Marin, any amounts currently owing to Villa Marin in its Open Account (after set-off of any amounts owing to GM or its affiliates), or any amounts due or to become due to Villa Marin in connection with its return of Eligible items pursuant to Article 15.2 of the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement [relating to the Purchase of Personal Property], or (c) any Claims of Villa Marin pursuant to Article 17.4 of the Chevrolet Dealer Agreement [relating to Indemnification by General Motors].

(Id. ¶ 3.) None of the enumerated exceptions concerns VMC's right to have GM fill its outstanding retail orders under article 14.7.2. Pursuant to the TRA, GM terminated VMC on August 15, 1998. [FN17] of its termination by letter, dated August 17, 1998. Specifically, the letter states: "This will confirm that your Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement was terminated effective August 15, 1998, pursuant to Article 4.2 thereof, as provided by the Termination and Release Agreement dated November 21, 1996, as subsequently extended." (J.A. Tab 23.) Article 4.2 of the GM Standard Provisions, however, only refers to the area of the dealer's primary responsibility and was not referenced in the TRA. (See J.A. Tab 12 art. 4.2.) Therefore, I assume the letter meant to cite to article 14.2 of the GM Standard Provisions, which provides for voluntary termination by agreement and was cited to in the TRA. (See id. art. 14.2; J.A. Tab 5 ¶¶ 1, 2.)

FN17. The Chevrolet Motor Division notified VMC

It is well-settled under New York law that "a valid release which is clear and unambiguous on its face and which is knowingly and voluntarily entered into will be enforced as a private agreement between parties." Thailer v. LaRocca, 571 N.Y.S.2d 569, 571 (2d Dep't 1991) (per curiam) (quoting Appel v. Ford Motor Co., 490 N.Y.S.2d 228, 229-30 (2d Dep't 1985) (per curiam)). This is true even if the parties later claim to have intended something else. See id. Here, the TRA release is clear and unambiguous. By its express terms, VMC released all claims against GM with only three detailed exceptions, none of which is applicable here. Moreover, VMC also attested that it was "fully aware of all of its rights and alternatives" and that "its decisions and actions are entirely voluntary and free from any mental, physical, or economic duress." (J.A. Tab 4 ¶ 5.) Accordingly, enforcing the express terms of the release, as I must, I conclude that Villa Marin has failed to raise a genuine issue as to whether GM breached article 14.7.2 of the GM Standard Provisions incorporated by reference into the 1992 Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement.

F. The Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Villa Marin also claims that Argonaut breached the duty of good faith and fair dealing implied in the Prime Lease, which was owed to VMGMC by virtue of the Assignment. Specifically, Villa Marin contends that Argonaut has breached this duty by failing to assert its right to have C & R repair the Hylan premises.

*16 Under New York law, every contract implies a duty of good faith and fair dealing between the parties, see Dalton v. Educational Testing Serv., 87 N.Y.2d 384, 389 (1995); see also Wood v. Duff-Gordon, 222 N.Y. 88, 92 (1917) (implied duty of best efforts), and an implied covenant that neither party will prevent the other from receiving the fruits of the contract, see Dalton, 87 N.Y.2d at 389 (quoting Kirke La Salle Co. v. Armstrong Co., 263 N.Y. 79, 87 (1933)). The duty of good faith and fair dealing may not be implied under certain circumstances, however, where it would be inconsistent with the other terms of the contract. See Murphy v. American Home Prods. Corp., 58 N.Y.2d 293, 304 (1983).

Assuming arguendo that there is an implied duty of good faith and fair dealing in the Prime Lease, that duty runs between Argonaut and C & R (the parties to the Prime Lease). However, pursuant to the Assignment, VMGMC accepted Argonaut's rights and obligations under the Prime Lease. [FN18] As previously discussed, however, that assignment only confers on VMGMC Argonaut's rights against and obligations to C & R. Therefore, having been assigned Argonaut's rights, VMGMC could only have a cause of action against C & R, not Argonaut, for breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing. Accordingly, no reasonable jury could conclude that Argonaut has breach any implied duty owed to VMGMC under the Prime Lease.

FN18. Section 8 of the Assignment states, in relevant part: "As of closing, [VMGMC] accepts the obligations and receives the rights under a certain Agreement to Lease and Lease between C & R Realty of Richmond, Inc. as Landlord and Argonaut Holdings, Inc. as Tenant by assignment and agrees to perform all the obligations of Argonaut Holdings, Inc. pursuant to that Agreement to Lease and Lease." (J.A. Tab 28 § 8.)

G. Rescission and Reformation

Villa Marin has also brought claims for rescission and reformation. Initially, Villa Marin sought to rescind the entire November 21, 1996 transaction due to GM's and Argonaut's alleged fraud, misrepresentation, and breach of contract. (See No. 98-CV-6167 First Am. Compl. ¶ 158.) Now, however, Villa Marin insists that its rescission claim is premised entirely on the aforementioned breaches of contract. (See Brief of Villa Marin Chevrolet and Villa Marin GMC in Opposition to the GM Motion for Summary Judgment at 20.) Accordingly, I will only address the rescission claim as such. In addition, because Villa Marin has not offered any defense to the motion for summary judgment on its reformation claim, I will deem it abandoned.

Under New York law, a breach of contract may be grounds for rescission. However, rescission "may be obtained only for breaches that are material and willful, or, if not willful, so substantial or fundamental as to strongly tend to defeat the object of the contract ." United States Postal Serv. v. Phelps Dodge Refining Corp., 950 F.Supp. 504, 514 (E.D.N.Y.1997) (citing K.L.M. Labs., Ltd. v. Hopper, 830 F.Supp. 159, 163 (E.D.N.Y.1993)). The plaintiff need not establish that the defendant failed to perform in every respect, but must demonstrate " 'a failure which leaves the subject of the contract substantially different from what was contracted for .'" Hopper, 803 F.Supp. at 163 (quoting Callanan v. Keeseville, A.C. & L.C.R., 199 N.Y. 268, 284 (1910)).

*17 Here, Villa Marin has failed to establish a genuine issue of material fact as to whether GM and Argonaut committed any breach, let alone a material and willful breach. Moreover, the evidence establishes that the fundamental purpose of the transaction-to create a new Buick-Pontiac-GMC dealership-has been achieved. GM has appointed VMGMC to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer and Argonaut has subleased VMGMC the Hylan premises. All of those events have occurred and VMGMC continues to operate the combined dealership on the Hylan premises to date. Indeed, at oral argument on January 21, 2000, counsel for Villa Marin announced that "we are the number one dealer in our zone." (Transcript of Jan. 21, 2000, at 39.) I conclude, therefore, that Villa Marin's claim for rescission premised on breach of contract must likewise fail.

H. The Federal and State Automobile Dealers' Acts

1. Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act

The Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1222 (1994), provides a dealer a federal cause of action against an automobile manufacturer who has failed to act in good faith regarding a franchise. [FN19] Specifically, § 1222 states:

FN19. The parties do not dispute that (1) VMC and VMGMC are automobile dealers; (2) GM is an automobile manufacturer engaged in commerce; and (3) the Chevrolet and GMC Dealer Agreements are franchises within the meaning of the statute. See 15 U.S.C. § 1221 (1994).

An automobile dealer may bring suit against any automobile manufacturer ... and shall recover damages by him sustained and the cost of suit by reason of the failure of said automobile manufacturer ... to act in good faith in performing or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise, or in terminating, canceling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer: Provided, That in any such suit the manufacturer shall not be barred from asserting in defense of any such action the failure of the dealer to act in good faith.

15 U.S.C. § 1222. Good faith, as defined in § 1221, requires the manufacturer and the dealer to act in a fair and equitable manner toward each other so as to guarantee the one party freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats of coercion or intimidation from the other party: Provided, That recommendation, enforcement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument shall not be deemed to constitute lack of good faith.

15 U.S.C. § 1221(e) (1994). Interpreting this statute, the Second Circuit has noted that the term "good faith" has a "narrow, restricted meaning." Empire Volkswagen, Inc. v. World-Wide Volkswagen Corp., 814 F.2d 90, 95 (2d Cir.1987) (citing Autohaus Brugger, Inc. v. Saab Motors, Inc., 567 F.2d 901, 911 (9th Cir.1978)). Evidence of "coercion and subsequent termination for failure to submit" is insufficient. See id. (quoting Autowest, Inc. v. Peugeot, Inc., 434 F.2d 556, 561 (2d Cir.1970)). Rather, a dealer will succeed only "where there is evidence of a wrongful demand enforced by threats of coercion or intimidation ." ' Id. 95-96 (quoting McDaniel v. General Motors Corp., 480 F.Supp. 666, 676 (E.D.N.Y.1979), aff'd, 628 F.2d 1345 (2d Cir.1980) (unpublished table opinion)). In other words, a plaintiff must establish both that the manufacturer's demand is unfair and inequitable and that sanctions will result if the demand is not complied with. See Autohaus, 567 F.2d at 911 (citing Randy's Studebaker Sales, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 533 F.2d 510, 514 (10th Cir.1976)).

*18 Resolving all ambiguities and drawing all inferences in favor of Villa Marin, as I must, I conclude that Villa Marin has failed to raise a genuine issue both as to whether GM made a "wrongful" demand and as to whether its demand was enforced by threats or coercion.

a. The Absence of a Wrongful Demand

As an initial matter, GM's proposed transaction was not unfair or inequitable. The First Circuit has identified the following considerations as relevant in determining a demand's wrongfulness:

[T]here is an important difference between two kinds of improper conditions that a manufacturer might impose and back up by threats. Particularly suspect under the act are conditions which benefit only, or primarily, the manufacturer--for example, requirements that a dealer purchase large stocks of vehicles, spare parts, special tools or advertising matter--as distinguished from requirements that would tend to work to the mutual advantage of both parties, for example, that the dealer improve its service, or managerial efficiency. The manufacturer can easily extort demands of the first sort, increasing its own profit at the expense of the dealer's; the act's legislative history indicated that this was of particular concern to the Congress. The latter sort, even if the demands may be thought excessive under the circumstances, should not, without more, indicate that the manufacturer is taking advantage of the dealer, or using the franchise as a weapon for extortion, since the manufacturer stands to profit from his demands only if the dealer profits as well.

Volkswagen Interamericana, S.A. v. Rohlsen, 360 F.2d 437, 442 (1st Cir.1966). Consistent with this theory, courts have recognized liability where the manufacturer's demand is disadvantageous to the dealer. Compare Randy's Studebaker, 533 F.2d at 516 (affirming jury's finding that manufacturer's demand that dealer engage in retail price fixing and make substantial capital expenditures was wrongful), and K & H Kawasaki, Inc. v. Yamaha Motor Corp., Case. No. 95-CV-1824, 1997 WL 204315, at *5 (N.D.N.Y. April 14, 1997) (denying motion to dismiss on ground that manufacturer's demand that dealer take on unwanted inventory was wrongful), with Empire Volkswagen, 814 F.2d at 96-97 (affirming summary judgment for manufacturer on ground that its demand that dealer construct separate facility--a valid contractual provision--was not wrongful), and Salco Corp. v. General Motors Corp., 517 F.2d 567, 575 (10th Cir.1975) (affirming summary judgment for manufacturer on ground that manufacturer's refusal to approve relocation of dealership was in good faith).

Here, counseled parties negotiated a sophisticated business transaction at arms' length. Villa Marin concedes that the purpose of the transaction "was to bring designated GM franchises into conformity with GM's Plan 2000 and GM Dealer Network Strategy objectives." (Villa Marin Counter 56.1 Stmt. ¶ 1.) Villa Marin, thus, does not contend that GM proposed the transaction in order to single out Villa Marin. Most significantly, Villa Marin does not argue that it received inadequate consideration for VMC's agreement to voluntarily terminate its Chevrolet franchise. In exchange for Chevrolet, VMGMC (the shareholders of which are also shareholders of VMC) acquired Buick and Pontiac franchises. (J.A. Tab 4 ¶ 1.) I conclude, therefore, that the transaction worked to the mutual benefit of the parties and was not wrongful.

*19 Indeed, to this day, the essence of Villa Marin's dissatisfaction has not been that GM's "demand" that Villa Marin go from a Chevrolet and GMC Truck dealer to a Buick-Pontiac-GMC Truck dealer was "wrongful" in the sense required by the statute. To the contrary, the morass of litigation before me had its genesis in Villa Marin's complaint that the Hylan premises are not suitable for Villa Marin's triple dealership. Villa Marin was not without remedy for that state of affairs before it stopped paying rent, see supra, Part I.C.2, and may not be without remedy in the future (an issue I need not address here). However, it may not seek redress by retroactively squeezing the entire transaction, as defined supra, into the "narrow, restricted" category of quasi-extortion prohibited by the statute. See Empire Volkswagen, 814 F.2d at 95.

b. The Absence of Threats or Coercion

Moreover, even assuming that the demand was somehow unfair, Villa Marin has failed to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the demand was enforced by threats or coercion. The statute provides that "recommendation, enforcement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument shall not be deemed to constitute lack of good faith." 15 U.S.C. § 1221. An actionable threat, rather, is established by evidence of an "either-or" attempt at coercion or intimidation." Fray Chevrolet Sales, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 536 F.2d 683, 685 (6th Cir.1976). In addition, the plaintiff must demonstrate such coercion by objective evidence--the dealer's subjective belief of coercion is insufficient. See Wallace Motor Sales, Inc. v. American Motor Sales Corp., 780 F.2d 1049, 1056 (1st Cir.1985).

In its defense of the motion, Villa Marin points to two types of alleged coercion. First, Villa Marin claims that Jerry Walton, GM's representative, threatened that GM would put another GMC dealership on Staten Island to compete with VMGMC. The depositions of Villa Marin's principals, however, belie that assertion. According to David Villamarin, Walton represented only that GM would establish a combined Pontiac-Buick-Isuzu franchise on Hylan Boulevard if Villa Marin declined the deal. Indeed, Villamarin testified that Walton never even implied otherwise. [FN20] (See Villamarin Dep. at 151-152.) Spencer Hondros's testimony is consistent with Villamarin's account. According to Hondros, Walton never stated that GM would add another GMC dealership on Staten Island. [FN21] (See Hondros Dep. at 20-21.) This testimony merely establishes that GM planned to open a triple franchise (with Buick, Pontiac, and one other franchise) on Hylan Boulevard with or without Villa Marin, and does not suggest that Walton ever threatened to establish another GMC dealership on Staten Island. [FN22] I conclude, therefore, that this evidence fails to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Walton threatened Villa Marin.

FN20. David Villamarin gave the following testimony on July 28, 1999: Q. What happened at the next meeting? A. Jerry said I am going to give you one more opportunity now. It is going, going, gone. I will give you one more opportunity. I said one more opportunity, Jerry. We are set on this. We like you, we love you. He said I am going to give you one more opportunity. And we said why? He said because we are going to do the deal with you or without you. Q. Those were his exact words? A. Yes. So I asked Jerry, what does that mean? He said with you or without you. He said I don't need you. I will make it a Pontiac Buick and Isuzu franchise. I said, "Jerry, you wouldn't do that." Q. What did he say? A. He wouldn't do it. I said it doesn't make good business sense because we talked about value of the franchise. The most valuable part of the franchise is GMC and that wasn't part of the equation. Q. What did Mr. Walton say? A. We are doing it. Q. Mr. Walton never said that they were going to add another GMC truck dealer down there, did he? A. He didn't imply that.... Q. But Mr. Walton didn't say anything to imply that that was going to happen? He was talking about a Pontiac Buick Isuzu dealership? A. Yes. Q. And he never said anything about adding another GMC truck franchise on Staten Island? A. No. (Villamarin Dep. at 151-53.)

FN21. Spencer Hondros testified on October 20, 1999, as follows: Q. Did Mr. Walton ever tell you that GM intended to appoint another GMC Truck dealer on Hylan Boulevard if you declined the deal? A. Mr. Walton said there would be another triple on Hylan Boulevard if we decided not to take the deal. Q. But did he ever say that there would be a GMC Truck dealership? A. Not specifically, not that I can recall. Q. Did Mr. Walton ever say that he intended to have a Pontiac-Buick-Isuzu triple on Hylan Boulevard? A. The way I understood it was that there was going to be someone on Hylan Boulevard. I don't remember if Mr. Walton, I don't believe he really defined what it was going to be, but that it was going to be. (Hondros Dep. at 20-21.)

FN22. On December 22, 1999, Hondros provided the following contradictory testimony in a sworn affidavit: "Walton also advised me that while VMGMC would continue to be a GMC dealer, if VMGMC did not go through with the TRANSACTION, GM would place a second GMC dealer on Hylan Boulevard." (Affidavit of Spencer Hondros of Dec. 22, 1999 ("Hondros Aff.") ¶ 15, located at Brief of Villa Marin Chevrolet and Villa Marin GMC in Opposition to the GM Motion for Summary Judgment Tab 3; see also id. ¶¶ 22-23.) It is well established, however, that "a party's affidavit which contradicts his own prior deposition testimony should be disregarded on a motion for summary judgment." Mack v. United States, 814 F.2d 120, 124 (2d Cir.1987) (collecting cases). Otherwise, "a party who has been examined at length on deposition could raise an issue of fact simply by submitting an affidavit contradicting his own prior testimony," thus "diminish[ing] the utility of summary judgment as a procedure for screening out sham issues of fact." Perma Research & Dev. Co. v. Singer Co., 410 F.2d 572, 578 (2d Cir.1969). Accordingly, I will disregard Hondros's conflicting testimony. In a last ditch attempt to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether GM threatened to open a Buick-Pontiac-GMC dealership without Villa Marin, Villa Marin points to the fact that Walton later told Hondros that the Isuzu franchise had been sold. (See Hondros Dep. at 185.) According to Villa Marin, Walton could have never intended to proceed with a Buick-Pontiac-Isuzu triple franchise since he admitted later that the Isuzu component had been sold. Thus, Villa Marin argues, Walton must have meant to coerce Villa Marin by threatening to open a triple with a GMC component. Villa Marin has not provided any evidence, however, that the Isuzu franchise was in fact unavailable at the time of the alleged threat. Therefore, this argument is entirely speculative and fails to raise a genuine issue as to any threatening conduct on the part of Walton or GM.

Second, Villa Marin contends that Walton threatened not to renew Villa Marin's Chevrolet and GMC franchises if it did not consent to the transaction. In support of this argument, it cites to the testimony of David Villamarin and Spencer Hondros. Specifically, Villamarin stated:

*20 F. And you agreed to consider trading back Chevrolet?

A. Not we considered it, [Walton] told us. We always hit him with the option that we want Chevrolet out of the picture, separate Chevrolet completely and he would never get away from that.

Q. At some point you agreed to do that?

A. At some point we did because we all walked away with the feeling we had no choice. What we got from Jerry, from numerous meetings, if you don't take the $600,000--again, $600,000 is better than nothing--you're going to have nothing.

Q. How did he indicate you would have nothing?

A. We will not be renewed.

Q. Did Mr. Walton say that to you?

A. He didn't say you will not be renewed, no. Did he imply we would not be renewed? Yes.

Q. What did he do that you took as him implying that you would not be renewed?

A. That $600,000 is better than nothing.

Q. Did he say that to you?

A. Yes.

Q. He said those words exactly?

A. Yes.

(Villamarin Dep. at 112-14; see also id. at 121-22, 153-54 .) In addition, Spencer Hondros testified:

Q. Did you ever indicate to [Walton] that you weren't willing to proceed with the transaction under those criteria?

A. I don't think--I think in any business deal that you enter into, there are times when both parties may try to flex their muscles, O.K. And, yes, I did tell that to Mr. Walton, I said to him, "You know, today I have Chevrolet and today I have GMC, you know, what if I don't want to do the deal?" Then he said, "That's right, today you have them, nothing says we are going to renew them in the future."

Q. Did he say that specifically?

A. He said specifically that renewals were coming up.

Q. Did he say anything else?

A. He said, "Today you have them."
(Hondros Dep. at 63-64.)

These statements cannot constitute threats or coercion. Upon review of the record as a whole, drawing all inferences in favor of Villa Marin, no reasonable juror could conclude that GM threatened not to renew Villa Marin's Chevrolet and GMC franchises. In his deposition, David Villamarin was repeatedly questioned about whether Walton ever threatened him. At each instance, Villamarin unequivocally denied any coercion or threats by Walton. (See Villamarin Dep. at 149-50, 200-01, 410-11.) For example, he states:

Q. [Walton] didn't make any threats, did he?

A. No.

Q. He basically tried to encourage you to do the deal?

A. Well, again, Jerry is a great salesman.

Q. I understand.

....

Q. He tried to sell you the deal?

A. Sure.

....

Q. Did you see anything wrong with that?

A. No.

Q. He was negotiating?

A. No problem.

Q. He was not intimidating you?

A. No.

Q. He wasn't threatening you?

A. No.

Q. He wasn't coercing you?

A. No.

Q. He was encouraging you to go forward with the deal?

A. Yes. (Id. at 149-50.) Moreover, Hondros admitted that Chevrolet and GMC would not be up for renewal until 1999 or 2000. (See Hondros Dep. at 65-66.) Therefore, any perceived implied threat of nonrenewal in 1996 would have been further tempered by the fact that Villa Marin had a contractual right to their existing franchises for another three to four years. Walton's alleged nonrenewal threat is also discredited by the fact that although Hondros took voluminous notes during all of the meetings between Walton and the principals (including the April 19, 1999 meeting where the alleged nonrenewal threat occurred), the notes do not reflect any threats or coercion. (See id. at 67-83.) Lastly, there is no evidence of any threat or retaliation following the Villa Marin principals' short-lived decision to walk away from the deal in the summer of 1996. (See Villamarin Dep. at 148-50.) This point is particularly salient in light of the claims by Villamarin and Hondros that the alleged threats occurred in the spring of that year. (See Hondros Dep. at 51, 64-66; Villamarin Dep. at 107, 112-13.) It would be unreasonable to conclude that the November 21, 1996, transaction was coerced by implied threats made more than six months prior to closing when neither the threats nor any adverse action related to them occurred when the deal was actually rejected that summer.

21 In sum, I conclude that Villa Marin has not raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether GM failed to act in good faith. [FN23]

FN23. Villa Marin also claims two additional bases on which to find that it was threatened or coerced: (1) GM acted in bad faith by refusing to approve VMC's plans for a new Chevrolet facility; and (2) GM attempted to coerce VMC into reaffirming the TRA in June and July of 1998 and then terminated VMC in August in retaliation for its refusal to do so. These arguments are meritless. As to the first argument, Villa Marin relies on Hondros's affidavit. According to Hondros, Walton stated in April 1996 that GM did not approve VMC's prior plans for a new Chevrolet facility because it anticipated VMC would be terminated later pursuant to the transaction. (See Hondros Aff. ¶ 21.) Accepting this assertion as true, Villa Marin has nonetheless failed to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether GM acted in bad faith by refusing to approve VMC's plans. On February 14, 1992, at the same time VMC executed its original Chevrolet Dealer Agreement, GM and VMC executed a "Letter Agreement" in which VMC agreed that (1) its current facility did not comply with the terms of the Dealer Agreement and (2) it would establish a separate facility (for both sales and service) within two years. (See Reply Affidavit of Roland J. Walton of Jan. 5, 2000 ("Walton Reply Aff.") Ex. B, located at Reply Memorandum in Support of Motion of General Motors Corporation and Argonaut Holdings, Inc. for Summary Judgment Tab 2.) On April 4, 1996, VMC accepted GM's offer to extend that deadline until February 13, 1997. (See Walton Reply Aff. Ex. C.) In his deposition, Hondros admitted that VMC never submitted any plans to GM for approval that provided for separate Chevrolet sales and service. (See Hondros Dep. at 54.) Therefore, GM had a good faith basis for refusing to approve the plans--non-compliance with the terms of the written agreements. See Empire Volkswagen, Inc. v. World-Wide Volkswagen Corp., 814 F.2d 90, 96 (2d Cir.1987) (holding that a manufacturer's insistence on a term of the franchise was not wrongful and did not violate the federal automobile dealers' act); Autowest, Inc. v. Peugeot, Inc., 434 F.2d 556, 561 (2d Cir.1970) (noting that the use of coercion to insist on valid contractual provisions does not violate the federal automobile dealers' act). In support of the second argument, Villa Marin points to the testimony of Daniel Durkin, the Zone Manager of Chevrolet Motor Division, who admitted that he intended to allow VMC to continue its Chevrolet operations (beyond the termination date provided in the TRA) until he secured a replacement dealer, but that he eventually terminated VMC before a replacement was found because VMC "was taking the position that they were no longer bound under the terms of the [TRA]." (Deposition of Daniel Durkin of July 15, 1999, at 137-39, located at J.A. Tab 16; see also Hondros Dep. at 186-87; Hondros Aff. ¶¶ 59-61.) As I have previously concluded, the TRA's execution was not coerced by threats and it remains a valid and enforceable agreement. By its express terms, VMC agreed to terminate its Chevrolet franchise voluntarily in exchange for substantial consideration. On June 26, 1998, the Chevrolet Motor Division offered to extend the effective date of termination under the TRA in exchange for VMC's reaffirmation of the TRA and information regarding VMC's proposed dealership relocation. (See J.A. Tab 13, at 1.) After VMC declined that offer and relocated its Chevrolet dealership, GM terminated the franchise on August 15, 1998. GM had every right to ask for some consideration from VMC in exchange for the extension of the termination date. That is not coercion--it is an offer to contract that VMC rejected. Therefore, because the extended termination date of June 30, 1998 had already expired, GM properly enforced the agreement and terminated the franchise.

2. New York Franchised Motor Vehicle Act

Villa Marin raises claims under three provisions of the New York Franchised Motor Vehicle Act, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 463(2)(b), 463(2)(c), 463(2)(d)(1) (McKinney 1996). These claims fail as a matter of law. I will address each in turn.

Section 463(2)(b) prohibits a manufacturer from coercing a dealer to enter into an agreement or to act in a manner contrary to its economic interests by threatening to cancel an unexpired contractual agreement. [FN24] Courts have yet to define coercion in the context of this section. However, at least one court has looked to the federal automobile dealers' statute for guidance and applied the standard, cited supra, that "[c]oercion or intimidation must include a wrongful demand which will result in sanctions if not complied with." See K & H Kawasaki, Inc. v. Yamaha Motor Corp., Case No. 95-CV-1824, 1997 WL 204315, at *4 (N.D.N.Y. April 14, 1997) (internal quotation marks omitted). Accordingly, Villa Marin claims, in essence, that all of the aforementioned allegations of GM's coercive tactics and lack of good faith equally violate New York's Franchised Motor Vehicle Act.

FN24. Under section 463(2)(b), it shall be unlawful for any franchisor "[t]o directly or indirectly coerce or attempt to coerce any franchised motor vehicle dealer to enter into any agreement with such franchisor or officer, agent or other representative thereof, or to do any other act prejudicial to the monetary interests or property rights of said dealer by threatening to cancel any unexpired contractual agreement existing between such franchisor and said dealer. Provided, however, that good faith notice to any franchised motor vehicle dealer of said dealer's violation of any terms or provisions of such franchise shall not constitute a violation of this article." N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 463(2)(b). The parties concede that GM is a franchisor and VMC and VMGMC are franchised motor vehicle dealers within the meaning of the statute. See N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 462 (McKinney 1996).

Again, I disagree. GM is not charged with coercing Villa Marin to enter into the November 21, 1996 transaction by threatening to cancel its dealerships. As previously discussed, the only allegation of coercion concern alleged threats of nonrenewal. Thus, this provision is inapplicable on its face to the facts alleged here. Even assuming that there was some suggestion of cancellation, not nonrenewal, I nonetheless rely on my prior conclusion that Villa Marin has failed to establish a genuine issue of material fact as to either the "wrongfulness" of GM's demand or as to its use of coercion to implement it.

Section 463(2)(c) prohibits a manufacturer from conditioning a franchise renewal on a dealer making substantial renovations or constructing a new facility, except in limited circumstances. [FN25] Villa Marin has relegated its discussion of this claim, and of its claim under section 463(2)(d), to a mere footnote. It asserts: GM coerced "VMC to participate in the transaction, and thereafter to waive the rights of VMGMC with respect to Argonaut's breach of the sublease." (Brief of Villa Marin Chevrolet and Villa Marin GMC in Opposition to the GM Motion for Summary Judgment at 24 n. 45.) Although this treatment of this claim suggests that it has been abandoned, I will address its merits nonetheless.

FN25. Section 463(2)(c) provides that it shall be unlawful for any franchisor "[t]o condition the renewal or extension of a franchise on a franchised motor vehicle dealer's substantial renovation of the dealer's place of business or on the construction, purchase, acquisition or rental of a new place of business by the franchised motor vehicle dealer unless the franchisor has advised the franchised motor vehicle dealer in writing of its intent to impose such a condition within a reasonable time prior to the effective date of the proposed date of renewal or extension (but in no case less than one hundred eighty days) and provided the franchisor demonstrates the need for such change in the place of business and the reasonableness of such demand in view of the need to service the public and the economic conditions existing in the automobile industry at the time such action would be required of the franchised motor vehicle dealer. As part of any such condition the franchisor shall agree, in writing, to supply the dealer with an adequate supply of automobiles to meet the sales levels necessary to support the increased overhead incurred by the dealer by reason of such renovation, construction, purchase or rental of a new place of business." N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 463(2)(c).

Villa Marin could have made two possible arguments in support of its claim under section 463(2)(c): (1) GM improperly conditioned VMC's renewal on its acquisition or construction of a separate facility; and (2) GM improperly conditioned VMGMC's renewal on its sublease of the Hylan premises. Neither of these arguments, however, would have any merit.

*22 VMC entered into its Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement on February 14, 1992. On that day, the parties executed a "Letter Agreement" which stated that VMC's proposed business premises for Chevrolet did not meet the minimum standards established in the Dealer Agreement and that VMC had two years to acquire acceptable premises. (See Walton Reply Aff. Ex. B.) Thus, GM's request that VMC acquire suitable business premises originated with VMC's original franchise agreement and never constituted a condition imposed on renewal. Turning to the second argument, there is no evidence that GM ever conditioned VMGMC's renewal on its sublease of the Hylan premises. Moreover, even if VMGMC's appointment to be a Buick and Pontiac dealer was conditioned on its entering into the Sublease, a manufacturer's conditioning of a franchise appointment (not a renewal) is not prohibited by this section. Accordingly, Villa Marin's claim fails as a matter of law.

Lastly, section 463(2)(d)(1) prohibits a manufacturer from refusing to renew a franchise except for "due cause" and after proper notice and at least ninety days before termination. [FN26] The statute does not define due cause. However, one court has held that the "due cause" requirement is "not satisfied unless the franchisor both has good cause and acts in good faith." Bronx Auto Mall, Inc. v. American Honda Motor Co., 934 F.Supp. 596, 611 (S.D.N.Y.1996), aff'd per curiam, 113 F.3d 329 (2d Cir.1997). Villa Marin claims that GM violated this section by terminating VMC without ninety days' notice.

FN26. Section 463(2)(d) provides that it is unlawful for any franchisor "[t]o terminate, cancel or refuse to renew the franchise of any franchised motor vehicle dealer except for due cause, regardless of the terms of the franchise. A franchisor shall notify a franchised motor vehicle dealer, in writing, of its intention to terminate, cancel or refuse to renew the franchise of such dealer at least ninety days before the effective date thereof, stating the specific grounds for such termination, cancellation or refusal to renew. In no event shall the term of any franchise expire without the written consent of the franchised motor vehicle dealer involved prior to the expiration of at least ninety days following such written notice except as hereinafter provided." N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 463(2)(d)(1).

GM's termination of VMC did not violate section 463(2)(d)(1). This provision plainly prohibits involuntary terminations without due cause and proper notice. VMC's termination, on the other hand, was voluntary and pursuant to a written contract. I conclude, therefore, that this section is inapplicable to VMC's termination.

For the foregoing reasons, GM and Argonaut's motion for summary judgment is granted.

II.
BUILDING ANALYTICS AND L & A ARCHITECTS

L & A Architects, Inc. ("L & A") is the engineering and architectural firm retained by Argonaut to assess the physical condition of the Hylan premises. Argonaut and/or L & A, in turn, hired Building Analytics, Inc. ("BA") to investigate the premises and issue a report. Villa Marin claims that L & A and BA negligently misrepresented the condition of the Hylan premises. L & A and BA have each moved for summary judgment. However, because I have not considered any evidence outside of the complaint, I construe their motions to seek judgment on the pleading pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(c).

The following allegations are relevant to these motions. According to Villa Marin, Walton represented that Argonaut had assumed sole responsibility for conducting due diligence of the Hylan premises. (See No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶ 29.) Walton and an Argonaut representative then allegedly advised VMGMC that Argonaut had retained an engineering firm to inspect the premises and issue a report, and that VMGMC would receive a copy of the report as soon as it became available. (See id.) According to Villa Marin, BA performed such an inspection and issued its report on August 23, 1996. (See id. ¶ 31.) Argonaut allegedly received this report, but did not share its contents with Villa Marin because it was "spurious and misrepresented the condition of the [Hylan premises]." (Id. ¶ 39.) Villa Marin concedes, however, that it eventually received a copy of the report on the date of closing, November 21, 1996. (See id. ¶ 38.)

A. The Judgment on the Pleadings Standard

23 The standard for deciding a motion pursuant to Rule 12(c) is the same as the one applicable to a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). See Irish Lesbian and Gay Org. v. Giuliani, 143 F.3d 638, 644 (2d Cir.1998). "Under that test, a court must accept the allegations contained in the complaint as true, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the non-movant." Sheppard v. Beerman, 18 F.3d 147, 150 (2d Cir.1994). A court "should not dismiss the complaint unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). In making this determination, the Court may also consider any exhibits attached to the complaint or documents incorporated into the complaint by reference. See Kramer v. Time Warner, Inc., 937 F.2d 767, 773 (2d Cir.1991).

B. Negligent Misrepresentation

Villa Marin contends that it may maintain a cause of action for negligence against L & A and BA notwithstanding the fact that neither was retained by Villa Marin. The argument relies on a line of New York cases that enlarges the scope of liability for pecuniary losses caused by negligent misrepresentations to persons beyond those with whom the defendant is in contractual privity. The argument fails for two reasons. First, that enlargement of liability is not nearly as great as Villa Marin suggests. For example, New York law does not, as Villa Marin contends, impose a duty whenever a third party's reliance on negligent misrepresentations is foreseeable to the defendant. Second, the factual allegations here describe a relationship between Villa Marin and these defendants that falls far short of the close relationship required to sustain this narrow theory of liability.

The New York Court of Appeals has stated the governing rule as follows: "[B]efore a party may recover in tort for pecuniary loss sustained as a result of another's negligent misrepresentations there must be a showing that there was either actual privity of contract between the parties or a relationship so close as to approach that of privity." Prudential Ins. Co. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 382 (1992) (emphasis added). In determining whether Villa Marin's relationships with L & A and/or BA were "so close" that they "approach" privity of contract, a review of the New York cases in which the standard was established and applied is instructive.

The first is generally regarded to be Judge Cardozo's opinion in Glanzer v. Shepard, 233

N.Y. 236 (1922). There the defendants were public bean weighers, retained by the bean seller to weigh the beans and to provide a copy of the weight certificates to the buyer. The weighers made a mistake, causing a loss to the plaintiff buyer. Notwithstanding the absence of privity between the weighers and the plaintiff, the Court of Appeals found a duty because the buyer's reliance on the weighers' misrepresentations was "the end and aim of the transaction." The buyer's use of the weighers' certificates was not an "indirect or collateral consequence" of the weigher's contract with the seller; rather, the representations in the certificates were made "for the very purpose of inducing action" by the buyer. Id. at 238-39.

*24 Nine years later, Chief Judge Cardozo authored Ultramares Corp. v. Touche, 255 N.Y. 170 (1931), a case that placed in clear relief how narrowly Glanzer had expanded liability to nonprivies for negligent misrepresentations. The defendants in Ultramares were public accountants who prepared a year-end certified balance sheet for a rubber importer. The accountants knew that the balance sheet would be exhibited in the ordinary course of their client's business to banks and other creditors, and they supplied 32 copies for that purpose. The plaintiff was a factoring company that made substantial advances to the rubber importer against accounts receivable certified by the accountants. The rubber importer went bankrupt, and the factor sued the accountants, alleging, inter alia, that they negligently prepared the balance sheet. See 255 N.Y. at 175-76. In rejecting the plaintiff's negligent misrepresentation claim, Judge Cardozo distinguished Glanzer by observing that the bean buyer in that case was "in effect, if not in name, a party to the contract" between the seller and the weighers. Id. at 183. In Ultramares, by contrast, the accountants' service was "primarily for the benefit" of the rubber importer and only "incidentally or collaterally for the use of those to whom" it chose to distribute the balance sheet, including the plaintiff. Id. at 183. That such uses were foreseeable to the accountants did not make them liable for negligence. See id.

More recently, the Court of Appeals has revisited the issue and established a three-step test for determining whether a duty is owed to third parties. In Credit Alliance Corp. v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 65 N.Y.2d 536, amended by 66 N.Y.2d 812 (1985), the plaintiff was a financial services company that extended credit on multiple occasions to L.B. Smith, Inc. ("Smith"), on the strength of financial statements certified by Arthur Anderson & Co. ("Arthur Anderson"). When Smith filed for bankruptcy, the plaintiff sued Arthur Anderson, alleging that it had negligently certified the financial statements and knew, or should have known, that they were being used to induce lenders to extend credit. In rejecting the claim, the Court of Appeals identified three criteria that must be satisfied before accountants can be held liable in negligence to third parties who rely on the accountants' work: (1) the accountants must have been aware that the financial reports were to be used for a particular purpose; (2) in furtherance of which a known party was intended to rely; and (3) there must have been some conduct on the part of the accountants that links them to that party and evinces the accountants' understanding of that party's reliance. See id. at 551. The court emphasized that, although these criteria "permit some flexibility in the application of the doctrine of privity to accountants' liability," they do not represent a departure from the principles in Glanzer and Ultramares and in fact were "gleaned" from those cases. [FN27] Id.

FN27. In addition to Glanzer and Ultramares, the Court cited White v. Guarente, 43 N.Y.2d 356 (1977). In that case the defendant accountants were retained by a limited partnership to audit its tax returns, and were found to owe a duty to certain members of the limited partnership, who "would necessarily rely on or make use of the audit and tax returns of the partnership." Id. at 361. As the Court of Appeals observed in Credit Alliance, White might just as well have been decided on the ground that individual members of a limited partnership are in actual privity with the partnership's accountants. See 65 N.Y.2d at 550 n. 9.

*25 The court held that the plaintiff in Credit Alliance failed to satisfy the first and third criteria. There was no allegation that Arthur Andersen had been employed to prepare reports with the particular purpose of inducing plaintiff to lend to Smith. Moreover, Arthur Andersen was not alleged to have dealt directly with plaintiff, or to have specifically agreed with Smith to prepare the report for plaintiff's use or according to its requirements, or even to have agreed to provide a copy to plaintiff. See id. at 553-54.

Credit Alliance thus reconfirmed that the mere foreseeability of a third party's reliance on a professional's representations is insufficient to establish a duty to that party that will support a negligence action for pecuniary loss. In a companion case decided the same day, the court shed light on what else is required. In European American Bank & Trust Co. v. Strauhs & Kaye, 65 N.Y.2d 536 (1985), the plaintiff, like the plaintiff in Credit Alliance, made a series of loans to a corporate borrower based on financial statements prepared by the defendant accountant firm, and sued for negligent misrepresentation when the borrower defaulted. However, the plaintiff in European American Bank alleged that the accountants had multiple direct communications, orally and in writing, with the plaintiff during the audit work, had discussed the borrower's financial position with the plaintiff, and made representations on that subject directly to the plaintiff. The Court of Appeals held that these allegations satisfied the three Credit Alliance criteria and stated, echoing Judge Cardozo, that the defendant was aware that providing its financial information to the plaintiff was a primary "end and aim" of auditing the client. Id. 65 N.Y.2d at 554.

Ossining Union Free School District v. Anderson La Rocca Anderson, 73 N.Y.2d 417 (1989), applied the Credit Alliance test in a setting more analogous to the present case. In Ossining, the plaintiff school district hired an architectural firm to evaluate school buildings. The architectural firm in turn retained two engineering consulting firms to assist in the evaluation. The engineers' allegedly negligent reports of structural weaknesses in a particular school property caused the plaintiff to close that property and obtain other facilities at substantial expense. The school district sued the engineers for negligence and malpractice.

Chief Judge Kaye's opinion first held that engineers, like accountants, may well be held liable to nonprivies for negligent misrepresentations. However, such a defendant owes a duty of care, the court emphasized, that the court has defined "narrowly, more narrowly than other jurisdictions." Id. at 424.

Applying that test in Ossining, the court held that the allegations were sufficient to withstand the engineers' motion to dismiss. First, as in Glanzer, the plaintiff's reliance on the defendants' reports "was the very purpose of defendants' engagement." Id. at 425. In addition, the engineers had various contacts directly with the school district; one of the defendant firms billed the school district directly; the retention of both was specifically authorized by the school board; and the work the engineers performed was "for the school district alone." Id. In those circumstances, the court held that the engineers, like "the bean weighers in Glanzer, ... allegedly rendered their reports with the objective of thereby shaping [the school district's] conduct, and thus they owed a duty of diligence established in our law at least since Glanzer not only to [the architect] who ordered but also to the school district who relied." Id. at 426.

*26 The two most recent Court of Appeals cases dealing with this issue are Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. v. Peat Marwick Main & Co., 79 N.Y.2d 695 (1992), and Prudential Insurance Co. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377 (1992). Security Pacific was yet another action against a borrower's accountants by a lender who extended credit based on the accountants' unqualified audit opinion and financial statements. The plaintiff's allegations included a direct contact, by telephone, between the plaintiff's vice president and the accounting firm partner in charge of the audit. See 79 N.Y.2d at 698-99. Notwithstanding that direct contact, the Court of Appeals found the allegations insufficient as a matter of law to establish a relationship between the lender and the accountants "sufficiently approaching privity." Id. at 705. There was no evidence that the accountant had (1) been retained for the specific purpose of inducing the plaintiff to extend credit; (2) specifically agreed with the client to prepare the report for plaintiff's use; (3) shaped its audit opinion to meet the needs of the plaintiff; or (4) directly supplied its report to the plaintiff. See id. at 705-06. Citing Ossining's observation that the duty to nonprivies is defined "narrowly," the court held that the mere foreseeability of the plaintiff's use of the audit opinion, even buttressed by a direct contact with the plaintiff during the audit, could not support a claim of negligent misrepresentation. Id. at 708.

Although Security Pacific has been criticized as virtually eliminating the theory of negligence liability alleged here, [FN28] Prudential demonstrates otherwise. That case involved an action against a shipping company's attorneys, who had been retained to provide an opinion letter to Prudential Insurance Company of America ("Prudential") as part of its agreement to restructure a $93 million debt owed to it by the shipping company. The attorneys, at the request of their client, sent to Prudential an opinion letter stating that certain mortgage documents were legal and binding obligations that would adequately secure Prudential's interest. Unfortunately, one of the documents misplaced a decimal point in the amount secured, thereby reducing Prudential's security by more than $91 million. The shipper then went bankrupt. Prudential, naturally, sued the attorneys for negligently misrepresenting the extent of its security interest. See 80 N.Y.2d at 380-82.

FN28. See Security Pacific, 79 N.Y.2d at 709, 719 (Hancock, J., dissenting) (asserting that the majority opinion "significantly limits Credit Alliance" and creates a new rule for accountant's liability that "erects one of the most forbidding legal barriers in the country" to such liability); see also Richard J. Holahan, Jr., Note, Security Pacific Business

Credit, Inc. v. Peat Marwick Main & Co.: Just In Case You Had Any Doubts--There Is No Tort of Negligent Misrepresentation in New York, 13 Pace L.Rev. 763, 805 (1993) ("[T]he practical significance of Security Pacific is that in New York, in order for a nonclient to successfully assert negligent misrepresentation against an accountant, it must show that it is a third-party beneficiary to the audit contract.")

Applying the Credit Alliance criteria, the Court of Appeals found that the attorneys owed a duty to Prudential. The attorneys were aware that "the end and aim of the opinion letter was to provide Prudential with the financial information it required;" Prudential's receipt of the opinion was a condition precedent to closing the restructuring transaction; and the letter was sent directly to Prudential by the attorneys. 80 N.Y.2d at 385. [FN29]

FN29. Although the Court of Appeals found a duty to exist, it went on the hold that it had not been breached, in that the opinion letter itself did not set forth a specific dollar amount as securing the debt and was otherwise accurate. See Prudential, 80 N.Y.2d at 386.

*27 Villa Marin's allegations fail to sustain this narrow of theory of liability with regard to either L & A or BA. L & A was retained by Argonaut to conduct inspections and issue a report to Argonaut. (See No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶¶ 29, 31-32.) BA was retained, according to the complaint, by either Argonaut or L & A to assist in that task, i.e., the issuance of the report to Argonaut. (See id. ¶¶ 110, 120.) Although Villa Marin alleges that L & A and BA were aware that Villa Marin (as well as Argonaut) would rely on the report to Argonaut (see id. ¶¶ 112-13, 122-23), there is no allegation that Villa Marin's claimed reliance was "the end and aim," Glanzer, 233 N.Y. at 238-39, or the "particular purpose," Credit Alliance, 65 N.Y.2d at 551, of the retention of L & A or BA. In Glanzer, Ossining and Prudential, the precise, unambiguous purpose of the defendant professionals' retention was to make representations to the plaintiff for it to rely on before consummating a transaction with the retaining party. Put another way, although those defendants were not retained by the plaintiff, they were retained for the particular purpose of performing due diligence for the plaintiff. [FN30] Here, Villa Marin alleges a fundamentally different, and nearly opposite, relationship. Far from claiming that L & A and BA were hired by Argonaut to perform due diligence for Villa Marin, the complaint alleges that Argonaut sought to deprive Villa Marin of due diligence. (See No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶ 27 (Argonaut stated that it assumed "sole responsibility" for due diligence); see id. ¶ 33 (Argonaut only permitted VMGMC a brief view of the premises), see id. ¶¶ 34-35 (unhappy with Argonaut's "prohibition of VMGMC conducting its own due diligence," VMGMC bypassed Argonaut and met directly with Schlemmer at the premises); see id. ¶ 38 (VMGMC only received a copy of the report--three months after its issuance--on the date of closing, November 21, 1996).) Against the backdrop of those allegations, it is not surprising that the complaint fails to allege that Argonaut's particular purpose in retaining the engineers was to edify Villa Marin. And even if that were Argonaut's purpose, there is no basis in the complaint to conclude that L & A and BA were aware of it at the time the BA report was completed.

FN30. The same is true in Kidd v. Havens, 577 N.Y.S.2d 989 (4th Dep't 1991), on which Villa Marin relied heavily at oral argument. In that case the defendant was a title company that had been retained by the seller of real property to certify title to the plaintiff purchaser. See id. at 990.

The other attributes of relationships "so close" that they approach privity of contract are also missing here. It is not alleged that the engineers' report at issue was provided directly by L & A and BA to Villa Marin or that there was any contact at all between Villa Marin and either of those defendants. Put another way, there was no conduct on the part of the defendants linking them to Villa Marin and evincing their understanding of Villa Marin's reliance. See Credit Alliance, 65 N.Y.2d at 551.

At oral argument, counsel for Villa Marin asserted that L & A and BA owed a duty to Villa Marin because its reliance on the BA report to Argonaut was foreseeable to them. As noted above, that argument was explicitly rejected by Credit Alliance as contrary to New York law. See 65 N.Y.2d at 553; see also Ossining, 73 N.Y.2d at 424-25 ("[W]e have declined to adopt a rule permitting recovery by any 'foreseeable' plaintiff who relied on the negligently prepared report, and have rejected even a somewhat narrower rule that would permit recovery where the reliant party or class of parties was actually known or foreseen by the defendants." (citing Credit Alliance, 65 N.Y.2d at 553 & n. 11)).

*28 Villa Marin and Argonaut negotiated and executed a contract at arms' length. Argonaut hired an engineer to assist it in that process. Villa Marin chose not to do the same; more precisely, it alleges that it was not really permitted to, but went ahead and signed the contract anyway. That Villa Marin was allowed to see the BA report before signing the contract did not make Villa Marin, "in effect, if not in name," the engineers' client. Ultramares, 255 N.Y.2d at 183. Accordingly, they owed him no duty, and they are entitled to judgment on the pleadings.

III.

RONALD C. SCHLEMMER

Villa Marin has brought claims of fraud, misrepresentation, and breach of the Agreement to Lease against Schlemmer, the owner and principal of C & R (the entity that owns the Hylan premises). Schlemmer has moved to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6). [FN31]

FN31. The standard for a motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) is set forth in the previous section.

The following allegations are relevant to this motion. Villa Marin alleges that Schlemmer forbade anyone other than representatives of GM and Argonaut from inspecting the Hylan premises prior to the completion of the proposed transaction because he believed that such activity would arouse suspicion among his employees that a sale was imminent. (See No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶¶ 24, 28.) However, according to Villa Marin's complaint, Argonaut allowed VMGMC to visit the premises on a Sunday afternoon in August when Star was closed. (See id. ¶ 33.) Still unsatisfied with their limited access to the premises that GM wanted them to lease, the principals of Villa Marin sought and received permission from GM to meet with Schlemmer directly to discuss their concerns about the condition of the property. (See id. ¶ 34.) During their meeting, on August 15, 1996, the Villa Marin representatives told Schlemmer that they were concerned because they had not received any information regarding Star's business operations, the condition of the Hylan premises, and whether the premises could be subdivided to accommodate a separate showroom for the Buick franchise. In response, Schlemmer allegedly represented that Star's business operations were "good," that VMGMC was "getting a great deal" because they were "receiving the best location and best facility in Staten Island," that he had obtained all the necessary licences and permits, as required by municipal, city, and state law, including a certificate of occupancy, and that he had received municipal approval to subdivide the current tax lot into two lots to permit construction of a separate Buick showroom. When asked about the condition of the Hylan premises, Schlemmer allegedly stated that the "building was in very good condition and compliant" with the law. (Id. ¶ 35.) Villa Marin asserts that it relied on Schlemmer's representations "at all times" in entering into the proposed transaction. (Id. ¶ 36.) In February 1997, VMGMC learned for the first time that no certificate of occupancy existed for the Hylan premises and that the premises could not lawfully be occupied. (See id. ¶ 44.)

A. Misrepresentation and Fraud

29 In Villa Marin Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., No. 98-CV-6167, I issued an order on November 18, 1999, granting GM's and Argonaut's motion to dismiss the fraud and misrepresentation claims Villa Marin had alleged against them. Here, Villa Marin's fraud and misrepresentation claims against Schlemmer fail for substantially the same reasons. [FN32]

FN32. Schlemmer argues that Villa Marin's claims of fraud and misrepresentation are barred by doctrine of res judicata, or, more specifically, claim preclusion. Schlemmer arrives at this conclusion by pointing to (1) my October 1998 denial of Villa Marin's motion to remand, wherein I concluded that Villa Marin could not state claims against C & R for breach of the Prime Lease and for rescission based on fraudulent inducement, and (2) the December 1998 stipulation of dismissal with prejudice of the claims against C & R. I decline to reach this issue, but note that "[w]hen a litigant files consecutive lawsuits against separate parties for the same injury, the entry of judgment in the prior action does not bar the claims against the other potentially liable parties." Northern Assurance Co. of Am. v. Square D Co., No. 99-7153, 2000 WL 19245, at *4, 201 F.3d 84 (2d Cir. January 13, 2000) (quoting Central Hudson Gas & Elec. Corp. v. Empresa Naviera Santa S.A., 56 F.3d 359, 367 (2d Cir.1995)). Schlemmer was not a party to the proceedings on which his claim of preclusion relies.

In New York, the elements of fraudulent misrepresentation and fraud are identical. They require the plaintiff to establish by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant (1) made a material misrepresentation of fact; (2) with knowledge of its falsity; (3) with an intent to defraud; (4) upon which the plaintiff reasonably relied; and (5) and that caused injury to the plaintiff. See Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein, 33 F.3d 159, 163 (2d Cir.1994) (fraudulent misrepresentation); Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 153 (2d Cir.1995) (fraud).

Villa Marin alleges that it relied on two representations made by Schlemmer in entering into the transaction. First it claims that Schlemmer misrepresented that he had obtained a certificate of occupancy for the Hylan premises. Upon discovering that there was in fact a certificate of occupancy, Villa

Marin has adjusted its claim--it now asserts that Schlemmer misrepresented that there was a valid certificate of occupancy. Second, Villa Marin alleges that Schlemmer falsely represented that he had sought and received municipal approval to subdivide the current tax lot to permit construction of a separate Buick showroom. (See 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶ 35.) Villa Marin may not reasonably rely on either of these representations.

It is well-established that, "if the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations." Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 322 (1959) (quoting Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N.Y. 590, 596 (1892)). Thus, a plaintiff cannot reasonably rely on representations the accuracy of which is easily ascertainable.

The Appellate Division applied this principle in Jordache Enterprises, Inc. v. Gettinger Associates, 575 N.Y.S.2d 58 (1st Dep't 1991) (per curiam), the facts of which are closely related to the instant case. In Jordache, the plaintiff, an assignee of four separate commercial leases, sought to rescind the lease agreements on the ground that the defendant fraudulently represented that one floor of the premises had a certificate of occupancy permitting that floor to be used for storage purposes. See id. at 59. Affirming the trial court's dismissal of the complaint, the Appellate Division held that the plaintiff's reliance was unreasonable because "the terms of the certificate of occupancy, a public record, were not within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant." Id. at 59. Similarly, in Chan v. Bay Ridge Hill Realty Co., 623 N.Y.S.2d 896 (2d Dep't 1995) (per curiam), the plaintiff purchaser brought an action for fraud alleging that the seller misrepresented that he was the sole owner of the property. The Appellate Division affirmed the grant of summary judgment for the defendant and noted that "since the ownership of the property was a matter of public record, the information was not peculiarly in the [defendant's] knowledge and could have been ascertained by the plaintiff in the exercise of ordinary intelligence." Id. at 898 (citing Danann, 5 N.Y. at 322); see also Simms v. Biondo, 816 F.Supp. 814, 822 (E.D.N.Y.1993) ("Facts which are ascertainable as a matter of public record bar a claim of justifiable reliance necessary to sustain a cause of action for fraud."); Sirota v. Langtry, 612 N.Y.S.2d 526, 526 (4th Dep't 1994) (per curiam) ("Where the assessment of a particular piece of property is a matter of public record, a party may not rely upon an increase in assessment during the pendency of a purchase contract to support a fraud cause of action."); Zeid v. Kaldawi, 538 N.Y.S.2d 42, 45 (2d Dep't 1989) (per curiam) (misrepresentation regarding ownership of adjacent property could not constitute an independent basis on which to rescind the conveyance where record ownership was easily discoverable).

*30 In the instant case, Villa Marin could have investigated whether a certificate of occupancy had been issued for the Hylan premises and whether the Department of Buildings had granted Schlemmer's request to subdivide the tax lot, but it failed to do so. Neither of those items of information, or the documents evidencing them, were peculiarly within Schlemmer's knowledge or control. As the Appellate Division held in Jordache, a certificate of occupancy, a public record, is not information within the exclusive control of the lessor. See 579 N.Y.S.2d at 59. Thus, it was not reasonable for Villa Marin to have failed to investigate whether this document existed. [FN33] Similarly, municipal approval to subdivide a tax lot is also a public record which Villa Marin could have obtained. Indeed, Villa Marin demonstrates this fact by appending to its complaint the Department of Buildings' 1993 denial of a request to subdivide the Hylan premises. (See 99-CV-3750 Compl. Ex. J.) Therefore, I conclude that Villa Marin's reliance is unreasonable as a matter of law.

FN33. As noted above, Villa Marin now concedes that the certificate of occupancy did in fact exist, but asserts that it was invalid. It argues that its reliance was reasonable because only an engineer or an expert (not a person of ordinary intelligence) could have determined the accuracy of Schlemmer's representation. Putting aside whether this argument would defeat Villa Marin's fraudulent misrepresentation and fraud claims by suggesting that Schlemmer, a lay person, might not have had the requisite knowledge of the falsity of his alleged misrepresentation concerning the certificate of occupancy, I disagree with the argument on the merits. Villa Marin does not argue that the basis of the certificate of occupancy's invalidity was information peculiarly within Schlemmer's knowledge. Rather, it merely contends that its own principals, in exercise of their ordinary intelligence, would not have been able to ascertain the certificate's validity if they had looked. Villa Marin has not pointed to any authority in support of this distinction, nor could I find any. Simply put, the cases holding that a plaintiff may not reasonably rely on a representation that is verifiable in the public record do not distinguish between records that a lay person can readily understand and those as to which a professional's help is ordinarily needed. Accordingly, I conclude that Villa Marin's reliance remains unreasonable as a matter of law.

In response, Villa Marin cites to Todd v. Pearl Woods, Inc., 248 N.Y.S.2d 975 (2d Dep't 1964) (per curiam), aff'd mem., 15 N.Y.2d 817 (1965). In Todd, the plaintiffs contracted to purchase individual properties in a housing development in reliance on the developers' representation that there was a complete city sewer system installed and paid for in the development. See id. at 977. According to the plaintiffs, the developers had only paid for the installation of sewer lines and had paid nothing toward the capital construction costs of the sewer district. The developers argued, in a motion for summary judgment, that the plaintiffs could not reasonably rely on their representations regarding the sewer system because the information was available in the public record. The Appellate Division affirmed the denial of summary judgment and held that "where, as here alleged, the facts were peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendants and were willfully misrepresented, the failure of the plaintiffs to ascertain the truth by inspecting the public records is not fatal to their action." Id.

This case does not alter my conclusion that the plaintiffs' reliance was unreasonable. First, the plaintiff in Todd was an individual purchaser in a housing development. Here, in contrast, VMC, VMGMC, and Hondros are sophisticated parties who were represented by counsel throughout a complex commercial transaction. Unsatisfied with their limited access to the Hylan premises, they arranged for a walk-through of the premises and a meeting with Schlemmer, (see No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. ¶¶ 33-35), but then failed to investigate and verify any of Schlemmer's representations regarding information in the public record. See Grumman Allied Indus., Inc. v. Rohr Indus., Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 737 (2d Cir.1984) ("Where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance.")

*31 Second, the Todd court specifically rested its holding, without explaining its basis for doing so, on the finding that the facts related to the sewer system were peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendants. Addressing the issue of justifiable reliance, the Second Circuit has placed Todd in a line of cases where the plaintiff did not have access to the relevant information to verify the alleged misrepresentation. See Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Ins. Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1542 (2d Cir.1997). Tahini Investments Ltd. v. Bobrowsky, 470 N.Y.S.2d 431 (2d Dep't 1984) (per curiam), a case identified by the Second Circuit in this grouping, is a classic example of the information access problem. In Tahini, the plaintiff purchaser discovered drums containing hazardous material buried on the property. Reversing the grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendant, the Appellate Division held that if the plaintiff had no way of knowing about the existence of the waste his reliance may have been justifiable. See id. at 433. Thus, Tahini and Todd both concern information within the peculiar knowledge of the defendant.

Although Todd suggests that the information does not have to be absolutely unknowable before reliance may be justified, see Lazard Freres, 108 F.3d at 1542 n. 9, the holding is nonetheless premised on some degree of information disparity. Here, there is simply no evidence that the certificate of occupancy and the tax lot approval were peculiarly within Schlemmer's knowledge or control. Both documents were readily available for inspection and Villa Marin failed to do so. Without any information as to the basis of the holding in Todd, and in light of the relatively recent decision in Jordache regarding reliance on a certificate of occupancy, I cannot conclude that Villa Marin's reliance is justifiable.

Even if Schlemmer's representations did not concern matters of public record, Villa Marin's reliance is nonetheless unreasonable in light of section 2.2 of the Sublease. Reasonable reliance is precluded when "an express provision in a written contract contradicts a prior alleged oral representation in a meaningful fashion." M.H. Segan L.P. v. Hasbro, Inc., 924 F.Supp. 512, 527 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). Thus, any "conflict between the provisions of the written contract and the oral representations negates the claim of reliance upon the latter." Bango v. Naughton, 584 N.Y.S.2d 942, 944 (3d Dep't 1992) (collecting cases).

Section 2.2 of the Sublease states that VMGMC takes the Hylan premises "as is" and that VMGMC investigated and inspected the premises and found them to be satisfactory. (No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. Ex. O.) These statements substantially contradict the Villa Marin's claim of reliance on Schlemmer's representations. [FN34]

FN34. I recognize that VMGMC's specific disclaimer of reliance on any express or implied representation by Argonaut or its affiliates regarding the Hylan premises' fitness, condition, or compliance with laws does not include Schlemmer, the owner and principal of C & R. (No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. Ex. O ¶ 2.2.) However, this distinction does not alter my conclusion of unjustified reliance. First, the plaintiffs do not claim that they specifically reserved reliance on Schlemmer's representations in section 2.2. Rather, they merely claim that Schlemmer may not "enforce" the Sublease because he is not a party to it. As Schlemmer does not seek to enforce the Sublease, this argument is irrelevant. Second, C & R is repeatedly insulated from liability throughout the Sublease. (See No. 99-CV-3750 Compl. Ex. O. ¶¶ 4.2, 4.5, 4.6.) Thus, the Sublease contains no indication that VMGMC intended to preserve any reliance on representations by C & R or Schlemmer. Third, the statements in the Sublease that VMGMC takes the premises "as is" and that it conducted a full inspection to its satisfaction are sufficient to render Villa Marin's alleged reliance unreasonable even in the absence of a disclaimer as to Schlemmer. As it is unreasonable, as a matter of law, for a party to claim that it was fraudulently induced to enter into a contract by a prior representation of another party where reliance was specifically disclaimed in the agreement, see Harsco Corp. v. Segui, 91 F.3d 337, 345 (2d Cir.1996), it is unreasonable, a fortiori, to claim reliance on a non-party to that agreement.

As the Second Circuit stated in Lazard Freres:

"[W]here, as here, a party has been put on notice of the existence of material facts which have not been documented and he nevertheless proceeds with a transaction without securing the available documentation or inserting the appropriate language in the agreement for his protection, he may truly be said to have willingly assumed the business risk that the facts may not be as represented. Succinctly put, a party will not be heard to complain that he has been defrauded when it is his own evident lack of due care which is responsible for his predicament."

*32 108 F.3d at 1543 (quoting Rodas v. Manitaras, 552 N.Y.S.2d 618, 620 (1st Dep't 1990) (per curiam)). Thus, I find that Villa Marin's alleged reliance is unreasonable as a matter of law. Accordingly, Villa Marin's claims of misrepresentation and fraud are dismissed.

C. Breach of Contract

Villa Marin also claims that Schlemmer breached various provisions of the Agreement to Lease--the document between C & R and Argonaut memorializing the proposed execution of the Prime Lease. Although Villa Marin concedes that it is not a party to this document, it asserts that VMGMC is a third party beneficiary. I decline to reach this issue and assume the plaintiffs' third-party beneficiary status for the purpose of argument.

"It is well established that individual officers or directors are not personally liable on contracts entered into on behalf of a corporation if they do not purport to bind themselves individually." Ridgeline Constructors, Inc. v. Elmira Glass Tech. Corp., 583 N.Y.S.2d 633, 635 (3d Dep't 1992); see also Westminster Constr. Co. v. Sherman, 554 N.Y.S.2d 300, 301 (2d Dep't 1990) (per curiam). A director may be liable, however, if he "acted in bad faith or committed a tort in connection with the performance of the contract." Mills v. Polar Molecular Corp., 12 F.3d 1170, 1177 (2d Cir.1993).

Schlemmer did not sign the Agreement to Lease in his personal capacity. Rather, he signed the contract on behalf of C & R. Thus, Schlemmer is only liable for breach of contract if Schlemmer acted in bad faith or committed a tort in connection the contract's performance. Here, Villa Marin asserts that Schlemmer committed a tort by fraudulently representing the existence of a certificate of occupancy and subdivision approval. However, as previously discussed, Villa Marin's claims of fraud and misrepresentation against Schlemmer fail as a matter of law. I conclude, therefore, that Villa Marin has failed to allege a breach of contract claim against Schlemmer in his personal capacity. Accordingly, Schlemmer's motion to dismiss is granted.

CONCLUSION

For the aforementioned reasons, GM's and Argonaut's motion for summary judgment, BA's and L & A's motions for judgment on the pleadings, and Schlemmer's motion to dismiss are granted.

In Case No. 98-CV-5206, summary judgment is granted to GM with respect to (1) GM's declaratory judgment action seeking declarations that it lawfully terminated VMC's Chevrolet franchise pursuant to (a) the TRA, (b) the Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1221-1222, (c) the New York Franchised Motor Vehicle Dealer Act, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 460-472, and (d) the Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement (counts 1-4), and (2) Villa Marin's counterclaims for violations of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 460-472 (counterclaim 1), and breach of the Sublease (counterclaim 2).

In Case No. 98-CV-5208, summary judgment is granted to Argonaut with respect to (1) Argonaut's claims for breach of the Sublease (count 1) and a declaratory judgment that the sublease is enforceable (count 2), and (2) Villa Marin's claims for breach of the Sublease (counterclaim 1) and rescission of the Sublease (counterclaim 2). The issue of Argonaut's damages will be the subject of a hearing, as set forth below.

33 In Case No. 98-CV-6167, summary judgment is granted to GM and Argonaut with respect to Villa Marin's claims for breach of the Termination and Release Agreement (count 4), breach of the Agreement to Lease (count 5), breach of the Prime Lease (count 6), breach of the Sublease (count 7), breach of the GM Standard Provisions of the Chevrolet Dealer Sales and Service Agreement (count 8), breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing (count 9), rescission and reformation of the transaction (counts 12 and 13), and violations of the New York Franchised Motor Vehicle Dealer Act and the Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act (counts 1-3 and 14).

In Case No. 99-CV-3750, judgment on the pleadings is granted to L & A and BA with respect to Villa Marin's claims for professional negligence and malpractice (counts 5 and 6). Finally, Schlemmer's motion to dismiss is granted as to Villa Marin's claims of fraud, misrepresentation, prima facie tort, and breach of contract (counts 1-4).

With the exception Argonaut's damages for breach of the Sublease, this order disposes of all issues in all four of the captioned cases. However, because I believe appellate review of these decisions will be most efficient if the cases are consolidated at that level, the Clerk is directed to delay the entry of judgment in all of these cases pending the resolution of that remaining issue.

The hearing on Argonaut's damages will occur on April 5, 2000, at 10:00 a.m., unless the parties stipulate to the amount of damages before that date. Argonaut shall file a pre-hearing submission outlining the facts it intends to prove, and how it intends to prove them, by March 17, 2000. Villa Marin shall file its response to that submission (which shall include a like description of the evidence it intends to elicit) by March 27, 2000.

2000 WL 271965 (E.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

37

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second
Department, New York.

Karen F. GOLDMAN, et al., appellants,
v.
STROUGH REAL ESTATE, INC., et al., respondents.

Dec. 22, 2003.

Background: Landowners brought action against real estate brokers, asserting causes of action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation based on allegations that defendants misrepresented that owner of adjacent property would not develop the property in a manner that would interfere with their southerly view. The Supreme Court, Suffolk County, Klein, J., granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and landowners appealed.

Holding: The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that landowners were not justified in relying on defendants' representations, and thus could not recover for negligent misrepresentation or fraud.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Brokers 34
65k34

Landowners were not justified in relying on representations of real estate brokers that owner of adjacent property would not develop property in a manner that would interfere with their southerly view, and thus could not recover against brokers for negligent misrepresentation or fraud; landowners were experienced business persons, had access to public records to ascertain limits and status of neighboring developments, and could have discovered that adjoining parcel could be developed in a manner which would obstruct their view.

[2] Fraud 20
184k20

[2] Fraud 25
184k25

To recover damages for negligent misrepresentation or fraud, plaintiffs must demonstrate that they were justified in relying on the information supplied, and as a consequence, suffered damages.

[3] Fraud 11(1)
184k11(1)

[3] Fraud 12
184k12

Representations that are mere expressions of opinion of present or future expectations are not to be considered promises when examining the issue of fraud in the inducement.

[4] Fraud 12
184k12

Fraud is not a case of prophecy and prediction of something which it is merely hoped or expected will occur in the future.

*94 Stephen R. Steinberg, Southampton, N.Y., appellant pro se and for appellant, Karen F. Goldman.

Michael G. Walsh, Water Mill, N.Y., for respondents.

FRED T. SANTUCCI, J.P., WILLIAM D. FRIEDMANN, WILLIAM F. MASTRO, and REINALDO E. RIVERA, JJ.

677 In an action to recover damages for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, the plaintiffs appeal from an order of the Supreme Court, Suffolk County (Klein, J.), entered May 15, 2002, which granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint.

ORDERED that the order is affirmed, with costs.

The plaintiffs commenced this action against the defendant real estate brokers alleging that they misrepresented that the owner of an adjacent parcel would not develop the property in a manner that would interfere with their southerly view. 95 The Supreme Court properly granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint, as no triable issue of fact precluded summary judgment on the causes of action to recover damages for fraud (see Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, 4 N.Y.2d 403, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 151 N.E.2d 833; Busino v. Meachem, *678 270 A.D.2d 606, 704 N.Y.S.2d 690) or negligent misrepresentation (see International Products Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., 244 N.Y. 331, 155 N.E. 662, cert. denied 275 U.S. 527, 48 S.Ct. 20, 72 L.Ed. 408; Pappas v. Harrow Stores, 140 A.D.2d 501, 504, 528 N.Y.S.2d 404).

(Cite as: 2 A.D.3d 677, *677, 770 N.Y.S.2d 94, 94)

[1][2] To recover damages for negligent misrepresentation or fraud, the plaintiffs must demonstrate, inter alia, that they were justified in relying on the information supplied, and as a consequence, suffered damages (see Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, supra; International Products Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., supra; Pappas v. Harrow Stores, supra). Contrary to the plaintiffs' assertions, the defendants' alleged representation pertaining to the future development of the adjoining parcel did not amount to the perpetration of fraud or negligent misrepresentation (see Crossland Sav. v. SOI Dev. Corp., 166 A.D.2d 495, 560 N.Y.S.2d 782; International Products Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., supra; Pappas v. Harrow Stores, supra).

[3][4] "Representations that are mere expressions of opinion of present or future expectations are not to be considered promises when examining the issue of fraud in the inducement" (Crossland Sav. v. SOI Dev. Corp., supra). Fraud is "not a case of prophecy and prediction of something which it is merely hoped or expected will occur in the future" (Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, supra at 408, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 151 N.E.2d 833).

The defendants' alleged misrepresentations pertaining to the future development of an adjoining parcel of land constituted a future expectation (see Crossland Sav. v. SOI Dev. Corp., supra). Since the plaintiffs were experienced business persons, and had access to public records to ascertain the limits and status of neighboring developments, they could have discovered that the adjoining parcel could be developed in a manner that would obstruct their southerly view. Therefore, the plaintiffs were not justified in relying upon the defendants' predictions concerning how the adjoining parcel would be developed (see Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, supra; International Products Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., supra; Pappas v. Harrow Stores, supra).

Moreover, the plaintiffs failed to establish that they suffered damages (see Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, supra; International Products Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., supra; Pappas v. Harrow Stores, supra). The plaintiffs admitted a resale value of the property which was greater than what it cost them to purchase and develop it.

2 A.D.3d 677, 770 N.Y.S.2d 94, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 19713

END OF DOCUMENT

38

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court, S.D. New York.

The Gordon P. Getty Family Trust, Plaintiff,
v.
Nelson PELTZ, Peter W. May, Leon Kalvaria,
Mountleigh Holdings--NP I, Inc.,
Mountleigh Holdings--NP II, Inc., and
Mountleigh Holdings--PWM I, Inc.,
Defendants.

MOUNTLEIGH HOLDINGS--NP I, INC.,
Mountleigh Holdings--NP II, Inc., and
Mountleigh Holdings--PWM I, Inc.,
Counterclaim-Plaintiffs,

v.
The Gordon P. Getty Family Trust,
Counterclaim-Defendant.
Nelson PELTZ, Peter W. May, et al., Third-Party Plaintiffs,

v.
Marc E. LELAND, Third-Party Defendant.

No. 93 CIV. 3162(DAB).

March 27, 1998.

Debevoise & Plimpton, New York, Of Counsel John S. Kiernan, Kyra K. Bromley,
Berwin Leighton, New York, Of Counsel
Jeffrey E. Glen, for Plaintiff.

Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison,
New York, Of Counsel Max Gitter, Stephen L.
Saxl, Lynn B. Oberlander, for Defendants,
Counterclaim Plaintiffs, and Third-Party
Plaintiffs.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

BATTS, District J.

*1 This action arises out of a 1991 purchase by Plaintiff, The Gordon P. Getty Family Trust (the "Trust"), of approximately $44.5 million in shares of Mountleigh Holdings ("Mountleigh"), followed by an additional purchase of approximately $28 million in shares, less than one year before Mountleigh went into receivership. In relation to that transaction, Plaintiff alleges common law fraud, negligence, and breach of contract under New York State law. Defendants have counterclaimed for breach of contract by the Trust and third-party plaintiff Marc Leland. Defendants now move for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

For the reasons discussed below, the Court denies Defendants' summary judgment motion.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Factual Background

The Getty Trust, a California trust with approximately $1 billion in assets, is managed by Gordon Getty as Managing Trustee. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶¶ 4-5). [FN1] Marc Leland ("Leland"), the chief financial advisor to the Getty Trust since 1984, also served as the Trust's attorney-in-fact in connection with its investment in Mountleigh. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶¶ 6, 8). The Trust made its decision to purchase Mountleigh shares on the recommendation of Leland, who in turn claims to have relied on representations of Defendant Leon Kalvaria ("Kalvaria"). (Leland Aff. ¶¶ 3, 6).

FN1. As of April 15, 1997, the rule governing Statements of Material Fact on motions for summary judgment is Local Rule 56.1. The above referenced 3(g) statements were submitted to this Court before April 15, 1997, and thus the Court will refer to the parties' submissions as Local 3(g) Statements ("3(g) Stmt.") throughout this Memorandum and Order.

Mountleigh was a public limited company that developed and traded commercial property in Europe and owned and operated Galerias Preciados ("Galerias"), a retail business located in Spain. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 1). Mountleigh's shares were traded on the London Stock Exchange. (Id.) Defendants Nelson Peltz ("Peltz") and Peter W. May ("May") were appointed respectively as Chairman and Joint Managing Director of Mountleigh in November, 1989. (Id. ¶¶ 10, 12). In November, 1989 and January, 1990, Peltz and May made several purchases of Mountleigh shares through holding companies, resulting in their ownership of approximately 22% of Mountleigh's equity. (Id. ¶ 23).

By May, 1991, Mountleigh Holdings-NP I, Inc. and Mountleigh Holdings-NP II, Inc., both wholly owned by Peltz, collectively controlled approximately 15% of Mountleigh's outstanding ordinary shares. (Am.Compl.¶ 6). Mountleigh Holdings-PWM I, Inc., wholly owned by May, owned approximately 7% of Mountleigh's outstanding ordinary shares during the same period. (Am.Compl.¶ 9). Thus, the three institutional Defendants (collectively, the "Holding Companies") owned a total of approximately 22% of Mountleigh's outstanding ordinary shares in 1991, with Peltz constituting Mountleigh's single largest shareholder. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 23). The Getty Trust purchased approximately half of the Holding Companies' shares in May, 1991. (Id. ¶ 31).

1. Mountleigh's Status

While the Trust transaction was negotiated, Mountleigh was a troubled company attempting to arrange a debt restructuring with its lending banks. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 87). In April, 1991, Mountleigh's financial advisor and underwriter, UBS Phillips & Drew, prepared an internal report on Mountleigh predicting that the company would run out of cash by June, 1991 unless it engineered an equity infusion of at least 50 million. (Id. ¶¶ 22, 40; Pl.'s Ex. 37 at 23). This report also found that an acceleration of asset sales would be necessary, as even a cash infusion of 100 million would only provide breathing space until February, 1992. (Id.).

*2 One of Mountleigh's most attractive assets appeared to be its group of Spanish properties comprised by Galerias. According to Plaintiff, Defendants assured Leland that the value of the Spanish properties could be easily realized to provide Mountleigh with needed funds. (Id. ¶ 40). Under Spanish law, however, redundancy payments were required to be made to any employees terminated when Spanish assets were sold, rendering the Galerias properties more of a drain than an asset and forcing Mountleigh to sell properties in the United Kingdom instead. (Id. ¶¶ 72 n. 1, 73-74).

2. Relationship Between the Parties

Leon Kalvaria is described by Plaintiff as "the principal spokesperson for Peltz and May in communicating with the Trust." (Am.Compl.¶ 11). Prior to the events of 1991, Leland and Kalvaria enjoyed a relationship characterized by Leland as "both professionally and personally close." (Leland Aff. ¶¶ 3, 5-8). In 1988, Kalvaria served as an investment banking advisor to the Trust, and worked closely with Leland over an investment decision. (Id. ¶ 6). From this interaction, Leland states that Kalvaria learned that the Trust preferred transactions where its investment would be "co-extensive with that of another investor having comparable financial resources but also having the investment banking and other financial resources to evaluate the investment in detail," as the Trust would "rely heavily on that other investor and its advisors" since their interests were aligned. (Id.). Leland discussed this approach with Kalvaria on numerous occasions. (Id.).

Since that time, Kalvaria approached Leland on occasion with investment suggestions for the Trust. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 25). Kalvaria proposed a transaction involving the Trust, Peltz and May as early as 1989. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 25; Leland Aff. ¶ 5). Leland first met Peltz in the summer of 1990. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 24). In February, 1991, Leland convened with Peltz, May, and Kalvaria to discuss a potential investment involving the merger of Mountleigh with another entity. (Id. ¶ 26). Leland ultimately rejected this transaction as unsuitable to the Trust's purposes, because "it did not contemplate a coequal investment by Peltz and May of the type favored by the Getty Trust." (Leland Aff. ¶ 10).

In the first week of May, 1991, Kalvaria suggested to Leland the possibility of the Trust purchasing half of Peltz and May's Mountleigh shares. [FN2] (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 28).

Kalvaria told Leland that the rules of the London Stock Exchange governing when Peltz and May could sell their shares dictated that the contemplated sale occur by mid-May. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 34). A basic principle of the London Stock Exchange Model Code requires that "dealings should not normally take place for a minimum period" preceding publication of a company's annual operating results. (See Model Code for Securities Transaction by Directors of Listed Companies (1991), at 5.42.) [FN3] Defendants referred to the Model Code's prohibition of such sales within the 60 days preceding the release of annual results as justification for the original May 15 deadline for closing of the sale. [FN4] (Id. ¶ 34). In order to meet this deadline, Leland believed "a decision whether to go forward had to be made by about May 9." (Leland Aff. ¶ 14).

FN2. The Complaint identifies this date as "on or about May 7, 1991 ." (Am.Compl.¶ 13.) Leland specifies May 7 as the date on which he first heard of the proposed investment in a telephone call from Kalvaria. (Leland Aff. ¶ 11.)

FN3. Rule 3.1 of the Model Code prohibits a director from dealing in securities for "two months immediately preceding the preliminary announcement of the company's annual results ... unless the circumstances are exceptional." (See Def.'s Appendix, Vol 1, Model Code at 5.45). The London Stock Exchange's public announcement censuring Peltz and May for violation of the Model Code stated that "[t]he basic principles referred to preclude directors from dealing for a minimum period (normally two months) prior to announcement of regularly recurring information such as results." (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 125; Def.'s Exh. 62, at G05693).

FN4. This date was later revised to May 17, and, finally, to May 19. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 34.)

*3 Between May 7, 1991, and the closing date, Kalvaria made a number of oral representations to Leland regarding Mountleigh's status. (Id. ¶¶ 12-13). In addition, Kalvaria sent Leland a series of documents providing written information on Mountleigh, the current state of the British property market, and Galerias. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 34). On May 15, Kalvaria sent Plaintiff a letter and financial presentation of current and projected outlook for Mountleigh, noting in the letter that the results were before "write-offs" of >60 million, however, this figure was later to be revised upwards to more than 80 million. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 51; Def.'s Ex. 10). During mid-May, Plaintiff was also furnished with an "Information Pack" which included a presentation to Mountleigh's banks. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 34). The first copy of this bank presentation faxed to Leland on May 16, contained only a partial cashflow forecast for Mountleigh. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 34). The hard copy sent that day, did contain a complete cashflow forecast through 1992-93, but it did not arrive until after the initial closing date. (Id. ¶ 34; Leland Aff. ¶ 28.)

The extent and content of Defendants' disclosures prior to the transaction regarding Mountleigh's net asset value, Mountleigh's fiscal year-end losses, Mountleigh's cash situation, the status of Mountleigh's Spanish properties, and the nature of Mountleigh's relationship with its financing banks, are contested by the parties. Plaintiff asserts that Defendants misrepresented the significance of Mountleigh's debt restructuring as a source of breathing room to sell properties in the United Kingdom at a later date, and that Defendants did not disclose that such sales were in fact required to stay afloat. (See Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 103). Plaintiff further asserts that Kalvaria told Leland that Mountleigh was under no pressure to sell properties in the United Kingdom in 1991-92, and that financing had already been arranged with the banks. (Id. ¶ 43). [FN5] In addition, Kalvaria portrayed Peltz and May's participation in the additional purchase of Mountleigh shares as "voluntary," when this arrangement was later revealed to have been a condition required by Mountleigh's financing banks. (Leland Aff. ¶ 27).

FN5. The parties also dispute whether the timetable of financing set forth in the written materials provided to Leland contradicted this representation. (See Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 43; see also Def.'s Ex. 10 at G02564).

Plaintiff asserts that Defendants' written representations deliberately concealed Mountleigh's illiquidity as of May 1991, as Mountleigh's anticipated cashflow statements failed to indicate the urgency of Mountleigh's cash situation, and underestimated the cashflow deficit by a factor of 10. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 40). Plaintiff asserts that Defendants knew at the time of the transaction that, even with large infusions of funds, the Spanish properties--described by Kalvaria as Mountleigh's "crown jewel"--would not generate needed cash for two years, but represented to Plaintiff that the sale of the Galerias properties would be sufficient to pay off Mountleigh's debts. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 102; Leland Aff. ¶ 18). Although the documents furnished to Leland indicated planned sales of property in the United Kingdom, Plaintiff argues that these sales were not portrayed as necessary, but merely as a source of "fresh equity" desired to realize value. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 102).

*4 As to the redundancies required under Spanish law, Plaintiff admits to having been informed of the law on this subject, but states that Defendants failed to disclose the difficulties posed by the projected sales of Spanish assets. (See Pl.'s 3(g) ¶¶ 72-74). Defendants argue, on the other hand, that the documents provided to Leland in the Information Pack disclosed sufficient information to clarify the situation with the Spanish properties and to counteract any statements made orally by Kalvaria. (Def.'s 3(g) ¶¶ 72-74).

3. Completion of the Transaction

According to Defendants, Mountleigh's Board "met" on the transaction prior to its undertaking. (Def.'s 3(g) ¶ 30). Plaintiff asserts, however, that the Board did not formally approve the sale. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶ 30). On May, 19, 1991, a Stock Purchase Agreement was executed between the Getty Trust and Peltz and May. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 29). The Agreement contained several warranties. Section 2.2 of the Agreement, entitled "Non-Contravention," represented that the transaction would not "conflict with or result in any breach or violation of ... any law, statute, regulation, order, judgment or decree applicable to [[[Mountleigh]."

 (Am.Compl.¶ 36.) Section 2.3 of the Agreement asserted that there had been no material adverse change since 1990 in Mountleigh's "assets, properties, business, operations or condition (financial or otherwise)." (Am.Compl.¶ 28.) Section 2.4 provided that none of the documents provided by Defendants to Plaintiff in connection with the stock purchase contained material omissions or misrepresentations. (Am.Compl.¶ 35.)

On May 19, 1991, The Trust wired cash funds in the amount of $44,077,190.98 and, on May 20, acquired approximately 11% of Mountleigh's equity from the Holding Companies at a purchase price above the then prevailing market price. (Def.'s 3(g) ¶¶ 31-32). [FN6] Leland was under the impression that a later offering of rights to existing shareholders would provide the Trust with an opportunity to buy additional shares at a below-market rate. (Leland Aff. ¶ 27). Peltz and May had also committed to participate coequally in this projected 100 million rights offering to Mountleigh shareholders (Id. ¶¶ 12, 27). In accordance with the terms of the Stock Purchase Agreement, the Trust made an additional investment of over $28 million on August 27, 1991. (Am.Compl.¶ 21).

FN6. Beginning on May 20, 1991, Leland served on Mountleigh's board for approximately one year. (Id. ¶ 9).

The sale of Mountleigh shares to the Trust was later found to have violated the Model Code. Mountleigh's fiscal year ended on April 30, and typically, the company's year-end results were reported in mid- to late July. (Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 2). However, the 1991 final results were released on July 5, 1991. (Id. ¶ 50).

Since the release date was less than two months after the sale of shares to the Trust, the London Stock Exchange issued a public announcement on August 15, 1991, censuring Peltz and May for the sale of Mountleigh's securities within the 60-day "closed period" prior to release of its operating results and while in possession of unpublished price-sensitive information. (Pl.'s 3(g) ¶¶ 110-111). The Stock Exchange letter adverted to a "clear risk that shareholders and potential investors would be given a misleading impression by the announcement on May 20 that directors of Mountleigh had sold shares at a significant premium to the market price" when the contemplated refinancing had not yet been revealed. (Id. ¶ 114).

*5 In May, 1992, after the sale of a large property in the United Kingdom fell through and Mountleigh failed to negotiate further concessions from the banks, Mountleigh was placed in receivership. (Defs.3(g) ¶¶ 57-61). All Mountleigh equity investors lost their investments: Peltz and May suffered a loss of nearly $150 million, while the Trust lost about $72.5 million. (Id.).

B. Procedural Background

Plaintiff commenced this action in 1993. Defendants subsequently brought counterclaims alleging that Plaintiff violated the Stock Purchase Agreement between the parties and seeking indemnification for attorneys' fees. In April 1995, this Court granted Defendants permission to move for summary judgment before the completion of discovery.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Standard

The principles applicable to summary judgment are familiar and well-settled. Summary judgment may be granted only when there is no genuine issue of material fact remaining for trial, and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c); see also Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247-48, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986); Corselli v. Coughlin, 842 F.2d 23 (2d Cir.1988). "[T]he plain language of Rule 56(c) mandates the entry of summary judgment, ... against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986).

As a general rule, all ambiguities and all inferences drawn from the underlying facts must be resolved in favor of the party contesting the motion, and all uncertainty as to the existence of a genuine issue for trial must be resolved against the moving party. LaFond v. General Physics Servs. Corp., 50 F.3d 165, 171 (2d Cir.1995). As is often stated, "[v]iewing the evidence produced in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, if a rational trier could not find for the nonmovant, then there is no genuine issue of material fact and entry of summary judgment is appropriate." Binder v. LILCO, 933 F.2d 187, 191 (2d Cir.1991).

B. Common Law Fraud Claim

Plaintiff alleges common law fraud on the part of Defendants, claiming, inter alia, that Defendants misrepresented Mountleigh's financial state, its position with respect to the sale of properties in the United Kingdom, and the status of its relationship with its banks. Defendants move for summary judgment on the grounds that Plaintiff cannot establish the elements of this claim.

To sustain a claim of common law fraud under New York law, a plaintiff must show that (1) the defendant made a material false representation, (2) the defendant intended to defraud the plaintiff thereby, (3) the plaintiff reasonably relied upon the representation, and (4) the plaintiff suffered damage as a result of such reliance. See Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc. v. Recovery Credit Servs., Inc., 98 F.3d 13, 19 (2d Cir.1996); Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 153 (2d Cir.1995); The Pits, Ltd. v. American Express Bank Int'l, 911 F.Supp. 710, 719 (S.D.N.Y.1996).

*6 "Common law fraud claims must be supported by factual allegations demonstrating the plaintiff's actual, direct reliance on the misrepresentation or omission." Redtail Leasing, Inc. v. Bellezza, No. 95 Civ. 5191, 1997 WL 603496, *6, *7 (S.D.N.Y. Sept.30, 1997) (citing to Golden Budha Corp. v. Canadian Land Co., 931 F.2d 196, 202 (2d Cir.1991), and distinguishing common law fraud claims from action where reliance on a material omission is presumed). Each element of the fraud cause of action must be shown by clear and convincing evidence. See Banque Arabe, 57 F.2d at 152.

In the instant case, the Court finds that facts essential to the claim of common law fraud are in dispute. As noted supra, the extent of Defendants' oral and written disclosures prior to the transaction are contested by the parties: whether or not certain information was omitted, whether such omissions were material, and whether Plaintiff relied upon the incomplete disclosures, are determinative of this claim. For instance, the record does not clearly show what Plaintiff knew of Mountleigh's earnings, whether Defendants misrepresented this figure, and whether Mountleigh's earnings were material to the Trust's decision to make the investment or whether the Trust's interest in Mountleigh was based solely on its assets. See Pl.'s 3(g) ¶¶ 38-39, 91. Similarly, the record is also unclear over whether Leland was misled by an understatement of Mountleigh's imminent cashflow problems and failure to disclose the urgent need to sell property for cash, or whether the information provided was sufficient to place Plaintiff on notice of the actual status of Mountleigh's affairs. See Defs.' 3(g) ¶¶ 81, 86.

Notwithstanding the above areas of dispute, Defendants contend that Plaintiff, as a sophisticated investor, had sufficient knowledge to have been put on notice of material omissions which it failed to investigate. See Def.'s Mem. Law at 5. It appears, however, that Plaintiff's time to make a decision was very limited. There were a mere eight days between Kalvaria's first suggestion of the transaction on May 7, and the original closing date of May 15. [FN7] In light of the extreme time pressure imposed on Plaintiff in making its decision, "[t]o assert that [Leland]'s efforts to verify the information he received were insufficient to make his reliance reasonable is tantamount to asserting that he should have suspected fraud from the start." Freschi v. Grand Coal Venture, 767 F.2d 1041, 1049 (2d Cir.1985), vacated on different grounds, 478 U.S. 1015, 106 S.Ct. 3325, 92 L.Ed.2d 731 (1986) (where plaintiff made investment a mere two weeks following its proposal). See also Stratford Group v. Interstate Bakeries Corp., 590 F.Supp. 859, 864 (S.D.N.Y.1984)(finding question of reliance raised issue of fact for trial in part due to severe time constraints on the transaction); Alexander v. Evans, No. 88 Civ. 5309, 1993 WL 427409, *1, *17 (S.D.N.Y., Oct.15, 1993) (denying summary judgment on common law fraud action in part because, although plaintiff was a sophisticated investor, the reliance element "was not designed to shield perpetrators of fraud by forcing investors to conduct exhaustive research every time they invest money, lest the seller be manipulative or deceptive"). Given the evident time constraints imposed by Defendants on this sophisticated investor, the question of whether Plaintiff was reasonable in relying on certain representations is a question to be determined by a trier of fact.

FN7. Indeed, the time to agree to the transaction may have been as short as two days, as Leland asserts that he believed the Trust's decision needed to be reached by approximately May 9 to meet the original target date for execution of the Stock Purchase Agreement. (See Leland Aff. ¶ 14).

*7 Defendants further argue that Plaintiff cannot support its claims of justifiable reliance on oral representations by Kalvaria to Leland because such statements were contradicted by the written materials Leland received before making the investment decision. See Def.'s Mem. Law at 4. The cases cited by Defendants in support of this argument are distinguishable on the facts, particularly for the absence of time constraints that will affect access to information and the importance of omissions, and subsequently, the reasonableness of the buyer's reliance on oral representations made by a person arguably in a position of confidence and trust. See e.g. Grunman Allied Industries v. Rohr Indus., 748

F.2d 729, 738 (2d Cir.1984) (granting summary judgment on finding that buyer failed to inquire into discrepancies, enjoyed "undisputed access to the corporate records necessary to confirm or disprove the substance of the verbal assurance," and no showing that relationship between parties triggered duty of disclosure) (emphasis added); Treacy v. Simmons, No. 89 Civ. 7052, 1991 WL 67474, *1, *4-*6 (S.D.N.Y., Apr.23, 1991) (granting summary judgment where plaintiff admits that did not read written offering materials that were replete with warnings of risk, and plaintiff "failed to set forth any evidence to overcome this glaring unjustifiable reliance on [the seller's] statements in light of the disclosure in the offering materials."). In the instant case, there are specific points of apparent conflict between what Kalvaria said, and what the documents provided by Kalvaria appeared to say: for example, as to the status of Mountleigh with the financing banks in May, 1991, the oral representations were that financing was already firmly arranged, whereas the written documentation included a "timetable" for the completion of the financing agreement. Whether Leland was justified in relying on Kalvaria's statement despite the indications from the documentation, considering the context of a time pressured deal arrived at between business associates with a prior relationship, is again a genuine issue of material fact.

Therefore, the foregoing issues and the uncertainty they raise regarding Defendants' representations of Mountleigh's financial conditions and the reasonableness of Plaintiff's reliance, render it impossible to find that Plaintiff's fraud claims fail as a matter of law. Thus, the Court denies Defendants' motion for summary judgment on the claim of common law fraud.

C. Negligent Misrepresentation Claim

To support a claim of negligent misrepresentation under New York law, a plaintiff must establish "(1) carelessness in imparting words (2) upon which others were expected to rely (3) upon which they did act or failed to act (4) to their damage; further, (5) the author must express the words directly, with knowledge they will be acted upon, to one whom the author is bound to by some relation [of] duty or care." The Pits, 911 F.Supp. at 720; see also ABF Capital Management v. Askin Capital Management, L.P., 957 F.Supp. 1308, 1333 (S.D.N.Y.1997); In re JWP Inc. Sec. Litig., 928 F.Supp. 1239, 1253 (S.D.N.Y.1996). "Under New York law, it is well established that a defendant is not liable for negligent misrepresentation unless a prior relationship existed between the defendant and plaintiff." ABF Capital Management, 957 F.Supp. at 1333 (citing Toto v. McMahan, Brafman, Morgan & Co., No. 93 Civ. 5894, 1995 WL 46691, *1, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. Feb.7, 1995) (internal quotations omitted)).

*8 "In the commercial context, a duty to speak with care exists when the relationship of the parties [is] such that in morals and good conscience the one has the right to rely upon the other for information." Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 263, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 719, 675 N.E.2d 450 (N.Y.1996). The Kimmell Court acknowledged that not all representations made by a seller will give rise to a duty to speak with care, since there must be a "special relationship" creating "an exceptional duty regarding commercial speech and justifiable reliance on such speech." Id. [FN8] The relevant factors for this determination are the seller's unique or special expertise on the matter at hand, or the appearance thereof; the existence of a relationship of trust or confidence between the parties; and whether the speaker was aware of the use to which the information would be put, and supplied it for that purpose. Id. This inquiry into the existence of a special relationship is, by necessity, highly fact specific. See Gruber v. Victor, No. 95 Civ. 2285, 1996 WL 492991, *1, *17-18 (S.D.N.Y., Aug.28, 1996); In re JWP Inc. Sec. Litig., 928 F.Supp. at 1253.

FN8. In Kimmell, the Court distinguished representations made by a seller in a commercial transaction without "obligations arising from the speaker's professional status," from those made by a speaker who, by virtue of his or her training and expertise, is considered to have a special relationship of confidence and trust with their clients. 89 N.Y.2d at 263, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 719, 675 N.E.2d 450 (citing as examples, lawyers, engineers, and accountants).

Defendants contend that Plaintiff's negligent misrepresentation claim must be dismissed as a matter of law, since the transaction was conducted at arms-length. The Court disagrees. Plaintiff has asserted that a special relationship grew out of Kalvaria's prior role as the Trust's investment banking advisor and his subsequent knowledge of the Trust's investment philosophy, that Kalvaria's expertise with respect to Mountleigh was relied upon because of his position and the time constraints imposed, and that Kalvaria's oral representations to Leland regarding the proposed transaction were made with full knowledge of the confidence he enjoyed. Looking at these assertions in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, there has been a sufficient showing to set the instant case apart from a strictly arms-length commercial transaction. Compare Banque Arabe, 57 F.3d 146, 158-9 (finding no special relationship as a matter of law where negotiations were at arms-length, agreement disclaimed reliance, and buyer's due diligence would have provided access to allegedly concealed information); with Polycast Tech. Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., 792 F.Supp. 244, 269-270 (S.D.N.Y.1992)(denying summary judgment because allegations of defendants' repeated reassurances that earning projections were accurate, and of incomplete access to defendants' books and their superior knowledge of transaction, allowed inference of relationship "closer" than that of buyer and seller). Whether Kalvaria was indeed obligated to speak with care is not clear as a matter of law, and is therefore a question for a trier of fact.

D. Breach of Warranty Claim

To prevail on a claim for breach of warranty under New York law, a plaintiff must show damage suffered from the breach of an express warranty that plaintiff relied upon as part of a contract. Metromedia Co. v. Fugazy, 983 F.2d 350, 360 (2d Cir.1992); CBS Inc. v. Ziff-Davis Publ'g Co., 75 N.Y.2d 496, 503-4, 554 N.Y.S.2d 449, 453, 553 N.E.2d 997 (N.Y.1990). Regarding the "reliance" element, the New York Court of Appeals has stated that the critical question is whether the buyer believed he or she was purchasing the seller's promise as to the truth of the warranted information. CBS Inc., 75 N.Y.2d at 503, 554 N.Y.S.2d at 452-53, 553 N.E.2d 997. A claim for breach of warranty does not require a showing that plaintiff believed that the actual assurances in the warranty would be fulfilled, but rather a showing that the warranty was bought and breached. Id. See also Metromedia, 983 F.2d at 360.

*9 The extent and source of the buyer's knowledge about the truth of what the seller is warranting, is still relevant to the this claim. "Where a buyer closes on a contract in the full knowledge and acceptance of facts disclosed by the seller which would constitute a breach of warranty under the terms of the contract, the buyer should be foreclosed from later asserting the breach." Galli v. Metz, 973 F.2d 145, 151 (2d Cir.1992). Moreover, the Second Circuit has recently stated "where a seller discloses up front [to the buyer] the inaccuracy of certain of his warranties, it cannot be said that the buyer-absent the express reservation of his rights-believed he was purchasing the seller's promise as to the truth of the warranties." Rogath v. Siebenmann, 129 F.3d 261, 265 (2d Cir.1997). If, however, the buyer's knowledge that the warranted facts are false comes from a source independent of the seller, the buyer is not foreclosed from later claiming a breach since "it is not unrealistic to assume that the buyer purchased the seller's warranty as insurance against any future claims." Id. at 265.

Plaintiff claims that Defendants breached warranties set forth in Sections 2.2, 2.3, and 2.4 of the Stock Purchase Agreement through violation of the non-contravention provision, withholding of information regarding a material adverse change in Mountleigh's condition, and failure to disclose material facts. [FN9] The record before the Court reflects that facts critical for the determination of this claim, remain in dispute.

FN9. Plaintiff also seeks indemnification from the Holding Companies pursuant to Section 7 of the Stock Purchase Agreement, and recovery under the Guarantees executed by Peltz and May for the performance of the Holding Companies under the Stock Purchase Agreement. See Am. Compl. ¶¶ 61-72. However, these grounds have not been presented on the motion for summary judgment.

The parties disagree, as an initial matter, over whether they intended to include regulations such as the London Stock Exchange Model Code in the non-contravention provision. See Def.'s Mem. Law at 38; Pl.'s Mem. Law at 40. Further, the parties dispute the source and extent of Plaintiff's awareness of potential problems with the London Stock Exchange before the agreement was signed, whether Plaintiff consented to proceed with the transaction despite the possibility of such censure, and whether such participation by Plaintiff, if it existed, effectuated a waiver of the non-contravention provision. See 3(g) Stmts. ¶¶ 113-149. [FN10]

FN10. As a tangential matter, Defendants question the validity of the London Stock Exchange's reaction, see Defs.' 3(g) ¶ 115, n .7, and also appear to question whether a censure actually occurred, id. ¶ 110, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d 450 (referring to a "public announcement [of the London Stock Exchange] "purporting" to censure Peltz and May for the Trust transaction).

Defendants claim that Plaintiff waived the warranties set forth in sections 2.2 and 2.4 of the Stock Purchase Agreement because the parties "discussed" the legal issues posed by the Model Code prior to the transaction. Despite the fact that Section 8.4 of the Stock Purchase Agreement requires a written waiver of any express warranties, Defendants argue that under Galli, Plaintiff's knowledge of the Model Code rules forecloses this claim. See Defs.' Mem. Law at 39. See also Galli, 973 F.2d at 151. The Court disagrees. Unlike the situation in Galli, the parties here had not expressly agreed prior to the sale that conditions rendering the warranty false existed. There is a fundamental difference between knowledge of the Model Code prohibition against the sale of shares during the "closed" period, and knowledge that the results would actually be released within that time. Moreover, the Rogath standard requires that the source of the buyer's information be also factored into the equation. These two points--whether Plaintiff knew of the projected release date of the results, and the source of that knowledge, are questions of fact in dispute.

*10 Indeed, the Court acknowledges that Plaintiff has put forth evidence tending to show that the Defendants' promise as to the truth of the warranted facts was part of Plaintiff's bargain. For example, Leland stated that in the face of uncertainty engendered by the opposing views expressed by advising counsel to the Trust, Mountleigh, Peltz and May, he acquiesced to the strategy of not consulting the London Stock Exchange in advance on the transaction, "so long as the sellers contractually undertook to shoulder all risks of any harm to the Getty Trust's interests in the event that their view turned out to be wrong." See Leland Aff. ¶ 47. [FN11]

FN11. The Court notes that Defendants' argument that Leland's subsequent service as one of Mountleigh's directors operated to waive the non-contravention provision retroactively is unpersuasive. See Defs.' Mem. Law at 41-42.

Regarding the warranty against material omissions in Section 2.4, the parties argue over whether the year-end accounting adjustments made to Mountleigh's estimated operating profit constituted a material misrepresentation that therefore violated this warranty. See 3(g) Stmts. ¶ 95. The disagreement over the materiality of the write-off amount in the investment decision, is a factual inquiry related to the parties' expectations at the time. See 3(g) Stmts. ¶¶ 100, 101. Such matters cannot be resolved on summary judgment.

Finally, Defendants claim that Plaintiff's alleged damages are too remote from the alleged violation of the Stock Purchase agreement to constitute a chain of causation. See Def.'s Mem. Law at 44. Plaintiff asserts that the London Stock Exchange censure precipitated Peltz and May's resignations from Mountleigh's board and the subsequent "unwilling[ness] to commit the necessary resources to saving Mountleigh from failure," resulting in a drop in market price and the Trust's loss of its investment. See id. ¶¶ 148-49 & n. 8. As a result, Plaintiffs claim that Mountleigh's stock price dropped significantly beneath its projected level by the time of the rights issue. Id. Looking at the facts in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, and again considering that full discovery of Mountleigh's downward spiral has not yet been completed, such a chain of events is not so attenuated that this Court can say, as a matter of law, causation cannot be found.

E. Defendants' Counterclaim for Breach of Contract

Defendants also seek summary judgment on their Counterclaim against Plaintiff for breach of contract based on the alleged violation of Section 1.4 of the Stock Purchase Agreement. [FN12]

FN12. This provision stated that Plaintiff was to pay an additional purchase price based on dividends paid by the Mountleigh shares for 1991 and on tax credits refunded to the Trust. See Counterclaim, ¶¶ 7-22.

Defendants argue that since Plaintiff's defenses to the Counterclaim echo the allegations of the Complaint, and since those allegations fail as a matter of law, Plaintiff has no defense to the Counterclaim. See Def.'s Mem. Law at 44-45. This argument is wholly contingent upon the success of the remainder of Defendants' motion. Since the Court has not found that Defendants' should prevail as a matter of law on any of the above grounds, summary judgment on the Counterclaim must also be denied.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court finds that genuine issues of material fact exist on Plaintiff's claims of common law fraud, negligent misrepresentation and breach of warranty under New York law. Accordingly, Defendants' motion for summary judgment on these claims is hereby DENIED.

*11 Defendants' motion for summary judgment on the Counterclaim relied upon a finding that the allegations of the Complaint fail as a matter of law. Since such a finding was not made, Defendants' motion for summary judgment on the counterclaim is hereby DENIED.

The Court hereby DIRECTS that the parties appear before this Court on Friday, May 1, 1998 for a conference to schedule the completion of discovery and pre-trial submissions in this matter.

SO ORDERED.

1998 WL 148425 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

39

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First
Department, New York.

GREATER NEW YORK MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff-
Appellant-Respondent,

v.

WHITE KNIGHT RESTORATION, LTD., et al., Defendants-Respondents-Appellants,
The Charter & Oak Fire Insurance Company,
Defendant,

Levitt-Fuirst Associates, Ltd., et al.,
Defendants-Respondents.

Greater New York Mutual Insurance Company, Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

White Knight Restoration, Ltd., et al.,
Defendants,

R.A.S. Contracting Corp., etc., et al.,
Defendants-Respondents.

May 6, 2004.

Background: Property owner and contractor sued subcontractor's insurance broker, seeking damages for broker's failure to procure coverage naming them as additional insureds, and for producing certificates of insurance that incorrectly indicated they had been so named. The Supreme Court, New York County, Charles Edward Ramos, J., dismissed complaint. Plaintiffs appealed.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that: (1) broker was under no duty to property owner and contractor, and (2) lack of reasonable reliance precluded claims of fraud and negligent misrepresentation.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Insurance 1671
217k1671

Subcontractor's insurance broker was under no duty to property owner and contractor, as required to support claim that broker failed to procure coverage naming them as additional insureds.

[2] Insurance 1672
217k1672

Regardless of whether subcontractor's insurance broker acted recklessly in producing certificates of insurance that incorrectly indicated that property owner and contractor had been named as additional insureds, it was unreasonable to rely on certificates, precluding claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, in face of disclaimer language.

*257 Thomas D. Hughes, New York (Richard C. Rubinstein of counsel), for appellant-respondent/appellant.

Jaffe & Asher LLP, New York (Marshall T. Potashner of counsel), for R.A.S. Contracting Corp., respondent-appellant/respondent, and Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, respondent.

*258 Lawrence, Worden & Rainis, P.C., Melville (Roger B. Lawrence of counsel), for Levitt-Fuirst Associates, Ltd., respondents.

NARDELLI, J.P., SAXE, WILLIAMS,
FRIEDMAN, JJ.

293 Judgment, Supreme Court, New York County (Charles Edward Ramos, J.), entered May 29, 2003, dismissing the complaint, all cross claims and all counterclaims, unanimously affirmed, without costs. Appeals from orders, same court and Justice, entered June 11 and December 19, 2002, and February 19, 2003, unanimously dismissed, without costs, as subsumed in the appeals from the judgment. Appeal by defendant White Knight Restoration unanimously dismissed, without costs, as abandoned.

[1][2] In this action seeking, inter alia, damages for failure to procure coverage naming the property owner and the contractor as additional insureds, and for producing certificates of insurance that incorrectly indicated they had been so named, summary judgment was properly granted to the subcontractor's insurance broker, defendant Levitt-Fuirst Associates, dismissing the claims for breach of contract and negligence, since the broker was under no duty to the property owner and contractor (see Federal Ins. Co. v. Spectrum Ins. Brokerage Servs., 304 A.D.2d 316, 317, 758 N.Y.S.2d 21). Regardless of whether the broker acted recklessly, the causes of action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, based on the inaccurate certificates, were properly dismissed because it was unreasonable to rely on them for coverage in the face of their disclaimer language and, with respect to the negligent misrepresentation claim, because of the absence of a relationship approximating privity (see Benjamin Shapiro Realty Co. v. Kemper Natl. Ins. Cos., 303 A.D.2d 245, 756 N.Y.S.2d 45, lv. denied 100 N.Y.2d 573, 764 N.Y.S.2d 382, 796 N.E.2d 473). In view of the foregoing, it is unnecessary to address the parties' other contentions with regard to these claims.

(Cite as: 7 A.D.3d 292, *293, 776 N.Y.S.2d 257, 258)

In clarifying its initial order, the motion court properly dismissed the claims against R.A.S., since plaintiff was covered by its own policy and failed to allege any recoverable loss (see Inchaustegui v. 666 5th Ave. Ltd. Partnership, 96 N.Y.2d 111, 725 N.Y.S.2d 627, 749 N.E.2d 196).

Further discovery would not have assisted plaintiff in opposing Liberty Mutual's motion for summary judgment. The claim for reformation of the policy was properly dismissed since it was not substantiated by the requisite high order of proof (see New York First Ave. CVS v. Wellington Tower Assoc., 299 A.D.2d 205, 750 N.Y.S.2d 586, *294 lv. denied 100 N.Y.2d 505, 763 N.Y.S.2d 811, 795 N.E.2d 37).

7 A.D.3d 292, 776 N.Y.S.2d 257, 2004 N.Y. Slip Op. 03692

END OF DOCUMENT

40

Briefs and Other Related Documents

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

GRUMMAN ALLIED INDUSTRIES, INC. and Grumman Corporation, Plaintiff-Appellants,
v.
ROHR INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant-Appellee.

No. 89, Docket 84-7402.

Argued Oct. 3, 1984.
Decided Oct. 31, 1984.

Plaintiff, which purchased assets of defendant's subsidiary, brought an action for fraud and misrepresentation based on allegation that defendant failed to disclose material facts relating to the testing of a prototype bus. The United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York, Jacob Mishler, J., granted summary judgment in favor of defendant, and plaintiff appealed. The Court of Appeals, Irving R. Kaufman, Circuit Judge, held that action could not be maintained where plaintiff contractually disclaimed reliance upon the representations at issue and enjoyed absolute access to all relevant information necessary to confirm validity of those representations.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Contracts 267
95k267

Disclaimer provisions of agreement relating to design and testing of prototype bus sold by defendant's subsidiary were sufficiently specific and unambiguous and therefore buyer, which contractually disclaimed reliance upon the representations at issue, could not maintain action for fraud and misrepresentation on basis of allegation that defendant failed to disclose material facts relating to testing of the bus where the disclaimer was not procured by fraud.

[2] Fraud 23
184k23

Buyer's right to unrestricted access and its failure to inquire precluded, as a matter of law, its claim of reliance on defendant's alleged misrepresentations and therefore buyer could not maintain action for fraud and misrepresentation based on allegation that defendant failed to disclose material facts relating to the testing of a prototype bus.

*729 Francis J. O'Toole, P. David Richardson, Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Kampelman, Washington, D.C., Alexander R. Sussman, Howard B. Levi, New York City (on the brief), Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, New York City, for plaintiff-appellants.

Frederick R. Wirtz, J. Anthony Sinclitico, III, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, San Diego, Cal., Gregory A. Markel, John A. Redmon, New York City (of counsel), Davis, Markel, Dwyer & Edwards, New York City, for defendant-appellee.

730 Before KAUFMAN and WINTER, Circuit Judges and WYZANSKI, Senior District Judge. [FN]

FN* The Honorable Charles E. Wyzanski, Jr., Senior District Judge, District of Massachusetts, sitting by designation.

IRVING R. KAUFMAN, Circuit Judge:

On January 3, 1978, Grumman Allied Industries (Grumman), a subsidiary of the Grumman Corporation, acquired all the plants, books, records, and other assets of The Flxible Company (Flxible), a subsidiary of the Rohr Corporation. The price paid was $55 million, and among the assets purchased were two hand-built prototypes—Proto I and Proto II—of a new bus known as the Model 870, and the right to use the design for these prototypes. After the sale was consummated, and after Flxible had sold more than 2,600 Model 870 buses, structural defects arose, and these buses were removed from operation. The dispute before us concerns the propriety of granting Rohr's motion for summary judgment and the dismissal of Grumman's complaint alleging Rohr's misrepresentation and failure to disclose material facts relating to the testing of the Model 870. We affirm the lower court's holding because Grumman contractually disclaimed reliance upon the representations at issue and enjoyed absolute access to all relevant information necessary to confirm the validity of those representations. In so concluding, we merely give effect to what we perceive to be a clear manifestation of the parties' intentions concerning the allocation of risks in the purchase of Flxible's business. Furthermore, we believe that our result comports with modern precepts regarding freedom of contract and limited judicial intervention into private contractual relationships.

Because the intricate factual setting of this case is critical to its resolution, we set forth the facts in some detail.

I.
The Sale of Flxible

The roots of this dispute can be traced to May of 1976, at which time Rohr experienced serious financial difficulties and considered selling one of its subsidiaries, Flxible. To determine the feasibility of selling a bus manufacturing company, Rohr retained the investment banking firm of White Weld & Co., which prepared and circulated to a number of potential buyers a memorandum describing Flxible. Grumman received a copy of this memorandum, and in mid-1976 expressed an interest in acquiring Flxible.

The following fifteen months (May 1976 to September 1977) saw Grumman affirmatively pursue that interest. Armed with an arsenal of seasoned negotiators, sophisticated engineers, experienced executives and capable attorneys and accountants, Grumman sought to uncover all information relevant to its potential acquisition. To this end, Grumman representatives repeatedly toured the Flxible plants and, while there, were accorded unrestricted access to all personnel and records. During this period, Grumman representatives were shown a promotional film containing representations, some of which related to the testing of the Model 870. [FN1]

FN1. This film was sent to Grumman's Board of Directors in June 1977. Among the statements made in the sound track of the film were the following: Like all Flxible buses, the 870 has been thoroughly tested. It's been hit ... it's been dropped ... it's been slammed and subjected to exhaustive endurance and fatigue tests on Rohr's private test track at the Riverside International Raceway in California.... During this test, the 870 was driven over a series of torturing obstacles, almost 250 feet of 6-inch deep chockholes, and 75 feet of raised parallel strips spaced 2 inches apart in a signwave pattern. This rigorous testing of the 870 culminates a 5-year transit vehicle research and development program that involved all of the 870's predecessors, Hi Value, Metro and federally sponsored Transbus. These vehicles also were tested at Riverside ... the result--the tough and ready 870. Before the 870 was road-tested, it was subjected to a series of suspension tests carrying the equivalent of a full standee load. These tests simulated thousands of miles of street driving.

*731 On September 29, 1977, and for the following three months, Grumman and Rohr engaged in formal negotiations. In these negotiations, both sides were represented by experienced businessmen, engineers and attorneys. Both parties formulated, reviewed and modified the several draft agreements that were exchanged and discussed during this period. Indeed, Grumman appointed an acquisition team and a negotiating team to review engineering and financial matters and negotiate a contract that would protect Grumman's best interests. Grumman's acquisition team was comprised of fourteen persons, including three lawyers and at least four trained engineers. The "acquisition" personnel traveled to Flxible's facilities, interviewed its employees and reviewed its documents and products. Grumman's negotiating team was led by Robert Loar, a former Chairman of the Board of Grumman; Robert Landon, who was to become President of Grumman Flxible; Robert Somerville, an experienced engineer who was President of Grumman; and Thomas Genovese, General Counsel to Grumman.

Grumman's negotiating team and Rohr's negotiating team held four formal meetings between September 29, 1977 and December 1, 1977. On September 29, 1977, the rear A-frame of the Proto II cracked during endurance testing and all testing was suspended. Although Grumman had learned that the testing of the Model 870 design was not complete as of July 1977, and that a 10,000 mile endurance test was scheduled, neither the negotiating team nor the acquisition team requested the results of the testing.

After the negotiating teams had agreed on the general terms of sale, Genovese, Grumman's counsel, prepared the initial draft of what ultimately was to become the Final Agreement. Thereafter, revisions were made in a series of drafts, the drafts were subjected to extensive and intensive internal review by Grumman, and their content was discussed by Grumman and Rohr representatives at face-to-face meetings convened in various locations throughout the United States. Genovese acknowledged he had read all seven drafts of the contract, some of them more than once; Somerville, who executed the contract on behalf of Grumman, stated he had read "through all of its iterations" before signing the Agreement.

The Agreement

The fruition of these extensive negotiations and investigations was an 85 page Agreement that was signed on December 15, 1977, executed on December 23, 1977 and closed on January 3, 1978. In this Agreement, the parties set forth the representations they had made to each other and disclaimed representations as to specific matters. In particular, the Agreement provided that (i) Grumman has "made a lengthy, detailed, and independent investigation regarding ... [Rohr's] Model 870 bus design and specifications," [§ 4.3(b) [FN2]]; *732 (ii) "neither the Construction in Progress nor the Model 870 manufacturing techniques have yet been tested by [Rohr], and accordingly no representations and warranties concerning such have been or are hereby made, implied or given" [§ 4.3(b)]; (iii) "except for the warranties and representations set forth in this Agreement ... no other statement, warranty, representation or information, verbal or written, shall be legally binding upon any party or shall be the basis for reliance by the other party" [§ 4.3(b)]; (iv) Rohr shall continue to accord Grumman access to all Flexible facilities and records and "do everything reasonably necessary to enable [Grumman] to make a complete examination of the assets and properties of [Rohr] and the condition thereof" [§ 3.4(b) [FN3]]; (v) "neither party is relying upon any warranty or representation of the other not fully set forth herein" [§ 6.11 [FN4]]; (vi) Rohr's "sole representation and warranty regarding the know-how" (defined in § 1.1(i) to include "design") was that Rohr "has the right to use such" [§ 4.1(h) [FN5]]; and (vii) Rohr disclaims "any warranty, guarantee or liability expressed by law or otherwise, specifically including a disclaimer of the implied warranties of title, merchantability and fitness for intended use" [§ 2.1(b) [FN6]].

FN2. Section 4.3(b) provides in pertinent part: [T]he parties have agreed that except for the warranties and representations set forth in this Agreement and said Exhibits and Schedules, no other statement, warranty, representation or information, verbal or written, shall be legally binding upon any party or shall be the basis for reliance by the other party. Not by way of limitation of the foregoing, Seller specifically disclaims any representation or warranty regarding the marketability of its Model 870 bus or that it will be salable for any specified length of time (Buyer understanding that the position of the U.S. Department of Transportation is that a new group of specifications for its Transbus will be required for all buses let for bid after September 30, 1979, and Buyer further recognizing that, due to the unknown nature of future specifications of the Transbus, the Model 870 may or may not be adaptable to meet Transbus specifications), or regarding the level of profitability of the current model bus or predicting profitability for its Model 870 bus (including Bids therefore already made or Customer Contracts already made) or the current model bus, it being further understood that in the introduction of any new product, and in particular in the case of the utilization of the Model 870 new manufacturing techniques, that predictions of profitability and manufacturing and mass production efficiency are uncertain. Buyer recognizes that work on the Construction in Progress and on the Model 870 Tooling is behind schedule, that Seller's existing prototype Model 870 buses (which are being transferred hereunder) have been manufactured 'by hand' rather than by use of Model 870 Tooling, and that neither the Construction in Progress nor the Model 870 manufacturing techniques have yet been tested by Seller, and accordingly, no representations and warranties concerning such have been or are hereby made, implied or given. There are no other warranties or representations, oral or written, except as set forth in this Agreement or the Exhibits and Schedules hereto. Buyer is experienced in the bus manufacturing business generally and the regulations and requirements of the Department of Transportation and the Urban Mass Transit Authority ("UMTA"), and with the use of aluminum manufacturing specifically, and has made a lengthy, detailed and independent investigation regarding the Properties, Assets and Business generally regarding Seller's Model 870 bus design and specifications, specifically, including the use not only of Buyer's managerial, manufacturing and quality assurance representatives, but also numerous persons in the accounting, legal and tax professions.

FN3. Section 3.4(b) of the Agreement provides as follows: [Seller shall] continue to afford Buyer, its representatives, agents and employees, at all reasonable times and in a manner and under circumstances which will not cause unreasonable interference with the operation of Seller's business, access to, and facilities to use in connection with such access to, all of the Properties, Assets and Business and all of Seller's books, files, records, tax returns, summary written descriptions of Seller's insurance policies, and other corporate books and records relating thereto, for the purpose of audit inspection examination and copying thereof, and will do everything reasonably necessary to enable Buyer to make a complete examination of the assets and properties of Seller and the condition thereof and to obtain risk analysis information and other insurance underwriting data necessary to protect the Bus Business after the Closing date.

FN4. Section 6.11 provides as follows: This Agreement and the Schedule and Exhibits thereto, together with all documents concurrently executed or effective, constitute the entire understanding between the parties hereto, with respect to their subject matter, and supersede all prior negotiations and agreements. Neither party is relying upon any warranty or representation of the other not fully set forth herein. No party hereto shall be bound by any communications between them on the subject matter hereof unless such are in writing and bear a date contemporaneous with or subsequent to the date hereof and are executed in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement.

FN5. Section 4.1(h) provides in pertinent part: As the sole representation and warranty in this Agreement regarding the Know-how [defined in Exhibit A to include, among other things, 'all engineering, technical data ... relating to the Bus Business, including designs'], to the best of Seller's knowledge it has the right to use such, unrestricted by any person whose rights would materially and adversely affect the Properties, Assets and Business.

FN6. Section 2.1(b) provides as follows: Buyer accepts the Properties, Assets and Business as is, where is, whether at the Plants, at various job sites, or at vendors' suppliers', subcontractors', or consignees' places of business as of the Closing Date without warranty as to their condition, fitness, sufficiency for intended use, or compliance with applicable laws or regulations, including without limitation the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, as amended ("OSHA"), or similar state and local laws or regulations, except for any matter which as of the Closing Date was the subject of Pending Litigation shown at Schedule 11, and Seller also disclaims (except as specifically provided in this agreement) any warranty, guarantee or liability expressed by law or otherwise, specifically including a disclaimer of the implied warranties of title, merchantability and fitness for intended use, and Buyer assumes liability for all compliance by the Properties, Assets and Business with all state, federal and local laws, ordinances, regulations and orders, including but not limited to those related to environment, safety (specifically including OSHA), equal opportunity, labor matters, and land use, and Buyer agrees to hold Seller harmless from any Claims and Fees in connection therewith, whether or not any noncompliance or alleged noncompliance occurred before or after the Closing Date.

733 Post-Acquisition Activities

At the time the sale was closed on January 3, 1978, the endurance testing of the Model 870 remained incomplete, and records accurately disclosing the defects that surfaced during testing were turned over to Grumman. The endurance testing of Proto II was completed under the auspices of Grumman in April of 1978.

Upon completion of the testing, the Chief Engineer of Grumman, Edward Kravitz, apprised Somerville of the A-frame's failure during the endurance runs. Somerville did nothing. Indeed, between April 1978 and November 1980, he authorized the manufacture and sale of the Model 870 without any additional testing. After more than 2,600 Model 870 buses were produced and sold to transit agencies throughout the United States, a widely publicized A-frame [FN7] failure occurred in New York City in December 1980, necessitating the Model 870's removal from service.

FN7. The A-frame is a component of the rear suspension understructure.

The District Court Proceedings

On April 19, 1983--more than two years after the New York A-frame failure, Grumman brought suit against Rohr in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York, alleging Rohr had misrepresented and failed to disclose material facts relating to the testing of the Model 870's design. In support of these claims, Grumman cited representations made in the soundtrack of the marketing film and in the preliminary prospectus prepared by White Weld & Co., as well as oral statements made by certain flexible personnel. Grumman's complaint sought $250 million in compensatory damages, and $250 million in punitive damages.

On December 2, 1983, Rohr moved for summary judgment, asserting that Grumman contractually disclaimed reliance on Rohr's alleged misrepresentations, that Grumman enjoyed access to all relevant information relating to the Model 870's testing (vitiating its claim of justifiable reliance) and that Rohr's relationship with Grumman did not trigger a duty to disclose any facts not covered by the express terms of the agreement or already known by or available to Grumman. On April 4, 1984, Judge Mishler granted Rohr's summary judgment motion. The judge concluded that given undisputed facts establishing Grumman's pre-acquisition investigatory activities, Grumman's expertise and sophistication, the accessibility of Rohr's plants, personnel and records, the arm's-length nature of the negotiations, and the plain language of the Agreement, Grumman's reliance on Rohr's alleged misrepresentations was unjustifiable as a matter of law. In addition, Judge Mishler concluded that Rohr owed Grumman no duty of disclosure upon which Grumman could premise a claim of fraud by omission.

II.

Essential to understanding the propriety of the district court's grant of summary judgment is an appreciation of the limited function of the judiciary in interposing its will into the private contractual realm. Much has been written about the tension between classical and modern norms of contract interpretation. [FN8] Adherents of the *734 classical approach, animated by a belief that a contractual agreement manifests the intent of the parties in a completely integrated form, favor the construction of contracts by reference to the explicit textual language. Modern or "neo-classical" interpretation, on the other hand, seems to derive from the premise that a contextual inquiry is a necessary and proper prerequisite to an understanding of the parties' intent. Although this battle has been waged in legal journals and courts for decades, we need not enter the fray. Both schools of thought agree that a contextual inquiry is not necessary to determine the meaning of a term where that term is clear on the face of the contract. [FN9] By giving effect to explicit contractual terms, a court has a better chance to carry out the intentions of the parties. Particularly where the two sides are sophisticated, their allocation of risk and potential benefit is properly treated as supreme to any conflicting understanding we may have. We believe there exists a point at which clear contractual language must be read to control a dispute. [FN10] And we deem the language of this Agreement to be suitably unambiguous.

FN8. See Macneil, Contracts: Adjustment of Long-Term Economic Relations Under Classical, Neoclassical, and Relational Contract Law, 72 Nw.U.L.Rev. 854 (1978); Farnsworth, "Meaning" in the Law of Contracts, 76 Yale L.J. 939, 946-47 (1967).

FN9. Although neoclassical partisans would suggest that such an inquiry is necessary even to settle the question whether the terms are clear in the first instance, we do not agree.

FN10. We note that the judiciary's function in interpreting contracts differs markedly from its role in construing statutes. Unlike contracts, statutes are formulated by collective political bodies, not individual parties. Moreover, they are generally crafted broadly to encompass as many variegated factual situations as possible. Consequently, statutory provisions are often detached from the facts of a particular case and provide courts with minimal assistance in resolving the dispute. Judicial explication is not only proper in such circumstances, it is mandated.

Mindful of these precepts, we turn to Grumman's contention that its misrepresentation claim is not barred despite its specific disclaimers of reliance on Rohr's representations concerning the testing of the Model 870. We believe such an assertion ignores basic contractual principles, as well as the controlling decisional law.

In Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597 (1959), the New York Court of Appeals [FN11] held that where a party specifically disclaims reliance upon a representation in a contract, that party cannot, in a subsequent action for fraud, assert it was fraudulently induced to enter into the contract by the very representation it has disclaimed. In Danann, a buyer of a lease to a building claimed he had been fraudulently induced to make the purchase by false oral representations as to the "operating expenses of the building and as to the profits to be derived from the investment." 5 N.Y.2d at 319, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 601, 157 N.E.2d at 598. In their contract, however, the parties agreed as follows:

FN11. Section 6.5 of the Agreement provides that it "shall be construed and interpreted according to the law of the State of New York."

"The Purchaser has examined the premises agreed to be sold and is familiar with the physical condition thereof. The Seller has not made and does not make any representations as to the physical condition, rents, leases, expenses, operation or any other matter or thing affecting or related to the aforesaid premises, except as herein specifically set forth, and the Purchaser hereby expressly acknowledges that no such representations have been made, and the Purchaser further acknowledges that it has inspected the premises and agrees to take the premises "as is".... It is understood and agreed that all understandings and agreements heretofore had between the parties hereto are merged in this contract, which alone fully and completely expresses their agreement, and that the same is entered into after full investigation, neither party relying upon any statement or representation, not embodied in this contract, made by the other. The Purchaser has inspected the buildings standing on said premises and is thoroughly acquainted with their condition." (Emphasis supplied by Court.)

*735 5 N.Y.2d at 320, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 601, 157 N.E.2d at 598. The seller of the lease moved to dismiss the purchaser's action for fraudulent misrepresentation based on the terms of the Agreement. The Court of Appeals granted the motion and dismissed the buyer's complaint, noting the issue was "whether the plaintiff [buyer] can possibly establish ... reliance upon the misrepresentations." 5 N.Y.2d at 319, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 601, 157 N.E.2d at 598. By reference to the contractual provisions, the Court concluded that:

[P]laintiff has in the plainest language announced and stipulated that it is not relying on any representations as to the very matter as to which it now claims it was defrauded. Such a specific disclaimer destroys the allegations in plaintiff's complaint that the agreement was executed in reliance upon these contrary oral representations"

Id. at 320-21, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 602, 157 N.E.2d at 599. Pointedly, the Court announced: "If the plaintiff has made a bad bargain he cannot avoid it in this manner." Id. at 323, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 604, 157 N.E.2d at 600. Danann therefore stands for the principle that where the parties to an agreement have expressly allocated risks, the judiciary shall not intrude into their contractual relationship. [FN12] Animated by principles of traditional contract interpretation, the rule of Danann has exhibited great resilience in the face of efforts to delimit its expanse. The instant dispute concerns Grumman's multi-faceted attempt to circumvent the Danann doctrine. As we will explain, however, its efforts at semantical legerdemain are unavailing.

FN12. The rule of Danann has been cited with approval by both Williston and Corbin. See 5 S. Williston, A Treatise on The Law of Contracts § 811 at 893 (3d ed. 1961); 6 Id. § 873 at 337; 13 Id. § 1540 at 62-63 ("where the written agreement stated that no representations not contained in the contract had been made and that the party had conducted his own investigation, he was precluded from alleging and proving the falsity of certain representations included therein"); 3 A. Corbin, Contracts § 578 at 404 (2d ed. 1960).

A.

[1] Grumman asserts that the relevant disclaimer provisions in the Agreement lack the clarity and specificity necessary to trigger the rule of Danann. To support this claim, Grumman cites the following two representations: "the Model 870 had been thoroughly tested for 10,000 miles on an endurance test track at Riverside, California" and "the technological risks associated with the Model 870 were minimal." The latter representation addresses the efficacy of the Model 870's design, and any reliance on the design was explicitly disclaimed in Sections 1.1(i), 2.1(b) and 4.3(b) of the Agreement. Grumman's claim of reliance on the former representation is somewhat more problematic, insofar as reliance on the Model 870's testing was not expressly disclaimed by Grumman in the Agreement. Upon closer examination, however, we believe it is clear that the testing representation could have been material to Grumman only as a means of validating the design of the bus. Indeed, Grumman's President noted that the purpose of "testing is to find out the efficacy of your design in order to have some--a feeling of security that the design will indeed meet the requirements."

For Grumman's argument to be persuasive, then, Danann must be read to require the existence of a precise identity between the misrepresentation and the particular disclaimer. Neither Danann nor its progeny supports such a reading, however. Indeed, quite the opposite conclusion is gleaned from the case law. The Danann rule operates where the substance of the disclaimer provisions tracks the substance of the alleged misrepresentations, notwithstanding semantical discrepancies. That these principles continue to retain their vibrancy was made clear last year in Galvatron Industries Corp. v. Greenberg, 96 A.D.2d 881, 466 N.Y.S.2d 35 (2d Dept.1983). There, the court held that Danann precludes reliance where a party acknowledged " 'full familiarity with the financial condition ... of the Corporation' and disclaimed 'reliance on any representations *736 ... made by any other party hereto.' " Id. A similar conclusion was reached in Barnes v. Gould, 83 A.D.2d 900, 442 N.Y.S.2d 150 (2d Dept.1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 943, 449 N.Y.S.2d 192, 434 N.E.2d 261 (1982), where the court found a disclaimer of reliance upon representations as to the "physical condition" of a business premises to be sufficiently specific to bar plaintiff's action for fraud regarding the repair of a boiler. Mindful of the principles enunciated in the cases cited above, we believe, as a matter of law, that the disclaimer provisions in the Agreement relating to design and testing are sufficiently specific and unambiguous to invoke the Danann rule.

B.

In addition, Grumman asserts that Danann is inapposite in light of Section 2.3(d) of the Agreement, which reserves Grumman's right to seek rescission of the contract on the basis of a knowing and intentional "false representation by the Seller which was material to the determination of Buyer to consummate the transaction herein." Upon closer examination, Grumman's argument can be bifurcated. Grumman claims that the Agreement's disclaimer language (set forth in Sections 2.1(b), 4.3(b) and 6.11), when viewed in conjunction with Section 2.3(d), becomes ambiguous and lacks the requisite clarity to trigger the Danann rule. Furthermore, Grumman argues that Section 2.3(d) removes this case entirely from the ambit of the Danann doctrine because Grumman has not disclaimed all reliance on Rohr's representations, but rather has expressly reserved the right to bring an action for fraudulent misrepresentation.

The fallacy of both arguments is revealed by reference to fundamental principals of contract interpretation. Grumman's construction of Section 2.3(d) is expressly at odds with the unambiguous terms of Sections 2.1(b) and 4.3(b), as well as Section 6.11, which provides that "neither party is relying upon warranties or representations of the other not fully set forth herein." Moreover, Section 2.3(d) refers to false representations within the Agreement. Nowhere in Section 4.1, which defines "Representations of the Seller," can the material representations alleged by Grumman be found. Grumman's interpretation of Section 2.3(d) would nullify not only the effect of the disclaimer provisions, but also vitiate the clear language of Section 6.11. The principle that "contracts must be viewed so that its terms may have effect rather than be destroyed" militates against such a construction. See Zdanok v. Glidden Co., 288 F.2d 99, 104 (2d Cir.1961), aff'd, 370 U.S. 530, 82 S.Ct. 1459, 8 L.Ed.2d 671 (1962); Corhill Corp. v. S.D. Plants, Inc., 9 N.Y.2d 595, 598-99, 217 N.Y.S.2d 1, 3, 176 N.E.2d 37, 38 (1961); Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 203 comment b (1981). In effect, Grumman would have us ignore this most venerable of contract norms. This we are not prepared to do.

C.

Furthermore, Grumman attempts to carve out a limited exception to the Danann rule in instances where the disclaimer provisions were induced by fraud. In framing this argument, Grumman claims that Rohr officials explicitly assured the members of the Grumman negotiating team that the disclaimer language of Section 4.3(b) did not encompass the design and testing of the Model 870. Grumman alleges that its acceptance of this provision was secured only by Rohr's fraudulent assurance. We believe such an argument must fail as a matter of law.

The genesis of the "procured by fraud" exception may be found in the following passage from Danann:

"The complaint here contains no allegations that the contract was not read by the purchaser. We can fairly conclude that plaintiff's officers read and understood the contract, and that they were aware of the provision by which they aver that plaintiff did not rely on such extra-contractual representations. It is not alleged that this provision was not understood, or that the provision itself *737 was procured by fraud. It would be unrealistic to ascribe to plaintiff's officers such incompetence that they did not understand what they read and signed. Cf. Ernst Iron Works v. Duralith Corp., 270 N.Y. 165, 171, 200 N.E. 683, 685 ... [T]he larger implication of the Ernst case is that, where a person has read and understood the disclaimer of representation clause, he is bound by it. The court rejected, as a matter of law, the allegation of plaintiffs' 'that they relied upon an oral statement made to them in direct contradiction of this provision of the contract.' "

5 N.Y.2d at 321-22, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 602, 157 N.E.2d at 599. In light of the foregoing, we construe the "procured by fraud" language to refer only to a situation where the party against which the disclaimer is asserted is entirely unaware of the existence of the disclaimer--for example, where the disclaimer is inserted surreptitiously into the final draft of the contract. Nothing in the cases cited by Grumman suggests a contrary reading. See Cohen v. Tenney Corp., 318 F.Supp. 280 (S.D.N.Y.1970); Goostree v. P. Lorillard Co., 26 Misc.2d 109, 202 N.Y.S.2d 456 (N.Y.Cnty.1960). Grumman has offered no evidence that it was unaware of the disclaimer's existence. Accordingly, the "procured by fraud" exception is inapplicable as a matter of law, and we are impelled to the conclusion that this case is controlled squarely by Danann.

III.

[2] The second pillar of Grumman's argument is that the district court erred in holding that Grumman could not claim reliance on Rohr's representations concerning the testing and design of the Model 870. We believe Grumman's claim of justifiable reliance was properly rejected by the district court in light of undisputed evidence demonstrating that Grumman enjoyed unfettered access to Flxible's plants, personnel and documents; and that it possessed the legal, technical and business expertise necessary to make effective use of that access.

The Supreme Court has stated:

When the means of knowledge are open and at hand, or furnished to the purchaser or his agent, and no effort is made to prevent the party from using them, and especially where the purchaser undertakes examination for himself, he will not be heard to say that he has been deceived to his injury by the misrepresentations of the vendor.

See Shappirio v. Goldberg, 192 U.S. 232, 241-42, 24 S.Ct. 259, 261, 48 L.Ed. 419 (1904). [FN13] The principle that access bars claims of reliance on misrepresentations has been expressly recognized by this Court, see Aaron Ferer & Sons, Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 731 F.2d 112, 123 (2d Cir.1984); Frigitemp Corp. v. Financial Dynamics Fund, Inc., 524 F.2d 275, 282 (2d Cir.1975), and New York State courts, see Most v. Monti, 91 A.D.2d 606, 456 N.Y.S.2d 427, 428 (2d Dept.1983); Danann, supra, 5 N.Y.2d at 322, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 603, 157 N.E.2d at 599; Marine Midland Bank v. Palm Beach Moorings, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 927, 928, 403 N.Y.S.2d 15, 17 (1st Dept.1978).

FN13. The New York Court of Appeals reiterated this principle in Danann: [I]f the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth, or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentation. 5 N.Y.2d at 322, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 603, 157 N.E.2d at 600.

Where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance. In Palm Beach Moorings, for example, the court, in granting a motion for summary judgment, rejected a claim of justifiable reliance, noting that to rule otherwise would require a finding that "an experienced businessman, assuming *738 a controlling interest in a corporation and incurring heavy financial obligations, did so on the basis of verbal assurances given to him by the seller and a bank official." See Palm Beach Moorings, supra, 403 N.Y.S.2d at 17. This the court was not prepared to do, particularly given its finding of undisputed access to the corporate records necessary to confirm or disprove the substance of the verbal assurances. See also Most v. Monti, supra, (summary judgment proper where an experienced businessman claimed he justifiably relied on a mere verbal assurance, prompting him to incur a substantial financial obligation).

Grumman--the allegedly defrauded plaintiff--is a Fortune 500 company, renowned worldwide for its engineering expertise. The transaction at issue is a $55 million corporate acquisition. At all stages, Grumman was represented by a sophisticated group of counsel, executives and engineers. Grumman enjoyed unrestricted access to all the facilities, personnel and records of Rohr, and despite its knowledge that the Model 870 was undergoing endurance testing in late 1977, Grumman neither inquired into the results of that testing, nor asked to scrutinize testing reports. In light of the unambiguous case law and the undisputed facts, we agree with Judge Mishler that Grumman did not rely solely upon Rohr's representations as to the design and testing of the Model 870. If it did, such reliance was plainly unjustifiable given its extensive inquiries and investigations.

To preserve its claim of justifiable reliance, Grumman contends that its duty to investigate hinges on whether the information required to confirm or disprove the validity of the design and testing representations was peculiarly within Rohr's knowledge. In support of this assertion, Grumman cites Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68 (2d Cir.1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1123, 101 S.Ct. 938, 67 L.Ed.2d 109 (1981) and Tahini Investments, Ltd. v. Bobrowsky, 99 A.D.2d 489, 470 N.Y.S.2d 431 (2d Dept.1984). We find these cases, however, to be inapposite. In Mallis, a bank that was holding securities as collateral did not inform the purchaser of these securities—even upon direct inquiry—of restrictions on their transfer. See Mallis, supra, 615 F.2d at 73. In Tahini, the purchaser of a 93-acre horse farm failed to discover—despite an inspection of the farm—ten drums of buried chemicals. 99 A.D.2d at 490, 470 N.Y.S.2d at 432. Unlike the case before us, [FN14] in Mallis and Tahini, the allegedly undisclosed information was only known by—and indeed only available to—the defendants, and incapable of discovery by the plaintiff, no matter how diligent its investigation.

FN14. The district court expressly found that "Grumman's experienced lawyers, engineers and negotiators had full and fair opportunity to investigate [and discover] the matters concerning the design of the understructure of the Model 870, the testing methods and the defects revealed through testing."

Accordingly, Grumman's right to unrestricted access and its failure to inquire preclude, as a matter of law, its claim of reliance on Rohr's alleged misrepresentations.

IV.

The final prong of Grumman's argument is that the district court erred in holding that Rohr had no duty to disclose to Grumman material facts regarding the testing of the Model 870. We find this argument to be unavailing for all the reasons proffered in Sections II and III of our opinion, because the alleged material omissions are nothing more than affirmative misrepresentations about the testing and design of the Model 870. As such, they are subject to the Agreement's plain disclaimers as well as Grumman's unrestricted access and concomitant duty to investigate.

Moreover, this Court has expressly held that, under New York law, a duty to disclose material facts is triggered: "first, *739 where the parties enjoy a fiduciary relationship ... and second, where one party possesses superior knowledge, not readily available to the other, and knows that the other is acting on the basis of mistaken knowledge." Aaron Ferer & Sons, Ltd., supra, 731 F.2d at 123; see also Frigitemp Corp. v. Financial Dynamics Fund, supra, 524 F.2d at 283. We hold that neither condition is present in this action. Grumman's attempt to transmute its ordinary arms-length business relationship with Rohr into a fiduciary relationship is unpersuasive. The fact that Rohr has sold aircraft components to a subsidiary of Grumman in no way alters our conclusion. Grumman has completely failed to offer any evidence indicating that the parties placed sufficient trust and confidence in each other to trigger a duty of disclosure. See Aaron Ferer & Sons, Ltd., supra, 731 F.2d at 122 (close debtor-creditor relationship does not establish a fiduciary duty); Frigitemp Corp., supra, 524 F.2d at 279. Indeed, throughout the course of this transaction, Grumman's representatives confirmed that they were relying upon the advice and counsel of their own engineers, lawyers, and executives to protect Grumman's best interests--not upon a special relationship with Rohr.

As this Court concluded in Aaron Ferer & Sons, Ltd., supra, 731 F.2d at 123, a party's knowledge is not superior where the relevant information "was either a matter of public record, was not pursued by plaintiffs, or was disclosed at least in part" In light of the undisputed evidence establishing Grumman's unrestricted access to Flxible's facilities, personnel and records, as well as Grumman's arsenal of legal and technical talent, we find the claim that Rohr possessed superior knowledge (that was not readily available to Grumman) to be without merit.

V.

It is against this legal backdrop that we turn to the precise issue presented on appeal--the propriety of the district court's grant of summary judgment. On a motion for summary judgment, we are mindful of the maxim "the court cannot try issues of fact; it can only determine whether there are issues to be tried." Heyman v. Commerce and Industry Ins. Co., 524 F.2d 1317, 1319-20 (2d Cir.1975). Moreover, the court must resolve all ambiguities and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the party against whom summary judgment is sought, see id. at 1320, with the burden on the moving party to demonstrate the absence of any material issue genuinely in dispute, see Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 1608, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970). Summary judgment is appropriate where the factual predicates of each legal question are undisputed.

The issue whether, under the rule of Danann, the specific disclaimers in the Agreement precluded Grumman from asserting it had been defrauded by Rohr is a legal question that can be resolved by reference to settled principles of contract interpretation. See Tokio Marine & Fire Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 617 F.2d 936, 940 (2d Cir.1980). Once Rohr set forth facts sufficient, pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c), [FN15] to make a prima facie showing that the rule of Danann was applicable, Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e) [FN16] required Grumman *740 to offer specific facts demonstrating the disclaimers were procured by fraud. We agree with the district court that "[n]o evidence of fraud in the inducement was offered by Grumman."

FN15. Rule 56(c) states, in pertinent part: The judgment sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law.

FN16. Rule 56(e) states, in pertinent part: When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this rule, an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading, but his response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If he does not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered against him.

By proffering evidence demonstrating that Grumman enjoyed access to Flxible's facilities, personnel and documents and proof that Grumman possessed the legal, technical and business expertise necessary to make effective use of that access, Rohr met its Rule 56(c) burden of establishing no genuine issues of material fact. The burden then shifted to Grumman to set forth specific facts raising triable issues. We agree with Judge Mishler that Grumman's conclusory statement that "Rohr controlled the flow of information between [itself] and Grumman," absent any factual support, was insufficient to satisfy this burden.

Our conclusion that the district court properly granted summary judgment is bolstered by Grumman's extensive and intensive discovery, spanning a number of years and yielding tens of thousands of pages of corporate documents. As such, the factual development necessary to the principled resolution of this complex dispute was not terminated prematurely. We are confident that summary judgment was appropriately granted in this case.

Accordingly, the judgment of the district court is affirmed.

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to Top)

GRUMMAN ALLIED INDUSTRIES, INC. and Grumman Corporation, Plaintiff-Appellants, v. ROHR INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant-Appellee., 1984 WL 566307 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 June 11, 1984), Brief of Plaintiff-Appellants Grumman Allied Industries, Inc. and Grumman Corporation

GRUMMAN ALLIED INDUSTRIES, INC. and Grumman Corporation, Plaintiff-Appellants, v. ROHR INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant-Appellee., 1984 WL 566308 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 July 9, 1984), Brief of Defendant-Appellee Rohr Industries, Inc.

GRUMMAN ALLIED INDUSTRIES, INC. and Grumman Corporation, Plaintiff-Appellants, v. ROHR INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant-Appellee., 1984 WL 566309 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 July 23, 1984), Reply Brief of Plaintiff-Appellants Grumman Allied Industries, Inc. and Grumman Corporation

GRUMMAN ALLIED INDUSTRIES, INC. and Grumman Corporation, Plaintiff-Appellants, v. ROHR INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant-Appellee., 1984 WL 566310 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 November 15, 1984), Plaintiff-Appellants' Petition for Rehearing and Suggestion for Rehearing in Banc

748 F.2d 729

END OF DOCUMENT

41

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

HARSCO CORPORATION, Plaintiff-
Appellant,

v.

Rene SEGUI, Defendant,
MHC Holding Corp.; Dyson-Kissner-Moran
Corp.; DKM-MLP Limited Partnership and Adler & Shaykin Fund II, L.P., Defendants-
Appellees.

No. 1073, Docket 95-7929.

Argued March 25, 1996.
Decided Aug. 1, 1996.

Buyer of company sued various former officers and owners of the purchased company, alleging securities fraud, common-law fraud, breach of contract, and other claims. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, Lawrence M. McKenna, J., dismissed complaint for failure to state a claim, and buyer appealed. The Court of Appeals, Parker, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) disclaimer in purchase agreement precluded federal securities claims; (2) disclaimer precluded state law fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims; (3) district court should have declined jurisdiction over state law claims for breach of contract and indemnification; and (4) district court acted within its discretion in dismissing claims for breach of fiduciary duty.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts 763.1
170Bk763.1

[1] Federal Courts 794
170Bk794

On appeal from dismissal for failure to state a claim, Court of Appeals reviews only adequacy of complaint, assuming truth of plaintiff's factual allegations. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Courts 776
170Bk776

Dismissal of complaint for failure to state a claim is reviewed de novo. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Federal Civil Procedure 1773
170Ak1773

Dismissal for failure to state a claim is only proper when it appears beyond doubt that there are no set of facts in support of plaintiff's claim which would entitle plaintiff to relief. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[4] Federal Courts 794
170Bk794

In reviewing dismissal of complaint for failure to state a claim, complaint is to be construed in light most favorable to plaintiff. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[5] Federal Courts 794
170Bk794

In reviewing dismissal of complaint for failure to state a claim, appellate court must accept as true all factual allegations in complaint. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[6] Securities Regulation 60.48(1)
349Bk60.48(1)

Generally, reasonable reliance must be proved as element of securities fraud claim. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.C.S.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[7] Fraud 20
184k20

Reasonable reliance must be proved under New York law to recover for fraud and negligent misrepresentation.

[8] Securities Regulation 35.24
349Bk35.24

Stipulation that waives compliance with duty under Securities Exchange Act is void, whether voluntary or not. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 29(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78cc(a).

[9] Securities Regulation 35.24
349Bk35.24

Provision of agreement for purchase of company, whereby sellers disclaimed representations that were not in the agreement, and merger clause of agreement precluded buyer from establishing reasonable reliance required for securities fraud claim based on representations outside that contract, where parties were sophisticated business entities negotiating at arm's length, and buyer further protected itself by negotiating for two weeks of confirmatory due diligence; contract clearly delineated what representations had been made. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 29(a), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78cc(a).

[10] Fraud 20
184k20

Under New York law, where party specifically disclaims reliance upon particular representation in contract, that party cannot, in subsequent action for common-law fraud, claim it was fraudulently induced to enter into the contract by the very representation it has disclaimed reliance upon.

[11] Fraud 36
184k36

Alleged representations by seller of company that "plants in Italy, Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Austria would experience a financial turnaround in 1993," that company "would place new emphasis on developing its core steel business" and "phase out" other businesses, that company "expected growth in new areas of the world," and that plants in China and Slovakia "would be fully operational in 1993 with no significant start up problems" were "projections of ... future business and operations" within meaning of provision of purchase agreement disclaiming representations not made in the agreement, precluding claims under New York law of fraud and negligent misrepresentation.

[12] Fraud 13(2)
184k13(2)

Under New York law, fraud liability may attach when person states that something was to be done when he knows all the time it was not to be done and that his representations were false.

[13] Fraud 20
184k20

Under New York law, claim that seller of company knew that Russian Plant was not going to get built and represented otherwise was barred by provision of purchase agreement whereby seller disclaimed representations that were not in the agreement; disclaimer put buyer on sufficient notice that representations regarding the Russian Plant could not reasonably be relied on.

[14] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, claim that sellers of company failed to disclose their knowledge of misconduct by president of company's French subsidiary was barred by provision of purchase agreement whereby seller disclaimed representations that were not in the agreement.

[15] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, claim that sellers of company misrepresented that company owned intellectual property rights in certain technology was barred by provision of purchase agreement whereby seller disclaimed representations that were not in the agreement.

[16] Fraud 36
184k36

Under New York law, claim that sellers of company misrepresented that company would acquire Belgium plant by certain date was barred by provision of purchase agreement whereby seller disclaimed representations that were not in the agreement.

[17] Federal Civil Procedure 636
170Ak636

Complaint did not explain why representation that company's internal auditor was unavailable was fraudulent, as required to plead such claim with requisite particularity. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[18] Contracts 332(2)
95k332(2)

To state claim for breach of contract under New York law, complaint need only allege existence of agreement, adequate performance of contract by plaintiff, breach of contract by defendant, and damages.

[19] Federal Courts 18
170Bk18

Having properly dismissed federal securities laws claims prior to any responsive pleadings, district court should have declined jurisdiction over state law claims for breach of contract and indemnification.

[20] Federal Courts 18
170Bk18

District court acted well within its discretion when, after dismissing federal claims, it also chose to dismiss claims for breach of fiduciary duty.

339 James J. Hagan, New York City (Joseph M. McLaughlin, Nancy L. Swift, Simpson Thacher & Bartlett, New York City, of counsel), for Plaintiff-Appellant.

Alvin B. Davis, Miami, FL (Jeffrey L. Kravetz, Steel Hector & Davis, Miami, FL, of counsel), for Defendants-Appellees MHC Holding Corp., Dyson-Kissner-Moran Corp. and DKM-MLP Limited Partnership.

Yosef J. Riemer, New York City (Aitken Thompson, Kirkland & Ellis, New York City, Darrell K. Fennell, Philip M. Chiappone, Fennell & Chiappone LLP, New York City, of counsel), for Defendant-Appellee Adler & Shaykin Fund II, L.P.

Before: NEWMAN, Chief Judge,
FEINBERG and PARKER, Circuit Judges.

PARKER, Circuit Judge.

The central issue in this case is whether parties who negotiate at arm's length for the sale and purchase of a company can define the transaction in a writing so as to preclude a claim of fraud based on representations not made, and explicitly disclaimed, in that writing. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York (Lawrence M. McKenna, Judge) answered this question affirmatively in dismissing plaintiff's complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. We agree and affirm the dismissal of plaintiff's fraud claims. We also agree that plaintiff's other causes of action should be dismissed.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff, the Harsco Corporation ("Harsco"), a Delaware corporation, sued various officers and shareholders of MultiServ, a Netherlands corporation which Harsco purchased. All of Harsco's claims arise out of its purchase of MultiServ.

Harsco's complaint contained eight counts. Count I charged all defendants with federal securities fraud under Rule 10b-5, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5. Count II charged some defendants with breach of the written Purchase Agreement ("Agreement"). Count III sought indemnification from certain defendants stemming from the breach of contract claimed in count II. Count IV charged all defendants with common law fraud. Count V charged all defendants with common law negligent misrepresentation. Count VI charged two defendants with breach of fiduciary duty. And counts VII and VIII charged certain defendants under the theory of respondeat superior for the acts of other defendants.

The district court explained its dismissal of all counts in a Memorandum and Order dated April 4, 1995. The court dismissed the two fraud claims (counts I and IV) and the claim for negligent misrepresentation (count V), concluding from the complaint that Harsco would be unable to prove reasonable reliance--a required element of each claim. The court dismissed the breach of contract claim (count II), holding that the complaint failed to allege a breach of any specific representation. The indemnification claim (count III) was dismissed because it was contingent on the breach of contract claim. The court dismissed the breach of fiduciary duty claim (count VI), declining to hear a case over which the court had only supplemental jurisdiction when all federal claims had already been dismissed. Lastly the court dismissed the respondeat superior claims (counts VII and VIII) because the dismissal of their underlying theories of liability eliminated the prospect of vicarious liability.

The district court's substantive analysis of the various common law claims assumed that New York law applies. That assumption is not contested by the parties.

*340 As discussed in greater detail below, the district court offered Harsco the opportunity to replead its theories of fraud and breach of contract in so far as those claims related to specific statements in the Agreement. Harsco declined the invitation to amend its complaint. Instead Harsco sought and received an order dismissing its case in order to take this appeal.

[1] Because this is an appeal from a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, we review only the adequacy of the complaint, assuming the truth of plaintiff's factual allegations. Allen v. WestPoint-Pepperell, Inc., 945 F.2d 40, 44 (2d Cir.1991). Accordingly, the following factual summary is culled entirely from the complaint.

Harsco "engaged in domestic and international manufacturing and marketing of diverse goods and industrial services, principally for steel, industrial, commercial construction and infrastructure." ¶ 7. In early 1993, Harsco was interested in expanding its business internationally. ¶ 15. MultiServ's business, which was also connected to the steel industry, fit with Harsco's interest in international expansion. ¶ 15.

In April 1993, representatives of Harsco and MultiServ met to discuss the possibility of the purchase of MultiServ by Harsco. ¶ 17. One issue discussed during this meeting was a projection of future earnings contained in an offering memorandum, prepared by Morgan Stanley & Co., an investment banking firm. ¶ 17. At this meeting MultiServ's representatives stated that these projections reflected conservative economic assumptions and accounted for the prospects of "questionable plants." ¶ 17. The offering memorandum prompted Harsco to continue negotiations. ¶ 18. As part of the negotiating process, Harsco representatives were given access to MultiServ's chief financial officer during three days in May 1993. During this period of "exploratory due diligence," Harsco made numerous inquiries into the affairs of MultiServ. However, some of the documents which Harsco asked to see were not provided by MultiServ. ¶¶ 17-18.

On July 8, 1993, Harsco and MultiServ entered into the written "Agreement." ¶ 20. Harsco attached the Agreement to the complaint. Thus the Agreement became part of the complaint pursuant to Rule 10(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Agreement is a sixty-plus page, single-spaced document, consisting of seven "articles" which in turn consist of numerous subsections, a definitions Section, and other schedules and attachments.

The Agreement's second article details the "Representations and Warranties" of the parties involved in the transaction. The only portion of the Agreement's second article which the complaint cites is "Section 2.04." ¶¶ 33, 34, 102, 107, 108. Section 2.04 is fourteen pages, single spaced, and consists of seventeen subsections, which in turn consist of numerous sub-paragraphs. Section 2.04 constitutes the defendants' "Representations and Warranties." A partial list of the numerous topics relating to the representations contained in Section 2.04 includes the capitalization of MultiServ, MultiServ's financial statements, MultiServ's liabilities, the ownership and condition of MultiServ's assets, MultiServ's litigation exposure, taxes, contracts, and environmental matters. Significantly, Harsco's complaint nowhere draws the court's or the defendants' attention to any specific portion or passage of Section 2.04.

Pursuant to the Agreement, Harsco agreed to buy all of MultiServ's outstanding stock and some of MultiServ's subordinated debt. The Agreement made the purchase of MultiServ contingent on fourteen days of "confirmatory due diligence." ¶ 22. The fourteen days of confirmatory due diligence occurred from July 8 to July 23, 1993. Section 1.04 of the agreement explained the terms of the confirmatory due diligence. ¶ 26. Section 1.04, which consists of only two paragraphs, states that purchaser and its accountants, consultants, and advisers shall be permitted ... to review the premises, facilities, books and records and Contracts of [MultiServ], and to conduct interviews with Senior MultiServ Officers ... regarding the business, *341 operations, financial condition and results of operations of [MultiServ], for the purpose of confirming the accuracy of the representations and warranties of the [sellers] contained in Article II hereof.

Section 1.04 also provided that Harsco's advisor, Coopers & Lybrand, would be allowed to review materials which MultiServ deemed confidential, such as pricing information, in order to determine MultiServ's overall profitability. However, Section 1.04 made clear that "Coopers & Lybrand shall not disclose any such [confidential] information to [Harsco]."

If Harsco learned that any of the seller's representations were not true during the fourteen days of confirmatory due diligence, then Harsco could terminate the deal. ¶ 25. Section 1.06(a) of the Purchase Agreement stated that if Harsco "determined, as a result of its Confirmatory Due Diligence, that the representations and warranties of the [Sellers] set forth in Article II hereof shall not have been, or shall not be, true and correct in all material respects ... then [Harsco] shall have the right to terminate" the sale during the fourteen days of confirmatory due diligence. Harsco did not terminate the deal, and the purchase closed on August 31, 1993. ¶ 28. The purchase required cash payments totalling $216 million and the acquisition of roughly $164 million in MultiServ debt. ¶ 29.

In a separate document, also dated July 8, Adrian Bowden, the CEO of MultiServ wrote a letter to Harsco stating that he was unaware of any significant problems facing MultiServ. [FN1] ¶ 24.

FN1. This letter, though cited to and described in the complaint, was not attached to the complaint. We may nonetheless review the letter in its entirety. San Leandro Emergency Medical Group Profit Sharing Plan v. Philip Morris Cos., Inc., 75 F.3d 801, 808-09 (2d Cir.1996). Doing so reveals that this letter concluded with a postscript which alerted the reader that the letter was to be of no legal effect.

Harsco claims generally that "the representations and warranties made in Section 2.04 of the Agreement, and other representations made by [the sellers] contained misrepresentations and omissions of material facts." ¶ 34. Harsco alleges that because the purchase price was $380 million less the amount of certain debt, including project finance debt, the seller had a motive to misrepresent the extent to which new projects were completed. ¶¶ 41-43. Against the background of this general allegation, Harsco tried to plead various discrete factual strains of fraud relating to, among other things, MultiServ's conduct during due diligence, the status of plant construction, the financial prospects for MultiServ operations, and the status of intellectual property rights. These factual theories of fraud are described in greater detail in part II.B.3. of this opinion.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Standard of Review

[2] We review Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals de novo.

[3][4][5] Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is only proper when it appears beyond doubt that there are no set of facts in support of plaintiff's claim which would entitle plaintiff to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 102, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957). "A complaint should not be dismissed simply because a plaintiff is unlikely to succeed on the merits." Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 94 S.Ct. 1683, 1686, 40 L.Ed.2d 90 (1974). In reviewing the dismissal of a complaint for 12(b)(6) insufficiency, the complaint is to be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. 5A Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1357 (1990). Furthermore, the appellate court "must accept as true all the factual allegations in the complaint." Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 164, 113 S.Ct. 1160, 1161, 122 L.Ed.2d 517 (1993).

B. Reasonableness of Reliance

As mentioned above, Count I of Harsco's complaint charged all defendants with violating *342 Sections 10(b) [FN2] and 20(a) [FN3] of the Securities Exchange Act, and with violating Rule 10b-5 [FN4] promulgated pursuant to § 10(b). Counts IV and V charged all defendants with common law fraud and negligent misrepresentation.

FN2. Section 10(b), 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), states It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly ... [t]o use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security ... any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

FN3. Section 20(a) creates vicarious liability based on violations of § 10(b) and is not at issue independent of § 10(b).

FN4. Rule 10b-5, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5, provides that, in connection with the sale of securities, it is unlawful for a person (a) To employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud, (b) To make any untrue statement of material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or (c) To engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person[.]

[6][7] The general rule is that reasonable reliance must be proved as an element of a securities fraud claim. [FN5] See Azrielli v. Cohen Law Offices, 21 F.3d 512, 517 (2d Cir.1994) (Rule 10b-5 "makes unlawful any misrepresentation that would cause reasonable investors to rely thereon") (internal quotation marks omitted). See also Paracor Finance, Inc. v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 79 F.3d 878, 886 (9th Cir.1996) ("Justifiable reliance is a limitation on a rule 10b-5 action which insures that there is a causal connection between the misrepresentation and the plaintiff's harm.") (internal quotation marks omitted); Harrison v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 79 F.3d 609, 618 (7th Cir.1996) ("The fact of reliance ... is not enough by itself; that reliance must be justifiable, or reasonable."); One-O-One Enter., Inc. v. Caruso, 848 F.2d 1283, 1286 (D.C.Cir.1988) ("plaintiffs' allegations must indicate that their reliance on the allegedly fraudulent representations was reasonable") (citing Kennedy v. Josephthal & Co., 814 F.2d 798, 804 (1st Cir.1987)). Reasonable reliance must also be proved under New York law to recover for fraud and negligent misrepresentation. See Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, Inc., 4 N.Y.2d 403, 407, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 262, 151 N.E.2d 833 (1958) (fraud); Heard v. City of New York, 82 N.Y.2d 66, 75-76, 603 N.Y.S.2d 414, 419, 623 N.E.2d 541, 546 (1983) (negligent misrepresentation).

FN5. The exceptions to this rule relate to circumstances where there are unusual "problems of proof." Feinman v. Dean Witter Reynolds, 84 F.3d 539, 541-42 (2d Cir.1996) (discussing Basic Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224, 108 S.Ct. 978, 99 L.Ed.2d 194 (1988), a class action in which the integrity of the market is alleged to have been compromised, and Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U.S. 128, 92 S.Ct. 1456, 31 L.Ed.2d 741 (1972), where total non-disclosure of material information was alleged, as exceptions to the requirement to prove reliance).

The district court held that Sections 2.05 and 7.02 of the Agreement preclude Harsco from establishing reasonable reliance. Section 2.05 specifically disclaims representations that are not in the agreement.

It provides that the sellers shall not be deemed to have made to Purchaser any representation or warranty other than as expressly made by [the sellers] in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof... Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, and notwithstanding any otherwise express representations and warranties made by the [sellers] in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof ..., the [sellers] make no representation or warranty to Purchaser with respect to:

(a) any projections, estimates or budgets heretofore delivered to or made available to Purchaser of future revenues, expenses or expenditures, future results of operations, [etc.]; or

(b) any other information or documents made available to Purchaser or its counsel, accountants, or advisors with respect to [MultiServ], except as expressly covered by a representation and warranty *343 contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof.

Section 7.02 is a merger clause, which states that the Agreement "contains the entire agreement between the parties hereto with respect to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and supersedes all prior arrangements or understandings with respect thereto."

Harsco argues that Sections 2.05 and 7.02 should not be treated as a bar to establishing reasonable reliance for three reasons. First Harsco claims that giving Sections 2.05 and 7.02 such effect contravenes § 29(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Second, Harsco argues that under Turkish v. Kasenetz, 27 F.3d 23 (2d Cir.1994), these Sections of the purchase agreement reflect an impermissible attempt to insulate the defendants from their own fraud. Third, Harsco argues that Sections 2.05 and 7.02 are not sufficiently specific to justify the district court's reliance on them. We reject each of these arguments.

1. Section 29(a)

[8] Section 29(a) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78cc(a), states that Any condition, stipulation, or provision binding any person to waive compliance with any provision of this chapter or of any rule or regulation thereunder, or any rule of an exchange required thereby shall be void.

"What the antiwaiver provision of § 29(a) forbids is enforcement of agreements to waive 'compliance' with the provisions of the statute." Shearson/American Express Inc. v. McMahan, 482 U.S. 220, 228, 107 S.Ct. 2332, 2338, 96 L.Ed.2d 185 (1987). The underlying concern of § 29(a) is "whether the agreement weakens [the] ability to recover under the Exchange Act." Id. at 230, 107 S.Ct. at 2339 (citations and quotation marks omitted). Furthermore, the voluntariness of an agreement is irrelevant to whether § 29(a) forbids it. Id. "[I]f a stipulation waives compliance with a statutory duty, it is void under § 29(a), whether voluntary or not." Id. Thus the question here boils down to whether Sections 2.05 and 7.02 of the Agreement weaken Harsco's ability to recover under § 10(b) of the Exchange Act in a way that § 29(a) prohibits. [FN6]

FN6. We note that Harsco's § 29 argument, if successful, would only warrant reversal on the federal securities fraud claims. Section 29's affect, if any, does not extend to the common law claims.

[9] There can be no question that the Agreement "weakens" Harsco's ability to recover under the Act. As the district court observed the Agreement "outline[s], with great specificity, the representations and warranties that Harsco agreed to rely upon-- and not rely upon--in purchasing all of MultiServ's outstanding stock." According to the district court, the Agreement limited the bases upon which a fraud action could be brought.

Thus, the Agreement can be described as weakening Harsco's ability to recover under § 10(b) of the Exchange Act. We think, however, that in the circumstances of this case such a "weakening" does not constitute a forbidden waiver of compliance. Here there is a detailed writing developed via negotiations among sophisticated business entities and their advisors. That writing, we conclude, defines the boundaries of the transaction.

Harsco brings this suit principally alleging conduct that falls outside those boundaries.

Harsco relies heavily on Rogen v. Iikon Corp., 361 F.2d 260 (1st Cir.1966). In Rogen, the plaintiff, an individual shareholder of the defendant company, sued under § 10(b), alleging that he was induced to sell shares of a company back to the company at an unfair price by nondisclosure of positive information regarding the company's prospects. Id. at 263. The first circuit reversed the district court's summary judgment for defendants. The district court granted summary judgment in part because the sales agreement at issue stated that plaintiff [was] fully familiar with the business and prospects of the corporation, [was] not relying on any representations or obligations to make full disclosure with respect thereto, and ha[s] made such investigation thereof as [plaintiff] deem[s] necessary.

*344 Id. at 265. The court held that § 29(a) rendered such a contract provision void.

[O]n analysis, we see no fundamental difference between saying, for example, 'I waive any rights I might have because of your representations or obligations to make full disclosure' and 'I am not relying on your representations or obligations to make full disclosure.' Were we to hold that the existence of this provision constituted the basis (or a substantial part of the basis) for finding non-reliance as a matter of law, we would have gone far toward eviscerating Section 29(a).

Id. at 268 (footnote omitted). Defendants analogize the contractual provision and the circumstances of Rogen to this case.

The analogy fails. First, the court in Rogen emphasized the disparity in bargaining power between the plaintiff, an individual whom a jury could conclude was "overtrusting," and the defendant corporation. See id. at 267-68. In contrast, it is apparent from the complaint and the Agreement in this case that both Harsco and defendants were sophisticated business entities negotiating at arm's length. The Agreement here reflects this relative parity. There is nothing in the first circuit's detailed opinion which suggests the presence in Rogen of anything like Sections 2.04, 2.05 and 7.02. In this case, Harsco was apparently content that the detailed disclosures and representations of Section 2.04 were sufficiently complete. Harsco further protected itself by negotiating for two weeks of confirmatory due diligence--the purpose of which was to confirm the accuracy of MultiServ's disclosures. If Harsco had been unable to confirm the truth of the representations in Section 2.04 during the due diligence period, Harsco could have terminated the deal. In short there is nothing in the complaint or the Agreement that indicates that Harsco was duped into waiving the protections of the securities laws.

Harsco bought Section 2.04's fourteen pages of representations. Unlike a contractual provision which prohibits a party from suing at all, the contract here reflects in detail the reasons why Harsco bought MultiServ--in essence, Harsco bought the representations and, according to Sections 2.05 and 7.02, nothing else. This means that there are fourteen pages of representations, any of which, if fraudulent, can be the basis of a fraud action against the sellers. But Harsco specifically agreed that representations not made in those fourteen pages were not made. Thus, it is not fair to characterize Sections 2.05 and 7.02 as having prevented Harsco from protecting its substantive rights. Harsco rigorously defined those rights in Section 2.04.

This analysis becomes a question of degree and context. Harsco has not waived its rights to bring any suit resulting from this deal. Each representation in Section 2.04 is a tooth which adds to the bite of Sections 2.05 and 7.02. In different circumstances (e.g., if there were but one vague seller's representation) a "no other representations" clause might be toothless and run afoul of § 29(a). But not here.

2. Policy Against Fraud

Harsco also argues that Sections 2.05 and 7.02 should not be given effect because doing so would run afoul of the policy of deterring fraud which we recognized in Turkish v.

Kasenez, 27 F.3d 23 (2d Cir.1994). But Turkish does not help Harsco. In Turkish the contract (which was a settlement agreement) stated that the parties "have had full and complete access to all books, documents, records, litigation files and other sources of information affecting all litigations[.]" 27 F.3d at 25. Elsewhere the contract stated that certain representations were based on the advice of accountants, and that in the event those representations proved to be untrue, then plaintiff would only have one remedy (i.e., getting the loans repaid by the defendant). Id. at 25. The fraud alleged was that accountants never reviewed the accuracy of any of the representations. Id. at 27. We held the "full disclosure" clause to be no bar to suit. We emphasized that "plaintiffs do not claim that they relied on defendant's oral representations; rather, they claim that they relied on written representations in the contract itself." Id. at 28. We further distinguished a contract (such as the one here) which "specifically disclaims the existence of" the representations which *345 plaintiffs claim are fraudulent. Id. Because here Harsco claims that the representations outside the contract were fraudulent, and because the contract clearly delineates what representations have been made, Turkish does not apply.

3. Specificity of Disclaimer

[10] Harsco's last claim is that the "no other representations" clause of Section 2.05 is not so specific as to put Harsco on notice of what it could not reasonably rely on. Harsco correctly states the rule announced by the New York Court of Appeals in Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597 (1959): where a party specifically disclaims reliance upon a particular representation in a contract, that party cannot, in a subsequent action for common law fraud, claim it was fraudulently induced to enter into the contract by the very representation it has disclaimed reliance upon. We have recognized a similar principle in the securities fraud context. See Brown v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., 991 F.2d 1020, 1033 (2d Cir.1993) (disclosure of risks in prospectus forecloses suit under 10b-5 claiming that the security was unsuited to plaintiff's investment objectives).

In Danann the contract (for the purchase of a lease on a building) stated that the seller had not "made ... any representations as to the ... expenses [or] operation ... [of the building] and the Purchaser hereby expressly acknowledges that no such representations have been made." 5 N.Y.2d at 320, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597. The New York Court of Appeals held that this language "destroys the allegations in plaintiffs complaint that the agreement was executed in reliance upon ... contrary oral representations." Id. at 320-21, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597.

Applying the Danann rule to the present circumstances, our task is to compare the language in Sections 2.04, 2.05, and 7.02 to the representations which Harsco claims are fraudulent, keeping in mind the arm's length nature of the negotiation and the sophistication of the parties. The purpose in making this comparison is to determine whether once Harsco entered into the Agreement, it became unreasonable to rely on the allegedly fraudulent representations.

To aid this analysis, we restate here the most relevant portion of Section 2.05. After reaffirming representations in article II (including the fourteen pages of Section 2.04 immediately preceding), Section 2.05 states that Defendants "make no representation or warranty to" Harsco regarding

(a) any projections, estimates or budgets heretofore delivered to or made available to Purchaser of future revenues, expenses or expenditures, future results of operations (or any component thereof), future cash flows or future financial condition (or any component thereof) of [MultiServ] or the future business and operations of [MultiServ]; or

(b) any other information or documents made available to [Harsco] or its counsel, accountants or advisors with respect to [MultiServ] or the business and operations of [MultiServ], except as expressly covered by a representation and warranty contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof.

In light of this language, we review Harsco's various factual theories of fraud.

a. General Business Prospects

[11] Paragraphs 48 and 49 of the Complaint asserted that the following allegations, made during the three days of preliminary due diligence in May 1993, were fraudulent: that "plants in Italy, Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Austria would experience a financial turnaround in 1993"; that MultiServ "would place new emphasis on developing its core steel business" and "phase out" other businesses; that MultiServ "expected growth in new areas of the world"; and that plants in China and Slovakia "would be fully operational in 1993 with no significant start up problems." On their face, these representations are "projections of ... future business and operations"--exactly what Section 2.05 disclaims. In light of Sections 2.05 and 7.02, there is nothing in the Complaint which allows an inference of reasonable reliance on these representations. *346 The district court correctly dismissed the claims relating to these representations.

b. The Russian Plant

[12][13] In paragraph 52 the Complaint alleges that certain defendants represented in July 1993, during confirmatory due diligence, that "the Russian Plant would be operating in the fourth quarter of 1993," and that those same defendants knew or should have known at that time that the main foundations for the Russian Plant had not been poured. [FN7] The question is whether the disclaimer of "information ... with respect to ... operations of [MultiServ], except as expressly covered by a representation and warranty contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 hereof" put Harsco on sufficient notice that representations regarding the Russian Plant could not reasonably be relied on. This is a closer call than the allegations contained in paragraph 48. Unlike relatively vague expectations of future performance complained of in that paragraph, here the allegation is more detailed: defendants knew the Russian Plant was not going to get built and represented otherwise.

FN7. On its face, this representation as well as some of those discussed in the previous paragraph appear to be merely an unactionable statement of an opinion regarding future events. However, fraud liability may attach when a person "state[s] that something was to be done when he kn [ows] all the time it was not to be done and that his representations were false." Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, Inc., 4 N.Y.2d 403, 408, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 263, 151 N.E.2d 833, 836 (1958). Furthermore, a representation that a plant will be built is readily distinguishable from statements of " 'expectation' of higher sales" which we have held unactionable under the Rule 10b-5. Decker v. Massey-Ferguson, Ltd., 681 F.2d 111, 117 (2d Cir.1982).

Nevertheless, and again relying on the sophisticated context of this transaction, we hold that Harsco must be held to its agreement. There was no representation whatsoever about the Russian Plant in Sections 2.01 through 2.04. We think Harsco should be treated as if it meant what it said when it agreed in Section 2.05 that there were no representations other than those contained in Sections 2.01 through 2.04 that were part of the transaction. Here, as in our analysis of § 29(a) of the Exchange Act, a less detailed Section 2.04 might lead to a different result. But the exhaustive nature of the Section 2.04 representations adds to the specificity of Section 2.05's disclaimer of other representations. We can see no reason not to hold Harsco to the deal it negotiated. Claims relating to the Russian Plant were also properly dismissed.

c. French Self Dealing

[14] The complaint alleges numerous instances of improper conduct by the president of MultiServ's French subsidiary and accuses certain defendants of failing to disclose their knowledge of that misconduct. ¶¶ 57-68. The district court properly held that this portion of the complaint was deficient because Harsco's complaint failed to connect the alleged duty to disclose the French self-dealing with any representation from Section 2.04. The district court afforded Harsco an opportunity to fix its pleading. Harsco opted not to.

The pleading needed fixing because, again, we hold Harsco to the Agreement it negotiated and entered into. Under the circumstances of this case, "no other representations" means no other representations.

Ironically, in this instance there was a Section 2.04 representation which appears sufficiently inconsistent with the allegations of French impropriety to have allowed this claim to continue past the Rule 12(b)(6) stage. Section 2.04(i)(1) states that MultiServ was not "in violation ... of any Law ... where failure to be in compliance would have a Material Adverse Effect." Harsco's general citation to Section 2.04 does not suffice to invoke this small subset of the fourteen pages contained therein. As discussed below, fraud must be pleaded with particularity. Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b). That requirement is not met by citing to fourteen pages of representations when only a few lines among those fourteen pages consist of a representation which plaintiff claims to be deceitful.

d. Rights to Scarfing Technology

[15] Scarfing is the process by which surface defects are removed from slabs cast from liquid steel, before those slabs are *347 rolled. Scarfing is important to maintain the quality of the product. ¶ 69. The offering memorandum stated that MultiServ owned the intellectual property rights to the "Androfer" scarfing technology. ¶ 70. The sellers also represented that the Androfer technology is superior to other scarfing methods. ¶ 70. In reality, the rights to the Androfer technology were in dispute. ¶¶ 71-75. Harsco claims that defendants were aware of this reality and misrepresented it to Harsco. ¶ 76. The self-declared owner of the Scarfing technology has since offered the Androfer rights to Harsco for $3 million. ¶ 79.

Notably, other than the general invocation of Section 2.04, Harsco's complaint nowhere directs the reader's attention to any provision in the Agreement that relates to the status of MultiServ's intellectual property rights. Accordingly, this claim was also properly dismissed.

As with the claims relating to French improprieties, here too there is a short passage within Section 2.04, Section 2.04(k)(2)(A), which appears sufficiently inconsistent with the allegations relating to the state of the Androfer patent to warrant this claim continuing past a 12(b)(6) motion. Noting this, the district court allowed Harsco an opportunity to replead claims relating to intellectual property rights. Harsco declined in order to take this appeal.

e. The Belgium Acquisition

[16] Harsco claims that two defendants "represented that MultiServ would acquire the [Belgium] Plant in June or July of 1993 for approximately $13 million," ¶ 80, and that this representation was fraudulent. Section 2.04(o) (3) of the Agreement incorporated Exhibit 2.04(o)(3) to the Agreement. Exhibit 2.04(o)(3) states that the Belgium acquisition "is not expected to be completed until September or October of 1993." Sections 2.05 and 7.02, if they mean anything, mean that the representations in Section 2.04 trump representations outside the Agreement. Here again Harsco's complaint belies any suggestion of reasonable reliance. Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) was proper.

4. Claim Relating to Conduct During Due Diligence

[17] There is one other factual strain of fraud that fails pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b), notwithstanding any of the above analyses. Rule 9(b) requires that allegations of fraud be pleaded with particularity. Thus we have explained that when a complaint charges fraud, it must (1) detail the statements (or omissions) that the plaintiff contends are fraudulent, (2) identify the speaker, (3) state where and when the statements (or omissions) were made, and (4) explain why the statements (or omissions) are fraudulent. Shields v. Citytrust Bancorp., Inc., 25 F.3d 1124, 1128 (2d Cir.1994); Ouaknine v.

MacFarlane, 897 F.2d 75, 79 (2d Cir.1990). The policy behind Rule 9(b) is (1) to provide a defendant with fair notice of plaintiff's claim, (2) to safeguard a defendant's reputation from "improvident charges of wrongdoing" and (3) to protect against the institution of a strike suit. Acito v. IMCERA Group, Inc., 47 F.3d 47, 52 (2d Cir.1995).

Harsco's allegations relating to due diligence consist of the following: During the confirmatory due diligence, MultiServ's CEO (Bowden), took an "extended vacation." ¶ 44. Harsco did not know Bowden was going to go away during this time. ¶ 44. Also, other "key employees," including MultiServ's Comptroller, were "absent for substantial parts of the Due Diligence period." ¶ 44. Harsco's requests to speak with MultiServ's internal auditor during due diligence were met with a response that the auditor was unavailable. ¶ 45. MultiServ denied Harsco's requests to see and/or copy certain documents during this period as well. ¶ 46. Lastly, Harsco asked for access to MultiServ's books seven days a week during the due diligence period; MultiServ gave access for only six days a week. ¶ 47.

The only representation mentioned in this portion of the Complaint is that the auditor was unavailable. There is no explanation regarding why that representation may be fraudulent. Furthermore it cannot be said that denial of a request to see documents could constitute fraud, unless that denial suggested falsely and deceitfully that those documents did not exist (of which there is no *348 suggestion here). In short, the complaint's recitation of particulars relating to due diligence fall far short of the requirements of Rule 9(b).

In sum, all of the fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims were properly dismissed.

C. Contract Claims

The district court also dismissed the claims for breach of contract and indemnification. We affirm the dismissal of these claims on an alternative basis. See Leecan v. Lopes, 893 F.2d 1434, 1435 (2d Cir.) (affirming on alternative grounds), cert. denied, 496 U.S. 929, 110 S.Ct. 2627, 110 L.Ed.2d 647 (1990).

The district court dismissed the breach of contract claims because "Harsco does not ... allege a breach of any specific representation and warranty contained within § 2.04." The district court may have applied an overly strict pleading standard to Harsco's breach of contract claim. Cf. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 168, 113 S.Ct. 1160, 1163, 122 L.Ed.2d 517 (1993) (Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b) applies only to allegations of fraud and mistake).

[18] To state a claim in federal court for breach of contract under New York law, a complaint need only allege (1) the existence of an agreement, (2) adequate performance of the contract by the plaintiff, (3) breach of contract by the defendant, and (4) damages. Tagare v. Nynex Network Sys. Co., 921 F.Supp. 1146, 1149 (S.D.N.Y.1996). See also 5 Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1235 (1990). Here paragraph 102 of the Complaint states

In Section 2.04 of the Agreement, [certain defendants] made representations and warranties of material facts to Harsco concerning aspects of MultiServ's ... compliance with laws [and] proprietary rights. [Those same defendants] breached the Agreement and the provisions of Section 2.04 by reason of the material misrepresentations and omissions of facts alleged herein.

The complaint also alleges Harsco's performance under the Agreement and damages. ¶¶ 103, 105. These pleadings may be adequate to state a breach of contract claim based on the Agreement. Similarly, count III of the complaint, which alleges a claim for indemnification based on breach of contract, might also state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

We do not decide whether these portions of the complaint satisfy the requirements of notice pleading. While a prudent plaintiff complaining of a breach of contract should allege what representations or warranties were breached, it is not clear that notice pleading requires such specificity.

[19] Nevertheless, we affirm the dismissal of the breach of contract and indemnification claims. The district court could not have properly exercised supplemental jurisdiction over these claims. The district court lacked diversity jurisdiction in this case. [FN8] Thus, the only basis for hearing the state law claims was under a theory of supplemental jurisdiction, assuming there were also federal claims. As discussed above, the federal securities law claims were properly dismissed prior to any responsive pleadings. In light of the early stage of this litigation, we affirm the dismissal of the breach of contract claims because the district court should have declined jurisdiction over them. We note that our reasoning, unlike that of the district court, leaves Harsco the possibility of bringing these claims in some state court (consistent with the requirements of state court procedures). Cf. Morse v. University of Vermont, 973 F.2d 122, 127-28 (2d Cir.1992) (holding it an abuse of discretion to decide novel state law claim under theory of supplemental jurisdiction after dismissal of federal claim).

FN8. Both Harsco and at least one defendant, MHC Holding Corp., are Delaware corporations. Thus complete diversity is lacking. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1) ("A corporation shall be deemed to be a citizen of any State by which it has been incorporated."); Cushing v. Moore, 970 F.2d 1103, 1106 (2d Cir.1992) ("28 U.S.C. § 1332 requires complete diversity between all plaintiffs and all defendants.").

*349 D. Other Claims

[20] The district court acted well within its discretion when, after dismissing the federal claims, it also chose to dismiss the claims for breach of fiduciary duty. Furthermore, there being no surviving underlying theory of liability, the respondeat superior claims were also properly dismissed.

III. CONCLUSION

© 2005 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Wo

Accordingly, we affirm the dismissal of Harsco's complaint. However, because our reasoning is different than the district court's regarding the dismissal of the state law breach of contract and indemnification claims, Harsco may be able to bring that claim in state court, if state court procedure so allows. Similarly, there may also be a forum in which Harsco's claim for breach of fiduciary duty may be heard, but that forum is not federal court.

91 F.3d 337, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 99,276

END OF DOCUMENT

Westlaw®

16div002508

42

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third
Department, New York.

HOME TOWN MUFFLER INC., Appellant,
v.
COLE MUFFLER INC. et al., Respondents.

March 10, 1994.

Distributor of automobile parts brought action against competitor and supplier, alleging violation of General Business Law's antitrust provision and tortious interference with contract. The Supreme Court, Broome County, Fischer, J., granted summary judgment against distributor, and distributor appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Cardona, P.J., held that: (1) distributor failed to prove antitrust claim in connection with supplier's deletion of distributor from its mailing list, and (2) evidence that competitor may have persuaded supplier to discontinue distributor as customer was insufficient to establish claim of tortious interference.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Monopolies 12(1.3)
265k12(1.3)

Party claiming violation of General Business Law's antitrust provision must identify relevant product market, describe nature and effects of alleged conspiracy, describe how economic impact of conspiracy restrained trade in market in question, and identify conspiracy or reciprocal relationship between two or more parties. McKinney's General Business Law § 340, subd. 1.

[2] Monopolies 28(7.5)
265k28(7.5)

Distributor of automobile products failed to prove claim against supplier and competitor under General Business Law's antitrust provision in connection with supplier's deletion of distributor from its mailing list; distributor presented only assertions and legal conclusions, at most showing that competitor may have complained to supplier, and supplier pointed to other reasons for terminating distributor as customer. McKinney's General Business Law § 340, subd. 1.

[3] Monopolies 28(7.1)
265k28(7.1)

[3] Monopolies 28(7.5)
265k28(7.5)

Terminating distributor in response to complaints by other distributors is not sufficient to withstand summary judgment motion in action under General Business Law's antitrust provision; agreement will not be inferred from such actions, and they do not indicate concerted behavior; there must be evidence that tends to exclude possibility that alleged conspirators were acting independently. McKinney's General Business Law § 340, subd. 1.

[4] Torts 12
379k12

Evidence that automobile parts distributor's competitor may have persuaded their mutual supplier to discontinue distributor as customer was insufficient to establish claim of tortious interference with contract; distributor at most showed existence of future contractual relations or contract terminable at will, and to recover damages for interference in that situation, distributor had to show that competitor used "wrongful means," such as physical violence, fraud, misrepresentation, civil suits, criminal prosecution or some degree of economic pressure which did not include persuasion alone, even if knowingly directed at interfering with contract.

*736 Coughlin & Gerhart (Peter H. Bouman, of counsel), Binghamton, for appellant.

Hancock & Estabrook (Thomas C. Buckel Jr., of counsel), Syracuse, for Cole Muffler Inc., respondent.

Levene, Gouldin & Thompson (John H. Hartman, of counsel), Binghamton, for AP Parts Mfg. Inc., respondent.

Before CARDONA, P.J., and MIKOLL, CREW and WEISS, JJ.

764 CARDONA, Presiding Justice.

Appeal from an order of the Supreme Court (Fischer, J.), entered February 17, 1993 in Broome County, which granted defendants' motions for summary judgment dismissing the complaint.

Plaintiff was a retail establishment engaged in the installation of mufflers, shocks, struts and springs in the City of Binghamton, Broome County. Defendant Cole Muffler Inc. was one of plaintiff's competitors. Defendant AP Parts Manufacturing Inc. was a supplier of various exhaust system products, shock absorbers and brake parts. Cole was a major and long-time customer of AP. At the time plaintiff was initially formed in November 1988, it ordered only shock absorbers from AP and ordered its other parts from another supplier. Thereafter, in the spring of 1989, plaintiff was deleted from AP's mailing list. As a consequence of this termination, 765 plaintiff commenced this suit against defendants alleging that they had entered into an "agreement, arrangement or combination" whereby AP refused to sell its products to plaintiff, resulting in the restraint of the free exercise of plaintiff's retailing activities in violation of General Business Law § 340(1). Plaintiff also asserted a cause of action against Cole alleging that Cole tortiously interfered with plaintiff's contract with AP. Defendants answered and, after conducting discovery, separately moved for summary judgment. Supreme Court granted the motions and dismissed the complaint, prompting this appeal by plaintiff.

We affirm. In so doing, we initially note that defendants carried their initial burden of demonstrating their defenses as a matter of law to warrant summary judgment in their favor (see, Friends of Animals v. Associated Fur Mfrs., 46 N.Y.2d 1065, 1067-1068, 416 N.Y.S.2d 790, 390 N.E.2d 298). The question therefore distills to whether plaintiff adduced sufficient evidence in support of its claims to require a trial (see, id.). An examination of the record reveals that plaintiff did not make the requisite showing and therefore summary judgment was properly granted to defendants.

[1] We turn first to plaintiff's claim that defendants violated the antitrust provision of *737 General Business Law § 340(1). A party claiming a violation of this statute, which was modeled after the Federal Sherman Antitrust Act (15 U.S.C. § 1; see, State of New York v. Mobil Oil Corp., 38 N.Y.2d 460, 463, 381 N.Y.S.2d 426, 344 N.E.2d 357), must (1) identify the relevant product market, (2) describe the nature and effects of the alleged conspiracy, (3) describe how the economic impact of the conspiracy restrained trade in the market in question, and (4) identify a conspiracy or reciprocal relationship between two or more parties (Creative Trading Co. v. Larkin-Pluznick-Larkin, Inc., 136 A.D.2d 461, 462, 523 N.Y.S.2d 102; see, International Tel. Prods. v. Twentieth Century-Fox Tel. Div., 622 F.Supp. 1532).

[2] The record reveals that after plaintiff ordered the shock absorbers from AP in November 1988, AP sent plaintiff a credit application which plaintiff never completed. According to AP it deleted plaintiff from its mailing list in part due to plaintiff's failure to complete the credit application, but also because plaintiff had not placed any orders since the first order and AP was having doubts about plaintiff's ability to successfully operate its business. Although plaintiff claimed it placed several telephone orders for parts to AP, it produced no documentation to support this claim. Plaintiff also alleged that without access to AP parts it could not compete with 766 Cole. One of plaintiff's representatives admitted, however, that although plaintiff could have initially received AP muffler and exhaust parts, plaintiff declined and limited its order to shock absorbers. Plaintiff argued that it limited its order because it had heard that Cole had put pressure on AP not to sell to plaintiff. Plaintiff reasoned that it would be safe to order other parts from AP if AP continued to sell it shocks. Supreme Court noted the inconsistency of plaintiff's logic and properly rejected it as conjecture. Rather than state with specificity how the economic impact of the alleged agreement restrained trade in the market, plaintiff presented only assertions and legal conclusions.

[3] It is true that direct evidence of a conspiracy is rarely available and must be proven by inferences from the behavior of the alleged conspirators (see, H.L. Hayden Co. of N.Y. v. Siemens Med. Sys., 879 F.2d 1005, 1012). Nevertheless, plaintiff at most has shown that Cole may have complained to AP. Terminating a distributor in response to complaints by other distributors is not sufficient to withstand a summary judgment motion (see, Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Serv. Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 759, 104 S.Ct. 1464, 1468, 79 L.Ed.2d 775). An agreement will not be inferred from such actions and they do not indicate concerted behavior (id.). There has to be evidence that tends to exclude the possibility that the alleged conspirators were acting independently (id.; see, Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538). Such evidence is lacking in this case. As Supreme Court noted, AP pointed to other reasons for terminating plaintiff as a customer. Thus, the court properly granted summary judgment to defendants on plaintiff's antitrust claim.

[4] Turning to plaintiff's claim for tortious interference, it was required to establish (1) the existence of a contract between it and AP, (2) Cole's knowledge of the contract, (3) Cole's intentional inducement of AP to breach the contract, and (4) damages (see, Kronos, Inc. v. AVX Corp., 81 N.Y.2d 90, 94, 595 N.Y.S.2d 931, 612 N.E.2d 289). At most plaintiff showed the existence of future contractual relations or a contract terminable at will. In order to recover damages for interference in such a situation, plaintiff was required to show that Cole used "wrongful means". These include physical violence, fraud, misrepresentation, civil suits, criminal prosecution or some degree of economic pressure which does not include persuasion alone, even if knowingly directed at interfering with the contract (see, Guard-Life Corp. v. Parker Hardware Mfg. Corp., 50 N.Y.2d 183, 191, 428 N.Y.S.2d 628, 406

N.E.2d 445; see also, Yan's Video v. Hong Kong TV Video Programs, 133 A.D.2d 575, 520 N.Y.S.2d 143). Here, the evidence showed only that Cole may have persuaded *767 AP to discontinue plaintiff as a customer, which was not enough to withstand defendants' motions.

In sum, plaintiff has relied on surmise and speculation and has failed to establish the existence of facts of sufficient import to create 738 triable issues (see, Shaw v. Time-Life Records, 38 N.Y.2d 201, 207, 379 N.Y.S.2d 390, 341 N.E.2d 817; see also, Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., supra, 475 U.S. at 585-586, 106 S.Ct. at 1355-1356). Plaintiff's remaining contentions have been considered and rejected as unpersuasive.

ORDERED that the order is affirmed, with costs.

MIKOLL, CREW and WEISS, JJ., concur.

202 A.D.2d 764, 608 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1994-1 Trade Cases P 70,554

END OF DOCUMENT

43

Briefs and Other Related Documents

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-
Counter-Defendant-Appellant,
Lawrence Taft, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant,

v.

TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina
Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler,
Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees.
Trafalgar Power Inc., Plaintiff-Appellee-Cross-Appellant,

v.

Neal Dunlevy and Stetson-Harza Corp.,
Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Appellees.

Nos. 99-9198(L), 99-9206(XAP), 99-9202(CON),
99-9204(CON).

Argued: June 23, 2000
Decided: Sept. 15, 2000

Owners of hydroelectric power plants brought malpractice action against engineering firm and engineer employed by firm. Following jury verdict in favor of plaintiffs, defendants moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or new trial, and plaintiffs moved to amend judgment to add prejudgment interest. The United States District Court for the Northern District of New York, David N. Hurd, J., 63 F.Supp.2d 225, entered order denying motions, and appeal was taken. The Court of Appeals, Miner, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) engineer's professional malpractice, in failing to properly calculate drop in height of water at site of proposed hydroelectric plants, with result that its estimate of energy outputs for plants were extremely optimistic, qualified as proximate cause of damages plaintiffs sustained in proceeding with development project; (2) "economic loss" rule did not apply to limit plaintiffs' damages; (3) engineer's overly optimistic estimates of projected energy outputs were mere promises of future output, as opposed to present representations of existing fact, which would not support negligent misrepresentation claim; and (4) difficulty of calculating prejudgment interest did not warrant ignoring the mandate of New York interest statute.

Affirmed in part; vacated in part and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts 776
170Bk776

Court of Appeals reviews de novo district court's denial of post-trial motion for judgment as matter of law. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 50, 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Courts 765
170Bk765

[2] Federal Courts 801
170Bk801

Court of Appeals will reverse denial of post-trial motion for judgment as matter of law only if, after making all credibility assessments and drawing all inferences in favor of non-moving party, reasonable juror would be compelled to accept view of movant. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 50, 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Federal Courts 825.1
170Bk825.1

Court of Appeals reviews for abuse of discretion the denial of motion for new trial. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 59, 28 U.S.C.A.

[4] Negligence 321
272k321

Under New York law, professional malpractice is species of negligence, whose general elements are: (1) negligence, (2) which is proximate cause of (3) damages.

[5] Negligence 400
272k400

[5] Negligence 1240
272k1240

Under New York law, engineer's professional malpractice, in failing to properly calculate drop in height of water at site of proposed hydroelectric plants and in misapprehending bypass flow requirements for plants, with result that its estimate of energy outputs for plants were extremely optimistic, qualified as proximate cause of damages that power company sustained in proceeding with development of plants, when energy outputs were far less than those projected by engineer.

[6] Negligence 380
272k380

[6] Negligence 422
272k422

Proximate cause determination does not require jury to identify the liable party as sole cause of harm; it only asks that identified cause be a substantial factor in bringing about injury.

[7] Negligence 463
272k463

[7] Negligence 1251
272k1251

Under New York law, "economic loss" rule did not apply to prevent power company that proceeded with development of hydroelectric plants in reliance upon engineer's negligent estimate of projected energy outputs from recovering damages, in professional malpractice action, based upon its lost revenues.

[8] Products Liability 17.1
313Ak17.1

"Economic loss" rule was developed by New York courts as means of enforcing dictates of privity in products liability actions, and of preventing tort remedies from eliminating customary limitations involved in cases addressing sale of goods.

[9] Negligence 463
272k463

While doctrine of economic loss survives under New York law, despite increasing relaxation of privity rules, it is not always applied in negligence cases.

[10] Negligence 463
272k463

[10] Torts 5
379k5

Continued role of "economic loss" rule under New York law is based primarily upon recognition that relying solely on foreseeability to define extent of liability in cases involving economic loss, while generally effective, can result in some instances in liability so great that, as matter of policy, courts will be reluctant to impose it; to prevent such open-ended liability, courts apply "economic loss" rule to prevent recovery of damages that are inappropriate because they actually are in nature of breach of contract as opposed to tort.

[11] Federal Courts 634
170Bk634

It was not for tortfeasors to argue for first time upon appeal that jury's damages award for tortfeasors' professional malpractice, in failing to properly estimate projected energy outputs of hydroelectric plants, was based on profits which were never recoverable under real world conditions, where tortfeasors had made precisely the opposite argument before jury, in contending that their energy output estimates were attainable.

[12] Damages 208(1)
115k208(1)

Proper calculation of damages, in professional malpractice case arising out of engineer's failure to properly estimate projected energy outputs of hydroelectric plants, was factual question, which was properly submitted for resolution by jury.

[13] Damages 184
115k184

Damages need not be calculated with mathematical precision.

[14] Federal Civil Procedure 2265
170Ak2265

District court's failure to make findings of fact and conclusions of law, in dismissing claims for accounting and imposition of constructive trust once litigant's breach of contract claims had failed before jury, was not error, where district court's failure to make findings of fact and conclusions of law did not inhibit ability of Court of Appeals to review dismissal order, which was clearly justified once underlying breach of contract claim was rejected.

[15] Negligence 1636
272k1636

Decision to allow evidence as to engineer's alleged conflict of interest, as owner of company which was to participate in joint venture for development of hydroelectric plants and as employee of engineering firm that estimated projected energy outputs from plants, was not abuse of discretion in professional malpractice case arising out of firm's failure to properly estimate projected energy outputs; evidence was relevant and only minimally prejudicial.

[16] Federal Courts 896.1
170Bk896.1

Even assuming that district court erred, in professional malpractice case arising out of engineering firm's malpractice in failing to properly estimate projected energy outputs, when court admitted evidence of engineer's alleged conflict of interest, any such error was not so gross as to require vacatur of jury's verdict and judgment.

[17] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, elements of negligent misrepresentation claim are: (1) that defendant had duty, as result of special relationship, to give correct information; (2) that defendant made false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect; (3) that the information supplied in the representation was known by defendant to be desired by plaintiff for serious purpose; (4) that plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and (5) that plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment.

[18] Fraud 11(1)
184k11(1)

[18] Fraud 12
184k12

In order to support negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law, alleged misrepresentation must be factual in nature, and not promissory or relating to future events that might never come to fruition.

[19] Fraud 12
184k12

Engineer's overly optimistic estimates of projected energy outputs from proposed hydroelectric plants were mere promises of future output, as opposed to present representations of existing fact, which would not support negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law when power company went ahead with construction of proposed plants and was unable to achieve projected energy outputs.

[20] Fraud 20
184k20

Even assuming that engineer's overly optimistic estimates of projected energy outputs from proposed hydroelectric plants qualified as the kind of representations that might support negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law, power company could not recover on negligent misrepresentation theory for damages that it sustained when it went ahead with construction of proposed plants and could not achieve projected energy outputs, where power company possessed adequate knowledge that project's financial success was unlikely and went ahead with construction of plants in question in hopes of scoring a payday with other plants that were bundled with these known losers; requisite reliance was lacking.

[21] Negligence 1662
272k1662

[21] Negligence 1672
272k1672

Professional malpractice claims against engineer were properly dismissed for lack of proof, where plaintiff presented no expert testimony thereon.

[22] Interest 39(2.50)
219k39(2.50)

Under New York law, court must award prejudgment interest as matter of right, where defendant's act or omission deprives or otherwise interferes with title to, or possession or enjoyment of, property. N.Y.McKinney's

CPLR 5001(a).

[23] Interest 39(2.50)
219k39(2.50)

Difficulty of calculating prejudgment interest, in suit arising out of engineering firm's failure to properly estimate projected energy outputs from proposed hydroelectric plants, with result that power company was injured when it proceeded with proposed construction and could not achieve these projected outputs, did not warrant ignoring the mandate of New York statute, which requires award of prejudgment interest as matter of right when defendant's conduct deprives or otherwise interferes with title to, or possession or enjoyment of, property. N.Y. McKinney's CPLR 5001(a).

*11 David Rabinowitz Moses & Singer LLP, New York, NY (Roger L. Waldman, Moses & Singer LLP, New York, NY, on the brief) for Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant.

Carolyn Elefant, Law Offices of Carolyn Elefant, Bethesda, MD, for Defendant-Appellant-Cross-Appellee Neal Dunlevy.

John Glover Roberts, Jr. Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., Washington, DC (Catherine E. Stetson, Hogan & Hartson, Washington, DC; Richard E. Alexander, Harter, Secrest & Emery, Rochester, NY, on the brief) for Defendant-Appellant-Cross-Appellee Stetson-Harza Corp.

Paul J. Yesawich, III, Harris Beach & Wilcox, LLP, Rochester, NY (Laura W. Smalley, Rochester, NY, on the brief) for Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees and Plaintiff-Appellee-Cross-Appellant.

Before: MINER and STRAUB, Circuit Judges, and TRAGER, District Judge. [FN*]

FN* The Honorable David G. Trager, of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York, sitting by designation.

MINER, Circuit Judge:

This case consists of consolidated actions by various individuals and entities involved in the development, construction, and/or operation of six hydroelectric plants located in upstate New York. The attempted development of these sites has resulted in financial disaster, extensive litigation before the district court, and the appeal before us.

Plaintiff-counter-defendant-appellant Hydro-Investors, Inc. ("HII") appeals from an order denying its post-trial motion for an accounting and the imposition of a constructive trust. Defendant-appellant-cross-appellee Neal Dunlevy ("Dunlevy") and defendant-appellant-cross-appellee Stetson-Harza ("Stetson-Harza") appeal from a judgment, following a jury verdict, imposing joint and several liability on them in the amount of $7.6 million for damages stemming from their professional malpractice with regard to the hydroelectric plants at Ogdensburg and Forestport. Dunlevy and Stetson-Harza also appeal from the district court's denial of their post-trial motions for a new trial and/or for judgment as a matter of law.

*12 Defendants-counter-claimants-appellees Trafalgar Power, Inc., Marina Development, Inc. ("Marina Development"), and Arthur Steckler ("Steckler") (collectively "TPI") cross-appeal from (1) a pre-trial order dismissing their negligent misrepresentation claim with respect to the Adams and Kayuta Lake sites; (2) orders entered at trial dismissing their professional malpractice claims with respect to Adams and Kayuta Lake; (3) orders entered at trial dismissing breach of contract claims with respect to the Adams, Kayuta Lake, Forestport, and Ogdensburg sites; and (4) a post-trial order dismissing their motion to amend the judgment to include an award of prejudgment interest.

For the reasons that follow, we affirm in part and vacate in part the judgment and orders of the district court and remand for additional proceedings consistent with this opinion.

BACKGROUND

Stetson-Harza is an engineering firm based in Utica, New York. At certain times pertinent to this appeal, Dunlevy, an engineer, worked at Stetson-Harza. Dunlevy also served as the principal and sole shareholder of HII. In the 1980s, Dunlevy met Steckler, a Canadian businessman who was the sole owner of Marina Development. Steckler also controlled TPI, a wholly owned subsidiary of Marina Development.

In 1984, Dunlevy suggested to Steckler that hydroelectric plants in upstate New York could be profitably developed. Dunlevy also suggested that Steckler provide the capital to develop the plants and that Dunlevy, via HII or Stetson-Harza, would contribute hydroelectric expertise. Steckler apparently believed these projects would be a good financial opportunity because oil prices were nearing an all-time high and Congress had passed legislation favoring alternative energy. As a result of their discussions, Dunlevy and Steckler decided to enter the hydroelectric power plant business together. Consequently, TPI eventually retained Stetson-Harza and HII to perform work associated with TPI's licensing and possible development of six hydroelectric plants in upstate New York: Herkimer, Cranberry Lake, Kayuta Lake, Adams, Forestport, and Ogdensburg.

On August 1, 1985, Steckler (via TPI) and Dunlevy (via HII) entered into an agreement that called for TPI to provide the capital while HII would identify the sites to be developed. The specific sites were not identified in the agreement. The agreement did contain attached schedules that conditioned HII's participation in each project on a number of factors, including construction within the budget and meeting the expected energy output. Despite the existence of this agreement, Dunlevy's activities for TPI were not limited to his work through HII. Indeed, the liability asserted against Dunlevy in this action stems from his role as chief engineer of the Water Resources Department at Stetson-Harza.

As part of TPI's effort to obtain financing for the projects, Steckler asked Stetson-Harza to prepare an analysis that could be used by potential lenders to evaluate whether to invest in the projects. That analysis, dated October 27, 1986, included an assessment of the energy to be generated by each project as well as the costs of construction.

By November 1986, TPI was fully committed to the project, having decided to develop six projects at an anticipated cost of approximately $23 million. Pursuant to this commitment, TPI had purchased multi-million dollar turbines for the Ogdensburg, Forestport, Adams, and Kayuta Lake sites. It also had located a lender that was willing to make an equity contribution of nearly $7.5 million and had launched the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("FERC") licensing approval process.

The plants were constructed in 1987 and have proven to be financial disasters. At the time of this appeal, TPI has not received *13 any profits from the plants. No equity has been returned to the investors and no cash distributions have taken place. Apparently, the losses are only likely to increase in the future as legislation favoring alternative power sources expires. The primary problems associated with the development of these plants are construction cost overruns and inadequate energy production.

As a result of claimed deficiencies arising out of the financial difficulties associated with these projects, HII asserted claims in 1989 for breach of contract against TPI, seeking specific performance, an accounting, and the imposition of a constructive trust. TPI in turn sued Stetson-Harza, Dunlevy, and HII alleging breach of contract, gross negligence, negligence and/or professional malpractice, gross misrepresentation, intentional misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, and fraud. Plaintiff-counter-defendant Lawrence Taft ("Taft") also sued TPI, seeking (1) specific enforcement of an alleged agreement providing that TPI transfer an ownership right in the Adams, Kayuta Lake, and Forestport sites back to Taft; (2) an accounting; (3) the imposition of a constructive trust; and (4) damages for TPI's and Steckler's alleged fraud. Taft's claims were later settled out of court. By pretrial order, the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York (Kahn, J.) granted summary judgment to Stetson-Harza, Dunlevy, and HII on the fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and gross negligence claims asserted by TPI. The rest of the case proceeded to a jury trial that consumed approximately 10 days in March and April 1999.

The evidence at trial, taken in the light most favorable to the prevailing party, revealed that although Dunlevy held himself and Stetson-Harza out as experts in hydroelectric engineering both had little experience with such projects. The evidence showed that Dunlevy's primary expertise was in computer applications and that Dunlevy acted primarily as a salesman; recent college graduates performed most of the engineering analysis. TPI's evidence also indicated that, even under the best conditions, the energy output estimates provided by Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy were overly optimistic. The disparity between the estimated and actual output largely resulted from Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy improperly calculating Ogdensburg's head (the drop in height of water, from the reservoir down to the tailrace at the plant's powerhouse) and misapprehending the actual FERC bypass flow requirements for Forestport.

After TPI presented its case, the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York (Hurd, J.) entered judgment as a matter of law dismissing (1) TPI's claims for breach of contract and professional malpractice based on the Adams and Kayuta Lake sites and (2) the breach of contract claims with regard to Forestport and Ogdensburg. The rest of the claims proceeded to a jury verdict. The jury found (1) TPI not liable for breach of contract with regard to the Ogdensburg, Herkimer, Cranberry Lake, Kayuta Lake, Adams, and Forestport plants and (2) Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy jointly and severally liable in the amount of $7.6 million for damages stemming from their engineering malpractice in connection with the licensing and/or development of the Ogdensburg and Forestport plants. After trial, the district court (Hurd, J.) denied (1) HII's motion to set aside the verdict, for judgment as a matter of law, and for a new trial based on the jury's allegedly inconsistent verdicts; (2) Stetson-Harza's motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial on the ground that TPI failed to adequately prove professional malpractice and the damages arising therefrom; and (3) TPI's motion to amend the judgment to include prejudgment interest pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 5001(a).

This appeal followed.

*14 DISCUSSION

Stetson-Harza presents the following arguments on appeal: (1) the judgment against it should be reversed because TPI failed to prove proximate cause; (2) TPI was not entitled to lost revenues from an energy output prediction "that was impossible to achieve under real-world conditions"; (3) the economic loss rule precludes TPI from recovering for lost revenues on the negligence claim; and (4) Stetson-Harza is entitled to a new trial because "the plaintiff's flawed damages theory infected the entire case."

HII argues: (1) that the dismissal of its claim for an accounting must be reversed because the lower court failed to make findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 52 and the evidence presented supported an accounting; (2) that the dismissal of HII's equitable claims for a constructive trust must be reversed because the court failed to make findings of fact and conclusions of law; and (3) that the jury verdict with respect to HII's breach of contract claim should be reversed because of the admission of allegedly highly prejudicial evidence concerning Dunlevy's conflict of interest.

Dunlevy contends that there is insufficient proof of professional malpractice liability to support the judgment below. Dunlevy also makes a number of arguments addressed to the question of damages. He argues that (1) TPI is not entitled to any damages because of New York's economic loss rule for tort actions;

(2) the cost of repairing the power plants provides the appropriate measure of damages; (3) calculating damages based on differences in "gross profits" is an error of law; and (4) even accepting TPI's method of measuring damages, the jury verdict is clearly erroneous. Dunlevy further asserts that (1) the conflict of interest evidence presented by TPI was irrelevant, highly prejudicial, inflammatory, and confusing and (2) if he is held to have committed malpractice as a manager versus as an engineer, then he is protected from liability by an exculpatory clause.

TPI replies to these various attacks on the judgment below with several arguments of its own in support of the judgment and then cross-appeals on several issues. In reply to the appellants' arguments, TPI contends that (1) there was overwhelming evidence that Dunlevy and Stetson-Harza were negligent and that Dunlevy's negligence proximately caused TPI's damages; (2) the damages award accurately represents the actual damages that were foreseeable; (3) the economic loss rule does not preclude recovery for lost profits; (4) the jury's verdict was supported by the evidence and accordingly a new trial is not appropriate; and (5) the district court correctly dismissed HII's claim for an accounting and the imposition of a constructive trust. In the cross-appeal, TPI argues that the district court erred (1) in not granting TPI's request for prejudgment interest on the negligence claim; (2) by dismissing, prior to trial, the negligent misrepresentation claim relating to Adams and Kayuta Lake; (3) by dismissing, at trial, TPI's breach of contract and professional malpractice claims relating to Adams and Kayuta Lake for insufficient evidence; and (4) by dismissing, at trial, TPI's breach of contract claims for the Forestport and Ogdensburg sites.

I. The Professional Malpractice Liability of Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy with Respect to the Ogdensburg and Forestport sites

Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy both contend that the jury's special verdict findings of liability for engineering malpractice in connection with the licensing or development of the Ogdensburg and Forestport plants are unsustainable. Consequently, they urge us to find that the district court erred in denying their post-trial motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial pursuant to Rules 50 and 59 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

*15 [1][2][3] Our review of the denial of a Rule 50 motion is de novo. See Martinelli v. Bridgeport Roman Catholic Diocesan Corp., 196 F.3d 409, 425 (2d Cir.1999). "We ... will reverse the denial of judgment as a matter of law 'only if, notwithstanding making all credibility assessments and drawing all inferences in favor of [TPI], a reasonable juror would be compelled to accept the view of [Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy].'" Gordon v. Matthew Bender & Co., 186 F.3d 183, 184 (2d Cir.1999) (quoting EEOC v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 44 F.3d 116, 119 (2d Cir.1994)); see also Weissman v. Dawn Joy Fashions, Inc., 214 F.3d 224, 227 (2d Cir.2000). We review the denial of the parties' Rule 59 motion for a new trial for abuse of discretion. See Metromedia Co. v. Fugazy, 983 F.2d 350, 363 (2d Cir.1992).

[4][5] Under New York law, "professional malpractice[] is a species of negligence. As such, its general elements are (1) negligence, (2) which is the proximate cause of (3) damages." Marks Polarized Corp. v. Solinger & Gordon, 124 Misc.2d 266, 476 N.Y.S.2d 743, 744 (1984). Stetson-Harza's appeal is based on its contention that TPI failed to prove that the alleged acts of malpractice were the proximate cause of its injury, since "negligent measurements of the flow and head at Forestport and Ogdensburg did not cause those plants to generate less energy." Stetson-Harza's Br. at 24. Stetson-Harza asserts that it was "[t]he low head of the river, the surrounding terrain, and (with respect to Forestport) FERC's decision to require 140[cfs] of bypass flow [that] caused the lower energy output--and thus [TPI]'s lower revenues." Id.

[6] We reject this reasoning as specious. It was not merely the failure of the plants, based on their physical characteristics, to generate the desired amount of energy that caused TPI's damage. The legal cause of TPI's injury was Dunlevy's failure to adequately convey the realities of Ogdensburg and Forestport with a level of professional care that would have allowed TPI to make its business decisions with respect to those sites based on reasonably reliable technical information. The physical traits of the sites only served to provide the conditions precedent to the malpractice committed by Dunlevy. A proximate cause determination does not require a jury to identify the liable party as the sole cause of harm; it only asks that the identified cause be a substantial factor in bringing about the injury. See AUSA Life Ins. Co. v. Ernst & Young, 206 F.3d 202, 215 (2d Cir.2000); Fane v. Zimmer, Inc., 927 F.2d 124, 128 (2d Cir.1991); Voss v. Black & Decker Mfg. Co., 59 N.Y.2d 102, 107, 463 N.Y.S.2d 398, 450 N.E.2d 204 (1983). Once the jury was convinced that the minimal standard of professional care was not met in this case, the proximate cause of TPI's injury could easily be construed to be the carelessness of Dunlevy, and, through the doctrine of respondeat superior, his employer Stetson-Harza.

Dunlevy's appeal advances a number of arguments with respect to the findings of malpractice liability. Upon an examination of these arguments, we find that while these arguments may have had merit before a jury, we are constrained to accept the jury's resolution of these factual issues.

We further note that Dunlevy's contention that he should be relieved of liability due to certain negligent acts by the plaintiffs--e.g., Steckler's decision to purchase large turbines despite Dunlevy's November 1986 suggestion that smaller turbines might be purchased in anticipation of lower flows, or TPI's decision not to excavate the tailrace at Ogdensburg--is adequately accounted for by the jury's special verdict apportioning 20% of the liability to the plaintiffs in comparative fault and in the consequent pro rata reduction of the plaintiffs' damages award.

II. The Economic Loss Rule

[7] Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy contend that the district court improperly permitted *16 TPI to obtain a damage award based on "lost revenues" in violation of the economic loss rule found in New York cases. They posit that even if the evidence supported a finding of professional malpractice, the damages awarded below reflect the quintessential expectation damages found in breach of contract actions as opposed to the compensatory awards customarily found in tort actions. In response, TPI contends that the appellants waived this argument by failing to raise it before the trial court and that TPI's professional malpractice claim falls within the narrow category of claims exempt from the New York economic loss restriction.

We begin by addressing TPI's argument that Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy waived this issue by failing to raise it below. While the appellants may very well have waived this contention by failing to raise it below, see Commander Oil Corp. v. Barlo Equip. Corp., 215 F.3d 321, 332 (2d Cir.2000) ("Commander Oil argues that it is entitled to contractual indemnification from Barlo.... However, Commander Oil failed to raise the issue below in a timely manner and it is therefore waived for purposes of this appeal."); Austin-Westshore Constr. Co. v. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 934 F.2d 1217, 1222-23 (11th Cir.1991), we find it unnecessary to resolve the argument here because, even assuming arguendo that they may raise the argument here, we find no merit in it.

[8] The economic loss rule was adopted by the New York Court of Appeals in Schiavone Construction Co. v. Elgood Mayo Corp., 56 N.Y.2d 667, 668-69, 451 N.Y.S.2d 720, 436 N.E.2d 1322 (1982), rev'g on dissent below, 81 A.D.2d 221, 227-234, 439 N.Y.S.2d 933 (1981) (Silverman, J., dissenting). See 5th Ave. Chocolatiere, Ltd. v. 540 Acquisition Co., 712 N.Y.S.2d 8, 11 (N.Y.App.Div.2000). The rule developed as a way of enforcing the dictates of privity in product liability law and preventing tort remedies from eliminating the customary limitations involved in cases addressing the sale of goods. See id. at 11-12. "[T]he majority of cases enunciating the economic loss rule [have] arise[n] in the context of product liability, where the economic losses are essentially contractual in nature, and therefore the risk may be allocated by the parties, as reflected in the purchase price, UCC warranties or insurance...." Id. at 11; See also Saratoga Fishing Co. v. J.M. Martinac & Co., 520 U.S. 875, 885, 117 S.Ct. 1783, 138 L.Ed.2d 76 (1997) ("In East River S.S. Corp. v. Transamerica Delaval Inc., 476 U.S. 858, 106 S.Ct. 2295, 90 L.Ed.2d 865 (1986), we adopted as part of admiralty law the so-called 'economic loss' rule, which denies the purchaser of a defective product a tort action against the seller or manufacturer for purely economic losses sustained as a result of the product's failure.") (Scalia and Thomas, JJ., dissenting) (parallel citation omitted).

[9][10] Although the doctrine survives in today's caselaw despite the increasing relaxation of privity rules, it is not always applied in negligence cases. See 5th Ave. Chocolatiere, 712 N.Y.S.2d at 12. Primarily, its continuing role is based on the recognition that "[r]elying solely on foreseeability to define the extent of liability [in cases involving economic loss], while generally effective, could result in some instances in liability so great that, as a matter of policy, courts would be reluctant to impose it." Id. at 12. To prevent such open-ended liability, courts have applied the economic loss rule to prevent the recovery of damages that are inappropriate because they actually lie in the nature of breach of contract as opposed to tort. See 532 Madison Ave. Gourmet Foods, Inc. v. Finlandia Ctr., Inc., 271 A.D.2d 49, 711 N.Y.S.2d 391, 393 (2000) ("[P]ure economic losses (without property damage or personal injury) are not recoverable in a negligence action, and ... a claimant suffering purely financial losses is restricted to an action in contract for the benefit of its bargain."). The difficulty in our case is determining where to draw the line: TPI contends that the professional malpractice *17 of Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy requires the damages awarded below, and the appellants argue that these damages are an improper award of expectation damages truly stemming from breach of contract.

In Sommer v. Federal Signal Corp., 79 N.Y.2d 540, 548, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365 (1992), the New York Court of Appeals considered whether the economic loss rule applied in an action against a fire alarm company for negligent services resulting in extensive property damage. The fire alarm company's employee erred in shutting off the fire alarm system at a 42-story skyscraper in New York City. Seven to nine minutes after the alarm was shut off, the fire alarm company started receiving fire signals from the skyscraper. However, the technician on duty at the fire alarm company ignored the calls. A four-alarm fire was eventually reported directly to the authorities, but all of the parties acknowledged that the alarm company could have alerted the authorities minutes earlier. The fire resulted in millions in damages and led to a spate of lawsuits. See id. at 548-49, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365.

The Court of Appeals began its discussion by analyzing whether the company owning the skyscraper could pursue a tort claim against the fire alarm company, or whether the skyscraper's owner was limited to breach of contract remedies. Explaining its difficulty in resolving the case, the New York Court of Appeals recalled the following statement from one of its prior cases:

Between actions plainly ex contractu and those as clearly ex delicto there exists what has been termed a border-land, where the lines of distinction are shadowy and obscure, and the tort and the contract so approach each other, and become so nearly coincident as to make their practical separation somewhat difficult.

Id. at 550-51, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365 (quoting Rich v. New York Cent. & Hudson River R.R. Co., 87 N.Y. 382, 390 (1882)).

After discussing the various ways in which a claim may be contractual or tort-like, the court concluded that the claims of the skyscraper owner were not limited to breach of contract theories, but could also sound in tort. See id. at 552, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365. It looked to several factors: (1) that the fire alarm company's duty of care derived not only from contract but from the nature of its services; (2) that the fire alarm stations are franchised and regulated by the City; (3) that the fire alarm company served a significant public interest; (4) that the breach of the fire alarm company's duties could have catastrophic consequences; (5) the nature of the fire alarm company's relationship with the skyscraper owner; and (6) the sudden manner of the loss. See id. at 552-53, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365.

The record in the present case does not call for us to apply the economic loss rule to bar TPI's damages. The circumstances here indicate that TPI's professional malpractice claim is one sounding in tort and not a contractual dispute disguised as a tort. Although the parties may have entered into contracts governing some aspects of their relationship, the damages awarded below were for a harm distinct from those contracts, a harm arising out of the failure of Dunlevy and Stetson-Harza to provide proper estimates of energy output, adequately gauge the impact of government regulations, and more generally provide appropriate services. See 17 Vista Fee Assocs. v. Teachers Ins. & Annuity Assoc. of Am., 259 A.D.2d 75, 83, 693 N.Y.S.2d 554 (N.Y.App.Div.1999) ("[I]n claims against professionals, [a] legal duty independent of contractual obligations may be imposed by law as an incident to the parties' relationship. Professionals ... may be subject to tort liability for failure to exercise reasonable care, irrespective of their contractual duties." (quoting Sommer, 79 N.Y.2d at 551, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 593 N.E.2d 1365) (first alteration added; *18 second alteration in original); Robinson Redevelopment Co. v. Anderson, 155 A.D.2d 755, 757, 547 N.Y.S.2d 458 (N.Y.App.Div.1989) ("We conclude that the contractual and professional relationship of plaintiff and defendants gave rise to two distinct wrongs, one contractual and the other grounded in professional malpractice, recoverable at law."); Commerce & Industry Ins. Co. v. Vulcraft, Inc., No. 97 Civ. 2578, 1998 WL 823055, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. Nov.20, 1998) (rejecting the application of the economic loss rule and stating that "[t]he premise for the third-party claim ... is in substance one for professional malpractice, and that obligation is distinct from any contract into which the parties may have entered").

While we recognize that some cases have applied the economic loss rule to bar recovery where the only loss claimed is economic in nature, see County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 728 F.2d 52, 62 (2d Cir.1984), and still others have applied that rule to professional malpractice cases, see Joseph v. David M. Schwarz/Architectural Servs., P.C., 957 F.Supp. 1334, 1339-40 (S.D.N.Y.1997), the better course is to recognize that the rule allows such recovery in the limited class of cases involving liability for the violation of a professional duty. To hold otherwise would in effect bar recovery in many types of malpractice actions. See 17 Vista Fee Assocs., 259 A.D.2d at 83, 693 N.Y.S.2d 554 ("[T]he fact that 17 Vista suffered pecuniary losses only is of no significance in this malpractice claim against a professional. Many types of malpractice actions, such as those against an accountant or attorney, will frequently result in economic loss only." (internal citations omitted); Robinson Redevelopment Co., 155 A.D.2d at 757, 547 N.Y.S.2d 458 (stating that because "[m]ost malpractice claims against professionals 'regularly arise out of a contractual relationship and involve injury to property or pecuniary interests only,' " strict application of the economic loss rule to such claims "would eliminate the availability of malpractice claims against professionals such as architects where the damages are essentially pecuniary in nature") (quoting Video Corp. of Am. v. Frederick Flatto Assoc., Inc., 85 A.D.2d 448, 451-52, 448 N.Y.S.2d 498 (1982)).

Accordingly, we approve of the district court's resolution of this issue.

III. The Calculation of Damages Proximately Flowing From the Malpractice

[11] Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy also argue that even if the recovery sought by TPI is not barred by the economic loss rule, the damages award is based on profits that were never recoverable under real world conditions. TPI argues that the appellants waived this argument by making precisely the opposite contention before the jury--that their energy output estimates were always attainable. TPI points out that although Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy may now object to the jury's calculation of damages, they should have presented those arguments before the jury, not on appeal.

[12][13] The proper measure of damages is a factual question that was properly submitted for resolution by the jury. Thus, the only issue properly before us is whether the jury's calculation of damages is sustainable. The jury heard evidence that the output predictions for the Forestport plant were possible absent the negative impact of the FERC bypass restrictions. It also heard evidence that TPI suffered substantial damages as a result of Dunlevy's and Stetson-Harza's violation of their professional duties. Under the circumstances, it is not for tortfeasors to dispute for the first time on appeal a seemingly reasonable measure of TPI's damages. See Matter of Rothko, 43 N.Y.2d 305, 322-23, 401 N.Y.S.2d 449, 372 N.E.2d 291 (1977); Curiale v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 214 A.D.2d 16, 24-25, 630 N.Y.S.2d 996 (N.Y.App.Div.1995); Cohen v. Hallmark Cards, Inc., 45 N.Y.2d 493, 498-99, 410 N.Y.S.2d 282, 382 N.E.2d 1145 *19 (1978); see also Mirand v. City of New York, 84 N.Y.2d 44, 50-51, 614 N.Y.S.2d 372, 637 N.E.2d 263 (1994) (examining a jury verdict to assess whether it was irrational); Rowe v. Board. of Educ. of Chatham Cent. Sch. Dist., 120 A.D.2d 850, 851, 502 N.Y.S.2d 294 (N.Y.App.Div.1986). It is well established that damages need not be calculated with mathematical precision. See Matter of Rothko, 43 N.Y.2d at 323, 401 N.Y.S.2d 449, 372 N.E.2d 291; Gilroy v. American Broad. Co., 58 A.D.2d 533, 534-35, 395 N.Y.S.2d 658 (1977) ("Where the tort itself is of such a nature as to preclude the ascertainment of the amount of damages with certainty, it would be a perversion of fundamental principles of justice to deny all relief to the injured person.... [I]t will be enough if the evidence show[s] the extent of the damages as a matter of just and reasonable inference, although the result be only approximate.' ") (quoting Story Parchment Co. v. Paterson Co., 282 U.S. 555, 563, 51 S.Ct. 248, 75 L.Ed. 544 (1931)). Accordingly, we find sufficient evidence to support the jury's resolution of this issue.

IV. The Dismissal of the Claims for an Accounting and the Imposition of a Constructive Trust

[14] HII argues that the district court incorrectly dismissed its claims for an accounting and the imposition of a constructive trust and, furthermore, failed to make the findings of fact and conclusions of law required by Rule 52 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. TPI responds that (1) HII cannot raise this issue on appeal after failing to raise it in its post-trial motions; (2) the record supports the district court's decision; and (3) in any event, the standard of review is extremely high--for clear error only.

Implicit in the district court's action was its recognition that once the claims for breach of the joint venture contract failed before the jury, the accounting and constructive trust claims were pointless. The district court's failure to make formal findings of fact and conclusions of law does not inhibit our ability to review the dismissal and is therefore not error. See Devices for Medicine, Inc. v. Boehl, 822 F.2d 1062, 1068 (Fed.Cir.1987) ("The record fully supports each challenged exercise of the district court's discretion, [including the dismissal of certain claims based on a jury's findings as to other issues,] and it was unnecessary for the district court to have stated what is obvious to one with knowledge of the record and the law."); Grover Hill Grain Co. v. Baughman-Oster, Inc., 728 F.2d 784, 792-93 (6th Cir.1984). Moreover, even if we found the district court's action insufficient under Rule 52, we could still review the dismissal to see if it could be affirmed under Rule 50 as a judgment as a matter of law. See Burger v. New York Inst. of Tech., 94 F.3d 830, 835 (2d Cir.1996). Under the facts of this case, that Rule's standard has certainly been met. After the jury's verdict it was clear to all concerned that the accounting and constructive trust claims could not lie. Accordingly, we affirm the district court's rejection of HII's equitable claims and hold that it was not reversible error to do so without making formal findings of fact and law.

V. The Allegedly Improper Presentation of Evidence Regarding Dunlevy's Conflict of Interest

[15][16] Dunlevy and HII argue that the district court erred in allowing the presentation of evidence concerning Dunlevy's alleged conflict of interest between his duties as an employee of Stetson-Harza and as an owner of HII. Dunlevy and HII argue that this was not only error, but highly prejudicial error that requires vacatur of the jury verdict. Given the broad discretion afforded to a trial judge concerning the admission of evidence, see Perry v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 115 F.3d 143, 150 (2d Cir.1997) ("Evidentiary rulings ordinarily will not be overturned absent an abuse of discretion.") (citations omitted), we are not persuaded that the district *20 court erred in deciding to admit this relevant and minimally prejudicial evidence. We also note that even if we assume arguendo that the district court erred in admitting this evidence, we cannot conceive how such error would be so gross as to require us to vacate the jury's verdict and the judgment. See id. (vacatur is only required when the admission of prejudicial evidence likely affected the outcome of the case); In re Martin-Trigona, 760 F.2d 1334, 1344 (2d Cir.1985) (reviewing for manifest error); see also Fed.R.Civ.P. 61.

VI. TPI's Claims for Negligent Misrepresentation, Breach of Contract, and Professional Malpractice with Regard to Adams and Kayuta Lake

A. Negligent Misrepresentation

TPI cross-appeals from the district court's grant of summary judgment to Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy on the negligent misrepresentation claim. TPI argues that the negligent misrepresentation claim is supported by facts showing that (1) Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy owed TPI a duty of care due to a "special relationship"; (2) Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy knew or should have known that their representations were false; (3) Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy knew or should have known that the cross-appellants would rely on those misrepresentations; and (4) the cross-appellants in fact relied on those misrepresentations to their detriment.

In response, Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy contend that the district court correctly concluded that "only 'misrepresentations of present facts' are actionable under a negligent misrepresentation theory." Stetson-Harza's Reply Br. at 24 (quoting Judge Kahn and citing Murray v. Xerox Corp., 811 F.2d 118, 123 (2d Cir.1987)) (emphasis in original). They assert that the alleged negligent misrepresentations only dealt with the sites' expected output and consequently were merely promises about future events. Additionally, Dunlevy argues that the alleged misrepresentations were not negligent (i.e., did not violate a duty of care); that the cross-appellants did not rely on any representations to their detriment; and that Steckler was well aware of the questionable financial viability of Kayuta Lake and Adams, but went ahead because these plants were packaged with the plant that he really wanted, Forestport.

The district court determined that the negligent misrepresentation claim should be dismissed on summary judgment. In its analysis, the court reasoned that the alleged misrepresentations related to future events and were promissory in nature rather than factual, and that therefore these statements could not support a claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law. In support the court cited to U.S. West Financial Services, Inc. v. Tollman, 786 F.Supp. 333, 344 (S.D.N.Y.1992) and Murray, 811 F.2d at 118. The court concluded that "[a]ll of [the] alleged misrepresentations identified by Steckler in his opposition papers [were] promissory in nature and thus insufficient to support this theory of recovery."

[17][18] The district court correctly resolved

this issue. Under New York law, the elements for a negligent misrepresentation claim are that (1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; (2) the defendant made a false representation that he or she should have known was incorrect; (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiff for a serious purpose; (4) the plaintiff intended to rely and act upon it; and (5) the plaintiff reasonably relied on it to his or her detriment. See King v. Crossland Savs. Bank, 111 F.3d 251, 257-58 (2d Cir.1997) (citing Eiseman v. State of New York, 70 N.Y.2d 175, 187, 518 N.Y.S.2d 608, 511 N.E.2d 1128 (1987); International Prods. Co. v. Erie R. Co., 244 N.Y. 331, 338, 155 N.E. 662 (1927)). However, the alleged misrepresentation must be factual in nature and not promissory or relating to future events *21 that might never come to fruition. See Murray, 811 F.2d at 123 ("Promises of future conduct are not actionable as negligent misrepresentations."); Sheth v. New York Life Ins. Co., 709 N.Y.S.2d 74, 75 (N.Y.App.Div.2000) ("The purported misrepresentations relied upon by plaintiffs may not form the basis of a claim for fraudulent and/or negligent misrepresentation since they are conclusory and/or constitute mere puffery, opinions of value or future expectations.") (citations omitted); Bango v. Naughton, 184 A.D.2d 961, 963, 584 N.Y.S.2d 942 (N.Y.App.Div.1992) (negligent misrepresentation claim was properly dismissed for failure to state a claim because the alleged representations were "mere expressions of future expectation") (internal quotation and citation omitted); Margrove Inc. v. Lincoln First Bank of Rochester, 54 A.D.2d 1105, 1107, 388 N.Y.S.2d 958 (N.Y.App.Div.1976) ("The alleged negligent misstatements all relate to promised future conduct, if misstatements they be, and there is a lack of any element of misrepresentation as to an existing material fact so as to come within the doctrine of negligent misrepresentation...."); Glanzer v. Shepard, 233 N.Y. 236, 242, 135 N.E. 275 (1922) (Cardozo, J.) (holding a defendant liable for a negligent misstatement of material existing fact).

[19] In the present case, the negligent misrepresentation claim fails because the energy output predictions were mere promises of future output as opposed to present representations of existing fact. The alleged misrepresentations identified by the district court, relating to the energy output predictions, are just the sort of representations about future events that cannot support a claim for negligent misrepresentation. [FN1]

FN1. Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d 450 (1996), relied on by the cross-appellants, is inapposite. First, although Kimmell dealt with projections, those projections were calculated based on known and existing utility rates that the defendant applied incorrectly. Second, the projections at issue in Kimmell dealt with energy cogeneration plants already in existence, in contrast to our case, where the plants had not yet been built at the time of the alleged misrepresentation. Third, the issue before the Court of Appeals was whether the relationship between the defendant and plaintiff would support a negligent misrepresentation claim, not whether the alleged statements qualified as representations of existing fact or future promises. Fourth, although the Appellate Division in Kimmell found that future predictions/projections could qualify as the basis for a negligent misrepresentation claim, see Kimmell v. Schaefer, 224 A.D.2d 217, 218, 637 N.Y.S.2d 147 (1996), that finding is contrary to the great weight of authority. See supra.

[20] Additionally, even if Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy made misrepresentations sufficient to support such a claim, TPI possessed adequate knowledge that the project's financial success was unlikely and in any event it should have known not to rely on the energy output estimates. [FN2] Steckler, the key player in TPI, had already been active in the real estate business in Canada and had even purchased a property containing a hydroelectric power plant. Moreover, Mr. Flichter of BayBank, whom Steckler consulted about financing the acquisition of these plants, warned Steckler that Adams was too remote. There is also evidence that TPI went ahead with the Kayuta Lake and Adams plants in hopes of scoring a payday with the other two plants that were bundled with these two known losers. For example, Steckler admitted that "[t]he Forestport site was the prize...."

FN2. We note that the district court was very generous to construe the amended complaint filed by TPI, Marina Development, and Steckler as encompassing a negligent misrepresentation claim.

Consequently, the reliance element of this claim is lacking. See Schlaifer Nance & Co. v. Estate of Andy Warhol, 119 F.3d 91, 101 (2d Cir.1997) ("Generally, sophisticated businessmen's reliance on the misrepresentations of a party is unreasonable when the businessmen are engaged in major transactions with access to critical information *22 and fail to take advantage of that access.") (internal quotation and brackets omitted); Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein, 33 F.3d 159, 164 (2d Cir.1994) (If the plaintiff "has the means of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth ... of the representation, ... he will not be heard to complain" (citation omitted)); Grumman Allied Indus., Inc. v. Rohr Indus., Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 737-38 (2d Cir.1984) (stating that New York courts are disinclined to entertain negligent misrepresentation claims when business persons fail to take advantage of access to critical information).

Under the circumstances, we reject the negligent misrepresentation claim and affirm the district court's decision.

B. Breach of Contract and Professional Malpractice

[21] TPI also cross-appeals from the district court's judgment as a matter of law finding no merit in the breach of contract and professional malpractice claims with respect to Adams and Kayuta Lake. However, we find TPI's argument unconvincing. TPI presented no expert evidence concerning professional malpractice at these two sites and, accordingly, the district court correctly dismissed these claims for lack of proof. [FN3] TPI also failed to establish a breach by Dunlevy or Stetson-Harza of any contract regarding these two plants. TPI's service contracts with Dunlevy and Stetson-Harza simply did not include a contractual guarantee that any particular site would produce a particular amount of energy. See J.A. 1289-90.

FN3. We note that the trial court specifically asked TPI's counsel whether TPI's expert would provide any testimony regarding liability at Adams, Kayuta Lake, and Cranberry Lake. Counsel responded, "No, your Honor. And I'm not going to offer any damages proof." Tr. 1892.

VII. Prejudgment Interest

TPI argues that the district court erred in failing to amend the judgment to award prejudgment interest. TPI argues that under New York law, it is entitled to prejudgment interest as a matter of right. Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy both contend that prejudgment interest is inappropriate here because such an award might improperly include interest on future damages and any attempt to separate out the prejudgment interest based on when damages accrued would necessarily result in "pure speculation." Stetson-Harza Br. at 22 (internal quotation omitted).

[22][23] TPI is correct that New York law instructs courts to award prejudgment interest as a matter of right when a defendant's "act or omission depriv[es] or otherwise interfer[es] with title to, or possession or enjoyment of, property." N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 5001(a) (McKinney 2000); see Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 717 F.2d 683, 693-94 (2d Cir.1983); Spector v. Mermelstein, 485 F.2d 474, 481-82 (2d Cir.1973). While Stetson-Harza and Dunlevy properly raise concerns about an award of prejudgment interest based on future damages, see Gordon v. Matthew Bender & Co., 186 F.3d 183, 186 (2d Cir.1999), we are confident that the district court will ably resolve these issues on remand. This may be done for instance by separately calculating prejudgment interest for each year that damages accrue/accrued or by calculating interest from a reasonable intermediate date. See, e.g., Manhattan Fuel Co. v. New England Petroleum Corp., 439 F.Supp. 959, 971 (S.D.N.Y.1977), aff'd 578 F.2d 1368 (2d Cir.1978) (calculating interest per month based on when the action for damages accrued); Falcone v. EDO Corp., 141 A.D.2d 498, 500, 529 N.Y.S.2d 123 (N.Y.App.Div.1988) (computing interest under § 5001(b) from a "reasonable date"). Difficulties in calculation do not warrant ignoring the mandate of the state's statute. See Cruz v. Local Union Number 3, 34 F.3d 1148, 1157 (2d Cir.1994) (difficulty in calculating backpay under Title VII should not result in the denial of a reasonable estimate); Falcone, *23 141 A.D.2d at 500, 529 N.Y.S.2d 123. See also Slicker v. Jackson, 215 F.3d 1225, 1229-30 (11th Cir.2000) (compensatory damages for violation of constitutional rights may be awarded despite difficulty in calculating the monetary value of injury) (citing Memphis Community Sch. Dist. v. Stachura, 477 U.S. 299, 307, 106 S.Ct. 2537, 91 L.Ed.2d 249 (1986)).

VIII. TPI's Claims for Breach of Contract with Respect to Forestport and Ogdensburg

In light of our resolution of TPI's claim for professional malpractice with respect to these two hydroelectric power plants, we need not resolve its contentions in this portion of the cross-appeal. See TPI Br. at 56 n.18 ("To the extent this Court affirms TPI's damage award on its malpractice claim, this issue may be academic.").

CONCLUSION

In accordance with the foregoing, we affirm in part and vacate and remand in part for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to Top)

TRAFALGAR POWER, INC., Appellee/Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY, Stetson-Harza, Appellants/Cross-Appellees. HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Appellant, v. TRAFALGAR POWER, INC., et. al., Appellees., 2000 WL 34003862 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 March 15, 2000), Appellant Dunlevy's Final Brief (including citations to Joint Appendix)

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant, Lawrence TAFT, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant, v. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler, Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Plaintiff-Appellee-Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY and Stetson-Harza, Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Appellees., 2000 WL 34003867 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 March 17, 2000), Brief of Defendant-Appellant-Cross-Appellee Stetson-Harza

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant, Lawrence TAFT, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant, v. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler, Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Plaintiff-Appellee-Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY and Stetson-Harza, Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Appellees., 2000 WL 34003866 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 March 20, 2000), Brief of Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant Hydro Investors, Inc.

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant, Lawrence TAFT, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant, v. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler, Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees. TRAFALGAR POWER, INC., Plaintiffs-Appellee-Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY and Stetson-Harza, Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Appellees., 2000 WL 34003864 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 May 9, 2000), Reply Brief of Defendant-Appellant-Cross-Appellee Neal Dunlevy

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant, Lawrence TAFT, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant, v. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler, Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees. TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Plaintiff-Appellee-Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY and Stetson-Harza, Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Appellees., 2000 WL 34003865

(Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 May 16, 2000), Reply
Brief of Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant Hydro Investors, Inc.

HYDRO INVESTORS, INC., Plaintiff-
Counter-Defendant-Appellant, Lawrence
TAFT, Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant, v.
TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Marina
Development, Inc., and Arthur Steckler,
Defendants-Counter-Claimants-Appellees.
TRAFALGAR POWER INC., Plaintiff-
Appellee-Cross-Appellant, v. Neal DUNLEVY and Stetson-Harza, Defendants-Appellants-
Cross-Appellees., 2000 WL 34003863
(Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 May 17, 2000), Reply
and Opposition to Cross-Appeal of Defendant-Appellant-Cross-Appellee Stetson-Harza

227 F.3d 8

END OF DOCUMENT

44

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

I.L.G.W.U. NATIONAL RETIREMENT FUND; Edgar Romney and Arnold Harris and their successors as trustees of the I.L.G.W.U.

National Retirement Fund, Plaintiffs,

v.

CUDDLECOAT, INC.; Warren Corporation;
Warren Leasing Corporation and Loro
Piana & C., Inc., Defendants.

WARREN CORPORATION; Warren Leasing Corporation and Loro Piana & C., Inc., Third-Party Plaintiffs,

v.

NEW YORK COAT, Suit, Dress, Rainwear &
Allied Workers Union, Local 89-22-1,
Unite, AFL-CIO and Lewis, Greenwald,
Clifton & Nikolaidis, P.C., Third-Party
Defendants.

No. 01 Civ. 4019(BSJ).

March 11, 2004.

Opinion

JONES, J.

*1 Before the Court are Third-Party Defendants' motion to dismiss Third-Party Plaintiff's Complaint pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 9(b) and 12(b)(6) and Plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration of this Court's Order vacating the previously entered default judgment against Defendant Cuddlecoat, Inc. ("Cuddlecoat"). For the reasons set forth below, Third-Party Defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part and Plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration is DENIED.

BACKGROUND

Defendant Warren Corporation ("Warren") is a private company engaged principally in the manufacture of fabrics and clothing. Defendant Cuddlecoat, until 1996, was engaged in the business of finishing fabrics and manufacturing clothing. Certain of Cuddlecoat's employees were members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Cuddlecoat was required to make payments to Plaintiff I.L.G.W.U. National Retirement Fund ("the Fund") pursuant to the Employee Retirement and Income Security Act ("ERISA").

Cuddlecoat was a customer of Warren and entered into a series of security and other agreements with Warren. In 1995, Warren commenced suit against Cuddlecoat, seeking to foreclose on its security. In January 1996, while the suit between Warren and Cuddlecoat was still pending, an involuntary Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition was filed against Cuddlecoat. The Fund and the New York Coat, Suit Dress, Rainwear & Allied Workers Union, Local 89-221-1, UNITE, AFL-CIO ("the Union") each filed separate claims in the bankruptcy proceeding.

After the bankruptcy petition was filed, Warren and Cuddlecoat settled their individual litigation in an agreement under which Warren became the sole shareholder of Cuddlecoat. The timing and operation of that agreement remain in dispute between the parties to this action. The committee of unsecured creditors brought an adversary proceeding in the bankruptcy action seeking to hold Warren responsible for various creditors' claims against Cuddlecoat. Warren negotiated a settlement of the creditors committee's claims, and exchanged mutual releases with the Union. Warren did not obtain a release from the Fund, and the Union's release did not name the Fund as an entity included in the release.

Warren alleges that it did not obtain a specific release from the Fund because David Greenwald, an associate with Defendant Lewis, Greenwald, Clifton & Nikolaidis, P.C. ("Lewis Greenwald"), stated that the Union's release would bind the Fund. Lewis Greenwald represented the Union in the settlement negotiations. Cuddlecoat was formally dissolved on September 23, 1998 and the bankruptcy proceeding was dismissed eleven months later.

In 2001, the Fund filed this action seeking to recover money owed to the Fund pursuant to ERISA. [FN1] In response, Warren asserted a counter-claim against the Fund and filed a third-party action against the Union and Lewis Greenwald. Defendant Cuddlecoat failed to answer Plaintiff's Complaint and failed to appear or otherwise move with respect to the Complaint. Plaintiffs moved for default judgment against Cuddlecoat on or about October 17, 2001. The Court granted the motion for default judgment on October 25, 2001.

FN1. Plaintiffs are seeking to recover for essentially the same claim they brought against Cuddlecoat in the bankruptcy proceeding--a claim for withdrawal liability pursuant to ERISA.

*2 On October 26, 2001, the Court received a letter from Defendant Warren, asking that the Court either deny Plaintiff's motion for default judgment against Cuddlecoat or, in the alternative, grant Warren an extension of time to answer on Cuddlecoat's behalf. Upon learning that the Court had granted Plaintiffs' motion for default judgment, Warren moved, pursuant to Local Rule 6.3, for reconsideration of the default judgment entered against Cuddlecoat. In a telephone conference on January 25, 2002, the Court granted Warren's motion and vacated the default judgment. Plaintiffs now move for reconsideration of that decision.

In or about March 2002, Warren moved pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 15 and 21 to file and serve an amended answer, counterclaim, and third-party complaint. Plaintiffs opposed this motion. In a Memorandum and Order, dated June 3, 2002, Magistrate Judge Eaton granted the motion. Third-Party Plaintiffs now move to dismiss Warren's Third-Party Complaint.

DISCUSSION

I. MOTION TO DISMISS

Warren's Third-Party Complaint ("Warren Complaint") brings claims against the Union and Lewis Greenwald for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and civil conspiracy. Essentially, Warren claims that the Third-Party Defendants--the Union and their counsel Lewis Greenwald--purposely misrepresented that the Settlement Agreement and releases resolved all claims by the Fund. The Warren Complaint also claims that the Union breached the 1997 Settlement Agreement with Warren by failing to provide a release for all "affiliates"--i.e. the Fund--as required by the Settlement Agreement.

A. Negligent Misrepresentation

"A claim for negligent misrepresentation can only stand where there is a special relationship of trust or confidence, which creates a duty for one party to impart correct information to another, the information given was false, and there was reasonable reliance upon the information given." Hudson River Club v. Consolidated Edison Co., 275 A.D.2d 218, 220 (1st Dep't 2000). Warren relies on the New York Court of Appeal's decision in Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257 (1996), to argue that discovery must be conducted to determine whether a non-fiduciary relationship existed between Warren and the Third-Party Defendants that nonetheless gave rise to a duty to speak truthfully in the course of the settlement negotiations. [FN2] However, Dallas Aerospace, Inc. v. CIS Air Corp., 352 F.3d 775 (2d Cir.2003), explains that Kimmell did not eliminate the requirement of a "special relationship" for a negligent misrepresentation tort action.

FN2. In making this argument, Warren also relies upon Magistrate Judge Eaton's June 3, 2002 Memorandum and Order allowing Warren to file its Third-Party Complaint, in which Magistrate Judge Eaton noted that Kimmell v. Schaefer did not include the word "fiduciary" in describing the relationship between parties that may give rise to a duty to speak with care. However, Magistrate Judge Eaton's Memorandum and Order pre-dated the Second Circuit's Opinion in Dallas Aerospace, Inc. v. CIS Air Corp., 352 F.3d 775, 788 -789 (2d Cir.2003), which has clarified that Kimmell did not eliminate the basic requirement of a "special relationship" for a negligent misrepresentation tort action.

[Plaintiff] urges that Kimmell enunciated a new standard, exacting liability whenever the relationship between the parties is "such that in morals and good conscience the one has the right to rely upon the other for information." This is a misreading of the case. The court did not depart from the traditional understanding that "liability for negligent misrepresentation has been imposed only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party." Indeed, the assertedly "new" standard stated in Kimmell was a quotation from a New York Court of Appeals decision that preceded it by seven decades. See Int'l Prods. Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., 244 N.Y. 331, 155 N.E. 662, 664 (1927). Thus, Kimmell can hardly be understood to be novel or to have shifted New York law. In sum, Kimmell, which has since been limited by the New York Court of Appeals, see, e.g., Murphy v. Kuhn, 90 N.Y.2d 266, 660 N.Y.S.2d 371, 682 N.E.2d 972, 974-76 (1997), does nothing to undermine the basic requirement of a "special relationship" for a negligent misrepresentation tort action.

*3 Dallas Aerospace, Inc. v. CIS Air Corp., 352 F.3d 775, 788-789 (2d Cir.2003) (some internal citations omitted).

The "special relationship" required for a negligent misrepresentation tort has been described as "either actual privity of contract between the parties or a relationship so close as to approach that of privity." Prudential Ins. Co. v. Dewey Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 382 (1992). Warren has not alleged the existence of such a relationship, therefore the claim of negligent misrepresentation is DISMISSED.

B. Fraud Claim

In order to state a claim for fraud, a plaintiff must allege: (1) a material misrepresentation of fact, (2) made with knowledge of its falsity, (3) with intent to deceive, (4) justifiable reliance, and (5) damages. Mergler v. Crystal Properties Assoc., Ltd., 179 A.D.2d 177, 181 (1st Dep't 1992). Here, Warren cannot show, as a matter of law, that it justifiably relied on any statements by opposing counsel, Lewis Greenwald, regarding the binding effect of the Settlement Agreement and the releases on the Fund. Therefore the motion to dismiss is GRANTED.

"[I]t is a well-settled principle that neither a party nor his attorney may justifiably rely on the legal opinion or conclusions of his or her adversary's counsel." Aglira v. Julien & Schlesinger, P.C., 214 A.D.2d 178, 185 (1st Dep't 1995); see also Karsanow v. Kuehlewein, 232 A.D.2d 458, 458-459 (2d Dep't 1996) ("plaintiffs' allegation that they consented to the inclusion of a non-recourse clause in the extension agreements because [defendant's attorney] assured them that such a provision was 'customary' is insufficient to establish a claim for fraud. The plaintiffs could not reasonably rely on the legal opinions or conclusions of their adversary's counsel.").

In response, Warren argues that Kimmell v. Schaefer recognized that "a duty to speak truthfully may arise in a commercial context and in relationships that are not 'traditional' fiduciary relationships." (Warren Mem. at 6-7). Warren argues that, in light of Kimmell, discovery will be required to determine whether a duty to speak truthfully existed between Warren and the Third-Party Defendants. Warren appears to argue that, if such a duty existed, Warren was justified in relying upon Lewis Greenwald's statements. (Warren Mem. at 7). However, as explained above, the Second Circuit has examined and rejected Warren's interpretation of Kimmell. See Dallas Aerospace, Inc. v. CIS Air Corp., 352 F.3d 775, 788-789 (2d Cir.2003). Therefore, Kimmell does not alter the established New York law that neither a party nor his attorney may justifiably rely on the legal opinion or conclusions of his or her adversary's counsel. The motion to dismiss Warren's fraud claim is GRANTED.

C. Civil Conspiracy

It is well settled under New York law that there is no substantive tort of conspiracy. See Goldstein v. Siegel, 19 A.D.2d 489, 493 (1st Dep't 1963). "In order to state a claim for conspiracy, therefore, there must be allegations of an independent actionable tort." Antonios A. Alevizopoulos & Assocs. v. Comcast Int'l Holdings, Inc., 100 F.Supp.2d 178, 187-188 (S.D.N.Y.2000). Here, the Court has dismissed all of Warren's claims that sound in tort, therefore, the claim of civil conspiracy must also be DISMISSED. See Demalco, Ltd. v. Feltner, 588 F.Supp. 1277, 1278 (S.D.N.Y.1984) ("the gravamen of a claim of conspiracy is the underlying independent tort, and if the independent tort has not been adequately pleaded, the conspiracy claim will also fail").

D. Breach of Contract

*4 Warren alleges that the Union breached the Settlement Agreement by failing to deliver a release that complied with paragraph 6 of the agreement. Paragraph 6 states that:

Simultaneously with the execution of this Agreement, each of the Secured Creditor and the Union will execute and deliver mutual releases (the form and substance of each of which has been mutually agreed to by the parties) of any and all claims or causes of action that any party to this Settlement ever had, now has or hereafter can, shall or may have, against any other such party (including claims by or against each such parties' affiliates, subsidiaries, officer, directors, employees, agents representatives, controlling entities, legal and other retained professionals) for, upon, or by reason of any matter, cause or thing whatsoever from the beginning of the World to the date of this Agreement.

(Warren Compl. Ex. B) (emphases added).

As Judge Eaton explained in his June 3, 2002 Memorandum and Order, this claim turns upon the meaning of the word "affiliates," as used in paragraph 6, and upon the process by which the word "affiliates" was omitted from the releases. As there appear to be factual issues regarding this claim, the motion to dismiss is DENIED.

II. Motion for Reconsideration

Plaintiffs move for reconsideration of this Court's Order, dated January 25, 2002 ("January 25 Order"), vacating the default judgment previously entered against Defendant Cuddlecoat. Plaintiffs contend that the Court overlooked controlling legal authority, which allows the entry of default judgment against a dissolved corporation, when issuing the January 25 Order. However, the Court did not base its decision to vacate the default judgment on the mere fact that Cuddlecoat was a dissolved corporation. While the Court did consider the dissolved status of Cuddlecoat, the Court explicitly stated that its decision was "based on considerations in all of the letters that I have seen." (1/25/02 Tr. at 4).

Rule 55(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that "for good cause shown the court may set aside an entry of default and, if a judgment by default has been entered, may likewise set it aside in accordance with Rule 60(b)." Relief from default is to be granted at the discretion of the court upon consideration of the individual circumstances of the case and the credibility and good faith of the parties. See Enron Oil Corp. v. Diakuhara, 10 F.3d 90, 95 (2d Cir.1993). In deciding a motion to vacate a default judgment, the Court focuses on three considerations with regard to the meaning of "good cause": (1) the willfulness of the default; (2) the potential prejudice to the adversary; and (3) the presentation of a meritorious defense. See In re Chalasani, 92 F.3d 1300, 1307 (2d Cir.1996). Other factors that may be considered include whether the failure to follow a rule of procedure was a mistake made in good faith and whether the entry of default would bring about an unfair result. See Enron Oil, 10 F.3d at 96.

*5 Here, the Court does not believe that Cuddlecoat's default was willful, but rather it was directly attributable to its dissolved status. The vacatur of the default judgment does not prejudice Plaintiffs, [FN3] and permitting Warren to answer or retain counsel on Cuddlecoat's behalf would allow for the presentation of Cuddlecoat's possible defenses and thus a decision on the merits. To the extent that Plaintiffs may wish to argue that Warren-Cuddlecoat's dissolving shareholder--may not answer or retain counsel on Cuddlecoat's behalf, the Court directs Plaintiffs to submit supplemental briefing, limited to this issue, no later than 30 days from the date of this Opinion. Warren's response, if any, shall be filed no later than two weeks after any brief submitted by Plaintiffs. Lastly, the Court has reviewed the submissions by the parties and is convinced that one or more of Warren's defenses may be meritorious.

FN3. Plaintiffs argue that the vacatur will result in prejudice because, "without such a default judgment, the Fund is unable to conduct the post-judgment discovery necessary to satisfy its statutorily imposed fiduciary duty to the Fund's beneficiaries." (Pl. Mem. at 6-7). This argument is not persuasive. Plaintiff's will be permitted to conduct post-judgment discovery in the event they obtain judgment on the merits. See Davis v. Musler, 713 F.2d 907, 916 (2d Cir.1983) ("delay alone is not a sufficient basis for establishing prejudice.... Rather, it must be shown that delay will result in the loss of evidence, create increased difficulties of discovery, or provide greater opportunities for fraud and collusion.").

The Court finds that there was "good cause" to vacate the previously entered default judgment. Moreover, the Second Circuit strongly prefers dispute determination on the merits and directs district courts to resolve any doubts regarding vacatur of a default in favor of a trial on the merits. See Shah v. New York State Dept. of Civil Service, 168 F.3d 610, 615 (2d Cir.1999). Therefore, Plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration is DENIED.

CONCLUSION

Third Party Defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED with respect to Warren's fraud, negligent misrepresentation and civil conspiracy claims and DENIED with respect to Warren's breach of contract claim. Plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration of the Order vacating default judgment against Cuddlecoat is DENIED. Plaintiffs' brief on the issue of whether Warren may answer or retain counsel on Cuddlecoat's behalf must be submitted within 30 days from the date of this Opinion. Warren's response, if any, is due two weeks thereafter.

The parties are further directed to inform the Court in writing of the status of this action no later than 30 days from the date of this Opinion.

SO ORDERED:

2004 WL 444071 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

45

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

In re AHT CORPORATION, et al., Debtor.
AHT Corporation, Plaintiff,

v.

BioShield Technologies, Inc., AHT Acquisition
Corp., Timothy C. Moses, Jacques
Elfersy, Scott Parliament, and Geoffrey Faux,
Defendants.

No. M-47B(CM).
Bankruptcy No. 00-14446(ASH).
Adversary No. CIV. 00-2935.

April 4, 2003.

Corporate debtor that was forced to file for Chapter 11 relief after merger that it had negotiated with another corporation failed to take place brought adversary proceeding against this other corporation and its officers for fraudulent and/or negligent misrepresentations allegedly made during merger discussions. On defendants' motion for summary judgment, the Bankruptcy Court, Adlai S. Hardin, Jr., J., entered proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law recommending that motion be granted. On ne novo review, the District Court, McMahan, J., held that: (1) debtor, a sophisticated business enterprise that was represented by both general and outside counsel in its prepetition merger negotiations with other company, failed to show that it justifiably relied on misrepresentations allegedly made by other company's representatives that all of its shareholders were on board in supporting merger; and (2) other company involved in arms-length negotiations with debtor over proposed merger did not stand in any special relationship to debtor, of kind required to render it liable under New York law for any negligent misrepresentations made during merger discussions.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Corporations 582
101k582

Chapter 11 debtor, a sophisticated business enterprise that was represented by both general and outside counsel in its prepetition merger negotiations with other company, failed to show that it justifiably relied on misrepresentations allegedly made by other company's representatives that all of its shareholders were on board in supporting merger, and could not recover in fraud when such support failed to materialize and merger did not proceed, where debtor was aware that co-founder and 21% shareholder of this other company was leaving corporate management due to his disagreement over direction that company was taking, that co-founder and 21% shareholder had not participated in single negotiating session or important event in connection with merger, and that other company refused to give debtor a shareholder voting agreement, such that no shareholder was legally bound to vote in favor of merger; under the circumstances, debtor should have made direct inquiry to ascertain whether all shareholders supported merger, and its failure to do so precluded any finding of justifiable reliance.

[2] Fraud 20
184k20

To prevail on fraud claim under New York law, plaintiff must show that its reliance on defendant's misstatement was justifiable under all the circumstances.

[3] Corporations 582
101k582

Having failed to demonstrate that it justifiably relied upon misrepresentations allegedly made during merger discussions between itself and another corporation, as required to establish any actionable fraud under New York law, debtor could not recover on its claim against third party for aiding and abetting this fraud.

[4] Fraud 30
184k30

Under New York law, for plaintiff to prevail on claim of aiding and abetting fraud, he/she must establish three things: (1) that some third party perpetrated a fraud; (2) that defendant had actual knowledge of existence of fraudulent scheme; and (3) that defendant provided substantial assistance to third party in advancing the underlying fraud.

[5] Corporations 335
101k335

Mere fact that co-founder and 21% shareholder of corporation involved in prepetition merger negotiations with Chapter 11 debtor had continued to do some work for company after resigning from its board of directors, by advising it on patent, technological and scientific matters, was insufficient to raise inference as to his knowledge of fraudulent misrepresentations allegedly made during merger negotiations, as required to hold him liable for aiding and abetting fraud, especially where he played no part in these negotiations.

[6] Fraud 30
184k30

Under New York law, in order to adequately plead scienter required for an aiding and abetting fraud claim, plaintiff must allege sufficient facts to support strong inference of fraudulent intent: (1) by alleging facts showing motive for participating in fraudulent scheme and clear opportunity to do so; or (2) by identifying circumstances indicative of conscious behavior.

[7] Fraud 30
184k30

Under New York law, ordinary economic motives are insufficient to support the scienter element of an aiding and abetting fraud claim.

[8] Courts 99(3)
106k99(3)

Prior order denying defendants' motion to dismiss complaint merely established that debtor would be given opportunity to present evidence in support of its claims, not that it would succeed in doing so, and did not preclude court under law of the case doctrine from subsequently entering summary judgment in defendants' favor.

[9] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, in order to prevail on negligent misrepresentation theory, plaintiff must establish that defendant had duty, based on special relationship, to give correct information to plaintiff, and that plaintiff reasonably relied to its detriment on false information provided by defendant.

[10] Corporations 582
101k582

Chapter 11 debtor, a sophisticated business enterprise that was represented by both general and outside counsel in its prepetition merger negotiations with other company, failed to show that it reasonably relied on representations allegedly made by other company's representatives that all of its shareholders were on board in supporting merger, and could not recover on negligent misrepresentation theory when such support failed to materialize and merger did not proceed, where debtor was aware that co-founder and 21% shareholder of this other company was leaving corporate management due to his disagreement over direction that company was taking, that he had not participated in single negotiating session or important event in connection with merger, and that other company refused to give debtor a shareholder voting agreement, such that no shareholder was legally bound to vote for merger; debtor's failure, under the circumstances, to make any direct inquiry to ascertain where shareholders stood precluded a finding of reasonable reliance.

[11] Corporations 582
101k582

Other corporation involved in arms-length negotiations with company over proposed merger, during which both companies were represented by their own attorneys and financial advisers, did not stand in any special relationship to first company, of kind required to render it liable under New York law for any negligent misrepresentations made during merger discussions.

[12] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, liability for negligent misrepresentation is imposed only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in special position of confidence and trust with injured party.

*736 Andrew D. Manitsky, Gravel and Shea, Burlington, VT and Tracy L. Klestadt, Klestadt & Winters, LLP, New York, NY, for Plaintiff-Appellant.

Fred D. Weinstein, Kurzman Eisenberg Corbin Lever & Goodman, LLP, White Plains, NY, for Defendant-Appellee Timothy C. Moses.

Theodore L. Hecht, Layton Brooks & Hecht LLP, New York, NY, for Defendant-Appellee Jacques Elfersy.

Mark S. Tulis, Oxman Tulis Kirkpatrick Wyatt & Geiger, White Plains, NY, for Defendant-Appellee Scott Parliament.

DECISION AND ORDER GRANTING INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
DISMISSING COUNTS IV, V AND VI

MCMAHON, District Judge.

This matter comes before me on plaintiff-debtor's appeal from the proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law prepared by The Hon. Adlai S. Hardin, U.S.B.J., on a motion for summary judgment by defendants Timothy Moses, Jacques Elfersy and Scott Parliament. The Bankruptcy Court heard the motion, but did not determine it, as the proceeding against these defendants did not raise "core" claims. [FN1] This Court reviews Judge Hardin's proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law (F & C) in light of the objections lodged thereto pursuant to Bankr.Rule 9033. [FN2] Review by the district court is de novo, and I have the power to accept, reject or modify the proposed findings of fact or conclusions of law. I also have the power to hear further evidence--which in this case is entirely unnecessary--and to recommit the matter to Judge Hardin. Bankr.Rule 9033(d).

FN1. Judge Hardin ruled that the claims against the individual defendants in this adversary proceeding were not core claims. (F & C at 5-8) AHT does not object to this ruling. I, therefore, adopt Judge Hardin's analysis on the point.

FN2. Judge Hardin made his findings of fact and conclusions of law last July. Unfortunately, the Clerk of the Court erred in sending the objections to the wrong judge--Judge Conner, not Judge McMahon--and until Judge Conner's chambers discovered the error (which was quite recently) no one was aware that objections had been lodged to Judge Hardin's ruling. This accounts for the inordinate delay in ruling on the objections.

The Court has reviewed Judge Hardin's proposed findings and conclusion, as well as the objections lodged thereto by AHT, the opposition to the objections filed by each of the moving defendants, and AHT's reply to those opposition papers. Upon de novo consideration of the entire record, I conclude that the defendants' motion for summary judgment should be granted, on *737 the ground that plaintiff has not raised a genuine issue of material fact concerning justifiable reliance, thus entitling defendants to judgment as a matter of law. FED. R. CIV. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986).

While there are a number of factual disputes raised by the papers, the material facts of this matter are largely undisputed. Though I modify Judge Hardin's findings in some minor respects, the parties will find that they are largely intact. Like Judge Hardin, I draw my findings of fact from the Complaint, AHT's "Statement of Fact" contained in the Joint PreTrial Order, and documents relied on by AHT in opposing summary judgment. In all cases, the facts are viewed most favorably to AHT, the non-moving party. United States v. Diebold Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655, 82 S.Ct. 993, 8 L.Ed.2d 176 (1962); Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986); Leberman v. John Blair & Co., 880 F.2d 1555, 1559 (2d Cir.1989).

Findings of Fact

AHT is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in Tarrytown, New York. AHT was "a national provider of internet-based clinical e-commerce among physicians, other healthcare providers, and healthcare organizations," which focuses on automating laboratory and prescription transactions--two of the most frequent clinical transactions initiated by physicians.

During the summer of 1999, AHT sought potential merger partners and retained a financial advisor, which contacted twenty two potential acquirers for AHT. Three parties, including defendant BioShield, submitted preliminary indications of interest.

BioShield is a Georgia corporation which, in 1999, began an expansion of its business operations by creating a new subsidiary known as "eMD," an internet project involving pharmaceutical healthcare. BioShield was co-founded in 1995 by individual defendants Moses and Elfersy. At all relevant times, Moses was the President and Chief Executive Officer of BioShield and a member of its Board of Directors. Until mid-2000, Elfersy was co-chairman of the Board, Senior Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer. In addition, Moses and Elfersy were principal stockholders of BioShield, holding 20% and 21.6% of the company's shares, respectively.

Defendant Parliament was the Chief Financial Officer of BioShield from February 2000 until December 2000. He acted as one of the primary negotiators on behalf of BioShield in connection with the transaction that underlies this lawsuit.

On May 3, 2000, Dr. Jonathon T. Edelson, AHT's Chairman, President and CEO, and Jeffrey M. Sauerhoff, its Chief Financial Officer, spoke with representatives from BioShield, including Moses and Parliament. Two days later, the parties executed a mutual non-disclosure agreement designed to facilitate the exchange of non-public financial information.

In connection with the merger negotiations, AHT was represented, not only by Edelson and Sauerhoff, but by its General Counsel, Eddy Friedfeld; its outside counsel, the firm of O'Sullivan, Graev & Karabell (now known as O'Sullivan LLP); its Chief Information Officer, Robert Alger; and its investment bank, Chase H & Q.

In connection with the merger negotiations, BioShield was represented by Moses, Parliament, and Gruntal & Co. Elfersy *738 did not participate in any of the merger negotiations. He did not have any direct communication with any representative of AHT or make any personal representation to any representative of AHT about any subject touching on the merger.

The merger negotiations were conducted against a background of AHT's financial difficulties. During the period between March 31 and June 30, 2000, AHT's shareholder equity decreased by almost 50%, due in significant part to operating losses incurred by AHT during that quarter. From the earliest meetings, the parties openly discussed AHT's limited cash resources, which was the reason it was seeking a merger partner.

On May 12, 2000, BioShield sent a letter, signed by Moses, containing an initial, non-binding indication of interest in purchasing AHT at a price of $3.50 to $5 per share. The letter advised that, "[t]his preliminary indication of interest has been vetted with the board of BioShield ..., which has approved the submission of this letter to you" The letter advised AHT to communicate with BioShield through Moses, Parliament or Roger Kahn of Gruntal & Co.

Further meetings followed, and BioShield conducted due diligence. On June 8, 2000, after reviewing certain non-public information, BioShield indicated that it would pay only $1.25 per share for AHT's stock. AHT rejected that offer as too low. Following further negotiations, and on June 12, 2000, BioShield made a third offer to pay $1.75 per share in a stock, or $20 million, in a stock rather than cash deal. The $20 million set price meant that, if BioShield's stock price fell following execution of the Merger Agreement, AHT shareholders would receive more shares of BioShield stock.

By June 18 the parties were exchanging drafts of a merger agreement. As is customary in these situations, they haggled over terms, and each side asked for inclusions that the other was not prepared to give. BioShield sought a "due diligence out" pursuant to which it could cancel the deal following execution of the Merger Agreement if its review of AHT's financial statements caused it to change its mind. AHT refused to agree to such a term.

AHT for its part wanted some assurance that if it went forward, the merger was likely to close. It asked that BioShield management and shareholders enter into a "voting agreement," which would bind them to vote their shares in favor of the merger. BioShield refused to agree to such a term.

It is the circumstances of that refusal that gives rise to this lawsuit.

On or about June 28 (the day before the Merger Agreement was finalized and approved by both sides), as the parties were in final negotiations, BioShield filed a Form 8-K with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), disclosing that "Jacques Elfersy has announced his intention to semi-retire from both BioShield Technologies, Inc and EMD.com [Electronic Medical Distribution, Inc.] ..., thus tendering his resignation as on officer of both companies." The background to this announcement was as follows: on June 21, 2000, at a meeting of BioShield's Board, a motion was made to elect Moses as sole Chairman of the company. Elfersy, who had no advance notice of the motion, said, "You know what? If that's what you want to do, that's fine." Without further ado, he left the meeting (accompanied by another director) and did not return. Moses was elected the sole Chairman, and the Board adopted a resolution terminating Elfersy's employment.

Elfersy immediately hired an attorney to negotiate the terms of any continuing relationship he was to have with the company.
*739 The record does not disclose that he submitted a resignation from the Board of Directors at that time, either orally or in writing, so he was technically a member of the Board during the period June 28-30, 2000. I reject AHT's suggestion that walking out of a Board meeting in a fit of pique (justified or not) is the same thing as tendering a resignation. However, Elfersy by his own admission did not "act as a board member" after he left the room on June 21. In particular, he did not attend the Board meeting at which the AHT merger was considered.

AHT representatives were aware of the filing of the Form 8-K. Indeed, on June 29--the day that both companies' boards met to consider the Merger Agreement--Edelson met with Moses and was told that Elfersy had resigned as an officer of the corporation because of disagreement over the direction of BioShield's business. Domonick DeChiara, the attorney at O'Sullivan in charge of the transaction, learned that Elfersy's status had changed, and that he was no longer an officer, prior to the execution of the Merger Agreement. Parliament met with his counterpart sometime during the June 29-30 time frame and indicated that Elfersy was in the process of resigning. While the record does not disclose that anyone from BioShield told anyone from AHT that Elfersy was no longer a member of the Board--which at that time would not have been a true statement, since Elfersy had not yet tendered his resignation from the Board--AHT representatives knew before they signed the Merger Agreement that Elfersy, who owned 21.6% of BioShield's stock and whose support was critical to the success of the merger, was at odds with company management.

On or about June 28--as the news about Elfersy's changing status was becoming public--BioShield also rejected AHT's request for a voting agreement. Viewing the facts most favorably to AHT, in rejecting the proposal, Moses told Edelson that no such agreement was needed because he and Elfersy, as Board members, were both voting in favor of the deal, and so were other employees, who had smaller holdings.

On June 29, 2000, both Boards met to consider the merger. The Boards approved the merger by unanimous vote of those in attendance, constituting a quorum. Elfersy, although listed as a director in the draft minutes of the June 29 meeting (which, technically, he was), did not attend the BioShield Board meeting and did not vote to approve the merger.

On June 30, 2000, both sides executed the Agreement and Plan of Merger. The preamble to that document stated that the Boards of Directors of each party thereto (BioShield, its wholly-owned subsidiary AHT Acquisition Corp., and AHT) had unanimously approved the deal and deemed it to be in the best interest of its shareholders. The key terms of the Merger Agreement, for our purposes, were as follows:

The Merger Agreement required that the shareholders of both AHT and BioShield approve the deal as a condition precedent to the Merger; failure by either company's shareholders to approve the deal would result in the termination of the Agreement. No shareholder of either company was subject to any sort of voting agreement or other restriction. However, BioShield agreed to take "all necessary action" to permit issuance of the shares required to effectuate the merger, that it would "use its best efforts" to cause the shares to be issued, and that it would "take, or cause to be taken, all actions and to[sic], or cause to be done, all other things necessary, proper and advisable to consummate and make effective as promptly *740 as practicable the transactions contemplated by this Agreement." The Merger Agreements further provided that BioShield's "board of directors shall recommend the issuance of [BioShield] Common Stock to the holders of [AHT] Common Stock pursuant to this Agreement to holders of [BioShield] Common Stock" thus obligating the directors to recommend the deal to the shareholders.

At no time prior to signing the Merger Agreement did anyone representing AHT contact Elfersy to clarify his status or check on his support for the proposed merger. There was no agreement in place that would have prevented AHT's representatives from so doing.

Following the execution of the Merger Agreement, attorneys began to draft a Registration Statement, SEC Form S-4. An early draft of that Registration Statement, dated July 17, 2000 and produced from the files of the O'Sullivan firm (AHT's lawyers), omits Elfersy from the list of BioShield directors and describes Elfersy as "former co-chairman of the board, senior vice president, secretary, treasurer and director." The final version, which was filed with the SEC on August 2, 2000, also omitted Elfersy from the list of BioShield's "Directors, Executive Officers and Significant Employees."

And indeed, by the time the S-4 was filed, Elfersy had finally resigned from the Board. On or about August 1, 2000, Elfersy entered into a formal written agreement regarding the terms of his departure from BioShield's management. That agreement required Elfersy to resign as an officers and director of BioShield. By the terms of the agreement, his resignation was deemed effective as of June 21, 2000--although the resignation was not formally tendered until some six weeks after that date.

The Merger Agreement contained a warranty by AHT that it had not experienced a "Company Material Adverse Effect" since March 31, 2000, and that AHT had disclosed all pending or threatened legal actions that could have a material adverse effect. In a letter addressed to Edelson on August 11, 2000, Moses stated that BioShield believed that AHT had breached those warranties and representations and indicated the BioShield believed it had the right to terminate the Merger Agreement.

Also on August 11, Elfersy sent Moses a letter stating that he would not vote in favor of the proposed acquisition. Although the Agreement required AHT and BioShield to "consult with each other before issuing, and provide each other the opportunity to review and comment on any press release," BioShield issued a press release on August 14, 2000, without consulting AHT. The press release stated that BioShield had received "preliminary indications from shareholders holding more than 50% of the Company's common stock that they intend to vote their shares against the proposed merger with AHT"

AHT's stock plunged 33% in the immediate aftermath of the BioShield press release.

Following the issuance of the press release, Moses refused to speak with AHT and rejected requests by AHT's management to meet with BioShield's shareholders. Therefore, on August 18, 2000, AHT informed BioShield in writing that its issuance of the August 14 press release, its refusal to support the merger in discussions with shareholders, its refusal to join AHT in a meeting with BioShield shareholders and Moses' refusal to meet or speak with representatives of AHT constituted a breach of the Merger Agreement.

*741 Thereafter representatives of the two sides did meet, but BioShield refused to renegotiate the deal or amend the Merger Agreement. Instead, on August 25, 2000, BioShield offered to purchase the assets of AHT in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

On September 7, 2000, AHT commenced an action against BioShield, Acquisition Corp., Moses, Elfersy, Parliament and Faux in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, alleging fraud, civil conspiracy and negligent misrepresentation against all defendants except Acquisition Corp., aiding and abetting against Elfersy, breach of the merger agreements and breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing against BioShield and Acquisition Corp., and seeking $20 million in compensatory damages, $50 million in punitive damages, plus attorney's fees and the expenses of litigation in connection with the action for "bad faith and [being] stubbornly litigious."

The Georgia Action was conditionally settled several weeks later. As part of that settlement, AHT filed its Chapter 11 petition on September 22, 2000, and on the same day filed an Asset Purchase Agreement in which BioShield agreed to acquire the assets of AHT for $15 million. However, in November 2000, BioShield advised the Bankruptcy Court that it could not conclude the deal because it could not obtain the necessary financing. AHT's assets were eventually surrendered to its secured creditor, Cybear, Inc., which bid in its secured claim of approximately $4 million at a sale held November 21, 2000.

THE INSTANT ADVERSARY PROCEEDING

On November 24, 2000, AHT filed this instant complaint. Count I alleges that BioShield and Acquisition Corp. breached the Merger Agreement by (1) falsely representing that the BioShield Board, including Elfersy, had unanimously voted in favor of the merger and agreed to support the merger, (2) refusing to promptly prepare and file the Form S-4, (3) refusing to publicly support the Merger Agreement, (4) refusing to use all reasonable efforts to cause the merger to be approved, (5) refusing to permit AHT representatives to meet with BioShield shareholders to discuss the merits of the transaction, and (6) issuing the August 14, 2000 press release and making public comments to a newspaper without providing AHT an opportunity to review and comment. (AHT's Compl. ¶ 63). AHT also asserted claims against BioShield and Acquisition Corp. for breach of the Asset Purchase Agreement (Count II) (See AHT's Compl. ¶ 65-69); breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing "by engaging in a scheme to induce AHT to enter into the Merger Agreement based on false and misleading representations and then attempting to obtain AHT's assets for less than the consideration provided for in the Merger Agreement...." (Count III) (AHT's Compl. ¶ 74); fraud (Count IV) (See AHT's Compl. ¶ 76-84) and negligent misrepresentation (Count VI) (See AHT's Compl. ¶ 90-97). AHT demands that the post-petition superpriority claim granted to BioShield be equitably subordinated or expunged.

These claims are not at issue on this motion.

What is at issue are the claims against the individual defendants. Count IV of the Complaint alleges fraud against all defendants, on the ground that they (1) "had a motive and an opportunity to make false and misleading representations to AHT and its public shareholders to induce AHT to bind itself exclusively to BioShield so that BioShield could thereafter maximize its leverage against a cash-constrained AHT," which motive led them to make (2) "false and misleading representations that *742 the BioShield board of directors, including Elfersy, unanimously approved the Merger Agreement and were committed to the transaction ... with the intent to deceive AHT and its public shareholders, and to induce AHT to enter into the Merger Agreement," all to AHT's detriment. (AHT's Compl. ¶ 77-78). AHT also alleged that the defendants (including the moving defendants) knew or should have known that the statements were false when made but made them nonetheless "with the intent to falsely depress the value of AHT's common stock and to impede AHT's ability to seek alternative financing or business arrangements, as part of BioShield's ongoing scheme to obtain AHT's assets for next to nothing." (AHT's Compl. ¶ 81-82). AHT asserts that the false representations, along with the repeated refusal to perform under the Merger Agreement or to support the merger, its public and unilateral announcement that its shareholders would reject the merger, and its meritless assertion that it had grounds to terminate the Merger Agreement all create the strong inference of conscious misbehavior or recklessness.

Count V is asserted against Elfersy, for "aiding and abetting" fraud. It states, in substance, that he provided substantial assistance and encouragement to BioShield's fraudulent conduct by failing to appear and vote at the June 29 meeting and then failing to correct statements that he was a member of the Board. (AHT's Compl. ¶ 87).

Count VI asserts a claim for negligent misrepresentation, alleging that defendants

(1) made false and misleading representations both orally and in the Merger Agreement, Form S-4 and press releases, on which they knew AHT would rely, and upon which AHT did rely, and (2) acted with conscious indifference to the consequences of their actions and with specific intent to cause harm to AHT. (AHT's Compl. ¶ 90-97).

As Judge Hardin correctly found, AHT's claims against BioShield and Acquisition Corp for breach of the Merger Agreement in Count I rely on the same core of facts as the claims against the individual defendants in Counts IV, V and VI--the refusal to perform under the Merger Agreement or to support the merger, the public announcement about shareholder dissatisfaction with the merger, and the refusal to meet with AHT or permit AHT to meet with BioShield's shareholders. The assertion that the defendants made false and misleading representations concerning the Board's unanimity and Elfersy's participation in the vote is contained or incorporated by reference in Counts I, IV, V and VI.

MODIFIED CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Judge Hardin's analysis focused on whether AHT's claims against the individual defendants merely restated its breach of contract claim against the corporate defendants. He concluded that they did, and thus recommends granting summary judgment to the defendants. I agree with the result, but find it less complicated to rule on a different ground; AHT cannot prove fraud or negligent misrepresentation claims against the individual defendants because it cannot prove, as a matter of law, that it justifiably relied on any of the allegedly false and fraudulent representations. Indeed, as to Elfersy, it cannot prove that he made any representation at all--indeed, it is undisputed that he did not.

Count IV Must Be Dismissed as to All Moving Defendants

[1] Count IV, which is pleaded against all defendants, alleges that a number of statements were falsely and fraudulently *743 made to AHT prior to the execution of the merger agreement concerning Elfersy's participation in and support for the merger.

To the extent that plaintiff purports to assert Count IV against Elfersy, the claim must be dismissed because there is no evidence in this record that Elfersy ever made any statement, on any subject, to any representative of AHT--or for that matter was ever asked to do so. (See analysis of Count V, infra.)

[2] As to the other two moving defendants: New York law requires that reliance on a statement must be found to be justifiable under all the circumstances or no fraud claim lies. Granite Partners, L.P., v. Bear, Stearns & Co., Inc., 58 F.Supp.2d 228, 259 (S.D.N.Y.1999), Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 322, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597 (1959).

A party entering into a transaction has a duty to conduct an independent appraisal of the risk it is assuming and a duty to investigate the nature of its business transaction. Reasonable reliance may be found wanting where the plaintiff failed to conduct its own diligent research into the risks or benefits of a particular transaction. Sophisticated parties may well be under a duty to make affirmative efforts to protect themselves from misrepresentations, and cannot be heard to complain when they fail to make diligent inquiries. Granite Partners, L.P., 58 F.Supp.2d at 259 (citations omitted).

The lynchpin of AHT's fraud theory is that AHT was led to believe that Elfersy supported the merger and would vote his stock in favor of the deal. The basis for this belief was Moses' June 28 statement to Edelson, made in the context of explaining why no tie-up agreement was necessary, and the statements in the Merger Agreement and in the various public announcements that the Board had approved the deal "unanimously," with no caveat about absences.

However, the undisputed evidence is that AHT--led by a sophisticated management team, represented by experienced merger lawyers and advised by investment bankers--knew all of the following before it bound itself to the deal by signing the Merger Agreement:

- (1) Elfersy, a co-founder of the company and a 21% shareholder, was resigning as an officer of the company and changing his status with the company, and a public announcement to that effect had been filed with the SEC on June 28;
- (2) Elfersy, per Moses, was leaving company management due to disagreements over the direction the company was taking; (Edelson EBT at 343-352)
- (3) Elfersy's status as a member of the Board was unclear; Parliament told AHT representatives sometime during the June 29-30 period that Elfersy might be leaving the Board;
- (4) Elfersy had not participated in a single negotiating session or important event in connection with the merger;
- (5) Shareholder approval was a pre-condition to the consummation of the merger;
- (6) BioShield, through Moses, refused to give AHT the shareholder voting agreement it had sought, which meant that no shareholder was legally bound to vote in favor of the merger.

In the circumstances, a legally sophisticated party such as AHT should hardly have been inclined to put much stock in Moses' statement that Elfersy was on board for the deal. Indeed, a reasonable person, knowing only that a 21% shareholder had differences with Moses and *744 that his status within the company was changing as a result, would have been expected to contact Elfersy in order to see where he stood. Yet no one representing AHT did that. Nor did anyone inquire whether Elfersy--whose changing status was the subject of an SEC filing at a critical juncture in the negotiations--had been present at the June 29 Board meeting where the merger was discussed. Nothing in this record suggests that talking to Elfersy was out of bounds, or that Moses refused to continue negotiations if AHT contacted Elfersy directly. Therefore, AHT's failure to make direct inquiry is unreasonable as a matter of law, and precludes any finding of justifiable reliance.

In Abrahami v. UPC Construction Co., Inc., 224 A.D.2d 231, 638 N.Y.S.2d 11 (1st Dep't 1996) the plaintiffs asserted that the defendant made misrepresentations in the form of balance sheets and financial statements performed by the defendant's accounting firm concerning the financial status of the defendant company. Id. at 12-13. Based on these representations, the plaintiffs invested a substantial amount of money in the defendant company. Id. at 12. The court found that the plaintiffs' reliance on the representations was not justified, thereby rendering their claim of fraud invalid. Id. at 13. Since the plaintiffs were experienced businesspeople, they had a duty to exercise ordinary diligence and conduct an independent appraisal of the risk they were assuming, which they failed to do. Abrahami, 638 N.Y.S.2d at 13. Furthermore, the plaintiffs had the means to discover the true nature of the transaction they were about to enter, and they should have used those means to conduct an independent audit of the defendant company which would have shed light on the reality of the proposed transaction. Id. at 13-14. Not only did the plaintiffs have a duty and the means to investigate the defendant's financial condition, they were also on notice of the defendant's possible precarious financial condition and certainly should have investigated the proposed transaction further. Id. at 14. For these reasons, the court did not find the plaintiffs' reliance justified.

Similar to the plaintiffs' reliance in Abrahami, AHT's reliance is not justified. First, AHT was clearly on notice that Elfersy, a stockholder owning more than 20% of the stock, had recently resigned and that his status within the company he had co-founded was changing. AHT was aware that the merger was conditioned on a shareholder vote. AHT obviously had apprehensions about the merger; it had asked for a voting agreement in order to tie up the principal shareholders. AHT's affairs were conducted by sophisticated businesspeople; they were under a duty to exercise ordinary diligence and to make independent inquiries about whether Elfersy was still on board. AHT surely had the means to investigate Elfersy's disposition towards the merger; it only entailed calling Elfersy to discuss the matter with him.

Schlaifer Nance & Company v. Estate of Andy Warhol, 119 F.3d 91 (2d Cir.1997) is particularly instructive here. In Schlaifer, the plaintiff filed a complaint alleging fraud against the Estate of Andy Warhol, arguing that the Estate misled the plaintiff by misrepresenting that it had exclusive control of Warhol's assets, and by not explaining that many of Warhol's works had fallen into the public domain. Id. at 96. The plaintiff had entered an agreement with and licensed certain rights from the Warhol Estate. The Estate assured the plaintiff that it (the Estate) controlled all rights to Warhol's works when such was clearly not the case. Id. at 99. The Second Circuit found that although the Estate had, in fact, made misrepresentations to *745 the plaintiff, the latter's reliance on such misrepresentations was not reasonable. Id. at 98-99. Since reasonable reliance is a necessary element to fraud, the plaintiff's claim could not prevail. Id. at 99. Plaintiff's reliance was unreasonable for several reasons. First, the parties involved were sophisticated businesspeople involved in a major transaction. Secondly, the plaintiff was informed that Warhol did not own copyrights on all of his images. Thirdly, the plaintiff's attorney admitted that she had apprehensions as to whether Warhol (and his Estate) owned copyrights for all of his works because of (1) the magnitude of his works, and (2) since he was a commercial artist he often sold the rights to a commissioned work, thus surrendering the copyright. Fourthly, the plaintiff's counsel was aware that if Warhol's prints were issued without a copyright, then it was likely that such works had become a part of the public domain and could have no copy right protection. Finally, even the language of the parties' licensing agreement suggested that the Estate did not have exclusive control over Warhol's work. Schlaifer Nance & Company v. Estate of Andy Warhol, 119 F.3d at 98-100. The Second Circuit concluded that plaintiff's reliance on the misrepresentation made to him by one of the combatants was unreasonable as a matter of law. Id. at 101.

In Schlaifer, the fact that the parties were experienced businesspeople involved in a major transaction, that the plaintiff was aware that not all of Warhol's images had copyrights, the plaintiff's lawyers apprehensions and knowledge that Warhol's works had likely become part of the public domain, and the language of the agreement were deemed sufficient to put the plaintiff on notice that it should do further due diligence before it could reasonably rely on the Estate's representations that it owned all rights to every Warhol work. Here, the combination of Elfersy's publicly-announced resignation, Moses's statement that Elfersy's resignation was due to difference relating to the operation of BioShield and BioShield's refusal to tie the hands of its principal shareholders when it came to voting on the merger was certainly "notice that would have led any reasonably diligent attorney or corporate officer" to inquire of Elfersy whether he was planning to support the deal. In Schlaifer, the plaintiff was clearly on notice that Warhol's Estate did not own all of the rights to every Warhol work and, therefore, could not have reasonably relied on the Estate's representations that it did. Similarly, AHT was on notice that the representation that the BioShield board of directors, including Elfersy, unanimously approved the Merger Agreement and were committed to the transaction was or could be false and, therefore, could not have reasonably relied on a representation that it knew (or should have known by performing an investigation) was false.

For that reason alone, Count IV must be dismissed as to all defendants.

Count V Must Be Dismissed as to Elfersy

[3] In Count V, AHT alleges that Elfersy aided and abetted the fraud perpetrated by the other defendants. Obviously, he did not do so by making misrepresentations to them, since it is conceded that he never spoke to them and was never asked to do so. It appears that plaintiff contends that Elfersy aided and abetted Moses and the other BioShield defendants after the merger agreement was executed by declining to vote his shares in favor of the deal.

[4] In order to prevail on a claim of aiding and abetting fraud, AHT must establish three things: that BioShield perpetrated a fraud; that Elfersy had actual *746 knowledge of the existence of the fraudulent scheme; and, Elfersy provided substantial assistance to the other defendants in advancing the underlying fraud. Wight v. Bankamerica Corp., 219 F.3d 79, 91 (2d Cir.2000). AHT cannot prevail as a matter of law on its aiding and abetting claim because it cannot get over the first hurdle. Since reliance on Moses' statement that Elfersy supported the merger was unreasonable as a matter of law, there was no fraud.

[5][6][7] Moreover, assuming arguendo that reasonable reliance could be proved, there is no evidence in this record that Elfersy had actual knowledge of the fraudulent scheme to subvert the merger. In order to adequately plead scienter in an aiding and abetting fraud claim, the plaintiff must allege sufficient facts to support a strong inference of fraudulent intent. Primavera Familienstiftung v. Askin, 173 F.R.D. 115, 127 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (citations omitted). Plaintiffs may raise such an inference in one of two ways: (1) by alleging facts showing a motive for participating in a fraudulent scheme and a clear opportunity to do so; or (2) by identifying circumstances indicative of conscious behavior. Id. The only "evidence" cited by AHT in its objection is the fact that Elfersy continues to do some work for BioShield after his resignation from the Board of Directors and as an officer. And so he did--by agreement with the company, he continued to advise BioShield on patent, technological and scientific matters. But no reasonable juror could draw from that fact an inference that Elfersy was aware of Moses's alleged pre-execution misstatements, or that Elfersy and Moses ever discussed, let alone conspired to subvert, the proposed merger--even after the market drop in BioShield stock. Furthermore, the fact that Elfersy had his own economic interests in mind is not sufficient to satisfy the scienter requirement. "Ordinary economic motives are insufficient to support the scienter element of an aiding and abetting claim." Id. at 127. As Elfersy points out, he had an absolute legal right to protect his economic interests--no voting agreement bound him to the deal and he personally had never voted to support it.

Count V is dismissed.

Count VI Must Be Dismissed as against All Defendants

The last count that is the subject of the instant motion is Count VI, which alleges negligent misrepresentation against all defendants.

[8] I reject the notion that any ruling by Judge Hardin binds me, as a reviewing court, under the law of the case doctrine. However, the doctrine would not apply here in any event. AHT argues that the Bankruptcy Court's decision denying the defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint, and all the claims therein, precludes an award of summary judgment dismissing that claim. But a decision denying a motion to dismiss does not mean that a claim has merit and will ultimately succeed. If it did, we could simply enter judgment for the plaintiff at the same time we denied the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and spare ourselves a lot of unnecessary aggravation. The complaint no doubt pleads a claim sufficiently to withstand a pre-answer motion. But the question before Judge Hardin this go round--and now before me--is whether AHT has adduced any evidence tending to prove that claim, which must happen if the claim is to survive this post-discovery motion.

AHT has not done so.

As to Elfersy, the case is quite clear. Since everyone agrees that he never made any statement to any representative of AHT, he cannot be held liable on a theory of negligent misrepresentation--which requires *747 that a defendant make some statement "expressed directly" to the plaintiff. Suzy Phillips Originals, Inc. v. Coville, Inc., 939 F.Supp.

1012, 1016 (E.D.N.Y.1996), aff'd 125 F.3d 845 (2d Cir.1997); White v. Guarente, 43 N.Y.2d 356, 362-63, 401 N.Y.S.2d 474, 372 N.E.2d 315 (1977).

[9][10] As to the other moving defendants: in order to prevail on a negligent misrepresentation theory, a plaintiff must establish that the defendants had a duty, based upon a "special relationship," to give correct information to AHT, and that AHT reasonably relied on the false information to its detriment. Hydro Investors, Inc., v. Trafalgar Power, Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000); White v. Guarente, 43 N.Y.2d 356, 363, 401 N.Y.S.2d 474, 372 N.E.2d 315 (1977). I have already ruled that AHT could not have reasonably relied on any representation concerning Elfersy's support for the merger, given his precipitous withdrawal from his management role at the company at a crucial moment in the negotiations, so the claim fails for that reason alone.

[11][12] Additionally, AHT has not established that the moving defendants had any special relationship with it that would give rise to a "special duty of care." Liability for negligent misrepresentation "has been imposed only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party" Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d 450 (1996). AHT was a sophisticated party, the defendants' contra party in a merger negotiation and was represented at all times during the negotiation by counsel and investment advisers. It was conducting its own due diligence on all matters material to the merger. It stood in the position of an ordinary seller, with BioShield an ordinary buyer, in an arms' length commercial transaction. That is the antithesis of a "relationship of special trust and confidence." See Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 263, 652 N.Y.S.2d 715, 675 N.E.2d 450 (professionals, such as lawyers and engineers, by virtue of their training and expertise, may have special relationships of confidence and trust with their clients); Fleet Bank v. Pine Knoll Corp., 736 N.Y.S.2d 737 (3d Dep't 2002) (a special relationship requires a closer degree of trust than an ordinary business relationship for that reason, there typically is no fiduciary relationship between a borrower and a bank); Andres v. LeRoy Adventures, 201 A.D.2d at 262, 607 N.Y.S.2d 261 (1st Dep't 1994) (holding that a special relationship giving rise to a duty to impart correct information could not be discerned from the arm's length dealings between the plaintiff, a potential customer, and the defendant, a restaurant owner).

AHT contends that a relationship of special trust arises because BioShield and its officers were in a better position to know whether Elfersy was on the Board and whether he and Moses actually supported the merger. However, I have already ruled that it was unreasonable as a matter of law for AHT to rely on Moses' representation about Elfersy's support for the merger, so it is not possible that a relationship of special trust could exist as to those statements. And AHT has not adduced even a scintilla evidence that Moses did not in fact support the merger at the time he made the alleged misrepresentations--i.e., prior to the execution of the Merger Agreement. That he changed his mind as the summer wore on is indisputable, but that hardly supports an inference that Moses's statements, whether about Elfersy or about the Board's support for the deal, were false when they were made. To the extent that AHT complains of post-Merger Agreement conduct by Moses and others, it is not complaining about misrepresentations *748 on which it relied in entering into the Merger Agreement.

As Judge Hardin correctly concluded, AHT's claim for breach of the contract lies in breach of contract, which cannot be characterized as misrepresentation of intent to perform under the contract. See Best Western Int'l Inc. v. CSI Int'l Corp., 1994 WL 465905 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Aug.23, 1994) ("The majority of the [New York] courts, including the Appellate Division, have held that simply dressing up a breach of contract claim by further alleging that the promisor had no intention, at the time of the contract's making, to perform its obligation thereunder, is insufficient to state an independent tort claim").

CONCLUSION

The moving defendants' motions for summary judgment are granted in all respects: Count IV is dismissed as to Timothy Moses, Jacques Elfersy, and Scott Parliament; Count V is dismissed as to Elfersy; and Count VI is dismissed as against Moses, Elfersy, and Parliament. [FN3]

FN3. Having elected to dispose of these motions on the alternate grounds propounded by defendants, I need not and do not reach the issue of whether the various fraud and misrepresentation claims are or are not coterminous with the breach of contract claim, or whether the misrepresentations alleged are or are not collateral to the Merger Agreement.

This constitutes the decision and order of the Court.

292 B.R. 734

END OF DOCUMENT

46

sources must be identified, there is no requirement that they be named, provided they are described in the complaint with sufficient particularity to support the probability that a person in the position occupied by the source would possess the information alleged. In both of these situations, the plaintiffs will have pleaded enough facts to support their belief, even though some arguably relevant facts have been left out.

Id. at 314. The Court then observed that "a complaint can meet the new pleading requirement imposed by paragraph (b)(1) by providing documentary evidence and/or a sufficient general description of the personal sources of the plaintiffs' beliefs." Id.

While Novak categorically rejected the notion that securities fraud complaints must name confidential sources as a general matter, it was rather less precise about what types of "other facts" may satisfy the particularity requirement of paragraph (b)(1). Several district courts in the Second Circuit have interpreted Novak narrowly to hold that, although plaintiffs need not name their confidential sources, they nevertheless must provide a description of the sources, either documentary or personal, of their information and beliefs allegations to survive dismissal. See, e.g., In re MSC Indus. Direct Co., Inc. Sec. Litig., 283 F.Supp.2d 838, 847 (E.D.N.Y.2003); Fadem v. Ford Motor Co., 02 Civ. 0686(CSH), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16898, at *23 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 24, 2003); In re Globalstar Sec. Litig., 01 Civ. 1748(SHS), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22496, at *19-20 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 12, 2003).

I decline to read Novak that narrowly for several reasons. First, as the Second Circuit itself acknowledged in Novak, paragraph (b)(1) "requires plaintiffs to plead only facts and makes no mention of the sources of these facts." 216 F.3d at 313. Moreover, the opinion states that a complaint "can" satisfy the PSLRA's particularity requirement by identifying documentary or personal sources; it does not require that a complaint do so. Novak, 216 F.3d at 314. Indeed, as the Second Circuit noted, the purposes of paragraph (b)(1)

"can be served as long as [plaintiffs] supply sufficient facts to support their allegations." Id. For example, the level of factual specificity or the corroborative nature of other facts alleged in a securities fraud complaint might be enough to place defendants on notice of the misconduct alleged and permit them to defend against the charge. See Adams v. Kinder-Morgan, Inc., 340 F.3d 1083, 1101-02 (10 th Cir.2003). Last, requiring plaintiffs to identify the sources of their factual allegations would, in effect, compel them to plead evidence in their complaint, thereby undoing the principle of notice pleading that underlies the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See id. at 1101 (noting that although the PSLRA requires securities fraud plaintiffs to allege certain facts with greater precision, it "did not ... purport to move up the trial to the pleadings stage"); In re Cephalon Sec. Litig., 96 Civ. 0633, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13840, at *2 (E. D.Pa. Aug. 29, 1997) ("Clearly, the [PSLRA] requires some precision in alleging facts, however, it does not require pleading all of the evidence and proof thereunder supporting a plaintiff's claim."). Had the Second Circuit chosen to interpret the PSLRA as importing an evidentiary requirement into securities fraud complaints, it would have done so more explicitly. See Kinder-Morgan, 340 F.3d at 1101.

*13 For the above reasons, I believe Novak should not be read to require that securities fraud complaints identify documentary or personal sources. Instead, I join a handful of courts that read Novak as endorsing a broader approach to the particularity requirement of paragraph (b)(1). See, e.g., In re Cabletron Sys., Inc., 311 F.3d 11, 29-30 (1 st Cir.2002); In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 358-59. See also Kinder-Morgan, 340 F.3d at 1101-03 (declining to adopt position, attributed to Novak, that PSLRA requires securities fraud complaint to identify sources of allegations based on information and belief). [FN10] Under this approach, the court looks to whether the factual allegations, considered in the whole, "provide an adequate basis for believing that the defendants' statements were false," Novak, 216 F.3d at 314, without adding the requirement that the complaint identify the source of the factual allegations. This interpretation of Novak recognizes, as I believe the Second Circuit did, that requiring disclosure of sources in all securities fraud complaints is too restrictive a response to the PSLRA's particularity requirement.

FN10. In Kinder-Morgan, the Tenth Circuit interpreted Novak as requiring securities fraud complaints to describe the personal or documentary sources of allegations based on information and belief, and purported to adopt a different, less rigid approach to the PSLRA's particularity requirement. For the reasons described in the text, I decline such an interpretation of Novak, and believe that the Tenth Circuit's "alternative" approach to evaluating the sufficiency of fraud allegations is consistent with the language of the Novak opinion.

In re Cabletron Systems, one of the cases cited above that adopts a broader reading of Novak, addressed what types of "other facts" might satisfy the particularity requirement of paragraph (b)(1). In that case, the First Circuit endorsed the following approach for resolving whether fraud allegations satisfy the particularity requirement of paragraph (b)(1):

The approach we take, similar to Novak, is to look at all of the facts alleged to see if they 'provide an adequate basis for believing that the defendants' statements were false.' Novak, 216 F.3d at 314. This involves an evaluation, inter alia, of the level of detail provided by the confidential sources, the corroborative nature of the other facts alleged (including from other sources), the coherence and plausibility of the allegations, the number of sources, the reliability of the sources, and similar indicia.

In re Cabletron, 311 F.3d at 29-30. See also Kinder-Morgan, 340 F.3d at 1102-03 (recommending that courts consider, inter alia, coherence, plausibility and specificity of the allegations, whether sources are disclosed and reliability of those sources, and "any other factors that might affect how strongly the facts alleged support a reasonable belief that the defendant's statements were false or misleading"). Thus, while the disclosure of sources may strengthen a complaint pleaded on information and belief, it is not necessary if the facts otherwise support a reasonable belief that the alleged fraud occurred. In short, "[w]hat facts and what level of particularity are sufficient to support a plaintiff's beliefs will vary from case to case.... The critical threshold is that the allegations must be made in a way that satisfies the court that plaintiff's charge of fraud is not 'unwarranted.'" ' In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 359.

*14 In the present case, the factual allegations describing Deloitte's role in the alleged fraud are sufficiently numerous and detailed to meet the particularity requirement of paragraph (b)(1). To take one example, the allegations concerning the Petrochem losses specify the division of Philip at which the improper accounting occurred (the Petrochem facility), people at Deloitte and Philip complicit in the fraud (Woodsford, Boughton, and Woodcroft), and the amount of the losses at issue ($8 million). "Overall, the accumulated amount of detail the [Complaint] provides tends to be self-verifying; these are not conclusory allegations of fraud, but specific descriptions of the precise means through which it occurred..." In re Cabletron Sys., 311 F.3d at 30. Such particularized allegations "provide an adequate basis for believing that [Deloitte's] statements were false," and make it unnecessary for plaintiffs to disclose the sources of their beliefs at the pleading stage.

In sum, the Complaint alleges sufficient facts on which plaintiffs' beliefs are formed to satisfy the PSLRA's particularity requirement. Viewed in their entirety, the allegations put Deloitte on fair notice of plaintiffs' claims and their factual basis. Accordingly, the Complaint is "not frivolous or conclusory and deserves to proceed to the next stage of litigation." Kinder-Morgan, 340 F.3d at 1105.

B. Section 11 of the Securities Act

The third, sixth, and ninth claims are asserted against Deloitte, Haynes and Knauss under Section 11 of the Securities Act. Section 11 permits an action by any person who acquired a security in reliance on a registration statement that contained a material misstatement, as against, among others,

- (1) every person who signed the registration statement;
- (2) every person who was a director of (or person performing similar functions) or partner in, the issuer at the time of the filing of the part of the registration statement with respect to which his liability is asserted;
- (4) every accountant ... who has with his consent been named as having prepared or certified any part of the registration statement, or as having prepared or certified any report or valuation which is used in connection with the registration statement, with respect to the statement in such registration statement, report, or valuation, which purports to have been prepared or certified by him....

15 U.S.C. § 77k(a).

Because intent to defraud is not an element of a Section 11 claim, " 'only a material misstatement or omission [in a registration statement] need be shown to establish a prima facie case...." ' In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 343 (citation omitted). See also In re CINAR Corp. Sec. Litig., 186 F.Supp.2d 279, 306 (E.D.N.Y.2002) ("[A] plaintiff does not need to allege the manner in which a material misstatement on a securities filing was made--innocently, negligently, fraudulently or otherwise--because Section 11 provides for strict liability.") (citation omitted). However, the Second Circuit has ruled recently that, where Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) claims are based on underlying allegations of fraud, the complaint must satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). See Rombach v. Chang, 355 F.3d 164, 171 (2d Cir.2004).

*15 In Rombach, the Second Circuit noted that although fraud "is not an element or a requisite to a claim under Section 11 or Section 12(a)(2)," those claims "may be--and often are--predicated on fraud," and that the allegations underlying Section 10(b) claims and Section 11 claims are often the same. Id. [FN11] The Court observed that the considerations for applying Rule 9(b) to a conventional fraud claim "apply with equal force" to Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) claims sounding in fraud. Id. (citation omitted). Accordingly, it held that the heightened pleading standards of Rule 9(b) apply to Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) claims insofar as such claims as premised on underlying allegations of fraud. Id. As discussed above, the Second Circuit has interpreted Rule 9(b) to require that a securities fraud complaint allege, inter alia, facts giving rise to "a strong inference of fraudulent intent" and state with particularity the facts constituting the alleged fraudulent conduct.

FN11. The Second Circuit noted also that "a plaintiff need allege no more than negligence to proceed under Section 11...." 355 F.3d at 171. Given the well-settled interpretation of Section 11 as a strict liability provision and the lack of further discussion in Rombach about whether to read a state of mind requirement into Section 11 generally, I decline to interpret the decision as introducing a state of mind element for Section 11 claims absent underlying fraud allegations.

Applying Rombach, I must consider whether plaintiffs' Section 11 claims sound in fraud and, if so, whether the underlying allegations of fraud satisfy the pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). I examine the claims against Deloitte, and Haynes and Knauss separately, because the facts underlying those claims vary significantly.

1. Deloitte

The Complaint asserts Section 11 claims against Deloitte based on its consent to the republication of the "false and misleading" 1996 audit opinion in the November 1997, Allwaste, and Serv-Tech Registration Statements. Deloitte seeks dismissal of the Section 11 claims on the ground that they are premised on fraud allegations and fail to satisfy Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading requirements. (Deloitte's Supp. Mem. at 7-9; Deloitte's Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Further Support of its Motion to Dismiss, dated 1/20/04, passim; Deloitte's Reply Memorandum of Law Concerning the Impact of Rombach v. Chang, passim)

Plaintiffs argue at the threshold that Deloitte waived any objections to the Section 11 claims because (1) Deloitte conceded the sufficiency of the Section 11 claims in its initial set of motion papers and raised its objections for the first time in a supplemental memorandum that the parties had agreed was meant only to address recent case law with respect to pleading standards under the PSLRA; and (2) Deloitte should not be permitted to circumvent Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(g), which bars a party from submitting more than one pre-answer motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b). (Plaintiffs' Reply to Deloitte's Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Support of its Motion to Dismiss at 1-3; Plaintiffs' Second Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Opposition to the Motions of Deloitte, Haynes and Knauss ("Pls.' 2d Supp. Mem. in Opp'n to the Motions of Deloitte, Haynes and Knauss") at 4-5) Neither argument has merit. First, I am not bound by the terms of a stipulation between parties to a dispute. See United States ex rel. Terry v. Henderson, 462 F.2d 1125, 1131 n. 13 (2d Cir.1972); Am. Fed. of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO v. New York, 599 F.Supp. 916, 919 n. 1 (S.D.N.Y.1984). Second, because I have not yet ruled on that part of Deloitte's motion to dismiss based on failure to state a claim, Deloitte's "newly-raised" objections as to the Section 11 claims cannot properly be characterized as a second pre-answer motion to dismiss. Accordingly, this court has jurisdiction to consider Deloitte's objections to the Section 11 claims.

*16 Turning to the merits of Deloitte's objections, it is plain that the Section 11 claims asserted against it sound in fraud: not only do allegations of Deloitte's fraud permeate the Complaint, but also the claims asserted under Section 11 are premised on the allegations supporting the Section 10(b) claim against Deloitte. (See, e.g., Compl. ¶ 386 ("Deloitte consented to the inclusion of its auditor's opinions in the Registration Statement. Deloitte's audit opinions with respect to Philip's 1995 and 1996 financial statements were false and misleading when the November 1997 Registration Statement was declared effective by the SEC.")) Accordingly, Rule 9(b) applies. See Rombach, 355 F.3d at 172 (applying Rule 9(b) where "the wording and imputations of the complaint are classically associated with fraud"); In re Ultrafem, Inc. Sec. Litig., 91 F.Supp.2d 678, 690 (S.D.N.Y.2000) (applying Rule 9(b) where "plaintiffs [made] little, if any, effort to differentiate their asserted negligence claims from the fraud claims which permeate the Complaint"). However, because I have already found, in connection with the Section 10(b) claim, that those underlying allegations are sufficiently pleaded to satisfy Rule 9(b) and the PSLRA, Deloitte's motion to dismiss the Section 11 claims on this ground is denied.

Deloitte argues as a fallback position that it cannot be held liable under Section 11 for misstatements in the registration statements attributable to parties other than Deloitte. (Deloitte's Mem. at 43-44) I do not read the Complaint to assert Section 11 claims against Deloitte for misstatements made by other parties, and plaintiffs have verified in their papers that they will pursue Section 11 claims against Deloitte only for misstatements that it prepared or certified. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Deloitte's Mot. to Dismiss at 38) Nevertheless, to the extent Deloitte seeks assurance that it cannot be held liable under Section 11 for information in the registration statements it did not prepare or certify, the terms of the statute provides ample guidance: an accountant may be held liable only for statements that "purport [] ... to have been prepared or certified by him." 15 U.S.C. 77(k)(a)(4). See also Herman & Maclean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 386 n. 22 (1983) (holding that accountants "cannot be reached by a Section 11 action ... with respect to parts of registration statement which they are not named as having prepared or certified").

2. Haynes and Knauss

The Section 11 claim against Haynes and Knauss is based on their having signed the November 1997 registration statement in their capacity as Philip directors. According to the Complaint, Haynes and Knauss, among others, attended a board of directors meeting at which the participants discussed Philip's improperly recorded earnings for the 1997 third quarter amounting to $ 24.2 million. (Compl. ¶¶ 236-238) Nevertheless, Haynes and Knauss later signed the November 1997 registration statement, which did not disclose the fraudulent nature of the earnings. (Id. ¶¶ 60-61, 238) Plaintiffs concede that their Section 11 claim against Haynes and Knauss sounds in fraud, but argue that the underlying allegations satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). (Pls.' 2d Supp. Mem. in Opp'n to the Motions of Deloitte, Haynes and Knauss, passim; Plaintiff's Reply Memorandum of Law in Further Opposition to the Motions to Dismiss of Haynes and Knauss, passim)

*17 Haynes' and Knauss' principal objection is that the Complaint does not sufficiently allege their participation in making the fraudulent statements in the November 1997 registration statement, and thus fails to plead fraud with sufficient particularity under Rule 9(b). (Haynes' and Knauss' Memorandum of Law in Support of their Motion to Dismiss ("Haynes' and Knauss' Mem.") at 18-19; Haynes' and Knauss' Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Support of their Motion to Dismiss ("Haynes' and Knauss' Supp. Mem.") at 13-14; Haynes' and Knauss' Second Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Support of their Motion to Dismiss ("Haynes' and Knauss' 2d Supp. Mem.") at 3) The Second Circuit has held that, in order to satisfy the fraud particularity requirement of Rule 9(b), a complaint must "inform each defendant of the nature of his or her alleged participation in the fraud." DiVittorio, 822 F.2d at 1247 (citation omitted). However, plaintiffs here are relieved of the burden of having to identify the specific roles of Haynes and Knauss in the alleged fraud under the so-called "group pleading doctrine." That doctrine applies where, as here, the directors or officers of a company participate in the preparation and dissemination of group-published documents, such as registration statements. See In re Oxford Health Plans, Inc. Sec. Litig., 187 F.R.D. 133, 142 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (noting that "group-pleading doctrine allows plaintiffs to 'rely on a presumption that statements in prospectuses, registration statements, annual reports, press releases, or other group-published information, are the collective work of those individuals with direct involvement in the everyday business of the company" ') (citation omitted); Geiger v. Solomon-Page Group, Ltd., 933 F.Supp. 1180, 1188 n. 7 (S.D.N.Y.1996) ("The defendants ... protest that the Amended Complaint fails to specify the particular omission attributable to each of the Individual Defendants. When an alleged fraudulent omission occurs in an offering memorandum filed with the SEC signed by each of the Individual Defendants, however, there is no requirement that the complaint be any more particular to comply with Rule 9(b) in this respect.") (citing DiVittorio, 822 F.2d at 1247).

That Haynes and Knauss were outside directors of Philip and were appointed to the company's board only three months before issuance of the November 1997 registration statement is of no consequence because, as the Complaint alleges, they had access to insider information concerning Philip's improperly recorded earnings for the 1997 third quarter. See Sperber Adams Assocs. v. JEM Mgmt. Assocs. Corp., 90 Civ. 7405(JSM), 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8301, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. June 4, 1992) (outside director who prepared and distributed offering materials is insider for purposes of Rule 9(b) particularity inquiry); Schnall v. Annuity and Life Re (Holdings), Ltd., 3:02 Civ. 2133(GLG), 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1601, at *11 (D.Conn. Feb. 4, 2004) ("[O]utside directors, although almost by definition excluded from the day-to-day management of a corporation, can fall within the group pleading presumption when, by virtue of their status or a special relationship with the corporation, they have access to information more akin to a corporate insider.") (citing In re XOMA Corp. Sec. Litig., C-912252, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXUS 20051, at *6) (N.D.Cal. Dec. 27, 1991). Notwithstanding Haynes' and Knauss' assertion to the contrary, the enactment of the PSLRA did not undermine the group pleading doctrine in the Second Circuit. See In re Complete Mgmt., 153 F.Supp.2d at 326 n. 7 (citing In re American Bank Note Holographics, Inc. Sec. Litig., 93 F.Supp.2d 424, 442 (S.D.N.Y.2000)); In re Oxford Health Plans, 187 F.R.D. at 142.

*18 Haynes and Knauss argue that the Section 11 claim should be dismissed also because the Complaint fails to allege facts creating a strong inference of their fraudulent intent. (Haynes' and Knauss' Mem. at 18; Haynes' and Knauss' 2d Supp. Mem. at 3) However, the Complaint alleges that Haynes and Knauss attended a board meeting at which the participants were told about Philip's improperly recorded earnings for the 1997 third quarter, but they nevertheless executed the November 1997 registration statement. Such allegations are enough to sustain a strong inference at the pleading stage that Haynes and Knauss knowingly committed securities fraud by signing that registration statement.

Haynes and Knauss ask the court in the alternative to strike from the Complaint any claim against them of joint and several liability because, they argue, the PSLRA requires plaintiffs asserting joint and several liability claims under Section 11 to allege defendants' knowing violation of the securities laws, and plaintiffs fail to do so here. (Haynes' and Knauss' 2d Supp. Mem. at 3-5) This argument fails on two grounds. First, the statute that Haynes and Knauss cite in support of this argument concerns the level of scienter that the "trier of fact" must find in order for a defendant to incur joint and several liability; it has no bearing on plaintiffs' minimum pleading requirements. See 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(f)(3)(A) ("Any covered person against whom a final judgment is entered in a private action shall be liable for damages jointly and severally only if the trier of fact specifically determines that such covered person knowingly committed a violation of the securities laws."). Second, even presuming the statute were applicable at this stage in the litigation, for the reasons discussed above, the Complaint sufficiently alleges facts creating a strong inference that Haynes and Knauss knowingly committed securities fraud.

C. Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act and

Section 15 of the Securities Act

The second and fifth claims assert "control person" liability claims against Haynes and Knauss under Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act and Section 15 of the Securities Act. In effect, the Complaint alleges that Haynes and Knauss, as Philip directors, held power and influence over the company's actions and, therefore, are liable for its fraudulent misrepresentations.

Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act

Section 20(a) imposes liability on "every person who, directly or indirectly, controls any person liable under any provision of this chapter or of any rule or regulation thereunder ..., unless the controlling person acted in good faith and did not ... induce the ... violation." 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a). In order to state a prima facie claim under Section 20(a), a plaintiff must show: "(1) a primary violation by a controlled person, (2) control of the primary violator by the defendant, and (3) 'that the controlling person was in some meaningful sense a culpable participant' in the primary violation." Boguslavsky v. Kaplan, 159 F.3d 715, 720 (2d Cir.1998) (quoting Sec. & Exch. Comm'n v. First Jersey Securities, Inc., 101 F.3d 1450, 1472 (2d Cir.1996)).

*19 Plaintiffs' allegations in furtherance of the Section 20(a) claim, though sparse, are sufficient to avoid dismissal. The first element is satisfied with the allegation that Philip committed multiple violations of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act. (Compl.¶¶ 369-376) Because no party has challenged the sufficiency of that allegation, I assume that plaintiffs have adequately pleaded a primary violation. See In re Scholastic Corp. Sec. Litig., 252 F.3d 63, 77-78 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1071 (2001) (primary violation element of a Section 20(a) claim was satisfied where plaintiffs adequately pleaded Section 10(b) claim). [FN12]

FN12. In their initial brief, Haynes and Knauss contend that plaintiffs should not be permitted to circumvent the pleading requirements of a Section 10(b) claim by instead bringing a Section 20(a) claim against them. (Haynes' and Knauss' Mem. at 2) However, whether or not plaintiffs bring a Section 10(b) claim against Haynes and Knauss is irrelevant to the Section 20(a) analysis. To assert a Section 20(a) claim against Haynes and Knauss, plaintiffs must allege that a controlled person (here, Philip, not Haynes and Knauss) committed a Section 10(b) violation. See Suez Equity Investors, L.P., 250 F.3d at 101 ("Controlling-person liability is a form of secondary liability, under which a plaintiff may allege a primary § 10(b) violation by a person controlled by the defendant and culpable participation by the defendant in the perpetration of the fraud."); In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 392 n. 178 ("Primary liability of the controlling person is not a necessary predicate to a section 20(a) claim. Section 20 is typically used to sue defendants who do not have primary liability.").

To establish the second element--control--a plaintiff must show that the defendant "possessed 'the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise.'" First Jersey Securities, 101 F.3d at 1472-73 (quoting 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2). "A short, plain statement that gives the defendant fair notice of the claim that the defendant was a control person and the ground on which [that claim] rests ... is all that is required." Schnall, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1601, at *25 (citing Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 512 (2002) and In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 352).

Haynes' and Knauss' status as directors, standing alone, is insufficient to establish their control over Philip. See Food & Allied Service Trades Dep't, AFL-CIO v. Millfield Trading Co., 841 F.Supp. 1386, 1391 (S.D.N.Y.1994) ("While courts in this circuit have not always agreed on just how much beyond status as a director must be alleged to plead a Section 20(a) claim, ... they have agreed that a bare allegation of director status, without more, is insufficient."); In re CINAR, 186 F.Supp.2d at 309 ("It is well accepted that merely alleging that a particular defendant is a director or an officer of a company is not sufficient to allege control.") (citations omitted). However, the Complaint alleges not only that Haynes and Knauss were directors of Philip, but also that they signed the November 1997 registration statement. (Compl.¶¶ 60-61) While there is case law suggesting that a defendant's execution of a fraudulent SEC filing is insufficient by itself to establish control, see Jacobs, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2102, at *51 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 26, 1999) (citing cases), I share the view that it "comport[s] with common sense to presume that a person who signs his name to a report has some measure of control over those who write the report." Id. See also In re Indep. Energy Holdings PLC Sec. Litig., 154 F.Supp.2d 741, 772 (S.D.N.Y.2001) (allegations that defendants were directors, held substantial equity stake in company and signed prospectus were sufficient to establish control); In re Ouintel Entm't Sec. Litig., 72 F.Supp.2d 283, 298 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (allegations that defendants had "access to [the company's] internal reports, press releases, public filings, and had the ability to prevent the issuance or correct the statements" were sufficient to establish control). That Haynes and Knauss were required by law to sign the November 1997 registration statement, far from absolving them of responsibility for the misstatements therein, "charges [them] with power over the document[] and represents to the corporation, its shareholders, and the public that [they have] performed [their] role with sufficient diligence that [they are] willing and able to stand behind the information contained in [the] document[]." In re Worldcom, Inc. Sec. Litig., 294 F.Supp.2d 392, 420 (S.D.N.Y.2003). See also In re Livent, 151 F.Supp.2d 371, 437 (S.D.N.Y.2001) ("An outside director and audit committee member who is in a position to approve a corporation's financial statements can be presumed to have 'the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of' the corporation, at least insofar as the 'management and policies' referred to relate to ensuring a measure of accuracy in the contents of company reports and SEC registrations that they actually sign.") (quoting 17 C.F.R. § 240.12b-2).

*20 The Second Circuit has not defined the phrase "culpable participation"--the third element--other than to say that "a determination of section 20(a) liability requires an individual determination of a ... defendant's particular culpability." Boguslavsky, 159 F.3d at 720, and district courts in the Circuit are split as to what exactly the phrase means. Some district courts assume that "culpable participation" requires proof of state of mind, and thus conclude that plaintiffs must allege the controlling person's scienter to state a prima facie Section 20(a) claim. See, e.g., In re Oxford Health Plans, 187 F.R.D. at 143; In re Deutsche Telekom AG Sec. Litig., 00 Civ. 9475(SHS), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2627, at *17-18 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 20, 2002); Mishkin v. Ageloff, 97 Civ. 2690(LAP), 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14890, at *67-72 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 1998). Other district courts have reasoned that there is no basis for equating "culpable participation" with scienter, so that plaintiffs asserting a Section 20(a) claim need allege only an underlying primary violation and control person status. See, e.g., In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 394 n. 182 (noting that culpable conduct "can be blameworthy though it was done unintentionally or unknowingly" and that "the scienter-free definition of 'culpable' is particularly appropriate when it modifies 'participation,' which means 'to take part in something (as an enterprise or activity) usually in common with others.'") (citations omitted). [FN13] I need not resolve this debate because, even assuming "culpable participation" entails scienter, plaintiffs have pleaded it here.

FN13. Such is the propensity among certain courts to equate "culpable participation" with scienter that ordinarily they do not even use the term "scienter" and the intra-circuit debate is framed as one over whether "culpable participation" is a required element of a Section 20(a) claim. See, e.g. Burstyn v. Worldwide Xceed Group, Inc., 01 Civ. 1125(GEL), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18555, at *22 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2002) ("The district courts in this Circuit have divided as to the prima facie requirements of a Section 20(a) claim, or more specifically as to whether plaintiffs must plead culpable participation."). However, as noted in the text above, the Second Circuit has held that a plaintiff must plead culpable participation in order to state a Section 20(a) claim. See Boguslavsky, 159 F.3d at 720. Therefore, the debate is properly understood not as whether "culpable participation" is a requirement of a Section 20(a) claim, but what the phrase "culpable participation" means.

If scienter is an element of a Section 20(a) claim, the PSLRA's pleading requirements apply, and plaintiffs must plead with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the control person knew or should have known that the primary violator was engaging in fraudulent conduct. See Cromer Finance Ltd. v. Berger, 137 F.Supp.2d 452, 484 (S.D.N.Y.2001); In re Deutsche Telekom, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2627, at *22 (citations omitted). Here, the Complaint sufficiently alleges Haynes' and Knauss' scienter by asserting that (1) they attended a board meeting at which participants discussed Philip's improperly recorded earnings for the third quarter of 1997, and (2) they later signed the November 1997 registration statement that reported the false earnings. (Compl.¶¶ 236-238) Haynes and Knauss may prefer a more particularized description of what was discussed at the board meeting and their states of mind with respect to those discussions, but such facts are peculiarly within Haynes' and Knauss' own knowledge, and plaintiffs should not be expected to plead them in the Complaint.

Haynes and Knauss next contend that the Section 20(a) claim should be dismissed because plaintiffs seek to hold them jointly and severally liable to class members who purchased Philip's stock before Haynes and Knauss became associated with the company, and thus before they had the requisite control status for Section 11 liability. (Haynes' and Knauss' Supp. Mem. at 12) I agree that Haynes and Knauss cannot be held liable under Section 20(a) for Philip's misconduct during that part of the class period before they acquired control status, see Whirlpool Fin. Corp. v. GN Holdings, Inc., 873 F.Supp. 111, 120 (N.D.Ill.1995) ("[C]ontrol person liability attaches only to a person who was in control at the time that the liability of the controlled person accrued, not to someone who later takes control.") (citing 9 Louis Loss & Joel Seligman, Securities Regulation 4472 (3d ed.1992)); Adair v. Hunt Int'l Resources Corp., 79 Civ. 4206, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11045, at *10-11 (N.D.Ill. Feb. 22, 1982) (declining to ascribe control person status to defendants who acquired ownership interests in company after complained-of transactions occurred), but plaintiffs' failure to particularize in the Complaint Haynes' and Knauss' proportional liability does not warrant dismissal of the entire Section 20(a) claim. [FN14] Instead, that claim is dismissed only insofar as it is premised on Haynes' and Knauss' liability for Philip's fraudulent conduct before August 7, 1997, the date on which they became directors of the company. [FN15] Haynes' and Knauss' motion to dismiss the Section 20(a) claim is otherwise denied.

FN14. To the extent Haynes and Knauss assert that the PSLRA requires plaintiffs to plead with particularity outside directors' proportional liability, that assertion is baseless. The portion of the PSLRA relating to "proportionate liability," 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(f), requires the trial court to instruct the jury to make ultimate findings concerning the proportional liability of outside directors; nothing in that provision requires plaintiffs to allege the extent of Haynes' and Knauss' proportional liability at the pleading stage. See also 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(f)(1) ("Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to create, affect, or in any manner modify, the standard for liability associated with any action arising under the securities laws.").

FN15. Plaintiffs do not allege any independent basis for inferring Haynes' and Knauss' control in the period before they became directors of Philip.

Section 15 of the Securities Act

21 Section 15 of the Securities Act attaches liability to "every person who, by or through stock ownership, agency, or otherwise, ..., controls any person liable under Section 11, or 12, ..., unless the controlling person had no knowledge of or reasonable ground to believe in the existence of the facts by reason of which the liability of the controlled person is alleged to exist." 15 U.S.C. § 77o. Plaintiffs asserting a Section 15 claim must plead an underlying primary violation of Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) of the Securities Act and control over the primary violator by the targeted defendant. See In re Initial Public Offering, 241 F.Supp.2d at 352 (citation omitted). However, as with control person liability claims under Section 20(a) of the Exchange Act, district courts in the Second Circuit are split over whether plaintiffs asserting Section 15 claims must plead scienter (what courts generally refer to as "culpable participation"). See In re Asia Pulp & Paper Sec. Litig., 293 F.Supp.2d 391, 395-96 (S.D.N.Y.2003); In re CINAR, 186 F.Supp.2d at 309-10; Dorchester Investors v. Peak Trends Trust, 99 Civ. 4696(LMM)(FM), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1446, at *10-11 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 3, 2003) (all citing cases). [FN16] Again, I need not resolve the intra-circuit debate because, even if scienter is required, all three elements of a Section 15 claim are sufficiently pleaded here. The Complaint alleges that Philip committed violations of section 11 of the Securities Act in relation to the November 1997 public offerings (Compl.¶¶ 382-391), and no party has challenged the sufficiency of those allegations. Moreover, as discussed above in connection with the Section 20(a) claim, plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged Haynes' and Knauss' control status and their "culpable participation" in Philip's fraud. Accordingly, Haynes' and Knauss' motion to dismiss the Section 15 claim is denied.

FN16. Some courts holding that plaintiffs asserting a Section 15 claim need not plead "culpable participation" have reasoned that, because the requisite underlying Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) violation sounds in strict liability and does not require defendants' knowledge of the misrepresentations, it makes "little sense to compel plaintiffs to allege a culpable state of mind in order to state a claim under Section 15." In re CINAR, 186 F.Supp.2d at 310 (citing In re Indep. Energy Holdings, 154 F.Supp.2d at 770 and In re Twinlab Corp. Sec. Litig., 103 F.Supp.2d 193, 208 (E.D.N.Y.2000)). See also In re Sterling Foster & Co. Sec. Litig., 222 F.Supp.2d 216, 282 (E.D.N.Y.2002); In re Deutsche Telekom AG, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2627, at *16-17. I need not decide whether I agree, though I note that the Second Circuit's recent decision in Rombach, discussed in the text above, casts at least some doubt on its continued force in cases where the underlying Section 11 (or Section 12(a)(2)) claim is based on fraud.

* * *

For the reasons stated above, Deloitte's motion to dismiss is denied as to all claims. Haynes' and Knauss' motion to dismiss is denied as to all claims except that their motion to dismiss the Section 20(a) claim is granted insofar as the claim is based on their liability for underlying primary violations occurring before August 7, 1997.

SO ORDERED:

2004 WL 1152501 (S.D.N.Y.), Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P
92,836

END OF DOCUMENT

48

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

JPMORGAN CHASE BANK, in its capacity as Administrative Agent under the Credit Agreement, Plaintiff,

v.

Gary WINNICK, Dan J. Cohrs, Lodwick M.
Cook, Hank Millner James C. Gorton,
Joseph Clayton, Thomas J. Casey, S. Wallace
Dawson Jr., Susan Dullabh, Thomas
Robershaw, David A Walsh Joseph P. Perrone,
Robin Wright, Patrick Joggerst,
Brian Fitzpatrick, David Carrey, Jackie
Armstrong, Mark Attanasio, David L.
Lee, Geoffrey J.W. Kent, Eric Hippeau,
Norman Brownstein, William E. Conway,
Jr., Defendants.

No. 03 Civ. 8535(GEL).

June 23, 2004.

Ralph C. Ferrara, Colby A. Smith, Jonathan
E. Richman, Jeffrey S. Jacobson, Debevoise &
Plimpton, New York, N.Y. for defendants.

Michael L. Hirshfeld, Andrew E. Tomback,
Allan S. Brilliant, Millbank, Tweed, Hadley &
McCloy, for plaintiff.

OPINION AND ORDER

LYNCH, J.

*1 This action presents another strand in the web of litigation surrounding the alleged accounting fraud and eventual bankruptcy of the telecommunications company Global Crossing, Ltd. ("GC"). Plaintiff JP Morgan Chase Bank brings this action on behalf of a syndicate of commercial banks ("the Banks") against various officers, directors, and employees of GC in connection with a series of loans extended to GC between August 17, 2001, and September 28, 2001, pursuant to a credit agreement entered into in August 2000 (the "Credit Agreement"). The Banks claim that GC made intentional and negligent misrepresentations to the Banks regarding the company's compliance with certain financial covenants in the Credit Agreement in order to mislead the Banks into continuing to extend the company credit. Plaintiffs seek $1.7 billion in damages. Defendants now move for dismissal of, or in the alternative, for summary judgment against, the plaintiffs' claims. For the reasons set forth below, the motion to dismiss will be granted in part; as to the remaining claims, the motion for summary judgment will be denied.

BACKGROUND

The relevant facts, which are drawn from the complaint except where otherwise noted, are as follows. On August 10, 2000, the Banks entered into a Credit Agreement with GC to extend a total of $2.25 billion of credit to GC, $1.7 billion of which was in the form of a credit facility (or line of credit) (the "Credit Facility") and the remainder of which was in the form of a term loan. Under the terms of the Credit Agreement, the Banks agreed to extend credit to GC up to the $1.7 billion limit provided in the Credit Facility, provided a GC officer certified that the company was in compliance with the covenants and the other terms of the Credit Agreement at the time of each borrowing. Failure to comply with the covenants in the agreement would result in a default, terminating GC's line of credit and causing all of its debt under the Credit Agreement (including the term loan and any amount extended under the Credit Facility) to come immediately due. Under the agreement, each loan request was "deemed" a "representation and warranty" by GC that no "event of default" had occurred. (See Jacobson Decl. Ex. A, Credit Agreement § 4.02.) The Banks also secured the right under the Credit Agreement to inspect GC's books and records "upon reasonable prior notice ... and as often as reasonably requested." (Id. § 5.07.)

Whether or not the company was in compliance with its covenants was to be determined in part by calculating its "Total Leverage Ratio," or the ratio of its debt to a specific measure of its earnings styled as "four-quarter trailing consolidated earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization" ("Consolidated EBITDA"). GC was required to maintain a Total Leverage Ratio below 4.75 during the relevant time period, meaning that GC's debt could not exceed 4.75 times its Consolidated EBITDA. Consolidated EBITDA, as defined in the Credit Agreement, included regular recurring income booked under Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"), as well as "deferred revenue," which consisted of income received that could not, in accordance with GAAP, be booked in the current accounting period. The use of Consolidated EBITDA as a measure was significant in that a main source of GC's revenue was sales of "indefeasible rights of use" ("IRU"), the right to use capacity on its fiber-optic network for a specified time period. Under GAAP, revenue from IRU sales could not be booked up front, but rather, had to be amortized over the life of the IRU. By including deferred revenue in Consolidated EBITDA, the company was able to report revenue from the IRU sales up front, thus increasing its total reported income and decreasing its Total Leverage Ratio.

*2 The complaint alleges that following a slowdown in the telecommunications industry in late 2000 due to a glut of capacity on the market, GC began engaging in "improper reciprocal trades of IRUs with other distressed participants in the industry." (Compl. ¶ 14.) These reciprocal transactions, or "swaps" of capacity, would typically involve a sale of capacity to another telecom provider in exchange for that provider's agreement to purchase capacity from GC of an equivalent stated value; each company would then be able to book the revenue from the sale. In fact, the complaint alleges, these transactions were "of little to no value to [GC]," as the capacity purchased was unnecessary and the income created by the sales was artificial; they were entered solely in order to create the appearance of revenue, to inflate the Consolidated EBITDA, and thus to meet the company's debt covenants and the financial expectations of the securities markets.

Reporting revenue from the improper swaps up front and including it in its Consolidated EBITDA successfully deceived the Banks into believing that GC was financially solvent, when in fact it was on the brink of financial collapse. "The artificial revenue became a significant enough portion of [GC's] Consolidated EBITDA to make the Defendants' certifications false" beginning with financial statements submitted at the end of the fourth quarter of 2000 (Compl. ¶ 15), and allowed the company to continue to draw on its Credit Facility until it had reached the $1.7 billion maximum under the agreement at the end of September 2001. On the basis of GC's inclusion of revenue from swaps in its 2000 annual report on Form 10-K and in its quarterly reports for the first three quarters of 2001, the Banks now bring claims against defendants for intentional and negligent misrepresentation, as well as related claims of conspiracy and aiding and abetting. Defendants move for dismissal of all claims for failure to allege any actionable misrepresentations, and in the alternative, for summary judgment on grounds that the plaintiffs could not reasonably have relied on the defendants' misrepresentations.

DISCUSSION

I. MOTION TO DISMISS

A. Legal Standard on a Motion to Dismiss

On a motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), the Court must accept as true all well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and view them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, drawing all reasonable inferences in its favor. Leeds v. Meltz, 85 F.3d 51, 53 (2d Cir.1996). The Court will not dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957). Beyond the facts in the complaint, the Court may consider "any written instrument attached to it as an exhibit or any statements or documents incorporated in it by reference." Cortec Indus., Inc. v. Sum Holding, L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 47 (2d Cir.1991).

B. Actionable Misrepresentations

*3 The defendants' principal argument on their motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claims, and their sole argument on plaintiffs' fraud claims in particular, is that the plaintiffs have failed to allege any actionable misrepresentation on the part of the defendants. In order to state a claim for fraud under New York law, the plaintiff must allege that the defendant made a "material misrepresentation or omission of fact." Schlaifer Nance & Co. v. Estate of Andy Warhol, 119 F.3d 91, 98 (2d Cir.1997). [FN1] Defendants claim that their forms 10-Q for the first and second quarters of 2001, which were provided to the Banks at the time the loans were sought, specifically and truthfully disclosed the existence of reciprocal swap transactions. (See D. Br. 7-8; Jacobson Decl. Ex. MM at 11, 16; OO at 21.) [FN2] This should have put the Banks on notice "of the very information they claim not to have had when they made the loans," and should have "superseded whatever was said or was not said about such transactions" in the 2000 10-K. (D.Br.8.)

FN1. Defendants do not challenge the plaintiffs' pleading on the other elements of a claim for fraud under New York law on their motion to dismiss. Those elements are knowledge of falsity, intent to defraud, reasonable reliance, and causation. Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98. Defendants do, however, challenge the reasonableness of plaintiffs' reliance in their motion for summary judgment, discussed below. See infra Part II.

FN2. Defendants also reference disclosures made in press releases issued prior to the time-period of the loans. These documents are outside of the evidentiary record, and are not attached to or incorporated by reference in the complaint. As such, they cannot properly be considered on a motion to dismiss.

The defendants' arguments on this front are unconvincing, because disclosure of these transactions did not put the plaintiffs on notice of the underlying fraud. Plaintiffs do not claim that the defendants failed to disclose the existence of reciprocal capacity trades; indeed, as plaintiffs concede, the existence of such transactions was known to the Banks when they entered into the Credit Agreement in August 2000. (P. Opp.5.) Nor do they claim that reciprocal transactions are intrinsically improper: the Banks do not contest that, as the defendants have argued, such arrangements could serve the legitimate business purpose of allowing telecommunications companies to avoid unnecessary capital construction costs by engaging in mutual trades of capacity. Rather, the gravamen of plaintiffs' claim is that beginning in the fourth quarter of 2000, GC's transactions had no purpose other than to create the appearance of revenue. As such, they had no legitimate business justification, and GC's reporting of the revenue derived from them was inherently false and misleading. It is therefore immaterial that defendants' first and second quarter 10-Qs disclosed the existence of reciprocal transactions, as that is not what plaintiffs allege them to have misrepresented. [FN3]

FN3. The defendants' argument that the revelations in the first and second quarter 10-Qs "superseded" any falsehoods in the 2000 10-K by revealing the existence of swaps is therefore irrelevant. Even if the quarterly statements corrected any past non-disclosure of existing swaps, this would not have made a difference because, as stated above, the issue was the nature of the swaps and not their existence.

As a matter of pleading, plaintiffs have adequately alleged that the defendants' financial statements in their 2000 10-K and their first and second quarter 10-Qs included revenue figures that were materially false and misleading (or, stated differently, that they omitted the material fact that the transactions in question were shams), and that these falsehoods were perpetrated in order to preserve the company's ability to draw on a line of credit that was increasingly necessary for its day-to-day survival. The motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claims on these grounds is therefore denied. [FN4]

FN4. Defendants have not raised any defenses specific to plaintiffs' claims for aiding and abetting fraud (third cause of action) or conspiracy to commit fraud (fourth cause of action), but have merely argued that these claims "cannot survive if the underlying claims are deficient." (D.Br.9.) Because plaintiffs' underlying claims for fraud withstand the motion to dismiss, these ancillary claims survive as well.

C. Claims against "Reporting Defendants"

*4 Defendants next challenge the plaintiffs' claims (second and sixth causes of action) against two of the so-called "Reporting Defendants," Susan Dullabh and Thomas Robershaw, for fraudulent and negligent misrepresentations based on their signing of GCs borrowing requests submitted over the two-month period in question. The plaintiffs allege that because each borrowing requests was "deemed" a representation by GC that it remained in compliance with its covenants, when in fact it was not, the individual officers signing such requests should be liable for those false representations. Defendants argue that because the borrowing requests "do not make any representations at all [but] simply asked for money," and because they do not contain any "facial inaccuracies," the requests cannot constitute actionable misrepresentations. (D. Br. 12; Reply 10.) They further argue that because Dullabh and Robershaw were not parties to the Credit Agreement that created the provision "deeming" the requests to be a representation about GC's financial condition, this provision cannot create an actionable tort claim against them.

If defendants were correct, the provision of the Credit Agreement deeming the borrowing requests to be representations about the company's financial condition would be meaningless. This provision represented a bargained-for agreement between two sophisticated business entities. By allowing the Banks to rely on each borrowing request as a renewed representation that GC's covenants remained satisfied, these requests served as a proxy for a more thorough, and undoubtedly more onerous, reporting requirement. This clearly operated to GC's benefit in terms of ease of drawing on its credit. In turn, it provided important protection for the Banks in the event that such representations should prove false. Having so clearly benefitted from this provision, GC cannot now escape from its burdens by resort to the lame argument that the borrowing requests did not amount to a "facial misrepresentations." Nothing in the law of misrepresentation requires courts to ignore the context in which a representation was made, or the fact that it was only considered a "representation" pursuant to a separate contract between the parties. The Banks had every right to rely on these requests at the time they were made as "representations," as they were understood under the Credit Agreement's terms, and to have them legally construed as such in a subsequent tort claim for fraud. [FN5]

FN5. The fact that the reports did not contain "facial misrepresentations" is, however, relevant to the question of whether the Banks were on inquiry notice of the fraud. See infra Part II.C.2.

Defendants' further argument that Dullabh and Robershaw cannot be held liable because they were not parties to the Credit Agreement, and therefore did not agree to "deem" the requests representations of compliance, is equally devoid of support. The one case defendants cite, Lerner v. Amalgamated Clothing & Textile Workers Union, 938 F.2d 2, 5 (2d Cir.1991), does not, as defendants claim, stand for the broad proposition that "a contract with [a] corporation does not bind [its] officer" (D.Br.12); rather, Lerner simply held that an officer does not become personally bound to perform a contract (there, to pay employee wages and benefits) merely by signing it. As plaintiffs correctly point out, a corporation may only act through its agents, Suez Equity Investors, L.P. v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, 250 F.3d 87, 101 (2d Cir.2001), and under New York law, "[o]fficers and directors of a corporation may be held liable for fraud if they participate in it or have actual knowledge of it." Cohen v. Koenig, 25 F.3d 1168, 1173 (2d Cir.1994) (citations omitted). [FN6] Dullabh and Robershaw were not low-ranking employees; they were the Vice President Treasury and the Director of Capital Markets, respectively. At the pleading stage, it is appropriate to allow the plaintiffs' claims to proceed against these defendants on the assumption that persons occupying such positions in the company would have knowledge of both the fraud and the substantive terms of the Credit Agreement when they signed the borrowing requests. Cf. In re Symbol Techs. Secs. Litig., 762 F.Supp. 510, 515 (E.D.N.Y.1991) (holding that inference of outside directors' knowledge of fraud should be allowed at the pleading stage for purposes of establishing "demand futility" because such knowledge, "along with information about when and how [the director] received it, is peculiarly within the possession of the defendants and cannot be known to plaintiff prior to discovery"). [FN7] Defendants' motion to dismiss plaintiffs' second and sixth claims against them on these grounds will therefore be denied.

FN6. Defendants' attempt to distinguish Cohen is unavailing. Defendants argue that the Banks have not alleged that Dullabh and Robershaw had knowledge of the fraud, as plaintiffs have "acknowledge[d] was required in Cohen v. Koenig." (D. Reply 10 .) But Cohen states that "[o]fficers and directors of a corporation may be held liable for fraud if they participate in it or have actual knowledge of it." 25 F.3d at 1173 (emphasis added). Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged these defendants' participation in the fraud. (See Compl. ¶¶ 25-26.)

FN7. Defendants also attempt to distinguish In re Symbol Technologies Securities Litigation, 762 F.Supp. 510 (E.D.N.Y.1991) and Marine Midland Bank v. John E. Russo Produce Co., 50 N.Y.2d 31 (1980), also cited by plaintiffs, on grounds that the defendants in this case were not "outside directors" as they were in those cases. (D. Reply 10.) The fact that Dullabh and Robershaw were in fact inside officers cuts against, rather than for, defendants' argument, since as insiders they would likely have been more directly involved in the day-to-day activities of the corporation than the defendants in Marine Midland and Symbol Technologies.

D. Negligent Misrepresentation and Related Claims

*5 In addition to arguing that plaintiffs fail to assert an actionable misrepresentation for purposes of any of its claims, defendants further assert a specific challenge to plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation claims. Defendants argue that these claims are deficient for two related reasons; first, that no "special relationship" existed between the Banks and the defendants such that the defendants were under a legal duty to speak with care, and second, that a purely contractual relationship cannot support a negligent misrepresentation claim. Defendants are correct.

Under New York law, in order to state a claim for negligent misrepresentation, a plaintiff is required to allege that the speaker is bound to the other party "by some relation or duty of care." Dallas Aerospace, Inc. v. CIS Air Corp., 352 F.3d 775, 788 (2d Cir.2003). [FN8] In ordinary commercial contexts, liability does not attach as a matter of course for merely negligent statements; rather, it is imposed "only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party such that reliance on the negligent misrepresentation is justified." Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 263 (1996). As courts have noted, such specialized knowledge usually arises due to the speaker's status as a professional, such as an accountant or an engineer, with a particular background in the subject of the alleged misrepresentation. Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 263; Doehla v. Wathne Limited, Inc., No. 98 Civ. 6087(CSH), 1999 WL 566311, at *19 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 1999). A special relationship may be brought about by "either privity of contract between the parties or a relationship so close as to approach that of privity." I.L.G.W.U. Nat'l Retirement Fund v. Cuddlecoat, No. 01 Civ. 4019(BSJ), 2004 WL 444071, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2004), quoting Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 382 (1992). However, where the duty arises in commercial contexts in which a contract exists, the duty attendant to that special relationship "must spring from circumstances extraneous to, and not constituting elements of the contract, although it may be connected with and dependent upon the contract." Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v. Long Island RR Co., 70 N.Y.2d 382, 389 (1987). In other words, "[i]f the only interest at stake is that of holding the defendant to a promise, the courts have said that the plaintiff may not transmogrify the contract claim into one for tort." Hargrave v. Oki Nursery, Inc., 636 F.2d 897, 899 (2d Cir.1980).

FN8. Defendants do not challenge plaintiffs' pleadings with respect to the other elements of the tort of negligent misrepresentation, which are "(1) carelessness in imparting words; (2) upon which others were expected to rely; (3) and upon which they did act or failed to act; (4) to their damage." Dallas Aerospace, 352 F.3d 775, 788 (2d Cir.2003).

Plaintiffs argue that the Credit Agreement itself established the elements of a "special relationship" required by New York law:

(1) an awareness by the maker of the statement that it is to be used for a particular purpose; (2) reliance by a known party on the statement in furtherance of that purpose; and (3) some conduct by the maker of the statement linking it to the relying party and evincing its understanding of that reliance.

*6 Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *20, citing Prudential, 80 N.Y.2d at 384. They assert that defendants were aware that their statements would be used to satisfy the Banks of GC's financial condition and induce them to extend loans, that the Banks relied on such representations, and that the defendants knew that the Credit Agreement required these assurances and themselves provided them "in order to cause the Banks to rely on them and advance funds." (P. Opp.10.) However, the plaintiffs fail to show how these factors were in any way distinct from the defendants' obligations under the terms of the Credit Agreement itself. "[T]he contract itself is the sole basis for the imposition of a special duty, but that duty only extends as far as the contract's scope--the reasonable disclosure of information by [defendants] to [plaintiffs]." PPI Enters. (U.S.), Inc. v. Del Monte Foods Co., No. 99 Civ. 3794(BSJ), 2003 WL 22118977, at *25-*26 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2003). Without the obligation imposed under the terms of the Credit Agreement, the defendants would be under no obligation to use special care to provide accurate financial information to the Banks; indeed, if not for the existence of the contract, they would have had no relationship to the Banks whatsoever. Plaintiffs may not "transmogrify the contract claim into one for tort." Hargrave, 636 F.2d at 899; see also LaSalle Bank v. Citicorp Real Estate, No. 02 Civ. 7868(HB), 2003 WL 1461483, at *3-*6 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2003) (holding that no special relationship existed between a mortgage loan seller and purchaser where duty to provide accurate information about financial status of companies subject to mortgage arose solely from the operative purchase agreement).

Kimmel, relied on by plaintiffs, is not to the contrary. Kimmell explains that "[i]n a commercial context, a duty to speak with care exists when 'the relationship of the parties, arising out of contract or otherwise, [is] such that in morals and good conscience the one has the right to rely upon the other for the information.'" Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 263, quoting International Prods. Co. v. Erie R.R. Co., 244 N.Y. 331, 338 (1927) (alteration in original). But, as other courts have noted, Kimmell did not represent a departure from the traditional understanding that a special relationship is required in order to state a claim for negligent misrepresentation. See Dallas Aerospace, 352 F.3d at 788-89; I.L.G.W.U., 2004 WL 444071, at *2. In Kimmell, the New York Court of Appeals upheld an award against the C.E.O. of an energy company for negligent misrepresentations to investors regarding the company's financial prospects based on out-of-date utility rates. There, the duty did not arise simply from the existence of the contract or from its terms, but rather, from the particular factual circumstances underlying the plaintiffs' decision to invest. In upholding the award, the court emphasized that the defendant had personally sought out the individual investors, had earned a commission for inducing them to invest, and had "personally requested 'updated' projections [to give to plaintiffs], which he represented were reasonable and generated after a 'thorough discussion with our West Coast administrator,' even though they were not based on the utility rate structure in effect at the time." 89 N.Y.2d at 264-65. "[U]nder these circumstances," the court concluded that there was sufficient evidence in the record to support a finding that "the defendant owed a duty of care to plaintiffs here." Id. at 265. Thus, Kimmell neither abolished the requirement of a special relationship nor loosened the requirement that such relationship must arise due to some factor extraneous to the contract's terms.

*7 Plaintiffs also argue, however, that they have met the requirement of pleading a special relationship by alleging that the defendants "possessed specialized expertise, knowledge, and experience concerning [GC's] accounting and actual financial condition." (P. Opp.10.) According to plaintiffs, because the defendants were "far more knowledgeable about the fiber optic cable business, and particularly the structure and specific capacity needs of [GC's] fiber optic network" than the Banks, the Banks were "absolutely entitled to rely upon Defendants' representations in this regard." (Id. at 11.) But this amounts to nothing more than knowledge of the particulars of the company's business--and of the true situation underlying the misrepresentations pertaining to that business. This does not constitute the type of "specialized knowledge" that is required in order to impose a duty of care in the commercial context; if it were, every bank would have a claim against every borrower who failed to exercise due care in the context of commercial bank loans. See LaSalle, 2003 WL 1461483, at *3-*4 (no duty arose from seller's "unique knowledge or access to information" about mortgage status). Borrowers will almost always have "specialized" knowledge of the particulars of their businesses, and indeed, of the facts underlying any misrepresentations made in support of desired loans. That is why banks, which are in the business of assessing lending risks posed by potential borrowers, have sophisticated means of assessing those risks that cut across industries and areas of technical expertise. The relationship between a bank and a borrower is the very epitome of an arm's length commercial transaction: the borrower must comply with the negotiated terms of its contract, and may not defraud the lender by deliberate falsehood, but it is not liable in tort for mere carelessness about its representations.

Finally, plaintiffs argue that at the very least, the question of whether a special relationship exists is a question of fact. It is true that several cases have so characterized it. See, e.g., Suez Equity Investors, 250 F.3d at 103-04; Wells Fargo Bank Northwest, N.A. v. Taca Int'l Airlines, S.A., 247 F.Supp.2d 352, 366-67 (S.D.N.Y.2002); Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 264; Knight Securities L.P. v. Fiduciary Trust Co., 774 N.Y.S.2d 488, 489 (1st Dept.2004). But these cases were decided on different facts. For example, in Suez Equity Investors, a case involving alleged misrepresentation between investors and a healthcare financing venture, the court specifically found that "plaintiff's complaint implies a relationship between the parties that extended beyond the typical arm's length business transaction: defendants initiated contact with plaintiffs, induced them to forebear from performing their own due diligence, and repeatedly vouched for the veracity of the allegedly deceptive information." 250 F.3d at 103. Similarly, in Wells Fargo, which involved a dispute between the lessee and lessor of an aircraft, the complaint alleged that several of the defendant's agents "made expert representations about maintenance costs," "had unique expertise in the intended conversion of Airbus 300 aircraft from passenger to cargo use," and "misrepresented the historical maintenance costs and the good mechanical condition of the planes." Wells Fargo, 247 F.Supp.2d at 366-67. On these facts, the court assumed that "these somewhat sparse allegations suffice, at least at the pleading stage" to withstand a motion to dismiss, "[s]ince the determination of whether a special relationship exists is essentially a factual inquiry." Id. at 367.

*8 In each of these cases, the facts alleged in the complaint could fairly be read to justify a finding of a special relationship of trust and confidence, above that created by the contracts involved. [FN9] By contrast, where no such allegations have existed, courts have not hesitated to dismiss negligent representation claims on motions to dismiss. For instance, In LaSalle Bank, a mortgage loan purchaser charged that the seller had misrepresented the status of various mortgages purchased. The court rejected the argument that the defendant had a duty, "separate and distinct from its contractual one, to impart correct information based on [its] unique knowledge or access to information" about the mortgage loans in question. 2003 WL 1461483, at *3. The contract, which represented "a complex transaction between two sophisticated entities," could not form the basis of for the plaintiff's reliance. Id. at *5. The court dismissed the case on the ground that "the factual predicates of [defendant's] negligent misrepresentation claim are elements of and not extraneous to [the contract], and thus ... do not create an independent duty on [defendant]." Id. at *3. See also I.L.G.W.U., 2004 WL 444071, at *2-*3 (dismissing negligent misrepresentation claim where the third-party plaintiff failed to allege existence of special relationship between union and clothing manufacturer); Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *20 (dismissing negligent misrepresentation claim against lawyer by non-client where lawyer did not "hold himself out to be an expert" and "reliance on [his] opinion by the third-party [was not the] 'end and aim' of the engagement of the lawyer"); Clark-Fitzpatrick, 70 N.Y.2d at 390 (dismissing gross negligence claim by contractor against railroad where duty to use due care in designing the project was "clearly within the contemplation of the written agreement").

FN9. The other case cited by plaintiff, Goodman Mfg. Co. L.P. v. Raytheon Co., No. 98 Civ. 2774(LAP), 1999 WL 681382, at *15 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 31, 1999), did not reach the question of whether a special relationship existed, because the court found that the plaintiffs had failed to allege reasonable reliance.

Such is the case here. Plaintiffs have failed to allege either a relationship that is in any way distinct from that between a plain vanilla borrower and lender, or a duty of care arising from any source external to the Credit Agreement. The law does not impose liability for negligent misrepresentations in such a context. Plaintiffs' claims for negligent misrepresentation, along with their ancillary claims of "aiding and abetting" such misrepresentations (plaintiffs' fifth through seventh causes of action), must therefore be dismissed.

Because plaintiffs' fraud claims survive, the Court will now turn to defendants' motion for summary judgment on these remaining claims.

II. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

A. Standard for Summary Judgment

For their summary judgment motion, which was filed prior to discovery, defendants rely solely on financial reports and other documents available in the public record. [FN10] Summary judgment is appropriate when no genuine issues of material fact are in dispute and when, viewing the evidence in a light most favorable to the nonmoving party, no reasonable trier of fact could disagree as to the outcome of the case. See Nabisco, Inc. v. Warner-Lambert Co., 220 F.3d 43, 45 (2d Cir.2000). While all ambiguities in the evidentiary record must be resolved in favor of the nonmoving party, "the nonmoving party may not rely on conclusory allegations or unsubstantiated speculation." Scotto v. Almenas, 143 F.3d 105, 114 (2d Cir.1998). To establish a genuine issue of material fact, the party opposing summary judgment "must produce specific facts indicating' that a genuine factual issue exists." Scotto, 143 F.3d at 114, quoting Wright v. Coughlin, 132 F.3d 133, 137 (2d Cir.1998); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). The court "is not to weigh the evidence but is instead required to view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment, to draw all reasonable inferences in favor of that party, and to eschew credibility assessments." Weyant v. Okst, 101 F.3d 845, 854 (2d Cir.1996). Summary judgment is then appropriate if "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits ... show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c).

FN10. The evidence relied upon is limited to the text of the Credit Agreement; certain GC disclosures during 2001; certain press reports during the same period; securities analysts' reports about GC; the market prices of GC's stock and the stocks of other telecom companies; and the GC Plan of Reorganization filed with the Bankruptcy Court. (See D. Br. 13; D. Rule 56.1 Statement of Undisputed Facts).

B. Fraud Claims

*9 With respect to plaintiffs' fraud claims, defendants assert that the plaintiffs cannot demonstrate reliance on the alleged misrepresentations. The crux of their argument is that, even accepting arguendo that the financial reports provided to the Banks were in themselves sufficiently false and misleading to survive the motion to dismiss, the plaintiffs' claims would fail because the Banks had access to information sufficient to put them on notice of the alleged falsehoods. Such access would have triggered a "duty to inquire" negating the reasonableness of the Banks' reliance on those representations. The Banks' information, according to defendants, derived from two sources: (1) GC's financial statements themselves, which disclosed the existence of swaps, and (2) reports publicly issued by various financial analysts assessing the financial status of GC for the purpose of educating potential investors. [FN11] Plaintiffs dispute both the legal question of when a duty to inquire is triggered under New York law and the factual assertion that the information available was sufficient to put them on notice of the fraud.

FN11. Defendants argue that the service of a JP Morgan officer, Maria Elena Lagomasino, on GC's audit committee during the relevant time period should have put the Banks on notice of the alleged fraud. This argument is without merit. First, the complaint does not charge Lagomasino with any particular knowledge. Second, there is no allegation that Lagomasino served on the GC board in her capacity as a JP Morgan officer. On the contrary, plaintiffs have provided evidence in the form of an email from an official at JP Morgan specifying the parameters of her roles with respect to the two companies: namely, that she would "not be serving at the request of [JP Morgan], but rather independently," that her "fiduciary obligations as a director of Global and a [JP Morgan] executive are distinct from one another," and that she "may not share with [JP Morgan] nonpublic information relating to Global ... acquired in [her] capacity as a Global director." (Tomback Decl. Ex. A.) Any information that she might have known was therefore not chargeable to the Banks. See New York Marine & General Ins. Co. v. Tradeline (L.L.C.), 266 F.3d 112, 122 (2d Cir.2001) ("[K]nowledge acquired by an agent acting within the scope of its agency is imputed to the principal." (emphasis added)); Martinson v. Massachusetts Bay Ins. Co., 947 F.Supp. 124, 129 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (holding that under New York agency law, notice given to individual could not be imputed to defendant corporation where it was undisputed that individual was not acting as defendant's agent).

1. Test for Reliance and the Duty to Inquire

In order to prevail on a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation under New York law, plaintiffs must show that the defendants made a false representation of a material fact to the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs were injured as a result of justifiable reliance upon that representation. Dallas Aerospace, 352 F.3d at 784. Reliance is necessary in order to demonstrate causation; where a plaintiff actually knew at the time a representation was made that it was false, she cannot claim to have relied on the truth of that representation, and any injury she suffers is therefore not attributable to the defendant. See Christophedes, 106 F.3d 22, 26-27; Stolow v. Greg Manning Auctions Inc., 258 F.Supp.2d 236, 249 (S.D.N.Y.2003); Greenberg v. Christ, 282 F.Supp.2d 112, 119 (S.D.N.Y.2003).

As a threshold matter, plaintiffs assert that the proper test for reliance is not "reasonable" reliance, but "justifiable" reliance, which they argue is a less demanding burden. Although it is true that some cases use the language of "justifiable" reliance," see e.g., Christophedes, the distinction is hardly clear. Rather, it appears that the cases use these terms somewhat interchangeably. See, e.g., Banque Arabe Et Internationale D'Investissement v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 156 (2d Cir.1995) ("[The plaintiff is] required to establish that it actually relied on the disclosure or lack thereof, and that such reliance was reasonable or justifiable."); also compare Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98, and DIMON, 48 F.Supp.2d 359, 367 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (reasonable), with Christophedes, 106 F.3d at 26-27, and Lazard Freres, 108 F.3d at 1531 (justifiable), but see id. at 1543 (reasonable). However, the Court need not decide which standard applies because factual questions remain that preclude summary judgment even under the purportedly more stringent "reasonableness" standard.

*10 In assessing whether reliance on allegedly fraudulent misrepresentations is reasonable or justifiable, New York takes a contextual view, focusing on the level of sophistication of the parties, the relationship between them, and the information available at the time of the operative decision. "Ordinarily there is no duty to exercise due diligence, and [courts] have described the necessary showing of care as 'minimal diligence' or 'negating its own recklessness.'" Banque Franco-Hellenique de Commerce Int'l et Maritime, S.A. v. Christophides, 106 F.3d 22, 26-27 (2d Cir.1997) (citations omitted). However, sophisticated business entities are held to a higher standard. As Judge Friendly explained, where the plaintiff "has the means of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth, or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations." Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 80-81 (2d Cir.1980) (quoting Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N.Y. 590, 596

(1892). Therefore, "where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance." Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98, quoting Grumman Allied Indus. v. Rohr Indus., Inc., 748 F.2d 729, 737 (2d Cir.1984).

In addition, "[a] heightened degree of diligence is required where the victim of fraud had hints of its falsity." Christophides, 106 F.3d at 26-27. This rule applies where the "[c]ircumstances [are] so suspicious as to suggest to a reasonably prudent plaintiff that the defendants' representations may be false"; in such cases, a plaintiff "cannot reasonably rely on those representations, but rather must 'make additional inquiry to determine their accuracy.'" Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98, quoting Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein, 33 F.3d 159, 164 (2d Cir.1994). Once the duty to inquire is triggered, as defendants claim it was here, a plaintiff is foreclosed from bringing a claim for false representations if no inquiry is made. Giannacopoulos v. Credit Suisse, 37 F.Supp.2d 626, 632-33 (S.D.N.Y.1999).

The parties' legal dispute concerns the precise circumstances that trigger this duty to inquire. At oral argument and in a subsequent round of supplemental briefing on this subject (and to a lesser degree in their motion papers), defendants have argued that the duty to inquire is triggered as soon as a plaintiff has nay "hints of falsity," or any information indicating that the statements "may be false." (See D. Reply 6, citing Christophides, 106 F.3d 22, 26-27; supplemental letter-brief from Ralph C. Ferrara, dated April 19, 2004 [hereinafter "Ferrara Letter."]) Under this standard, the argument goes, the Banks, as sophisticated lenders, had sufficient "hints" that the information GC had presented was false, and should therefore be foreclosed from complaining; the duty to inquire was triggered here by both GC's financial reports themselves, which disclosed the existence of swaps, and analysts' reports questioning the quality of the revenue such swaps produced.

The Banks counter that the duty to inquire is not triggered by a mere "hint" of falsity, but rather, requires more direct and definitive notice, and further, that no such duty exists where the plaintiffs would not have been able to ascertain the truth even had they made an inquiry.

*11 With respect to the appropriate legal standard, it is true that the language in some of the cases cited is quite strong. See, e.g., Grumman, 748 F.2d at 737 ("Where sophisticated businessmen engaged in major transactions enjoy access to critical information but fail to take advantage of that access, New York courts are particularly disinclined to entertain claims of justifiable reliance."); Abrahami v. UPC Constr. Co., Inc., 638 N.Y.S.2d 11, 14 (1st Dept.1996) ("[W]here a party has means available to him for discovering, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the true nature of a transaction he is about to enter into, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentation." (internal citations and quotations omitted)); Gianappolis, 37 F.Supp.2d at 632-33 ("Parties cannot demand judicial protection when they could have protected themselves with a reasonable inquiry into any misrepresented facts."). However, this does not mean that any bright line rule exists. To the contrary, the Second Circuit has characterized the inquiry into what constitutes reasonable reliance as "always nettlesome because it is so fact-intensive." Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98. A closer analysis of the facts of the cases hinging on reliance indicates that the standard is not as unforgiving as defendants make it out to be.

These cases fall into two rough categories. The first are those in which a sophisticated party performs no independent investigation whatsoever, even when the context or background information available should arouse suspicion. As Judge Friendly noted, "[d]ecisions holding that reliance on misrepresentations was not justified are generally cases in which plaintiff was placed on guard or practically faced with the facts."

Mallis, 615 F.2d at 81. For example, in Abrahami, 638 N.Y.S.2d 11, the plaintiffs, who were private investors, sued a construction company in which they had invested after the defendant had made false representations about the company's "excellent business prospects." Id. at 12. The court held that plaintiffs' reliance on the representations was not justified because they had been "put on notice of UPC's possible precarious financial condition, and the need to conduct an investigation, by the initial reporting of only $54 of cash on hand," and yet had conducted no independent investigation. Id. at 14. Had they exercised their right to perform an audit, the court found, the truth would have been available to them. Id. Similarly, in Waksman v. Cohen, No. 00 Civ. 9005(WK), 2002 WL 31466417 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 4, 2002), a partner in a real estate brokerage sued his partners for fraudulently concealing the status of a real-estate property that was the subject of litigation and thus inducing him to settle his claims. The court held that reliance was not justifiable when, in the context of settlement negotiations conducted "in the wake of contentious litigation," the plaintiff failed to make any independent inquiry into the status of the property, despite being empowered to do so under New York partnership law. Id. at *6.*9. See also PPI Enterprises, 2003 WL 22118977, at *21 (no justifiable reliance where stock seller "failed to pursue or failed to reasonably incorporate into its own analysis of its Del Monte stock's value a series of disclosures made by Del Monte").

*12 The second group of cases are those in which a term of a contract central to the plaintiff's claim explicitly disavows or contradicts any representation on the subject of the supposed misrepresentation. For example, in Dallas Aerospace, 352 F.3d 775, the plaintiff, a buyer of used aircraft engines, sued the seller of an engine for falsely concealing that the engine had been involved in a "hard landing." The Second Circuit held that the existence of a "conspicuous 'AS IS WHERE IS' ' clause in the contract of sale explicitly "negate[d] all implied warranties concerning the condition of the goods." Id. at

785. Under these circumstances, the plaintiff was obligated to conduct an independent inquiry into the history of the engine, which would have been available from various other sources. Id. at 786. In Schlaifer Nance v. Estate of Andy Warhol, 927 F.Supp. 650 (S.D.N.Y.1996), the licensee of various works in the estate of the artist Andy Warhol sued the estate for misrepresentations about whether certain of the works subject to the licensing agreement had entered the public domain or were held by third parties. The district court found that the licensing agreement itself incorporated documents that indicated third-party ownership or otherwise "contemplated the possibility that the warranties were inaccurate" as to particular artworks. Id. at 663. Because the licensee had "conducted no due diligence to speak of," under these circumstances, it could not claim reasonable reliance. Id. at 662. In affirming the district court's finding, the Second Circuit noted that these numerous "red flags" had led to the "clear message [that] exclusive ownership of copyrights to all of Warhol's known artwork was an impossibility." 119 F.3d 91, 99. See also Siemens Westinghouse Power Corp. v. Dick Corp., 299 F.Supp.2d 242, 247-48 (S.D.N.Y.2004) (reliance not justified in claim for misrepresentation over delays in installation of turbine where liquidated damage clause in contract anticipated delays, and where claimant could have discovered potential problems with turbine from public documents); Valassis Communications, Inc. v. Weimer, 758 N.Y.S.2d 311, 312 (1st Dept.2003) (no reasonable reliance where plaintiff failed to verify accuracy of information in extra-contractual representation, despite specific contract provision disclaiming reliance on such representations); Societe Nationale D'Exploitation Industrielle Des Tabacs Et Allumettes v. Salomon Bros. Int'l Ltd., 702 N.Y.S.2d 258, 259 (1st Dept.2000) ("[The] claim of justifiable reliance is ... conclusively refuted by the disclaimer of representations of value contained in the ... provision setting forth the general terms governing the parties' transactional relationship.").

Viewed together, the facts of these cases do not support the interpretation that a duty to inquire is necessarily triggered as soon as a plaintiff has the slightest "hints" of any "possibility" of falsehood. In each of these cases, the notice to the plaintiff was clear and direct: it was either provided by plaintiff's own direct knowledge of the fraud, by the terms of an operative contract, or by circumstances surrounding the parties' relationship (e.g. litigation) that would normally arouse suspicion. In each of these circumstances, the plaintiff may be said to have been "placed on guard or practically faced with the facts" of the complained of fraud, Mallis, 615 F.2d at 81, and fulfilling the duty to inquire was a necessary precondition to proceeding with a misrepresentation claim. Thus, whether a duty to inquire is triggered is a context-specific and fact-based inquiry, rather than a bright-line rule, as defendants argue. See Schlaifer Nance, 119 F.3d at 98; Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *10. The outcome on this summary judgment motion therefore turns on the factual question of whether, when faced with the available information, the plaintiffs should necessarily have inquired further.

2. Information Available in GC's Books and Records

*13 Defendants' first argument is that the Banks, as sophisticated lenders with the "means" to discover the alleged falsehood, are foreclosed from claiming reasonable reliance because GC's financial records should themselves have put the plaintiffs on notice of the fraud. Their argument is not that the Banks failed to perform a sufficient initial investigation into the company's finances at the time they entered the Credit Agreement in August 2000--their due diligence on this front is not in dispute. Nor do defendants appear to claim that the Banks actually knew at the time the financial reports were made that they were false. Rather, their argument is that the financial reports on which the contract was based and the reports submitted subsequently should have aroused suspicion about GC's financial health at the time the loans were extended in August and September 2001.

This case is therefore distinguishable from those cases in which the plaintiff utterly failed to examine the defendants' representations or to perform due diligence in entering the challenged transaction in the first place. See, e.g., Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Insurance Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1543 (2d Cir.1997) (no reasonable reliance where broker-dealer failed to examine relevant report before entering contract); Miller v. Doniger, 707 N.Y.S.2d 170, 170-71 (1st Dept.2000) (no reasonable reliance where buyers failed to verify financial reports that were expressly based on sellers' own unverified representations); Abrahami, 638 N.Y.S.2d at 14; Waksman, 2002 WL 31466417, at *6-*9. It is undisputed that the Banks expressly bargained not only for the right to examine GC's books and records, but also for the provision of the Agreement deeming each borrowing request to be a representation that GC remained in compliance with its debt covenants at the time the request was made. Under these circumstances, it cannot be argued that the Banks failed to bargain for adequate safeguards to establish, at least initially, the basis for their reliance on the defendants' representations. Rather, this case deals with post-contract misrepresentations that the defendants claimed should have triggered the Banks' duty to inquire further before extending any loans under the Credit Facility.

Defendants effectively argue that GC's own financial statements, which claimed to show that the company was in compliance with its covenants, were so transparently false--or at least, that the assumptions on which they were based were so apparently questionable--that no reasonable banker would have lent GC a penny without conducting further inquiry into their accuracy. That argument cannot, on this record, support summary judgment. A reasonable fact-finder could conclude that the financial documents provided would not, on their face, have alerted the Banks to potential fraud. Just as disclosing the existence of reciprocal transactions does not amount to disclosure of the underlying fraud, neither would it necessarily have put the plaintiffs on notice that they should have investigated whether the reciprocal transactions were shams. Financial reports disclosing revenue from reciprocal transactions are quite different from those reports or documents held in other cases to have put plaintiffs on notice, such as the financial report in Abrahami showing "$54 cash on hand." 638 N.Y.S.2d at 14. There, the report itself demonstrated blatantly and directly the precariousness of the company's cash flow. Here, in stark contrast, GC's reports showed healthy revenues; discovering the falsity of those claims would have required an inquiry into the quality of the revenue reported. While it is true that the company's public financials had prompted some analysts to raise these very questions, see infra, the Court cannot say that the reports themselves should necessarily have generated sufficient doubt on the part of the Banks to trigger a duty to inquire as a matter of law.

*14 Moreover, even had the Banks exercised their right to inspect GC's books, there is no evidence on the present record that they necessarily had the means to discover the fraud. Under New York law, a plaintiff is not precluded from claiming reliance if the facts allegedly misrepresented are "peculiarly within the [defendant's] knowledge." Mallis, 615 F.2d at 80. Under such circumstances, "it is said that plaintiff may rely without prosecuting an investigation, as he has no independent means of ascertaining the truth." Id.; accord Lazard Freres, 108 F.3d at 1542; DIMON Inc. v. Folium, Inc., 48 F.Supp.2d at 368-71; Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *13. The entire complaint is based on the theory that GC "cooked the books" to make it appear that the reciprocal transactions had a justifiable business purpose, and that they had carefully concealed the truth from the Banks as well as the public at large. It is not at all apparent on this sparse, pre-discovery record, that the true nature of the swaps would have been revealed upon inspection. Perhaps further evidence will emerge in discovery or at trial indicating that, had the Banks performed even a cursory inquiry, they would have been able to ascertain that these transactions were shams. No such evidence exists at present. Moreover, even if the truth could have been discovered, there is no way of knowing what effort this would have taken. "New York cases recognize that the peculiar knowledge exception applies not only where the facts allegedly misrepresented literally were within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant, but also where the truth theoretically might have been discovered, though only with extraordinary effort or great difficulty." DIMON, 48 F.Supp.2d at 368; see also Lazard Freres, 108 F.3d at 1542 & n.9 (noting that New York law does not require that the information be "available only to the defendant and absolutely unknowable by the plaintiff before reliance can be deemed justified"); Mallis, 615 F.2d at 80 ("[I]ndeed some cases have imposed liability in situations in which plaintiff could have determined the truth with relatively modest investigation."). Factual questions therefore remain as to whether or not the Banks had access to the truth, and even if they did, as to what it would have taken to discover it. See Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *14.

Finally, defendants argue that reasonable reliance is impossible, because the Banks had bargained for the right to examine GC's books and records but failed to exercise that right. There is no such bright-line rule, even where sophisticated entities are concerned. Under defendants' reasoning, whenever a party bargains for a right which, if exercised, might provide the means to discover a concealed falsehood, it must exercise that right in every instance or risk extinguishing its remedies. Such a rule would not be realistic. Rather, the obligation to exercise the right of inspection must be understood as contingent on either "indisputable access to truth-revealing information," Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *11 (emphasis in original), or some suspicious event or information triggering the duty to inquire. The mere existence of the right to inquire, without more, is not dispositive. [FN12]

FN12. Plaintiffs argue that the Banks actually could not have exercised their right to inspect GC's books, despite their contractual guarantee of that right, for fear of being sued, because they were "contractually obligated to lend--period--upon the presentation by [GC] of facially compliant documentation." (P. Opp.23.) This cannot be the case; if it were, the bargained for right to inspect the company's books would be meaningless. "Under New York law an interpretation of a contract that has the effect of rendering at least one clause superfluous or meaningless ... will be avoided if possible." Galli v. Metz, 973 F.2d 145, 149 (2d Cir.1992) (internal quotation and citation omitted); see also Restatement (Second) Contracts § 203 (1979) ("[A]n interpretation which gives a reasonable, lawful, and effective meaning to all the terms is preferred to an interpretation which leaves a part unreasonable ... or of no effect.").

3. Information in Analysts' Reports

*15 The defendants argue that information external to the financial reports themselves, namely the company's plummeting stock price and negative public reports on GC issued during the relevant time period by financial analysts, should have raised sufficient questions about the swaps to trigger the Banks' duty to inquire. This argument is more persuasive, and if defendants' bright-line "hints of falsehood" test were the correct legal standard, the duty to inquire might well have been triggered. Information was readily available from a variety of credible and knowledgeable public sources casting doubt on both the value of the reported swap revenue and the company's financial prospects overall. But, as established above, that is not the standard. Rather, the reasonableness of the plaintiffs' reliance hinges on whether, on these facts, a reasonable lender of equivalent experience should have inquired further. To prevail on summary judgment, defendants must establish that only one answer to this question is possible.

The most obvious indicator of impending troubles was GC's stock price, which had plummeted from $29.19 a share at the time the Agreement was finalized to $4.98 a share, an 83% decline, when the Banks began lending money to GC under the Credit Facility on August 17, 2001; by the date of the last loan, it had declined to $1.80, a 94% decline. In addition, during the six weeks in which the Banks made their loans, GC's bonds lost between 35 and 55% of their value. (Id.

Ex. DD, EE.) This decline was mirrored by a similar decline in stock prices in the telecommunications industry in general, which had declined by a median of 86% between the date of the Agreement and September 30, 2001. (Id. Ex. HH.)

Analysts' reports, too, raised significant red flags. For example, on August 3, 2001, a Lehman Brothers report explained, "[t]he optimistic view of [swaps] is that [GC] needed the capacity ... in parts of the world where its network wasn't built out, and the $358M supplants capex that would have been spent to build out the network. The pessimistic view is that [GC] needs to spend this cash to solicit the business of other carriers, without which it would not be able to hit its numbers." (Jacobson Decl. Ex. F.) Under the heading "2Q Results Weak: Lowering Rating to Hold From a Buy," Credit Suisse First Boston described "disappointing recurring [revenues], and increased dependence on [revenues] derived from capacity swaps," and noted, "given that swap revenues are difficult to equate to market price levels and, this quarter, were so large (21% of rev[enues]), we are concerned that the quality of revenues was weaker than we had anticipated." (Id. Ex. B.) Merrill Lynch commented, "[w]hile we see capacity sales as staying stronger than many analysts have predicted, the fact that capacity/IRU sales make up a larger proportion of total revenues will nonetheless raise concerns over future growth rates and also cash flows.... Note also that capacity sales seemed to include a substantial contribution for capacity exchanged with other carriers." (Id. Ex. I.) During the same period, Moody's, Merrill Lynch, Credit Suisse First Boston, and Standard and Poors all either downgraded GC stock or reviewed it for possible downgrade. (Id. Ex. E, I, J.)

*16 However, as plaintiffs are quick to point out, the news on the street was not entirely negative, and many analysts' reports were either steadfastly positive or distinctly mixed. First Union Securities, for example, commented that GC "views its commitments to purchase services as capex spending for reasonably priced network elements it would otherwise build. We believe that this is a reasonable explanation, however, we approach intercarrier revenue or swaps with what we believe is an appropriate amount of skepticism, as it is difficult to determine how much [of GC's] spending is in direct exchange for other carriers' decision to purchase services on [GC's] network." (Id. Ex. C.) In response to GC's disclosure of a particular capacity trade, Piper Jaffray Equity Research Notes remarked that "[t]he market has viewed this transaction as a capacity swap rather than a true sale of capacity. While we disagree, the market does not seem to care, as it is looking for the bad in every telecom services earnings report and ignoring any good news." (Id. Ex. G.) On August 13, Goldman Sachs wrote:

In response to the quarter, some concerns were also raised about revenues that [GC] collects from operators from which [GC] also purchases various types of network capacity (representing capital expenditures.) Critics term these transactions "swaps" and discount the quality of these revenues. Their concern is that the transaction only occurs as a way to fabricate revenues.... Our view is that these transactions for [GC] make sense, they are a normal part of operations (all carriers buy and sell to one another)[,] they will continue for [GC] and the industry, and that the accounting is correct.... [GC] is rare in actually disclosing what portion of its revenues is negotiated in connection with capex purchases that it makes. So its disclosure goes beyond standard accounting practices, and sheds a bright light on its operations.... Yes, Global Crossing is using, like most carriers, capacity purchases as an incentive to drive revenues. We've spoken to other carriers that explicitly put capacity purchase requirements in RFPs, in order to sell their own capacity as they fulfill their network requirements with other service providers. While transactions between carriers raises [sic] the potential for abuse in the reporting of revenue, we see none of that in [GC's] operations.

(Id. Ex. H.) In conclusion, Goldman Sachs gave GC an "[o]verall positive rating." (Id.) On August 24, under the heading "Unreasonable Low Valuation Despite Superb Industry Positioning," Deutsche Banc noted that

"unfortunately, every carrier uses swaps or pseudo swaps to create their network over time. In [GC's] case, the 'swaps' number was high, which the company acknowledged and disclosed. We note no other companies have done this.... We believe the lesser of two evils is swapping to create a network versus increasing CapEx to build from scratch." (Id. Ex. K.) It reiterated its "[v]ery positive rating." (Id.) Thus, even while some analysts had raised serious questions, their conclusions were ultimately mixed.

*17 A reasonable jury could conceivably find that the prevailing view among analysts was negative, and that the totality of the circumstances should have put the plaintiffs on inquiry notice. But the appropriate reaction of a lending institution under these circumstances, when confronted with GC's official declaration of substantial revenue and continued representations that it was in compliance with its covenants, is for a jury to determine. Although the company's stock and bond prices had foundered, this was part of an industry-wide decline, and was not necessarily indicative of fraud. Companies presumably apply for credit in part in order to prepare for precisely such down-turns. While the market was clearly skeptical of reciprocal transactions, several analysts had concluded that such doubts were unfounded and had persevered in their positive ratings. Markets are fickle by nature, and analysts prone to disagree. It would hardly be to the benefit of either Banks or those in need of credit to hold that Banks must conduct an investigation into the accuracy of the financial statements of any company that seeks a loan while its stock price is declining. Finally, the analysts' reports are completely extraneous to the contractual relationship between GC and the Banks. Certainly, their conclusions are relevant to whether the Banks were on inquiry notice of the alleged fraud, but defendants have failed to cite a single misrepresentation case, and the Court has found none, in which "background noise" of this variety has been held as a matter of law to have put a plaintiff on inquiry notice of fraud.

On balance, the question of what a sophisticated lender should have done when faced with the available information is one about which reasonable people could easily differ. Even if the Banks had launched an inquiry, it is not clear on the present facts that they could have discovered the alleged fraud. Defendants continue to dispute that there was any fraud to discover, and would surely have taken the same position had inquiry been made in 2001; no doubt, the truth will still be in dispute after extensive investigation through the discovery phase of this action. Under these circumstances, the Court cannot say as a matter of law that the Banks' reliance was unreasonable (or unjustified) because a sophisticated lender could have protected itself by making reasonable inquiries. Where "the reasonableness of reliance depends upon factual determinations that are not plain from a review of the complaint and its attachments or that remain in dispute after discovery, the fraud claim should not be summarily dismissed on that ground." Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *12; see also id. (listing cases refusing to summarily dismiss such claims). The issue of whether the Banks' reliance was reasonable or justifiable is a factual question inappropriate for summary adjudication. The motion for summary judgment must therefore be denied.

CONCLUSION

*18 Defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint is granted as to plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation claims (fifth, sixth, and seventh causes of action), and denied as to plaintiffs' fraud claims (first through fourth causes of action). Defendants' motion for summary judgment on these remaining claims is denied.

SO ORDERED:

2004 WL 1418197 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

49

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Richard L. KALNIT, Plaintiff,
v.

Frank M. EICHLER, Robert L. Crandall,
Charles P. Russ, III, Pierson M. Grieve,
Louis A. Simpson, Allan D. Gilmour, Charles
M. Lillis, Grant A. Dove, John
Slevin, Kathleen A. Cote, Daniel W.
Yohannes, and Mediaone Group, Inc.,
Defendants.

No. 99 Civ. 3306(SAS).

March 24, 2000.

Investor who sold shares brought securities fraud action against corporation and its directors, alleging that nondisclosure of fact that shareholder had been released from standstill agreement prohibiting him from soliciting acquisition offers for corporation artificially depressed selling price of shares. The District Court, 85 F.Supp.2d 232, granted defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to plead scienter with particularity, with leave to replead. Following amendment of complaint, defendants renewed motion. The Court, Scheindlin, J., held that: (1) nondisclosure did not raise inference of fraudulent intent toward investors; (2) directors' alleged desire to realize personal benefits did not give rise to inference of fraudulent intent; (3) alleged desire to avoid liability did not give rise to inference of fraudulent intent; (4) Court would deny further leave to amend complaint; but (5) sanctions against investor were not warranted.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 1832
170Ak1832

In deciding motion to dismiss for failure to state claim, district court must limit itself to facts stated in complaint, documents attached to complaint as exhibits or documents incorporated in complaint by reference.

Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Securities Regulation 142
349Bk142

In securities fraud actions, on motion to dismiss, court may review and consider public disclosure documents required by law to be and which actually have been filed with Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

[3] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

Under Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA), in securities fraud actions scienter may not be averred generally; rather, plaintiff must state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that defendant acted with required state of mind. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b)(3)(A), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b)(3)(A); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[4] Securities Regulation 60.15
349Bk60.15

[4] Securities Regulation 60.18
349Bk60.18

To state a claim under §10(b) and Rule 10b-5, plaintiff must allege that in connection with purchase or sale of securities: (1) defendant made a false material representation or omitted to disclose material information; (2) defendant acted with scienter; and (3) plaintiff detrimentally relied upon defendant's fraudulent acts. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[5] Securities Regulation 60.51
349Bk60.51

Strong inference of fraudulent intent required to constitute adequately particular pleading of scienter in securities fraud action may be established by alleging: (1) facts that demonstrate defendant's motive and opportunity to commit fraud, or (2) facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b)(2), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b)(2); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[6] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

Directors' concealment, following merger agreement with prospective purchaser containing "no shop" clause, of fact that directors had released shareholder from standstill agreement in order to allow shareholder to pursue more favorable bids, did not raise inference of fraudulent intent toward investors, as required to support investors' securities fraud action alleging that concealment artificially depressed premerger share price; at most, concealment was attempt to defraud prospective purchaser, since there was no allegation of insider trading and both directors and investors stood to benefit from keeping proposed merger intact until better deal was signed. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[7] Corporations 582
101k582

Under Delaware law, "no shop" clause in merger agreement prohibiting solicitation of competing transaction is not per se illegal, but is invalid and unenforceable to extent that it purports to require board to act or not act in such a fashion as to limit exercise of fiduciary duties.

[8] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

Corporation's directors' alleged desire to realize personal benefits as result of merger could not give rise to inference of intent to defraud investors required to establish scienter element of securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[9] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

Corporation's directors' alleged desire to avoid liability for breach of proposed merger agreement's "no shop" clause, via concealment of efforts to solicit higher bid, could not give rise to inference of intent to defraud investors; motive to protect corporation could be imputed to any director and thus was inadequately particular, as well as being in best interests of investors, and there was no possibility that proposed purchaser could sue directors personally. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[10] Securities Regulation 60.25
349Bk60.25

Investor failed to state "fraud on the market" claim against corporation's directors based on alleged concealment of efforts to secure higher bid than that contained in merger agreement with proposed purchaser, where complaint on one hand alleged that concealment artificially depressed premerger share price by hiding fact that better deal was in offing, and on other hand, asserted fraudulent motive based on contention that pursuit of better deal may have been impossible without concealment; second theory undermined first. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[11] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

Fraudulent motive required to support securities fraud action was not shown by allegation that corporation's directors took steps to artificially depress premerger stock price so that expected higher bidder's offer would be clearly superior to previous offer; allegation depended upon speculation and flouted assumption that directors would act in their own economic self-interest. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[12] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

In securities fraud context, recklessness is conduct which is highly unreasonable and which represents an extreme departure from standards of ordinary care. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(b), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j(b), 78u-4(b); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

[13] Federal Civil Procedure 828.1
170Ak828.1

Although within district court's discretion, refusal to grant leave to amend complaint must be based on a solid ground. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 15(a), 28 U.S.C.A.

[14] Federal Civil Procedure 851
170Ak851

Futility provides a solid ground on which to deny leave to amend complaint. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 15(a), 28 U.S.C.A.

[15] Federal Civil Procedure 851
170Ak851

Court would deny leave to amend securities fraud complaint on futility grounds where previous two attempts failed to allege element of scienter and there was no reason to believe another attempt would succeed. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10, as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j; 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 15(a), 28 U.S.C.A.

[16] Securities Regulation 157.1
349Bk157.1

Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA) does not alter substantive standards for finding violation of Rule 11, but rather reduces courts' discretion in choosing whether to conduct Rule 11 inquiry at all and whether and how to sanction party once violation is found. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 21D(c)(3)(A)(i, ii), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(c)(3)(A)(i, ii); Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 11, 28 U.S.C.A.

[17] Securities Regulation 157.1
349Bk157.1

No sanctions were warranted against plaintiff investor whose first securities fraud complaint had been dismissed without prejudice for failure to allege scienter, and who then filed amended complaint which also failed to allege scienter; there was no evidence of improper purpose, original complaint had adequately alleged elements of fraudulent act and reliance and thus was not frivolous, and difficulty of scienter element weighed against finding of no chance of success. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 10(b), 21D(c)(3)(A)(i, ii), as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78j, 78u-

4(c)(3)(A)(i, ii); 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 11(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

329 Lee Squitieri, Stephen J. Fearon, Jr., Abbey, Gardy & Squitieri, LLP, New York City, for plaintiff.

Dennis J. Block, James M. Halper, Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, New York City, for defendants.

OPINION AND ORDER

SCHEINDLIN, District Judge.

This is an uncertified securities fraud class action brought by plaintiff Richard L. Kalnit against MediaOne Group Inc. ("MediaOne") and its eleven directors. [FN1] Plaintiff alleges that defendants violated section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Exchange Act"), 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5, by fraudulently failing to disclose material information in connection with a proposed merger between MediaOne and Comcast Corporation ("Comcast"). Plaintiff and the purported class members seek money 330 damages claiming that, as a result of defendants' alleged fraud, they sold shares of MediaOne at an artificially deflated price.

FN1. The MediaOne defendant directors are Frank M. Eichler, Robert L. Crandall, Charles P. Russ III, Pierson M. Grieve, Louis A. Simpson, Allan D. Gilmour, Charles M. Lillis, Grant A. Dove, John Slevin, Kathleen A. Cote and Daniel W. Yohannes (collectively, the "Directors" or "individual defendants").

Plaintiff filed his original class action complaint on May 6, 1999. On October 7, defendants moved to dismiss the original complaint pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) and 9(b) and the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 ("PSLRA"), 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4. By opinion dated December 22, this Court granted defendants' motion in its entirety, finding that plaintiff failed to adequately allege the required element of scienter. See Kalnit v. Eichler, 85 F.Supp.2d 232 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Dismissal was granted with leave to amend. See id.

On January 13, 2000, plaintiff filed an amended class action complaint ("Amended Complaint"). Defendants now move to dismiss the Amended Complaint contending that plaintiff's allegations of scienter are still inadequate to sustain a claim for relief under the federal securities laws. For the reasons that follow, defendants' motion is granted in its entirety.

I. Legal Standard

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Amended Complaint, like its motion to dismiss the original complaint, is brought pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, and Rule 9(b) and the PSLRA, for failure to plead fraud with particularity.

[1][2] Dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) is proper only where "it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief." Harris v. City of N.Y., 186 F.3d 243, 247 (2d Cir.1999). "The task of the court in ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is merely to assess the legal feasibility of the complaint, not to assay the weight of the evidence which might be offered in support thereof." Cooper v. Parsky, 140 F.3d 433, 440 (2d Cir.1998) (internal quotations omitted). Thus, to properly rule on such a motion, the court must accept as true all material facts alleged in the complaint and draw all reasonable inferences in the nonmovant's favor. See Harris, 186 F.3d at 247. Nevertheless, "[a] complaint which consists of conclusory allegations unsupported by factual assertions fails even the liberal standard of Rule 12(b)(6)." De Jesus v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 87 F.3d 65, 70 (2d Cir.1996) (internal quotations omitted). In deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the district court must limit itself to facts stated in the complaint, documents attached to the complaint as exhibits or documents incorporated in the complaint by reference. See Dangler v. New York City Off Track

Betting Corp., 193 F.3d 130, 138 (2d Cir.1999). However, in securities fraud actions, the court "may review and consider public disclosure documents required by law to be and which actually have been filed with the SEC...." Cortec Indus., Inc. v. Sum Holding L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 47 (2d Cir.1991).

Rule 9(b) sets forth additional pleading requirements with respect to allegations of fraud. Rule 9(b) requires that "[i]n all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity." But, under Rule 9(b), "[m]alice, intent, knowledge and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally."

[3] Securities fraud actions are subject to the requirements of Rule 9(b). See Shields v. Citytrust Bancorp, Inc., 25 F.3d 1124, 1127 (2d Cir.1994). However, the PSLRA heightened that Rule's requirement for pleading scienter. See 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(3)(A); see also Press v. Chemical Inv. Servs. Corp., 166 F.3d 529, 537-38 (2d Cir.1999). As a result, in securities fraud actions, scienter may not be averred generally. Rather, plaintiffs must "state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendant acted with the required state of mind." Press, 166 F.3d at 538 (quoting 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(3)(A)); see also Chill v. General Elec. Co., 101 F.3d 263, 268-69 (2d Cir.1996).

II. Background

A. Factual Background [FN2]

FN2. The background of this case is largely set forth in the December 22 opinion. See Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 234-35. However, plaintiff's original complaint was poorly drafted and failed to include many basic factual allegations that have since been added to the Amended Complaint. Accordingly, I review the facts in some detail above, both because they are relevant to the instant motion and because many are pleaded for the first time.

The facts set forth below are taken from the Amended Complaint. They are presumed true for purposes of this motion.

MediaOne is a Delaware corporation that provides telecommunications services. Amended Complaint ¶ 29. In 1996, MediaOne purchased a company called Continental Cablevision ("Continental"). Id. ¶ 49. As part of its acquisition of Continental, MediaOne entered into a publicly-disclosed shareholder's agreement with Continental's co-founder, Amos Hostetter. Id. This agreement included a "standstill restriction" which limited Hostetter's ability to propose mergers involving MediaOne. Id. At all relevant times, Hostetter owned approximately 56.32 million MediaOne shares (or 9.33% of all outstanding MediaOne shares). Id. ¶ 50.

On March 22, 1999, MediaOne announced that it had entered into a definitive merger agreement with Comcast whereby Comcast would acquire MediaOne for approximately $48 billion in an all-stock deal ("Comcast Agreement"). Id. ¶ 51. The Comcast Agreement called for each MediaOne shareholder to receive 1.1 shares of Comcast Class A Special Common Stock, or $80.16 per share. See id. ¶ 2; MediaOne 3/22/99 Form 8-K, Ex. B to 2/28/00 Affidavit of Dennis Block ("Block Aff."), at 99.1.

Under the Comcast Agreement, MediaOne had forty-five days within which to accept a superior proposal, subject to the payment of a $1.5 billion termination fee to Comcast. Id. ¶ 55. The Comcast Agreement also included a "No Shop" provision which prohibited MediaOne and its Directors from soliciting competing merger proposals. Id. ¶¶ 52-53. The No Shop provision, set forth in section 6.03 of the Comcast Agreement, stated:

From the date hereof until the termination hereof, MediaOne will not, and will cause the MediaOne Subsidiaries and the officers, directors, employees, investment bankers, attorneys, accountants, consultants or other agents or advisors of MediaOne and the MediaOne Subsidiaries not to, directly or indirectly: (i) take any action to solicit, initiate, facilitate or encourage the submission of any Acquisition Proposal; and (ii) other than in the ordinary course of business and not related to an Acquisition

Proposal, engage in any discussions or negotiations with, or disclose any non-public information relating to MediaOne or any MediaOne Subsidiary or afford access to the properties, books or records of MediaOne or any MediaOne Subsidiary to, any Person who is known by MediaOne to be considering making[,] or has made, an Acquisition proposal.

Id. ¶ 52. Thus, although MediaOne could accept a superior proposal within forty-five days of the scheduled closing of the MediaOne/Comcast merger, it could not directly or indirectly solicit such proposals. Section 10.1 of the Comcast Agreement permitted Comcast to terminate the proposed merger in the event MediaOne breached its No Shop obligations. Id. ¶ 54.

On March 25, 1999, Hostetter sent a letter to the Directors sharply criticizing the terms of the Comcast Agreement and seeking to be released from the 1996 standstill restriction so that he could pursue and develop a superior merger proposal. Id. ¶ 57. The text of Hostetter's March 25 letter reads in pertinent part as follows:

*332 It appears that the proposed acquisition of MediaOne by Comcast will result in the Roberts family, with less than a 1% economic interest in the combined companies, controlling more than 80% of all voting power. Because MediaOne stockholders would give up voting stock for non-voting stock in an entity controlled by the Roberts family, this transaction constitutes a sale of control with the result that your duty is to maximize the price for stockholders, who under the proposed transaction will lose any further opportunity to realize a control premium for their shares. As best I can determine, you have failed to secure any protections to assure MediaOne stockholder participation in any subsequent sale of control; those in control of Comcast could turn around after the proposed merger and auction off their voting control of MediaOne or the combined entity at a huge premium.... In addition, the proposed sale of control at an uncollared value has been advantaged prematurely and excessively by defensive deal protections such as the no solicitation provisions and the $1.5 billion termination fee payable to Comcast. These might have been sustainable as post-auction measures if needed to preserve maximized value, but they are entirely inappropriate as pre-auction measures, given their deterrent effect on other offers and the dollar-for-dollar reduction in benefit to stockholders if a topping offer were to be made.

I am advised that, as the Delaware Supreme Court stated in its Revlon decision and reiterated in its Paramount/QVC ruling, once you took steps to sell control of MediaOne and to protect that sale rather than to maximize value for shareholders, all defensive measures became moot. Your duty was and is to be especially active and diligent to get the best price for MediaOne stockholders.

Accordingly, I request that the board of directors on behalf of the Company agree that any and all standstill restrictions in the Shareholders Agreement dated February 27, 1996 ... are now null and void and of no further effect, and that the board on behalf of the Company consent to the waiver of all such terms in order to permit me to publicly express my view that this sale of control is inadvisable and work with others to develop a superior proposal. I am prepared to enter into a confidentiality agreement with the Company on terms no less favorable to the Company than those previously agreed to by Comcast.

Although time is limited, I believe that you have a duty under these circumstances to permit me to seek superior value and terms.

...
Id. ¶ 57 (quoting text of 3/25/99 letter from Hostetter to Directors) (emphasis added).

Defendant Eichler, MediaOne's President, Legal Counsel and Secretary, responded to Hostetter's request on behalf of the Directors in a letter dated March 31, 1999. Id. ¶¶ 31, 63. In their March 31 letter, the Directors agreed to release Hostetter from the 1996 standstill restriction. Id. ¶ 63. The Directors also acknowledged and accepted Hostetter's agreement " 'not to make any public announcement of [his] efforts to develop a superior proposal without the Directors' written consent, and to respond with 'no comment' if a press inquiry is made.' " Id. (quoting 3/31/99 letter from Eichler to Hostetter). Following his release from the standstill restriction, Hostetter immediately entered into discussions with third parties regarding the acquisition of MediaOne. Id. ¶ 69.

On April 5, 1999, MediaOne filed a Proxy Statement pursuant to section 14(a) of the Exchange Act. Id. ¶ 65. Although the April 5 Proxy Statement discussed the proposed Comcast merger, it made no reference to the March 25 and March 31 letters. Id. ¶ 66. Nor did the Proxy *333 Statement disclose the Directors' release of Hostetter from the 1996 standstill restriction. Id.

Plaintiff sold 1,820 shares of MediaOne stock at $65 7/16 per share on April 16, 1999. Id. ¶ 68. On April 22, AT & T Corporation ("AT & T") publicly proposed an acquisition of MediaOne for approximately $58 billion; the AT & T proposal was $9 billion more than the Comcast proposal. Id. ¶ 70. That same day, Hostetter filed a Schedule 13D with the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosing the March 25 and March 31 letters. Id. ¶ 71. The Schedule 13D also states that the AT & T merger proposal was a direct result of Hostetter's efforts to procure a superior offer for MediaOne. Id. ¶ 72.

On April 22, the date of both the AT & T announcement and the disclosure of the Hostetter letters, MediaOne's stock was valued at $69.50 per share. Id. ¶ 74. The following day, April 23, MediaOne's stock closed at $77.375 per share. Id. Four days later, on April 27, MediaOne's stock closed at $81.8125 per share. Id. ¶ 75.

On May 1, the individual defendants unanimously agreed to terminate the Comcast Agreement and to accept the AT & T proposal. Id. ¶ 76. Because of its decision to accept a superior offer, MediaOne was obligated to pay Comcast $1.5 billion. Id. ¶ 77. In addition, AT & T and Comcast reached a separate agreement pursuant to which Comcast agreed not to interfere with the AT & T/MediaOne merger in exchange for certain valuable cable properties. Id. ¶ 78. MediaOne officially terminated the Comcast Agreement on May 6, the same day Kalnit filed his original class action complaint. Id. ¶ 80.

B. Allegations of the Amended Complaint

The original complaint asserted violations of section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder. I dismissed the original complaint because plaintiff failed to sufficiently allege a required element of securities fraud, namely that defendants acted with scienter. [FN3] On January 13, 2000, plaintiff filed the Amended Complaint. In the Amended Complaint, plaintiff seeks to represent a class of persons who sold MediaOne shares between March 31 and April 22, 1999. Id. ¶ 41. Similar to the original complaint, the Amended Complaint asserts a single claim against all defendants pursuant to section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5. Id. § 57 94-103. [FN4]

FN3. In his original complaint, plaintiff also asserted a claim against the individual defendants for controlling person liability pursuant to section 20(a) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a). In the December 22 opinion, I dismissed plaintiff's section 20(a) claim finding that, among other things, defendants were not "control persons" within the meaning of the statute. See Kalnit, at 245.

FN4. The Amended Complaint does not include a claim against the individual defendants for controlling person liability under section 20(a).

The theory of liability set forth in the original complaint and the Amended Complaint is the same. Plaintiff contends that defendants' failure to disclose Hostetter's authorization to seek superior merger proposals artificially depressed the market for MediaOne shares causing plaintiff and other class members to sell their MediaOne shares at a deflated price. Id. ¶¶ 17, 24, 48, 81, 101. Specifically, plaintiff alleges that defendants had a duty to publicly disclose information regarding Hostetter's release from the 1996 standstill agreement. Id. ¶ 93. Plaintiff further alleges that because defendants concealed the fact that Hostetter was actively pursuing superior merger proposals--something MediaOne and its Directors could not do--the market undervalued MediaOne stock. Id. ¶¶ 17, 24, 47-48, 101. As a result, the Amended Complaint asserts, when plaintiff and the purported class members sold their stock prior to April 22, they sold their stock for less than it was worth. Id. [FN5]

FN5. Plaintiff sets forth a "fraud on the market" theory, asserting that he and the purported class members relied on the integrity of the securities market when they sold their MediaOne shares, and that defendants' fraudulent actions compromised the integrity of that market. See Amended Complaint ¶¶ 47-48; Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 240-41.

*334 III. Discussion

[4] To state a claim under section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5, plaintiff must allege that in connection with the purchase or sale of securities: (i) defendants made a false material representation or omitted to disclose material information; (ii) defendants acted with scienter; and (iii) plaintiff detrimentally relied upon defendants' fraudulent acts. See Press, 166 F.3d at 534. In addition, as discussed supra Part I, plaintiff must allege elements one and two--fraudulent acts and scienter--with particularity in order to meet the heightened pleading requirements set forth in Rule 9(b) and the PSLRA.

In his original complaint, plaintiff adequately alleged the elements of fraudulent acts and detrimental reliance. See Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 240-42. [FN6] However, I dismissed the original complaint because plaintiff failed to sufficiently allege the element of scienter. Id. at 245. Accordingly, the sole issue to be resolved on this motion is whether the Amended Complaint cures the defects of the original complaint by adequately alleging defendants' scienter.

FN6. My conclusions with respect to plaintiff's allegations of fraudulent acts and detrimental reliance are set forth fully in the December 22 opinion and will not be repeated here.

A. Scierter: Generally

The gravamen of plaintiff's fraud claim is that because defendants failed to disclose Hostetter's release from the 1996 standstill, the market price for MediaOne shares was artificially depressed and, as a result, plaintiff sold his shares of MediaOne on April 16 for less than they were worth. In the December 22 opinion, I found that plaintiff had sufficiently--although just barely--pleaded that the failure to disclose Hostetter's release was a "fraudulent act" for purposes of section 10(b). [FN7]

FN7. Specifically, I determined that plaintiff adequately alleged the materiality of, and a corresponding duty to disclose, Hostetter's release because "a reasonable juror could arguably find that the 'total mix' of information changed when Hostetter was permitted to actively seek and develop a superior merger proposal, something MediaOne and its board could not do." Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 240. However, the materiality of Hostetter's release presented a difficult and close question in light of the fact that MediaOne expressly disclosed that it could accept superior proposals received within forty-five days of its March 22 Comcast merger announcement. See id. at 239. As stated in this Court's prior opinion: The March 22 disclosure was sufficient to put reasonable investors on notice that MediaOne was "in play" among corporations and investment bankers seeking merger opportunities during a limited time-period; it is hard to imagine how information regarding Hostetter's ability to also seek merger opportunities for MediaOne during that time period would significantly alter the "total mix". That said, I decline to find at this preliminary stage that "no reasonable jury could determine that the undisclosed [information regarding Hostetter] would have assumed actual significance in the deliberations" of investors. Press, 166 F.3d [at] 538 (internal quotations omitted). Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 239.

It is a well-settled principle that "not every instance of financial unfairness constitutes fraudulent activity under [section] 10(b)." Chiarella v. United States, 445 U.S. 222, 232, 100 S.Ct. 1108, 63 L.Ed.2d 348 (1980) (citing Santa Fe Indus., Inc. v. Green, 430 U.S. 462, 463, 97 S.Ct. 1292, 51 L.Ed.2d 480 (1977)).

"In particular, no private cause of action for damages will lie under section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 'in the absence of an [] allegation of scierter--intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud.'" Gross v. Damon Corp., 94 Civ. 4457, 1995 WL 138612,*3 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 1995) (quoting Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 193, 96 S.Ct. 1375, 47 L.Ed.2d 668 (1976)); see also Santa Fe Indus., 430 U.S. at 463, 97 S.Ct. 1292 ("The language of § 10(b) gives no indication that Congress meant to prohibit any conduct not involving manipulation or deception."). *335 Therefore, although plaintiff has sufficiently alleged a fraudulent act (defendants' failure to disclose Hostetter's release) and a resulting harm (plaintiff's sale of his MediaOne shares at a deflated price), such allegations, in and of themselves, are insufficient to state a claim for fraud under federal securities law because plaintiff must allege that defendant acted with scierter.

[5] As stated above, see supra Part I, in order to properly assert scierter under the heightened pleading requirements set forth in the PSLRA, a complaint must "state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendant acted with the required state of mind." 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(b)(2). See also Press, 166 F.3d at 537-38. Accordingly, a plaintiff cannot plead scierter based upon speculation and conclusory allegations, but "must allege facts that give rise to a strong inference of fraudulent intent." Chill, 101 F.3d at 267 (internal quotations omitted). A "strong inference" of fraudulent intent may be established by alleging (i) facts that demonstrate defendants' motive and opportunity to commit fraud; or (ii) facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness. See Press, 166 F.3d at 538.

B. Scierter: Motive and Opportunity

The first method of pleading scierter is by alleging both motive and opportunity to commit fraud. It is undisputed that the individual defendants, as Directors of MediaOne, had the opportunity to commit fraudulent acts. The critical issue is whether they were motivated to do so.

"Motive" to commit fraud "entail[s] concrete benefits that could be realized by one or more of the false statements and wrongful disclosures alleged." See Shields, 25 F.3d at 1130. Fraudulent motive is generally demonstrated through allegations of insider trading or some other type of pecuniary gain by company insiders at the expense of shareholders.

For example, motive was adequately pleaded in a class action suit in which shareholders alleged that a corporation and its CEO made misleading statements in violation of section 10(b) in order to manipulate the price of the company's stock so that the CEO could sell his shares at inflated prices. See Stevelman v. Alias Research, Inc., 174 F.3d 79, 85 (2d Cir.1999). In another recent class action suit, shareholders similarly alleged that the corporation and its eight directors violated section 10(b) by making misleading statements regarding the company's performance in order to inflate the price of the company's stock so that the directors could subsequently profit from insider sales. See In re Quintel Entertainment Inc. Sec. Litig., 72 F.Supp.2d 283, 296-97 (S.D.N.Y.1999). Noting that the large number of defendants making insider trades indicated unusual insider trading activity, the court found that the plaintiffs had adequately demonstrated scienter. See id.

Plaintiff's original complaint failed to set forth any allegations of insider trading. Indeed, the original complaint made no mention of any motive by defendants to defraud MediaOne shareholders. As stated in this Court's prior opinion:

[T]he [original complaint] is utterly silent on the question of motive. Nowhere in the [original complaint] does plaintiff allege that defendants benefitted from the alleged misrepresentation and omission. Nor are there any facts from which an inference of motive can be drawn. Put simply, there is no indication that defendants profited from their alleged material omissions.
Kalnit, 85 F.Supp.2d at 243.

In contrast to the original complaint, the Amended Complaint is far from "silent" on the question of motive. Indeed, plaintiff's current pleading includes an entire section entitled "Additional Motive Allegations" which is comprised of numerous theories as to how defendants could have profited from their failure to disclose Hostetter's release from the 1996 standstill. Amended *336 Complaint ¶¶ 82-93. Despite the volume of "additional" motive allegations, however, plaintiff fails to cure the defects of the original complaint. Not only have plaintiff's new allegations of motive been routinely rejected by courts in the Second Circuit as insufficient evidence of scienter, they simply do not--even under the most generous of readings--give rise to a "strong inference" of defendants' intent to deceive, manipulate or defraud MediaOne shareholders.

Plaintiff's new motive allegations can be grouped into two general claims. First, plaintiff contends that defendants concealed the Hostetter release in order "to avoid being declared in breach of the Comcast Agreement." Amended Complaint ¶¶ 83-84. Second, plaintiff contends that defendants concealed the Hostetter release in order to depress the price of MediaOne stock and to thereby "make it easier" to accept a superior AT & T offer. Id. at ¶¶ 88-89. These claims are addressed in turn below.

1. Desire to Avoid Being Declared in Breach of the Comcast Agreement

Similar to the original complaint, the Amended Complaint makes no allegations of insider trading by the individual defendants. For example, unlike the plaintiffs in Stevelman and Quintel, plaintiff here does not contend that the Directors concealed Hostetter's release in order to depress MediaOne stock so that they could purchase shares of MediaOne at deflated prices and then sell those shares at a profit when the value of MediaOne stock increased in the wake of the AT & T and Hostetter announcements. In short, there is no claim that the Directors bought or sold MediaOne stock during the relevant period. Instead, the bulk of plaintiff's motive allegations concern "the substantial concrete benefits [stemming from] MediaOne's merger with Comcast which defendants sought to preserve." Plaintiff's Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Amended Class Action Complaint ("Pl.Opp.") at 14.

Plaintiff claims that "[d]efendants concealed the Hostetter Waiver Letters in order to avoid being declared in breach of the Comcast Agreement, which specifically prohibited defendants from 'directly or indirectly ... tak [ing] any action to solicit, initiate, facilitate or encourage the submission of any Acquisition Proposal' ". Amended Complaint ¶ 83. According to plaintiff, "[h]ad defendants disclosed the existence of the Hostetter Waiver Letters, Comcast could terminate the Comcast Agreement, subjecting defendants to significant liability for breach of contract, subjecting MediaOne to a $1.5 billion termination fee, and depriving defendants of their ability to realize substantial personal profit as a result of the Comcast Merger." Id. In addition, plaintiff contends that "had the disclosure of the Hostetter Waiver Letters caused Comcast to determine that MediaOne was in breach of the Comcast Agreement, Hostetter may not have [been] able to pursue the AT & T Agreement thereby depriving the defendants and Hostetter of a superior offer for their stock and the stock of the other MediaOne shareholders." Id. ¶ 84.

Stated succinctly, plaintiff alleges that by concealing Hostetter's release from the standstill restriction, the individual defendants hoped to prevent Comcast from terminating the proposed merger and to thereby realize the following four concrete benefits: (i) substantial personal profit as a result of the Comcast merger; (ii) avoidance of personal liability for breach of the Comcast Agreement; (iii) avoidance of an obligation to pay a $1.5 billion termination fee; and (iv) the ability to pursue a more lucrative merger with AT & T. Plaintiff contends that the Directors' desire to receive these four benefits gives rise to a "strong inference" that the Directors' intended to defraud MediaOne shareholders.

[6] Before turning to an individualized discussion of these alleged concrete benefits, it is important to note a subtle but *337 fundamental flaw in plaintiff's first theory of scienter; namely, that with respect to preservation of the Comcast Agreement, the interests of MediaOne and its shareholders were aligned rather than adverse. In other words, because preservation of the Comcast Agreement benefitted both the Directors and the MediaOne shareholders, it is difficult to infer an intent to defraud those shareholders absent some allegation of stock manipulation or insider trading by the Directors. [FN8]

FN8. In connection with plaintiff's first theory of scienter, not only are there no allegations of insider trading, but plaintiff does not allege that defendants' depressed or manipulated MediaOne stock in order to preserve the Comcast Agreement. The only allegation of stock manipulation is in connection with plaintiff's second theory of scienter in which plaintiff claims that defendants' sought to depress the price of MediaOne stock in order to make it easier for them to accept the AT & T proposal. See infra Part III.B.2.

Under the Comcast Agreement, Comcast promised to acquire MediaOne for $48 billion. The Amended Complaint does not allege that the Comcast Agreement was poor or unfavorable in any way to MediaOne shareholders. Nor does the Amended Complaint allege that plaintiff or any MediaOne shareholder other than Hostetter was unhappy with the terms of the Comcast/MediaOne deal.

[7] The Amended Complaint does allege that on March 25, 1999, Hostetter wrote a letter to the Directors sharply criticizing the terms of the Comcast Agreement. In particular, Hostetter told the Directors: "Your duty was and is to be especially active and diligent to get the best price for MediaOne stockholders." Id. ¶ 57 (quoting 3/31/99 letter from Eichler to Hostetter (emphasis added)). [FN9] According to Hostetter, in order for the Directors to properly fulfill their duty to MediaOne shareholders, they needed to release him from the 1996 standstill so that he could solicit superior merger proposals. As Hostetter stated in his letter: "I believe that you have a duty under these circumstances to permit me to seek superior value and terms." Id. Thus, taking the allegations of the Amended Complaint as true, MediaOne released Hostetter from the 1996 standstill so that he could attempt to procure a better deal for MediaOne shareholders. Accordingly, there can be little question that the release of Hostetter was, at minimum, for the benefit of both MediaOne Directors and MediaOne shareholders. [FN10]

FN9. Indeed, in his March 31 letter, Hostetter invokes the seminal fiduciary duty cases of Revlon, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc., 506 A.2d 173 (Del.1985) and Paramount Communications Inc. v. QVC Network Inc., 637 A.2d 34 (Del.1994). See supra Part II.A. In QVC, the Delaware Supreme Court stated: "In the sale of control context, the directors must focus on one primary objective--to secure the transaction offering the best value reasonably available for the stockholders--and they must exercise their fiduciary duties to further that end." 637 A.2d at 44. Similarly, in Revlon, the Delaware Supreme Court held that "[t]he duty of the board ... [is] the maximization of the company's value at a sale for the stockholders' benefit", and that "obtaining the highest price for the benefit of stockholders should [be] the central theme guiding director action." 506 A.2d at 182. Notably, both Revlon and QVC state that although "no shop" provisions such as the one included in the Comcast Agreement are not per se illegal, they are "invalid and unenforceable" to the extent they "purport[] to require a board to act or not act in such a fashion as to limit the exercise of fiduciary duties." QVC, 637 A.2d at 51; see also Revlon, 506 A.2d at 184 ("The no-shop provision ... while not per se illegal, is impermissible ... when a board's primary duty becomes that of an auctioneer responsible for selling the company to the highest bidder.").

FN10. According to the Amended Complaint, Hostetter was at all relevant times MediaOne's largest shareholder. Amended Complaint ¶ 50.

The hotly contested issue, of course, is the Directors' agreement with Hostetter not to "make any public announcement of [Hostetter's] efforts to develop a superior proposal without the Directors' written consent." Id. ¶ 63 (quoting 3/31/99 letter from Eichler to Hostetter). Again, the gravamen of plaintiff's fraud claim is that *338 defendants' failure to disclose information regarding Hostetter's release caused plaintiff to sell his shares for less money than they were worth. As set forth above, however, plaintiff must allege not just that defendants and Hostetter agreed to conceal Hostetter's release, but also that the concealment was motivated by an intent to defraud shareholders.

In an effort to plead the required state of mind, plaintiff claims that the Directors' decision to conceal Hostetter's release was motivated by MediaOne's desire to keep this information from Comcast in order to prevent Comcast from terminating its agreement to acquire MediaOne prior to MediaOne's receipt of a more lucrative merger proposal. The Amended Complaint expressly states: "A disclosure of the Hostetter Waiver Letters would have revealed that MediaOne was in breach of the No Shop provision which would have cost MediaOne $1.5 billion and jeopardized the Comcast merger before MediaOne had a chance to secure a superior proposal." Id. ¶ 12 (emphasis in original). Thus, plaintiff himself concedes that the Directors were trying to keep the Comcast deal in place until such time as Hostetter procured a superior offer. Plaintiff alleges that this tactic benefitted the Directors in the four ways stated above. Under plaintiff's theory of motive, however, this tactic also benefitted MediaOne shareholders--including plaintiff.

To illustrate, plaintiff alleges that upon disclosure of the March 25 and March 31 letters, Comcast would have (i) terminated the Comcast Agreement; (ii) sued MediaOne and its Directors for breach of contract; (iii) demanded a payment of $1.5 billion from MediaOne; and (iv) somehow prevented Hostetter from pursuing a deal with AT & T. Id. ¶¶ 83-84. Thus, pursuant to plaintiff's theory, if defendants had disclosed the Hostetter release immediately on March 31, then Comcast would have walked away from the merger on that date or soon thereafter, leaving MediaOne without a superior merger proposal or the prospect of a superior merger proposal. In addition, according to plaintiff, MediaOne and its Directors would have been subjected to costly litigation as well as obligated to pay Comcast $1.5 billion. The combined effect of these occurrences would certainly have caused the value of MediaOne's stock to decrease, and possibly even to plummet. MediaOne shareholders would have suffered accordingly.

In contrast, by concealing the March 25 and March 31 letters, MediaOne managed to preserve the Comcast Agreement and to stave off plaintiff's alleged parade of horrors until it received a superior offer from AT & T, at which point the Directors revealed to Comcast and the public their release of Hostetter. In this fashion, MediaOne shareholders received the "best price" for their shares with, according to plaintiff's theory, the least possible risk.

At first glance, it may appear that concealment of the Hostetter release benefitted only those MediaOne shareholders who held their MediaOne stock until after the April 22 announcement. However, based upon the allegations in the Amended Complaint, even shareholders like plaintiff who sold MediaOne stock prior to April 22 benefitted from concealment of the release. For example, if defendants had disclosed the Hostetter release on March 31 and Comcast had withdrawn from the merger agreement, initiated suit and demanded payment of $1.5 billion, then when plaintiff sold his shares two weeks later, it is likely those shares would have been worth far less than the $65 per share plaintiff received. In other words, when plaintiff sold his shares on April 16, he too benefitted from the fact that the Comcast Agreement was still intact. [FN11] Moreover, even if plaintiff had not benefitted in any way from defendants' concealment of the Hostetter *339 release, the relevant issue is not whether defendants' failure to disclose harmed plaintiff, but whether plaintiff has alleged facts which give rise to a strong inference that defendants' failure to disclose was motivated by an intent to deceive, manipulate and defraud shareholders. Here, accepting all the allegations of the Amended Complaint as true, the only "strong inference" that can be drawn is an intent by defendants to defraud Comcast for the benefit of MediaOne and its shareholders. Any inference that the Directors intended to defraud their own shareholders is both speculative and unreasonable because it ignores facts that plaintiff himself sets forth. [FN12]

FN11. As set forth supra note 5, plaintiff has alleged a fraud on the market theory of causation in which the harm suffered stems from the market's undervaluation of MediaOne stock, not plaintiff's decision to sell that stock.

FN12. Part of the difficulty of pleading scienter where the alleged fraud involves a corporate merger is that mergers subject corporate officers to a unique code of conduct and fiduciary duties. For example, as stated supra note 9, under Delaware state law, "[i]n the sale of control context the directors must focus on one primary objective—to secure the transaction offering the best value reasonably available for the stockholders." QVC, 637 A.2d at 44. As a result, it is difficult to parse through actions motivated by legitimate fiduciary obligations and actions motivated by fraudulent intent absent clear allegations of fraudulent activity such as insider trading.

Keeping in mind the inherent difficulty in any allegation of scienter based upon the Directors' desire to preserve the Comcast Agreement, I briefly address additional reasons why the four concrete benefits asserted by plaintiff cannot give rise to an inference of fraudulent intent.

a. Substantial Personal Profit as a Result of the Comcast Merger

Plaintiff asserts that the Directors desired to conceal Hostetter's release in order to prevent Comcast from terminating the proposed merger and to thereby avoid "losing the substantial benefits that they would personally receive under the Comcast Agreement." Id. ¶ 84. Specifically, plaintiff claims that the individual defendants hoped to protect "the significant payments they would receive under the change in control provisions in their employment contracts as a result of the Comcast Merger." Id.; see also id. ¶ 85. In addition, plaintiff asserts that four of the Directors hoped to protect "lucrative executive and directorial positions that they negotiated as part of the Comcast Agreement." Id. ¶¶ 86-87.

Plaintiff's allegations regarding the Directors' desire to realize personal benefits under the Comcast Agreement are neither implausible nor unreasonable. A jury could certainly find that the Directors hoped to receive increased compensation, lucrative executive positions and other corporate perquisites as a result of the Comcast merger. [FN13] In fact, the reasonableness of plaintiff's allegations is precisely the problem. Every corporate director in America hopes to receive personal benefits when his or her company enters into a merger agreement. Thus, to recognize an inference of fraudulent intent based upon a corporate director's desire to realize personal benefits in connection with a merger would subject corporate directors to claims of securities fraud following every corporate merger or other business combination. Not surprisingly, courts in the Second Circuit and elsewhere have routinely found that such generalized allegations of motive are insufficient to plead the element of scienter.

FN13. Similarly, accepting as true the allegations of the Amended Complaint, it is a reasonable position that Comcast might consider the Directors' release of Hostetter an "indirect" solicitation of competing merger proposals and a breach of MediaOne's No Shop obligations. Thus, a reasonable juror could find that upon learning of defendants' waiver of Hostetter's standstill restriction, Comcast would choose to exercise its rights under the Comcast Agreement and to walk away from the proposed merger with MediaOne.

For example, in Acito v. IMCERA Group, Inc., 47 F.3d 47, 54 (2d Cir.1995), the plaintiffs alleged that corporate officers of IMCERA Group "were motivated to inflate the value of IMCERA stock because *340 the increase in stock price had a direct effect on their executive compensation." The Second Circuit rejected the plaintiffs' allegation as insufficient to plead scienter:

Plaintiffs' allegation that defendants were motivated to defraud the public because an inflated stock price would increase their compensation is without merit. If scienter could be pleaded on that basis alone, virtually every company in the United States that experiences a downturn in stock price would be forced to defend securities fraud actions. Incentive compensation can hardly be the basis on which an allegation of fraud is predicated. Therefore, we hold that the existence, without more, of executive compensation dependent upon stock value does not give rise to a strong inference of scienter.

Id. (internal quotations and citations omitted). The plaintiff in Shields also attempted to plead scienter based upon generalized allegations of motive, including the defendants' desire "to induce plaintiff and the other members of the Class to purchase Citytrust common stock ... at artificially inflated prices so that individual defendants could protect their executive positions and the compensation and prestige they enjoy thereby." 25 F.3d at 1130 (alteration in original). The Court of Appeals rejected the plaintiff's allegation of fraudulent intent stating that [t]o allege a motive sufficient to support the inference [of fraudulent intent], a plaintiff must do more than merely charge that executives aim to prolong the benefits of the positions they hold.... If motive could be pleaded by alleging the defendant's desire for continued employment ... the required showing of motive would be no realistic check on aspersions of fraud....

Id.

More recently, in Chill, the Second Circuit held that a "generalized motive, one which could be imputed to any publicly-owned, for-profit endeavor, is not sufficiently concrete for purposes of inferring scienter." 101 F.3d at 268. The Chill court rejected the plaintiff's attempt to plead scienter based upon the defendants' alleged desire to maintain the appearance of corporate profitability finding that "[i]f we accept this as sufficient motive, then we must accept as motive that every publicly-held corporation desires its stock to be priced highly by the market. At that point, the motive requirement becomes meaningless." Id. at 268 n. 5.

[8] Because the desire to realize personal benefits as a result of a merger can be imputed to any corporate officer, such motive cannot legally give rise to a "strong inference" of the Directors' intent to defraud MediaOne shareholders. See Phillips v. LCI Int'l, Inc., 190 F.3d 609, 623 (4th Cir.1999) ("Similar situations arise in every merger; thus, allowing a plaintiff to prove a motive to defraud by simply alleging a corporate defendant's desire to retain his position with its attendant salary, or realize gains on company stock, would force the directors of virtually every company to defend securities fraud actions every time that company effected a merger or acquisition." (citing Second Circuit law)); San Leandro Emergency Med. Group Profit Sharing Plan v. Philip Morris Cos., 75 F.3d 801, 813-14 (2d Cir.1996) (finding "company's desire to maintain a high bond or credit rating" insufficient motive for fraud because such motive could be imputed to any company); Leventhal v. Tow, 48 F.Supp.2d 104, 115 (D.Conn.1999) ("[T]he allegation that the defendants artificially inflated Citizens' stock price in order to 'protect and enhance their executive positions' and 'negotiate as favorable a deal as possible' on a pending employment contract also fail to give rise to a strong inference of scienter. This motive has been rejected routinely."); Herzog v. GT Interactive Software Corp., 98 Civ. 0085, 1999 WL 1072500, *9 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 29, 1999) (defendant's "'desire to consummate [a] corporate transaction does not constitute a motive for securities fraud' "); *341 Thacker v. Medaphis Corp., 97 Civ. 2849, 1998 WL 684595, *3 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 1998) (finding plaintiff's claim that defendant was motivated by a desire to eliminate competitors and to acquire related companies insufficient to plead scienter because such motive could be imputed to any corporate officer); Salinger v. Projectavision, Inc., 934 F.Supp. 1402, 1414

(S.D.N.Y.1996) (finding "generalized interest in executive compensation tied to stock performance" and desire "to maintain perquisites of corporate rank do[] not support a strong inference of fraud").

b. Avoidance of Liability for Breach of the Comcast Agreement

Plaintiff next alleges that defendants were motivated to defraud MediaOne shareholders based on their desire to avoid "significant liability" for breach of the Comcast Agreement. It is unclear from the face of the Amended Complaint whether plaintiff is referring to the Directors' desire to avoid "personal" liability for their alleged breach of the Comcast Agreement or to a more general desire to protect MediaOne from such a suit. To the extent plaintiff is referring to the individual defendants' desire to protect MediaOne from protracted and costly litigation, such allegation is insufficient to plead scienter both because it is a motive that can be imputed to any corporate director and because it is a motive that is in the best interests of MediaOne shareholders for the reasons stated above. See supra Part III.A.1.

[9] To the extent plaintiff alleges that the Directors desired to avoid personal liability, it is patently unreasonable to conclude that Comcast could or would sue the Directors personally in the event MediaOne violated the No Shop provision. Nowhere in the Amended Complaint does plaintiff allege that the Comcast Agreement permitted Comcast to bring suit for breach of contract against either the Directors or MediaOne for violation of section 6.03. Nor is it reasonable to assume that Comcast could somehow pierce the corporate veil and subject the Directors to "significant liability" as a result of their alleged breach. As set forth by plaintiff himself, the Comcast Agreement explicitly provided for a single remedy in the event MediaOne breached its No Shop obligations-termination of the merger agreement. Plaintiff's conclusory and unsupported allegations regarding additional actions that Comcast might take to remedy breach of the No Shop provision such as bringing suit against the Directors (or MediaOne) cannot, as a matter of law, form the basis for an inference of scienter. As the Second Circuit has repeatedly stated, plaintiffs do not "enjoy a 'license to base claims of fraud on speculation and conclusory allegations [of scienter].'" San Leandro, 75 F.3d at 813 (quoting Wexner v. First Manhattan Co., 902 F.2d 169, 172 (2d Cir.1990)).

c. $1.5 Billion Termination Fee

Plaintiff's allegation that defendants concealed the Hostetter release in order to avoid payment of a $1.5 billion fee for breach of the No Shop provision is equally speculative. The Amended Complaint merely alleges that, pursuant to section 10.01, Comcast may terminate the Comcast Agreement in the event MediaOne breaches its No Shop obligations. The Amended Complaint does not allege that if MediaOne breaches the contract, Comcast is entitled to both walk away from a merger with MediaOne and to receive a payment of $1.5 billion from MediaOne. The only reference to a $1.5 billion fee is with respect to MediaOne's decision to accept a superior proposal. [FN14] FN14. MediaOne in fact paid Comcast $1.5 billion upon its decision to accept the superior AT & T proposal.

d. Merger with AT & T

[10] Plaintiff also alleges, without any basis in law or fact, that "had the disclosure *342 of the Hostetter Waiver Letters caused Comcast to determine that MediaOne was in breach of the Comcast Agreement, Hostetter may not have been able to pursue the AT & T Agreement, thereby depriving the defendants and Hostetter of a superior offer for their stock and the stock of the other MediaOne shareholders." Amended Complaint ¶ 84. Plaintiff fails to explain why or how Comcast's determination that MediaOne was in breach of the No Shop provision would preclude Hostetter from pursuing merger discussions with AT & T. Plaintiff's allegation is purely speculative and must be rejected on that basis alone.

The more fundamental problem, however, is that plaintiff's allegation of motive based upon the Directors' supposed desire to protect Hostetter's ability to pursue a deal with AT & T conflicts with plaintiff's allegation of reliance and harm. As explained above and in the December 22 Opinion, plaintiff proceeds via a fraud on the market theory, claiming that defendants' failure to disclose Hostetter's release caused the market to undervalue MediaOne stock. Plaintiff's fraud on the market theory is premised on the idea that Hostetter's authorization to shop the company made it more likely that MediaOne would receive a superior merger offer during the waiting period. Accordingly, if the market had been informed that Hostetter was in fact permitted to solicit competing proposals, it would have valued MediaOne stock more highly.

Now, however, plaintiff claims that if Hostetter's release were disclosed, Comcast would withdraw from the deal and "Hostetter may not have been able to pursue the AT & T Agreement". Amended Complaint ¶ 84. If upon disclosure of his release, Hostetter were precluded from pursuing superior offers, then there would be no reason for the market to have increased the value of MediaOne stock and the basis for plaintiff's assertion of a fraud on the market theory disappears.

2. Desire to Depress the Price of MediaOne Stock

[11] Plaintiff's second claim of scienter alleges that defendants "were motivated to conceal the Hostetter Waiver Letters and to keep the price of MediaOne depressed so that, if Hostetter was able to obtain a competing acquisition proposal for MediaOne, defendants would be better able to exercise the 'fiduciary out' provision in the Comcast Agreement by more easily determining that the competing offer was 'superior.'" Id. ¶ 88. According to plaintiff, before the Directors could terminate the Comcast Agreement and accept an alternative merger proposal, "defendants were required to obtain the 'advise [sic] of a financial advisor of nationally recognized reputation' that the competing proposal 'is more favorable to MediaOne's stockholders than the [Comcast] Merger.' " Id. ¶ 89. Plaintiff claims that "[o]ne major fact that the financial advisor would consider in its analysis would be the amount by which the value under the 'Superior Proposal' exceeded the value provided to MediaOne shareholders in the Comcast Transaction." Id. Accordingly, plaintiff concludes, by depressing MediaOne's stock price, defendants would "make it easier for themselves to exercise the 'fiduciary out' " and accept the AT & T proposal. Id. Plaintiff's theory is both speculative and illogical.

First, plaintiff contends, based on nothing but conclusory allegations, that a financial analyst would evaluate the relative merits of competing merger proposals based upon the market value of MediaOne common stock on any given day. This is simply inaccurate. Financial analysts evaluate competing merger proposals based upon the various terms of the proposed deals. Here, for example, an analyst would consider, among other things, the fact that AT & T's proposed purchase price was $9 billion more than Comcast's proposed purchase price. A sophisticated analyst would not base its decision to recommend the AT & T proposal on the mere fact that "when AT & T announced its *343 offer and the market first learned about the Hostetter Waiver Letters on April 22, 1999, MediaOne's stock rose approximately $8.00 per share." Id.

Second, "[i]n looking for a sufficient allegation of motive, we assume that the defendant is acting in his or her informed economic self-interest." Shields, 25 F.3d at 1130. Thus, where "[p]laintiff's view of the facts defies economic reason, ... it does not yield a reasonable inference of fraudulent intent." Atlantic Gypsum Co. v. Lloyds Int'l Corp., 753 F.Supp. 505, 514 (S.D.N.Y.1990); see also Shields, 25 F.3d at 1130. In the instant case, plaintiff's theory regarding the individual defendants' desire to depress MediaOne stock defies economic reason. The Directors' self-interest lies in securing the best deal possible for the sale of MediaOne. Thus, if the AT & T proposal were inferior to the Comcast proposal, it would be in the Directors' informed self-interest to reject the AT & T offer and to consummate a merger with Comcast. As a result, there is no sensible reason why the Directors would want to depress MediaOne stock in order to make an inferior AT & T offer appear more valuable. Such a tactic could only result in the Directors' accepting an inferior proposal to their economic detriment. Because it is not in the Directors' informed economic self-interest to depress MediaOne stock in order to disguise an inferior proposal, plaintiff's theory of motive is implausible.

C. Scierer: Recklessness

[12] As set forth above, fraudulent intent can also be established by alleging facts which constitute "strong circumstantial evidence" of conscious misbehavior or recklessness. Chill, 101 F.3d at 268-69. In the securities fraud context, recklessness is "conduct which is 'highly unreasonable' and which represents 'an extreme departure from the standards of ordinary care.'" SEC v. McNulty, 137 F.3d 732, 741 (2d Cir.1998) (quoting Rolf v. Blyth, Eastman, Dillon & Co., 570 F.2d 38, 46 (2d Cir.1978)).

The Amended Complaint, like the original complaint, fails to set forth any particularized facts which would support a "strong inference" of recklessness and corresponding fraudulent intent. As I stated in my prior opinion, "there is simply no way that a reasonable jury could consider defendants' conduct reckless behavior." Kalnit, 1999 WL 1243868, *11.

Plaintiff ignores this Court's previous holding with respect to recklessness and advances the same argument that was previously rejected, namely that the mere fact that defendants consciously concealed Hostetter's release demonstrates that defendants acted recklessly. See Pl. Opp. at 16-21. Plaintiff's argument is no more convincing the second time around. [FN15]

FN15. The only new argument plaintiff advances in support of his allegations of recklessness is based on Delaware caselaw concerning the fiduciary obligations owed by directors to shareholders. See Pl. Opp. at 17. Plaintiff cites these cases for the proposition that "[d]efendants' duty of candor required them to describe all material information to the corporation's shareholders." Pl. Opp. at 17 (citing Malone v. Brincat, 722 A.2d 5, 10 (Del.1998)). Thus, plaintiff concludes, the Directors' failure to disclose material information--that is, the Hostetter release--constitutes reckless behavior. Plaintiff's contention again ignores the plain language of my prior opinion. The mere failure to disclose material information does not in and of itself constitute reckless behavior. See Kalnit, at 244. In a case such as this one where the materiality of the Hostetter release is highly debatable at best, see supra note 7, the failure to disclose that release simply cannot lead to a finding of recklessness. See Kalnit, at 244; see also L.L. Capital Partners, L.P. v. Rockefeller Ctr. Properties, Inc., 921 F.Supp. 1174, 1183 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (finding plaintiff's allegations of recklessness "manifestly insufficient" because "[t]he materiality of the one alleged nondisclosure that is sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss is highly debatable, which indicates that the nondisclosure itself is not a sufficient basis from which to infer conscious misbehavior.").

* * * * *

344 Because plaintiff has again failed to plead either (i) motive and opportunity or (ii) circumstantial evidence of recklessness, he has not sufficiently alleged scienter and his section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 claims must be dismissed pursuant to Rule 9(b) and the PSLRA.

IV. Leave to Amend

[13][14] Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15(a), "leave to amend shall be freely granted when justice so requires." Fed.R.Civ.P. 15(a). "Although the decision whether to grant leave to amend is within the discretion of the district court, refusal to grant leave must be based on a solid ground." Oliver Sch., Inc. v. Foley, 930 F.2d 248, 253 (2d cir.1991). "Futility" provides a solid ground on which to deny leave to amend. See Chill, 101 F.3d at 272; Cortec Indus., Inc., 949 F.2d at 48.

[15] This Court has twice considered plaintiff's allegations of scienter and twice found them to be insufficient. I do not believe that plaintiff could ever successfully plead scienter in the instant case. As a result, any additional attempts to amend the complaint would be futile. Accordingly, the Amended Complaint is dismissed without leave to amend.

V. Findings Regarding Rule 11 Sanctions

[16] Section 21D(c) of the PSLRA, entitled "Sanctions for abusive litigation", provides:

In any private action arising under this chapter, upon final adjudication of the action, the court shall include in the record specific findings regarding compliance by each party and each attorney representing any party with each requirement of Rule 11(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as to any complaint, responsive pleading, or dispositive motion.

15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(c)(1). If the court determines that there has been a violation of Rule 11, section 21D(c)(2) imposes mandatory sanctions and adopts a rebuttable presumption that the appropriate sanction for noncompliance "is an award to the opposing party of the reasonable attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred." 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(c)(3)(A)(i)-(ii). "The PSLRA thus does not in any way purport to alter the substantive standards for finding a violation of Rule 11, but functions merely to reduce courts' discretion in choosing whether to conduct the Rule 11 inquiry at all and whether and how to sanction a party once a violation is found." Simon DeBartolo Group, L.P. v. Richard E. Jacobs Group, Inc., 186 F.3d 157, 167 (2d Cir.1999). Because this dismissal with prejudice constitutes a "final adjudication" of an action arising under the PSLRA, this Court's Rule 11 findings with respect to plaintiff's complaint and Amended Complaint are set forth below.

Rule 11(b) states:

By presenting to the court (whether by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating) a pleading, written motion, or other paper, an attorney or unrepresented party is certifying that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances,--

(1) it is not being presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation;

(2) the claims, defenses, and other legal contentions therein are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law;

(3) the allegations and other factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically so identified, are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery; and

(4) the denials of factual contentions are warranted on the evidence or, if specifically *345 so identified, are reasonably based on a lack of information or belief.

Fed.R.Civ.P. 11(b).

[17] In resolving defendants' motions to dismiss, I have thoroughly reviewed plaintiff's complaint and Amended Complaint. I find no indication that Rule 11 sanctions are warranted. First, there is no evidence that plaintiff filed his original complaint or his Amended Complaint for "an improper purpose" such as to harass defendants or to cause unnecessary delay. Second, although plaintiff's original complaint for securities fraud was ultimately dismissed for failure to plead scienter, I concluded that plaintiff adequately alleged the remaining elements of a section 10(b) claim--fraudulent acts and detrimental reliance. Accordingly, I cannot find that the original complaint was wholly "frivolous".

Third, despite the fact that plaintiff chose to file an Amended Complaint rather than to withdraw the action following the first dismissal, sanctions for such amendment would be inappropriate here. To begin, in dismissing the original complaint, I expressly granted plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint provided he could cure the defects of the initial pleading. See Kalnit, 85

F.Supp.2d 232, 245. Thus, "[t]his is certainly not a case where the Court has admonished plaintiffs that Rule 11 sanctions could be imposed upon amendment." Clifford v. Hughson, 992 F.Supp. 661, 671 (S.D.N.Y.1998).

Finally, under the law of this Circuit, "[a]n argument constitutes a frivolous legal position for purposes of Rule 11 sanctions if, under an objective standard of reasonableness, it is clear ... that there is no chance of success and no reasonable argument to extend, modify or reverse the law as it stands." Morley v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 66 F.3d 21, 25 (2d Cir.1995) (internal quotations omitted). Although I find, for the reasons set forth above, that plaintiff's amended allegations of scienter are without merit, this does not mean that plaintiff's attempts to replead scienter were unreasonable and had absolutely "no chance" of success. The element of scienter is often the most difficult and controversial aspect of a securities fraud claim. In the instant case, plaintiff adequately pleaded that he was harmed by defendants' failure to disclose the Hostetter waiver. I cannot conclude that plaintiff's subsequent efforts to demonstrate that defendants acted with bad intent were frivolous as a matter of law.

VI. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, defendants' motion to dismiss is granted without leave to amend and without imposition of sanctions under Rule 11. The Clerk of the Court is directed to close this case.

99 F.Supp.2d 327, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 90,933

END OF DOCUMENT

50

District Court of Appeal of Florida, Third District.

James G. KARNEGIS, Appellant,
v.
Charles OAKES et al., Appellees.

Nos. 74--47, 74--48.

June 26, 1974.
Rehearing Denied July 18, 1974.

Majority stockholder in company which had been involved in litigation with minority stockholder brought action against minority stockholder and another for damages for alleged act of violence against him carried out pursuant to an alleged conspiracy. Defendants' motions for summary judgment were granted by the Circuit Court, Dade County, Jack M. Turner, J., and majority stockholder appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Pearson, J., held that evidence did not preclude finding that one defendant had engaged in a conspiracy, even though he had not participated in the actual assault; but that minority stockholder's uncontradicted testimony that he knew nothing of the conspiracy or the planned assault precluded recovery against him.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Judgment 185.3(21)
228k185.3(21)

Evidence that one defendant discussed with two others his belief that minority stockholder who was involved in litigation with majority stockholders would be grateful if somebody scared one of the majority stockholders, that the three discussed how they could scare a majority stockholder, that defendant stated that they could probably get $21,000 for doing so, that one of the two called defendant later that evening and asked him how to spell majority stockholder's name and that majority stockholder was assaulted by the two others later that evening was sufficient to preclude summary judgment for defendants.

[2] Conspiracy 19
91k19

In absence of any substantial evidence to connect minority stockholder with assault on majority stockholder which allegedly resulted from conspiracy of three others, majority stockholder could not recover under claim for conspiracy against the minority stockholder.

*658 Hendricks & Hendricks, Miami, for appellant.

Bollas, Goodwin, Ryskamp & Welcher, Alfred Gustinger, Thomas N. Balikes, Miami, for appellees.

Before PEARSON, CARROLL and HAVERFIELD, JJ.

PEARSON, Judge.

The appellant, James G. Karnegis, appeals a summary final judgment for defendants Daniel Edgington and Aristides Lazzo. The appellant's action was against these two defendants and others claiming damages against all of the defendants for an alleged act of violence to plaintiff carried out pursuant to an alleged conspiracy among the defendants. After the entry of the summary final judgment for Edgington and Lazzo, the plaintiff appealed. We reverse the summary final judgment entered in favor of the defendant, Daniel Edgington, but affirm the summary final judgment entered in favor of the defendant Aristides Lazzo.

The following statement of fact is necessary for an understanding of the basis of our holdings.

[1] The defendant, Lazzo, is a minority stockholder in Royal Baking Company, Inc., a Florida corporation. The plaintiff and his father, George D. Karnegis, and mother, Theodora Karnegis, are the majority stockholders. Civil litigation has been in progress and still exists between Lazzo and the Karnegises.

In April 1972, the defendant, Oakes, came to Miami from Denver with Herbert Edgington and met and worked with John Edgington and Dan Edgington on construction jobs on several occasions and was working with Daniel Edgington for approximately two weeks prior to the shooting incident. Daniel Edgington discussed with Oakes and Herbert Edgington that he thought Mr. Lazzo would be grateful if someone scared the hell out of the kid (plaintiff). The three of them discussed how they would scare him, including suggested phone calls and shooting at him from a block away with a rifle. Daniel knew of Oakes' criminal record. The scare incident was to be for money and Herbert Edgington quoted a figure of *659 $21,000.00 stating it would be $7,000.00 apiece with the understanding that the money would come from Harry Lazzo. This discussion took place on September 10, 1972, and later that evening Daniel Edgington knew that Oakes and Herbert Edgington were going to do something because Herbert called Daniel in Oakes' presence to find out how to spell the plaintiff's name.

After obtaining the telephone number and address of the plaintiff, Oakes telephoned and had a conversation with the plaintiff to ascertain whether the plaintiff was the correct party.

Later in the same evening, Herbert Edgington and Oakes, armed with a pistol loaded by Herbert, drove to the home of the plaintiff, who answered a knock on his door, and upon opening the door, was asked by Oakes if his name was James Kernegis. Upon receiving an affirmative reply, Oakes asked plaintiff to step outside and upon plaintiff's refusal, Oakes, who was about one foot away from the plaintiff, fired six shots at him from a pistol, plaintiff being hit in the fact by splinters from the door and powder burns on his glasses.

Oakes was arrested and subsequently charged with assault with intent to commit murder with a premeditated design to effect the death of the plaintiff, and with shooting into a dwelling occupied by the plaintiff and his family.

Aristides Lazzo, by deposition, testified that he did not know Oakes but was acquainted with Herbert Edgington, that he had discussed with his son-in-law, Danny, the problems and difficulties that he was having in litigation and that he had kept Danny generally abreast of the status of the proceedings in the case. Lazzo denies that he ever discussed the idea of having the plaintiff killed or sacred so that it would be easier for him to deal with the father and denied that he had paid any monies to Daniel Edgington, Herbert Edgington or Oakes directly or indirectly.

The rule as to summary judgments for defendants has too often been stated to need repetition here. See Basden v. Lowery, Fla.App.1966, 182 So.2d 265.

Applying these principles to the record before us, it is apparent that by giving the benefit of all inferences to the plaintiff the evidence is such that it does not refute the existence of a conspiracy in which the appellee Daniel Edgington participated. We therefore reverse the summary final judgment for the appellee Daniel Edgington.

[2] Upon the other hand, a review of the same facts show that there is no substantial evidence of any sort to connect the defendant Aristides Lazzo with a conspiracy which may have existed. It is further clear the plaintiff has no evidence to overcome Lazzo's testimony that he knew nothing of the project. To speculate that he may have participated because he might ultimately have received some benefit from the assault is not sufficient. The pleadings, affidavits, depositions and admissions before the trial court clearly demonstrate that plaintiff's claim that the appellee Lazzo participated in a conspiracy against him is pure speculation. Therefore, the summary final judgment for the defendant Aristides Lazzo is affirmed.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded for further proceedings.

296 So.2d 657

END OF DOCUMENT

51

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

KOREA LIFE INSURANCE CO., LTD. and Morning Glory Investment (L) Limited,
Plaintiffs,

v.

MORGAN GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Defendant.

No. 99 Civ.12175 AKH.

July 1, 2003.

Korean life insurance company brought action against investment bank to recover losses incurred as result of unhedged risk of depreciation of foreign currency. On bank's motion for summary judgment, the District Court, Hellerstein, J., held that: (1) insurer did not reasonably rely on bank in deciding to enter into contract; (2) insurer's guaranty of special purposes entity's (SPE) obligations was not voidable; but (3) bank was obligated to honor SPE's invocation of stop loss clause.

Motion granted in part, and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 3
184k3

To prove fraud under New York law, plaintiffs must show: (1) defendant made material false representation, (2) defendant intended to defraud plaintiffs thereby, (3) plaintiffs reasonably relied upon representation, and (4) plaintiffs suffered damage as result of such reliance.

[2] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

To prove negligent misrepresentation under New York law, plaintiffs must show that: (1) defendant had duty, as result of special relationship, to give correct information; (2) defendant made false representation that it should have known was incorrect; (3) information supplied in representation was known by defendant to be desired by plaintiffs for serious purpose; (4) plaintiffs intended to rely and act upon that representation; and (5) plaintiffs reasonably relied on it to their detriment.

[3] Banks and Banking 100
52k100

Under New York law, Korean life insurance company did not reasonably rely on investment bank in deciding to enter into transactions containing unhedged risk of depreciation of foreign currency, and thus bank was not liable for insurer's losses under fraud or negligent misrepresentation theories, despite insurer's contention that bank's agent misrepresented nature of transaction, where insurer's equity and international departments prepared independent analyses of transaction that fairly identified risks involved, and insurer restructured transaction in response to analyses to reduce insurer's risks.

[4] Contracts 101(1)
95k101(1)

In cases alleging violation of foreign law, existence of illegality is to be determined by local law of jurisdiction where illegal act is done, while effect of illegality upon contractual relationship is to be determined by law of jurisdiction which is selected under conflicts analysis. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 202.

[5] Guaranty 16(1)
195k16(1)

Under Korean law, insurer's promise in letter of commitment (LOC) to bank to subscribe to additional shares in special purposes entity (SPE) created by insurer if SPE defaulted on its obligation to repay loan to bank constituted "guaranty," and thus violated Korean Business Insurance Law, even though parties' obligations did not exactly mirror one another, where purpose of promise to subscribe to additional shares was to infuse money into SPE in order to enable it to pay debt SPE owed to bank.

[6] Contracts 129(1)
95k129(1)

Under New York conflicts analysis, choice of law agreed to by parties is to be given presumptive effect.

[7] Contracts 103
95k103

[7] Contracts 136
95k136
Under New York law, illegal contract malum in se is unenforceable and will be voided.

[8] Contracts 136
95k136

[8] Contracts 139
95k139
Under New York law, contract that is illegal because performance is malum prohibitum may be voided if: (1) contract is still executory; or (2) parties are not in pari delicto.

[9] Contracts 138(1)
95k138(1)
In determining enforceability of allegedly illegal contract under New York law, court must ascertain if statute that was violated was enacted to protect public health and safety, and whether party seeking to assert defense of illegality is part of class of persons intended to be protected by that statute.

[10] Guaranty 16(2)
195k16(2)
Under New York law, contracts made by Korean insurer and investment bank and their respective affiliates, by which insurer attempted to avoid Korean regulation, were "malum prohibitum," not malum in se, for purposes of determining contracts' enforceability, even if insurer's agreement to guarantee its affiliate's debt to bank violated Korean insurance law.

[11] Contracts 136
95k136
Under New York law, malum prohibitum contract that is executory may be invalidated.

[12] Contracts 139
95k139
Under New York law, malum prohibitum contract generally will be voided only when parties to illegal transaction are not equally guilty.

[13] Guaranty 18
195k18
Under New York law, Korean insurer's promise in letter of commitment (LOC) to bank to subscribe to additional shares in special purposes entity (SPE) created by insurer if SPE defaulted on its obligation to repay loan to bank was not voidable, even if insurer's promise constituted "guaranty" in violation of Korean Business Insurance Law, where both insurer and bank intended to engage in transaction in violation of Korean law, and endeavored to escape eyes of regulators by setting up off-shore shell corporations and structuring transaction as to be virtually impossible to understand to party not familiar with it.

[14] Gaming 62
188k62
Derivative transactions, forward contracts, and swap agreements in currencies and commodities did not constitute illegal gambles, and thus do not violate New York's gambling statute. N.Y.McKinney's General Obligations Law § 5-401.

[15] Banks and Banking 96
52k96
Under New York law, total return swap confirmation agreements between Korean bank and American investment bank and between Korean bank and special purposes entity (SPE) created by Korean insurer constituted single contract, and thus lack of privity did not relieve American bank of its obligation to honor stop-loss provision in SPE's agreement, even though there was no such provision in its agreement and both agreements contained integration clauses, where American bank and insurer structured transaction in complex manner to disguise speculative, offshore transaction that posed unreasonably large risk, and was inappropriate and possibly illegal for regulated Korean insurer to enter into, Korean bank was to earn only modest banking fee as accommodation party, agreements were executed at same time and were all prepared by American bank, and American bank was aware of insurer's insistence upon stop loss clause.

[16] Federal Civil Procedure 2552
170Ak2552

District judge, presented with motion for summary judgment, is entitled to search record and, if no genuine issues of material fact exist, to determine motion in favor of party entitled to summary judgment, regardless whether party is moving, or responding, party. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

*426 John David Lovi, McDermott, Will & Emery, New York City, for Plaintiffs.

Robert H. Baron, Frederick AO Schwartz, Jr., Gravath, Swaine & Moore, LLP, New York City, for Defendant.

OPINION AND ORDER GRANTING SUMMARY JUDGMENT TO DEFENDANT, DISMISSING COUNTS
ONE, TWO, THREE, FIVE, AND SIX; AND GRANTING SUMMARY JUDGMENT TO PLAINTIFFS ON COUNT FOUR

HELLERSTEIN, District Judge.

This is a case of disappointed expectations. It involves forward, one-year contracts in foreign currencies, elaborate hedges, and a substantial, unhedged risk of depreciation of one of the currencies, the *427 Thai baht. The real parties in interest are a Korean life insurance company—the oldest and third largest in Korea—and a major investment bank. The transactions they made were filtered through their specially created, offshore entities, and documented by fragmented and complicated instruments, intended to disguise their dealings from Korean regulators. As it happened, the unhedged risk came to pass, an extraordinary loss occurred, and the Korean life insurance company honored its resulting debt. It brought this lawsuit to obtain the return of its payment.

In January 1997, an affiliate of Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York ("Morgan") raised $25 million of debt from European lenders for the purpose of providing an opportunity for an above-market return to benefit plaintiff, Korea Life Insurance Company ("Korea Life" or "KLI"). Korea Life, however, was not to be the direct recipient or custodian of the funds. The deal involved special purpose entities that were to be formed in off-shore jurisdictions, to handle and deploy the Morgan-raised funds and to mask the transaction from Korean regulators.

Morgan's affiliate promised to repay the $25,000,000 to the European investors after one year, with interest at the London Interbank Offered Rate ("LIBOR"). During the year, a special purpose entity ("SPE") that Korea Life was to create would have the use and benefit of the funds, in order to purchase a dollar-denominated certificate of deposit. At the end of the year, at maturity, Korea Life's SPE was to repay Morgan according to formulae reflecting changes in the ratios among the dollar, the Thai baht, and the Japanese yen. If the baht and the yen appreciated against the dollar, KLI would be responsible for less than the $25,000,000 it owed to Morgan, and might not have had to pay Morgan at all. However, if the baht depreciated, Korea Life's SPE would have to pay Morgan five times the deteriorated rate of the baht relative to the dollar, plus the discount of $25,000,000. Since Korea Life's SPE had no capital aside from the $25,000,000 that had been lent to it, Korea Life promised to contribute the capital that might be needed to repay Morgan.

As it turned out, the Thai baht collapsed during the investment year. Korea Life, honoring its commitment, paid Morgan, in cash and credit, $66,304,746, plus the agreed-to discount of $25 million—approximately $90,487,500 in all. It brought this lawsuit to regain all or part of its payment. Its claim, essentially, is for money unlawfully had and received by Morgan, because of its alleged fraud or, alternatively, negligent misrepresentations, the illegality or ultra vires nature of the transactions and their violation of New York's anti-gambling statutes, the commercial impracticability of the transactions, or Morgan's unjust enrichment. Korea Life also claims that Morgan breached a clause in the agreement which required it to unwind the transaction upon demand by Korea Life's SPE, thus preventing Korea Life from mitigating its losses according to the stop-loss feature of the agreement.

After extensive discovery conducted in three continents, Morgan moves for summary judgment. Both sides have submitted extensive affidavits and briefs, and I have engaged the parties in several arguments, evidentiary hearings, and supplemental submissions on the topics of Korean law and the notice that was given pursuant to the unwind provision in the agreements. [FN1] I now rule in this opinion *428 on all issues, dismissing all but the breach of contract count against Morgan, and granting Korea Life summary judgment on that breach of contract count in an amount to be determined in further proceedings.

FN1. I heard oral argument on June 20 and July 29, 2002, and conducted evidentiary hearings on September 4 and 5, 2002.

THE EVIDENTIARY RECORD

A. The Parties

Plaintiff KLI is Korea's oldest and third-largest life insurance company. It was organized in 1946 under the laws of the Republic of Korea. As of March 30, 1996, it had more than $12 billion in assets and $8 billion in revenue. Its net equity was $48 million. In March 1999, it entered receivership, under the supervision of the Korean government.

Plaintiff Morning Glory Investment (L) Limited ("Morning Glory") is a limited liability investment company. KLI created Morning Glory under the laws of Malaysia on November 27, 1996, as its special purpose entity to engage in the transactions at issue.

Defendant Morgan is a commercial bank incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business in New York City.

B. The Morning Glory Transactions

On January 15, 1997, a series of agreements were executed, providing for the money flow just described. As step one, Morgan set up a special purpose entity in the English Channel islands, Frome Company Limited ("Frome"). By a private placement memorandum dated January 15, 1997, [FN2] Frome issued one-year notes to European investors, raising $25 million. The notes were guaranteed by Morgan, [FN3] and promised the lenders repayment with interest at LIBOR. [FN4]

FN2. The memorandum bears the date of January 15, 1996. The context makes clear that the actual date was January 15, 1997.

FN3. The guaranty was in the form of a swap agreement between Frome and Morgan. Morgan agreed to provide funds to Frome adequate to repay its obligations under the notes. Frome agreed to deliver, in exchange, the 2.5 million shares of Morning Glory acquired in step two of the transaction.

FN4. LIBOR is an acronym for London Interbank Offered Rate. The one-year rate, as of January 15, 1997, was about 5.95 per cent.

As step two, Frome contributed the $25 million it raised to Morning Glory, in exchange for 2.5 million of Morning Glory's common shares. Simultaneously, Morning Glory purchased a one-year $25 million certificate of deposit issued by Korea Exchange Bank ("KEB"), maturing in one year and paying interest at 6.05 per cent, and paid a fee of $70,000 to KEB.

The next steps were to occur a year later, at maturity, January 30, 1998. Morning Glory was entitled to receive $26,512,500 in principal and interest on the certificate of deposit issued by Korea Exchange Bank, and obligated to redeem its shares that it had issued to Frome by paying Frome's parent, Morgan either (a) 96.75 per cent of the $25 million Frome had contributed, that is, $24,187,500 or, (b) depending on conditions relating to the rise or fall of the Thai baht in relation to the Japanese yen, the agreed-to discount of $25 million, plus or minus the product of two inter-related formulae quantifying those currency relationships. The formulae were set out in two Total Return Swap Confirmation Agreements, one between Morning Glory and KEB ("the Morning Glory/KEB agreement"), and the other between KEB and Morgan ("the KEB/Morgan agreement"). The same formulae are used in both agreements, and in this way the agreements work in tandem so that *429 any amount Morning Glory was obligated to pay to KEB under the Morning Glory/KEB agreement, KEB would owe to Morgan under the KEB/Morgan agreement. Likewise, any amount Morgan would be obligated to pay to KEB under the KEB/Morgan agreement, KEB would in turn owe to Morning Glory under the Morning Glory/KEB agreement. KEB, in other words, was the intermediary linking the two agreements.

Morning Glory's obligation to pay KEB at the January 30, 1998 maturity date, and KEB's obligation to pass through that amount to Morgan, was expressed in the formulae as a "Yen Payment Amount" and a "Baht Payment Amount." The formulae took into account five conditions: an appreciating, and a depreciating, yen relative to the dollar; an appreciating, and a depreciating, baht relative to the dollar; and a fixed ratio of yen to baht of one-to-five. If the yen depreciated, Morgan would be obligated to pay KEB, and KEB to pay Morning Glory, an amount provided for by the formulae, but if the yen appreciated, no amount would have to be paid by any party. If the baht depreciated, Morning Glory would be obligated to pay KEB, and KEB to pay Morgan, an amount provided for by the formulae, but if the baht appreciated, Morgan would have to pay KEB, and KEB, in turn, Morning Glory, an amount calculated according to the formulae, but not more than $25 million.

How did these formulae work together? The formulae were calculated on the basis of the relationship between the baht and the yen, which tended to travel together. Historically, when the yen appreciated, the baht appreciated, and when the yen depreciated, the baht depreciated, generally at a ratio of about five baht to one yen. Taking this relationship into account, the formulae were structured so that the yen would ostensibly function as a hedge against the baht. According to these formulae, if, at maturity, the yen and the baht both depreciated, Morning Glory was obligated to pay a "Baht Payment Amount" to KEB, and KEB was obligated to pay the same amount to Morgan, but at the same time, Morgan was obligated to pay KEB, and KEB to pay Morning Glory, a "Yen Payment Amount," serving as a hedge to Morning Glory's risk. The relationship between these amounts reflected the five-to-one ratio: the "Baht Payment Amount" was equal to the absolute value of $125 million times the difference between the value of the baht as provided in the agreement and the value of the baht on the maturity date, divided by the value of the baht on the maturity date, while the "Yen Payment Amount" was equal to the value of $25 million (1/5 of $125 million) times the difference between the value of the yen on the maturity date and the value of the yen as provided in the agreement, divided by the value of the yen on the maturity date. [FN5] Thus, if the baht and yen both depreciated at the historical five-to-one ratio, Morning Glory would owe money to KEB, and KEB to Morgan, but any amount owed would be cancelled out by the amount Morgan owed to KEB, and KEB to Morning Glory.

FN5. These formulae are represented in the agreements as: Yen Payment Amount = Notional Amount x (YenMat--YenSpot)/YenMat Baht Payment Amount = Notional Amount x 5 x (ThbSpot--ThbMat)/ThbMat The "Notional Amount" was designated as $25,000,000; the "YenMat" and "ThbMat" the value of the yen and baht, respectively, at maturity; the "YenSpot" was designated as 116.00; and the "ThbMat" was designated as 25.624.

If, however, the yen and the baht, instead of depreciating, were both to appreciate, a different scheme was to govern. If the yen were to appreciate, no payment *430 obligation would be due from either party to the other. But if the baht were to appreciate,

Morgan would have to pay KEB, and KEB, in turn, would have to pay Morning Glory an amount proportional to the baht's appreciation, up to $25,000,000. In other words, Morning Glory stood to gain by the baht's appreciation: (a) the interest gain on the one-year certificate of deposit ($25,000,000 x.0605), less Morning Glory's fees to KEB ($70,000), plus (b) the repayment discount ($25,000,000 x.0325), or $2,255,000, plus (c) an uncertain amount, up to $25,000,000, according to how much the baht might appreciate against the dollar. Thus, if the baht would be worth more against the dollar on January 30, 1998 (the maturity date) than it was worth as designated in the agreements, Korea Life might find that some or all of its repayment obligation of $25,000,000 would be excused. And all this on borrowed funds and without any commitment of capital.

There was a catch, however. If the baht depreciated during the investment year, and the yen remained stable against the dollar or appreciated, there would be no hedge. Morning Glory's obligation to pay KEB, and KEB's obligation, in turn, to pay Morgan was "absolute."

The Morning Glory/KEB Total Return Swap Agreement contained a clause, clause 2(e), to guard against that contingency of a depreciating baht losing its historically-fixed ratio of five-to-one against the yen. Under clause 2(e), Morning Glory was given the right to demand, upon two days' written notice, that its forward position be unwound. [FN6]

FN6. The requirement of a writing was incorporated into the Swap Agreement by reference to another, unexecuted Master agreement, the form provided by the International Swaps and Derivatives Association, Inc. (the "ISDA Master Agreement" or "ISDA form").

To recapitulate and elaborate: Under the Total Transaction Return Swap Transaction agreement at maturity:

(a) Morning Glory was to receive interest at the rate of 6.05 per cent of $25,000,000, in the amount of $1,512,500; plus a discount of its repayment obligation at the rate of 3.25 per cent of $25,000,000, in the amount of $812,500; less $70,000 in a fee to KEB; or a total interest rate profit, in dollars, of $2,255,000, plus the possibility of additional gain if the baht were to appreciate in relation to the dollar. Morning Glory, Korea Life's SPE, had this profit possibility on the basis entirely of borrowed funds, all off-shore and away from the scrutiny of Korea Life's regulators, and without having to commit any capital to the transaction.

(b) If, however, the baht were to depreciate against the dollar, requiring more baht at maturity to purchase a dollar than at inception, Morning Glory was to pay "the absolute value of the Baht Payment." That is, Morning Glory would be required to purchase as many baht as would be required to purchase five times $25,000,000. Furthermore, if it lacked sufficient assets to pay the liability, Korea Life committed by a separate Letter of Commitment to KEB and to Morning Glory that, "subject to any restrictions under Korean Law ... it shall subscribe for, or cause to be subscribed for, additional Shares in the amount sufficient to ... pay all liabilities of [Morning Glory]" to KEB and through KEB, to Morgan. Thus, the real risk inherent in the swap transactions was to be incurred by Morning Glory, if the baht depreciated in value against the dollar.

(c) The Morning Glory/KEB agreement, however, provided a limit to this "absolute" risk. Section 2(e) of that agreement provided that Morning Glory "has the *431 right as of any Business Day on a full two-way payments basis to terminate the Transaction at the prevailing market value, as determined by the Calculation Agent in a reasonable and fair commercial manner, on at least two (2) Business Days prior notice." The "Calculation Agent" is defined in the confirmation agreement as Morgan. In other words, Morning Glory had a stop-loss provision, enabling it to demand settlement two days after notice, at any time during the one-year period of the transaction. The counterpart agreement between KEB and Morgan, however, did not contain a like provision, and the parties offered no explanation to account for this omission.

C. Documents Comprising the Agreement

The two Total Return Swap Transaction confirmation agreements providing the formulae comprising the transaction described above were to be "governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New York," and were to "supplement, form a part of, and be subject to" a Master Agreement, in the form published by the International Swaps and Derivatives Association, Inc. ("ISDA Master Agreement" or "ISDA form"). The ISDA Master Agreement in use when the Morning Glory Transactions were executed includes an integration clause, providing that the Master Agreement "constitutes the entire agreement and understanding of the parties with respect to its subject matter and supersedes all oral communication and prior writings with respect thereto." The Master Agreement also requires that any notice or other communication be in writing. The parties never actually signed the Master Agreement.

The parties (Morning Glory, KEB and Morgan) also entered into a Security Agreement, and KLI executed and delivered a Letter of Commitment ("LOC") to Morning Glory and KEB, on January 15, 1997, in connection with the Total Return Swap Agreements. The Security Agreement required Morning Glory to satisfy KEB's obligations under KEB's swap agreement with Morgan. The LOC committed KLI to contribute capital to Morning Glory by purchasing additional of its shares, to the extent Morning Glory could not pay KEB, or if Morning Glory's "Net Asset Value" fell below 100 percent of its liabilities under the swap. KLI represented, in its LOC, that it was "duly incorporated and validly existing under the laws of the Republic of Korea as a limited company, [had] full power, authority and legal right to enter into and perform [its] obligations under this letter and ha[d] taken all necessary action (corporate and otherwise) to authorize the execution, performance and delivery" of the LOC, and that the LOC "ha[d] been duly authorized, executed and delivered by us and constitutes our valid and binding obligation."

All of these documents—the Security Agreement, the LOC, and the Total Return Swap Transaction confirmation agreements—were preceded by an Indicative Term Sheet, delivered by Morgan and executed by KLI and KEB on January 10, 1997, with KEB acting in the transactions "for and on behalf of Morning Glory Investment Limited." The term sheet set out the transactions that were later separately reflected in the two Total Return Swap Agreements, one between Morning Glory and KEB, and the second between KEB and Morgan; KLI's obligations were later expressed separately in the LOC and the Security Agreement.

D. Background to the Total Return Swap Agreements

The agreements discussed were entered into after extensive contacts and negotiations *432 between the parties. Early in 1996, Dr. Chang Hyun Chi, an officer of Promax International ("Promax"), a Korean company which marketed and sold Morgan's financial products, approached Chae Wook Noh of KLI to suggest that KLI enter into derivative financial transactions based on "synthetic low-cost yen financing." The idea conveyed by Chi to Noh (from Morgan's agent to KLI) was to simulate a borrowing of yen in order to capture low interest rates charged by Japanese financial institutions, and to use such a borrowing as leverage in purchasing common stocks.

Dr. Chi's proposals evolved from such leveraged stock purchases to currency proposals, and to a yen-financed set of forward contracts for the Thai baht as hedges against possible fluctuations in the yen. Dr. Chi proposed that KLI's investment should amount to $100 million, and suggested that there would be little or no risk involved in the transaction. His expressed assumption was that the Thai baht was a stable currency, tied to other stable currencies at a fixed exchange rate, and that the Thai government and its central banking policies defended that stability by purchases and sales on international currency markets. Dr. Chi proposed that KLI could benefit by a rate of return of as much as 16 per cent, for an investment that was substantially risk-free. Dr. Chi's proposal also recognized that Korea's insurance regulators might look askance at an unconventional investment, not high-grade debt securities that Korean regulatory policies mandated for regulated life insurance companies. Dr. Chi proposed that the transaction need not be disclosed if it was done entirely through off-shore special purpose entities.

The proposal was attractive to Mr. Noh and his colleagues at KLI. KLI would be 50 years old in 1996, and was the oldest, and the third largest, life insurance company in Korea. Its management in 1996 prided itself on its rapid growth, on a 30.7 percent increase in new business, and a 25.2 percent increase in premium income, compared to the preceding year. It had assets of $12,360,000,000 but liabilities almost as much-$12,312,000,000. Its capital stood at $38 million, but its income was disproportionately low, $7 million for the year ended March 31, 1996, and $8 million the previous year. Its earned surplus as of March 31, 1996 was only $10 million.

KLI's management stated in its annual report for the year ended March 30, 1996 that it sought "maximum return" for policyholders, and to "guaranty the best and most affluent life possible for [its] clients." However, KLI's annual report also stated that KLI was operating in a field of "boundless competition," as Korea liberalized its financial markets and as "banking, securities firms, investment trust companies and other financial institutions began overlapping with each other," introducing downward pressure on interest rate returns. Clearly, such downward pressure could frustrate the goals expressed by KLI management.

Hence, Dr. Chi's proposals to Mr. Noh were interesting to KLI. But KLI's International Department, after reviewing the proposals, expressed concern about the risks.

KLI's "International Department" was a small department, and had responsibility for KLI's limited foreign investments. In a short memorandum of December 17, 1996 directed to the "Director of the Stock Department" ("the International Department Memo"), the Department expressed concerns that the proposed size of the Morning Glory transaction, $100 million, and its involvement with foreign financial institutions would attract the scrutiny of Korean regulators and the government auditing *433 agency. The memorandum was also critical of the exchange risks that would be borne by KLI:

The current deal is based on the anticipation of a stable trend that Japanese Yen and Thai Baht will change in the same direction, and assumes the multiple factor for the change rate of both currencies as 5. The pertaining calculation is based on the purchase of 5 forward products that are discounted by 3.2%. However, recently, the increase of the current account deficit of Thailand and instability of its economic condition is causing more demand for changes in the system determining the exchange rate for the Thai Baht and for devaluation. Therefore, it should not be overlooked that there is a possibility that the multiple relationship of the change rate for these two currencies may become lower or the direction of changes may reverse.... In case that the devaluation rate for the Baht against the Yen becomes greater than 1/5, it may result in losses at maturity and a risk of wiping out the profit (7.8%) from the difference in interest rates.

The memorandum warned that the proposed transaction was not cancelable before maturity if market conditions became unfavorable.

Promax and Dr. Chi responded the next day, on December 18, 1996. In response to the concerns about the attitude of Korean regulators, Promax stated that "we can manipulate the process in many ways so that it won't be conspicuous even to market experts not to mention the supervisory agencies," and that as to the complexity of the deal, the "structure of the deal only looks complex to ensure the safety and confidentiality of the deal." As for the concern that KLI would bear substantial risk, Promax explained that there would be "a certain degree of currency risk" in return for increased return. As to the risk of baht devaluation, Promax pointed out that the Thai government had defended the baht in the past, and would be unlikely to make drastic changes in currency policy: "Even if the government indeed abandons the existing currency strategy, devaluation of the Baht would be an extremely radical measure." An article from the October 22, 1996 Asian Wall Street Journal was appended, which noted deterioration in Thailand's trade balance and other potential pressures on its currency, but which concluded that concerns about shifts in the Thai government's currency policy were perhaps overstated. Promax concluded with its opinion that "[t]he anticipated rate of return for this deal is 16% and the only risk is the devaluation of Baht. Considering the Baht exchange rate and the economic outlook, the possibility for devaluation is extremely low." Finally, Promax commented that if market conditions shifted, the transaction could be undone by executing a "reversing transaction."

KLI's Equity Department agreed that the transaction should be executed, but based on the concerns of the International Department, concluded that it should reduce the borrowed amount from $100 million to $25 million. In addition, section 2(e) to the Morning Glory/KEB swap confirmation, giving Morning Glory the right to cause the settlement date of the transaction to be accelerated, from January 30, 1998 to two days after Morning Glory's demand to KEB, was added as a "reversing transaction" in response to the International Department's worries about not being able to cancel the transaction before maturity.

E. The Value of the Thai Baht Plummet

As of January 1997, and for years previous to that, the Thai government had *434 maintained a policy of protecting the exchange rate of the baht relative to a "basket" of foreign currencies, including the U.S. dollar, the Japanese yen and the German mark. The Bank of Thailand had allowed the baht to trade within a specified "band" of value relative to the basket of currencies.

The stable baht marked growing prosperity of the southeast Asian economies, a prosperity which, towards the end of 1996, had shown signs of weakening. On July 2, 1997, the Thai government dramatically changed its currency policy, unhinged the relationship of the baht relative to the fixed basket of currencies and allowed it to float free on international currency markets, resulting in a substantial devaluation of the baht relative to the dollar.

The baht's precipitous and substantial decline (from a stable value of approximately 26 baht to the dollar in early 1997 to a value of over 50 baht to the dollar in January 1998) generated a large potential liability for Morning Glory under the baht formula of the swap agreements. Ultimately, due to the baht's decline, the "Baht Payment Amount" owed under the swap formulas by Morning Glory to KEB, and in turn owed by KEB to Morgan, amounted to approximately $66 million, in addition to the 96.75 percent of the $25 million notional amount that Morning Glory was obligated to repay. Under the LOC and Security Agreement, KLI, by its obligation to purchase sufficient shares of Morning Glory to enable Morning Glory to satisfy its debt to KEB, and KEB, its debt to Morgan, was the guarantor of this $90 million obligation of Morning Glory, through KEB, to Morgan.

F. Morning Glory's Demand to Unwind the Swap Agreements.

Beginning on or about July 8, 1997, KLI began requesting that Morgan unwind the transaction, first orally and then, on October 16, 1997, by written demand by Morning Glory and KLI to KEB pursuant to clause 2(e) of the Morning Glory/KEB Agreement. Morgan, in response to the initial oral demands, expressed concern about unwinding the transaction because of inadequate liquidity in the baht currency market, and instructed KLI to send any request to unwind to KEB. Following these instructions, on October 16, 1997, B.C. Kim, of KLI, on behalf of I-Soo Joe, the Director of KLI's International Department and a director at Morning Glory, gave written demand by telefax to Joongseok Ahn of KEB, requesting that the baht part of the transaction be unwound. KEB relayed KLI's telefax to Morgan. Neither KEB nor Morgan acted on Morning Glory's demand, then or in the conversations and meetings that followed. Morgan blamed KEB, and KEB blamed Morgan, as the party refusing to unwind the transaction.

G. Baht Leg of Swaps Actually Unwound On January 7, 1998

On January 7, 1998, 23 days before the termination date of the Morning Glory Transactions, Morgan executed an unwind of Morning Glory's baht positions, at the value of 54.57 Thai baht to the U.S. dollar. On January 27, 1998, Morgan made demand on KLI, that KLI pay the entire amount due--$66,304,746 under the formulae, plus 96.75 percent of the $25 million borrowing, or $90,492,246 in all. As payment, KLI/Morning Glory, KEB, and Morgan entered into a Loan Facility Agreement, pursuant to which KLI (through Morning Glory) (a) repaid the 96.75 percent of the original $25 million borrowed; (b) repaid another $16.3 million (approximately) in cash; and (c) borrowed $50 million from Morgan at an interest rate of LIBOR plus 700 points (7 per cent over *435 LIBOR), payable semi-annually each year until the maturity date of January 30, 2000, thereby repaying the $90,492,246.

KLI now sues for a return of the sum it paid, on the bases, alternatively, of fraud, negligent misrepresentation, illegality, violation of New York's anti-gambling statute, breach of contract, unjust enrichment, and commercial frustration or impracticability. After extensive discovery, Morgan moved for summary judgment, contending that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on all of plaintiffs' claims.

DISCUSSION

(C) 2005 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Wo

A. Summary Judgment Standards

Summary judgment is warranted if the "pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits ... show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). A "genuine issue" of "material fact" exists "if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). Although all facts and inferences therefrom are to be construed in favor of the party opposing the motion, see Harlen Assocs. v. Village of Mineola, 273 F.3d 494, 498 (2d Cir.2001), the non-moving party must raise more than just "metaphysical doubt as to the material facts," Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986). "[M]ere speculation and conjecture is insufficient to preclude the granting of the motion." Harlen, 273 F.3d at 499. "If the evidence is merely colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment may be granted." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249-50, 106 S.Ct. 2505 (citations omitted). I find that there are no genuine issues of material fact on plaintiffs' fraud, negligent misrepresentation, unjust enrichment, frustration, impracticability, illegality, and gambling claims, and, therefore, on these claims, summary judgment is granted to defendant. Likewise, there are no genuine issues of material fact on plaintiffs' breach of contract claim, and on the undisputed evidence presented by the parties, I find that summary judgment on that claim is appropriately granted to plaintiffs. [FN7]

FN7. Although plaintiffs have not moved for summary judgment, a motion for summary judgment authorizes the district judge to search the record, and to grant summary judgment to the party entitled thereto, regardless whether that party was the moving party. See Coach Leatherware Co. v. AnnTaylor, Inc., 933 F.2d 162, 167 (2d Cir.1991); Project Release v. Prevost, 722 F.2d 960, 969 (2d Cir.1983).

B. Plaintiffs' Fraud and Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

Plaintiffs allege in their complaint that Morgan, through Dr. Chi and Promax, fraudulently induced plaintiffs to enter into the Morning Glory transactions by misrepresenting the stability of the Thai baht. Plaintiffs also allege that Dr. Chi and Morgan did not use reasonable care in explaining to plaintiffs the nature and risks of the Morning Glory transactions, and that this lack of reasonable care constituted negligent misrepresentation.

[1][2] To prove fraud, plaintiffs must show: (1) the defendant made a material false representation, (2) the defendant intended to defraud the plaintiffs thereby, (3) the plaintiffs reasonably relied upon the representation, and (4) the plaintiffs suffered damage as a result of such reliance. Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement *436 v. Maryland Nat'l Bank, 57 F.3d 146, 153 (2d Cir.1995). To prove negligent misrepresentation, plaintiffs must show that (1) the defendant had a duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; (2) the defendant made a false representation that it should have known was incorrect; (3) the information supplied in the representation was known by the defendant to be desired by the plaintiffs for a serious purpose; (4) the plaintiffs intended to rely and act upon that representation; and (5) the plaintiffs reasonably relied on it to their detriment. Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power, Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 20 (2d Cir.2000).

[3] Central to both of these claims is that plaintiffs actually and reasonably relied on Morgan's representations in deciding to enter into the Morning Glory transactions. Without such reliance, there is no cause of action for fraud or negligent misrepresentation. See Kregos v. Associated Press, 3 F.3d 656, 665 (2d Cir.1993). The evidence shows that plaintiffs could not reasonably have relied on Dr. Chi and Promax's representations about the nature of the transaction or the stability of the Thai baht, and without this reliance, plaintiffs' claims of fraud and of negligent representation must fail.

KLI argues that Dr. Chi misrepresented that the nature of the swap transaction was a hedge against yen appreciation, but it is plain that plaintiffs did not rely on this alleged misrepresentation in deciding whether to enter into the transaction. Plaintiffs did not enter into the transaction in reliance on the belief that they were entering into a synthetic low-cost yen-financing deal. The memoranda between Promax and KLI make it clear that both parties understood that the transaction was structured in a way as to appear to be yen-financing, when its focus was a bet on the stability, or instability, of the baht. For example, Promax's memo stated that "the Thai Baht portion [of the deal] corresponds to the income and risk" of the deal. Moreover, it cannot be said that KLI did not understand the nature of the transaction; both its Equity Department and the International Department did analyses of the transaction, and fairly identified the risks involved. And the terms of the Total Return Swap Agreements that KLI reviewed and executed provided notice that the baht might not hold its value and that the nature of the transaction was speculative. The agreements provided that if the value of the baht fell proportionately more than the yen, Morning Glory would have to pay KEB an amount in U.S. dollars that would vary directly and by multiples according to how much decrease would be experienced in the baht's value in relation to the yen and the dollar. In agreeing to take part in the Morning Glory transactions, plaintiffs were on notice that the Thai baht could fall. Indeed, the only way to understand the Morning Glory Transactions is as a bet that the baht would not decrease more than the yen, in relation to the dollar, between January 21, 1997 and January 30, 1998.

Furthermore, although KLI had not before taken part in a total return swap transaction, and the transaction was complicated and difficult to comprehend, the parties to the transaction were sufficiently sophisticated to understand it. They understood that currencies fluctuate. Indeed, notwithstanding opinions by Dr. Chi, on behalf of Morgan, that the Thai government probably would not eliminate the tie between the baht and the basket of stable currencies, the possibility of a substantial devaluation of the Thai baht within the year of the proposed transaction was a risk in the transaction that some employees of KLI considered inappropriate for a life insurance company. Thus, KLI's International *437 Department recommended that KLI not take part in the transaction because of concern about the current account deficit of Thailand and a perceived instability of its economic condition. These concerns caused KLI to reduce the size of the proposed transaction, from $100 million to $25 million.

Promax itself, in responding to the KLI International Department Memo, conceded that there was "a certain degree of currency risk," while minimizing the possibility that the Thai government would untie the baht. The Asian Wall Street Journal article of October 22, 1996, which was attached to Promax's memo, reported deteriorations in the stability of the Thai economy and its currency and differing opinions of financial analysts, some expecting a "financial meltdown" in Thailand, and some expressing the view that a devaluation was unlikely. The memorandum concluded that "it is difficult to make any predictions" about the currency situation.

There is therefore no merit to KLI's contention that it was deceived by Promax and Morgan. It was clear to KLI that Dr. Chi's representations were opinions incident to a selling effort, that others disagreed with his opinions, and that there could not have been justifiable reliance by KLI on Dr. Chi's opinions concerning the continuing financial strength of the Thai baht. See Dooner v. Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, Inc., 157 F.Supp.2d 265, 278 (S.D.N.Y.2001) ("A representation with respect to an unreckonable future phenomenon ... in circumstances that could neither be foreseen with certainty nor controlled with precision is too heavily freighted with prophecy, speculation and chance to support a cause of action for fraud.") (internal citation omitted); Channel Master Corp. v. Aluminium Ltd. Sales, 4 N.Y.2d 403, 176 N.Y.S.2d 259, 151 N.E.2d 833, 836 (1958); Shoucair v. Read, 88 A.D.2d 718, 451 N.Y.S.2d 281, 283 (3d Dep't 1982).

In sum, KLI could not reasonably have relied on any of the representations made by Morgan, directly or through Dr. Chi or Promax. Plaintiffs' claims alleging fraud and negligent misrepresentation cannot succeed. Counts One and Two are dismissed.

C. Plaintiffs' Illegality Claim

Plaintiffs argue that KLI's obligation to pay Morgan under the Letter of Commitment and Security Agreement that it executed in favor of Morgan was illegal, as a guaranty forbidden by the Korean laws pertaining to life insurance companies. [FN8] Plaintiffs seek the return of the $66.3 million in cash and notes that KLI paid Morgan. Plaintiffs cite Article 19 of the Korean Business Insurance Act and Article 61 of the Insurance Supervision Regulations in support of their position.

FN8. Although plaintiffs' submissions and contentions focused on the Letter of Commitment alone, the Security Agreement should be read together with the LOC. The LOC required KLI, in the event that Morning Glory lacked funds to discharge its obligation to KEB, and KEB to discharge its obligation to Morgan, to contribute funds to Morning Glory sufficient to enable Morning Glory to pay KEB, and KEB to pay Morgan. The Security Agreement assured Morgan that Morgan would be the beneficiary of the payment obligations of the LOC, and Morning Glory, KEB, and Morgan were all parties to the Security Agreement. The two documents together make it clear that KLI had obligated itself to contribute the funds that were to be used to enable the obligors of Morgan to discharge their debts to and for the benefit of Morgan. KLI's obligation was that of a guarantor, to assure the payment owed to Morgan by Morgan's direct and indirect obligors.

Article 19 of the Korean Business Insurance Act requires an insurer, in operating its property, to "work to ensure the safety, profitability, liquidity and public interest."

438 Article 61 of the Insurance Supervision Regulations, promulgated by the Insurance Regulatory Authority pursuant to the Business Insurance Act, provides that "[a]n insurance company shall not provide its assets as security for a third party or guaranty an indebtedness of a third party." KLI argues that the Letter of Commitment (and the Security Agreement), by providing that KLI would contribute funds to Morning Glory sufficient to enable Morning Glory to pay its debt to KEB, and thereby enable KEB to pay its counterpart debt to Morgan, amounted to a guaranty of the Total Return Swap Agreements that was ultra vires and, therefore, null and void. KLI further contends that because the LOC (and the Security Agreement) are illegal and cannot be enforced against KLI, Morgan should be required to repay its alleged gain as money it unlawfully had and received.

[4] In cases alleging a violation of foreign law, the existence of illegality is to be determined by the local law of the jurisdiction where the illegal act is done, while the effect of illegality upon the contractual relationship is to be determined by the law of the jurisdiction which is selected under conflicts analysis. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 202 cmt. c (1971); Dornberger v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 961 F.Supp. 506, 533 (S.D.N.Y.1997). Thus, whether the LOC was an illegal contract must be determined under Korean law. Much expert testimony has been provided on this issue, by affidavits, depositions, and direct and cross-examinations at an evidentiary hearing before me. I am authorized to resolve the issues of Korean law as a matter of law, and I may consider any relevant material or source, whether or not admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence. Fed.R.Civ.P. 44.1; Curley v. AMR Corp., 153 F.3d 5, 13 (2d Cir.1998).

The experts dispute whether the LOC constitutes a "guaranty" in violation of Article 61 of the Business Insurance Act and, if it is a guaranty, whether Korean law requires that a transaction based on such a guaranty should be invalidated.

The LOC provides that if the Net Asset value of Morning Glory falls below "100 percent of the Liabilities on any Valuation Date," that KLI, "subject to any restrictions under Korean law, shall subscribe for ... additional Shares at the Net Asset Value per Share ... so that the New Asset Value of [Morning Glory] shall exceed 102 percent of the Liabilities." The LOC also requires that if Morning Glory has insufficient assets to pay its liabilities in full on the due date, KLI will subscribe for additional shares in an amount sufficient to enable Morning Glory to pay all liabilities in full. The purpose of the LOC was to assure that Morning Glory would have sufficient funds on January 30, 1998, when the Total Return Swap transactions came due, or on any other Valuation Date, to pay KEB, and thus to enable KEB to fulfill its obligation under its Total Return Swap Agreement with Morgan.

Morgan's expert, Dr. Jin Su Yune, a Professor of Law at Seoul National University who specializes in the Korean Civil Code, testified that in his opinion the LOC was not a guaranty and that, even if it were, Korean law would not invalidate the agreement. Dr. Yune expressed the opinion that, since "guaranty" was not defined by the Business Insurance Law, the definition of the Civil Code, Article 428(1), should be followed: one who is "liable to perform the obligation that the principal obligor has failed to perform." Dr. Yune argued that since Morning Glory's obligation to KEB was to pay money, while KLI's obligation under the LOC was to subscribe for additional shares of Morning 439 Glory, the obligations were not identical, and do not constitute a guaranty.

Dr. Yune expressed the opinion, based on a 1989 decision of the Korea Supreme Court, that even if the LOC did constitute a guaranty, Korean law would not invalidate it. That decision held that while an insurance company's guaranty of $2 million violated the Business Insurance Act, the guaranty did not have a "clear anti-social or unethical nature," and did not have to be invalidated in order to achieve the purpose of the business insurance law. 88 DaKa 2233 (S.Ct. Korea 1989). Thus, according to Dr. Yune, even if a guaranty violates Article 61, it will not necessarily be invalidated by a Korean Court.

KLI's expert, Dr. Kon Sik Kim, a Professor of Law at Seoul National University who specializes in corporate law, securities regulations, insurance law, and commercial law, testified in disagreement with Dr. Yune. Dr. Kim expressed the opinion that the LOC constituted a guaranty. In his opinion, the obligation in the LOC requiring KLI to subscribe for additional shares of Morning Glory in order to specifically allow Morning Glory to perform its obligation to KEB constituted a payment of money to fulfill the debt of the obligor to the obligee, and was indistinguishable from a guaranty. And the guaranty, Dr. Kim concluded, put KLI in the position of being responsible for up to $125 million in liabilities, exactly the kind of transaction-one that would expose an insurance company to serious financial risk-that Article 61 sought to avoid. Dr. Kim distinguished the 1989 Supreme Court case upon which Dr. Yune relied as involving a guaranty of only $2 million, which did not implicate the integrity of a financial institution of the size and prominence of KLI.

Dr. Kim supported his view with a 2002 decision of the Korea Supreme Court, invalidating a guaranty of a mutual financing company. The case, decided under the Korean Savings and Loan Act, held that "a mutual financing company cannot make borrowings in excess of its equity," and that, if it did so, any such undertaking would violate the law and be deemed void. 2000 Da 42625 (S.Ct. Korea 2002). Dr. Kim analogized this case to the instant one, opining that the Savings and Loan Act, which prevents savings and loan associations from borrowing in excess of shareholders' equity, expressed the same policy as that which informed the Business Insurance Act, and that the LOC should be nullified pursuant to Article 103 of the Korean Civil Code, which provides that "[a] juristic act which has for its object such matters as are contrary to good morals and other social order shall be null and void."

A disagreement of the experts as to an issue of foreign law does not foreclose the granting of a motion for summary judgment. See Fed. R.Civ.P. 44.1; Merican, Inc. v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 596 F.Supp. 697, 700 (E.D.Pa.1984).

[5] A "guaranty" is a promise to answer for the payment of some debt, or the performance of some duty, in case of the failure of another who is liable in the first instance. Black's Law Dictionary 712 (7th ed.1999). The LOC was intended to obligate KLI to subscribe for additional Morning Glory shares in the event of Morning Glory's default, thus infusing money into Morning Glory to enable it to pay, as obligor, the debt it owed to Morgan, through KEB. The Security Agreement made Morgan the beneficiary of those funds, thus providing a direct link between KLI and Morgan by which KLI was to satisfy Morning Glory's debt to KEB, and KEB's debt to Morgan. Clearly, KLI's promise, under the Letter of Commitment it executed and delivered to Morgan and the Security Agreement, was a promise to *440 answer for the debt of Morning Glory, for the benefit of Morgan. Under Article 428(1) of the Civil Code, the promise of KLI in the LOC made KLI "liable to perform the obligation that the principal obligor [Morning Glory] has failed to perform," by infusing money into Morning Glory to enable it to pay KEB, and KEB to pay Morgan. Effectively, KLI was liable under the LOC to perform the obligation that Morning Glory was to perform, even if the obligation technically had formal differences. KLI's undertaking in the LOC was the functional equivalent of a guaranty. And as a guaranty, it violated Article 61 of the Business Insurance Law.

The question then becomes whether or not the LOC should be invalidated. In the 1989 case, the Korean Supreme Court held that the guaranty did not "lack [a] clear anti-social or unethical nature," that Article 61 was regulatory in nature and did not give rise to a private right of action and, accordingly, the lower court could refuse to void the guaranty under Article 61, even if it violated the law. But Dr. Yune's broad reading of the decision, that Article 61 should never be applied to invalidate a decree, goes too far. I believe that Dr. Kim's explanation, that the more "anti-social or unethical" the nature of the guaranty and the greater the effect on the solvency of the issuer, the more violative of the purpose behind the Business Insurance Act, and the more likely a court would invalidate it, is the better understanding of what the Korean Supreme Court would hold. Dr. Kim's interpretation better reflects the policy of the statute, to protect the interest of "insurance policy holders, insurance policy beneficiaries, and other interested parties through efficient guidance and supervision of the insurance business," and to avoid putting these insurance policy holders and beneficiaries at risk by a profligate commitment of guaranty. See 88 DaKa 2233.

However, it is unclear what the effect of Section 2(e) would be on this analysis. Section 2(e), by inserting a stop-loss provision into the agreement with KEB, and, by implication, into KEB's swap agreement with Morgan (see discussion, next section), served to mitigate Morning Glory's, and thus KLI's, exposure, and limited the open-ended feature of KLI's guaranty.

I asked Dr. Kim if section 2(e) of the Morning Glory/KEB agreement might affect the outcome in this case. Dr. Kim had not considered the question before testifying but, after reviewing the question overnight, expressed the opinion that the guaranty still violated Article 61 because it depended, for its application, on the willingness of employees of an insurance company to concede that they had improperly committed to a guaranty that the law did not authorize, and the main purpose of Article 61 was to prevent such a guaranty altogether.

[6] A district judge in New York should hesitate to declare his opinion on such a difficult and disputed point of foreign law. Fortunately, it is not required that I do so, for the effect of illegality upon a contractual relationship is determined, not by Korean law, but by the law of the jurisdiction which is selected under conflicts analysis. Dornberger, 961 F.Supp. at 533. Because this is a diversity case, the conflicts law to be applied is that of New York. Wm. Passalacqua Builders, Inc. v. Resnick Developers S., Inc., 933 F.2d 131, 137 (2d Cir.1991); Fuchsberg & Fuchsberg v. Chicago Ins. Co., No. 00 CIV. 3118, 2001 WL 484013, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. May 7, 2001). Here, the swap agreements contained a clause providing that New York law was to govern disputes among the parties. Under New York conflicts analysis, the choice of law agreed to by the parties is to be given presumptive effect. *441 Roby v. Corp. of Lloyd's, 996 F.2d 1353, 1362 (2d Cir.1993) ("[C]hoice of law clauses are presumptively valid where the underlying transaction is fundamentally international in character."); see M/S Bremen v. Zapata Off-Shore Co., 407 U.S. 1, 15, 92 S.Ct. 1907, 32 L.Ed.2d 513 (1972). Both parties have cited to New York law in support of their respective contentions about the effects of invalidity, recognizing that the issue, whether an allegedly invalid contract can be enforced, must be determined by New York law. The Bremen, 407 U.S. at 15, 92 S.Ct. 1907; see also Fricke v. Isbrandtsen Co., 151 F.Supp. 465 (S.D.N.Y.1957); Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 187 (1989). I thus proceed to consider if the LOC would be invalidated under New York law.

[7][8][9] Under New York law, an illegal contract malum in se is unenforceable and will be voided. Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N.Y. 162, 179 (1856). A contract that is illegal because performance is malum prohibitum may also be voided if: (1) the contract is still executory; or (2) the parties are not in pari delicto. See id. at 181-82; see also Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U.S. 49, 57-58, 13 Otto 49, 26 L.Ed. 347 (1880); Farrington v. Stucky, 165 F. 325, 330-31 (8th Cir.1908). New York courts will also ascertain if the statute that was violated was enacted to protect public health and safety, and whether the party seeking to assert the defense of illegality is part of the class of persons intended to be protected by that statute. United States SBA v. Citibank, N.A., No. 94 Civ. 4259, 1997 WL 45514, at * 10 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 4, 1997); Lloyd Capital Corp. v. Henchar, 80 N.Y.2d 124, 589 N.Y.S.2d 396, 603 N.E.2d 246, 248 (N.Y.1992). [FN9]

FN9. I need not reach the issue whether the Korean Insurance Laws were enacted to protect public health and safety. As explained by Dr. Kim, the protections of the Korean Insurance Laws were intended to benefit, not only shareholders and beneficiaries of insurance companies, but also the public interest in a sound economy as affected by Korean financial institutions, and to assure the public generally of reliable life insurance protection. However, Korea Life brings suit on behalf of itself, and not on behalf of its beneficiaries or the general public. Because Korea Life is not of the class protected by the Korean Insurance Laws, it cannot rely on the defense of illegality as a grounds to nullify its contract. United States SBA, 1997 WL 45514, at *10; Richards Conditioning Corp. v. Oleet, 21 N.Y.2d 895, 289 N.Y.S.2d 411, 236 N.E.2d 639, 640 (1968); John E. Rosasco Creameries v. Cohen, 276 N.Y. 274, 11 N.E.2d 908, 909 (1937).

[10] The transactions made by KLI and Morgan and their respective affiliates, and the documents that reflected them, were not evil in themselves (malum in se). The purpose of the parties to evade Korean regulation and to enter into an inappropriate transaction may have been questionable, but it does not amount to moral turpitude. The transactions and related documents may be characterized as malum prohibitum. The issue regarding enforceability of such transactions is whether or not they remain executory, and whether or not the parties were in pari delicto.

[11] New York courts will invalidate a contract that is executory, on the theory that where the illegal contract is incomplete, there is still a locus penitentiae, so that a disaffirmance of the illegal conduct by the court is appropriate. See Spring Co., 103 U.S. at 60, 103 U.S. 49. When the contract has been executed, however, a New York court will not invalidate it. Id. at 58; Tracy, 14 N.Y. at 181. Here, KLI fulfilled its obligation under the LOC, paying in full its debts under the agreement. The contract was no longer executory.

[12][13] Furthermore, in New York, a contract generally will be voided only when the parties to the illegal transaction *442 are not equally guilty. Tracy, 14 N.Y. at 181 (distinguishing between "those illegal contracts where both parties are equally culpable, and those in which, although both have participated in the illegal act, the guilt rests chiefly upon one"). Although KLI claims that it was the naive, innocent party in this transaction, the evidence shows that both KLI and Morgan intended to engage in a transaction in violation of Korean law, and endeavored to escape the eyes of regulators by setting up off-shore shell corporations and structuring the transaction as to be virtually impossible to understand to a party not familiar with it. Thus, KLI entered the deal notwithstanding its International Department's warning that the deal could be subjected to auditing by regulators, and Promax's memo to KLI advised that the structure of the deal was meant to "look complex to ensure the safety and confidentiality of the deal." Promax's memo advised KLI that there was "no way for any third party to know the specifics of the deal unless it is announced by the parties to the deal," and that KLI would have "no part" in the offshore transactions. This exchange plainly shows that KLI and Morgan were looking to evade Korean insurance regulations, and that both parties were culpable in taking part in a transaction that they knew was constructed specifically to do so.

Moreover, it is clear that both parties agreed to the terms of the LOC and the Security Agreement, and that KLI was not tricked into engaging in a transaction that was illegal. Indeed, KLI represented and warranted in the LOC that it had the "full power, authority and legal right to enter into and perform" the obligations it undertook thereunder, despite the fact that such obligations violated Korean law. As the Korean party to the agreement, KLI could be charged with at least as much familiarity, if not more, with Korean law as Morgan, and in making its representations, should have been aware of the potential illegality of its guaranty. Under such circumstances, the LOC will not be invalidated. Morgan's motion for summary judgment on this claim is granted, and KLI's illegality claim is dismissed.

D. Plaintiffs' Gambling Claim

[14] Plaintiffs' sixth cause of action alleges that the transactions at issue were "bets" in violation of the New York Anti-Gambling Statute. See N.Y. G.O.L. § 5-401. Although I have characterized KLI's swap agreements as "bets" and "speculations" on currency fluctuations, the transactions were in the form of forward contracts, swaps and derivatives. Derivatives transactions, forward contracts and swap agreements in currencies and commodities are not considered illegal gambles, and do not violate New York's gambling statute. See General Elec. Co. v. Metals Res. Group, 293 A.D.2d 417, 741 N.Y.S.2d 218, 219 (1st Dep't 2002) (holding that a commodities swap agreement is "not an illegal contract to gamble ... [and is] exempt from the strictures of ... § 5-401"). As such, summary judgment is granted to defendant on this claim.

E. Plaintiffs' Contract Claims

The Total Return Swap Transaction Confirmation Agreement between KEB and Morning Glory contained a stop-loss provision giving Morning Glory "the right as of any Business Day on a full two-way payments basis to terminate the Transaction at the prevailing market value, as determined by the Calculation Agent in a reasonable and fair commercial manner, on at least two (2) Business Days prior notice." Thus, Morning Glory, upon notice to KEB, could demand that its forward contracts for baht and yen be unwound, at market prices determined by Morgan, the Calculation Agent designated under the *443 Agreement. There was no correlative provision, however, in the KEB/Morgan Total Return Swap Transaction Confirmation Agreement.

KLI alleges that, on or before October 16, 1997, it gave written notice to KEB and to Morgan, demanding that its forward contracts be unwound, and that both failed and refused to do so. The yen forward contract was unwound on October 9, 1997, without material financial consequence. However, the baht forward contract transaction was not unwound until January 7, 1998, by which time the value of the baht had depreciated considerably, almost doubling KLI's loss from the date of demand.

On October 16, 1997, B.C. Kim, a KLI manager in its Fixed Income Department, sent a telefax to Joongseok Ahn, a general manager of KEB, requesting that the baht part of the transaction be unwound. The telefax was sent following numerous telephone calls and meetings between KLI and Morgan, by which KLI pressed Morgan to unwind the baht forward contracts, only to meet resistance by Morgan. Morgan maintained that the baht contracts could not be sold because of concerns about the liquidity of the baht and because the back-to-back transactions, between Morning Glory and KEB, and KEB and Morgan, required that written demand be made on KEB. Kim's October 16, 1997 telefax, which was sent to KEB on behalf of I-Soo Joe, a director of Morning Glory and KLI's International Department, followed. Joongseok Ahn, who received the fax, understood that it was from KLI and Morning Glory, since he was the general manager of the KEB department that managed Morning Glory's positions in baht, yen and dollars.

Kim called Ahn to confirm that KEB had received KLI's written demand. Ahn confirmed receipt, but told Kim that the unwind had not occurred, and that Morgan, the Calculation Agent, had not supplied a market value figure. Kim called Morgan, but Morgan disclaimed having received written notice from KEB. Kim called KEB again, and KEB confirmed that it had, in fact, conveyed KLI's notice to Morgan, but that Morgan had stated that it would not execute KLI's demand to unwind. Kim called Morgan, and Morgan stated that it would not execute KLI's demand because KEB did not want the transaction to be unwound.

Morgan does not dispute these facts, and must concede, therefore, that it knew, by reason of both KLI's written and oral notices, that KLI wanted its baht position unwound, and that it was Morgan's decision not to comply with the demand. Clearly, Morgan had actual knowledge, and therefore is deemed to have notice that KLI made demand pursuant to the unwind provision, section 2(e) of the Morning Glory/KEB swap agreement. Leasing Serv. Corp. v. Diamond Timber, Inc., 559 F.Supp. 972, 978 (S.D.N.Y.1983) (holding that notice occurs when party charged with having notice has actual knowledge or when "from all the facts and circumstances known to him at the time in question, he has reason to know that it exists") (internal citation omitted).

Morgan's position is that it owed no duty to honor KLI's demand to unwind, since there was no stop-loss provision comparable to section 2(e) in the KEB/Morgan swap agreement. And, since there was no comparable clause to section 2(e) in the swap agreement between KEB and Morgan, KEB had no right to demand that Morgan unwind baht positions before the maturity date, January 30, 1998.

[15] However, the two swap agreements, between KLI and KEB, and between KEB and Morgan, were not intended to be independent. They were tied *444 counterparts. The Morning Glory/KEB swap agreement provided the methodology of Morning Glory's investment of the $25,000,000 contributed to it by Morgan's affiliate, Promax, and the first leg of Morning Glory's repayment obligation, a payment to KEB. Clearly, KEB had no real-party interest, once it redeemed the $25,000,000 letter of credit deposited by Morning Glory. KEB's interest was that of an intermediary, between Morning Glory and Morgan or, alternatively, as was characterized in the parties' Indicative Term Sheet of January 10, 1997, the agent of Morning Glory, acting "for and on behalf of Morning Glory Investment (L) Limited." [FN10] The KEB/Morgan swap agreement was intended to complete the circle, to provide the completion of repayment of the $25,000,000 to Morgan, to enable Morgan, in turn, to repay Frome, and Frome to repay the European investors who had originally put up the $25 million investment a year earlier. KEB's interest was to earn a modest banking fee of $70,000, as an accommodation party and not as a party intending to assume the large speculative risk of forward bets on currency fluctuations.

FN10. The Indicative Tem Sheet had been delivered to the parties by Morgan on January 10, 1997, and was executed by KEB, Morning Glory and KLI. It was replaced by the two Total Return Swap Agreements, and the LOC and the Security Agreement, all executed on January 15, 1997.

Morgan prepared the counterparts, not as a single, understandable agreement, but, as Dr. Chi of Morgan explained to the concerned representatives of KLI, in pieces, so the "process ... won't be conspicuous even to market experts not to mention the supervisory agencies." Dr. Chi structured the deal so that it "looks complex," to ensure its "safety and confidentiality," and to "manipulate the process." One law firm, Kim & Chang of Seoul, represented all parties, even though there were other Korean law firms with competence and capacity. All the agreements were executed at the same time, on January 15, 1997, and all were prepared by Morgan, in separate pieces and with disparate formulae to disguise the transaction and evade Korean regulatory review.

Morgan, even as it seeks to use the argument of privity as a sword, made sure that it had an adequate shield to prevent KLI from making use of that same argument to avoid liability. Morgan had KLI execute a Letter of Commitment, to provide Morning Glory with funds if the Thai baht were to depreciate against the dollar and the $25,000,000 of invested funds would be inadequate to pay KEB, to enable KEB to have the funds necessary to pay Morgan. Morgan also had Morning Glory execute a Security Agreement, binding Morning Glory to secure Morgan in the event that KEB was unwilling or unable to deliver funds to Morgan sufficient to pay Morgan the entire debt owed by Morning Glory. The Letter of Commitment and the Security Agreement provided a direct relationship of privity between KLI and Morgan, assuring Morgan that both Morning Glory and KEB would fully and completely discharge the contractual obligations owed to Morgan under both the Morning Glory/KEB and the KEB/Morgan Total Return Swap Agreements.

The structure of the transactions, and a fair understanding of all the documents, including how they should be carried out, make it clear that the parties intended one integrated set of transactions. See Consarc Corp. v. Marine Midland Bank, N.A., 996 F.2d 568, 572-73 (2d Cir.1993) (discussing that, under New York law, a written contract may be formed from more than one writing, and that "the relevant *445 writings creating a contract may consist of letters bearing the signature of only one party or even memoranda unsigned by either party"); Houbigant, Inc. v. ACB Mercantile (In re Houbigant, Inc.), 914 F.Supp. 964, 994 (S.D.N.Y.1995) ("[W]here two or more writings are executed as part of the same general transaction, they are to be read together as part of the same agreement."); Crabtree v. Elizabeth Arden Sales Corp., 305 N.Y. 48, 110 N.E.2d 551, 553 (1953). In such instances, the instruments should be read as one in order to carry out their intent. See 3 Corbin on Contracts, Sec. 549, pp. 188-190 (1960) (stating that "the terms of [a contract] agreement may be expressed in two or more separate documents.... These documents should be interpreted together, each one assisting in determining the meaning intended to be expressed by the others. This is true whether the documents are all executed by a single party or by two or more parties, and whether some of the documents are executed by parties who have no part in executing the others."). The separately executed documents, executed at the same time for an integrated purpose, should be understood to constitute the "same bargain." Serralles v. United States, 46 Fed. Cl. 773 (2000); see also Williams v. Mobil Oil Corp., 83 A.D.2d 434, 445 N.Y.S.2d 172, 175 (2d Dep't 1981).

Indeed, there is no way to look at these instruments other than as pieces of one agreement, structured to disguise a speculative, offshore transaction that posed an unreasonably large risk, and was inappropriate and possibly illegal for a regulated Korean life insurance company to enter into. The special purpose entities and intermediaries that were made parties to the contracts were not intended as the real parties in interest. The real parties in interest were KLI and Morgan, and just as KLI owed duties to pay Morgan, Morgan had duties to cooperate with KLI should it wish to mitigate its growing losses and demand an unwind, through the clause 2(e) that KLI insisted on as a precondition of its entering into the deal. See Dalton v. Educ. Testing Serv., 87 N.Y.2d 384, 639 N.Y.S.2d 977, 663 N.E.2d 289, 292 (1995) (holding that a promisor impliedly pledges that it shall not do anything which will have the effect of destroying or injuring the right of the other party to receive the fruits of the promise). Morgan executed the documents with clear knowledge of KLI's insistence on the addition of such a "stop loss" clause in the agreements, and cannot hide behind a false argument of lack of privity as its rationale for first ignoring, and then refusing to heed, KLI's and Morning Glory's demands to unwind, see Skrabalak v. Rock, 208 A.D.2d 1100, 617 N.Y.S.2d 912, 914 (3d Dep't 1994) (an obligee may not increase the liability of a guarantor, or otherwise substantially change the nature of the guaranty), especially in light of the fact that Morgan drafted the agreement and designated itself as Calculation Agent. The December 18, 1996 memorandum of Morgan's agent, Promax, which directly persuaded KLI to enter the deal, represented to KLI that if market conditions relating to the stability of the baht shifted, a "reversing transaction" was available to undo the transaction. Given such circumstances, a false defense of lack of privity cannot excuse Morgan's assertion of rights, but refusal to perform correlative duties, expressed in the related instruments.

Morgan argues that the integration clause of the form ISDA agreement, incorporated into both Total Return Swap Agreements, prevents recourse to earlier swap agreement iterations or parol evidence as proof of an overarching agreement. Morgan's argument is without merit. The integration clause provides that *446 the ISDA Master Agreement "constitutes the entire agreement and understanding of the parties with respect to its subject matter and supersedes all oral communication and prior writings with respect thereto." Yet the parties did not execute the ISDA form, and it does not itself describe the parties' agreement or understanding. The two Total Return Swap Agreements merely incorporated by reference the ISDA form. The agreement and understanding of the parties was expressed not in the ISDA Master Agreement with its integration clause, but in the two Total Return Swap Agreements, and the Security Agreement and the Letter of Commitment executed contemporaneously with the swap agreements. Clearly, all the agreements have to be read together, not separately.

The parties have made substantial submissions on this motion, presenting to me all the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with affidavits that they consider relevant, on all the issues raised by defendant's motion for summary judgment, including plaintiff's breach of contract claim. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). Defendant's position is that there are no material issues of fact to try. Both sides have represented that there are no further relevant facts to present. Plaintiffs, however, did not move for summary judgment, and argued that there are triable issues, including whether the Indicative Term Sheet, rather than the two Total Return Swap Agreements, should be considered the agreement.

[16] A district judge, presented with a motion for summary judgment, is entitled to search the record and, if no genuine issues of material fact exist, to determine the motion in favor of the party entitled to summary judgment, regardless whether the party is the moving, or the responding, party. Coach Leatherware Co. v. AnnTaylor, Inc., 933 F.2d 162, 167 (2d Cir.1991) (holding that district court's sua sponte grant of summary judgment to non-moving party is "an accepted method of expediting litigation"); Project Release v. Prevost, 722 F.2d 960, 969 (2d Cir.1983) ("[A] district judge may grant summary judgment to a non-moving party, if no genuine issues of material fact have been shown.").

I conclude, from my search of the record, that there are no triable issues of fact, that the facts are clear that the Total Return Swap Agreements must be read together, and that Morgan was obligated to honor the demand of KLI and Morning Glory to stop the losses accruing from the deteriorating value of the baht and to unwind Morning Glory's obligation. KLI and Morning Glory, not Morgan, are entitled to summary judgment on the claim that Morgan breached its obligation to honor plaintiffs' demand that Morning Glory's baht position be unwound.

Morning Glory's baht obligation was ultimately not unwound until January 7, 1998, yielding an obligation from Morgan of $66,304,746. Using published exchange values of the baht to the dollar as of October 20, 1997, two business days after KLI's demand, I calculate that an unwind of the baht forward contract executed on that date would have yielded $39,847,800. [FN11] Thus, had the unwind been executed as demanded, and assuming that amount of $39,847,800, rather than $66,304,746, is the correct amount of loss, KLI overpaid Morgan the difference, or $26,456,946, which Morgan should be obligated to credit, or repay, to plaintiffs.

FN11. This amount is calculated using an exchange rate of 37.615 THB per USD, quoted by the Bank of Thailand for October 20, 1997.

*447 But liquidation values of forward currency contracts for deteriorating currencies are not so easily derived. Liquidations of fluctuating assets are often subject to substantial discounts, especially if the asset has been depreciating. Expert proofs are much more appropriate than arithmetical calculations from published currency tables. In addition, the Swap Agreements also provided that Morgan had a payment obligation to KEB, and KEB to Morning Glory, if the yen depreciated against the dollar, and there appeared to have been a relatively small depreciation: from 116 on January 10, 1997 ("YenSpot," as the Swap Agreement characterized it); to 121.18 on October 9, 1997, the date that Morgan liquidated the yen forward contracts; to 127.1 on January 30, 1998, the maturity date of the Swap Agreements ("YenMat"). The correct amounts have to be ascertained.

I will require further submissions from the parties with regard to the amount of damage plaintiffs may recover, in the form of a repayment obligation from Morgan. I will meet with the parties on July 17, 2003 at 10:00 AM in a case management conference to define the issues, and regulate such further proceedings as may be required.

F. Plaintiffs' Remaining Claims

Plaintiffs' remaining claims for unjust enrichment and commercial frustration and impracticability are derivative claims. The unjust enrichment claim, which sounds in quasi-contract, Piccoli A/S v. Calvin Klein Jeanswear Co., 19 F.Supp.2d 157, 166 (S.D.N.Y.1998), must be dismissed, as I have already found that there is a valid and enforceable written contract governing the subject matter in dispute. See Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v. Long Island R.R., 70 N.Y.2d 382, 521 N.Y.S.2d 653, 516 N.E.2d 190 (1987) ("The existence of a valid and enforceable written contract governing a particular subject matter ordinarily precludes recovery in quasi contract for events arising out of the same subject matter."). Moreover, the claim, which is based on the contention that plaintiffs were not aware of the risks involved in the transaction so that when the baht was pulled from the currency basket, Morgan realized an unbargained-for windfall, cannot be sustained. As already discussed, the risk involved in the transaction was patent, and a claim for unjust enrichment cannot be premised on a known risk. See Resolution Trust Corp. v. 53 W. 72nd St. Realty Assocs., No. 91 Civ. 3299, 1992 WL 183741, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. July 22, 1992) (holding a claim for unjust enrichment could not be sustained where "known risk" would "merely prevent [the party's] business expenditures from generating the return on investment which had been hoped for").

Plaintiffs' claims based on theories of commercial frustration and impracticability also must fail. The potential devaluation of the Thai baht was a risk of the deal, and not a ground of rescission. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts §§ 261 & 265 (1981); Health-Chem Corp. v. Baker, 737 F.Supp. 770, 776 (S.D.N.Y.1990). Morgan's motion for summary judgment with regard to these claims is granted, and the claims are dismissed.

G. Conclusion

For the reasons stated, Morgan's motion for summary judgment is granted in part, and I order that counts one, two, three, five, and six of plaintiffs' Second Amended Complaint be dismissed. I deny Morgan's motion for summary judgment with regard to count four, the count alleging breach of contract, and grant summary judgment to plaintiffs on that count, with the amount of *448 judgment to be determined in further proceedings.

SO ORDERED.

269 F.Supp.2d 424

END OF DOCUMENT

52

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

LASALLE BANK NATIONAL ASSOC.
Plaintiff,
v.
CITICORP REAL ESTATE INC. Defendant.

No. 02 Civ. 7868(HB).

March 21, 2003.

OPINION AND ORDER

BAER, J.

*1 Two motions in this case are before the Court. Citicorp Real Estate Inc. ("Citicorp") has moved to dismiss LaSalle Bank National Association's ("LaSalle") claim of negligent misrepresentation, while LaSalle has moved to dismiss Citicorp's counterclaims for breach of contract and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. For the following reasons, Citicorp's motion is granted, and LaSalle's motion is granted in part and denied in part.

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Standard of Review Under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6)

On these motions to dismiss, "the court must accept as true the factual allegations in the complaint, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff." Bolt Electric Inc. v. City of New York, 53 F.3d 465, 469 (2d Cir.1995) (citations omitted). Further, "[t]he district court should grant such a motion only if, after viewing plaintiff's allegations in this favorable light, 'it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.'" Id. (quoting Walker v. City of New York, 974 F.2d 293, 298 (2d Cir.1992), and Ricciuti v. New York Transit Auth., 941 F.2d 119, 123 (2d Cir.1991)). "The issue is not whether a plaintiff is likely to prevail ultimately, 'but whether the claimant is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims.'" Gant v. Wallingford Board of Ed., 69 F.3d 669, 673 (2d Cir.1995) (quoting cases). When deciding a motion to dismiss, a court may consider not only the complaint, but also "any written instrument attached to it as an exhibit or any statements or documents incorporated in it by reference." See Cortec Indus. Inc., v. Sum Holding L.P., 949 F.2d 42, 47 (2d Cir.1991).

B. Facts

With certain exceptions, the facts are generally not in dispute. What is in dispute is the significance of certain events and the meaning of a few provisions in a very large and complex contract.

On April 1, 1998, LaSalle and Citicorp and several other entities that are not parties to this litigation signed a Pooling and Services Agreement ("PSA") for the purchase by LaSalle of $1.3-billion worth of mortgages loans, which were to be included in a Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduit (REMIC) [FN1] Trust. See Complaint ¶ 16. LaSalle was and remains the Trustee and Administrator of the REMIC Trust, and Citicorp was the Mortgage Loan Seller. See id. ¶ 1 & n. 1. Citicorp, as the Mortgage Loan Seller, made several warranties in the PSA, two of which are relevant to the dispute here. First, Citicorp warranted that "[t]he origination, servicing and collection practices used with respect to such Mortgage Loan have been in all material respects legal and have met generally accepted servicing standards for similar commercial and multifamily mortgage loans." See id. ¶ 17 (quoting PSA § 2.05(d)(xxxiv)). Second, Citicorp warranted that "[t]here is no material default, breach or event of acceleration existing under the related Mortgage Note..." See id. (quoting PSA § 2.05(d)(xxv)). The PSA also requires that within 90 days of discovering or learning of a breach of its warranties and representations, Citicorp is obligated to either cure the defective mortgage loan or repurchase it. See id. ¶ 22 (citing PSA § 2.03(a)). Although executed on April 1, the PSA provided that the "Closing Date" was to be May 6, 1998. See id. ¶ 18.

FN1. "A REMIC Trust represents a pool of mortgages, the beneficial ownership of which has been sold to various investors in the form of certificates representing their undivided ownership interest in the total pool." See Complaint ¶ 1 n. 1. If the Trust complies with IRS regulations, mortgage payments made to the Trust may be passed through to certificate holders free of federal taxes. See id.

*2 The mortgage loan from this bundle that is at the center of the present dispute is what I will refer to as the Brock Suite Loan, as the parties have done. On December 24, 1997, Brock Suite Greenville, Inc. ("Brock Suite") obtained a $6.75-million loan, which it secured with a promissory note, a mortgage, and an assignment of leases and rents. See id. ¶ 7. That very same day, the lender transferred the Brock Suite Loan to Citicorp. See id. ¶ 9. The mortgaged property included a hotel, which was operated as a franchise of Residence Inn by Marriott, pursuant to a franchise agreement entered into in 1985 for a 15-year term. See id. ¶ 8.

On March 31, 1998--i.e., the day before the PSA was executed--Marriott sent a Notice of Default to one Mel Melle, with copies to seven other individuals. See Complaint ¶ 12. This letter indicated the hotel was in default of the franchise agreement because its customer service performance was below the threshold required by Marriott and gave Brock Suite one year to cure the defect. See id. In its counterclaim, Citicorp alleges that none of these eight addressees was an employee of either the original lender nor Citicorp during the period of December 1997 through May 6, 1998. See Counterclaims ¶ 15. Brock Suite failed to correct the problem and, pursuant to an early termination agreement dated September 28, 1998, between Brock Suite and Marriott, the franchise agreement was terminated in March 1999--which, as Citicorp notes, is five months earlier than the originally indicated August 1, 1999 date. See Complaint ¶ 12; Counterclaims ¶ 17. In January 1999--after this early termination agreement but before termination--Brock Suite requested LaSalle's consent to a change in the franchise, causing LaSalle to transfer the Brock Suite Loan from the Master Servicer under the PSA to the Special Servicer. [FN2] See Complaint ¶¶ 13, 15. Despite learning about this default in January 1999, LaSalle did not contact Citicorp about it until February 5, 2001, when the Special Servicer [FN3] sent Citicorp a notification of Brock Suite's default of its franchise agreement with Marriott and demanded that Citicorp repurchase the mortgage. See id. ¶ 23. Citicorp alleges that the Special Servicer, acting on LaSalle's behalf and without notifying Citicorp, foreclosed on the Brock Suite Loan in January 2001. See Counterclaims ¶ 23.

FN2. Under the terms of the PSA, the Special Servicer is responsible for servicing and administering certain mortgage loans, such as those that are in default under the related loan documents. See Counterclaim ¶ 8. The current Special Servicer, ARCap Special Servicing, Inc. ("ARCap"), is prosecuting this lawsuit on LaSalle's behalf. See Complaint ¶ 1.

FN3. The Special Servicer at that time was ORIX Real Estate Capital Markets, LLC. See Complaint ¶ 23. On May 1, 2002, ARCap, as the Special Servicer, sent Citicorp a second notice of the default by Brock Suite and consequently Citicorp's breach of its representations and warranties. See id.

On October 1, 2002, LaSalle sued, claiming that because of these defects in this mortgage loan, Citicorp was in breach of the warranties and representations in the PSA, and thus is obligated under the PSA either to cure the defect or to repurchase the mortgage loan. See Complaint ¶¶ 29-31, 32-39. Specifically, Count I of LaSalle's Complaint alleges that contrary to Citicorp's representations in the PSA, the Brock Suite Loan was in default on the day the PSA was executed (April 1, 1998) and on the Closing Date (May 6, 1998) because Brock Suite was in default of its franchise agreement with Marriott. Count II alleges that contrary to Citicorp's representations the Brock Suite Loan was not originated and serviced in accordance with generally accepted servicing standards because of the failure to account for the facts that a) the franchise agreement for the hotel was due to expire in 2 years and b) the hotel required extensive renovations. Count III of LaSalle's complaint alleges that Citicorp negligently misrepresented the condition of the Brock Suite Loan because the representations that the underlying loan was not in default and was originated and serviced in accordance with generally accepted standards allegedly were false when made. See Complaint at ¶ 38. Citicorp counterclaimed, alleging that LaSalle breached the contract and/or breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by failing to timely notify Citicorp of the defect in the Brock Suite Loan and thus depriving Citicorp of the right to elect between cure and repurchase.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Citicorp's Motion to Dismiss LaSalle's Negligent Misrepresentation Claim

*3 Citicorp has moved to dismiss LaSalle's claim for negligent misrepresentation, arguing that 1) it is duplicative of the breach-of-contract action and 2) LaSalle has failed to allege the requisite elements of negligent misrepresentation. Because LaSalle has failed to demonstrate that Citicorp owed LaSalle a duty independent of the contract, its claim for negligent misrepresentation (Count III) is duplicative of its breach-of-contract claims and will be dismissed. I also find that LaSalle has not sufficiently shown the existence of a special relationship such that Citicorp owed LaSalle a duty to speak with care.

1. Existence of duty independent of contract

As both LaSalle and Citicorp acknowledge, under New York law "a simple breach of contract is not to be considered a tort unless a legal duty independent of the contract itself has been violated." Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v. Long Island R.R., 70 N.Y.2d 382, 389 (1987) (affirming dismissal of claim for gross negligence where plaintiff failed to allege a violation of a duty independent of a contract). "This legal duty must spring from circumstances extraneous to, and not constituting elements of, the contract, although it may be connected with and dependent upon the contract." Id. LaSalle contends that Citicorp had a duty, separate and distinct from its contractual one, to impart correct information, based on Citicorp's unique knowledge or access to information about the Brock Suite Loan, information which LaSalle did not have. See LaSalle's Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Count III of the Complaint [hereinafter "LaSalle Count III Memo"] at 8, 11-12. Relying on two cases where claims for negligent misrepresentation and breach of contract apparently have co-existed--Fleet Bank v. Pine Knoll Corp., 290 A.D.2d 792 (N.Y.App.Div.2002), and Nielsen Media Research, Inc. v. Microsystems Software, Inc., No. 99 Civ. 10876, 2002 WL 31175223 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2002)--LaSalle contends that if it shows there was a special relationship between Citicorp and LaSalle, its claim for negligent misrepresentation is not duplicative because the special relationship necessarily creates a duty independent of the contract. See LaSalle Count III Memo at 8. Assuming arguendo that a special relationship existed--an issue discussed infra--I conclude that LaSalle's proposition is unsupported by the case law. More significantly, I conclude that the factual predicates for LaSalle's negligent misrepresentation claim are elements of and not extraneous to the PSA and thus, in accordance with the holding in Clark-Fitzpatrick, do not create an independent duty on Citicorp.

LaSalle does not cite any cases that expressly hold that a special relationship, such as the one alleged between the parties here, creates a duty independent of the contractual duty, but instead points to several cases that appear to imply it. On close inspection, these cases do not support any such proposition. In Fleet Bank, defendant agreed to allow plaintiff, Fleet Bank, to take over a Small Business Administration loan and sent the bank a business plan that consisted of two phases of financing. See 290 A.D.2d at 792. Defendant told the bank that both phases were necessary for the business to become profitable and the bank assured her that all the funds would be forthcoming. The bank made the first loan but not the second, despite additional assurances that the second loan would be made. See id. at 792-93. Without this second loan, defendant was forced to use her own personal assets and eventually she stopped making payments on the loan, at which time the bank foreclosed. See id. at 794, 796. Although the defendant in Fleet Bank counterclaimed for both negligent misrepresentation and breach of contract, the court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the breach-of-contract claim, and thus did not either explicitly or implicitly conclude that two different duties arose out of the same transaction. See id. at 794-95.

*4 Nielsen too fails to support LaSalle's position. There the court did not need to reach the Clark-Fitzpatrick issue because the negligent misrepresentation claim, though related to the contract, sprang from circumstances extraneous to, and not constituting elements of, the contract. There the negligent misrepresentation claim pertained to alleged misrepresentations Microsystems made about itself and its software in the discussions leading to the contract, while the breach pertained to Microsystem's alleged failure to perform. See 2002 WL 31175223, at *10-*11. Nielsen is similar to other cases where claims for negligent misrepresentation and breach of contract properly co-exist. See Anglo-Iberia Underwriting Management Co. v. Lodderhose, 224 F.Supp.2d 679, 683 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (misrepresentations were made by an intermediary to the parties and pertained to the authority of an agent to act for a party and the nature of the party's business); Schroders, Inc. v. Hogan Systems, Inc., 522 N.Y.S.2d 404 (Sup.Ct.1987); [FN4] cf. Fleet Bank, 290 A.D.2d at 795-96 (although contract claim was dismissed, negligent misrepresentation related to repeated exhortations related to but outside any contract). This showing that Citicorp's duty to speak with care is "extraneous to, and not constituting elements of, the contract" is a second hurdle LaSalle fails to clear.

FN4. This masterfully reasoned decision sustained a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation where the plaintiff also alleged a breach-of-contract claim, based on facts similar to Nielsen, in that a computer-programming company made false representations about their technical prowess and ability to implement a given software program, which induced the plaintiffs to enter into contracts which, it would later turn out, defendants were unable to perform. See Schroders, 522 N.Y.S.2d at 405. Not this case.

LaSalle contends that Citicorp made the misrepresentations at three different times--1) during the negotiations, 2) the day the PSA was executed, and 3) the day specified in the PSA that Citicorp's warranties and representations were effective (i.e., the Closing Date) [FN5]--and that the duty each time was different. See LaSalle Count III Memo at 2, 9. First, even giving LaSalle the benefit of all reasonable inferences required for a 12(b)(6) motion, I disagree with LaSalle that Citicorp made these representations during negotiations. Although it is possible, even probable, that the representations and warranties in the PSA reflect similar representations and warranties made during negotiations, LaSalle's complaint does not say this, [FN6] and it is axiomatic that a party opposing a motion to dismiss cannot amend its complaint through its briefs. See Lorentzen v. Curtis, 18 F.Supp.2d 322, 328 (S.D.N.Y.1998). Second, even assuming allegations that Citicorp made these representations separately from the contract, the problem of invoking tort law for claims that sound in contract remains. See Robehr Films, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc., No. 85 Civ. 1072, 1989 WL 111079, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 1989) ("If the only interest at stake is that of holding the defendant to a promise, the courts have said that the plaintiff may not transmogrify the contract claim into one for tort." (quoting Hargrave v. Oki Nursery, Inc., 636 F.2d 897 (2d Cir.1980))). The misrepresentations that LaSalle points to for its claim of negligent misrepresentation are the allegedly false representations and warranties that Citicorp made at § 2.05(d)(xxv) and (xxxiv) of the PSA--the same statements it points to for its breach-of-contract claim.

FN5. LaSalle also finds significance in the fact that the PSA was signed on April 1 but the representations and warranties were effective as of the Closing Date, on May 6. Whatever significance there may be in these different dates on Citicorp's duties to LaSalle, LaSalle has not demonstrated that the duty springs from anything external to the contract.

FN6. The paragraph of the Complaint which LaSalle points to (Complaint ¶ 38) does not expressly refer to any negotiations. This paragraph states: Citicorp, in violation of its duty to LaSalle, misrepresented certain characteristics of the Mortgage Loan, including the imminent expiration of the Franchise Agreement and the extensive required renovations, the default under the terms of the Mortgage, and the default under the Franchise Agreement, which characteristics made the Mortgage Loan unsatisfactory for transfer into the Trust. The structure of the transaction evidenced by the PSA is based on each of the mortgage loans complying with the representations and warranties contained therein, and LaSalle accepts the mortgage loans in justifiable and reasonable reliance on the truth and accuracy of the representations and warranties. LaSalle, to its detriment, justifiably and reasonably relied on Citicorp's deliberate and false representations about the characteristics of the Mortgage Loan and purchased the Mortgage Loan from Citicorp. This paragraph comes closest to implying that these same representations were made during negotiations when it states "[t]he structure of the transaction evidenced by the PSA." However, since the complaint refers extensively to the PSA and nowhere mentions negotiations, it is unreasonable to infer from this paragraph that Citicorp made these alleged misrepresentations during negotiations.

2. Failure to Plead Elements

*5 The elements of negligent misrepresentation under New York law are 1) duty, as a result of a special relationship, to give correct information; 2) representation that was false and that was known or should have been known to be false, 3) knowledge that the information was desired for a serious purpose, 4) knowledge of plaintiff's intention to rely on the information, and 5) plaintiff's reasonable and detrimental reliance. [FN7] See Anglo-Iberia Underwriting Management Co. v. Lodderhose, 224 F.Supp.2d 679, 687 (S.D.N.Y.2002) (quoting Hydro Investors, Inc. v. Trafalgar Power, Inc., 227 F.3d 8, 19 (2d Cir.2000)). Citicorp contends that LaSalle has failed to allege any of the elements of negligent misrepresentation, and urges that a recent decision is dispositive of the issue.

FN7. Citing DVCI Technologies v. Timessquaremedia.com, Inc., No. 00 Civ. 0207, 2000 WL 33159189, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 29, 2000), Citicorp provides a slightly different formulation of the elements of negligent misrepresentation: 1) carelessness in imparting words, 2) expectation of reliance on words, 3) justifiable reliance, 4) detriment, 5) expression of words directly to someone bound by some relation or duty of care. See also LaSalle Bank National Assoc., 2002 WL 31729632, at *11.

Under New York law, a court decides as a matter of law the nature of a duty between an injured party and the alleged tortfeasor. See Kimmell v. Schaefer, 89 N.Y.2d 257, 263 (1996). In Kimmell, the New York Court of Appeals wrote that "In a commercial context, a duty to speak with care exists when 'the relationship of the parties, arising out of contract or otherwise, [is] such that in morals and good conscience the one has the right to rely upon the other for information.'" Id. The court differentiated between a casual informal statement or response and a deliberate representation made by "persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party such that reliance on the negligent misrepresentation is justified." Id. Although Kimmell indicated that "whether a particular defendant owes a duty to a particular plaintiff is a question of fact," see id., I conclude, as Judge Schwartz did on nearly identical facts, that LaSalle's pleadings fail to raise a question of fact touching the requisite special relationship because there, as here, LaSalle had no right to rely "in morals and good conscience" with respect to Citicorp's representations. See LaSalle Bank National Assoc. v. Citicorp Real Estate, Inc., No. 01

Civ. 4389, 2002 WL 31729632, at *11 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 5, 2002) (holding that there was no special relationship between LaSalle and Citicorp relating to a different PSA and dismissing negligent misrepresentation claim).

Finally, the cases where courts have found a special relationship--or at least found that there was a fact question about whether the party's reliance was justified--are distinguishable. First, unlike in Fleet Bank, where the borrower had a right to rely "in morals and good conscience" on the bank's representations given the apparent disparity in the parties' positions, the PSA here was a complex transaction between two sophisticated entities. Second, LaSalle does not allege that Citicorp urged LaSalle to rely on the misrepresentations, as was the case in Kimmell and Fleet Bank, [FN8] nor that Citicorp affirmatively misrepresented its own capabilities and competency, as occurred in Nielsen, Schrodgers, and Anglo-Iberia Underwriting. Third, since LaSalle has a viable contract-based cause of action for any harm it claims to have suffered, it is not without a remedy. Cf. Kimmell, 89 N.Y.2d at 260 (no contract claim); Fleet Bank, 290 A.D.2d at 795 (defendant's cross-claim for breach of contract dismissed). The negligent misrepresentation claim is dismissed.

FN8. The Kimmell court's decision that the plaintiff's reliance was justified was based on the defendant's concerted efforts to solicit plaintiffs' investment, such as giving plaintiffs erroneous projections which he claimed were reliable and which he expected plaintiffs to rely on. See 89 N.Y.2d at 264-65. In Fleet Bank, the bank repeatedly assured the defendant-borrower, a small-business owner, that she was to receive a second loan and thus induced her to further invest in a business which, she claims, failed because she never received this promised loan. See Fleet Bank, 290 A.D.2d at 795.

B. LaSalle's Motion to Dismiss Citicorp's Counterclaims

*6 Citicorp claims that LaSalle's "clandestine resort to extra-contractual self help" and "secret failure to properly exercise its rights as Lender" constitute breaches under the PSA's "sole remedy" provision of § 2.03(e). See Memorandum of Law of Citicorp in Opposition to LaSalle's Motion to Dismiss Defendant's Counterclaims [hereinafter "Citicorp Counterclaim Memo"] at 1. LaSalle contends that the PSA imposed no duty on LaSalle to disclose any defects to Citicorp and thus its failure to notify Citicorp is not a breach. Further, LaSalle argues that the PSA expressly provides that any delay by LaSalle in notifying of Citicorp of its breach does not waive the rights. The Court concludes that Citicorp should be able to proceed with its counterclaim for breach of the PSA, but not on the theory advanced by Citicorp. The Court further finds that Citicorp's counterclaim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is duplicative of its breach-of-contract claim and is dismissed.

1. Breach of Contract Counterclaim

With respect to Citicorp's counterclaim for breach of contract, the parties argued in their briefs and at oral argument, 1) whether § 2.03(a) and (c) of the PSA imposes a duty on LaSalle to notify Citicorp, and 2) whether § 7.05, which provides that a delay in exercising a right does not impair the remedy, applies.

a. Breach of § 2.03 of the PSA

Citibank argues that the PSA imposes on LaSalle a duty to notify Citicorp of any breach LaSalle discovers so that Citicorp can elect from among the two remedies set out in § 2.03(a). Section 2.03(a) of the PSA obligates Citicorp to cure or repurchase a mortgage loan upon learning or being notified of a breach involving one of the mortgage loans. [FN9] Section 2.03(e) further provides: "This Section 2.03 provides the sole remedies available to the Certificateholders, or to the Trustee [i.e., LaSalle] on behalf of the Certificateholders, respecting any Document Defect or any breach of any representation or warranty set forth in Section 2.05(d) hereof." Citicorp contends that "[i]n order for Citicorp's option to either cure or repurchase to be at all meaningful, Citicorp must be made aware ... of the facts alleged to constitute a breach while the opportunity to elect the alternative of curing is still available." See Counterclaim Opp. at 10 (emphasis in original). Citicorp argues that LaSalle failed to preserve the option and in fact terminated the Franchise Agreement with Marriott.

FN9. Section 2.03(a) of the PSA provides in relevant part that "Within 90 days of the earlier of discovery or receipt of notice by [Citicorp], of a Document Defect ... or a breach of any representation or warranty set forth in Section 2.05(d) in respect of any Mortgage Loan, which Document Defect or breach ... materially and adversely affects the value of such Mortgage Loan or the interests of the Certificateholders therein, the Responsible Party shall cure such Document Defect or breach ... or repurchase ... the affected Mortgage Loan at the applicable Purchase Price."

LaSalle argues that these provisions expressly and explicitly impose obligations only on Citicorp, and I agree. Citicorp places great weight on the words "either ... or," arguing that this language is "surplusage" unless Citicorp has the choice from among the two. See Citicorp Counterclaim Memo at 10. However, to give these words the meaning that Citicorp urges would require an illogical reading of the far more important words in this sentence, namely the subject and verb: Citicorp shall either cure or repurchase. The plain meaning of this provision is to place an obligation on and solely on Citicorp. In no way does this provision state or imply an obligation on LaSalle's part.

b. Applicability of § 7.05

*7 The parties disagree over the applicability of § 7.05, which provides in part that "no delay or omission to exercise any right or remedy shall impair any such right or remedy." LaSalle argues that § 7.05 further shows that the PSA imposed no duty on LaSalle to notify Citicorp of any defects LaSalle was aware of. Citicorp argues that § 7.05 does not apply here, because it is entitled "Additional Remedies of Trustee Upon Event of Default" and enumerates 12 specific "Events of Default," none of which pertains to Citicorp, as the Mortgage Loan Seller. I disagree with both Citicorp's and LaSalle's reading of this provision.

Citicorp's error is in selectively quoting the provision. When one reads the entire sentence where the clause appears, it plainly means to encompass more than just the 12 Events of Default: "Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Agreement, no remedy provided for by this Agreement shall be exclusive of any other remedy, and each and every remedy shall be cumulative and in addition to any other remedy, and no delay or omission to exercise any right or remedy shall impair any such right or remedy or shall be deemed to be a waiver of any Event of Default." PSA § 7.05 (emphasis added ed). Furthermore, Citicorp's construction conflicts with § 11.08 of the PSA, which states that "The article and section headings herein are for convenience of reference only, and shall not limit or otherwise affect the meaning hereof." Meanwhile, LaSalle's error stems from interpreting 7.05 to mean that because LaSalle has no duty to immediately seek a remedy, it therefore follows that LaSalle also has no duty to notify. If there were no express provision about LaSalle's duty to timely notify, this argument might hold up, but it must fail since there is such a provision, as will be discussed next.

c. Section 2.05(e)

Although Citicorp fails to direct it to my attention, the PSA appears to describe LaSalle's obligations in the event it learns of a breach of the representations and warranties. Section 2.05(e) states: "Upon discovery by any of the parties hereto ... of a breach of any of the representations and warranties set forth in subsection (d) above which materially and adversely affects the value of any Mortgage Loan or the interests therein of the Certificateholders, the party discovering such breach shall give prompt written notice to each of the other parties hereto[.]" Strange, at least to me, this language is essentially the same as the language in other portions of the PSA which LaSalle's counsel argued impose a duty to timely notify. [FN10] The representations and warranties that LaSalle has alleged Citicorp breached appear in § 2.05(d). Citicorp points out--indeed LaSalle admits--that although LaSalle learned of Brock Suite's default under its franchise agreement with Marriott no later than January 28, 1999, LaSalle did not notify Citicorp of this default until February 5, 2001. Because the PSA obligates LaSalle to give Citicorp prompt written notice of any material breaches of Citicorp's warranties and representations and because LaSalle failed to give written notice of this default for more than 2 years, Citicorp has stated a claim for breach of the PSA by LaSalle.

FN10. At oral arguments, counsel for LaSalle identified §§ 204(b), 206(b), 207(b) and 208(b) as provisions in the PSA in which other parties "bargained for the right to get notice promptly in writing if there was a breach." See Transcript of Oral Arguments on Jan. 28, 2003, at 23. Section 2.04, for example, provides: "Upon discovery by any of the parties hereto of a breach of any of the foregoing representations and warranties which materially and adversely affects the interests of the Certificateholders or any party hereto, the party discovering such breach shall give prompt written notice to each of the other parties hereto." The obligation to give timely notice is the same in substance in these four subsections as it is in § 2.05(e).

2. Breach of Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Counterclaim

*8 LaSalle argues that Citicorp's counterclaim charging a breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing by LaSalle is duplicative of its breach-of-contract counterclaim, while Citicorp argues that it has sufficiently plead additional predicate facts for its good-faith-and-fair-dealing counterclaim so that it is not duplicative of its breach-of-contract claim. [FN11] Citicorp's theory for breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing was premised on LaSalle's "unreasonably withholding notice" to Citicorp of defects in the Brock Suite Loan for over two years. Because I have concluded that Citicorp can state a claim for breach of contract based on its failure to give prompt notification, its counterclaim for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is duplicative. See, e.g., EUA Cogenex Corp. v. North Rockland Cent. Sch. Dist., 124 F.Supp.2d 861, 873 (S.D.N.Y.2000) (dismissing claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing as duplicative since it relied on same factual allegations as made in a claim for breach of contract); Houbigant, Inc. v. ACB Mercantile, Inc., 914 F.Supp. 964, 989 (S.D.N.Y.1995) (same).

FN11. Citicorp also argues that N.Y. courts recognize simultaneous breach of contract and breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing in "appropriate circumstances." Although citing several cases, Citicorp fails to point out what "appropriate circumstances" are and how they apply here.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Citicorp's motion to dismiss LaSalle's claim for negligent misrepresentation and LaSalle's motion to dismiss Citicorp's counterclaim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing are granted. LaSalle's motion to dismiss Citicorp's counterclaim for breach of contract is denied. Per the pre-trial scheduling order of December 20, 2002, this matter will be tried in September 2003.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

2003 WL 1461483 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

53

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First
Department, New York.

Bonnee LINDEN, Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

LLOYD'S PLANNING SERVICE, INC., et al.,
Defendants,

Cigna Insurance Company, Defendant-
Respondent.

Bonnee Linden, Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

Lloyd's Planning Service, Inc, et al.,
Defendants,

Nationwide Insurance Company, et al.,
Defendants-Respondent.

Bonnee Linden, Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

Lloyd's Planning Service, Inc, et al.,
Defendants,

Janice Alkire, et al., Defendants-Respondents.

Nov. 14, 2002.

Former condominium unit owner brought action against board members and insurers to recover for breach of contract, breach of warranty of habitability, civil conspiracy, and failure to provide the condominium's books and records. The Supreme Court, New York County, Alice Schlesinger, J., dismissed complaint. Former owner appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that: (1) no cognizable claim exists for breach of warranty of habitability against a condominium; (2) members were not liable in their individual capacities; and (3) former owner lacked standing to seek damages for the board members' neglect or refusal to furnish condominium financial records.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Contracts 205.35(3)
95k205.35(3)

No cognizable claim exists for breach of warranty of habitability against a condominium.

[2] Condominium 8

89Ak8

Condominium board members were not liable to former unit owner in their individual capacities for breach of contract.

[3] Conspiracy 1.1
91k1.1

A plaintiff who has no viable underlying claim for fraud or any other tort has no civil conspiracy claim.

[4] Condominium 8
89Ak8

Former condominium unit owner who lost unit in foreclosure lacked standing to seek damages for the board members' neglect or refusal to furnish condominium financial records.

*20 Bonnee Linden, pro se.

Audrey A. Barr, for Defendant-Respondent.

Brendan T. Fitzpatrick, for Defendants-Respondent.

Scott S. Greenspun, for Defendants-Respondent.

ANDRIAS, J.P., SAXE, BUCKLEY,
ROSENBERGER, and MARLOW, JJ.

217 Order, Supreme Court, New York County (Alice Schlesinger, J.), entered August 16, 2001, and orders, same court and Justice, entered August 24, 2001, which, to the extent appealed from as limited by the brief, granted the motions of defendants Nationwide Insurance, Inc. and Scottsdale *21 Insurance Co., Cigna Property and Casualty, Janice Alkire, Bruce 218 Slavens and Sandra Jacoby to dismiss the amended complaint as against them, and denied plaintiff's cross motions to amend the complaint, unanimously affirmed, without costs.

Plaintiff seeks to recover damages sustained as a result of the 1998 foreclosure of her condominium unit for her failure to pay common charges. The complaint alleges, inter alia, that she withheld payment of the common charges because the individual moving defendants, among others, failed properly to repair water damage to the condominium and asserts claims against condominium board members Alkire, Slavens and Jacoby, individually, for breach of contract, breach of warranty of habitability, civil conspiracy, and failure to provide plaintiff with the condominium's books and records from 1979 to the present.

[1][2][3][4] Plaintiff's claims against the individual board members for breach of the condominium's contractual obligations and for breach of the warranty of habitability were properly dismissed since there is no cognizable claim for breach of warranty of habitability against a condominium (see Frisch v. Bellmarc Mgt., Inc., 190 A.D.2d 383, 597 N.Y.S.2d 962). In any event, plaintiff's claims would not lie against the board members in their individual capacities. In addition, since plaintiff has no viable underlying claim for fraud or any other tort, her civil conspiracy claim was properly dismissed (see Alexander & Alexander of New York, Inc. v. Fritzen, 68 N.Y.2d 968, 969, 510 N.Y.S.2d 546, 503 N.E.2d 102). Finally, since plaintiff's condominium unit was foreclosed, she is without standing to seek damages for the individual defendants' neglect or refusal to furnish her with condominium financial records.

Since plaintiff was not an insured of any of the movant insurers and there is no claim that she obtained a judgment against any 'insured' under the insurance contracts at issue, her claims against the movant insurers were properly dismissed (see 294 A.D.2d 114, 116, 743 N.Y.S.2d 65).

We have considered plaintiff's remaining arguments and find them unavailing.

299 A.D.2d 217, 750 N.Y.S.2d 20, 2002 N.Y. Slip Op. 08251

END OF DOCUMENT

54

Briefs and Other Related Documents

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST COMPANY, Plaintiff-Appellee,

v.

Nicholas YANAKAS, Defendant-Appellant,
Charles Buonincontri and Camille Buonincontri, Defendants.

No. 1512, Docket 92-9148.

Argued June 14, 1993.
Decided Oct. 18, 1993.

Banks sued guarantor to enforce personal guaranty of certain loans to debtor-corporation. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, John F. Keenan, J., ordered guarantor to pay bank $1,036,381.42 on its claim after dismissing guarantor's affirmative defenses and counterclaims alleging fraudulent inducement and breach of fiduciary duty. Guarantor appealed. The Court of Appeals, Kearse, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) guaranty that stated it was absolute and unconditional did not preclude guarantor's claims of fraudulent inducement, and (2) bank had no fiduciary duty to accept or respond promptly to guarantor's proposal to restructure debtor's debts.

Affirmed in part; vacated in part and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Guaranty 42(1)
195k42(1)

[1] Guaranty 72
195k72

Language of guaranty agreement stating that it was absolute and unconditional was not sufficiently specific, under New York law, to bar guarantor's affirmative defenses of fraudulent inducement, where guaranty form was one that bank used routinely, rather than product of negotiations between parties, agreement did not purport to waive any defenses to its own validity, and agreement did not address particular representations that formed basis of fraudulent inducement claims.

[2] Evidence 397(2)
157k397(2)

[2] Evidence 434(1)
157k434(1)

Under New York law, if contract recites that all parties' agreements are merged in written document, parol evidence is not admissible to vary, or permit escape from, terms of integrated contract; however, such general merger clause is ineffective to preclude parol evidence that party was induced to enter contract by means of fraud.

[3] Evidence 434(1)
157k434(1)

Under New York law, even when contract contains omnibus statement that written instrument embodies whole agreement, or that no representations have been made, party may escape liability under contract by establishing that he was induced to enter contract by fraud.

[4] Contracts 94(5)
95k94(5)

Under New York law, when contract states that contracting party disclaims existence or reliance upon specified representations, that party will not be allowed to claim that he was defrauded into entering contract in reliance on those representations.

[5] Guaranty 36(2)
195k36(2)

[5] Guaranty 72
195k72

Under New York law, guarantor's claim of fraudulent inducement based upon bank's failure to disclose to guarantor, on date it obtained guarantee, its same-day procurement of $550,000 note signed by part owner of debtor-corporation whose debt was being guaranteed was barred by guaranty, where guaranty expressly covered all corporation's debts "whether now existing or hereafter incurred" and expressly waived any and all notice of creation of said obligations.

[6] Banks and Banking 100
52k100

Bank's rejection of, and failure to respond promptly to, guarantor's proposal to restructure borrower's debt by having bank purchase second bank's security interest was not breach of fiduciary duty under New York law; guarantor failed to allege any facts sufficient to convert bank's position with respect to debtor from that of creditor-debtor into that of fiduciary absent allegations that bank controlled assets or operations of debtor or that bank otherwise exercised powers beyond those of typical lender-creditor, bank had not agreed to provide borrower with any certain amount of financing, and there was no allegation that borrower's agreements with bank precluded borrower from searching for such financing from others or that bank failed to give proper notice of his decision to cease providing financing.

[7] Banks and Banking 100
52k100

Under New York law, though in unusual circumstances, fiduciary relationship may arise even between bank and customer if there is either confidence reposed which invests person trusted with advantage in treating with person so confiding, mere fact that corporation has borrowed money from same bank for several years is insufficient to transform relationship into one in which bank is fiduciary.

*311 Jamie M. Brickell, New York City (Pryor, Cashman, Sherman & Flynn, Manuel W. Gottlieb, on the brief), for plaintiff-appellee.

*312 David A. Field, New York City (Ira A. Turret, Field, Lomenzo, Turret & Blumberg, on the brief), for defendant-appellant.

Before: KEARSE, PRATT, and MINER, Circuit Judges.

KEARSE, Circuit Judge:

Defendant Nicholas Yanakas appeals from a final judgment of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, John F. Keenan, Judge, ordering him to pay plaintiff Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company ("MHT" or the "Bank") $1,036,381.42 on its claim for enforcement of Yanakas's personal guarantee of certain loans. The district court (a) dismissed three of Yanakas's affirmative defenses and counterclaims, which asserted that Yanakas had been fraudulently induced to sign the guarantee, on the ground that the guarantee stated that it was "absolute and unconditional," (b) dismissed Yanakas's remaining affirmative defenses and counterclaims, which asserted that the Bank had breached its fiduciary duty, on the ground that the answer failed to show the existence of such a duty, and (c) granted summary judgment in favor of the Bank. On appeal, Yanakas contends that the district court erred in dismissing his affirmative defenses and counterclaims and in granting summary judgment against him. For the reasons below, we affirm in part, vacate in part, and remand for further proceedings with respect to the defenses of and counterclaims for fraudulent inducement.

I. BACKGROUND

The present lawsuit arises out of loans from MHT to Advance Ring Manufacturers, Inc. ("ARM"), which, prior to December 1986, was owned in part by defendant Charles Buonincontri ("Buonincontri") and in part by one Arthur Abraham. Since this appeal centers on the sufficiency of Yanakas's affirmative defenses and counterclaims, we take the allegations of the defenses and counterclaims as true. The following description of the events is taken largely from those allegations.

A. The Events

In December 1986, Buonincontri and Abraham entered into an auction to determine which of them would purchase the other's interest in ARM. Buonincontri won the auction and became president of ARM. Prior to the auction, Yanakas had made a loan of $250,000 to ARM to help Buonincontri finance his proposed purchase of Abraham's shares. In June 1987, Yanakas converted his initial loan to capital and paid ARM an additional $250,000, thereby acquiring a 25% interest in the company. In 1988, he made further loans and capital contributions totaling $500,000 and acquired an additional 25%; in October of that year, he became the owner of all issued and outstanding shares of ARM.

MHT had entered into a lending relationship with ARM in 1985. At the time of the December 1986 auction, ARM was indebted to MHT in an amount that the Bank places at $700,000. In April 1987, the Bank loaned ARM an additional $350,000 (the "1987 loan"), in connection with which it obtained financial information and personal guarantees from Buonincontri and his wife, defendant Camille Buonincontri.

In 1987 and part of 1988, ARM obtained financing from both MHT and National Westminster Bank ("NatWest"). Initially, both banks were unsecured creditors. Yanakas asserts that in early 1988, however, NatWest surreptitiously obtained the signature of Buonincontri to a document that, unbeknownst to Yanakas, Buonincontri, and ARM, converted NatWest's unsecured position into one secured by the assets of ARM.

On March 31, 1988, MHT told Yanakas that the Bank would call its loans to ARM and would cease to finance ARM's operations unless Yanakas signed a personal guarantee of the loans and paid down part of ARM's outstanding balance. In reliance on these representations and on the Bank's promise to continue financing ARM if he complied with its demands, Yanakas (a) paid $100,000 of ARM's 1987 loan, (b) invested an additional $200,000 in ARM, and (c) executed a personal guarantee of all of ARM's obligations to MHT, agreeing, in part, as follows:

[Yanakas] hereby absolutely and unconditionally guarantees to Bank the prompt *313 payment of claims of every nature and description of Bank against Borrower ... and any and every obligation and liability of Borrower to Bank or another or others of whatsoever nature and howsoever evidenced, whether now existing or hereafter incurred, originally contracted with Bank and/or with another or others and now or hereafter owing to or acquired in any manner, in whole or in part, by Bank, or in which Bank may acquire a participation, whether contracted by Borrower alone or jointly and/or severally with another or others, whether direct or indirect, absolute or contingent, secured or not secured, matured or not matured. (All of foregoing are hereinafter referred to as "Obligations").

....

Guarantor waives any and all notice of acceptance of this guarantee or the creation or accrual of any of said Obligations.... This guarantee shall be a continuing, absolute and unconditional guarantee of payment regardless of the validity, regularity or enforceability of any of said Obligations or purported Obligations....

(Guarantee of All Liability and Security Agreement, dated March 31, 1988 ("Guarantee"), at 1 (emphasis added).) Unbeknownst to Yanakas, on the day that he executed the Guarantee, MHT also got Buonincontri, as ARM's president, to execute a new demand promissory note to MHT in the amount of $550,000 (the "1988 note").

In April 1988, after learning of NatWest's security interest in ARM's assets, Yanakas urged MHT to purchase that interest, for which Yanakas would put up $700,000, roughly the amount of the debt to NatWest, as security. Yanakas stressed the need for a prompt response in order to allow ARM to process orders for the 1988 Christmas season. The Bank promised to consider the proposition but delayed acting on it, and eventually rejected it. Shortly after acquiring Yanakas's Guarantee, the Bank ceased funding ARM's operations and demanded repayment of all ARM loans.

ARM was ultimately unable to obtain adequate financing for the 1988 Christmas season, and it filed for bankruptcy.

B. The Present Lawsuit and the Opinion

Below

In 1990, MHT commenced the present action against Yanakas and the Buonincontri as guarantors of its loans to ARM. MHT sought $210,000, the outstanding balance on the 1987 loan, plus interest, and $550,000 plus interest on the 1988 note. Yanakas, while denying knowledge of the precise details of ARM's indebtedness to the Bank, asserted five affirmative defenses and counterclaims against the Bank. His first three affirmative defenses and counterclaims alleged that MHT had induced him to sign the Guarantee (1) by affirmatively representing that if Yanakas complied with its demands, the Bank would not call its loans to ARM and would continue to finance ARM's operations, and (2) by concealing from him material information, including (a) the fact that on the day it extracted the Guarantee from Yanakas, the Bank had Buonincontri sign the 1988 note for $550,000, (b) the fact that the Bank had discovered that, beginning in late 1986, the Buonincontris had misrepresented their financial circumstances, and (c) the fact that the Bank had no intention of continuing to provide financing to ARM:

31. Upon information and belief, at the time Yanakas' guarantee was requested; (a) the Bank had discovered that NatWest had been given a secured position in the assets of ARM; (b) the Bank had also discovered that Charles and Camille had given the Bank a false financial statement in late 1986, which did not reflect [a $1,000,000] mortgage on their home; (c) the Bank had decided to terminate the loans to ARM and not to continue financing ARM but to seek Yanakas' guarantee before it made its position public; (d) the Bank had assigned ARM's loans to its "workout" department which, upon information and belief, was for problem loans which the Bank wanted to liquidate rather than continue; and (e) the Bank had previously released Abraham's guarantee.

*314 32. None of the foregoing significant and material facts were made known by the Bank to Yanakas prior to the time that Yanakas signed the guarantee. Had Yanakas been advised of any of said facts, he would not have signed the guarantee.

(Answer ¶¶ 31, 32.)

Yanakas's fourth and fifth affirmative defenses and counterclaims alleged that the Bank controlled the finances of ARM, that Yanakas had no other financial options, and that a relationship of trust and confidence therefore existed between MHT and ARM. Yanakas alleged that the Bank had breached its fiduciary duty to ARM and Yanakas by not responding promptly to, and by then rejecting, Yanakas's proposal that MHT purchase NatWest's position. He alleged that while delaying its response, the Bank never had any intention of forbearing from calling ARM's loans or of continuing to finance its operations; that the Bank had already taken an internal step toward liquidation of those loans; and that [t]he Bank acted in a heavy-handed, commercially unreasonable and grossly negligent manner without regard to the rights of Yanakas or ARM, in bad faith, and willfully and maliciously by not accepting the aforesaid proposal, in delaying in acting on the proposal, and in demanding payment of the loans to ARM. The Bank's acts caused ARM to file for bankruptcy resulting in a total loss of Yanakas' investment and loans to ARM.

(Answer ¶ 48.)

Yanakas requested rescission of the Guarantee, $300,000 in compensatory damages on account of his payment of $100,000 on ARM's loans and his last capital contribution of $200,000, and $7.5 million in compensatory damages because the Bank's actions caused ARM to terminate its business, depriving Yanakas of his investment and his expected profits. He also requested $7.5 million in exemplary damages.

MHT moved pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) to dismiss Yanakas's counterclaims for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted. It moved pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(f) to strike his affirmative defenses as immaterial. In an Opinion and Order dated February 20, 1992, 1992 WL 35880, ("Dismissal Order"), the district court granted MHT's motions. Citing Citibank, N.A. v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 485 N.E.2d 974 (1985), the court dismissed Yanakas's first three affirmative defenses and counterclaims, ruling that "under New York law fraudulent inducement is not a valid defense to enforcement of a [] guarantee which, by its terms, is 'absolute and unconditional.'" Dismissal Order at 6. "Because the guarantee that Yanakas signed states that it [is] 'absolute and unconditional,' the defense of fraudulent inducement is unavailable to Yanakas." Id. at 6-7. The court also dismissed Yanakas's fourth and fifth affirmative defenses and counterclaims, rejecting his contention that the debtor-creditor relationship between ARM and the Bank was fiduciary in nature, and concluding that Yanakas had failed to allege any facts that would have created a duty on the part of MHT to respond to or accept Yanakas's April 1988 proposal within a particular period of time. Id. at 9.

MHT promptly moved for summary judgment on its claim against Yanakas. In an Opinion and Order dated July 31, 1992, 1992 WL 196789, ("Summary Judgment Decision"), the district court granted the motion, stating that despite his affirmative defenses Yanakas had "admit[ted] all relevant allegations upon which [his alleged] liability is premised," and had "fully acknowledged his guarantee of ARM's outstanding debt to MHT." Summary Judgment Decision at 3. Since the affirmative defenses had been stricken, the court concluded that Yanakas's "[a]dmission of this debt and the execution of a guarantee for the full extent of that debt le[ft] no unresolved genuine issue of material fact to be addressed." Id. at 3-4. Further finding no genuine issue to be tried as to the amount of the debt, the court ruled that MHT was entitled to judgment against Yanakas for $1,036,381.42, representing a total of $760,000 outstanding on the two ARM debts, plus accrued interest.

Noting that the Buonincontris had filed for bankruptcy, thereby delaying the resolution of any claims against them, the court ordered that a final judgment be entered in favor of *315 MHT against Yanakas pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 54(b). This appeal followed.

II. DISCUSSION

On appeal, Yanakas contends principally that the district court erred in ruling (1) that the fact that his Guarantee stated that it was "absolute and unconditional" precluded his claims of fraudulent inducement, and (2) that the Bank had no fiduciary duty to accept or respond promptly to his proposal to restructure ARM's debts. For the reasons below, we agree in part with the first contention but reject the second.

A. The Claims of Fraudulent Inducement

[1][2] Under New York law, which by the terms of the Guarantee governs this diversity action, if a contract recites that all of the parties' agreements are merged in the written document, parol evidence is not admissible to vary, or permit escape from, the terms of the integrated contract. See, e.g., Fogelson v. Rackfay Construction Co., 300 N.Y. 334, 340, 90 N.E.2d 881, 884 (1950). Such a general merger clause is ineffective, however, to preclude parol evidence that a party was induced to enter the contract by means of fraud. See, e.g., Sabo v. Delman, 3 N.Y.2d 155, 161-62, 164 N.Y.S.2d 714, 717-19, 143 N.E.2d 906 (1957); Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N.Y. 424, 428, 38 N.E. 458, 459 (1894) (general rule is that "fraud vitiates every transaction"). Thus, even when the contract contains "an omnibus statement that the written instrument embodies the whole agreement, or that no representations have been made," a party may escape liability under the contract by establishing that he was induced to enter the contract by fraud. Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 320, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 601-02, 157 N.E.2d 597, 598-99 (1959) ("Danann"); see also id. at 320-21, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 601-02 (citing, inter alia, Sabo v. Delman and Bridger v. Goldsmith).

[3] When, however, the contract states that a contracting party disclaims the existence of or reliance upon specified representations, that party will not be allowed to claim that he was defrauded into entering the contract in reliance on those representations. See Citibank, N.A. v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 94-95, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 311, 485 N.E.2d 974, 976 ("Plapinger"); Danann, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 320-21, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 602, 157 N.E.2d 597, 599. In Danann, the purchaser of a lease on a building sought damages for fraud, claiming that it had entered into the contract of sale as a result of the selling defendants' false representations "as to the operating expenses of the building and as to the profits to be derived from the investment." Id. at 319, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 600, 157 N.E.2d at 598. The contract itself, however, stated that "[t]he Seller has not made ... any representations as to the ... expenses [or] operation ... [of] the aforesaid premises ... and the Purchaser hereby expressly acknowledges that no such representations have been made" Id. at 320, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 601, 157 N.E.2d at 598 (emphasis in Danann). The contract also stated that all of the parties' understandings and agreements were merged in the contract, "neither party relying upon any statement or representation, not embodied in this contract, made by the other." Id. (emphasis in Danann). The Danann court, after noting that a general and vague merger clause would not bar parol evidence to support a fraud claim, ruled that the fraud claim in the case before it was barred by the purchaser's express disclaimer in the contract of any reliance on that specific representation. "[P]laintiff has in the plainest language announced and stipulated that it is not relying on any representations as to the very matter as to which it now claims it was defrauded. Such a specific disclaimer destroys the allegations in plaintiff's complaint that the agreement was executed in reliance upon these contrary oral representations..." Id. at 320-21, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 602, 157 N.E.2d at 599.

In Plapinger, the court applied the Danann principle to an "absolute and unconditional" guarantee of a company's debts given by corporate officers in connection with an agreement by the plaintiff banks to restructure the company's indebtedness. The guarantee stated that its " 'absolute and unconditional' " nature was " 'irrespective of (i) any lack of validity ... of the ... Restated Loan Agreement ... or any other agreement or *316 instrument relating thereto', or '(vii) any other circumstance which might otherwise constitute a defense' to the guarantee." Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d at 95, 495 N.Y.S.2d at 312, 485 N.E.2d at 977. Following a default by the corporation, the banks brought suit to enforce the guarantee against the officers. The officers sought to defend by alleging that they had been induced to enter into the guarantee agreement by the plaintiff banks' fraudulent representation that the banks had committed themselves to providing the corporation an additional line of credit.

The Plapinger court, while confirming the traditional principle that a general merger clause is insufficient to bar a defense of fraud in the inducement, see id. at 94-95, 495 N.Y.S.2d at 311, 485 N.E.2d at 976, affirmed the dismissal of the guaranteeing officers' fraud defense on the ground that it was inconsistent with their specific recitals in the contract. First, though noting that the guarantee before it was "not the explicit disclaimer present in Danann," the Plapinger court observed that the guarantee was by no means a generalized boilerplate clause but rather was a "multimillion dollar personal guarantee" that was signed "following extended negotiations between sophisticated business people." 66 N.Y.2d at 95, 495 N.Y.S.2d at 312, 485 N.E.2d at 977.

Second, the court found that the "substance" of the guarantee encompassed not only the financing agreements for the debtor corporation, but also " 'any other agreement or instrument relating thereto,' " which included the guarantee itself. Id. Thus, the officers had agreed that their guarantee was "absolute and unconditional irrespective of any lack of validity or enforceability of the guarantee," id. at 92, 495 N.Y.S.2d at 309, 485 N.E.2d at 974 (emphasis added), and "irrespective of ... any other circumstance which might otherwise constitute a defense" with respect to the guarantee, id. The court concluded that if it were to allow the officers to plead fraudulent inducement of the guarantee, it would in effect condone a fraudulent representation by the officers themselves of their own intentions vis- a-vis the guarantee. See id. at 95, 495 N.Y.S.2d at 312, 485 N.E.2d at 977; see also Danann, 5 N.Y.2d at 323, 184 N.Y.S.2d at 604, 157 N.E.2d at 600 (same).

Following Danann and prior to Plapinger, this Court noted that in order to be considered sufficiently specific to bar a defense of fraudulent inducement under Danann, a guarantee must contain explicit disclaimers of the particular representations that form the basis of the fraud-in-the-inducement claim. See Grumman Allied Industries, Inc. v. Rohr Industries, Inc., 748 F.2d 729 (2d Cir.1984). We stated that "[t]he Danann rule operates where the substance of the disclaimer provisions tracks the substance of the alleged misrepresentations." 748 F.2d at 735. Given the Plapinger court's emphasis on the fact that the defendants there had negotiated an agreement in which they expressly waived any challenge to the validity of the guarantee itself, we are of the view that the ruling in Plapinger does not materially alter the principle established by Danann.

This view is supported by many state court decisions since Plapinger that have ruled that the mere general recitation that a guarantee is "absolute and unconditional" is insufficient under Plapinger to bar a defense of fraudulent inducement, and that the touchstone is specificity. Thus, where specificity has been lacking, dismissal of the fraud claim has been ruled inappropriate. See, e.g., Zaro Bake Shop, Inc. v. David, 176 A.D.2d 721, 721, 574 N.Y.S.2d 803, 804 (2d Dep't 1991) (mem.) (" 'absolutely and unconditionally' liable ... language, in and of itself, was ... insufficient to preclude ... proof of fraud in the inducement"); DiFilippo v. Hidden Ponds Associates, 146 A.D.2d 737, 737-38, 537 N.Y.S.2d 222, 223-24 (2d Dep't 1989) (mem.) (contract provision not a bar to fraud-in-inducement claim where contract provision "[d]id not specifically disclaim reliance on any oral representation concerning the particular matter as to which plaintiff now claims he was defrauded"); GTE Automatic Electric Inc. v. Martin's Inc., 127 A.D.2d 545, 546-47, 512 N.Y.S.2d 107, 108 (1st Dep't 1987) (mem.) (recitation that underlying notes are absolute and unconditional does not bar proof of fraud in inducement of guarantee since there was "not ... a specific disclaimer, *317 as in both Plapinger and Danann Realty and, therefore, the principle of those cases does not apply"); Goodridge v. Fernandez, 121 A.D.2d 942, 945, 505 N.Y.S.2d 144, 147 (1st Dep't 1986) (mem.) (defendant Fernandez, sued on his guarantee, not barred from asserting fraud-in-inducement defense because, "in sharp contrast to the guarantee in [Plapinger], [Fernandez's guarantee] contains no specific disclaimer of defenses available to the guarantor with respect to the guarantee").

Where the fraud claim has been dismissed, the disclaimer has been sufficiently specific to match the alleged fraud. See, e.g., Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. v. Restivo, 169 A.D.2d 413, 414, 564 N.Y.S.2d 141, 141 (1st Dep't) (mem.) (claims that "MHT representative fraudulently represented that [defendants'] guarantees were temporary and conditional upon MHT's advancing sufficient funds to consummate a business merger are barred by the language of the guarantees stating that they were continuing and unconditional " (emphasis added)), appeal dismissed, 77 N.Y.2d 989, 571 N.Y.S.2d 914, 575 N.E.2d 400 (1991); First City National Bank & Trust Co. v. Heaton, 165 A.D.2d 710, 711-12, 563 N.Y.S.2d 783, 783-84 (1st Dep't 1990) (mem.) (guarantee barred fraud-in-inducement defense that was "in direct contradiction to the [] specific acknowledgement" made in the guarantee); Marine Midland Bank, N.A. v. CES/Compu-Tech, Inc., 147 A.D.2d 396, 397, 537 N.Y.S.2d 818, 819-20 (1st Dep't 1989) (mem.) (contractual disclaimer in which defendant expressly "waive[d] ... the right to assert defenses, setoffs and counterclaims ... in any action or proceeding in any court arising on, out of, under, by virtue of, or in any way relating to this Note or the transactions contemplated hereby " (emphasis added) was "sufficiently specific to foreclose the defense of fraudulent inducement"). But see Bank Leumi Trust Co. v. Block 3102 Corp., 180 A.D.2d 588, 589, 580 N.Y.S.2d 299, 300 (1st Dep't) (mem.) ("The language of the guarantees specifies that they are absolute and unconditional, negating the claim of fraudulent inducement....") (precise language of guarantees not disclosed in opinion), appeal denied, 80 N.Y.2d 754, 587 N.Y.S.2d 906, 600 N.E.2d 633 (1992).

[4] In the present case, Yanakas's Guarantee is, for the most part, significantly different from the guarantee at issue in Plapinger. First, there is no indication that the Yanakas Guarantee, which is in a preprinted form, is anything but a generalized boilerplate exclusion. The form was one that MHT apparently used routinely; an affidavit submitted by MHT's counsel in support of the Bank's motion to dismiss the affirmative defenses and counterclaims attached copies of an identical MHT guarantee form executed by others in connection with financing unrelated to ARM. There was no evidence that the scope or character of the Guarantee was the product of any negotiations between the parties.

More importantly, the Yanakas Guarantee does not purport to waive any defenses to its own validity. Rather, the Guarantee states that Yanakas "absolutely and unconditionally guarantees" all "obligation[s] and liability[ies] of Borrower to Bank or another or others," and states that the "guarantee shall be a continuing, absolute and unconditional guarantee of payment regardless of the validity, regularity or enforceability of any of said Obligations " (emphasis added). The term "Obligations" is explicitly defined in the Guarantee with reference only to obligations of ARM. Thus, the Yanakas Guarantee contains no disclaimer as to the validity, regularity, or enforceability of the Guarantee itself. It also contains no disclaimer of the existence of or reliance upon representations by MHT, no express reference to any promise of continued financing, and no blanket disclaimer of the type found in Plapinger as to "any other circumstance which might otherwise constitute a defense" to the Guarantee.

[5] One of Yanakas's bases for claiming fraud in the inducement, however, is barred by the Guarantee. Yanakas alleged that the Bank had failed to disclose to him its same-day procurement of the $550,000 note signed by Buonincontri. The Guarantee, however, expressly covers ARM debts "whether now existing or hereafter incurred," and expressly "waives any and all notice of ... the creation ... of any of said Obligations." These terms are sufficiently specific to preclude *318 any claim that the Bank defrauded Yanakas by failing to disclose the existence or imminence of the 1988 note.

In other respects, the Guarantee given by Yanakas does not, in words or substance, contain disclaimers of the representations that formed the basis of his claim of fraudulent inducement. Accordingly, the decision of the district court to dismiss the first three affirmative defenses and counterclaims must be vacated. The court's ruling that MHT was entitled to summary judgment against Yanakas, premised as it was on the dismissal of those defenses, must likewise be set aside.

B. The Remaining Counterclaims

[6] Yanakas's fourth and fifth affirmative defenses and counterclaims, which center on his April 1988 proposal to restructure ARM's debt by having MHT purchase NatWest's security interest, asserted that MHT's rejection of, and failure to respond promptly to, his proposal constituted a breach of MHT's fiduciary duty. His challenge to the district court's dismissal of these claims is without merit.

[7] Under New York law, the "usual relationship of bank and customer is that of debtor and creditor," Aaron Ferer & Sons Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 731 F.2d 112, 122 (2d Cir.1984); see Bank Leumi Trust Co. v. Block 3102 Corp., 180 A.D.2d at 589, 580 N.Y.S.2d at 301, "and does not create a fiduciary relationship between the bank and its borrower or its guarantors," id. Though in unusual circumstances, a fiduciary relationship may arise even between a bank and a customer if there is either "a confidence reposed which invests the person trusted with an advantage in treating with the person so confiding," Fisher v. Bishop, 108 N.Y. 25, 28, 15 N.E. 331, 332 (1888), or an assumption of control and responsibility, see, e.g., Gordon v. Bialystoker Center & Bikur Cholim, Inc., 45 N.Y.2d 692, 698, 412 N.Y.S.2d 593, 596, 385 N.E.2d 285, 287-88 (1978), the mere fact that a corporation has borrowed money from the same bank for several years is insufficient to transform the relationship into one in which the bank is a fiduciary, see Aaron Ferer & Sons Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 731 F.2d at 122.

Seeking to avoid the application of this well-established principle, Yanakas relies on K.M.C. Co. v. Irving Trust Co., 757 F.2d 752 (6th Cir.1985) ("K.M.C."). His reliance is misplaced. K.M.C. involved an agreement by Irving Trust Co. ("Irving") to extend the debtor a $3.5 million line of credit, in consideration of which the debtor assigned all of its business receipts to an account to which only Irving had access. Thus, the debtor had an express agreement for a certain sum of credit, and Irving had control over assets of the debtor, impeding the debtor from seeking new financing. The Sixth Circuit held that, in these circumstances, Irving's termination of the line of credit without advance notice breached an implied covenant of good faith. This Court has held that the fiduciary obligation found in K.M.C. is not present where a bank has "never represented that credit of a certain amount would be provided, and [the borrower] had no reasonable expectation of continued, much less expanded, credit." Fasolino Foods Co. v. Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, 961 F.2d 1052, 1058 (2d Cir.1992).

Yanakas's answer did not allege any facts sufficient either to convert MHT's position from that of creditor into that of fiduciary or to liken his circumstances to those in K.M.C. The answer did not allege that MHT controlled the assets or operations of ARM or that MHT otherwise exercised powers beyond those of a typical lender-creditor. Yanakas did not allege that MHT had agreed to provide ARM with any certain amount of financing.

He did not allege any agreement by MHT to Yanakas's proposed restructuring of ARM's debt, nor any representations by MHT suggesting that it would agree to that proposal. Though Yanakas alleged that ARM was unable to find financing elsewhere, there was no allegation that ARM's agreements with MHT precluded ARM from making a search for such financing or that the Bank failed to give proper notice of its decision to cease providing financing. We agree with the district court that Yanakas failed to allege any facts showing a fiduciary duty on the part of the Bank.

*319 CONCLUSION

We have considered all of the contentions of the parties in support of their respective positions on this appeal and, except as indicated above, have found them to be without merit. We vacate so much of the judgment of the district court as dismissed Yanakas's first three affirmative defenses and counterclaims and granted judgment in favor of MHT; we affirm so much of the judgment as dismissed the fourth and fifth affirmative defenses and counterclaims; and we remand to the district court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the foregoing.

No costs are awarded at this time. In the event that Yanakas ultimately prevails on any of his affirmative defenses or counterclaims, the district court may award him the costs of the present appeal.

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to Top)

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST COMPANY, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. Nicholas YANAKAS, Defendant-Appellant, Charles Buonincontri and Camille Buonincontri, Defendant., 1992 WL 12013075 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 April 21, 1992), Brief of Plaintiff-Appellee Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST COMPANY, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. Nicholas YANAKAS, Defendant-Appellant, Charles

Buonincontri and Camille Buonincontri,
Defendants., 1993 WL 13011719 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 March 18, 1993), Brief for Defendant-Appellant Nicholas Yanakas

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST
COMPANY, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. Nicholas
YANAKAS, Defendant-Appellant, Charles
Buonincontri and Camille Buonincontri,
Defendants., 1993 WL 13011720 (Appellate Brief) (C.A.2 April 30, 1993), Reply Brief for Defendant-Appellant Nicholas Yanakas

7 F.3d 310

END OF DOCUMENT

55

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third
Department, New York.

MARCELLUS CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, INC., Respondent,

v.

VILLAGE OF BROADALBIN et al.,
Defendants,

and

McDonald Engineering, P.C., Appellant.

Feb. 6, 2003.

Contractor that successfully bid on village sewer project brought action against village and engineer that provided design information in connection with the project. The Supreme Court, Fulton County, Sise, J., dismissed contractor's fraud and negligent performance claims against the engineer, but denied engineer's summary judgment motion with regard to contractor's negligent misrepresentation claim, and engineer appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Kane, J., held that: (1) contractor and engineer did not have relationship approaching privity, so as to permit contractor to recover from engineer for its alleged negligent misrepresentations concerning preexisting subsurface site conditions, and (2) even if contractor and engineer had relationship approaching privity, contractor failed to show that engineer made negligent misrepresentations.

Affirmed as modified.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 29
184k29

Before a party may recover in tort for pecuniary loss sustained as a result of another's negligent misrepresentations, there must be a showing that there was either actual privity of contract between the parties or a relationship so close as to approach that of privity.

[2] Fraud 29
184k29

Contractor that successfully bid on village sewer project and engineer that provided technical data concerning the project did not have relationship approaching privity, so as to permit contractor to recover from engineer for its alleged negligent misrepresentations concerning preexisting subsurface site conditions; although engineer was aware that purpose of its design plans was to assist contractors in preparation of bids, its contract with village provided that its acts would not give rise to any duty to contractors, and it did not discuss subsurface conditions in its pre-award meeting with contractor.

[3] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Even if contractor that successfully bid on village sewer project had relationship approaching privity with engineer that provided technical data concerning the project, contractor failed to show that engineer made negligent misrepresentations concerning preexisting subsurface site conditions; engineer's only representations with respect to subsurface conditions were results of 28 test borings, and there was no evidence that engineer misrepresented results of those borings or that the borings were negligently performed.

*475 Fox, Charles & Kowalewski L.L.P., Clifton Park (Suzanne H. Charles of counsel), for appellant.

Bond, Schoeneck & King L.L.P., Albany
(Carl Rosenbloom of counsel), for respondent.

Before: CREW III, J.P., SPAIN, CARPINELLO, LAHTINEN and KANE, JJ.

640 KANE, J.

Appeal from an order of the Supreme Court (Sise, J.), entered December 13, 2001 in Fulton County, which partially denied a motion by defendant McDonald Engineering, P.C. for summary judgment dismissing the complaint against it.

In July 1994, defendant McDonald

(Cite as: 302 A.D.2d 640, *640, 755 N.Y.S.2d 474, 475)

Engineering, P.C. was retained by defendant Village of Broadalbin to provide planning, design and construction phase engineering services for a sewage collection system in the Village. Pursuant to its contract, McDonald prepared the bid documents that included information on subsurface conditions. As the low bidder, plaintiff was awarded the contract by the Village. Upon commencing work, plaintiff encountered subsurface conditions, such as boulders and mislocated utility lines, that plaintiff alleges varied from the descriptions in the "technical data" provided by McDonald. As a result, plaintiff incurred additional expense for which it sought and was denied payment by McDonald. Plaintiff subsequently commenced this action against defendants, alleging, inter alia, that McDonald negligently performed its engineering services, and committed fraud and negligent misrepresentation concerning preexisting subsurface site conditions. Supreme Court granted McDonald's motion for summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's claims as to fraud and negligent performance. However, the court denied the motion as to the claim of negligent misrepresentation, holding that there was a relationship so close as to be the functional equivalent of privity between plaintiff and McDonald, allowing plaintiff to maintain a claim of negligent misrepresentation against McDonald. This appeal followed.

[1][2] "[B]efore a party may recover in tort for pecuniary loss sustained as a result of another's negligent misrepresentations, there must be a showing that there was either actual privity of contract between the parties or a relationship so close as to approach that of privity" (Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 80 N.Y.2d 377, 382, 590 N.Y.S.2d 831, 605 N.E.2d 318; see CFJ Assoc. of N.Y. v. Hanson Indus., 274 A.D.2d 892, 895, 711 N.Y.S.2d 232). * * * "Where, as here, no privity of contract exists between the parties, the Court of Appeals has identified three criteria for imposing liability upon the maker of a negligent misrepresentation: '(1) an awareness by the maker of the statement that it is to be used for a particular purpose; (2) reliance by a known party on the statement in furtherance of that purpose; and (3) some conduct by the maker of the statement *641 linking it to the relying party and evincing its understanding of that reliance' " (Rayco of Schenectady v. City of Schenectady, 267 A.D.2d 664, 665, 699 476 N.Y.S.2d 594, quoting Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, supra at 384, 590 N.Y.S.2d 831, 605 N.E.2d 318; see Yanas v. Albany Med. Ctr. Hosp., 294 A.D.2d 769, 771, 744 N.Y.S.2d 514). In applying these principles to the facts herein, we conclude that plaintiff has failed to tender admissible proof of a relationship which is tantamount to that of privity.

Since McDonald's design of the project was part of the final bid package for all interested construction bidders, we conclude that the first prong of the tripartite test has arguably been satisfied. Clearly, the record before us sustains plaintiff's allegations that McDonald was aware that one of the purposes of its design plans was to assist construction companies in preparing their bids for the project (see Ossining Union Free School Dist. v. Anderson La Rocca Anderson, 73 N.Y.2d 417, 424, 541 N.Y.S.2d 335, 539 N.E.2d 91).

As to the second prong, however, the contract between plaintiff and the Village provided that McDonald was to act as "owner's representative" and that the acts of McDonald would not "create, impose or give rise to any duty owed by ENGINEER to CONTRACTOR" (see McNar Indus. v. Feibes & Schmitt, Architects, 245 A.D.2d 993, 994, 667 N.Y.S.2d 88, lv. denied 91 N.Y.2d 812, 672 N.Y.S.2d 848, 695 N.E.2d 717). Nor do we consider plaintiff a "known party" merely because it was a potential bidder (see e.g. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Morris Assoc., 200 A.D.2d 728, 729, 607 N.Y.S.2d 106) or that McDonald knew that plaintiff was "part of a definable class which would rely on the plans" (id. at 729, 607 N.Y.S.2d 106). Rather, we find plaintiff to be part of an "indeterminate class of persons who, presently or in the future, might [act] * * * in reliance on [McDonald's plans]" (IT Corp. v. Ecology & Env'tl. Eng'g, 275 A.D.2d 958, 960, 713 N.Y.S.2d 633, lv. denied 96 N.Y.2d 702, 722 N.Y.S.2d 794, 745 N.E.2d 1016, quoting Ultramares Corp. v. Touche, 255 N.Y. 170, 183, 174 N.E. 441). The fact that there was a pre-award meeting between plaintiff and McDonald does not compel a different result as, inter alia, at the time of the meeting, plaintiff had already submitted its bid for the project.

Finally, with respect to the third prong, we find no conduct between plaintiff and McDonald evincing McDonald's understanding that plaintiff had, in fact, relied on McDonald's subsurface information in preparing its bids. To the contrary, there was no discussion of the subsurface information at the pre-award meeting. Most significantly, the bidders' instructions unequivocally advised bidders that they were required to conduct their own investigation concerning site conditions. Here, the record indicates that plaintiff understood that another bidder conducted subsurface explorations prior to submitting a bid on the project, but plaintiff elected not to do so. *642 Furthermore, the contract signed by plaintiff clearly states that the soil boring information is not part of the contract documents nor is the information guaranteed. Although Supreme Court may be correct in its reasoning that the bid documents were prepared to provide information to plaintiff as opposed to the Village, neither the preparation of the documents, nor the pre-award meeting between plaintiff and McDonald, "evinces [McDonald's] understanding of [plaintiff's] reliance" upon the technical data and site descriptions exclusively in the preparation of its bid (Yanas v. Albany Med. Ctr. Hosp., 294 A.D.2d 769, 771, 744 N.Y.S.2d 514, supra, quoting Credit Alliance Corp. v. Andersen & Co., 65 N.Y.2d 536, 551, 493 N.Y.S.2d 435, 483 N.E.2d 110). Accordingly, we find no relationship approaching privity between plaintiff and McDonald sufficient to withstand a motion for summary judgment (see 477 Parrott v. Coopers & Lybrand, 95 N.Y.2d 479, 483, 718 N.Y.S.2d 709, 741 N.E.2d 506).

[3] Even if plaintiff had established a relationship with McDonald "so close as to approach that of privity" (Prudential Ins. Co.

of Am. v Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, supra at 382, 590 N.Y.S.2d 831, 605 N.E.2d 318), McDonald's motion should have been granted. A review of the record discloses that the only representations made by McDonald with respect to subsurface conditions were the results of the 28 test borings performed in 1996. In response to McDonald's motion for summary judgment, plaintiff failed to set forth any facts demonstrating that McDonald misrepresented in any way the results of the 28 test borings or that said borings were in some manner negligently performed. Having failed to set forth any proof of a negligent misrepresentation, plaintiff's cause of action for same must fail (see Depot Constr. Corp. v. State of New York, 19 N.Y.2d 109, 114, 278 N.Y.S.2d 363, 224 N.E.2d 866; Bilotta Constr. Corp. v. Village of Mamaroneck, 199 A.D.2d 230, 232, 604 N.Y.S.2d 966).

ORDERED that the order is modified, on the law, with costs to defendant McDonald Engineering, P.C., by reversing so much thereof as partially denied said defendant's motion; motion granted in its entirety, summary judgment awarded to said defendant and complaint dismissed against it; and, as so modified, affirmed.

CREW III, J.P., SPAIN, CARPINELLO and LAHTINEN, JJ., concur.

302 A.D.2d 640, 755 N.Y.S.2d 474, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 10728

END OF DOCUMENT

56

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First
Department, New York.

MARINE MIDLAND BANK, Plaintiff-
Respondent,

v.

PALM BEACH MOORINGS, INC., et al.,
Defendants-Appellants.

March 16, 1978.

Bank brought action to recover on an unsecured time note executed by defendant corporation and by individual defendant as guarantor. The Supreme Court, New York County, Oliver C. Sutton, J., granted in part plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, and defendants appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that defendant, who assumed a controlling interest in corporation and signed as personal guarantor on its note, could not defeat liability as guarantor on asserted theory that he had been induced into transaction by bank official misrepresentations, where defendant had opportunity to examine corporate records before assuming obligations and, after buying controlling interest in corporation, defendant had unlimited access to relevant financial records before causing corporation to discharge previous obligations and before he became personal guarantor on note.

Order and judgment affirmed.

West Headnotes

Guaranty 20
195k20

Defendant, who assumed a controlling interest in corporation and signed as personal guarantor on its note, could not defeat liability as guarantor on asserted theory that he had been induced into transaction by bank official's misrepresentations, where defendant had opportunity to examine corporate records before assuming obligations and, after buying controlling interest in corporation, defendant had unlimited access to relevant financial records before causing corporation to discharge previous obligations and before he became personal guarantor on note.

16 R. L. Ellis, New York City, for plaintiff-respondent.

M. N. Nessen, New York City, for
defendants-appellants.

928 Before LUPIANO, J. P., and LANE, MARKEWICH and SANDLER, JJ.

927 MEMORANDUM DECISION.

Order and judgment (2 papers), Supreme Court, New York County, entered November 16, 1977, granting in part plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, unanimously affirmed. Respondent shall recover of appellant $60 costs and disbursements.

In affirming the order and judgment at Special Term granting plaintiff in part summary judgment, the 928 court does so for reasons other than those stated in the opinion at Special Term.

The underlying action by the plaintiff was to recover on an unsecured time note in the sum of $385,000 executed by the defendant Palm Beach Moorings, Inc. (Palm Beach) and guaranteed by the defendant Paul. In resisting the motion for summary judgment, the defendants contended that the note in question was a renewal of prior similar notes, which in turn derived from still earlier notes totalling $725,000 executed by the defendant Palm Beach and endorsed by the previous controlling stockholder of that corporation, one Abraham Wolosoff, father-in-law of defendant Paul.

It was further contended that Paul had been asked by his father-in-law to buy the controlling interest in Palm Beach and as part of that proposed purchase to arrange for the discharge of the previous corporate obligations of $725,000, or alternatively, to replace Wolosoff as a guarantor on the note; that he was introduced to a vice president of the plaintiff bank who told him that the loans had been extended for construction purposes and had been so used which statements were inaccurate, either intentionally or made without an adequate basis; and that he relied upon those statements in entering into the agreement to acquire the controlling interest of the corporation and in guaranteeing later notes.

(Cite as: 61 A.D.2d 927, *928, 403 N.Y.S.2d 15, 16)

As to the defendant Palm Beach, it is immediately apparent that nothing approaching an issue of fact was presented. On the version of the transaction presented in the papers by the defendants, it is obvious that Palm Beach, as of the time of the conversation with the bank official, was already obligated to plaintiff in the sum of $725,000 and nothing said by the bank official to Paul could conceivably have had any bearing on that obligation.

As to the defendant Paul, we need not determine here if enough is presented in the papers to raise a triable issue as to whether the statements attributed to the bank official were intentionally untrue or were made without an adequate basis for believing them to be true.

Nor need we decide whether defendant Paul's claim that he relied upon those statements, presented in conclusory fashion, is sufficient to present an issue of fact, although the total circumstances make the 17 claim of reliance not an easy one to accept. The thesis advanced requires a finding that an experienced business man, assuming a controlling interest in a corporation and incurring heavy financial obligations, did so on the basis of verbal assurances given to him by the seller and a bank official.

The inference that the defendant Paul assumed these burdens after having made, or caused to be made on his behalf, a careful examination of the relevant books and records of the corporation is a powerful one indeed. The strength of this conclusion is buttressed by the striking fact that in a meticulously prepared affidavit the defendant does not say whether he did or did not make or cause to be made an examination of the corporation's books and records.

In any event, it is not denied that the defendant Paul had the opportunity to examine the corporate records before assuming the obligations reflected in the agreement of purchase. It is also clear that after buying the controlling interest in the corporation he had unlimited access to the relevant financial records before he caused the corporation to discharge the previous obligations and before he became a personal guarantor on any note. Here, surely, is a situation which calls for application of the principle articulated by the Court of Appeals in Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 322, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 603, 157 N.E.2d 597, 600:

"If the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth, or the real quality of the subject of representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations."

61 A.D.2d 927, 403 N.Y.S.2d 15

END OF DOCUMENT

57

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second
Department, New York.

Joseph B. McMANUS, et al., appellants,
v.
Frantz N. MOISE, et al., respondents.

June 7, 1999.

Home buyers brought action against sellers for fraud based on alleged concealment of extent of termite damage to home. The Supreme Court, Nassau County, Feuerstein, J., granted sellers' motion for summary judgment. Buyers appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, held that buyers did not have viable cause of action for fraud.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Fraud 22(1)
184k22(1)

In contract for sale of real property, if facts represented are not matters peculiarly within party's knowledge, and other party has means available to him of knowing, by exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth or real quality of subject of representation, he must make use of those means, or he will not be heard to complain that he was induced to enter into transaction by misrepresentations.

[2] Fraud 22(1)
184k22(1)

Home buyers could not be heard to complain that they were defrauded by sellers' alleged concealment of extent of termite damage to home, where buyers were aware, prior to contract, that house had visible, structural termite damage as well as potentially more extensive damage behind walls, but buyers nevertheless agreed to second inspection procedure which, by its very terms, prevented their adequately investigating problem, and buyers then purchased property without even availing themselves of second inspection.

[3] Fraud 36
184k36

Contract of sale disclaimer stating that home buyers acknowledged they examined premises, that sellers did not make any representations as to physical condition of premises, that buyers expressly acknowledged that no such representations were made, and that house was being sold in "as is" condition was sufficiently specific to preclude buyers' reliance on any alleged pre-sale misrepresentations by sellers concerning existence of, or extent of, termite damage or infestation.

*167 Schupbach Williams & Pavone, L.L.P., Garden City, N.Y. (Arthur C. Schupbach of counsel), for appellants.

Alan Ross, Plainview, N.Y., for respondents.

CORNELIUS J. O'BRIEN, J.P., FRED T. SANTUCCI, MYRIAM J. ALTMAN and HOWARD MILLER, JJ.

MEMORANDUM BY THE COURT.

370 In an action, inter alia, to recover damages for fraud, the plaintiffs appeal from an order of the Supreme Court, Nassau County (Feuerstein, J.), entered May 12, 1998, which granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint and denied their cross motion for summary judgment.

ORDERED that the order is affirmed, with costs.

In 1997 the plaintiffs purchased a house from the defendants. Prior to executing the contract of sale, the plaintiffs received a professional termite inspection report which, inter alia, indicated that the property had suffered extensive structural damage from termite infestation. The report also stated that there was "[p]ossible hidden termite damage behind sheet rock wall" and "strongly advise[d] further examination". Thereafter the plaintiffs' attorney added a rider to the contract which provided that the plaintiffs could conduct a second inspection "without removing the sheetrock" within 25 days after the execution of the contract, and that if such inspection revealed termite damage that would cost more than $3,000 to repair, they could cancel the contract and their down payment would be refunded. There is no evidence that the plaintiffs ever conducted a second inspection, and the parties closed on the property on June 10, 1997.

(Cite as: 262 A.D.2d 370, *370, 691 N.Y.S.2d 166, 167)

The plaintiffs claim that in July 1997 they discovered extensive termite damage throughout the house which would cost approximately $50,000 to repair. They commenced the instant action, inter alia, alleging that the defendants fraudulently misrepresented the extent of the termite damage which was intentionally concealed.

[1][2] *371 The Supreme Court properly dismissed the complaint. It is well settled that in a contract for the sale of real property, "if the facts represented are not matters peculiarly within the party's knowledge, and the other party has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth or the real quality of the subject of the representation, he [or she] must make use of those means, or he [or she] will not be heard to complain that he [or she] was induced to enter into the transaction by misrepresentations" (Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N.Y. 590, 596, 30 N.E. 755; see, Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 322, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597; see also, Bando v. Achenbaum, 234 A.D.2d 242, 651 N.Y.S.2d 74). The plaintiffs were aware, prior to contract, that the house had visible, structural termite damage as well as potentially more extensive damage behind the walls. Nevertheless, 168 they agreed to a second inspection procedure which, by its very terms, prevented their adequately investigating the problem, and they then purchased the property without even availing themselves of the second inspection. Under these circumstances, the plaintiffs cannot now be heard to complain that they have been defrauded. It was their own lack of diligence that is responsible for their current predicament (see, Rodas v. Manitaras, 159 A.D.2d 341, 552 N.Y.S.2d 618; Bando v. Achenbaum, supra).

[3] We further note that the contract of sale contained a disclaimer whereby the plaintiffs acknowledged that they had "examined the premises"; the defendants did not make "any representations as to the physical condition" of the premises; the plaintiffs "expressly acknowledge[d] that no such representations [had] been made", and that the house was being sold in an "as is" condition. These provisions were sufficiently specific to preclude the plaintiffs' reliance on any alleged pre-sale misrepresentations by the defendants concerning the existence of, or extent of, termite damage or infestation (see, Citibank v. Plapinger, 66 N.Y.2d 90, 495 N.Y.S.2d 309, 485 N.E.2d 974; Barnes v. Gould, 55 N.Y.2d 943, 449 N.Y.S.2d 192, 434 N.E.2d 261; Couch v. Schmidt, 204 A.D.2d 951, 612 N.Y.S.2d 511).

262 A.D.2d 370, 691 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1999 N.Y. Slip Op. 05150

END OF DOCUMENT

58

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Third District.

Guillermo MENENDEZ, Appellant,
v.
BEECH ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION,
Appellee.

No. 86-2419.

Feb. 9, 1988.

Rehearing Denied March 23, 1988.

After remand, 496 So.2d 251, in which bank was determined to have priority over chattel mortgage holder, chattel mortgage holder amended suit to include acceptance corporation and sought to have acceptance corporation's security interest subordinated to his chattel mortgage. The Circuit Court, Dade County, Leonard Rivkind, J., granted acceptance corporation summary judgment. On appeal, the District Court of Appeal, Ferguson, J., held that: (1) acceptance corporation's actions protected its own security interest; (2) no evidence demonstrated that acceptance corporation participated in civil conspiracy; (3) not a scintilla of evidence demonstrated acceptance misappropriated holder's property; and (4) holder was not entitled to amend his petition to include allegation of negligence.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Trusts 95
390k95

Holder of chattel mortgage in aircraft was not entitled to priority over security interest of acceptance corporation on basis of constructive trust, upon holder's allegations of fraud, undue influence or abuse of confidence, for acceptance corporation's failure to protect chattel mortgage holder's interest from being subordinated to bank's security interest, where acceptance corporation had competing financial interest with chattel mortgage holder, and no fiduciary relationship existed between them, as acceptance corporation's failure to protect chattel mortgage holder's interest thereby protected its own security interest.

[2] Torts 12
379k12

Conduct engaged in for legitimate business purposes, even if tinged with animosity and malice, does not give rise to cause of action for interference with a contractual relationship.

[3] Trusts 95
390k95

Holder of chattel mortgage in aircraft was not entitled to priority over security interest of acceptance corporation, on theory of constructive trust arising out of civil conspiracy, for acceptance corporation's failure to protect chattel mortgage holder's interest from being subordinated to bank's security interest, where no evidence indicated that acceptance corporation knew of or participated in scheme to subordinate holder's chattel mortgage.

[4] Judgment 185.3(21)
228k185.3(21)

Some proof of a civil conspiracy and participation in it by alleged tort-feasor must be shown to survive motion for summary judgment.

[5] Trusts 95
390k95

Holder of chattel mortgage in aircraft was not entitled to priority over that of acceptance corporation, which also held security interest in aircraft, on theory of constructive trust, arising from allegations of civil theft, for acceptance corporation's failure to protect chattel mortgage holder's interest from being subordinated to bank's security interest in aircraft, where not a scintilla of evidence demonstrated that acceptance corporation knowingly obtained, used, or endeavored to obtain or use property of chattel mortgage holder or that acceptance corporation deprived holder of a right to its property, or appropriated holder's property to corporation's own use or to use of another person, as required under civil theft statute. West's

F.S.A. § 812.014(1).

[6] Trusts 95
390k95

Holder of chattel mortgage in aircraft was not entitled to priority over security interest of acceptance corporation, on basis of constructive trust, upon allegations of negligence, for acceptance corporation's failure to protect chattel mortgage holder's interest from being subordinated to bank's security interest, where no fiduciary relationship existed between corporation and holder, and corporation owed no duty to holder.

*179 Neil J. Berman, Miami, for appellant.

Thornton, David & Murray and Terry L. Redford, Miami, for appellee.

Before HUBBART, FERGUSON and JORGENSON, JJ.

FERGUSON, Judge.

In a previous appearance of this case we affirmed a summary judgment finding that Founders Financial Corporation's security interest in an aircraft had priority over Menendez's chattel mortgage. Menendez *180 v. Founders Fin. Corp., 496 So.2d 251 (Fla.3d DCA 1986). On remand, with Founders no longer in the case, Menendez amended his complaint to add Beech as a defendant, alleging that its security interest in the aircraft was subordinated to Founders' security interest because of Beech's wrongful conduct. Having thoroughly examined the record, we again find no basis for disturbing the judgment.

[1][2] No right to have a constructive trust imposed was established because no facts were adduced to support the allegations of fraud, undue influence, or abuse of confidence. Beech had no fiduciary duty to Menendez; in fact they each had competing financial interests to be protected, and in not vigorously protecting Menendez's financial interest, Beech was effectively protecting its own interest. Such conduct engaged in for legitimate purposes, even if tinged with animosity and malice, does not give rise to a cause of action for interference with a contractual relationship. Ethyl Corp. v. Balter, 386 So.2d 1220 (Fla.3d DCA 1980), rev. denied, 392 So.2d 1371 (Fla.), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 955, 101 S.Ct. 3099, 69 L.Ed.2d 965 (1981).

[3][4] Menendez claimed that Beech conspired with others to conceal facts which would have placed Menendez on notice of a threat to his security interest. There are no facts, however, tending to show that Beech knew of or participated in a scheme to render Menendez's security interest subordinate to Founders' interest. Some proof of knowledge of a conspiracy, and participation in it by the alleged tortfeasor, must be shown in order to survive a motion for summary judgment. Karnegis v. Oakes, 296 So.2d 657 (Fla.3d DCA 1974), cert. denied, 307 So.2d 450 (1975).

[5] Neither is there a scintilla of evidence that Beech knowingly obtained, used, or endeavored to obtain or use property of Menendez, or that Beech deprived Menendez of a right to his property or appropriated the property to its own use or to the use of another person-essential elements under the civil theft statute. § 812.014(1), Fla.Stat. (1985). Summary judgment was thus correctly entered on the civil theft cause of action.

[6] Lastly, no abuse of discretion is shown in the trial court's denial of Menendez's motion for leave to file an amended complaint alleging negligence. Since the record reflects that there was an arm's length, competing business relationship between the parties which gave rise to no contractual duty of Beech to protect Menendez's financial interest, there can be no cause of action based on a breach of duty. See Robertson v. Deak Perera (Miami), Inc., 396 So.2d 749 (Fla.3d DCA), rev. denied, 407 So.2d 1105 (1981).

Affirmed.

521 So.2d 178, 13 Fla. L. Weekly 410

END OF DOCUMENT

59

United States District Court, S. D. New York.

Marvin W. MORSE, Plaintiff,

v.

SWANK, INC., Pierre Cardin, S.A.R.L. de Gestion Pierre Cardin, Max J. Bellest, and Coordinating Office, Inc., Defendants.

No. 77 Civ. 5185 (CHT).

Oct. 10, 1978.

Prospective licensee brought action against foreign licensor, independent contractor which supervised licensing in United States and competitor charging violation of antitrust laws, breach of contract, tortious interference with contract, fraud and negligence. On defendants' motion for summary judgment, the District Court, Tenney, J., held that: (1) fact issue existed as to whether there was a combination or conspiracy to bar prospective licensee from marketing designer lighters in United States and whether it had intent or effect of restraining competition in marketing of lighters, precluding summary judgment on antitrust claim; (2) fact issue existed as to whether prospective licensee and licensor intended binding licensing agreement, precluding summary judgment on breach of contract claim; (3) fact issue existed as to whether there was tortious interference with licensing negotiations, precluding summary judgment, and (4) independent contractor was not liable for negligent or fraudulent misrepresentations.

Motion granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 2552
170Ak2552

On motion for summary judgment, court cannot try issues of fact but can only determine whether there are issues to be tried. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure 2543
170Ak2543

[2] Federal Civil Procedure 2544

170Ak2544

In determining motion for summary judgment, court must resolve ambiguities against movant and draw reasonable inferences in favor of opponent with burden on movant of establishing that there are no genuine issues of material fact to be tried. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Assignments 121
38k121

Challenges that assignment to plaintiff of claim from his partners or coventurers failed to identify cause of action and business to which assignment referred, failed to include alleged necessary party and failed to indicate assignment as basis for instant suit merely pointed to factual matters unclear on the record and were insufficient, under New York law, to demonstrate invalidity of assignment as matter of law so as to render plaintiff not real party in interest. General Obligations Law N.Y. §§ 13-101, 13-105.

[4] Monopolies 17(2.2)
265k17(2.2)

Licensor or manufacturer may refuse to begin new relationship or terminate an old one, notwithstanding harm to distributor or prospective distributor, providing that there is no combination or conspiracy restraining competition. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, § 1 as amended 15 U.S.C.A. § 1.

[5] Federal Civil Procedure 2484
170Ak2484

Fact issues existed as to whether there was a combination or conspiracy to bar prospective licensee from marketing designer lighters in the United States and whether it had intent or effect of restraining competition in marketing of such lighters, precluding summary judgment on prospective lighter licensee's claim of antitrust violation. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, § 1 as amended 15 U.S.C.A. § 1.

[6] Federal Civil Procedure 2492
170Ak2492

Fact issue existed as to intent of prospective licensee and licensor to create binding agreement for issuance of license to sell certain designer lighters in United States, precluding summary judgment on prospective licensee's claim of breach of license agreement.

[7] Contracts 15
95k15

Parties may withdraw from contract negotiations with impunity.

[8] Contracts 15
95k15

Absence of a formal contract and continuing negotiation as to prospective suppliers of lighters did not preclude meeting of minds necessary to constitute binding agreement for license to sell designer lighters in United States.

[9] Torts 12
379k12

Tortious interference prohibition extends to mere negotiations.

[10] Torts 12
379k12

He who has a reasonable expectancy of a contract has a property right which may not be invaded maliciously or unjustifiably.

[11] Federal Civil Procedure 2492
170Ak2492

Factual question existed as to whether there was malicious interference with prospective licensee's negotiations or contract with licensor for license to sell designer lighters in United States, precluding summary judgment on prospective licensee's claim of tortious interference.

[12] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Scienter includes not only knowing misrepresentations but also reckless indifference to error, pretense of knowledge and misrepresentation of material fact susceptible of accurate knowledge but stated as true on personal knowledge of representor.

[13] Federal Civil Procedure 2515
170Ak2515

Factual issues existed as to circumstances surrounding misrepresentations about licensor's ability to grant license to sell lighters in United States and scienter, precluding summary judgment on prospective licensee's claim of fraudulent misrepresentations relative to granting of license.

[14] Fraud 21
184k21

A cause of action for negligent misrepresentations may lie when parties' relationship suggests closer degree of trust and reliance than that of ordinary buyer and seller.

[15] Federal Civil Procedure 2515
170Ak2515

Fact issue existed as to whether relationship between prospective licensee who sold designer lighters in duty-free shops in United States and sought license to expand sales to reach American market generally and licensor which had superior knowledge as to a prior contract relationship with prospective licensee's competitor gave rise to a duty on part of licensor not to make negligent representations relative to its ability to grant license to market lighters in United States, precluding summary judgment on prospective licensee's claim of negligent misrepresentations.

[16] Fraud 28
184k28

Prospective licensee's assumption that there were no existing licenses permitting anyone to sell designer lighters in United States arising from licensing agent's advice for prospective licensee to deal directly with foreign licensor did not give rise to cause of action against licensing agent for fraud or negligent misrepresentation as to licensor's ability to grant license to sell designer lighters in United States.

*662 Solin & Breindel, New York City, by Howard Breindel, Daniel R. Solin, New York City, for plaintiff.

Greenbaum, Wolff & Ernst, New York City, for defendants Pierre Cardin, S.A.R.L. de Gestion Pierre Cardin, Max J. Bellest, and Coordinating Office, Inc.; Sydney J. Schwartz,

New York City, of counsel.

MEMORANDUM

TENNEY, District Judge.

This is an action brought by Marvin W. Morse that charges violations of the antitrust laws, breach of contract, tortious interference with a contract, fraud, and negligence. In the instant motion, defendants Max J. Bellest and Coordinating Office, Inc. ("Bellest defendants") and Pierre Cardin and S.A.R.L. de Gestion Pierre Cardin ("Cardin defendants") ask for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("Rules"). Defendant Bellest individually moves for a stay of deposition. For the reasons set forth below, summary judgment is granted in favor of the Bellest defendants on the fourth and fifth causes of action only; it is denied as to all other defendants on all causes of action and denied as to the Bellest defendants on the other causes of action against them. Bellest's motion to stay his deposition is also denied.

The Parties

Plaintiff Morse is a New York citizen who negotiated with the Cardin defendants to obtain a license for the sale of Pierre Cardin lighters. Defendant Pierre Cardin is a French citizen and is a world-famous designer of men's and women's clothing, jewelry, and related product lines. Defendant S.A.R.L. de Gestion Pierre Cardin ("SARL"), also a French citizen, is the designer in corporate form. Defendant Max Bellest is a New York citizen. He is employed by and is the sole shareholder of Bellest Corporation, a New York entity that, as an independent contractor, represents SARL in the United States and Canada by supervising licensing agreements between Cardin and the Canadian and American licensees. Defendant Coordinating Office, Inc. ("CO"), incorporated at Bellest's suggestion, is likewise a New York corporation that coordinates promotions, advertising, and merchandising by American licensees of Pierre Cardin trademarked products.

Defendant Swank, Inc. is incorporated in Delaware and has its executive offices in New York. Swank manufactures, distributes, and sells jewelry and related items under the Pierre Cardin trademark. It has exclusive distribution rights in the United States on some items of men's and women's jewelry and leather accessories.

Background

Late in 1975, plaintiff Morse began selling Pierre Cardin lighters in duty-free shops in the United States through an unexplained arrangement with Cardin. Based on his success in selling the lighters in this market, Morse decided to expand to reach the American market generally. In August 1977 he contacted CO to begin negotiating for such a Pierre Cardin license. CO referred Morse to the Cardin office in Paris. During the next several months, Morse and Herve Duquesnoy of SARL negotiated over terms of the prospective license; however, in a letter dated March 24, 1977, Duquesnoy informed Morse that the negotiations were at an end because the license had been promised to defendant Swank. Letter from Herve Duquesnoy to Mr. Morse (sic), appended as Exhibit I of Affidavit of Howard Breindel, sworn to February 16, 1978 ("Breindel Affidavit").

In his letter terminating negotiations with Morse, Duquesnoy referred to a long-standing relationship between Cardin and Swank that began at least as early as October 13, 1967 when those two parties entered a licensing agreement for the manufacture and sale of men's jewelry and related product lines. The term jewelry was understood to include lighters. The agreement *663 gave Swank exclusive rights to market the specified items except, as is relevant here, "to jewelry manufactured of precious metals or containing precious stones, retailing at a price in excess of $75.00 per item." Cardin-Swank Agreement, dated October 13, 1967, P 1, appended to Cardin Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment ("1967 Agreement").[FN1] However, while Swank began exploring the marketing of Cardin lighters in 1975, See Affidavit of John A.

Tulin, sworn to April 1978, Exhibits A, B (letters from prospective suppliers of Cardin lighters providing requested prices) ("Tulin Affidavit"), not until March 8, 1977 did Marshall Tulin, vice-president of Swank, write Pierre Cardin to tell him of Swank's decision to consider the sale of lighters as provided for in the 1967 Agreement. Two weeks later, SARL, through Duquesnoy, terminated further negotiations with Morse.

FN1. An agreement amending the original agreement was reached on May 25, 1976. Although the new agreement altered the terms of the exclusivity, it retained a price demarcation between exclusive and nonexclusive items. The penultimate sentence of P 1 of the 1967 Agreement (quoted in the text, Supra) was amended to read: Notwithstanding the foregoing, the license hereby granted with respect to sterling silver men's jewelry is hereby limited to exclude such jewelry retailing at normal mark-up for $55 or more during the period ending April 12, 1978, $60 or more during the period April 13, 1978 through April 12, 1980, and $65 or more after April 12, 1980. Swank-Cardin Amended Agreement, dated May 25, 1976, P 1(d), at 3, appended to Bellest Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment.

The Complaint

The amended complaint [FN2] alleges five causes of action. The first is founded on an antitrust theory wherein Morse sues all five defendants under Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. s 1 (as amended). He alleges a combination and conspiracy in unreasonable restraint of trade to bar him from marketing Pierre Cardin lighters and thereby competing with Swank, claiming that Cardin's breached agreement, refusal to deal, and consummation of "the Swank Contract" were all acts in pursuit of the combination and conspiracy to restrain trade. Morse claims injury to himself, restrained competition in the distribution and sale of Pierre Cardin lighters and in the use of the Pierre Cardin trademark, and reduced consumer choice.

FN2. The original complaint was amended to correct the title of Coordinating Office, Inc.

Morse's second cause of action appears to be aimed at Pierre Cardin alone. [FN3] He alleges that on or about March 10, 1977 Morse and Cardin entered an agreement for the distribution of Pierre Cardin lighters and that Cardin breached that agreement shortly thereafter. This cause of action relates to the third, which alleges that Swank, Bellest, and CO tortiously interfered with the Morse-Cardin agreement.

FN3. The amended complaint directs the second cause of action against defendant Cardin alone, Amended Complaint P 24 (heading), but in his papers, plaintiff states that the second cause of action is against Cardin and SARL. Affidavit of Howard Breindel, sworn to February 16, 1978, P 6 ("Breindel Affidavit").

The fourth and fifth causes of action are pleaded alternatively to each other and only if the Swank contract is found to have been executed prior to the purported agreement with Morse. On one theory, Morse charges that Pierre Cardin and the Bellest defendants defrauded him by making materially false statements as to Cardin's trademark rights. Alternatively, Morse alleges injury by the same defendants through negligent misrepresentations.

Jurisdiction over the antitrust cause of action is founded on Sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. ss 15, 26 (as amended). Jurisdiction over the second through the fifth causes of action is founded in diversity, 28 U.S.C. s 1332, and in the doctrine of pendent jurisdiction.[FN4]

FN4. The Bellest defendants' arguments that as to them the Court lacks jurisdiction over the third, fourth, and fifth causes of action are without merit. While they rightly assert that there is no diversity between Morse and them, the causes of action are pendent to the antitrust claim, and the pendent claims survive in this Court at least as long as the antitrust claim remains viable. United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966).

*664 The Cardin and the Bellest defendants have filed separate motions for summary judgment, but they join in most contentions. Their version of the facts centers on an alleged "mistake" by Herve Duquesnoy, a young Frenchman in the SARL organization: according to the defendants, Duquesnoy negotiated with Morse over the license to sell Pierre Cardin lighters without realizing that Cardin had previously licensed Swank to sell such lighters, and when Duquesnoy became aware of the other agreement, he so informed Morse and referred him to Swank for any further discussions.

This innocent explanation is buttressed by several legal arguments, particularly that the record establishes that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest; that the defendants never restrained trade nor conspired to, but that Cardin acted within his trademark rights in refusing to grant another lighter license; that the Morse-Cardin negotiations never ripened into an agreement and, accordingly, no agreement was breached; that no defendant induced a breach of any agreement; and that any mistakes by anyone in the Cardin organization do not constitute fraud or negligent misrepresentation.

Discussion

Summary Judgment

[1][2] The standards for summary judgment in the Second Circuit have changed over time. Compare Arnstein v. Porter, 154 F.2d 464, 468 (2d Cir. 1946) (deny summary judgment if there is the "slightest doubt" as to the facts), With Beal v. Lindsay, 468 F.2d 287, 291 (2d Cir. 1972) (when movant shows adversary's claim is baseless, opponent "must adduce factual material which raises a substantial question of the veracity or completeness of the movant's showing or presents countervailing facts"), And Dressler v. MV Sandpiper, 331 F.2d 130, 132-33 (2d Cir. 1964) (respondent's vague and conclusory allegations would not be sufficient under Rule 56 to deny summary judgment). Even with the more liberal interpretation of Rule 56, however, the "fundamental maxim" remains, as Chief Judge Kaufman pointed out, that "the court cannot on such motions try issues of fact; it can only determine whether there are issues to be tried." Heyman v. Commerce and Industry Insurance Co., 524 F.2d 1317, 1319-20 (2d Cir. 1975). A court must resolve ambiguities against the movant and draw reasonable inferences in favor of the opponent, with the burden on the moving party of establishing that there are no genuine issues of material fact to be tried. Id. at 1320 (citations omitted).

Real Party in Interest

[3] Defendants contend that Morse is not the real party in interest because the Morse negotiations for a Cardin license were allegedly on behalf of Morse Typewriter Co. or a group of joint venturers, but not with Morse individually. Affidavit of Sydney J. Schwartz, sworn to February 28, 1978, P 5(a) ("Schwartz Affidavit"). In response, Morse offers an assignment of claims from his apparent partners or co-venturers,[FN5] an assignment which the Bellest defendants, in turn, challenge for lack of specificity (citing failure to identify the cause of action and the business to which the assignment refers), failure to include a third venturer and failure to indicate the assignment as the basis for this suit. Bellest Defendants' Memorandum at 5-6. Their charges are insufficient, however, to demonstrate the invalidity of the assignment *665 as a matter of law. New York law, to which the Court must look to measure the effectiveness of the assignment, does not take a rigid view of assignments. As long as the claim can be transferred, "the transfer . . . passes an interest, which the transferee may enforce by an action." N.Y.Gen. Oblig. Law s 13-105 (McKinney 1978). "Any claim or demand can be transferred," Id. s 13-101, unless it runs afoul of certain exceptions that defendants have not shown to be applicable. At best the challenges to the assignment merely point to factual matters unclear on the record.

FN5. The assignment states that the assignors hereby assign to the assignee their entire, (sic) right, title and interest in and to that certain incorporated business formed to distribute Pierre Cardin lighters in the United States, including but not limited to certain causes of action against Pierre Cardin, Pierre Cardin (USA), Pierre Cardin Distributing Office Swank, Inc. (sic) and other related entities and individuals. The assignment includes "all actions, causes of action, suits, debts, dues, sums of money, damages, judgments, agreements, promises, claims and demands whatsoever." Assignment of Claims to Marvin W. Morse, dated July 1, 1977, appended as Exhibit K to Breindel Affidavit.

Antitrust Cause of Action

Morse sues all five defendants for a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. s 1 (as amended).[FN6] To show such a violation, Morse relies partly on the alleged breach of the purported Morse-Cardin agreement, a breach allegedly committed at the request of and pursuant to an agreement with Swank, Morse's prospective competitor. Breindel Affidavit P 4. The defendants deny not only any combination or inducement to breach, but also the very existence of a Morse-Cardin agreement. Cardin Defendants' Memorandum at 4; Bellest Defendants' Memorandum at 3-4. In rebuttal, Morse notes the absence of affidavits from, among others, Cardin and Duquesnoy, those in the best position to refute the existence of a Morse-Cardin agreement. Breindel Affidavit P 13.

FN6. Section 1 reads in pertinent part: "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal."

Morse further bolsters his claim that Swank was acting behind the scenes to bar him from competition by emphasizing Swank's belated interest in selling Pierre Cardin lighters, an interest that purportedly arose only after the alleged Morse-Cardin agreement and ten years after Swank could have begun to merchandise lighters. Swank shows its long-standing interest in selling that product by offering price lists obtained from potential suppliers of lighters; both lists are dated before the Morse-Cardin negotiations. Tulin Affidavit, Exhibits A, B.

Giving Morse the benefit of all inferences on the record, as the Court must do on a motion for summary judgment, Swank's interest, although aroused earlier than Morse alleged, may possibly have ripened only in response to Morse's preparing to sell and selling Pierre Cardin lighters in or to duty-free shops in the United States; indeed, as of this complaint, Swank has not yet sold Pierre Cardin lighters in the United States. Cardin Defendants' Reply Memorandum at 5. What motivated Swank's renewed interest is an issue of fact not resolved on the record as it stands.

The defendants rely principally on the 1967 Swank-Cardin Agreement to establish that the Cardin defendants were bound to Swank on the lighter license; from this they argue that they acted innocently, pursuant to agreement, and not in anticompetitive collusion to bar Morse from the market in Pierre Cardin lighters. Morse responds, however, that because the 1967 Agreement is nonexclusive as to high-priced items i. e., jewelry, including lighters, to retail for more than $75.00, 1967 Agreement P 1 Cardin could have granted a license to Morse without violating the 1967 Swank-Cardin Agreement. Breindel Affidavit PP 15-16.

[4] Defendants also support their antitrust defense by asserting that Cardin can license whomever he wishes to exploit the Pierre Cardin trademark. They are correct to the extent that a licensor or manufacturer may refuse to begin a new relationship or to terminate an old one notwithstanding harm to the distributor or prospective distributor providing that there is no combination or conspiracy restraining competition. E. g., United States v. Colgate, 250 U.S. 300, 307, 39 S.Ct. 465, 63 L.Ed. 992 (1919); Oreck Corp. v. Whirlpool Corp., 579 F.2d 126, 133 (2d Cir. 1978) (En banc); House of Materials, Inc. v. Simplicity Pattern Co., 298 F.2d 867 (2d Cir. 1962); *Bay City-Abrahams Brothers, Inc. v. Estee 666 Lauder, Inc., 375 F.Supp. 1206, 1214-17 (S.D.N.Y.1974), and cases cited therein. One prohibition under the "restraining competition" rubric is a combination or conspiracy to restrain Competitors. United States v. General Motors

Corp., 384 U.S. 127, 140, 86 S.Ct. 1321, 16 L.Ed.2d 415 (1966); Bowen v. New York News, Inc., 522 F.2d 1242, 1257 (2d Cir. 1975), Cert. denied, 425 U.S. 936, 96 S.Ct. 1667, 48 L.Ed.2d 177 (1976); Jacobson & Co. v. Armstrong Cork Co., 433 F.Supp. 1210, 1213-14 (S.D.N.Y.1977).[FN7]

FN7. The Cardin defendants make an oblique allegation that the sale or non-sale of Cardin lighters could not affect prices in the market. Cardin Defendants' Reply Memorandum at 5. The import of the allegation is unclear, but it is incorrect to the extent that it suggests that the apparent absence of the price competition factor removes this case from the reach of the Sherman Act. See United States v. General Motors Corp., supra (restraint upon price competition inherent in the combination was an additional factor in condemning defendants' actions). That price competition not now implicated in the instant case, however, will preclude resort to the Per se rule, at least on the basis of price, and make Morse's problems of proof far more difficult. See General Motors, supra, 384 U.S. at 147, 86 S.Ct. 1321; Oreck Corp. v. Whirlpool Corp., supra, at 130. Oreck Corp., a recent En banc decision of the Second Circuit, mandates resort to rule of reason, rather than Per se, analysis in cases of vertical agreements to protect distributors from competition. In Oreck Corp., Whirlpool, manufacturer of vacuums, and Sears, Roebuck & Co. ("Sears"), Whirlpool's principal distributor, allegedly agreed that the agreement with Oreck, another distributor, should be terminated. The court of appeals concluded that the vertical agreement, even with the purpose or effect of removing Sears' competitor, could not alone amount to a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. To do so, the agreement must be "anticompetitive in purpose or effect," a phrase the Second Circuit interprets to refer to its effect on the industry as a whole, not the effect on the excluded competitor alone. Id., at 133. To have shown a violation, Oreck Corp. would have to have established that the alleged agreement to exclude it either promoted a Whirlpool monopoly in the vacuum cleaner industry or gave Sears a market position that enabled it to raise prices even with interbrand competition. Id. at 130 n. 5. Whether Oreck Corp. can be properly distinguished from the case at bar depends on the record as it evolves in this case.

[5] On the factual questions whether there was a combination or conspiracy and whether it had the intent or effect of restraining competition, Morse has so far provided meager support. The Court is mindful, however, of the Supreme Court's caution concerning summary judgment in antitrust cases: "We believe that summary procedures should be used sparingly in complex antitrust litigation where motive and intent play leading roles, the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged conspirators, and hostile witnesses thicken the plot." Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 368 U.S. 464, 473, 82 S.Ct. 486, 491, 7 L.Ed.2d 458 (1962) (footnote omitted). The instant case cannot be thought of as complex antitrust litigation, but motive and intent are key questions, and the answers are in the hands of the alleged coconspirators. Accordingly, Morse should have the opportunity to pursue his claims through discovery, and the defendants' motions for summary judgment on the antitrust cause of action are denied with leave to renew after completion of discovery. Morse, by further discovery, including but not limited to depositions of Swank officials and Max Bellest, shall "set forth specific facts" as to the alleged combination or conspiracy among the defendants. A fortiori, the motion to vacate the notice of deposition of Bellest is denied.

Breach of Contract

[6][7][8] Summary judgment is also denied on the breach of contract cause of action. The principal question whether the parties intended a binding agreement, C. M. Gridley & Sons, Inc. v. Northeastern Consolidated Co., 36 A.D.2d 1001, 321 N.Y.S.2d 171 (3d Dep't 1971) is unclear on the record. Although parties may withdraw from mere negotiations with impunity, Brause v. Goldman, 10 A.D.2d 328, 199 N.Y.S.2d 606 (1st Dep't 1960), Aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 620, 210 N.Y.S.2d 225, 172 N.E.2d 78 (1961), this Court cannot say as a matter of law that the Morse-Cardin negotiations had not ripened into a contract. The absence of a formal contract and the continuing negotiation, at least as to the prospective suppliers of the Pierre Cardin lighters, on which basis the *667 Cardin defendants attack this cause of action, do not preclude the meeting of minds necessary to constitute a binding agreement. References to the parties' choice of terms in the correspondence between them do not clearly establish whether or not an agreement had been reached. The defendants have provided no authority that disposes of this question.

Tortious Interference

[9][10] As to Morse's third cause of action, the Bellest defendants suggest elliptically that there can be no tortious interference because of the 1967 Swank-Cardin Agreement, Schwartz Affidavit, sworn to January 11, 1978, P 4, apparently reasoning that because of that allegedly exclusive agreement, Cardin and Morse could not have reached a separate agreement, and ergo that there could not have been a Morse-Cardin agreement with which to interfere. Assuming arguendo that is the case, the cause of action is viable because the tortious interference prohibition extends to mere negotiations. Union Car Advertising Co. v. Collier, 263 N.Y. 386, 401, 189 N.E. 463, 469 (1934); Muller v. Star Supermarkets, Inc., 49 App.Div.2d 696, 370 N.Y.S.2d 768 (4th Dep't 1975); Hardy v. Erickson, 36 N.Y.S.2d 823, 825 (Sup.Ct.1942). "The principle underlying the rule is that he who has a reasonable expectancy of a contract has a property right which may not be invaded maliciously or unjustifiably." Id. at 826.

[11] Whether the Bellest defendants and Swank maliciously interfered with Morse's negotiations or contract with Cardin is a factual question. The answer rests in the hands of the defendants; Morse should have the opportunity through discovery to gain what proof he needs to establish his claim. The proof that will make or break his cause of action may well be revealed in deposing the defendants on the antitrust theory and its conspiracy element. Morse must attempt to establish, if defendants did interfere, whether they did so maliciously and by what means, See Susskind v. Ipco Hospital Supply Corp., 49 A.D.2d 915, 373 N.Y.S.2d 627 (2d Dep't 1975), and whether they had justification for interfering. See Felsen v. Sol Cafe

Manufacturing Corp., 24 N.Y.2d 682, 301 N.Y.S.2d 610, 249 N.E.2d 459 (1969). Questions of fact remaining to be addressed, summary judgment on this cause of action is denied.

Fraud and Negligent Misrepresentations

[12][13] Finally, as to the causes of action based on fraudulent or negligent misrepresentations, summary judgment is denied as to Pierre Cardin, but granted as to the Bellest defendants. The Cardin defendants deny an intent to defraud; they argue that a mistake was made. Cardin Defendants' Memorandum at 9. Scienter, however, includes not only knowing misrepresentations, but also reckless indifference to error, a pretense of knowledge, and the misrepresentation of a material fact susceptible of accurate knowledge, but stated as true on personal knowledge of the representor. Coolite Corp. v. American Cyanamid Co., 52 A.D.2d 486, 384 N.Y.S.2d 808 (1st Dep't 1976); Burgundy Basin Inn, Ltd. v. Watkins Glen Grand Prix Corp., 51 A.D.2d 140, 145-46, 379 N.Y.S.2d 873, 879 (4th Dep't 1976); Bailey v. Diamond International Corp., 47 A.D.2d 363, 367 N.Y.S.2d 107 (3d Dep't 1975); Skrine v. Staiman, 30 A.D.2d 707, 292 N.Y.S.2d 275 (2d Dep't 1968), Aff'd, 23 N.Y.2d 946, 298 N.Y.S.2d 727, 246 N.E.2d 529 (1969). The circumstances surrounding the representations by Herve Duquesnoy, the SARL employee, and by Cardin himself, as communicated by Duquesnoy, See Breindel Affidavit, Exhibit E, do not reveal themselves on the record. Those circumstances and the defendants' scienter remain factual questions unclear on the record. Defendants' arguments to the effect that the failure to perform an agreement is not fraud, Cardin Defendants' Memorandum at 9, miss the gravamen of Morse's claim and need not be addressed.

[14][15] As to the negligence claim, the Cardin defendants assert that the cause of action must fail because the defendants owed no duty to Morse. Cardin Defendants' Memorandum at 10-11. A cause of *668 action for negligent misrepresentations may lie, however, "(w)hen the parties' relationship suggests a closer degree of trust and reliance than that of ordinary buyer and seller." Coolite Corp. v. American Cyanamid Co., supra, 52 A.D.2d at 488, 384 N.Y.S.2d at 811 (citations omitted). In Coolite Corp., the court held that the formation of a new corporation created for the sole purpose of marketing a new product attested to a more intimate relationship, at least in terms of reliance and trustworthiness, than that of the ordinary buyer and seller. Morse's relationship with Cardin based on the former's lighter sales in duty-free shops, Morse Affidavit P 2, the superior knowledge of the Cardin defendants as to Cardin's precise contractual relationship with Swank, and Morse's plan to form a new company to market the Pierre Cardin lighters, Morse Affidavit P 8; Breindel Affidavit, Exhibit D, may support the inference of an "intimate relationship" that would invoke more rigorous obligations. They are at least sufficient bases to deny summary judgment as to the Cardin defendants.

[16] However, summary judgment is granted the Bellest defendants on the fourth and fifth causes of action. Morse has shown only that CO referred Morse to the Cardin office in Paris to negotiate a lighter license, Morse Affidavit PP 3, 9-10, and that Bellest confirmed to Morse that the Cardin defendants had terminated negotiations with Morse. Morse asserts that "(a)s a result of Mr. Wargo (sic) (of CO) advising me to deal directly with the Pierre Cardin office in Paris I assumed that there were no existing licenses permitting anyone to sell Pierre Cardin lighters in the United States." Morse Affidavit P 3. Morse's assumption is too tenuous to give rise to a cause of action in fraud or negligent misrepresentation. No actual misrepresentations are even alleged as to these defendants, and they owed Morse no duty. Further discovery on these claims would serve no useful purpose because any intimate relationship with these defendants and any alleged misrepresentations by them would be well known to Morse and not within the peculiar knowledge of the defendants.

In summary, the defendants' motions for summary judgment and a stay of deposition are denied as to all defendants on all causes of action, except that the Bellest defendants' motion for summary judgment on the fourth and fifth causes of action is granted.

So ordered.

459 F.Supp. 660

END OF DOCUMENT

60

Thomas Murphy et al., Appellants,
v.
Donald C. Kuhn et al., Respondents.

Court of Appeals of New York

Argued June 4, 1997

Decided June 27, 1997

SUMMARY

Appeal, by permission of the Court of Appeals, from an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the Fourth Judicial Department, entered September 27, 1996, which affirmed an order of the Supreme Court (Robert J. Lunn, J.), entered in Monroe County, granting a motion by defendants for summary judgment and dismissing the complaint.

Murphy v Kuhn, 231 AD2d 865, affirmed.

HEADNOTES

Insurance--Agents and Brokers--Liability for Failure to Advise Insured of Possible Additional Insurance Needs (1) In an action against an insurance agent by a former customer for tortious misrepresentation and breach of implied contract arising from the failure of the defendant insurance agent to advise plaintiff as to possible additional insurance coverage needs and predicated upon an asserted special relationship and special level of advisory responsibility, defendant was correctly granted summary judgment because no special relationship was established on the record. Generally, insurance agents have a common-law duty to obtain requested coverage for their clients within a reasonable time or inform the client of the inability to do so; however, they have no continuing duty to advise, guide or direct a client to obtain additional coverage. Even assuming the general applicability of the "special relationship" theory in the customer-agent automobile insurance coverage setting, the relationship between these parties was insufficiently established to warrant or justify this case surviving a defense summary judgment motion. As a matter of law, this record does not rise to the high level required to recognize the special relationship threshold that might superimpose on defendants the initiatory advisement duty, beyond the ordinary placement of requested insurance responsibilities. Rather, the record in the instant case presents only the standard consumer-agent insurance placement relationship, albeit over an extended period of time. Exceptional and particularized situations may arise in which insurance agents, through their conduct or by express or implied contract with customers and clients, may assume or acquire duties in addition to those fixed at common law; however, whether such additional responsibilities should be recognized and given legal effect is governed by the particular relationship between the parties and is best determined on a case-by-case basis.

TOTAL CLIENT SERVICE LIBRARY REFERENCES

Am Jur 2d, Insurance, §§ 138, 139. *267

NY Jur 2d, Insurance, §§ 437, 440, 444.

ANNOTATION REFERENCES

See ALR Index under Insurance Agents and Brokers.

POINTS OF COUNSEL

Faraci, Lange, Johns, Regan & Schwarz, L. L. P., Rochester (Paul K. Lange and Matthew F. Belanger of counsel), for appellants. I. The courts below erred by ignoring applicable New York law which holds that the existence of a special relationship between parties can result in the assumption of legal duties not existing at common law. (Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 208 AD2d 1132; Erwig v Cook Agency, 173 AD2d 439; Hardt v Brink, 192 F Supp 879; United Safety v Consolidated Edison Co., 213 AD2d 283; Kimmell v Schaefer, 89 NY2d 257; Pellegrini v Landmark Travel Group, 165 Misc 2d 589; Ricciardi v Frank, 163 Misc 2d 337; Cohen v Heritage Motor Tours, 205 AD2d 105; Florence v Goldberg, 44 NY2d 189; Parvi v City of Kingston, 41 NY2d 553.) II. The overwhelming majority of States which have addressed this issue have held that the existence of a special relationship between an insurance agent and his client can result in the assumption of a legal duty to advise the client on coverage matters. (Hardt v Brink, 192 F Supp 879.) III. The courts below erred in granting summary judgment to Kuhn because a jury properly instructed as to the elements of a special relationship could find that Kuhn breached an assumed duty to advise Murphy about his insurance coverage.

Lustig & Brown, L. L. P., Buffalo (Maurice L. Sykes and Katherine A. Fijal of counsel), for respondents. I. Defendants-respondents were under no duty to advise, guide or direct plaintiffs to obtain coverage other than that provided. (Hjemdahl-Monsen v Faulkner, 204 AD2d 516; Rogers v Urbanke, 194 AD2d 1024; Blonsky v Allstate Ins. Co., 128 Misc 2d 981; Harnish v Naples & Assocs., 181 AD2d 1012; Callahan v American Motorists Ins. Co., 56 Misc 2d 734; Downey v Allstate Ins. Co., 638 F Supp 322; Erwig v Cook Agency, 173 AD2d 439; Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 208 AD2d 1132; Barco Auto Leasing Corp. v Montano, 215 AD2d 617.) II. Based on sound policy considerations which mitigate against imposing a duty based on a special relationship, New York courts do not recognize a special relationship between insurance agent and his or her customer. (Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. *268 Co., 208 AD2d 1132; Video Corp. v Flatto Assocs., 85 AD2d 448, 58 NY2d 1026; Flora's Card Shop v Krantz & Co., 111 Misc 2d 907, 91 AD2d 938; Blonsky v Allstate Ins. Co., 128 Misc 2d 981; Sanitoy, Inc. v Shapiro, 705 F Supp 152; Erwig v Cook Agency, 173 AD2d 439; Callahan v American Motorists Ins. Co., 56 Misc 2d 734; Chaim v Benedict, 216 AD2d 347; Brown v Stinson, 821 F Supp 910; Mathis v Yondata Corp., 125 Misc 2d 383.) III. If this Court chooses to revise well-settled New York law and acknowledge a special relationship may exist between a customer and an insurance agent, a special relationship did not exist under the facts of this case. (Congress Fin. Corp. v Morrell & Co., 790 F Supp 459; American Protein Corp. v AB Volvo, 844 F2d 56; Polycast Tech. Corp. v Uniroyal, Inc., 792 F Supp 244; Accusystems, Inc. v Honeywell Information Sys., 580 F Supp 474; Sanitoy, Inc. v Shapiro, 705 F Supp 152.) IV. Webster Golf Course, Inc. does not have standing to maintain a suit against defendants. (Sierra Club v Morton, 405 US 727.)

OPINION OF THE COURT

Bellacosa, J.

The question for this case is whether an insurance agent should be liable to a former customer for tortious misrepresentation and breach of implied contract. The alleged wrongdoing is a failure of the defendant insurance agent to advise plaintiff Thomas Murphy as to possible additional insurance coverage needs. The theory of the lawsuit and the asserted duty is a special relationship and special level of advisory responsibility.

The Appellate Division affirmed an order of Supreme Court, which granted defendants' motion for summary judgment and dismissed the complaint. Plaintiffs appeal pursuant to leave granted by this Court. We affirm the order of the Appellate Division because no special relationship was established on this record.

Plaintiffs Thomas Murphy and Webster Golf Course, Inc. sued defendants Donald C. Kuhn, Kuhn & Pedulla Agency, Inc., and its predecessor Roman A. Kuhn Agency, alleging professional negligence and breach of implied contract. This dispute originates in a 1991 automobile accident in Florida involving Murphy's son. One person died and several others suffered serious injuries as a result of the accident. At that time, the title to the son's car was in his father's name and the personal insurance was placed under the commercial automobile policy covering Murphy's business, Webster Golf Course, Inc. After exhausting the $500,000 policy limit to settle the car *269 accident claims, Thomas Murphy assertedly paid an additional $194,429.50 plus $7,500 in attorneys' fees.

Then, he sued these defendants to recover the additional sums he had to pay personally.

Defendants began providing the property, casualty and liability insurance to plaintiffs in 1973 in connection with their golf business. Beginning in 1977, defendant Donald Kuhn also handled all of Murphy's personal insurance needs, providing him with both homeowners insurance and personal automobile coverage. In 1979, plaintiff Thomas Murphy and his partner, Edward Rieflin, completed their purchase of the Happy Acres Golf Course and formed Webster Golf Course, Inc. Happy Acres had been a client of the Roman A. Kuhn Agency since 1957.

In 1990, Kuhn placed personal automobile coverage for Murphy with The Hartford, as insurer. Later that year, Hartford notified Murphy that his coverage was in danger of cancellation due to the poor driving records of his children. Murphy then transferred the insurance covering his son's car, which was registered and titled in Murphy's name, from Murphy's personal policy to Webster Golf Course's commercial automobile insurance policy. Murphy testified at his deposition that it was his standard arrangement to place title and register his children's cars in his name. From 1984 until the time of the accident, the liability limits on the commercial policy were $250,000 per person and $500,000 total per accident. Murphy never requested higher liability coverage for his personal and family automobile insurance needs, which were subsumed within the commercial automobile liability policy.

Supreme Court concluded that, absent a request by the customer, an insurance agent "owes no continuing duty to advise, guide or direct the customer to obtain additional coverage." Therefore, acknowledging that on this record plaintiffs never specifically requested defendants to increase the liability limits on the commercial automobile policy, the court held that defendants owed no special duty of affirmative advisement to plaintiffs. The court also declined to adopt plaintiffs' "special relationship" theory.

Plaintiffs propose that insurance agents can assume or acquire legal duties not existing at common law by entering into a special relationship of trust and confidence with their customers. Specifically, plaintiffs contend that a special relationship developed from a long, continuing course of business between plaintiffs and defendant insurance agent, generating *270 special reliance and an affirmative duty to advise with regard to appropriate or additional coverage.

Generally, the law is reasonably settled on initial principles that insurance agents have a common-law duty to obtain requested coverage for their clients within a reasonable time or inform the client of the inability to do so; however, they have no continuing duty to advise, guide or direct a client to obtain additional coverage (see, Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 208 AD2d 1132, 1133; Hjemdahl-Monsen v Faulkner, 204 AD2d 516, 517; Rogers v Urbanke, 194 AD2d 1024, 1025; Harnish v Naples & Assocs., 181 AD2d 1012, 1013; Erwig v Cook Agency, 173 AD2d 439). Notably, no New York court has applied plaintiffs' proffered "special relationship" analysis to add such continuing duties to the agent-insured relationship (see, Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 208 AD2d 1132, 1133-1134, supra).

Recently, however, this Court recognized a special relationship in a commercial controversy, involving no generally recognized professional relationship (see, Kimmell v Schaefer, 89 NY2d 257, 260). We held that the relationship between the parties "under the circumstances [there] required defendant to speak with care" (id., at 260). Kimmell cautions, however, that "liability for negligent misrepresentation has been imposed only on those persons who possess unique or specialized expertise, or who are in a special position of confidence and trust with the injured party such that reliance on the negligent misrepresentation is justified" (id., at 263). For example, "[p]rofessionals, such as lawyers and engineers, by virtue of their training and expertise, may have special relationships of confidence and trust with their clients, and in certain situations we have imposed liability for negligent misrepresentation when they have failed to speak with care" (id., at 263, citing Ossining Union Free School Dist. v Anderson LaRocca Anderson, 73 NY2d 417 [engineering consultants]; White v Guarente, 43 NY2d 356 [accountants]; Ultramares Corp. v Touche, 255 NY 170 [accountants]; Glanzer v Shepard, 233 NY 236 [public weighers]).

The Court concluded that given "the absence of obligations arising from the speaker's professional status" in the commercial context, "there must be some identifiable source of a special duty of care" in order to impose tort liability (id., at 264). "The existence of such a special relationship may give rise to an exceptional duty regarding commercial speech and justifiable reliance on such speech" (id.). We determined, to be *271 sure, that "[w]hether the nature and caliber of the relationship between the parties is such that the injured party's reliance on a negligent misrepresentation is justified generally raises an issue of fact" (id.). It is important to note that Kimmell is significantly distinguishable from the instant case, which involves an insurance agent-insured relationship and an alleged failure to speak. We therefore allude to Kimmell for its general relevance and disclaim any implication of a direct, precedential applicability in the insurance relationships context.

Even assuming the general applicability of the "special relationship" theory in the customer-agent automobile insurance coverage setting, we conclude that the relationship between these parties was insufficiently established to warrant or justify this case surviving a defense summary judgment motion. As a matter of law, this record does not rise to the high level required to recognize the special relationship threshold that might superimpose on defendants the initiatory advisement duty, beyond the ordinary placement of requested insurance responsibilities. Rather, the record in the instant case presents only the standard consumer-agent insurance placement relationship, albeit over an extended period of time. Plaintiffs' plight does not warrant transforming his difficulty into a new, expanded tort opportunity for peripheral redress. The record does not support plaintiffs' effort in this manner to shift to defendant insurance agent the customer's personal responsibility for initiating, seeking and obtaining appropriate coverage, without something more than is presented here.

We note in this respect that Murphy never asked Kuhn to increase the liability limits on the Webster Golf Course commercial automobile policy. In fact, there is no indication that Murphy ever inquired or discussed with Kuhn any issues involving the liability limits of the automobile policy. Such lack of initiative or personal indifference cannot qualify as legally recognizable or justifiable reliance. Therefore, there was no evidence of reliance on the defendant agent's expertise, as sharply distinguished from Kimmell (contrast, Kimmell v Schaefer, supra, 89 NY2d, at 264).

The absence of reliance is further reflected in Murphy's deposition testimony that it was his standard procedure to simply register his children's cars in his name. Additionally, Murphy's deposition description of his relationship with Kuhn concerning the golf course's general insurance matters shows that he had not met personally with Kuhn to discuss the insurance needs of Webster Golf Course, Inc. for approximately 12 *272 years preceding the accident in question. Rather, his partner Rieflin was the one actively and personally involved in handling the insurance needs of the golf course.

We also note that Murphy's contention that he mistakenly believed that the commercial policy had a $1,000,000 liability limit on all covered vehicles can be given no weight in resolving this dispute on this theory. The liability coverage had remained the same since 1984 and Murphy's deposition testimony failed to establish the basis for his plainly unfounded assumption. Therefore, plaintiffs are not entitled to advance beyond the summary judgment stage of this lawsuit because they failed to establish the existence of a legally cognizable special relationship with their insurance agent in this standard set of circumstances.

Plaintiffs-appellants urge this Court to avoid generally absolving insurance agents from legal principles which subject other individuals to duties beyond those rooted in the common law. They overstate the concern and effect of this decision and the principle that emanates from it. Our decision today does not break any new ground and does not immunize insurance brokers and agents from appropriately assigned duties and responsibilities. Exceptional and particularized situations may arise in which insurance agents, through their conduct or by express or implied contract with customers and clients, may assume or acquire duties in addition to those fixed at common law. As with Kimmell, the issue of whether such additional responsibilities should be recognized and given legal effect is governed by the particular relationship between the parties and is best determined on a case-by-case basis (see, Kimmell v Schaefer, 89 NY2d 257, 264, supra).

Notably, other jurisdictions have recognized such an additional duty of advisement in exceptional situations where, for example, (1) the agent receives compensation for consultation apart from payment of the premiums (see, Sandbulte v Farm Bur. Mut. Ins. Co., 343 NW2d 457, 464 [Iowa]; Nowell v Dawn-Leavitt Agency, 127 Ariz 48, 51, 617 P2d 1164, 1168), (2) there was some interaction regarding a question of coverage, with the insured relying on the expertise of the agent (see, Trupiano v Cincinnati Ins. Co., 654 NE2d 886, 889 [Ind] [applying Michigan law]); or (3) there is a course of dealing over an extended period of time which would have put objectively reasonable insurance agents on notice that their advice was being sought and specially relied on (see, Trotter v State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 297 SC 465, 377 SE2d 343). In these circumstances, *273 insureds bear the burden of proving the specific undertaking (id.). The relationship established in the instant case does not rise to the level of these exceptional situations and we refrain from determining when the special relationship analysis may apply in the insurance context.

We do, however, take note that the uniqueness of customary and ordinary insurance relationships and transactions is manifested by "the absence of obligations arising from the speaker's professional status" with regard to the procurement of additional coverage (Kimmell v Schaefer, supra, 89 NY2d, at 264). As stated, it is well settled that agents have no continuing duty to advise, guide, or direct a client to obtain additional coverage (see, Wied v New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 208 AD2d 1132, 1133, supra). No doubt, therefore, public policy considerations will have to be weighed on the question of whether to override this settled principle by recognizing additional advisement duties on insurance agents and brokers (see, Farmers Ins. Co. v McCarthy, 871 SW2d 82, 85-86 [Mo]). But we do not reach that question here.

Insurance agents or brokers are not personal financial counselors and risk managers, approaching guarantor status (see, id.). Insureds are in a better position to know their personal assets and abilities to protect themselves more so than general insurance agents or brokers, unless the latter are informed and asked to advise and act (id.). Furthermore, permitting insureds to add such parties to the liability chain might well open flood gates to even more complicated and undesirable litigation. Notably, in a different context, but with resonant relevance, it has been observed that "[u]nlike a recipient of the services of a doctor, attorney or architect ... the recipient of the services of an insurance broker is not at a substantial disadvantage to question the actions of the provider of services" (Video Corp. v Flatto Assocs., 85 AD2d 448, 456, mod 58 NY2d 1026).

Accordingly, the order of the Appellate Division should be affirmed, with costs.

Chief Judge Kaye and Judges Titone, Smith, Levine, Ciparick and Wesley concur.

Order affirmed, with costs. *274

90 N.Y.2d 266
(Cite as: 90 N.Y.2d 266, *274)

Page 11

Copr. (c) 2005, Randy A. Daniels, Secretary of State, State of New York.

N.Y. 1997.

MURPHY v KUHN

END OF DOCUMENT

61

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

NAIROBI HOLDINGS LIMITED, Plaintiff,
v.
BROWN BROTHERS HARRIMAN & CO. and Lawrence Tucker, Defendants.

No. 02 Civ. 1230(LMM).

May 14, 2003.

Investor in telecommunications company that went bankrupt brought § 10(b) securities fraud action against investment advisor and partner of advisor who was on board of company. Following dismissal in part and leave to replead claims investor raised in original complaint, 2002 WL 31027550, investment advisor and partner moved to dismiss investor's amended complaint for failure to state a claim under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA). The District Court, McKenna, J., held that: (1) one-year statute of limitations applicable to investors' claims arising out of initial investment began to run on date that knowledge of company's solvency was imputed to investors who were on inquiry notice but failed to act; (2) complaint failed to plead claim of fraudulent concealment with sufficient particularity, as required to toll one-year statute of limitations; (3) complaint failed to allege that investment advisor and had motive to commit fraud by misrepresenting company's solvency to investors, as required to state scienter for claim for common law fraud under New York law; and (4) investors' claims that misrepresentations caused them to make second investment in company accrued when misrepresentations were made, and were not barred by one-year statute of limitations.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Limitation of Actions 100(11)
241k100(11)

In determining whether investor in telecommunications company that went bankrupt could maintain § 10(b) securities fraud action against investment advisor and partner of advisor who was on board of company, court had to determine whether investor should have been put on inquiry notice that company's acquisitions greatly increased its debt load and created threat to company's liquidity and solvency, and if so, date upon which duty to inquire arose; more than one year passed between date investors were allegedly put on inquiry notice and date they filed complaint. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 9(e), 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78i(e), 78j(b).

[2] Limitation of Actions 100(11)
241k100(11)

One-year statute of limitations applicable to investors' § 10(b) securities fraud action began to run on claims of alleged misrepresentations about company's solvency on date that knowledge of company's acquisitions of three entities was imputed to investors who were on inquiry notice but failed to act; company made numerous public announcements about its acquisitions of three entities having history of significant net operating losses, company's announcements disclosed amounts of debt company would assume as a result, and public announcements took place after investors' initial investment in company. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 9(e), 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78i(e), 78j(b).

[3] Limitation of Actions 100(11)
241k100(11)

One-year statute of limitations applicable to investors' § 10(b) securities fraud action began to run on claim alleging that advisor and company board member did not inform investors about existence in bond indenture's trigger clause executed in connection with company's acquisition of entity, on date that company publicly announced actual triggering of trigger clause; investors were on inquiry notice because announcement occurred after investors' initial purchase of company's stock, and investment advisor allegedly assured investors that debt would not become due until several years later. Securities Exchange

Act of 1934, §§ 9(e), 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78i(e), 78j(b).

[4] Limitation of Actions 179(2)
241k179(2)

Complaint failed to plead claim of fraudulent concealment with sufficient particularity, as required to state claim that one-year statute of limitations applicable to investors' § 10(b) securities fraud claims was equitably tolled by fraudulent concealment of investment advisor and partner on board of telecommunications company who allegedly induced investors to purchase stock of company before it went bankrupt. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 9(e), 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78i(e), 78j(b).; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[5] Fraud 42
184k42

Complaint failed to allege that investment advisor and partner of advisor who was on board of telecommunications company had motive to commit fraud by misrepresenting company's solvency to investors, as required to state scienter for claim for common law fraud under New York law based on claim that misrepresentations caused investors' initial investment in company before it went bankrupt; only possible financial motives advisor and partner had were to increase investment fees by promoting company's stock and to inflate value of company's stock, desire to artificially inflate stock was not alone evidence of improper motive, and complaint did not allege that stock was sold for profit, identify professional reputational interest that motivated advisor and partner, or allege sufficient facts to support conscious misbehavior or recklessness. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 9(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[6] Limitation of Actions 100(12)
241k100(12)

Investors' § 10(b) securities fraud claims against investment advisor and partner of advisor who was on board of telecommunications company, alleging that misrepresentations made about company's solvency and equities caused investors to make second investment in company, accrued when misrepresentations regarding actual level of company's cash reserves and marketable securities were made, and were not barred by one-year statute of limitations. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, §§ 9(e), 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78i(e), 78j(b).

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

MCKENNA, J.

*1 In its original complaint, plaintiff Nairobi Holdings Limited ("NHL") asserted claims against corporate defendant Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. ("BBH") and individual defendant Lawrence Tucker ("Tucker") alleging federal securities fraud under Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78j ("Section 10(b)") and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5 ("Rule 10b-5"), a violation of Section 206 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, 15 U.S.C. § 80b-6 (the "IAA"), and various state tort law claims. In a previous decision, the Court dismissed certain of these claims with leave to replead. Nairobi Holdings Ltd. v. Brown Bros. Harriman & Co., No. 02 Civ. 1230, 2002 WL 31027550 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2002) ("NHL I"). Presently before the Court is a motion brought by defendants to dismiss the Amended Complaint pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) ("Rule 12(b)(6)") and 9(b) ("Rule 9(b)") and the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (the "PSLRA"). For the reasons set forth below, the motion to dismiss is granted in part without prejudice.

Background

The facts in the Amended Complaint are virtually the same as those set out by the Court in NHL I. 2002 WL 31027550, at *1-3. Plaintiff alleges that defendants made "fraudulent misrepresentations" and "actionable omissions of material information" that "fraudulently induced NHL to invest" in a telecommunications company named World Access Inc. ("WAXS"). (Am.Compl.¶¶ 3, 13.) The alleged purpose of the misrepresentations and omissions was to hide from plaintiff "the rapidly deteriorating condition of WAXS during 2000 and early 2001, prior to WAXS' declaration of bankruptcy in April 2001." (Id. ¶ 3.)

Plaintiff's Amended Complaint differs from the original in several ways. First, plaintiff has omitted certain state law claims that were dismissed in NHL I. 2002 WL 31027550, at *10 (New York's Martin Act precludes claims of negligent misrepresentation and breach of fiduciary duty in the context of sales of securities). Second, plaintiff has removed any claims as to its retention of any investments in WAXS stock, and instead alleges claims based only on its purchases of WAXS stock. (Compare Am. Compl. ¶ 3 with Compl. ¶ 3; Am. Compl. ¶ 76 with Compl. ¶ 55; and Am. Compl. ¶ 77 with Compl. ¶ 56). [FN1] Specifically, on or about February 11, 2000, plaintiff purchased 459,777 WAXS shares in a private placement at a price of $10 million (the "February 2000 investment"). (Am. Compl. ¶ 36.) Between September 2, 2000 and December 11, 2000, plaintiff purchased 520,230 shares of WAXS at a total cost of $3,105,230.59 (the "post-September 2000 investment"). (Id. ¶ 46.) Third, plaintiff has revised and re-asserted a previously dismissed claim for securities fraud arising out of defendants' representation that, as of September 2000, "it was a particularly propitious time to make additional investments in WAXS' equities..." (Id. ¶ 53.) Finally, the Amended Complaint propounds a new claim for securities fraud resulting from certain alleged misrepresentations and omissions made by defendants in or about January 2000 that allegedly induced plaintiff's February 2000 investment. (Id. ¶¶ 24-36, 53-58.) Specifically, defendants allegedly "omitt[ed] to inform NHL of (i) imminent acquisitions that would and did greatly increase WAXS' debt load and the threat to WAXS' liquidity and solvency and (ii) the existence of the 'trigger clause' in the bond indenture executed in connection with the acquisition [by WAXS] of FCI [in August 1999], even when representatives of NHL specifically questioned defendants regarding WAXS' prospective ability to carry its already heavy debts in January 2000...." (Id. ¶ 53.) In addition to these omissions, a Managing Director of BBH, Stephen Owen ("Owen"), allegedly made specific representations to plaintiff in January 2000 that: a) "the FCI debt would not come due until 2008" (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 26, 56); b) "WAXS would be able to carry its debt load with no meaningful risk to WAXS' liquidity and solvency" (id. ¶ 26); and c) "[s]uch debt ... would be 'no problem' for WAXS." (id. ¶¶ 26, 56.)

FN1. In its opposition, plaintiff attempts to argue that it has asserted "a common-law fraud claim for damages ... because plaintiff was fraudulently induced to retain its holdings in WAXS." (Opp'n at 1, n. 1.) However, the Court is unable to find any such allegation in the Amended Complaint and plaintiff did not provide any citation.

*2 Defendants have moved to dismiss the Amended Complaint, focusing particularly upon the claims relating to the February 2000 investment. (Defs. Memo. at 6-21.) Defendants move to dismiss these claims as barred by the one-year statute of limitations and as being unable to meet the specificity requirements of Rule 9(b) and the PSLRA. (Id.) In addition, defendants argue that plaintiff's statutory claims based on the post-September 2000 investment are barred by the statute of limitations because "plaintiff's new factual allegations constitute an acknowledgment by plaintiff that it was on notice, well before February 14, 2001--the date one year before the filing of plaintiff's original Complaint--of the facts about which it alleges defendants made misrepresentations and omissions in September 2000...." (Defs. Memo. at 2.)

Standard of Review

Under Rule 12(b)(6), a complaint will be dismissed if there is a failure "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6). The Court must read the complaint generously accepting the truth of and drawing all reasonable inferences from well-pleaded factual allegations. Mills v. Polar Molecular Corp., 12 F.3d 1170, 1174 (2d Cir.1993). "A court should only dismiss a suit under Rule 12(b)(6) if 'it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.'" Valmonte v. Bane, 18 F.3d 992, 998 (2d Cir.1994) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957)).

On a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, courts may consider "any written instrument attached to [the complaint] as an exhibit or any statements or documents incorporated in it by reference, as well as public disclosure documents required by law to be, and that have been, filed with the SEC, and documents that the plaintiffs either possessed or knew about and upon which they relied in bringing the suit." Rothman v. Gregor, 220 F.3d 81, 88-89 (2d Cir.2000) (citations omitted).

Discussion

I. February 2000 Investment: Statute of Limitations

[1] Defendants argue that plaintiff's statutory claims relating to its February 2000 investment are time-barred because more than one year passed between plaintiff being on notice of these alleged claims and its filing of the original complaint on February 14, 2002. (Defs. Memo. at 6-18.) Section 9(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 provides that "[n]o action shall be maintained to enforce any liability created under this section, unless brought within one year after the discovery of the facts constituting the violation and within three years after such violation." 15 U.S.C. § 78i(e); see also Rothman, 220 F.3d at 96 (Section 9(e) applies to Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 claims). This same limitations period is also applied to claims for rescission under the IAA. Kahn v. Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co., 970 F.2d 1030, 1039 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 986, 113 S.Ct. 494, 121 L.Ed.2d 432 (1992).

*3 The Second Circuit has said that "discovery of for the purposes of this statute of limitations 'includes constructive or inquiry notice, as well as actual notice.'" Rothman, 220 F.3d at 96 (quoting Menowitz v. Brown, 991 F.2d 36, 41-42 (2d Cir.1993)). "[W]hen the circumstances would suggest to an investor of ordinary intelligence the probability that she has been defrauded, a duty of inquiry arises...." Dodds v. Cigna Secs., Inc., 12 F.3d 346, 350 (2d Cir.1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1019, 114 S.Ct. 1401, 128 L.Ed.2d 74 (1994). With regard to this duty to inquire, the Second Circuit has stated:

If the investor makes no inquiry once the duty arises, knowledge will be imputed as of the date the duty arose. However, if the investor makes some inquiry once the duty arises, we will impute knowledge of what an investor 'in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have discovered' concerning the fraud, and in such cases the limitations period begins to run from the date such inquiry should have revealed the fraud.

LC Capital Partners, LP v. Frontier Ins. Group, Inc., 318 F.3d 148, 154 (2d Cir.2003) (citation and quotation omitted.)

In assessing whether a plaintiff should have been put on inquiry notice, courts examine, among other things, "any financial, legal, or other data, including public disclosures in the media about the financial condition of the corporation ... available to the plaintiff providing him 'with sufficient storm warnings'...." Dietrich v. Bauer, 76 F.Supp.2d 312, 343 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (quotation omitted).

Because plaintiff does not allege in the Amended Complaint that it made any inquiry, the only issue to be resolved is the date the duty to inquire arose. [FN2]

FN2. Plaintiff argues in its opposition papers that it exercised reasonable diligence "promptly after August 2000" by "asking its fiduciary advisor and partner [BBH,] about WAXS' financial condition in early September and receiving in response defendants' fraudulent statements of September 2000...." (Opp'n at 13.) However, this is not, despite plaintiff's assertion to the contrary, alleged in the Amended Complaint. The stated purpose of any discussions held between plaintiff and defendants in or about mid-September 2000 was "to explore the possibility of [plaintiff] investing another $5,000,000 directly in WAXS equities." (Am.Compl.¶ 42.) There is no mention in the Amended Complaint of any investigation.

A) Alleged Omission of WAXS' Debt

Acquisition

[2] It is difficult to discern from the Amended Complaint which specific WAXS acquisitions plaintiff claims were omitted by defendants. It appears that plaintiff is referring to three particular companies acquired by WAXS: 1) Star Telecommunications, Inc. ("Star"); 2) TelDaFax A.G. ("TelDaFax"); and 3) Communication Telesystems International (d/b/a WorldxChange Communications) ("WorldxChange"). [FN3] (Am.Compl.¶¶ 30-32.) Plaintiff's theory for this claim appears to be contained in paragraphs 33-34 of the Amended Complaint which states that:

FN3. Plaintiff cannot be referring to WAXS' acquisitions of FCI and LDI because plaintiff alleges that in January 2000, they were already "concerned about the debt assumed by WAXS in connection with the recent acquisitions of FCI and LDI" (Am.Compl.¶ 26, 56) and that defendants omitted to inform NHL of "several additional acquisitions." (Id. ¶ 28, 58.)

WAXS' June 2000 10-Q [FN4] filing correctly stated that the Star, WorldxChange, and TelDaFax acquisitions would 'dramatically increase the business and financial risks [WAXS] must overcome to execute its strategy. Star, WorldxChange and TelDaFax all have a history of significant net operating losses, and [WAXS] is expected to assume approximately $300.0 million in debt upon the consummation of these acquisitions.' However, defendants omitted to inform NHL in any fashion of these imminent acquisitions, and of the increased debt load and threat to WAXS' solvency resulting therefrom, at any time before February 11, 2000.

FN4. The Court believes that plaintiff may have mistakenly stated the date as June 2000, when it is truly referring to the 10-Q filed by WAXS on August 14, 2000. (Id. ¶¶ 33-34.)

*4 It is clear that plaintiff had a duty to inquire by at least August 2000. All three acquisitions and the amounts of debt to be assumed were publicly disclosed on numerous occasions after the February

2000 purchase and well before the February 11, 2001 deadline for filing. For example, the 10-Q filed by WAXS on August 14, 2000, ("the August 2000 10-Q") explicitly stated that: "Star, WorldxChange and TelDaFax all have a history of significant net operating losses, and the Company is expected to assume approximately $300.0 million in debt upon the consummation of the acquisitions." (Harper Decl. Ex. J at 16.) The August 2000 10-Q also stressed the heightened risks involved with these acquisitions: "[a]lthough the STAR, WorldxChange and TelDaFax acquisitions are expected to provide significant benefits to the Company, they also dramatically increase the business and financial risks the Company must overcome to execute its strategy." (Id.)

The WorldxChange acquisition was announced in a press release on February 14, 2000 which also stated that WAXS would "assume approximately $225 million in WorldxChange debt." (Harper Decl. Ex. E at 1.) On February 29, 2000, WAXS filed an 8-K mirroring its press release. (Harper Decl. Ex. F.) In the Amended Complaint, plaintiff admits that BBH informed it of the WorldxChange acquisition through the Annual Review of the 1818 Fund III, LLP ("the Fund") that was released in April 2000. (Am.Compl.¶ 39.) The Annual Review also clearly stated that this transaction entailed "the assumption [by WAXS] of $225 million of debt." (Harper Decl. Ex. M at 3.) Finally, the August 2000 10-Q, stated that WAXS "is expected to assume approximately $225.0 million of net debt in connection with the WorldxChange merger." (Harper Decl Ex. J at 13.)

The Star acquisition was announced in a press release issued February 14, 2000, and WAXS filed an 8-K on February 29, 2000. (Harper Decl. Ex. H.) Again, plaintiff concedes that the Annual Review released in April 2000 "described the Star merger and for the first time noted Star's $100 million of remaining debt." (Am.Compl.¶ 38.) The August 2000 10-Q stated that WAXS "expected to assume approximately $75.0 million of net debt in connection with the Star merger." (Harper Decl Ex. J at 12.)

The TelDaFax acquisition was announced in a press release issued June 14, 2000 and WAXS filed an 8-K on June 26, 2000. (Harper Decl. Ex. I.) The press release stated that "[a]s of March 31, 2000, TelDaFax had ... essentially no debt." (Id. at 7.)

The August 2000 10-Q provided that "[a]s of June 30, 2000, TelDaFax had ... essentially no debt." (Harper Decl. Ex. J at 13.)

Thus, all three acquisitions and the amount of debt being assumed were publicly announced by August 2000 at the latest and plaintiff had a duty to inquire. Having failed to inquire, such knowledge is imputed to them.

B) Alleged Omission of the FCI Bond Indenture "Trigger Clause"

*5 [3] Plaintiff alleges that Owen and defendant Tucker "omitted to inform NHL of the existence of the 'trigger clause' in the bond indenture executed in connection with the acquisition of FCI, which allowed bondholders to put their debt to WAXS prior to 2008 upon the occurrence of certain events." (Am.Compl. ¶ 58.) Also, Owen allegedly assured NHL that "the FCI debt would not come due until 2008...." (Id. ¶ 56.)

The Court finds that plaintiff had a duty to inquire about these alleged omissions and misrepresentations by August 2000 at the latest. The existence of and the actual triggering of the "trigger clause" was publicly disclosed after the February 11, 2000 purchase of WAXS stock and well before the February 11, 2001 deadline for filing. In the August 2000 10-Q, it was revealed that the trigger clause had actually been triggered and that WAXS was required to pay $160 million to the bondholders by January 2, 2001. (Harper Decl. Ex. J at 26.) A reasonable investor would have inquired.

C) Fraudulent Concealment

[4] In its opposition papers, plaintiff attempts to assert a fraudulent concealment defense in order to equitably toll the statute of limitations. (Opp'n at 5-7.) It is well-settled law that such a defense must be pled with particularity in accordance with Rule 9(b). Armstrong v. McAlpin, 699 F.2d 79, 88-90 (2d Cir.1983); Salinger v. Projectavision, Inc., 972 F.Supp. 222, 231-32 (S.D.N.Y.1997). Let alone being pled with particularity, in this case, plaintiff has not even asserted the defense in the Amended Complaint. It is also highly questionable as to whether such a defense is even permitted when dealing with the limitations period in Section 9(e).

See Rothman, 220 F.3d at 96, 98 n. 1 (quoting Lampf, Pleva, Lipkind, Prupis & Petigrow v. Gilbertson, 501 U.S. 350, 363, 111 S.Ct. 2773, 115 L.Ed.2d 321 (1991)).

Accordingly, defendants' motion to dismiss the statutory claims relating to its alleged January 2000 misrepresentations and omissions which allegedly induced plaintiff to purchase WAXS stock in February 2000 is granted. The dismissal, however, is without prejudice.

II. February 2000 Investment: Common Law Fraud and Rule 9(b)

Because the statutory claims relating to plaintiff's February 2000 investment have been dismissed, the only claim left with regard to this investment is that of common law fraud. Defendants moved to dismiss all of plaintiff's claims stemming from the February 2000 investment--the statutory and common law fraud claims--for failure to meet the requisite standard for pleading scienter. The Court will now consider defendants' scienter arguments in relation to the remaining claim for common law fraud.

The requirements for proving a claim of common law fraud under New York law are essentially the same as those for a claim of securities fraud under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5: 1) that a defendant made a material false representation or a material omission of fact; 2) that a defendant intended to defraud the plaintiff thereby; 3) that a plaintiff reasonably relied on the representation; and 4) that a plaintiff suffered damages as a result of such reliance. See Lama Holding Co. v. Smith Barney Inc., 88 N.Y.2d 413, 421, 646 N.Y.S.2d 76, 668 N.E.2d 1370 (1996); Benjamin v. Kim, No. 95 Civ. 9597, 1999 WL 249706, at *15 (S.D.N.Y. Apr.28, 1999). A complaint asserting common law fraud must meet the heightened pleading requirement of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b), which requires fraud to be alleged with particularity. Fed.R.Civ.P. 9(b) ("In all averments of fraud ..., the circumstances constituting fraud ... shall be stated with particularity."). The requisite intent of the defendant, however, need not be alleged with great specificity. Id. ("Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.")

A) Scienter

*6 [5] Despite Rule 9(b)'s lower standard for scienter, it is well-settled that the relaxation of Rule 9(b)'s specificity requirement regarding condition of mind is not a "license to base claims of fraud on speculation and conclusory allegations." Acito v. Incera Group, Inc., 47 F.3d 47, 52 (2d Cir.1995) (quoting Wexner v. First Manhattan Co., 902 F.2d 169, 172 (2d Cir.1990)). As a result, the Second Circuit has held that "plaintiffs must allege facts that give rise to a strong inference of fraudulent intent." Id. (citations omitted.) "The requisite 'strong inference' of fraud may be established either (a) by alleging facts to show that defendants had both motive and opportunity to commit fraud, or (b) by alleging facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness." Id. (quotation omitted.)

1) Motive and Opportunity

There is no dispute that there was opportunity for defendants to commit fraud in this case. The key question is motive. Plaintiff must plead motive allegations that "entail concrete benefits that could be realized by one or more of the false statements and wrongful nondisclosures alleged." Shields v. Citytrust Bancorp, Inc., 25 F.3d 1124, 1130 (2d Cir.1994). The Second Circuit has stated as follows:

Motives that are generally possessed by most corporate directors and officers do not suffice; instead, plaintiffs must assert a concrete and personal benefit to the individual defendants resulting from the fraud. Insufficient motives ... can include (1) the desire for the corporation to appear profitable and (2) the desire to keep stock prices high to increase officer compensation. On the other hand, we have held motive sufficiently pleaded where plaintiff alleged that defendants misrepresented corporate performance to inflate stock prices while they sold their own shares. Kalnit v. Eichler, 264 F.3d 131, 139 (2d Cir.2001) (citations omitted). In addition, the motive alleged must be sufficiently particularized. Rothman, 220 F.3d at 93.

(i) Potential Financial Motives

The only possible strictly financial motives actually contained in the complaint [FN5] are: a) defendants' desire, as WAXS' investment banker, to increase investment fees from promoting WAXS' stock (Am.Compl.¶ 70); and b) defendants' desire to inflate the value of WAXS stock due to its substantial holdings of WAXS stock as General Partner of the Fund. (Id. ¶ 2, 70.)

FN5. Plaintiff argues in its opposition that the artificial inflation of stock price in the context of corporate acquisitions can, in certain circumstances, be a sufficient motive for pleading scienter. (Opp'n at 18); see Rothman, 220 F.3d at 93. However, this is not alleged in the Amended Complaint as a motive for defendants' purported fraud. Plaintiff further argues that defendants' concrete economic motive was BBH's receipt of "carried interest" of approximately 20% of any capital gains realized upon any sale by the Fund of WAXS investments. (Opp'n at 18-19.) Again, however, this is not contained in the Amended Complaint.

As for defendants' alleged desire to increase their investment fees, courts in this district have consistently held that a defendant's desire to artificially inflate stock in order to realize greater transaction fees alone cannot show an improper motive. See In re Indep. Energy Holdings PLC Sec. Litig., 154 F.Supp.2d 741, 765-66 (S.D.N.Y.2001); Vogel v. Sands Bros. & Co., 126 F.Supp.2d 730, 739 (S.D.N.Y.2001); Schnell v. Conseco, Inc., 43 F.Supp.2d 438, 449 (S.D.N.Y.1999); Fisher v. Offerman & Co., No. 95 Civ. 2566, 1996 WL 563141, at *6-7 (S.D.N.Y. Oct.2, 1996).

*7 And, defendants could hardly have been motivated by considerations of profit from sales of WAXS stock. The Second Circuit has recognized that "unusual insider trading activity during the class period may permit an inference of bad faith and scienter." Rothman, 220 F.3d at 94 (quoting Acito, 47 F.3d at 54). Yet, plaintiff does not allege that defendants sold any of their WAXS stock, let alone engaged in any unusual trading. In fact, the Fund's entire $70 million investment in WAXS was written off on March 31, 2001, three weeks before WAXS filed for bankruptcy. (Am.Compl.¶¶ 16, 52.) Furthermore, BBH, on behalf of the Fund, invested another $20 million in WAXS stock on June 8, 2000, four months after plaintiff's February transaction. (Am.Compl.¶ 41.)

(ii) Reputational Motives

Plaintiff also attempts to identify a professional reputational interest specific to defendants "owing to grave conflicts of interest under which they labored ... as both promoters of the company's equities and corporate insiders...." (Opp'n at 19.) BBH was the General Partner of the Fund, Tucker was a partner in BBH and the executive responsible for management of the Fund, a WAXS board member, an investment advisor to NHL and a promoter of WAXS stock in the market. (Am.Compl. ¶ 2.) Plaintiff's theory, then, appears to be that defendants were "so closely associated with WAXS and its management as to have a reputational interest in the value of WAXS' shares." (Am.Compl. ¶ 2.)

This is an interesting theory and one that defendants did not attempt to refute in their reply papers. Plaintiff cites no case law to support its theory, and the closest that the Court could find to support it is Varljen v. H.J. Meyers, Inc., No. 97 Civ. 6742, 1998 WL 395266, at *1, 4-5 (S.D.N.Y.1998). In Varljen, the court refused to dismiss plaintiffs' claims where the alleged motive of a brokerage house to commit fraud was, inter alia, to enhance its underwriting business by keeping the prices of stocks of companies for which it performed underwriting business at artificially elevated levels to dispel the notion that it was a penny stock brokerage and to bolster the credibility of its research department. Id. at *4-5. Yet, in that case, the complaint laid out extremely specific and detailed allegations to support its theory for motive. In the case at bar, plaintiff has included only one sentence in the entire Amended Complaint to support its theory. (See Am. Compl. ¶ 2.) Furthermore, although it has not specifically ruled on such a reputational theory, the Second Circuit appears to frown upon such intangible types of motive allegations. See Chill v. G.E. Co., 101 F.3d 263, 268 (2d Cir.1996) ("The motive to maintain the appearance of corporate profitability, or of the success of an investment, will naturally involve benefit to a corporation, but does not 'entail concrete benefits.'" (citations omitted)). Thus, plaintiff has not sufficiently satisfied the motive portion of the scienter pleading requirements.

2) Conscious Misbehavior or Recklessness

*8 With regard to the February 2000 investment discussed above, the Amended Complaint also does not sufficiently allege facts that constitute strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness. As the Second Circuit has explained, to establish reckless conduct or conscious misbehavior, the facts pled must allege "at the least, conduct which is highly unreasonable and which represents an extreme departure from the standards of ordinary care to the extent that the danger was either known to the defendant or so obvious that the defendant must have been aware of it." Kalnit, 264 F.3d at 142 (quotation omitted.)

Plaintiff again emphasizes the "grave conflicts of interest" of BBH and Tucker. (Opp'n at 17.) Yet, these alleged conflicts were well-known to plaintiff and as such, can certainly not be considered an extreme departure from the standards of ordinary care. Further, plaintiff argues that because Tucker admitted in February 2001 that he had lost confidence in management in Fall 2000, that the Court should relate such conscious misbehavior back to defendants' alleged state of mind in making the alleged misrepresentations and omissions in January 2000. (Id.) The Court agrees with defendants that Tucker's purported admission regarding defendants state of mind in Fall 2000 is irrelevant to defendants' state of mind in January 2000. (Reply at 8.)

Having failed to properly allege scienter in relation to the February 2000 investment, the common law fraud claim is dismissed without prejudice.

III. Plaintiff's Post-September 2000 Investment

[6] Defendants also move to dismiss plaintiff's statutory claims relating to the post-September 2000 investment as barred by the statute of limitations. (Defs. Memo at 2.) They reason that plaintiff's claims relating to these investments are merely "variations on its fundamental theme that defendants failed to disclose that WAXS was overleveraged" and because the Court has found that plaintiff should have been on inquiry notice concerning WAXS' level of debt, plaintiff also should have been on inquiry notice of defendants alleged September 2000 misrepresentations. (Defs' Memo. at 21-24) This is simply not a tenable argument.

As the Court discussed in NHL I with regard to the original complaint, the Amended Complaint alleges specific misrepresentations made by defendants regarding the actual level of WAXS' reserves of cash and marketable securities, the performance of WAXS' management, and of WAXS' position in the European telecommunications market. 2002 WL 31027550, at *4-7. These alleged misrepresentations are clearly distinct from those discussed above in relation to plaintiff's February 2000 investment. Motion denied.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court grants defendants' motion to dismiss plaintiff's claims relating to its February 2000 investment in part with leave for plaintiff to replead, consistently with Fed.R.Civ.P. 11, within 30 days of the date of this Memorandum and Order. However, this will be plaintiff's last chance to replead. As Judge Koeltl would say, "[t]hree bites at the apple is enough." Salinger, 972 F.Supp. at 236. Defendants' motion is otherwise denied.

*9 So Ordered.

2003 WL 21088506 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

62

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Adebowale Christiana ONANUGA, Individually on Behalf of and As Administrator of the Estate of Ebenezer Adebayo Onanuga Plaintiff,
v.
PFIZER, INC. and Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc.,
Defendants.

No. 03 Civ. 5405(CM).

Filed July 21, 2003.
Nov. 7, 2003.

Widow, individually and as administrator of deceased husband's estate, brought action against husband's former employer and company that administered former employer's stock options program, asserting claims for, inter alia, breach of contract, negligence, and conversion in connection with alleged mishandling of husband's stock options. Former employer moved to dismiss all but one claim, and company moved to dismiss claims against it. The District Court, McMahon, J., held that: (1) widow's second breach of contract claim against former employer was duplicative of first, and had to be dismissed; (2) former employer was not liable for promissory estoppel; (3) former employer was not liable in negligence; (4) former employer was not liable for negligent misrepresentation; (5) neither former employer nor company was liable for conversion; and (6) company was not liable for breach of contract under third-party beneficiary theory.

Motions granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 675.1
170Ak675.1

Second cause of action for breach of contract asserted by widow against deceased husband's former employer had to be dismissed as duplicative to first cause of action when widow pleaded essentially the same facts in both claims and sought same relief.

[2] Implied and Constructive Contracts 55
205Hk55

Claim for quasi-contractual relief cannot be maintained where there is an express contract.

[3] Estoppel 85
156k85

Former employer was not liable to widow of former employee or former employee's estate for promissory estoppel when widow did not allege that either former employee or his estate forbore from exercising former employee's stock options earlier in the mistaken belief, engendered by former employer's alleged misstatements, that options were still good, so as to show requisite detrimental reliance through a change in position made based on former employer's misstatements.

[4] Torts 12
379k12

Claim for tortious breach of contract is not recognized under New York law.

[5] Action 27(1)
13k27(1)

[5] Negligence 210
272k210

Former employer's duties to retired employee to ensure that qualified professionals were hired to maintain its systems and that accurate statements regarding retired employee's stock options were mailed arose pursuant to former employee's options contract and did not constitute legal duty independent of contract, such that breach would give rise to tort claim, and therefore former employer's alleged mishandling of retired employee's stock options was not actionable on negligence theory under New York law.

[6] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Life-long employment relationship between retired employee and former employer did not give rise to special relationship of trust or confidence required to establish claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law.

[7] Fraud 25
184k25

Former employer was not liable to former employee's estate or widow for alleged negligent misrepresentation of status of former employee's stock options, under New York law, given absence of allegations showing that widow, estate, or former employee actually relied on former employer's alleged misstatements to their detriment.

[8] Trover and Conversion 17
389k17

Under New York law, former employee did not have possessory interest in stock or claim to cash value of that stock by virtue of his vested stock options, which merely gave former employee right to exercise options by buying stock at stated price, and therefore neither former employee's widow nor his estate had sufficient possessory interest in stock or its cash value to maintain claim for conversion under New York law against former employer or company that administered former employer's stock options program, based on alleged mishandling of former employee's stock options.

[9] Contracts 187(1)
95k187(1)

Company that was administering former employer's stock options program during time period in which widow and former employee's estate attempted to exercise former employee's stock options was not liable to widow and estate for breach of contract, under third-party beneficiary theory, inasmuch as services agreement between company and former employer contained provision expressly disavowing any obligations to third-party beneficiaries, including grantees, and contract governed claim as the one in place when widow and estate sought to exercise options.

[10] Federal Civil Procedure 1832
170Ak1832

In deciding motion to dismiss for failure to state claim, district court could consider and rely on contract provided by defendant, even though it was not attached to amended complaint, inasmuch as contract was referenced in and relied upon in drafting complaint and formed basis for allegations of breach of contract in complaint. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.

[11] Damages 117
115k117

Proper measure of damages for breach of contract arising out of stock options is the difference between the market value of the stock and the option price as of the date of the breach.

Solomon Oluseyi Bankole, Law Office of Solomon O. Bankole, Laurel, MD, for Adebowale Christiana Onanuga, individually on behalf of and as administrator of the estate of Ebenezer Adebayo Onanuga, plaintiff.

Peter J. Engstrom, Baker & McKenzie, New York, NY, Susan Rigmor Knox, Baker & McKenzie, New York, NY, Grant Aram Hanessian, Baker & McKenzie, New York, NY, Peter J. Engstrom, Baker & McKenzie, San Francisco, CA, for Pfizer Inc., defendant.

Brian A. Herman, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, L.L.P., New York, NY, for Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc., defendant.

DECISION AND ORDER GRANTING
PFIZER'S MOTION TO DISMISS COUNTS
TWO THROUGH SIX OF THE AMENDED COMPLAINT AND MERRILL LYNCH'S MOTION TO DISMISS COUNTS SEVEN AND EIGHT OF THE AMENDED COMPLAINT

MCMAHON, J.

*1 Plaintiff, Adebowale Christiana Onanuga brings this action against Pfizer and Merrill Lynch on behalf of herself and in her capacity as an Administrator of her husband, Ebenezer Adebayo Onanuga's Estate. Plaintiff is a citizen of the Federal Republic of Nigeria and has brought this action against Defendants seeking relief for Defendants alleged mishandling of her husband's stock options. Invoking theories of breach of contract, negligence and conversion, she seeks damages of more than $300,000. Defendants are Delaware corporations that have their principal places of business within this district. The Court has diversity jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

I. Facts

Plaintiff's decedent (her husband) was employed by Pfizer Pharmaceuticals Group in Lagos, Nigeria from October 1974 until his retirement in May 1997. Mr. Onanuga began his career as a Management Accountant and by his retirement had become Company Secretary. During this period, he received stock options from Pfizer. Plaintiff has alleged that as of March 31, 2000, he held options to purchase 10,404 shares of Pfizer stock worth an estimated $400,000 (Am.Cmplt.¶ 9), [FN1] in March 1998, about a year after his retirement, Mr. Onanuga exercised other options and received Pfizer stock at the option price. Plaintiff alleges that her decedent received statements as recently as the year 2000 indicating that the remainder of the stock options would expire between 2003-2005.

FN1. I note that elsewhere in the Amended Complaint (¶¶ 25, 29) Plaintiff asserts that the value of the stock as of March 31, 2000 was $309,668; however, this inconsistency does not affect the Court's decision on these motions.

Mr. Onanuga did not attempt to exercise any other options between March 1998 and August 27, 2001 when he passed away. The Amended Complaint alleges that Plaintiff's decedent, in his will, directed his estate to exercise the remainder of the options before they expired.

In February 2002, the estate contacted the Country Manager of Pfizer Nigeria to redeem the cash value of the remaining stock options. On or about March 28, 2002, Pfizer told the estate that it should contact Merrill Lynch to obtain a vesting kit. The estate requested the vesting kit from Merrill Lynch in January 2003. Shortly thereafter, Pfizer sent Plaintiff a letter asserting that an error had been made and explaining that Plaintiff's decedent's stock options had in fact expired in 1997 (Am. Cmplt ¶¶ 14-16) and the request to exercise would not be honored. [FN2]

FN2. According to the Defendants, Mr. Onanuga's stock options expired as early as May 1997 when the plant with which he was associated closed. However, due to system errors, company records mistakenly indicated that he was still entitled to stock options during his retirement when in fact they had been terminated in 1997. (Pl. Mem. in Opp., Ex. A). Allegedly because of this error, Mr. Onanuga was able to exercise some of his options in March 1998, and Pfizer continued to send Mr. Onanuga statements that indicated that the options would terminate in 2003, 2004 and 2005. All of this information is de hors the record on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss which assumes the allegations of the complaint to be true.

Plaintiff alleges that the defendants are liable for breach of contract, conversion and misrepresentation for refusing to allow Plaintiff to exercise the stock options on behalf of her husband's estate. Both defendants have moved for dismissal pursuant to F.R.C.P. 12(b)(6). Pfizer moves to dismiss all claims against it except the First Cause of Action, for Breach of Contract. Merrill Lynch moves to dismiss both claims asserted against it (Counts VII and VIII).

II. Standard for Motion to Dismiss

Rule 12(b)(6) provides for dismissal of a complaint that fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The standard of review on a motion to dismiss is heavily weighted in favor of the plaintiff. The court is required to read a complaint generously, drawing all reasonable inferences from the complaint's allegations. The court must deny the motion "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Stewart v. Jackson & Nash, 976 F.2d 86, 87 (2d Cir.1992) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957)).

III. Argument

Pfizer's Motion to Dismiss Count II Alleging "Breach of Contract--Detrimental Reliance" is Granted

*2 [1] In Count I, Plaintiff alleges that Pfizer breached its contract with her husband, which entitled him (or his Estate) to exercise stock options through 2005. In Count II, Plaintiff alleges the same thing--that Pfizer breached its contract with her husband which entitled him (or his Estate) to exercise stock options through 2005. In connection with both claims, Plaintiff alleges that her husband's options did not expire in 1997, and that Pfizer's post-1997 behavior (in honoring his 1998 request to exercise options), as well as its representations as provided in statements sent to Mr. Onanuga, are evidence that Plaintiff was still contractually entitled to exercise the options when the Estate attempted to do so. Plaintiff seeks the "cash value of the vested stock" as damages on both counts. See ¶¶ 36 and 42.

Plaintiff has pled essentially the same facts in both the first and second cause of action and seeks the same relief. The second cause of action must, therefore, be dismissed as duplicative to the first. See Durante Bros. and Sons, Inc. v. Flushing Nat. Bank, 755 F.2d 239, 251 (2d Cir.1985) (upholding dismissal of one count on grounds that it was duplicative of others).

[2][3] To the extent that Count Two is read as asserting an alternative theory, based on something like promissory estoppel (as Plaintiff argues in her Opposition to Pfizer's motion at page 5), it still fails. First, a claim for quasi-contractual relief cannot be maintained where there is an express contract as in the present case. See Foxley v. Sotheby's Inc., 893 F.Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y.1995). Second, Plaintiff has not pled the elements of promissory estoppel.

To maintain a claim for promissory estoppel, the Plaintiff must show that there was (i) a promise; (ii) reasonable and foreseeable reliance by the promisee on that promise; (iii) an injury to the promisee; and (iv) an injustice if the promise is not enforced. Devlin v. Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield, 274 F.3d 76, 85 (2d Cir.2001). Plaintiff is required to plead specific facts showing that the decedent or she relied to their detriment--that is, that they either took some action or refrained from taking some action in reliance on Pfizer's statements that led to the Estate's being damaged.

Plaintiff does not plead that either her decedent or the Estate forbore from exercising the options earlier in the mistaken belief (engendered by the misrepresentations) that the options were still good. The only view of the facts pled in the Amended Complaint is that the Estate exercised the options while believing--due to the statements--that it had a contractual right to exercise them. In other words, the only "promise" here was the contract promise. If Plaintiff's decedent did have a contract right to exercise his options through 2003, 2004 and 2005, then the Estate must proceed under a theory of breach of contract. If it did not have such a right, there is no possible claim of unjust enrichment or promissory estoppel, because a mistaken belief that a contract right exists, without more, is not detrimental reliance. Detrimental reliance by its terms means that the Plaintiff changed her position in reliance on the statements. Here, Plaintiff does not allege that she or her decedent actually changed their position.

*3 Count II of the Amended Complaint must, therefore, be dismissed.

Pfizer's Motion to Dismiss Count III Alleging "Tortious Breach of Contract" is Granted

[4] Plaintiff's third cause of action against Pfizer alleges tortious breach of contract. There is no such thing as a tortious breach of contract under New York law. And a breach of contract claim is not actionable in tort unless Plaintiff can identify an independent duty--outside of the contract--which Pfizer owed her or her husband. See Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v. Long Island Rail Road Co., 70 N.Y.2d 382, 389, 521 N.Y.S.2d 653, 656-657, 516 N.E.2d 190 (1987); Orlando v. Novurania of America, Inc., 162 F.Supp.2d 220, 224 (S.D.N.Y.2001). She has not done so. Therefore, Count III of the Amended Complaint is dismissed.

Pfizer's Motion to Dismiss Count IV Alleging Negligence is Granted

[5] Under New York law, it is a well established principle that a simple breach of contract is not to be considered a tort unless a legal duty independent of the contract itself has been violated. Id. Plaintiff's Amended Complaint alleges that Pfizer owed Plaintiff's husband a duty to ensure qualified professionals were hired to maintain its systems and ensure accurate statements regarding his stock options were mailed. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 56). However, these duties arose pursuant to the options contract and do not constitute a legal duty independent of the contract. This is not a case in which the nature of the contract and the public's interest in seeing it performed with reasonable care give rise to a duty of care in performance of the contractual obligation, such that the breach of that independent duty of care will give rise to a tort claim. See Sommers v. Federal Sign Corp., 79 N.Y.2d 540, 583 N.Y.S.2d 957, 962, 593 N.E.2d 1365 (1992); Logan v. Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield, 275 A.D.2d 187, 714 N.Y.S.2d 119 (2d Dep't.2000). Rather, this involves an agreement between private parties and raises issues with relevance to those parties and not the public as a whole. Therefore, Defendant's motion to dismiss Count IV is granted.

Pfizer's Motion to Dismiss Count V Alleging Negligent Misrepresentation is Granted

[6] Plaintiff's fifth cause of action alleging negligent misrepresentation is also dismissed. New York courts do not recognize a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation in the absence of a special relationship of trust or confidence between the parties. See Stewart v. Jackson & Nash, 976 F.2d 86, 90 (2d Cir.1992). Plaintiff's allegation that her husband was a life-long employee of Pfizer does not plead any special relationship. This Court has previously held that an employer-employee relationship is not fiduciary in nature, and without alleging further facts from which to infer such a relationship existed that cause of action must be dismissed. See Madera v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 99 Civ. 4005, 2002 WL 1453827 (S.D.N.Y., Jul 03, 2002)(MBM). See also Ellis v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 3 F.Supp.2d 399, 411 (S.D.N.Y.1998); Lind v. Vanguard Offset Printers, Inc., 857 F.Supp. 1060, 1067 (S.D.N.Y.1994).

*4 [7] Moreover, as discussed above, Plaintiff has not alleged any facts to show that she, the estate or her husband actually relied on these statements to their detriment. In fact, as Plaintiff acknowledges in paragraph 67 of the Amended Complaint, her husband actually benefitted from the alleged system error when he redeemed some of his options in March 1998. The Amended Complaint alleges no other facts suggesting that anyone changed his position in reliance on those statements, which is fatal to her claim for negligent misrepresentation.

Pfizer's Motion to Dismiss Count VI Alleging Conversion and Merrill Lynch's Motion to Dismiss Count VIII Alleging Conversion are Granted

[8] Conversion is the "unauthorized exercise of dominion or control over property by one who is not the owner of the property which interferes with and is in defiance of a superior possessory right of another party." Messe v. Miller, 79 A.D.2d 237, 436 N.Y.S.2d 496 (N.Y.1981). Plaintiff cannot hold either Pfizer or Merrill Lynch liable for conversion of the Estate's "vested stock" because Plaintiff's husband did not have a possessory interest in the stock with which either defendant could interfere.

Plaintiff alleges that, upon the vesting of the options, Plaintiff's husband had "possessory and proprietary rights and interest in the cash value of the vested stock." (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 78, 92). Plaintiff is incorrect. When options vest, the holder of those options has the right to exercise the options-meaning he can buy the stock at the stated price. Until the option is exercised, however, the holder has neither a possessory interest in the underlying stock nor any claim to the cash value of that stock. Thus, Plaintiff lacks a sufficient possessory interest in the stock to maintain the action. See McDougal v. Apple Bank for Sav., 200 A.D.2d 418, 606 N.Y.S.2d 215 (1st Dep't.1994) (dismissing claim for conversion in action arising from stock option agreement).

Counts VI and VIII are dismissed as to defendants Pfizer and Merrill Lynch respectively.

Merrill Lynch's Motion to Dismiss Count VII is Granted

[9] Plaintiff alleges that Merrill Lynch is liable for breach of contract. Plaintiff argues that her husband was a third party beneficiary to the Merrill Lynch-Pfizer contract, and Merrill Lynch breached its obligation under the contract by not paying out on his options when requested.

Merrill Lynch has moved to dismiss Count VII on the grounds that Plaintiff cannot maintain an action against it for breach of contract because the contract between Merrill Lynch and Pfizer specifically disavows any obligations to third party beneficiaries. Merrill Lynch is correct.

[10] Plaintiff has not attached, or even identified, the contract under which she claims third party beneficiary status. However, she references a contract between Pfizer and Merrill Lynch (Am.Cmplt.¶¶ 83, 84), and Merrill Lynch has attached that contract-entitled "Agreement for Services" and made between Pfizer, Inc. and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. on December 22, 2000--to its moving papers. (Declaration of Brian A. Herman, Ex. A). Although Plaintiff did not attach the Agreement to the Amended Complaint, I may consider it on a motion to dismiss, because this contract was referenced in and relied upon in the drafting the Complaint, and forms the basis for the allegations set forth in paragraph 83. See Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147, 153 (2d Cir.2002).

*5 Plaintiff urges the court to look at the "spirit and intent of the contract" between Merrill Lynch and Pfizer, which she says demonstrates an "express intent" to create a third party beneficiary contract. (Pl. Mem. in Opp. to Merrill Lynch p. 6). This argument is untenable. Under New York law, the intention to benefit a third party must be found within the four corners of the contract, and the contract must clearly evince an intention to benefit the third person who seeks its protection. Travelers Indemnity Co. of Conn. v. Losco Group, et al., 150 F.Supp.2d 556, 561 (S.D.N.Y.2002). Section 8.14 of the Agreement states "This Agreement is for the benefit of Pfizer and Merrill Lynch and not for any other person, including any Grantee", thereby specifically disavowing any obligations to any third party beneficiary, especially Mr. Onanuga who was the grantee of options from Pfizer.

Plaintiff tries to avoid the application of § 8.14 by arguing that the contract is not applicable to her husband because it was entered into after his "stock vesting dates" and was applicable as of December 22, 2000. This argument is without merit. As described in paragraphs 83-85 of the Amended Complaint, Merrill Lynch has been sued because it was administering Pfizer's stock options program during the period when Plaintiff attempted to exercise the options. Plaintiff has sued Merrill Lynch precisely because, pursuant to whatever agreement existed between Pfizer and Merrill Lynch at the time she tried to exercise the options, Merrill Lynch refused to honor that exercise.

Plaintiff has identified no other contract as being applicable to her case against Merrill Lynch, and the Merrill Lynch-Pfizer contract clearly disavows any obligations to third party beneficiaries. Therefore, there is no set of facts under which Plaintiff can maintain an action against Merrill Lynch for breach of contract. Count VII is dismissed.

Damages

[11] Pfizer has also moved to strike sections of Plaintiff's prayer for relief on the grounds that they are not recoverable under law. The motion to strike prayers (a) through (f) is granted for the following reasons. In light of my dismissal of Plaintiff's tort claims, Plaintiff's prayer for punitive damages on each of these causes of action (sections (c) through (f)) must also be dismissed. And Plaintiff's claim for specific performance and consequential damages (sections (a) and (b)) is also dismissed because in Hermanowski v. Acton Corp., 729 F.2d 921 (2d Cir.1984), the Second Circuit held that the proper relief in actions for breach of contract arising out of stock options is "the difference between the market value of the stock and the option price" as of the date of the breach. 729 F.2d at 922. Assuming Plaintiff has any claim at all--that is, assuming (as I must at this stage) that Plaintiff's decedent's options did not lapse in 1997--that is all she can recover.

IV. Conclusion

The Clerk of the Court is directed to dismiss the Amended Complaint as to Defendant Merrill Lynch, and to dismiss Counts II-VI as to Defendant Pfizer. All dismissals are with prejudice. We will proceed to discovery on Count I.

*6 This constitutes the decision and order of the Court.

2003 WL 22670842 (S.D.N.Y.)

END OF DOCUMENT

63

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Fourth District.

PALM BEACH COUNTY, a political subdivision of the State of Florida, Appellant,
v.

TRINITY INDUSTRIES, INC., a Delaware corporation, Appellee.

No. 94-3510.

Oct. 25, 1995.

After contractor on county construction project became insolvent, subcontractor sued county to collect for materials it had supplied. The Circuit Court, Palm Beach County, Harold J. Cohen, J., entered summary judgment in favor of subcontractor. County appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Gunther, C.J., held that county was required by statute to ensure that contractor post payment and performance bond for the protection of subcontractors before construction commenced.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Public Contracts 44
316Ak44

Statute requiring contractors on public projects worth $200,000 or more to post payment and performance bond is remedial in nature and therefore entitled to a liberal construction, within reason, to effect its purpose of protecting subcontractors and suppliers by providing them with an alternative remedy to mechanic's liens on public projects. West's F.S.A. § 255.05(1)(a).

[2] Public Contracts 41
316Ak41

Statute requiring contractors on public projects worth $200,000 or more to post payment and performance bond prior to commencing construction places a corresponding duty on public agency to see that a bond is in fact posted for protection of subcontractors. West's F.S.A. § 255.05(1)(a).

[3] Judgment 181(19)
228k181(19)

When the determination of the issues of a lawsuit depends upon construction of a written instrument and the legal effect to be drawn therefrom, the question at issue is essentially one of law only and determinable by entry of summary judgment.

[4] Judgment 181(1)
228k181(1)

[4] Judgment 181(2)
228k181(2)

Summary judgment is appropriate where the material facts are not in dispute and the judgment is based on the legal construction of documents.

[5] Judgment 185(2)
228k185(2)

The standard for reviewing entry of summary judgment requires that moving party must conclusively show the absence of any genuine issue of material fact.

[6] Judgment 185(2)
228k185(2)

Trial court, in determining whether party moving for summary judgment has conclusively shown absence of a genuine issue of material fact, must draw every reasonable inference in favor of nonmoving party.

[7] Counties 129
104k129

County was liable to subcontractor which had supplied materials for public guardrail project where estimated annual amount of guardrail contract was $250,000, where county failed to ensure that contractor post a payment and performance bond before construction commenced, and where contractor had become insolvent, making it impossible for subcontractor to collect on default judgment against contractor. West's F.S.A. § 255.05(1)(a).

*943 Anne' Desormier-Cartwright and Denise J. Bleau, West Palm Beach, for appellant.

Paul A. Turk, Jr. of Paul A. Turk, Jr., P.A., West Palm Beach, for appellee.

GUNTHER, Chief Judge.

Appellant, Palm Beach County, defendant below (the County), appeals a final judgment entered after the trial court granted Appellee's, Trinity Industries, Inc., plaintiff below (Trinity), motion for summary judgment as to liability. Because no genuine issue of material fact exists as to liability, we affirm the final judgment.

The County posted a notice of bid for a contract for the furnishing and/or installing of guardrail for various job sites at any location within Palm Beach County. In the bid specifications, the scope provided that the term of the contract should be for dates certain to run twelve months with an option to renew for an additional twelve months. The bid specifications also revealed that the estimated annual expenditure would be $245,000.00.

Subsequently, the Palm Beach County Board of County Commissioners entered into a price agreement with Palm Beach Guardrail and Erosion Control (Palm Beach Guardrail) that set forth the duration of the agreement to run from August 20, 1991 through August 22, 1992 and the estimated dollar value at $247,000.00. Trinity entered this scenario as a subcontractor who provided materials to Palm Beach Guardrail for installation at one of the County's significant job sites. When Palm Beach Guardrail could no longer provide services to the County under the price agreement, the County entered into a price agreement with Rawls & Associates, Inc. to "complete the term of the original price agreement with Palm Beach Guardrail."

In sum, Palm Beach Guardrail performed work for the County worth $196,565.84 pursuant to the price agreement. In fulfilling the time remaining in the original contractual agreement, Rawls & Associates, Inc., provided services to the County in the amount of $39,701.99. Thus, the total work received by the County pursuant to their notice of bid for the furnishing and/or installing of guardrail was in the amount of $236,267.83.

*944 Trinity obtained a default judgment against Palm Beach Guardrail. However, collection of that judgment proved unsuccessful because Palm Beach Guardrail lacked assets. Trinity then filed an action against the County alleging that the County had failed to require Palm Beach Guardrail to post a bond in accordance with section 255.05, Florida Statutes (1991). In the parties' undisputed statement of facts, it is conceded that the County did not require the contractor, Palm Beach Guardrail, to submit a payment and performance bond under section 255.05(1)(a). The parties also stipulated that the estimated annual amount of the guardrail contract between the County and Palm Beach Guardrail was for $250,000.00.

Section 255.05(1)(a), Florida Statutes (1991), requires, in pertinent part:

Any person entering into a formal contract with the state or any county, city, or political subdivision thereof, ... for the construction of a public building or public work shall be required, before commencing the work, to execute, deliver to the public owner, and record in the public records of the county where the improvement is located, a payment and performance bond with a surety insurer authorized to do business in this state as surety....

The statute further exempts those contractors whose contracts fall under $200,000.00 from obtaining a bond:

At the discretion of the official or board awarding such public authority, any person entering into such a contract which is for $200,000 or less may be exempted from executing the payment and performance bond.

[1] This court has noted that the above statute is remedial in nature and therefore, entitled to a liberal construction, within reason, to effect its intended purpose. Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Waldron's Inc., 608 So.2d 119, 120 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992). Historically, the purpose of this section is to protect subcontractors and suppliers by providing them with an alternative remedy to mechanic's liens on public projects. School Bd. of Palm Beach County v. Vincent J. Fasano, Inc., 417 So.2d 1063, 1065 (Fla. 4th DCA 1982); see also Gorman Co. of Fort Lauderdale, Inc. v. Frank Maio Gen. Contractor, Inc., 438 So.2d 1018, 1019 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983); Winchester v. Florida Elec. Supply, Inc., 161 So.2d 668, 669 (Fla. 2d DCA 1964).

[2] In following the Florida Supreme Court in Warren v. Glens Falls Indem. Co., 66 So.2d 54 (Fla.1953), this court has explained that section 255.05 places a corresponding duty on the public agency, as well as the contractor, to see that a bond is in fact posted for the protection of the subcontractors before construction commences. Pavex Corp. v. Broward County Bd. of County Com'rs, 498 So.2d 1317, 1318 (4th DCA), rev. dismissed, 509 So.2d 1118 (Fla.1987).

[3][4][5][6] Where the determination of the issues of a lawsuit depends upon the construction of a written instrument and the legal effect to be drawn therefrom, the question at issue is essentially one of law only and determinable by entry of summary judgment. Angell v. Don Jones Ins. Agency Inc., 620 So.2d 1012, 1014 (Fla. 2d DCA 1993). Moreover, a summary judgment is appropriate where the material facts are not in dispute and the judgment is based on the legal construction of documents. Ball v. Florida Podiatrist Trust, 620 So.2d 1018 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993). The standard for reviewing the entry of a summary judgment requires that a party moving must conclusively show the absence of any genuine issue of material fact. Moore v. Morris, 475 So.2d 666 (Fla.1985). The trial court must then draw every reasonable inference in favor of the non-moving party. Id.; Lenhal Realty, Inc. v. Transamerica Commercial Fin. Corp., 615 So.2d 207 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993).

[7] In the instant case, we find that the evidence presented no genuine issue of material fact. The parties' statement of undisputed facts clearly reveals the County's approval to award Palm Beach Guardrail a guardrail contract to provide for countywide guardrail requirements for an estimated annual amount of $250,000.00. In addition, the statement of undisputed facts establishes that the contract between the parties was for one year. There exists no genuine issue of material fact that Palm Beach Guardrail became *945 insolvent, making it impossible for Trinity to collect against its default judgment. Furthermore, we find that the legislature, by enacting section 255.05, intended to protect the subcontractor, or materialman, from precisely this type of occurrence. Clearly, the contract between the County and Palm Beach Guardrail exceeded the $200,000.00 exemption, thus requiring the County to ensure that Palm Beach Guardrail "execute, deliver to the public owner, and record in the public records ... a payment and performance bond...." § 255.05(1)(a), Fla.Stat. (1991). Accordingly, we affirm the final judgment and summary judgment entered by the trial court in favor of Trinity.

AFFIRMED.

DELL and STEVENSON, JJ., concur.

661 So.2d 942, 20 Fla. L. Weekly D2379

END OF DOCUMENT

64

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Fourth District.

PARTS DEPOT COMPANY, L.P., By and Through its general partner PARTS DEPOT COMPANY, INC., Appellant,

v.

FLORIDA AUTO SUPPLY, INC., d/b/a Florida Auto Supply and J.C. Impellitier, individually, Appellees.

Nos. 94-1582, 94-2633.

March 13, 1996.

Warehouse distributor of auto parts sued jobber for nonpayment on account, and jobber counterclaimed for antitrust violations. Jury in the Circuit Court for Indian River County, Charles E. Smith, J., returned verdict for jobber on counterclaim, and distributor appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Warner, J., held that: (1) evidence of termination of sales by distributor to plaintiff jobber following complaints from other unnamed jobbers was insufficient to establish horizontal conspiracy in restraint of trade, and (2) evidence showing only effect of refusal to sell on plaintiff's financial picture and not that the price or supply of goods in the market was affected was insufficient to show illegal vertical conspiracy under the rule of reason.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Trial 178
388k178

In ruling on motion for judgment in accordance with prior motion for directed verdict, all evidence must be construed, and inferences drawn, in light most favorable to non-moving party.

[2] Trial 139.1(12)
388k139.1(12)

Jury's role as finder of fact does not entitle it to return verdict based only on confusion, speculation or prejudice; its verdict must be reasonably based on evidence presented at trial.

[3] Monopolies 12(1.8)
265k12(1.8)

"Vertical restraints" on competition are those imposed by persons or firms on a different level of the distribution system than the levels of the persons or firms receiving impact of the restraints, while "horizontal restraints" are those imposed within the same distribution level, and encompass situation where dealers conspire to induce manufacturer to refuse to deal with a particular dealer. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[4] Monopolies 12(1.8)
265k12(1.8)

Manufacturer's mere receipt of complaints from its wholesalers or agents who compete with plaintiff, standing alone, does not constitute conspiracy in restraint of trade, and even where termination follows receipt of complaints, there is no basis for inferring existence of concerted action absent some other evidence of tacit understanding or agreement. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[5] Monopolies 12(1.8)
265k12(1.8)

[5] Monopolies 12(1.14)
265k12(1.14)

Horizontal conspiracy in restraint of trade was not shown in decision of warehouse distributor of auto parts to cease doing business with particular jobber, despite evidence that a few other unnamed jobbers had complained that distributor was selling to plaintiff, which was mistakenly believed to part of chain of auto parts stores, and even if business reason given by distributor for terminating plaintiff jobber was undermined, it still did not justify inference that conspiracy occurred absent some proof of that conspiracy. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[6] Monopolies 17(1.8)
265k17(1.8)

Only those vertical conspiracies which set prices constitute per se violations of the antitrust laws; nonprice violations are governed by "rule of reason," which requires plaintiff to prove that restrictive practice constitutes unreasonable restraint on competition. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[7] Monopolies 17(2.2)
265k17(2.2)

Auto parts jobber failed to show vertical conspiracy in restraint of trade, in violation of state antitrust law, in decision of warehouse distributor, on which plaintiff jobber had relied for overnight delivery of parts, to no longer do business with plaintiff, where plaintiff did not show what effect its removal from the overnight delivery market had on availability or price of overnight delivery in the area, but only showed effect on its own financial picture, and there was evidence that customers were still able to obtain overnight services from at least two sources and no proof that the prices were higher. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[8] Monopolies 12(1.2)
265k12(1.2)

Antitrust laws are for protection of competition, and not for protection of individual competitors. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

[9] Monopolies 12(1.4)
265k12(1.4)

Three elements must be alleged and proven under the rule of reason test for illegal conspiracy in restraint of trade: that there is specifically defined market; that defendants possessed ability to affect price or output; and that the plaintiff's exclusion from the market did affect or was intended to affect the price or supply of goods in that market. West's F.S.A. § 542.18.

322 Consolidated appeals from the Circuit Court for Indian River County; Charles E. Smith, Judge.

Mark S. Mucci of Benson, Moyle & Chambers, Fort Lauderdale, and Irene C. Keyse-Walker of Arter & Hadden, Cleveland, Ohio, for appellant.

G. Ware Cornell, Jr., of G. Ware Cornell,

Jr., P.A., Fort Lauderdale, for appellees.

WARNER, Judge.

When the appellant sued the appellee for nonpayment on an account, the appellee, Florida Auto Supply, counterclaimed against the appellant, Parts Depot, for antitrust violations, alleging that Parts Depot, a warehouse distributor of auto parts, and Vero Beach Auto Parts, an auto parts "jobber," conspired to damage Florida Auto Supply as a competitor of Vero Beach Auto Parts. On the first day of trial, the trial court allowed the appellee to amend its counterclaim alleging that others conspired with Vero Beach Auto Parts in further violation of antitrust laws. After trial on the merits, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the appellee. Because we find that the appellee did not prove either a horizontal or vertical conspiracy in restraint of trade, we reverse.

In April 1989, J.C. Impellitier opened Florida Auto Supply as an independent jobber in Vero Beach after years of working at Bennett Auto Supply (Bennett), a chain of auto parts stores. Ben Clair, Inc., the warehouse distributor arm of Bennett, supplied Florida Auto Supply with start-up inventory in exchange for cash and a promissory note, which was secured by a lien on the inventory. Shortly thereafter, Steego Parts Corporation (Steege) began supplying Florida Auto Supply with auto parts and offered overnight delivery.

In the auto parts business, most orders from garages are placed with a distributor in the morning. Most parts warehouses offer same day delivery of morning orders to the distributors who can then deliver to the garages. If an order comes in after 9:30 a.m., the "same day" warehouse deliveries cannot fill the order that day and must deliver the next day, but the delivery would not arrive until the afternoon. Overnight delivery allows orders placed in the afternoon to arrive at the distributor before the morning, so that the part is available when the garage opens up. Steege offered this service as a way of 323 attracting customers. When Florida

Auto Supply obtained overnight delivery, it marked up its price to its customers by 50 percent. There was no testimony as to the amount of Florida Auto Supply's mark-up on same day service.

In November 1989, Steego sold its assets to Parts Depot, including the account receivable from Florida Auto Supply. On December 15, 1989, the manager of Parts Depot informed Florida Auto Supply that it would no longer do business with Florida Auto Supply. According to Impellitier, this came out of the blue. A day or two later, Impellitier phoned Don Thompson of Parts Depot, a friend of Impellitier, and asked him to look into the termination. Thompson was informed by the Parts Depot president that some independent jobbers had complained that Parts Depot was selling to a Bennett store, thus hurting Parts Depot's independent jobber customers. Thompson told the Parts Depot president that Florida Auto Supply was not a Bennett store and suggested that this could be proven by checking to see if Ben Clair, Inc. or Bennett had filed a UCC lien to protect their inventory. There was a UCC statement on file from Ben Clair. Thompson called Impellitier and told him that because Ben Clair held a UCC lien on Florida Auto Supply, they believed Florida Auto Supply was a Bennett store, even though denied by Florida Auto Supply.

Impellitier testified that being cut off from overnight delivery hurt his business reputation, causing economic problems. For a while in 1992, he found another overnight supplier but that supplier opened its own store in the Vero Beach area and stopped supplying him. He admitted that overnight delivery could be provided by United Parcel Service (UPS), but that service was expensive and would put him at a competitive disadvantage with other retailers.

Vero Beach Auto Parts continued to be serviced by Parts Depot. It was owned by the son of the president of Parts Depot, with a minority share being held by the president. One of Florida Auto Supply's employees testified that he had heard the son state that he would drive Florida Auto Supply out of business. Yet Florida Auto Supply and Vero Beach Auto Parts continued to do business with each other, buying available parts from each other as needed. There were also other jobbers in Vero Beach, some of whom were served by Parts Depot. Three customers of Florida Auto Supply testified that while they used Florida Auto Supply for most of their purchases because it had the lowest prices, they went to other jobbers when they wanted overnight delivery. This was for customer convenience, however, not because of price. Two of the customers testified that they used Vero Beach Auto Parts, and one testified that he used Kirby Auto Parts, when overnight delivery was required. None testified that overnight service was more expensive as a result of Florida Auto Supply's departure from that segment of the market.

In response, the president of Parts Depot testified that the decision not to sell to Florida Auto Supply was prompted by the existence of the UCC filing statement on the inventory of the store. Parts Depot had experienced a competitor removing inventory of one of its customers based on a UCC lien, thereby threatening Parts Depot's security interest on its own account with that customer. Since Ben Clair had filed a UCC lien on Florida Auto Supply's inventory, Parts Depot did not want to be placed in a financially insecure position with a customer again. The president of Parts Depot denied that his decision to refuse Florida Auto Supply an account was because it was in competition with Vero Beach Auto Parts.

Other than the testimony of Thompson that the president of Parts Depot had stated that some independent jobbers had complained about Parts Depot's supplying to Florida Auto Supply, there was no testimony from any independent jobber about any complaints, threats, or agreements with Parts Depot.

The jury returned a verdict for Florida Auto Supply for $28,000, which the trial court trebled pursuant to section 542.22, Florida Statutes (1989). From the final judgment, the appellant takes this appeal.

[1][2] The appellant claims that the trial court erred in denying the motion for judgment in accordance with its prior motion for *324 directed verdict, because the appellee failed to prove its case. In ruling on the motion, all evidence must be construed, and all inferences drawn, in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. See, e.g., Collins v. School Bd. of Broward County, 471 So.2d 560, 563 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985), writ dismissed, 491 So.2d 280 (Fla.1986). Nevertheless, "[t]he jury's role as the finder of fact does not entitle it to return a verdict based only on confusion, speculation or prejudice; its verdict must be reasonably based on evidence presented at trial." H.L. Moore Drug Exch. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 662 F.2d 935, 941 (2d Cir.1981) (quoting Michelman v. Clark-Schwebel Fiber Glass Corp., 534 F.2d 1036, 1042 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 885, 97 S.Ct. 236, 50 L.Ed.2d 166 (1976)), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 880, 103 S.Ct. 176, 74 L.Ed.2d 144 (1982).

While the appellee sued under section 542.18, Florida Statutes (1989), which prohibits conspiracies in restraint of trade, the Legislature has directed courts to rely on comparable federal antitrust statutes in construing this statute. § 542.32, Fla.Stat. (1989). Therefore, we look to federal cases to elucidate what is an agreement in restraint of trade and what proof constitutes a conspiracy.

[3] Case law has categorized restraints on competition as being either vertical or horizontal:

"Vertical" restraints upon competition are those imposed by persons or firms on a different level of the distribution system than the level of the persons or firms receiving the impact of the restraints, e.g., resale price fixing may involve a manufacturer dictating the price at which a dealer sells a product. On the other hand, "horizontal" restraints are those imposed within the same distribution level, e.g., by some dealers refusing to sell to other dealers.

St. Petersburg Yacht Charters, Inc. v. Morgan Yacht, Inc., 457 So.2d 1028, 1031 (Fla. 2d DCA 1984). Horizontal restraints also encompass the situation where dealers conspire to induce the manufacturer to refuse to deal with a particular dealer. Id. at 1040.

In "distributor-termination cases" concerning vertical restraints, the Supreme Court has established several important distinctions.

First there is the basic distinction between concerted and independent action--a distinction not always clearly drawn by parties and courts. Section 1 of the Sherman Act requires that there be a "contract, combination ... or conspiracy" between the manufacturer and other distributors in order to establish a violation. 15 U.S.C. § 1. Independent action is not proscribed. A manufacturer of course generally has a right to deal, or refuse to deal, with whomever it likes, as long as it does so independently....

The second important distinction in distributor-termination cases is that between concerted action to set prices and concerted action on nonprice restrictions. The former have been per se illegal since the early years of national antitrust enforcement. The latter are judged under the rule of reason, which requires a weighing of the relevant circumstances of a case to decide whether a restrictive practice constitutes an unreasonable restraint on competition.

Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Serv. Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 761, 104 S.Ct. 1464, 1469, 79 L.Ed.2d 775, 783-84 (1984) (citations omitted).

In the instant case, the appellee has alleged both a vertical and a horizontal conspiracy. Neither have been proven in accordance with antitrust law.

[4] The allegations which form the basis for the horizontal conspiracy or group boycott consist of the complaints by other jobbers, none of whom were named, that Parts Depot was selling to a Bennett store. A manufacturer's mere receipt of complaints from its wholesalers or agents who compete with the plaintiff, standing alone, does not constitute a conspiracy. H.L. Moore Drug Exch., 662 F.2d at 941; Oreck Corp. v.

Whirlpool Corp., 639 F.2d 75, 80 (2d Cir.1980), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1083, 102 S.Ct. 639, 70 L.Ed.2d 618 (1981).

Even where a termination follows the receipt of complaints from wholesalers or agents, there is no basis for inferring the *325 existence of concerted action, absent some other evidence of a tacit understanding or agreement with them. Finally, the mere fact that a business reason advanced by a defendant for its cut-off of a customer is undermined does not, by itself, justify the inference that the conduct was therefore the result of a conspiracy. Even if a manufacturer or supplier, acting independently, gave a false or inaccurate reason for its action, whether because of a desire to avoid controversy or some other consideration, this would not violate any legal obligation to the customer, absent proof of a conspiracy or breach of contract.

H.L. Moore Drug Exch., 662 F.2d at 941 (citations omitted).

[5] In the instant case, the only evidence of a horizontal conspiracy was the testimony of Thompson that a few jobbers complained that Parts Depot was selling to a Bennett store. There were no threats or allegations of concerted action between Parts Depot and these unnamed jobbers. Under H.L. Moore Drug Exchange, the evidence was insufficient to prove a conspiracy. Moreover, while the appellee sought to demonstrate that the appellant's alleged business reason for cutting off Florida Auto Supply--the UCC lien filed against its inventory--was not credible due to discrepancies in the testimony of the president of Parts Depot, even if the business reason given for terminating the appellee was undermined, it still does not justify an inference that a conspiracy occurred absent some proof of that conspiracy. Id. Thus, what we have are two evidentiary facts, neither of which can circumstantially prove, either alone or considered together, that a conspiracy occurred.

The policy reason for why this conduct does not constitute a conspiracy in violation of antitrust laws has been expressed by the Supreme Court in Monsanto:

Permitting an agreement to be inferred merely from the existence of complaints, or even from the fact that termination came about "in response to" complaints, could deter or penalize perfectly legitimate conduct.

As Monsanto points out, complaints about price-cutters "are natural--and from the manufacturer's perspective, unavoidable--reactions by distributors to the activities of their rivals." Such complaints, particularly where the manufacturer has imposed a costly set of nonprice restrictions, "arise in the normal course of business and do not indicate illegal concerted action." Moreover, distributors are an important source of information for manufacturers. In order to assure an efficient distribution system, manufacturers and distributors constantly must coordinate their activities to assure that their product will reach the consumer persuasively and efficiently. To bar a manufacturer from acting solely because the information upon which it acts originated as a price complaint would create an irrational dislocation in the market. In sum, "[t]o permit the inference of concerted action on the basis of receiving complaints alone and thus to expose the defendant to treble damage liability would both inhibit management's exercise of independent business judgment and emasculate the terms of the statute." Edward J. Sweeney & Sons, Inc. v. Texaco, Inc., 637 F.2d 105, 111, n. 2 (CA3 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 911, 101 S.Ct. 1981, 68 L.Ed.2d 300 (1981).

465 U.S. at 763-64, 104 S.Ct. at 1470 (citations and footnote omitted).

[6][7][8] Instead of a group boycott, the proof shows two conspirators, Parts Depot and Vero Beach Auto Parts. Because these companies are on different functional levels in the distribution scheme, this at best would be a vertical conspiracy, not a horizontal one. Only vertical conspiracies to set prices constitute per se violations of antitrust laws. Monsanto, 465 U.S. at 761, 104 S.Ct. at 1469. Other violations are governed by the "rule of reason," which requires the plaintiff to prove that a restrictive practice constitutes an unreasonable restraint on competition. Id. The appellee produced no evidence on this issue. It did not show what the net economic effect of its removal from the "overnight delivery of auto parts" market had on the availability or price of overnight delivery in Vero Beach. See, e.g., Oreck Corp. v. Whirlpool Corp., 579 F.2d 126, 128 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 946, 99 S.Ct. 340, 58 L.Ed.2d 338 (1978). Instead, it showed what *326 effect Parts Depot's refusal to sell to Florida Auto Supply had on its financial picture. That is not sufficient. Antitrust laws are for the protection of competition, not for the protection of individual competitors. See St. Petersburg Yacht, 457 So.2d at 1047.

In this case, the restraint was Parts Depot's termination of Florida Auto Supply thus eliminating it from its overnight service. Because non-price vertical restraints are governed by the rule of reason, in order to prove a violation, a plaintiff must show that the action actually amounted to an unreasonable restraint on competition. St. Petersburg Yacht, 457 So.2d at 1035-1036. "Under [the rule of reason], the fact-finder weighs all of the circumstances of a case in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition." Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania, Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 49, 97 S.Ct. 2549, 2557, 53 L.Ed.2d 568, 580 (1977).

[9] Three elements must be alleged and proved under the rule of reason test: 1) that there is a specifically defined market; 2) that the defendants possessed the ability to affect price or output; and 3) that plaintiff's exclusion from the market did affect or was intended to affect the price or supply of goods in that market. Greenberg v. Mount Sinai Medical Ctr., 629 So.2d 252, 257 (Fla. 3d DCA 1993). "It is not enough to allege that plaintiffs were injured; there must be an allegation of harm to competition in general." Id.

Although the appellee alleged a harm to the market, there was no proof of it. The evidence showed that while Florida Auto Supply was unable to deliver parts overnight, its customers were still able to obtain such service from at least two sources (Vero Beach Auto Parts and Kirby Auto Supply). Moreover, Florida Auto Supply itself could have delivered overnight service by using UPS. It chose not to because it was too costly to use. However, the fact that Florida Auto could not deliver the service as cheaply as others is not evidence of harm to the market. "The antitrust laws are not intended to support artificially firms that cannot effectively compete on their own. It is only when the market is being distorted by anticompetitive conduct that the antitrust laws should be invoked." Seagood Trading Corp. v. Jerrico, Inc., 924 F.2d 1555, 1573 (11th Cir.1991). Here there was no proof that prices were higher as a result of Florida Auto Supply's failure to compete in the market or that the supply was diminished. Thus, there was no evidence from which a jury could find harm to the market. Harm to Florida Auto Supply is not equated with harm to the market actionable under the antitrust laws.

For the foregoing reasons, we hold that the trial court erred in denying the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. There was no evidence of a horizontal conspiracy, and as to the alleged vertical conspiracy there was no evidence of any distortion in the market caused by Parts Depot's refusal to sell to Florida Auto Supply. We therefore reverse and remand for a judgment in favor of the appellant on the counterclaim. For the same reasons, we also reverse the award of attorney's fees in favor of the appellee in the consolidated appeal.

GLICKSTEIN and STONE, JJ., concur.

669 So.2d 321, 1996-1 Trade Cases P
71,342, 21 Fla. L. Weekly D633

END OF DOCUMENT

65

Supreme Court, New York County, New York, Special Term.

PEARCE et al.
v.
KNEPPER et al.

Feb. 24, 1945.

Action by Henry Pearce and another, doing business as partners under the firm name and style of Pearce & Mayer, licensed real estate brokers, and another against Ada L. Knepper and another for breach of a brokerage agreement, malicious inducement of such breach and conspiracy to effect breach thereof. On defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint.

Motion denied.

West Headnotes

[1] Brokers 63(2)
65k63(2)

A provision in brokerage agreement that no commission should be considered earned, if deal were not consummated and title to property involved not passed for any reason, did not absolve owner from liability to brokers for breach of contract by arbitrarily refusing to consummate deal.

[2] Contracts 154
95k154

A court will endeavor, wherever possible, to avoid such construction of contract as would place one party thereto at another's mercy.

[3] Contracts 108(2)
95k108(2)

A contract which will relieve a party thereto from consequences of his fraud or bad faith cannot be validly entered into.

[4] Conspiracy 8
91k8

The fact that brokers' agreement is terminable by parties at will for any cause does not deprive brokers of cause of action against stranger to agreement or both such stranger and other party thereto for conspiracy to induce such party's breach of agreement.

*846 Saul Pearce, of New York City, for plaintiffs.

Karl Propper, of New York City, for defendants.

SHIENTAG, Justice.

This is a motion by the defendants to dismiss the four causes of action in the complaint on the ground that each of them is insufficient in law.

The first cause of action alleges a brokerage agreement with the defendant Ada Knepper, the performance by plaintiff of the terms of the employment, and then alleges that the defendant Ada L. Knepper 'unlawfully, arbitrarily, capriciously, without reasonable cause, in bad faith and for the purpose of depriving and defrauding plaintiffs of their commissions failed and refused to consummate the transaction, and to convey the said property to the purchaser upon the terms prescribed by the said defendant.' The second cause alleges the same facts but asserts in addition that the agreement was in writing. The third cause is against both defendants on the ground that the defendant Herman Knepper wrongfully and maliciously induced the other defendant, his daughter-in-law, to breach the agreement; the fourth cause is also against both defendants, plaintiff claiming that they conspired to effect the breach of the agreement which plaintiff had with the defendant Ada Knepper.

[1][2] The first two causes are assailed on the ground that the agreement contains an exculpatory provision from liability which reads: 'Should the deal not be consummated and title not passed for any reason whatsoever, there shall be no commission considered earned.' It is therefore argued by the defendants that the words quoted should be interpreted to mean that the defendant Ada Knepper could arbitrarily, capriciously, fraudulently or in bad faith refuse to consummate the deal. No such interpretation is warranted by the language of the parties and the court wherever possible will endeavor to avoid a construction which would result in placing one party to a contract at the mercy of another. Reliable Press v. Bristol Carpet Cleaning Co., 261 App.Div. 256, 25 N.Y.S.2d 70; Stern v. Gepo Realty Corporation, 289 N.Y. 274, 275, 45 N.E.2d 440, 441; Amies v. Weskofske, 255 N.Y. 156, 174 N.E. 436, 73 A.L.R. 918; see also Greenwald v. Rosen, 61 Misc. 260, 261, 113 N.Y.S. 764, 765.

53 N.Y.S.2d 845

END OF DOCUMENT

[3] Indeed it may safely be asserted that no contract could ever be entered into which would relieve a party thereto from the consequences of his fraud or bad faith. The first and second causes of action therefore are sufficient as matter of law.

[4] The third and fourth causes of action are challenged by defendants on the ground that since the agreement pleaded in the second cause of action was under their interpretation terminable at will, for *847 any cause, plaintiff could not have a cause of action against the defendant Herman Knepper or both defendants for conspiracy to induce the breach of the agreement between Ada Knepper and plaintiff. There is no authority for the position taken by the defendants. See Lurie v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 270 N.Y. 379, 1 N.E.2d 472; and Hitchman Coal & Coke Co. v. Mitchell, 245 U.S. 229, 38 S.Ct. 65, 62 L.Ed. 260, L.R.A.1918C, 497, Ann.Cas.1918B, 461. In the last-cited case the Supreme Court of the United States said that 'the fact that the employment is at the will of the parties, respectively, does not make it one at the will of others. The employe has manifest interest in the freedom of the employer to exercise his judgment without illegal interference or compulsion, and, by the weight of authority, the unjustified interference of third persons is actionable although the employment is at will.' 245 U.S. at pages 251, 252, 38 S.Ct. at page 72, 62 L.Ed. 260, L.R.A.1918C, 497, Ann.Cas.1918B, 461.

Accordingly, the third and fourth causes of action are sufficient and the defendants' motion is in all respects denied.

66

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Third District.

PEOPLES GAS SYSTEM, INC. and People
Gas Co. f/u/b/o American Home Assurance Co., Appellants,

v.

ACME GAS CORPORATION; Atlantic Gas
Corporation; Boye's Gas, Inc.; City Gas Company of Florida; Delta Gas Company d/b/a Universal Gas Corporation; Dolphin Gas System; Home Gas Corporation;
Metrogas Inc.; Miller Gas
Company; Petrolane Gas Service; Public Gas Company; Siegal Gas Corporation;
BJD Energy Development Company d/b/a Sun
Gas Corporation of Florida; Weeks
Bottle Gas and Appliance Company; Miramar
Gas Company; Liberty Gas Company;
Palm Gas Service Company; and Blau Gas of Florida, Inc., Appellees.

Nos. 95-1282, 95-1942.

Jan. 15, 1997.

Rehearing Denied March 19, 1997.

Residential customer brought personal injury action against natural gas local distribution companies (LDC), including designated responder under emergency response system, arising from gas explosion in customer's home. After settlement releasing defendants and members of system, responder brought third-party action for contribution and indemnity against fellow members of system. Members moved for summary judgment. The Circuit Court, Dade County, Michael H. Salmon, J., granted motions, and awarded attorney fees and costs to certain members, based upon responder's rejection of members' offers of judgment. Responder appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Green, J., held that: (1) question of whether system could be deemed partnership, joint venture, or unincorporated association was irrelevant and, thus, allegation that question could only be determined by jury did not preclude summary judgment against responder on third-party action; (2) responder was not acting within scope of its duties for system when it responded to neighbors' telephone call concerning gas-like odor and, thus, members were not liable to responder for contribution and indemnity based on responder's discharge of purportedly common liability; (3) indemnity agreements executed by members did not render them liable in indemnity to responder, even assuming that neighbors' call was system call; and (4) trial court could award attorney fees and costs to members whose offers of judgment for $2,500 were rejected by responder, despite contention that offers were meager and not made in good faith.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Judgment 181(15.1)
228k181(15.1)

Question of whether gas companies' emergency response system could be deemed partnership, joint venture, or unincorporated association was irrelevant and, thus, allegation that question could only be determined by jury did not preclude summary judgment against designated responder under system on responder's third-party action for contribution and indemnity against fellow members of system in personal injury action brought against responder, arising from gas explosion; unless neighbors' telephone call to responder was deemed a response system emergency, members would have no liability to responder, regardless of whether system was characterized as partnership, joint venture, or unincorporated association. West's F.S.A. § 620.585; F.S.1989, §§ 620.62, 620.63(1).

[2] Associations 1
41k1

"Unincorporated associations" are generally created and formed by voluntary action of a number of individuals in associating themselves together under common name for accomplishment of some lawful purpose.

[3] Contribution 5(6.1)
96k5(6.1)

[3] Indemnity 65
208k65

(Formerly 208k13.2(4.1))

Natural gas local distribution company (LDC) which was designated responder under emergency response system was not acting within scope of its duties for system when it responded to neighbors' telephone call concerning gas-like odor and, thus, fellow members of system were not liable to responder for contribution and indemnity as to claims of residential customer in personal injury action arising from gas explosion in customer's home, based on responder's discharge of purportedly common liability; neighbors' call was made to responder's personal telephone number as result of responder's advertisement in telephone directory, and responder's actions at neighbors' residence mainly did not correspond with system's agreed-upon procedures for handling emergency calls. Restatement of Restitution § 86.

[4] Judgment 181(15.1)
228k181(15.1)

Bare self-serving assertions made by natural gas local distribution company (LDC), which was designated responder under emergency response system, that it was acting on system's behalf when it responded to neighbor's call, without more, were insufficient to defeat summary judgment for fellow system members on responder's third-party action for contribution and indemnity against members in gas explosion action. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.510(c).

[5] Indemnity 33(1)
208k33(1)

(Formerly 208k8(2.1))

Indemnity agreements executed by fellow members of emergency response system did not render members liable in indemnity to natural gas local distribution company (LDC), that was designated responder under system, as to residential customer's gas explosion claim, even assuming that neighbors' call to responder concerning gas-like odor was system call, where hold harmless agreements executed between responder and members called for indemnity only from gas company whose property was involved in emergency, and that would be member that was not party in instant case.

[6] Parties 56
287k56

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it denied request of natural gas local distribution company (LDC), that was designated responder under emergency response system, to amend its third-party complaint against fellow members of system to plead count for equitable contribution, in gas explosion action in which responder had sought contribution and indemnity against members.

[7] Costs 194.50
102k194.50

Trial court could award attorney fees and costs to fellow members of emergency response system whose filed offers of judgment for $2,500 were rejected by natural gas local distribution company (LDC), which was designated responder under system, as to responder's third-party action against members for indemnity and contribution in gas explosion action, despite contention that offers were not made in good faith since members had reason to know their meager offers would be rejected by responder; members had reasonable basis to make nominal offers, as record strongly indicated they had no exposure in case, and fact that members might have believed responder would reject their offers was not determinative of issue of good faith. West's F.S.A. § 768.79(1), (7)(a).

[8] Costs 194.50
102k194.50

Reasonableness of plaintiff's rejection of offer of judgment is irrelevant to question of fee entitlement, for purposes of statute governing award of costs and attorney fees for defendant whose offer of settlement was rejected. West's F.S.A. § 768.79(1), (7)(a).

[9] Costs 42(2)
102k42(2)

[9] Costs 194.50

102k194.50

Obligation of good faith in statute governing award of costs and attorney fees for defendant whose offer of settlement was rejected merely insists that offeror have some reasonable foundation on which to base offer. West's F.S.A. § 768.79(7)(a).

[10] Costs 42(2)
102k42(2)

[10] Costs 194.50
102k194.50

For purposes of statute governing award of costs and attorney fees for defendant whose offer of settlement was rejected, mere belief that figure offered or demanded will not be accepted does not necessarily suggest either absence of good faith or presence of bad faith, at least where offeror fully intends to conclude settlement if offer or demand is accepted as made, and amount of offer or demand is not so widely inconsistent with known facts of case as to suggest on its face the sole purpose of creating right to fees if it is not accepted. West's F.S.A. § 768.79(1), (7)(a).

294 Nicklaus & Wicks, P.A. and William R. Wicks, Coral Gables, for appellants.

Pyszka, Kessler, Massey, Weldon, Catri, Holton & Douberley, P.A. and Gerard E. Pyszka, Miami, and Cindy J. Mishcon, North Miami Beach, for appellee Public Gas Company.

Kubicki Draper and Elizabeth M. Rodriguez, Miami, for appellees Acme Gas Corporation, Atlantic Gas Corporation, City Gas Company of Florida, Delta Gas Company d/b/a Universal Gas Corporation, Dolphin Gas System, Home Gas Corporation, Miller Gas Company, BJD Energy Development Company d/b/a Sun Gas Corporation of Florida, Weeks Bottle Gas and Appliance Company and Palm Gas Service Company.

Knecht & Knecht and Michael R. Kirby, Miami, for appellees Metrogas, Inc. and Siegal Gas Corporation.

Ponzoli, Wassenberg & Sperkacz, P.A. and

Richard L. Wassenberg, Miami, for appellee Blau Gas of Florida, Inc.

Fowler, White, Burnett, Hurley, Banick & Strickroot, P.A. and Steven E. Stark, Miami, for appellee Petrolane Gas Service.

Before NESBITT, JORGENSON and GREEN, JJ.

GREEN, Judge.

I

Peoples Gas System, Inc. and People Gas Co. f/u/b/o American Home Assurance Co. (collectively "Peoples Gas") appeal an adverse final summary judgment entered in 295 their third-party action for contribution and indemnity against appellees, all of whom were fellow members of a former emergency response system known as "Gas Central." Peoples Gas also appeals an award of attorney's fees and costs to two of the appellees, Metrogas, Inc. and Siegal Gas Corp., based upon Peoples Gas' rejection of their respective offers of judgment. We affirm the summary judgment as a matter of law based upon the undisputed facts set out below as well as the award of attorney's fees and costs to Metrogas, Inc. and Siegal Gas Corp.

GAS CENTRAL

Gas Central was a non-profit organization formed in the late 1960s by various independent gas companies throughout Dade and Broward counties. Its sole purpose was to provide qualified gas personnel after normal business hours to assist fire and police departments in emergency situations involving gas leaks. Essentially, Gas Central's members agreed to designate one member to field and respond to all incoming emergency calls from the fire and/or police departments in Dade and Broward counties. The responding gas company would then go to the scene and report to the police or fire officer in charge. The company would also secure the immediate vicinity from danger by turning off or disconnecting the gas supply. It was agreed, however, that the responding company would make no repairs unless its own gas line was involved. Rather, the responding company was specifically charged with the task of identifying the Gas Central member which owned the leaking gas line and immediately calling that company to the scene to make the necessary repairs.

The prerequisites for membership in Gas Central were that each member: 1) maintain its own liability insurance policy in an agreed amount; 2) execute a hold harmless agreement absolving the responding gas company from any liability incurred at the scene on behalf of the particular Gas Central member; [FN1] and 3) regularly provide the responding gas company with the names and phone numbers of its personnel members who were available to handle after-hours emergency matters. Whenever the designated company responded to an emergency scene with its personnel and equipment, it was entitled to bill the particular gas company whose line caused the leak for services rendered. The *296 amount paid to the responding company was not shared with the remaining Gas Central members.

FN1. Each such agreement stated in relevant part that:

* * * * *

WHEREAS, each of the parties are independent gas companies who are members of Gas Central, an informal association, organized as a cooperative effort of all the gas companies in Broward and Dade Counties, State of Florida, for the sole purpose of providing voluntary emergency assistance in these counties, and WHEREAS, Gas Central provides assistance to area rescue programs specifically assisting police and fire officers in shutting off gas supplies to buildings or areas endangered by fire or other hazards, and WHEREAS, the telephone for Gas Central is located on the premises of Indemnitee and is answered by its employees and agents, and WHEREAS, circumstances may require Indemnitee to dispatch one of its own employees on a call made to Gas Central to assist local authorities in shutting off the gas in Indemnitor's gas lines and necessitate Indemnitee's entry upon and operation of Indemnitor's property. IT IS HEREBY AGREED, in consideration of One Dollar ($1.00) and other valuable consideration paid to Indemnitor by Indemnitee, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, 1. Indemnitor hereby indemnifies and holds harmless Indemnitee from any and all liability, loss or damage Indemnitee may suffer as a result of any or all claims, demands, costs or judgments against it arising out of the activities of Indemnitee for Gas Central with respect to property of Indemnitor such as real estate, machinery, gas lines, equipment or otherwise, whether the liability loss or damage is caused by, or arises out of, the negligence of Indemnitee or of its officers, agents, employees or otherwise. 2. Indemnitor agrees to defend against any claims brought or actions filed against Indemnitee with respect to the subject of the indemnity contained herein, whether such claims or actions are rightfully or wrongfully brought or filed. In case a claim should be brought or an action filed with respect to the subject of the indemnity herein, Indemnitor agrees it will employ attorneys to appear or defend the claim or action on behalf of the indemnitee at the expense of Indemnitor. 3. Indemnitor agrees to reimburse Indemnitee for any necessary expenses, attorneys fees or other costs incurred in the enforcement of any part of this indemnity agreement thirty (30) days after receiving written notice that Indemnitee has incurred them.

* * * * *

Gas Central was an informal organization which had no officers and/or directors. Other than its agreed-upon procedures for handling emergency calls, it operated without bylaws, articles of incorporation, or a charter. Gas Central further had no budget, bank account, insurance policy, office space or letterhead of its own. Nor did the participating members fund the organization with the payment of any dues. In fact, the only things that Gas Central had were two hotline telephones with unlisted numbers for Dade and Broward counties. These unlisted numbers were made available only to the fire and police departments in Dade and Broward counties.

From 1973 until the date of the incident in question, Peoples Gas was the gas company designated to receive and field emergency Gas Central calls in its office from the fire and police departments. In addition to the unlisted Dade and Broward hotline telephones for Gas Central emergencies in its offices, Peoples Gas also had a telephone with a published number in the directory for the public to report gas leaks. Pursuant to Gas Central's established procedures, [FN2] Peoples Gas generally fielded approximately 15 to 18 Gas Central emergency calls per month. For its services, Peoples Gas routinely billed the individual Gas Central member involved when Peoples Gas dispatched its employees and/or equipment to the scene.

FN2. The relevant procedures required to be followed in handling a Gas Central emergency matter were as follows: "When a serviceman responds to a Gas Central call, he will: 1. Report on the scene to the fire officer in charge. 2. Make safe (by turning off or disconnecting gas supply). 3. Evaluate the situation and advise Gas Central if additional help or specialized equipment is required to cope with the situation. 4. Advise the fire officer in charge regarding proper handling or protection of gas equipment, the severity of any gas problem that cannot be made immediately safe and any further steps to protect life and property. The Serviceman will make no investigation or repairs, other than to make safe unless he is employed by the serving gas company. If he represents the serving gas company he will adhere to their policies concerning investigation or repair. In all cases where it is feasible geographically, Gas Central will attempt to dispatch a serviceman from the serving gas company. The responding serviceman will remain on the scene until released by the fire officer in charge."

THE EXPLOSION

Peoples Gas' third-party action against appellees arose from a complaint filed by Thomas Googe against Peoples Gas and All State Gas Co. of Fla., Inc. d/b/a "All-Pro Gas"

("All-Pro") for injuries sustained by Googe on July 1, 1989 in a gas explosion at his home. The genesis of this incident actually began the day before, on June 30, 1989 when Googe's back yard neighbors, Diane and Daniel Riefler, detected a gas-like odor in their backyard. Although the Rieflers did not utilize gas or have gas lines on their property, they decided to call a local gas company to alert them of the odor.

Mr. Riefler then combed the yellow pages of the local telephone directory to find a gas company. He ultimately selected Peoples Gas because it "was in a bigger box than the rest." He telephoned the company to alert it of the gas odor. In response, Peoples Gas dispatched several of its employees to the Riefler residence. Upon their arrival, Peoples Gas' employees took readings from a combustible gas indicator ("C.G.I."), a device used to detect gas leaks. Peoples Gas' employees received what they perceived to be a dangerously high positive reading from the C.G.I. In fact, they classified the leak as "Grade 1" which they defined as "a leak that represents an existing or probable hazard to persons or property and that taking into account the location of the leak, requires prompt action until conditions are no longer hazardous." These employees also got even higher positive gas readings as they walked away from the back of the Rieflers' home toward the property line fence which separated the Rieflers' home and Googe's residence. Despite this fact, however, Peoples Gas' employees never extended their investigation into Googe's backyard.

*297 Rather, Peoples Gas employees dug a small ventilation ditch at the corner of the Rieflers' house where the high gas reading was obtained. Despite their classification of the leak as "Grade 1," Peoples Gas' employees did not evacuate the neighborhood or warn its residents of the dangerous reading. Nor did they notify the fire and/or police departments of their findings.

At some point, someone in the area informed Peoples Gas that All-Pro, another Gas Central member, had gas lines in the area. Peoples Gas notified All-Pro to come to the scene.

Upon All-Pro's arrival to the scene, Peoples Gas' employees departed with no further involvement. All-Pro's employees did a cursory inspection of the Rieflers' property and attempted to detect the presence of gas by merely sniffing the area with their noses. [FN3] When All-Pro's employees did not smell the gas, they apparently concluded that the area was safe and left the scene approximately two and a half hours after their arrival. Because the Rieflers still insisted that they smelled gas, one of All-Pro's employees later returned to the scene and again attempted to detect for the presence of gas with his nose. When he again could not smell the gas, he departed the scene without further investigation. None of the other Gas Central members had any involvement with or knowledge of this incident at the time.

FN3. All-Pro did not bring a C.G.I. or other equipment to the scene to detect the presence of gas.

Later on July 1, 1989, Googe was severely burned over 90% of his body in a gas explosion that occurred in his bathroom. The explosion occurred when Googe lit a match to smoke a cigarette. The match ignited gas fumes which had apparently permeated into Googe's residence. Although Googe survived the incident, he endured extensive personal injuries.

UNDERLYING MAIN LITIGATION

On September 12, 1989, Googe filed the main personal injury action below solely against All-Pro and Peoples Gas. Googe thereafter entered into a $2 million settlement with All-Pro's insurance carrier. This settlement, however, released only All-Pro's individual qualifiers and its employees who were dispatched to the scene. The settlement did not, however, release All-Pro itself. [FN4] Thus, at this point, All-Pro remained a defendant in the main action.

FN4. Googe refused to release All-Pro because he was concerned that a release of All-Pro would foreclose his claim of vicarious liability against Peoples Gas for All-Pro's negligence.

Early on in the litigation, Googe successfully moved for partial summary judgment against Peoples Gas on the issue of whether Peoples Gas had vicarious liability for All-Pro's negligence in failing to make the area of the gas leak safe. Peoples Gas' carrier thereafter settled this case with Googe for $3.5 million. In addition to Peoples Gas, the settlement agreement released All-Pro and its employees and individual qualifiers, as well as all other members of Gas Central. There is no record evidence that appellees ever requested or expected Peoples Gas to procure a release on their behalf. Nor is there record evidence that appellees were even invited to participate in the settlement negotiations or were even aware that they were taking place. Upon the execution of the settlement and release agreement, the main action below was brought to a conclusion.

When the other Gas Central members subsequently refused to contribute to the $3.5 million settlement as requested, Peoples Gas filed the instant third-party action for contribution and/or indemnity against all of the members except All-Pro. [FN5] Peoples Gas sought contribution against appellees based upon its characterization of Gas Central as a general partnership, joint venture or unincorporated association. It further sought indemnity from appellees based upon the hold harmless agreements executed by each in favor of Peoples Gas. The Gas Central members in this third-party action jointly moved for summary judgment on all issues presented based upon their arguments that: (1) the Riefler call was not a Gas Central matter; *298 (2) the nature of Gas Central did not satisfy the legal requirements necessary to establish liability under a partnership, joint venture or unincorporated association theory; and (3) the express language of the hold harmless agreements executed by each Gas Central member calls for indemnity only from the company whose property was involved in the emergency, which in this case was All-Pro. Shortly thereafter, Peoples Gas sought to amend its third-party complaint to plead three counts of equitable contribution based upon its characterization of Gas Central as a partnership, joint venture or unincorporated association against the Gas Central members. Prior to the hearing on these joint motions, appellees Metrogas, Inc. and Siegal Gas Corp. each filed offers of judgment in the amount of $2,500.00. The trial court granted the joint motions for summary judgment and thereafter entered a judgment awarding Metrogas and Siegal Gas attorney's fees and costs each in the amount of $8,797.55. This appeal was taken from these judgments.

FN5. In a separate action not before this court, Peoples Gas is seeking indemnification against All-Pro pursuant to the hold harmless agreement. See supra note 1.

II

[1][2] Peoples Gas asserts that the entry of summary judgment was error where a genuine issue of material fact remained as to the precise nature of the Gas Central entity (i.e. whether it was a partnership, joint venture or unincorporated association) which could only be determined by a jury. See Spencer v. Young, 63 So.2d 334 (Fla.1953) (stating it is within the province of the factfinder to determine existence of partnership); Knepper v. Genstar Corp., 537 So.2d 619, 622-23 (Fla. 3d DCA 1988) (stating that whether an entity is a joint venture is a question for the jury), rev. denied, 545 So.2d 1367 (Fla.1989). We disagree. We find that the question of whether Gas Central may be deemed a partnership, [FN6] joint venture [FN7] or an unincorporated association [FN8] is really irrelevant in this case. That is because unless the Rieflers' telephone call is deemed a Gas Central emergency, appellees would have no liability to Peoples Gas whether Gas Central is characterized as: (1) a partnership, see §§ 620.62, 620.63(1), Fla. Stat. (1989); Lewis v. Horne, 495 So.2d 780, 781 (Fla. 3d DCA 1986) (where partner not doing partnership business during commission of tort, no liability for remaining partners), rev. denied, 504 So.2d 767 (Fla.1987); Soden v. Starkman, 218 So.2d 763, 764-65 (Fla. 3d DCA 1969) (same); (2) a joint venture, see Florida Rock & Sand Co. v. Cox, 344 So.2d 1296, 1298 (Fla. 3d DCA 1977) (deciding negligence of one joint venturer committed within the scope of the joint venture may be imputed to co-joint adventurers); Florida Tomato Packers, 296 So.2d at 539 (holding that joint adventurers are liable for each other's torts committed within the course and scope of the undertaking); or (3) an unincorporated association, see Guyton v. Howard, 525 So.2d 948, 956 (Fla. 1st DCA 1988) (drawing a distinction between such associations for business purposes and for fraternal or social purposes and finding in the former, individual liability to be governed by partnership law and in the latter, individual liability to be based upon tortious acts which the member individually commits, participates in, or authorizes, assents to or ratifies).

FN6. A "partnership" is defined in Florida's adaptation of the Uniform Partnership Act as "an association of two or more persons to carry on a business for profit as co-owners." Myers v. Brown, 296 So.2d 121, 123 (Fla. 1st DCA) (citing § 620.585, Fla. Stat.), cert. denied, 305 So.2d 203 (Fla.1974).

FN7. The elements of which have been defined as "(1) a community of interest in the performance of the common purpose, (2) joint control or right of control, (3) a joint proprietary interest in the subject matter, (4) a right to share in the profits and (5) a duty to share in any losses which may be sustained." McKissick v. Bilger, 480 So.2d 211, 212 (Fla. 1st DCA 1985) (quoting Kislak v. Kreedian, 95 So.2d 510, 515 (Fla.1957)); Campbell v. Jacksonville Kennel Club, Inc., 66 So.2d 495, 496-97 (Fla.1953); Arango v. Reyka, 507 So.2d 1211, 1212 (Fla. 4th DCA 1987); Navarro v. Espino, 316 So.2d 646, 648 (Fla. 3d DCA 1975); Florida Tomato Packers, Inc. v. Wilson, 296 So.2d 536, 539 (Fla. 3d DCA 1974), cert. denied, 327 So.2d 32 (Fla.1976); 8 Fla. Jur.2d, Business Relationships § 682 (1978).

FN8. Generally "created and formed by the voluntary action of a number of individuals in associating themselves together under a common name for the accomplishment of some lawful purpose." 4 Fla. Jur.2d Associations & Clubs §§ 1, 2 (1994); see also Penrod Drilling Co. v. Johnson, 414 F.2d 1217, 1222 (5th Cir.1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1003, 90 S.Ct. 552, 24 L.Ed.2d 495 (1970).

*299 [3][4] We think that the appropriate inquiry before us is Peoples Gas' next argument--whether there is any genuine factual issue in the record as to whether Peoples Gas was acting within the scope of its duties for Gas Central when it responded to the Rieflers' telephone call. We conclude that there is not and that summary judgment was properly entered in favor of the appellees. The bare self-serving assertions made by Peoples Gas that it was acting on Gas Central's behalf in the Riefler incident, without more, are insufficient to defeat a summary judgment. E.g., Landers v. Milton, 370 So.2d 368, 370 (Fla.1979); Hernando County v. Budget Inns, Inc., 555 So.2d 1319, 1320 n. 1 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990). Indeed, the record evidence conclusively refutes Peoples Gas' assertions.

First of all, Gas Central was established solely as a centralized emergency response system to calls placed by the police and/or fire departments. It is undisputed that the Riefler call to Peoples Gas was not such a call. The Rieflers' telephone report of the gas leak was made to Peoples Gas' personal telephone number as a result of Peoples Gas' advertisement in the yellow pages. Moreover, there is no record evidence which remotely suggests that appellees ever agreed to treat (or actually treated) consumer reports of gas leaks to Peoples Gas on Peoples Gas' public telephone number as Gas Central emergencies. Hence, there is no record evidence to even create an issue of fact as to Peoples Gas' implicit or apparent authority to so act. See R. 1.510(c), Fla. R. Civ. P.; Landers, 370 So.2d at 370; see also Lewis, 495 So.2d at 781 (approving directed verdict on grounds that tortious activity by partner of defendant was outside scope of partnership business).

The unrefuted evidence also reflects that Peoples Gas' actions at the Rieflers' residence for the most part did not correspond with Gas Central's agreed upon procedures for handling emergency calls. See supra note 2. Although Peoples Gas classified the gas leak as a "Grade 1", it never notified either the fire or police departments of this dangerous condition. Peoples Gas never made the area "safe" as defined in Gas Central's procedures by turning off or disconnecting gas supply. Indeed, contrary to Gas Central's established directive that the designated company make no repairs unless its own lines were involved in the emergency, Peoples Gas attempted to alleviate the gas odor by digging holes in the Riefler's backyard to provide ventilation for the gas fumes. Moreover, and most importantly, none of the appellees had any involvement in this incident. There is thus simply no record evidence to support Peoples Gas' assertion that this was a Gas Central emergency so as to afford it with an opportunity to seek contribution from appellees for discharging a common liability. E.g., Albertson's, Inc. v. Adams, 473 So.2d 231, 233 (Fla. 2d DCA 1985) (stating action for contribution does not lie in absence of joint and several liability), rev. denied, 482 So.2d 347 (Fla.1986); Touche Ross & Co. v. Sun Bank, 366 So.2d 465, 467-68 (Fla. 3d DCA) (denying relief where party seeking contribution was not a joint tortfeasor, nor jointly and severally liable, with the contribution defendant), cert. denied, 378 So.2d 350 (Fla.1979); see also Restatement of Restitution § 86 at 389-90 (1937) (noting need for common liability to trigger right of contribution); accord § 768.31, Fla. Stat. (1991) (providing for statutory contribution among joint tortfeasors).

[5] Moreover, we find that Peoples Gas' claim for indemnity from appellees to be specifically belied by the unambiguous and express language found in each of the hold harmless agreements drafted by Peoples Gas. Even assuming, arguendo, that the Riefler matter could somehow be deemed a Gas Central call, the hold harmless agreements executed between Peoples Gas and each of the appellees call for indemnity only from the gas company whose property was involved in the emergency. In this case that would be only All-Pro. Thus, none of the appellees would be liable for indemnity to Peoples Gas under their respective executed indemnity agreements in any event.

[6] Finally, based upon the undisputed record before the court, we cannot conclude that the trial court abused its discretion when it denied Peoples Gas' request to amend the third party complaint to plead a count for equitable contribution. Cf. *Bondu 300 v. Gurvich, 473 So.2d 1307, 1310 n. 2 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984) (stating that abuse of discretion occurs where amendment sought would state a viable claim different than one pleaded in the original complaint), rev. denied, 484 So.2d 7 (Fla.1986).

For these reasons, we affirm the entry of summary judgment.

III

[7] Having concluded that appellees have no liability to Peoples Gas and that summary judgment was appropriately entered, we address Peoples Gas' remaining contention on appeal, that the trial court erred in awarding Metrogas and Siegal Gas attorney's fees and costs. Pursuant to section 768.79(1), Florida Statutes (1991) [FN9], Metrogas and Siegal Gas each filed offers of judgment for $2,500.00 in this third-party action. Peoples Gas declined to accept either of these offers of judgment. Consequently, when summary judgment was entered in favor of Metrogas and Siegal Gas on the issue of liability, the trial court awarded $8,797.55 as attorney's fees and costs to each of these entities in accordance with that part of section 768.79(1) which states:

FN9. That section provides: In any civil action for damages filed in the courts of this state, if a defendant files an offer of judgment which is not accepted by the plaintiff within 30 days, the defendant shall be entitled to recover reasonable costs and attorney's fees incurred by him or on his behalf pursuant to a policy of liability insurance or other contract from the date of filing of the offer if the judgment is one of no liability or the judgment obtained by the plaintiff is at least 25 percent less than such offer, and the court shall set off such costs and attorney's fees against the award. Where such costs and attorney's fees total more than the judgment, the court shall enter judgment for the defendant against the plaintiff for the amount of the costs and fees, less the amount of the plaintiff's award.

[I]f a defendant files an offer of judgment which is not accepted by the plaintiff within 30 days, the defendant shall be entitled to recover reasonable costs and attorney's fees incurred by him or on his behalf ... if the judgment is one of no liability....

Peoples Gas nevertheless asserts that this was error pursuant to section 768.79(7)(a) [FN10] because neither of these offers were made in good faith where both Metrogas and Siegal Gas had reason to know that their meager offers would be rejected by Peoples Gas. Peoples Gas essentially argues that its rejection of both of these offers was reasonable where combined, these offers only totaled approximately ".00142857%" of the $3.5 million settlement amount it sought in its third-party complaint.

FN10. Section 768.79(7)(a), Florida Statutes (1991) provides that: If a party is entitled to costs and fees pursuant to the provisions of this section, the court may, in its discretion, determine that an offer was not made in good faith. In such case, the court may disallow an award of costs and attorney's fees.

[8][9][10] Peoples Gas' argument has, however, been specifically rejected by the supreme court's recent decision in Knealing v. Puleo, 675 So.2d 593 (Fla.1996). In Knealing, the court approved the Fourth District's decisions in Puleo v. Knealing, 654 So.2d 148 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995) and Schmidt v. Fortner, 629 So.2d 1036 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993) which held that "the right to an award [of attorney's fees and costs] depends only on the amount of the rejected offer and the amount of the later judgment." 675 So.2d at 595. "[T]he reasonableness of the plaintiff's rejection is irrelevant to the question of fee entitlement." Id. Here, where neither Metrogas or Siegal Gas was found to have any liability to Peoples Gas, they were clearly entitled to recover an award of reasonable attorney's fees and costs pursuant to section 768.79(1). "The obligation of good faith [found in section 768.79(7)(a)] merely insists that the offeror have some reasonable foundation on which to base an offer." Schmidt, 629 So.2d at 1039. We conclude that where the undisputed record strongly indicated that they had no exposure in this case, Metrogas and Siegal Gas had such a reasonable basis to make nominal offers to Peoples Gas. Moreover, the fact that Metrogas and Siegal Gas may have believed that Peoples Gas would reject their nominal offers is not determinative of the issue of good faith:

A mere belief that the figure offered or demanded will not be accepted, on the other hand, does not necessarily suggest to *301 us either the absence of good faith or the presence of bad faith--at least where the offeror fully intends to conclude a settlement if the offer or demand is accepted as made, and the amount of the offer or demand is not so widely inconsistent with the known facts of the case as to suggest on its face the sole purpose of creating a right to fees if it is not accepted.

Schmidt, 629 So.2d at 1040 n. 5.

We, therefore, affirm the order awarding attorney's fees and costs to Metrogas and Siegal Gas.

Affirmed.

689 So.2d 292, 22 Fla. L. Weekly D205

END OF DOCUMENT

67

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Third District.

POE & ASSOCIATES, INC., Appellant,
v.
ESTATE OF Ronald VOGLER, deceased,
Ronald W. Vogler, P.A., and Leopoldo
Hernandez, Appellees.

No. 89-390.

April 3, 1990.
Rehearing Denied May 18, 1990.

Insurance agent appealed from an order of the Circuit Court, Dade County, Sidney B. Shapiro, J., which granted summary judgment declaring it liable to plaintiffs for its unauthorized cancellation of legal malpractice insurance coverage for its insured. The District Court of Appeal, Baskin, J., held that in view of policy provision extending coverage until discharge of insured's executor or administrator, insurance agent, upon learning of insured's death, should have waited for instructions from the estate prior to cancelling insured's legal malpractice insurance policy; agent should not have acted on instructions of insured's clerical staff, as neither bookkeeper nor secretary had authority to issue instructions to insurance agent.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Principal and Agent 48
308k48

[1] Principal and Agent 50
308k50

An agent owes his principal obligation of high fidelity, and he may not proceed without or beyond his authority.

[2] Insurance 1944
217k1944
(Formerly 217k238.1, 217k238(1))

In view of policy provision extending coverage until discharge of insured's executor or administrator, insurance agent, upon learning of insured's death, should have waited for instructions from the estate prior to cancelling insured's legal malpractice insurance coverage; agent should not have acted on instructions of insured's clerical staff, as neither bookkeeper nor secretary had authority to issue instructions to insurance agent.

*1236 Arthur J. Morburger, Alvan N. Weinstein, Miami, for appellant.

Evan J. Langbein, Miami, for appellees.

Before BASKIN, FERGUSON and JORGENSEN, JJ.

BASKIN, Judge.

Poe & Associates, Inc., [Poe] appeals a final summary judgment declaring it liable to Leopoldo and Merida Hernandez [collectively "Hernandez"] for its unauthorized cancellation of insurance coverage for Ronald W. Vogler [Vogler] and Ronald W. Vogler, P.A. [P.A.]. We affirm.

Hernandez sued Vogler's professional association and his estate for damages arising from Vogler's alleged legal malpractice. Pacific Employers Insurance Company [Pacific], Vogler's malpractice insurance carrier, was joined as a party because it had cancelled Vogler's coverage without first ascertaining whether any claims were pending against Vogler. Pacific moved for summary judgment, attaching in support of the motion a copy of a letter it had received from Poe, the P.A.'s insurance agent, requesting cancellation of the policy. The trial court granted summary judgment. As a consequence, Hernandez moved to add Poe as a defendant on the ground that Poe, as insurance agent for Vogler and the P.A., had cancelled the coverage without the personal representative's permission, when it knew, or should have known, of Hernandez's claim. Poe claimed that it acted on the instructions of a bookkeeper or secretary. The malpractice claim proceeded to trial and culminated in the entry of final judgment against the P.A. and Vogler's estate. The court resolved Hernandez's claim against Poe, severed at Poe's request, by the entry of a final summary judgment in favor of Hernandez. Poe appeals.

[1][2] "It has long been well settled that an agent owes his principal the obligation of high fidelity, and that he may not proceed without or beyond his authority." Crawford v. DiMicco, 216 So.2d 769, 772 (Fla. 4th DCA 1968); United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Johnston, 431 So.2d 1018, 1021 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983). Poe was Vogler's insurance agent, and Vogler and the P.A. were the named insureds. In view of the policy provision extending coverage until the discharge of the insured's executor or administrator, Poe, upon learning of Vogler's death, should have waited for instructions from the estate; it should not have acted on the instructions of Vogler's clerical staff, as neither the bookkeeper nor the secretary had authority to issue instructions to Poe. Thus, the trial court correctly ruled that Poe should not have cancelled the insurance policy. Under the circumstances of this case, where the material facts were undisputed, summary judgment was appropriate. Moore v. Morris, 475 So.2d 666 (Fla.1985); Holl v. Talcott, 191 So.2d 40 (Fla.1966); Paul v. Brumby, 548 So.2d 286 (Fla. 3d DCA 1989); Braidi Trading Co. v. Anthony R. Abraham Enterprises, Inc., 469 So.2d 955 (Fla. 3d DCA 1985); Mejiah v. Rodriguez, 342 So.2d 1066 (Fla. 3d DCA 1977).

Poe's remaining points on appeal were not raised in the trial court and may not be considered here for the first time in an *1237 appeal. Dober v. Worrell, 401 So.2d 1322 (Fla.1981); Ashley v. Ocean Roc Motel, Inc., 518 So.2d 943 (Fla. 3d DCA 1987), review denied, 528 So.2d 1181 (Fla.1988); Abrams v. Paul, 453 So.2d 826 (Fla. 1st DCA 1983).

Affirmed.

559 So.2d 1235, 15 Fla. L. Weekly D876

END OF DOCUMENT

68

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

POLYCAST TECHNOLOGY CORPORATION and Uniroyal Plastics Acquisition Corp., Plaintiffs,

v.

UNIROYAL, INC., CDU Holding, Inc., Joseph
P. Flannery, John R. Graham,
Alexander R. Castaldi, Robert Alvine, Donald
L. Nevins, Jr., Alfred Weber,
Clayton & Dubilier, Inc., the Clayton &
Dubilier Private Equity Fund Limited Partnership, Clayton & Dubilier Associates
Limited Partnership, Martin H.
Dubilier, Joseph L. Rice III, and Alan R.
Elton, Martin H. Dubilier, Joseph P.
Flannery, John R. Graham, and Joseph L.
Rice III as Trustees of CDU Holding, Inc. Liquidating Trust, Defendants.

No. 87 Civ. 3297.

May 4, 1992.

Purchaser of corporation brought action against parties involved in sale alleging violation of securities law, common-law fraud, and Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO). The District Court, Haight, J., held that: (1) genuine issues of material fact existed precluding summary judgment on securities fraud claims and claim for controlling liability; (2) purchaser failed to establish RICO claim; and (3) issues of fact existed precluding summary judgment on claim of negligent misrepresentation under New York law.

Ordered accordingly.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure 2470
170Ak2470

On motion for summary judgment, court's responsibility is to assess whether there are any factual issues to be tried, while resolving ambiguities and drawing reasonable inferences against moving party. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure 2470.1
170Ak2470.1

While party resisting summary judgment must show dispute of fact, fact must also be material fact in light of substantive law. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Securities Regulation 60.18
349Bk60.18

To establish claim for securities fraud, plaintiff must allege and prove that, in connection with purchase or sale of securities, defendant, acting with scienter, made false material representation or omitted to disclose material information and that plaintiff's reliance on defendant's actions caused him injury. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[4] Securities Regulation 144
349Bk144

In securities cases plaintiff's burden of proof is preponderance of the evidence standard generally applicable in civil actions.

[5] Securities Regulation 60.27(5)
349Bk60.27(5)

Economy estimates, forecasts or projections are not insulated from claims for securities fraud if they were put forward in bad faith, with awareness of their inaccuracy, and intent to deceive.

[6] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether officers of corporation selling wholly owned subsidiary and officers of wholly owned subsidiary deliberately concocted false earnings forecasts to provide to purchaser, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action.

[7] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether purchaser of wholly owned subsidiary relied on earnings estimate made by officers of wholly owned subsidiary and its parent in deciding to purchase corporation and whether reliance was reasonable based on later earnings projections, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[8] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether failure to disclose to purchaser of corporation that corporation had contract cancelled was material to decision to buy corporation, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[9] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether later earnings forecasted for corporation being sold were based on earlier alleged false forecasts, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[10] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether misrepresentations made during sale of corporation caused cognizable damages to purchaser, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[11] Securities Regulation 154.1
349Bk154.1
(Formerly 349Bk154)

Out-of-pocket loss to purchaser's stock is not exclusive measure of compensatory damages in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[12] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether two members of board of directors of corporation who were also general partners of entities which held 32.5 percent equity interest in corporation which was selling wholly owned subsidiary were involved in formulation of subsidiary's allegedly false earnings projections, whether members were insiders or outsiders in conduct of affairs of corporation, and whether they participated in sale of subsidiary or acted with disregard of fraud of others, precluding summary judgment in securities fraud action. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[13] Securities Regulation 60.45(1)
349Bk60.45(1)

Motive based upon personal gain is recognized circumstance from which intent to commit securities fraud may be inferred. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

[14] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether general partners in entities which held 32.5 percent equity interest in corporation which was selling wholly owned subsidiary were controlling persons liable for securities fraud, precluding summary judgment. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a).

[15] Securities Regulation 35.15
349Bk35.15

Controlling person liability under Securities Act of 1933 does not require proof of scienter; liability attaches if there was a primary violation, control of primary violator by defendant and defendant's culpable participation in actions forming predicate for securities law violation. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 20(a), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78t(a).

[16] Securities Regulation 25.62(1)
349Bk25.62(1)

[16] Securities Regulation 25.62(2)
349Bk25.62(2)

Liability under Securities Act section rendering persons liable who offer or sell security by means of prospectus or oral communication which contains untrue statement of material fact or omits to make statement is broader than liability for fraud; such statutory sellers may be liable whether or not scienter or loss causation is shown.

Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[17] Securities Regulation 25.56
349Bk25.56

Plaintiff claiming sale or offer of security by means of prospectus or oral communication which contains untrue statement of material fact or omits to make statement must still prove that defendant sold security by means of prospectus or oral communication to recover under the Securities Act. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[18] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether estimate of earnings for corporation being sold was related to prospectus or initial offering, precluding summary judgment in action under Securities Act section which renders liable those people who offer or sell security by means of prospectus or oral communication which contains untrue statement of material fact or omits to make statement. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[19] Securities Regulation 25.62(1)
349Bk25.62(1)

Stock purchase agreement's general merger clause did not bar buyers' claim under Securities Act section rendering liable those people who offer or sell security by means of prospectus or oral communication which contains untrue statement of material fact or omits to make statement; earnings projections which were related to prospectus were not extracontractual and hence were properly subject of negligent misrepresentation claim. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[20] Federal Civil Procedure 2511
170Ak2511

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether officers of corporation which was selling its wholly owned subsidiary were statutory sellers under Securities Act section rendering liable sellers who offer or sell security by means of prospectus or oral communication which contains untrue statement of material fact or omits to make statement. Securities Act of 1933, § 12(2), 15 U.S.C.A. § 771 (2).

[21] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 28
319Hk28

"Pattern of racketeering activity" under Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) requires combination of predicate acts related to each other and continuity of conduct. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c).

[22] Courts 99(7)
106k99(7)

District court's ruling on motion to dismiss Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) claim did not constitute law of the case precluding contrary ruling on motion for summary judgment by different judge. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1961 et seq.

[23] Courts 99(1)
106k99(1)

[23] Courts 99(7)
106k99(7)

Policies underlying law of the case doctrine are by no means absolute bar to reconsideration of prior ruling by district judge who made ruling or different judge to whom case may have been reassigned.

[24] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 32
319Hk32

Alleged fraudulent scheme connected with sale of corporation, extending over a period of limited duration of a matter of months, which intended to achieve, and did achieve, single contract, i.e., stock purchase agreement, did not satisfy continuity requirement of Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) claim. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1962(c).

[25] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Under New York law, law of negligent misrepresentation recognizes that generally there is no liability for words negligently spoken but that there is an exception when parties' relationship suggests closer degree of trust and reliance than that of ordinary buyer and seller.

[26] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

To be liable for negligent misrepresentation under New York law, speaker must be bound by some relation of duty, arising out of contract or otherwise.

[27] Fraud 13(3)
184k13(3)

Elements of fraud need not be proven to establish claim for negligent misrepresentation under New York law.

[28] Federal Civil Procedure 2515
170Ak2515

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether there was special relationship between seller of corporation and purchaser, precluding summary judgment on purchaser's claim of negligent misrepresentation in connection with the sale under New York law.

[29] Corporations 121(3)
101k121(3)

Warranty and indemnity claims of purchaser of corporation were timely where notice of those claims were given to sellers within date specified in stock purchase agreement.

[30] Federal Civil Procedure 2501
170Ak2501

Genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether claims of purchaser of corporation now made were embraced within letter sent to sellers within period specified in stock purchase agreement for bringing such claims, precluding summary judgment on warranty and indemnity claims.

[31] Fraud 60
184k60

Purchaser of corporation which subsequently claimed it was defrauded could not recover as consequential damages interest it had been paying on increasing rate notes that it issued to finance portion of purchase price of corporation; there was no suggestion that sellers' misrepresentations played direct part in form or conditions of debt purchaser incurred, or that purchaser did not obtain what it bargained for in borrowing money.

[32] Securities Regulation 155
349Bk155

[32] Securities Regulation 309
349Bk309

Punitive damages are not recoverable in securities fraud action but may be recovered under pendent state claims. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

*247 Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, New York City (Martin London, George P. Felleman, Carey R. Ramos, Walter Rieman, Carol Salem, Jonathan J. Freedman, Elizabeth J. Holland, Laura Farina, of counsel), and Stein, Zauderer, Ellenhorn, Frischer & Sharp, New York City (Sidney H. Stein, of counsel), for plaintiffs.

Debevoise & Plimpton, New York City (John H. Hall, Daniel M. Abuhoff, Joseph P. Moodhe, T. Edward Tighe, of counsel), for defendants.

Friedman & Kaplan, New York City (Edward A. Friedman, Andrew W. Goldwater, Eric Seiler, of counsel), for defendant Alfred Weber.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

HAIGHT, District Judge:

The genesis of this action is the sale and purchase of a corporation. The purchaser repents of its bargain, and seeks to undo it and recover compensatory and punitive damages. Subject matter jurisdiction in this Court is founded upon claims under the federal securities laws and the civil RICO statute, to which state and common law claims are appended. Following extensive discovery, defendants move under Rule 56, Fed.R.Civ.P., for summary judgment dismissing the complaint.

Background

The action was originally assigned to District Judge Walker (as he then was). Much of the factual background appears in his two prior opinions, reported at [1988-89 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) ¶ 94,005, 1988 WL 96586 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 1988) and 728 F.Supp. 926 (S.D.N.Y.1989), familiarity with which is assumed.

The litigation arises from the allegedly fraudulent sale by defendant Uniroyal, Inc. ("Uniroyal") of its wholly-owned subsidiary Uniroyal Plastics Company, Inc. ("Plastics") to plaintiffs Polycast Technology Corporation ("Polycast") and Uniroyal Plastics Acquisition Corp. ("UPAC"), a company formed by Polycast to consummate the sale. I will refer to the plaintiffs collectively as "Polycast." In substance, Polycast alleges that in valuing and pricing the shares of Plastics and in consummating the transaction, it relied on materially misleading information furnished by defendants with respect to the financial status, earnings potential, and operating condition of Plastics, and that as a result it paid a grossly excessive price for the stock.

Judge Walker's prior opinions dealt with challenges to the legal sufficiency of various pleadings. Since that time the parties have completed extensive discovery. All defendants now move for summary judgment dismissing all of plaintiffs' claims against them.

The operative pleading is plaintiffs' fourth amended complaint (hereinafter the "Complaint"). The defendants are Uniroyal; its parent, CDU Holding, Inc.; six officers of Uniroyal and Plastics; Clayton & Dubilier, Inc., its two principals and related investment entities (the "C & S defendants"); and the trustees of the CDU Holding, Inc. Liquidating Trust.

CDU Holding, Inc. owned all of Uniroyal's common stock from September 24, 1985 to December 2, 1986. CDU Holding, *248 Inc. Liquidating Trust is the successor in interest to Uniroyal and CDU Holding, Inc.

The trustees of the CDU Holding, Inc. Liquidating Trust are the individual defendants Alan R. Elton, Martin H. Dubilier, Joseph P. Flannery, John R. Graham, and Joseph L. Rice III.

At the pertinent times Flannery was chairman of the board, chief executive officer, and president of Uniroyal, as well as a stockholder. Flannery is also alleged to be a beneficiary of the Liquidating Trust.

Defendant Graham was chief financial officer and a stockholder of Uniroyal, and is a beneficiary of the Liquidating Trust. Defendant Alexander R. Castaldi was vice-president, controller, and a stockholder, and a beneficiary of the Liquidating Trust.

Defendant Elton was vice-president and general counsel of Uniroyal. He is named as a defendant in this action solely in his capacity as a trustee of the Liquidating Trust.

Defendant Robert Alvine was group vice-president of the Engineered Products Group-Worldwide of Uniroyal, a Uniroyal stockholder, and president of Plastics until October 31, 1986. He is a beneficiary of the Liquidating Trust.

Defendant Donald L. Nevins, Jr., was controller of the Engineered Products Group of Uniroyal.

Defendant Alfred Weber was vice-president and the general manager of Plastics until November 1, 1986, a stockholder of Uniroyal, and is a beneficiary of a Liquidating Trust.

The "C & D defendants," as they are collectively referred to in the litigation, consist of Clayton & Dubilier, Inc., the Clayton & Dubilier Private Equity Limited Partnership, the Clayton & Dubilier Associates Limited Partnership, and the individual defendants Dubilier and Rice. The relationship of the C & D defendants to Uniroyal and Plastics came about in this fashion. Confronted with a hostile tender offer in 1985, Uniroyal executed a merger agreement later that year with CDU

Acquisition, Inc. and CDU Holding, Inc. A leveraged buyout was consummated through a merger transaction. Following completion of that transaction, all of Uniroyal's common stock was held by CDU Holding, Inc., whose shareholders included Flannery, Graham, and Weber. But the largest beneficial shareholder of CDU Holding, Inc. was the Clayton & Dubilier Private Equity Fund Limited Partnership ("C & D Private Equity"), which held 32.5% of the common stock of CDU Holding, Inc. The general partner of C & D Private Equity was Clayton & Dubilier Associates Limited Partnership ("C & D Associates"). Dubilier and Rice were the general partners of C & D Associates.

At the times pertinent to this litigation, Uniroyal's three-man executive committee consisted of Flannery, Rice and Dubilier.

Defendants Flannery, Graham, Castaldi, Alvine, Clayton & Dubilier, Inc., the Clayton & Dubilier Private Equity Fund Limited Partnership, the Clayton & Associates Limited Partnership, Dubilier and Rice are alleged to have been at the pertinent times controlling persons of Uniroyal and of CDU Holding, Inc. under section 15 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 770 and section 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78t.

Polycast agreed to purchase Plastics from Uniroyal in a Stock Purchase Agreement (hereinafter "SPA") dated as of July 23, 1986. The transaction closed on October 31, 1986. Plaintiffs now regret that purchase, regard themselves as the victims of fraud, and commenced this action which they summarize in their brief at 2:

The core of this case is a fraud claim--that defendants deliberately misrepresented what [Plastics] would earn in 1986 and subsequent years and that plaintiffs relied upon those false representations in purchasing Plastics for $110 million.

That core finds expression in nine claims for relief set forth in the complaint, as follows:

The first claim, against all defendants, alleges violations of section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5. Complaint, ¶¶ 34-148.

*249 The second claim, against all defendants, alleges violation of section 12(2) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77l(2). Complaint, ¶¶ 149-159.

The third claim, against the C & D defendants, charges them as principals in violating section 12(2) of the Securities Act. Complaint, ¶¶ 160-161.

The fourth claim, against all defendants, charges violations of the RICO statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). Complaint, ¶ 162-181.

The fifth claim, against all defendants, alleges common law fraud. Complaint, ¶¶ 182-189.

The sixth claim, against all defendants, alleges negligent misrepresentation. Complaint, ¶¶ 190-195.

The seventh claim, against Uniroyal and the trustees of the Liquidating Trust, alleges breach of warranty. Complaint, ¶¶ 196-202.

The eighth claim, against Uniroyal and the trustees of the Liquidating Trust, is for indemnity. Complaint, ¶¶ 203-208.

The ninth claim, against Uniroyal and the trustees of the Liquidating Trust, is for reformation of the purchase agreement. Complaint, ¶¶ 209-225.

In their prayers for relief, pleaded in the alternative, plaintiffs seek rescission or reformation of the contract, and compensatory and punitive damages, with compensatory damages to be trebled under RICO.

The parties have engaged in extensive discovery. The deposition transcripts and documents produced are voluminous. It is difficult to imagine that trial will give rise to additional evidentiary material of any significance. All defendants now move for summary judgment.

Discussion

[1][2] Under Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c), the moving party is entitled to summary judgment if the papers "show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." On such a motion, "a court's responsibility is to assess whether there are any factual issues to be tried, while resolving ambiguities and drawing reasonable inferences against the moving party." Coach Leatherware Co., Inc. v. Ann Taylor, Inc., 933 F.2d 162, 167 (2d Cir.1991) (citing Knight v. U.S. Fire Insurance, 804 F.2d 9 (2d Cir.1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 932, 107 S.Ct. 1570, 94 L.Ed.2d 762 (1987)). The responding party "must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e). "The non-movant cannot 'escape summary judgment merely by vaguely asserting the existence of some unspecified disputed material facts,' ... or defeat the motion through 'mere speculation or conjecture.'" Western World Ins. Co. v. Stack Oil, Inc., 922 F.2d 118, 121 (2d Cir.1990) (citations omitted). While the party resisting summary judgment must show a dispute of fact, it must also be a material fact in light of the substantive law. "Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2510, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). That is because "a complete failure of proof concerning an essential element of the nonmoving party's case necessarily renders all other facts immaterial." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 2552, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986).

The Fraud Claims

I will first consider plaintiffs' claims for securities fraud and common law fraud. While defendants' brief discusses plaintiffs' section 12(2) claims under the fraud heading, that is inappropriate given the quite different theory of liability that obtains, and I will discuss the section 12(2) claims separately.

As noted, the "core" of plaintiffs' fraud claim is that defendants deliberately misrepresented "what Plastics would earn in 1986 and subsequent years," namely 1987-1990; and that plaintiffs relied upon those false representations in purchasing Plastics for $110 million.

With respect to Plastics' 1986 earnings, plaintiffs place particular emphasis upon *250 an earnings forecast of $13.3 million which they allege that Castaldi and Alvine, "in the presence of ... Rice and acting on behalf of all defendants other than Elton," communicated to Polycast's officers at a meeting on September 5, 1986, going on to represent, among other assertions, that this $13.3 million earnings estimate "was a rock bottom number which could be taken to the bank." Complaint at ¶ 112. Particularly relying upon that representation, "plaintiffs decided to submit a revised bid for Plastics." Id. at 114.

The complaint's reference to a "revised bid" requires some review of the events leading up to the purchase, which in significant measure are not disputed.

Plastics was one of several wholly owned subsidiaries of Uniroyal. Uniroyal decided to sell Plastics pursuant to an auction process conducted by Drexel, Burnham, Lambert, Inc. of New York ("Drexel"). Uniroyal and Drexel produced an offering memorandum which Drexel circulated to potential purchasers, including Polycast. The offering memorandum included a projection that Plastic's income for 1986 would be approximately $24 million. Uniroyal delivered the offering memorandum to potential purchasers in March 1986.

In a meeting on May 8, 1986 at Uniroyal's headquarters in Oxford, Connecticut, Alvine, Nevins and Weber met with representatives of Polycast and told them that Uniroyal had lowered its 1986 earnings forecast for Plastics from $24.0 million to $22.5 million.

Complaint at ¶ 60.

On June 12, 1986, Uniroyal informed Polycast that Uniroyal had again lowered its 1986 earnings forecast for Plastics, this time from $22.5 million to $20.5 million. Id. at ¶ 67. On June 24, 1986, Uniroyal informed Polycast that Uniroyal now estimated 1986 earnings for Plastics to be $17.6 million. Id. at ¶ 69.

On or about July 23, 1986 Polycast submitted to Uniroyal the winning bid of $134 million to purchase Plastics. The SPA was executed that date. It was accompanied by a disclosure letter in which Uniroyal reiterated a 1986 earnings forecast for Plastics of $17.5 million. Id. at ¶¶ 79-81.

On August 27, 1986, Castaldi, Alvine and Weber informed Polycast that Uniroyal had again lowered its forecast of Plastics' 1986 earnings to approximately $15.5 million. Polycast, in accordance with its rights under the SPA, withdrew its offer to purchase Plastics and terminated the SPA.

