16 suggested that they can show these same documents
17 to the authors of the comments in order to
18 substantiate them, to explore in as much detail as
19 they want what they meant when they wrote these 20 comments. That is more than adequate in order to 21 prove and to use it in a legitimate way without --

23 them to a witness who never would have seen it

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, Courtroom
4 11A, West Palm Beach, Florida, on April 22, 2004,
5 starting at 8:51 a.m., with appearances as hereinabove
6 noted, to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: Hi. This is Judge Maass. Who do
9 I have on the phone?

10 MR. CLARE: Good morning, Your Honor. It's 11 Tom Clare from the law firm of Kirkland and Ellis
12 in Washington, D.C. on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

13 THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Clare, I have you on 14 speakerphone in the courtroom in Coleman vs.
15 Morgan Stanley. This is defendant's motion for 16 protective order regarding confidential personnel
17 evaluations.

18 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

19 THE COURT: You-all might want to pull those 20 podiums forward just a little bit more.

21 Did you-all work out anything or not?

22 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, we haven't made much
23 progress. On Monday morning I wrote a letter to 24 counsel for Coleman (Parent) and said that we were 25 interested in exploring the proposal that

1 Mr. Scarola had made last Friday during the case
2 management conference but wanted some additional
3 information about how it would work in the real
4 world, the nuts and bolts of it, and did not get a
5 response until last night when I heard back that 6 they would not be submitting a proposed order at 7 this morning's hearing.

8 So I'm afraid that I still don't know what 9 their position is and whether they're still 10 planning to live with the proposal that they 11 proposed last Friday afternoon.

12 THE COURT: Is there a proposal on the table
13 or not?

14 MR. SCAROLA: There isn't, Your Honor, and I
15 would like to explain why.

16 Let me first of all --

17 THE COURT: Well, we don't have to know why.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

19 THE COURT: The question is, do we think
20 there will be a proposal, or do we need to argue
21 again the merits of the motion?

22 MR. SCAROLA: We need to address the merits
23 of the motion.

24 THE COURT: All right. What did you want to 25 say in support of the motion?

1 MR. CLARE: Well, Your Honor, we went through
2 last Friday my concerns and our client's
3 substantial concern about the damage to the 4 evaluation process that would be incurred if 5 employees were shown documents in their 6 depositions that they had never seen before in the 7 course of their evaluations. We talked about the 8 360 degree review process that Morgan Stanley uses
9 and how the anonymity and confidentiality of the 10 people doing the evaluations is critical to 11 maintaining the integrity of the process and also 12 to prevent undue embarrassment and harassment and 13 invasion of privacy of these witnesses.

14 We do not believe there is any legitimate
15 discovery purpose that can be obtained by showing
16 these documents to these witnesses --

17 THE COURT: Let me ask --

18 MR. CLARE: -- when in fact they have never 19 seen the documents before, they did not write
20 them, they have not even heard these comments
21 before, but at a minimum, there can be no
22 discovery purpose in disclosing the identities of 23 the anonymous reviewers who provided that
24 information.

25 We have never stated and do not contend that

00006

1 they cannot question these witnesses about the
2 information that is contained in these raw
3 evaluation materials and we are not asking the 4 Court to limit in any way the scope of questioning
5 at the depositions. Our concern is really the 6 vehicle with which they choose to do it and the 7 harm that would accrue if they show these 8 documents to witnesses where they would not have 9 seen the documents before.

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Is the 11 concern really just showing the physical document
12 to the deponent?

13 MR. CLARE: Yes, it is.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. CLARE: In a form that is not redacted to 16 redact the identity of the reviewer. And on these 17 forms, there are dozens and dozens and dozens of 18 entries that have absolutely nothing to do with 19 Sunbeam, and so at a minimum, the non-Sunbeam
20 entries ought to be redacted, and even for the 21 Sunbeam entries, the identities of the authors
22 ought to be redacted to prevent this harm.
23 There's been no identification of a legitimate
24 discovery purpose that could be served from not 25 doing that, at a minimum.

1 THE COURT: What's the response?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, let me present the
3 Court with a hypothetical which I think will 4 illustrate the concerns that we have.

5 Let's assume that an individual employee who
6 worked on the Sunbeam transaction is expressly
7 criticized either by someone beneath him, a
8 lateral employee, or someone above him for having 9 done a bad job in the due diligence that Morgan
10 Stanley was obliged to do in connection with this 11 transaction or having done a bad job in 12 communicating appropriate information or gathering
13 appropriate information regarding this
14 transaction. Clearly, that kind of information
15 within the internal documents of Morgan Stanley,
16 who is accused of having intentionally or 17 negligently failed to appropriately gather and 18 communicate information to us in this transaction,
19 would be highly probative.

20 I understand the concerns that Morgan Stanley
21 has about preserving the integrity of their
22 internal evaluative process. It's a legitimate
23 business concern, but it is not a legitimate
24 business concern that is recognized by a legal 25 privilege, nor is it a legitimate business concern

1 that overrides the concern that we have.

2 THE COURT: But this is what I'm trying to
3 figure out. Why would you have to show the 4 deponent the document as opposed to simply asking
5 the deponent isn't it true that your supervisor
6 criticized you for the quality of your work on 7 this job?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Well, clearly, clearly, there
9 is a value in front of the jury in being able to 10 substantiate the fact that the question that we 11 are asking has a factual basis and that indeed the 12 criticism was made. And when I initially made the 13 proposal before Your Honor, I was focussing in 14 terms of the discovery process and not 15 anticipating what's going to happen at trial.

16 Clearly, at trial, it is going to be both 17 appropriate and necessary to disclose the 18 documents themselves to demonstrate that those 19 criticisms were indeed made.

20 And so that Your Honor knows that we're not 21 talking about this in a vacuum and hypothetically,
22 I want to hand you a copy of an example.

23 THE COURT: Right. I remember seeing them,
24 but I still am trying to -- First of all, are 25 these discovery depositions? We're not talking

1 about trial testimony, correct?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Well, Your Honor, we are
3 talking about trial testimony, because we are 4 talking about videotape depositions being taken
5 for purposes of presentation at trial of witnesses
6 who are out of state and whose attendance cannot 7 be compelled.

8 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

9 Even if we were in trial, if they have never 10 seen this item before, why would we be showing it
11 to the witness?

12 MR. CLARE: And --

13 THE COURT: I don't understand how we get 14 there.

15 MR. CLARE: I don't mean to interrupt --

16 THE COURT: Yes, you do.

17 MR. CLARE: -- but the purpose for which 18 Mr. Scarola has identified wanting to use the 19 documents at trial, these documents, and the point
20 that he's trying to make that they exist and that 21 these points were written can be proven
22 independently.

23 THE COURT: Sure. I understand that. That's 24 why I'm wondering how -- At trial, if the 25 witnesses testify that they've never seen these

1 documents, why would we be showing them at trial
2 to the witnesses?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Well, my point is not that
4 they're going to be shown to the witness at trial.
5 My point is that if the concern on the part of 6 Morgan Stanley which justifies a restriction on 7 the use of the documents is that we don't want
8 these criticisms to be made public because it's 9 going to impair our evaluative process if the 10 criticisms are made public, they eventually are 11 going to be made public in any circumstance.

12 THE COURT: Sure. But isn't it much less
13 likely that the individual employee who was 14 criticized is going to marry up what the criticism
15 was or who it came from if it comes out in trial
16 1,500 miles from where the employee is than if 17 they're sitting in a deposition and you're giving

18 them a copy of the evaluation?
19 MR. SCAROLA: It's my understanding that 20 Morgan Stanley's concern is not with regard to 21 this individual, but rather to preserve the 22 integrity of the system that they have of 23 360 degree evaluation, because in fact, most of 24 these individuals, more than half of them, are no
25 longer employed by Morgan Stanley.

1 THE COURT: I have to cut you off, because
2 we're about out of time.

3 What's the response, and what is your
4 concern; is it for the individual employees or 5 simply the integrity of the process as a whole?

6 MR. CLARE: It is absolutely for the concern
7 of the individuals, that they will be confronted 8 with comments that they have never seen before in 9 a litigation environment by their coworkers, their 10 colleagues, their superiors, even their former 11 coworkers. So we're concerned about both.

12 And I just want to respond briefly to one
13 point Mr. Scarola made.

14 Our concern is not that this information
15 never be made public in a trial setting. We have
16 suggested that they can show these same documents
17 to the authors of the comments in order to
18 substantiate them, to explore in as much detail as
19 they want what they meant when they wrote these
20 comments. That is more than adequate in order to
21 prove and to use it in a legitimate way without --
22 with the proper foundation as opposed to showing
23 them to a witness who never would have seen it
24 before where the only purpose would be to 25 intimidate and harass a witness into agreeing with

00012

1 or commenting on a document that they had not seen
2 or heard before.

3 THE COURT: Okay. We need to stop here.
4 It's his motion, he goes first and last. I'll 5 take it under advisement.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
7 Honor.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, west Palm
4 Beach, Florida, on March 19, 2004, starting at 5 3:27 p.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted,
6 to wit:

8 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Have a seat.
9 This is Coleman and Morgan Stanley. It's a case
10 management conference and hearing on outstanding
11 motions.

12 I was given a proposed agreed order
13 concerning the pretrial schedule. Is that agreed 14 to by everybody?

15 MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Any objection to my simply 17 signing it then?

18 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe so, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Anybody have --

20 MR. SCAROLA: I do have --

21 THE COURT: -- envelops? Thank you.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I have envelops, extra copies.

23 THE COURT: Great.

24 MR. SCAROLA: And to start off on the right
25 foot, this is another agreed order on one of the

1 matters that was pending before Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Okay. Where do we want to go
3 next?

4 MR. IANNO: Judge, Joe Ianno here on behalf
5 of Morgan Stanley. We have a number of motions.

6 THE COURT: I hope not too many, because I
7 haven't looked at a number, but go ahead.

8 MR. IANNO: Well, I think the easiest way to 9 do this now, as far as I'm concerned, and I don't 10 know Mr. Scarola's position on this, but we have 11 some outstanding pro hac motions that the 12 plaintiffs object to.

13 THE COURT: Right.

14 MR. IANNO: I thought those would be 15 relatively quick, we could get those out of the 16 way. We have some discovery issues that need to 17 be addressed so we can get to the merits of this 18 case, and then we have another motion that was 19 filed by the plaintiffs that we sent our 20 opposition on yesterday that was filed by the 21 plaintiffs last Friday.

22 THE COURT: That's the motion for order to 23 show cause?

24 MR. IANNO: That's correct.

4hrg0319.txt

25 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.
0005

1 THE COURT: I would agree that's probably the
2 most time-intensive of the ones we have today.
3 Do we want to do the other ones first and then
4 come back to that?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the only objection
6 that I have to the order suggested by Mr. Ianno is 7 that we believe there is a relationship between 8 the motions for admission pro hac vice and the 9 issues that are raised in the contempt petition.
10 It may be easier for Your Honor to defer that.

11 THE COURT: So you would prefer to have those 12 heard together?

13 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Any objection to that, to doing
15 the discovery issue first?

16 MR. IANNO: No, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Which one do we want to do
18 first on the discovery issues then?

19 MR. SCAROLA: I would suggest, Your Honor,
20 that we address the issue with regard to e-mails.

21 THE COURT: That's fine.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Let me just summarize for the 23 Court briefly what I believe the points of 24 contention are and how we suggest that those 25 points of contention be resolved.

1 THE COURT: And so I'm clear, which specific
2 motion or motions are we now arguing?

3 MR. SCAROLA: To refer to them by correct
4 title, it is Coleman (Parent) Holdings' motion to 5 permit Kroll access to files.

6 THE COURT: I have something called Coleman
7 (Parent) Holdings' motion for permission to have 8 third party retrieve --

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, that's the one.

10 THE COURT: That's the one? Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, yes. In my index
12 it's referred to differently. I apologize for
13 that.

14 THE COURT: That's fine.

15 MR. SCAROLA: And then Morgan Stanley's
16 motion to compel electronic documents in 17 electronic form.

18 MR. CLARE: I'm not sure that these two 19 issues necessarily are joined together. That's 20 the way that --

21 THE COURT: Okay. What's the name of your
22 motion?

23 MR. CLARE: Our motion is Morgan Stanley's
24 motion to compel production of electronic
25 documents pursuant to the parties' agreement.

1 THE COURT: I know I've seen that one.
2 I don't have it in front of me, so let me find it
3 again.

4 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, according to the
5 cross reference I have, it's tab Roman numeral VI
6 I think 3 in your notebook that we provided to the
7 Court.

8 THE COURT: I have more than one notebook.

9 MR. IANNO: The one that was provided on

4hrq0319.txt

10 Friday, which I think is labeled just -- 11 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have this one
12 (indicating)?
13 THE COURT: I do.
14 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. If I have that one, what 15 we are looking at is tab --
16 THE COURT: well, the one I have that looks
17 like that is your appendix to the motion for order
18 to show cause.
19 MR. SCAROLA: Then you don't have this one.
20 THE COURT: Then I don't have that one.
21 MR. SCAROLA: No.
22 THE COURT: But I know I've seen the motion
23 you're talking about.
24 MR. IANNO: If I may, Your Honor.
25 THE COURT: Sure.

1 MR. IANNO: It's going to be in the other
2 notebook that we provided; the first one, correct.
3 And according to that, it's --
4 THE COURT: I don't have Roman numerals.
5 MR. CLARE: Maybe it's just tab 3.
6 MR. SCAROLA: I can provide the Court with
7 extra copies right here, Your Honor.
8 This is the motion for permission
9 (indicating). This is a blank order with regard
10 to that motion that I might as well give you at 11 the same time (indicating).
12 THE COURT: Okay. This one I have, so let 13 me -- Hold on. Yes, this one I have, so let me
14 give it back.
15 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. This is the motion to 16 compel production pursuant to written agreement;
17 this is the response to that motion; and this is 18 the blank order with regard to that motion
19 (indicating).
20 THE COURT: All right. I'll leave blank
21 orders up here.
22 Great. Thank you.
23 MR. SCAROLA: You're welcome.
24 THE COURT: And as I understand it, we first
25 want to argue -- If you don't mind, what I'd like

1 to do first is the motion to compel pursuant to
2 the parties' written agreement.
3 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine; although, we'll be 4 responding really in a manner that will cover both
5 issues, but --
6 THE COURT: That's fine.
7 And I guess the real question I had when I
8 had that letter, I'll be honest with you, I didn't
9 read it as an agreement. I mean, I didn't read it
10 as an agreement that electronic documents would be 11 produced in electronic form. I just read it as 12 sort of a statement that we expect in this 13 litigation some will.
14 MR. CLARE: That some will.
15 THE COURT: Yeah.
16 MR. CLARE: The context of the discussion and 17 the way that that letter agreement came about was 18 last summer, Morgan Stanley made its initial 19 production of documents. In that initial 20 production of documents, there were a number of

4hrq0319.txt

21 non-e-mail electronic documents, things like word
22 processing files and spreadsheets and PowerPoint
23 presentations that had been printed out and 24 produced to Coleman (Parent).

25 THE COURT: Okay.

0010

1 MR. CLARE: And that generated a discovery
2 dispute, a series of correspondence where Coleman
3 (Parent) insisted that we go back and produce
4 electronic versions of the same documents that we
5 had produced, to which we said that's fine, but 6 let us generate a protocol for electronic
7 documents in this case. It was part of a broader 8 agreement designed to minimize costs and share the 9 costs. That was the genesis of this agreement.

10 And pursuant to that agreement, Morgan
11 Stanley has, for the past six months, each time it
12 has provided a document production, provided hard
13 copy documents and electronic documents that 14 existed in electronic form.

15 And so we were dismayed to learn earlier this 16 year, a month or so ago, that there were 17 electronic documents that had been produced to us
18 in hard copy form that had not been produced to us
19 electronically.

20 So it is not only the parties' written
21 agreement that we are moving pursuant, but it has 22 been the course of dealing in discovery in this 23 case that electronic documents will be produced in 24 addition to hard copy form.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Let's assume that my 0011

1 interpretation of the Rules of Judicial
2 Administration, if there's a stipulation between
3 counsel about the procedures to be used in a case,
4 if it's not made in open court, it has to be in
5 writing and signed by the party to be charged. So
6 let's assume I would not adopt an argument that 7 course of dealing would establish something that 8 the Rules of Civil Procedure don't. What's the 9 response though to the argument that this letter
10 was a written stipulation?

11 MR. SCAROLA: That Your Honor's initial 12 impression is absolutely accurate.

13 Let me state for the record first, Jack
14 Scarola on behalf of Coleman (Parent) Holding.
15 With me is Mr. Solovy, Mr. Marmer and Mr. Shaw.
16 I will be at least initially speaking on behalf of 17 Coleman (Parent).

18 Your Honor I think is absolutely correct that 19 the letter does not constitute a written agreement 20 to produce documents in both written form and 21 electronic form. We produced these documents in 22 written form, and as we have described in our 23 response to the Court, the task of attempting to 24 locate the electronic forms of these documents for 25 purposes of allowing the defense to search for the

1 metadata that may be included in those electronic
2 documents, because of the manner in which the 3 electronic documents are stored, is
4 extraordinarily burdensome. We don't have a way
5 by which to easily locate them unless there is a

4hrq0319.txt

6 specifically identifiable number or a very unique
7 term included within the document. Our ability to 8 search the electronic data is limited and would 9 require us to perform a very burdensome task.

10 THE COURT: Let me stop you. And you-all are 11 going to help me, but I don't want to confuse two 12 legal issues. The first legal issue I'm looking 13 at is, was there a stipulation between the parties
14 on this point. So maybe the second legal issue
15 we're looking at is, is there a request from 16 defendants outstanding that absent even this 17 agreement would have compelled this production.

18 MR. SCAROLA: I think the answer to that is 19 no.

20 THE COURT: And I think what you're arguing
21 is the second.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I think the answer to that is 23 no, Your Honor. The defendants are traveling on 24 the contention that there is an agreement that 25 requires us to produce the electronic documents in

0013
1 the absence of a specific request for the
2 production of the documents in electronic form.

3 THE COURT: So then am I correct whether or 4 not it was burdensome to comply with it is simply 5 not an issue for me?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I am mixing the two arguments.

7 THE COURT: I don't know if you are. I just 8 want to make sure --

9 MR. SCAROLA: I am.

10 THE COURT: -- that I understand what your 11 contention is.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I acknowledge that I am.

13 The issue before the Court, the narrow issue
14 before the Court is whether the letter that Your 15 Honor has seen constitutes an agreement to produce
16 documents in both written and electronic form.
17 Your Honor's read that document. We believe you
18 are correct in interpreting it as you have. There
19 is simply no such agreement. And if that's the 20 issue that we're looking at, the narrow issue
21 we're looking at, that's my entire argument with 22 regard to that issue.

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

24 MR. CLARE: Well, if this were simply a
25 letter that was exchanged in the course of a

1 discovery dispute, I might agree with Mr. Scarola,
2 but this was a document that was drafted by
3 Coleman (Parent)'s lawyers on their letterhead and
4 then counter-signed by my firm after extensive
5 negotiations over the terms. The signature that 6 appears on the second page, Ms. Zhonette Brown, is 7 an associate at our firm who entered into this
8 agreement on behalf of Morgan Stanley after this 9 protracted dispute about how this was going to be 10 done. And the whole purpose of this was to avoid 11 the double standard that is now being hoisted upon 12 us of demanding documents that had already been 13 produced in hard copy form in electronic form.

14 So we believe we had done what was necessary
15 to accept the representation of our opposing 16 counsel in a counter-signed legal document

4hrg0319.txt

17 which -- or counter-signed letter, excuse me, that 18 would memorialize how the parties would proceed in 19 discovery going forward. It also covers things
20 like the division of costs for discovery, and it
21 was of sufficient importance in moment that the 22 two firms counter-signed the document.

23 So in addition to the agreement, if I've not 24 persuaded Your Honor that this should be elevated
25 to something beyond a mere discovery letter,

1 shouldn't the same standard apply in terms of what
2 requests were made of Morgan Stanley to produce
3 these same documents? It was no less burdensome
4 for us to comply with the letter we received from 5 Jenner & Block in September that said not good
6 enough, produce these in electronic form.

7 The concept of metadata which Mr. Scarola
8 referred to is one which his client has taken full 9 advantage of with regard to our production. At 10 the depositions of several witnesses in this case,
11 they have confronted the witness with documents,
12 exhibits, that have the metadata, and from that,
13 they've been able to ask questions about who was 14 the author, how much time was spent on various 15 tasks, and all we're asking for is the benefit of 16 the bargain that we thought we had in the 17 counter-signed document, and moreover, on top of 18 that, this is the benefit of the bargain that we 19 gave them by subsequently producing electronic 20 documents in electronic form.

21 MR. SCAROLA: I --

22 THE COURT: I think --

23 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry.

24 THE COURT: It's his motion; he goes first 25 and last.

1 MR. SCAROLA: Sure.

2 THE COURT: First of all, I think the latter
3 argument is really what I said I simply can't 4 accept, which is absent a written agreement that
5 complies with the rule of judicial administration,
6 I don't do the inquiry on whether there was some 7 agreement between the attorneys or not, I think
8 precisely for this reason, that the Court
9 shouldn't be put in a position of taking oral 10 testimony from attorneys and deciding what it was 11 they agreed to.

12 With that said, I'll be honest with you, even
13 in context, I don't read the August 19, 2003
14 letter as establishing this -- as a stipulation
15 between attorneys, at least not as defendant is 16 now reading it.

17 MR. CLARE: Would Your Honor be amenable to a
18 motion not to be filed today, but to a subsequent 19 motion if we were to be able to point to an
20 outstanding request where the request itself
21 propounded upon the plaintiff --

22 THE COURT: I don't rule in a vacuum, and I
23 certainly don't entertain oral motions for 24 rehearing, so you'd have to file whatever you
25 think is appropriate.

MR. CLARE: Okay. We will do that.

4hrg0319.txt

2 THE COURT: I can tell you that I rarely get
3 mad at what attorneys file. I may dismiss it, but 4 I don't get mad.

5 One thing, and I apologize -- actually, two
6 things would be very helpful to me on these case
7 management conferences and are really stupid; one
8 is if you-all could get together and put together
9 for me a notebook of all the pleadings. The files
10 are voluminous. We don't have people who put nice
11 little tabs on things like you guys have, and if I
12 need to go through and see exactly what legal 13 issues are framed, it's very difficult. If I had 14 simply a pleading notebook, it would be very, very 15 helpful to me.

16 The other thing that would be helpful, if you
17 all could bring little name cards and put them up
18 by each of you, that way, after we've done this a
19 couple times, I'll know each of you.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Scarola.

21 THE COURT: And even the name of your client
22 would be really nice. Okay? And then I'll know
23 and I'm not going to be under a misapprehension of 24 who each of you is or who your client is.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Certainly, Your Honor.

1 THE COURT: I appreciate that. Thank you
2 very much.

3 MR. SCAROLA: The next is Coleman (Parent)
4 Holdings' motion for permission to have third
5 party retrieve Morgan Stanley e-mail --

6 THE COURT: Yes.

7 MR. SCAROLA: -- and other responsive
8 documents, which I had spilled over to begin
9 discussing with Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

11 MR. SCAROLA: And let me tell Your Honor what 12 the current proposal is that is on the table with 13 regard to these issues, because obviously, there
14 are going to be requests for electronic production
15 and there are going to be arguments about the 16 extent to which it is burdensome and how carefully
17 parties did or did not review the electronic data
18 available to them in order to make the production
19 requested.

20 what we have proposed is that a third party,
21 and we have identified one that we are familiar
22 with and in whom we have confidence, although we 23 are not wed to that particular third-party
24 forensic firm, computer forensic firm, we're open
25 to suggestions if there's somebody else, and

1 there's been some suggestion and discussion today
2 that there may be somebody else in whom the 3 defendants have greater confidence or who has 4 greater familiarity with the defendant's computer
5 systems, and as long as we're satisfied that 6 they're an independent third party, we really
7 don't care who it is.

8 Our suggestion is this. We both want and 9 need electronic discovery. We think that a third
10 party ought to be designated to conduct the review
11 of the electronic records of both firms.

12 One of the issues of contention was who is

4hrg0319.txt

13 going to bear the expense of having that third
14 party come in to conduct the review, and to the 15 extent that there is a disparity between the costs
16 involved in conducting the electronic review of 17 plaintiffs as compared to conducting the 18 electronic review of defendants, the issue was 19 will we bear our own burden initially or will we 20 bear the burden of opposing parties initially.

21 What we suggest to the Court to resolve those 22 concerns is that the third party perform the tasks
23 for both parties, both plaintiff and defendants, a
24 total bill will be presented for all of the work
25 performed, the bill gets divided in the middle,

1 the cost of electronic discovery is divided
2 without regard to how much was spent reviewing our 3 records and how much was spent reviewing their
4 records, and quite frankly, we have every reason
5 to believe it's going to be far less costly to 6 examine ours than to examine theirs.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Let me stop you, because I
8 want to again make sure I understand where we are 9 procedurally.

10 what you're talking about is sort of a global 11 suggestion to deal with retrieval of electronic 12 documents in this case.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. SCAROLA: And there are outstanding
16 requests.

17 THE COURT: That was what I was going to back 18 into.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

20 THE COURT: Because to generate --

21 MR. SCAROLA: To place this in procedural
22 context --

23 THE COURT: I'm not aware of a procedure that 24 would allow me to force you guys into some sort of 25 an accommodation like this, so really, I have two

1 questions, I guess one for each of you, and don't
2 answer them quite yet.

3 First is, are defendants even amenable to 4 something like this or not? I mean, are you
5 amenable to a proposal and we're simply fighting
6 over its terms, or are you guys simply not
7 amenable to a proposal?

8 And then, Mr. Scarola, what I need to know
9 from you is sort of have I jumped -- am I really 10 looking at some sort of motion to compel them to 11 respond to a production request for e-mails
12 generated prior to 1997, or is there some specific 13 discovery request I'm now looking at they have 14 objected to, and you're saying, look, Judge, this 15 information is available, and we're willing to 16 bear the cost or at least a portion of it to 17 retrieve it?

18 MR. SCAROLA: I think the latter is correct,
19 Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: There have been requests for 22 the production of e-mails, and we'll focus
23 specifically on them, because that's the primary

24 concern.
25 THE COURT: Okay.
0022

1 MR. SCAROLA: Electronic records of e-mails
2 that have been exchanged.
3 THE COURT: Do we agree that there has been
4 such a request outstanding?
5 MR. CLARE: There has been a request
6 outstanding.
7 THE COURT: And have you-all objected?
8 MR. CLARE: From the very beginning.
9 THE COURT: And what's the basis of the 10 objection?
11 MR. CLARE: We objected to the breadth of the 12 request that they're making. And to answer Your 13 Honor's question directly -- and the burden that 14 is associated with it -- that given the particular
15 e-mail back-up tapes that are in existence five,
16 six years after the fact of these transactions,
17 that the scope of the e-mail request that they are 18 seeking is improperly and unduly burdensome given
19 the enormous costs that would be required, given 20 the fact that the time period for which we have 21 back-up tapes postdates the events by several 22 years.
23 And so what Your Honor will remember --
24 To put the e-mail dispute in broader procedural
25 context, we've been arguing about this since
0023

1 October. Mr. Scarola filed a motion to compel the
2 production of e-mails, all of the e-mail backups,
3 and we came in with an opposition that gave
4 substantial figures about the cost and the burden
5 to do this. There was an amended motion that was 6 filed where Coleman requested discovery on the 7 burden and the cost, and we had a round of 8 depositions on this point. So now this is the 9 third motion, and what I believe --
10 MR. SCAROLA: I don't mean to interrupt, but 11 I do mean to interrupt.
12 THE COURT: I was going to say, I think you
13 do, Mr. Scarola.
14 MR. SCAROLA: I do mean to interrupt, and the 15 reason I mean to interrupt is because this is my 16 motion, and I don't mind, obviously, Mr. Clare
17 responding to the Court's question, but he's gone
18 considerably beyond that and is now arguing his 19 position --
20 MR. CLARE: well, I'm --
21 MR. SCAROLA: -- and I'd like the Court to 22 understand what ours is before we get the other
23 side's argument.
24 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Has there
25 ever been a disposition of a motion to compel

1 where we have made a determination whether either
2 the scope of the request is overbroad or
3 compliance is unduly burdensome?
4 MR. CLARE: No, Your Honor.
5 THE COURT: Then I guess my question to you,
6 Mr. Scarola, is, are we jumping ahead; do we first
7 need to dispose of that motion absent some sort of 8 agreement to them that, yeah, they're amenable to

4hr0319.txt

9 this type of procedure?

10 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe so, Your Honor,
11 for this reason. The procedural context is, we 12 filed the motion, they filed their objection, we 13 have made a proposal to meet that objection, and 14 what we're --

15 THE COURT: I don't think I can make a --
16 I mean, essentially what you're trying to do is 17 force them to mediate the issues raised by the 18 motion, and I don't --

19 MR. SCAROLA: No. No. We've attempted -- 20 We've attempted to resolve those issues between 21 ourselves. We've been unsuccessful in doing that,
22 and this is by way of a motion to compel
23 compliance and a suggestion as to how compliance
24 ought to be compelled.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

1 MR. SCAROLA: That's really where we are.

2 THE COURT: I can tell you, I can't do it in
3 this context. I think what -- I'm not aware of 4 any procedure that would allow me to short-circuit
5 ruling on defendant's objections and require the 6 parties to engage in this sort of shared
7 enterprise.

8 I mean, at a bare minimum, this would have to 9 be piggybacked onto any hearing calling up the 10 objections, so this would be --

11 Oh, you gave me an order.

12 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, I did.

13 And I would --

14 THE COURT: Let me finish writing, and then 15 we'll talk.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, surely.

17 THE COURT: Okay. All this says is it's 18 denied without prejudice for plaintiff's right to 19 argue the propriety of the proposal in support of 20 its motion to compel.

21 MR. SCAROLA: And the only thing I wanted to 22 point out to Your Honor is that regardless of how 23 this motion may be styled, it is clear from the 24 motion itself that what we are addressing is the 25 burdensome objection.

1 THE COURT: I understand that, but again, I'm
2 not prepared for that today.

3 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

4 THE COURT: It's not like I've taken out your
5 discovery request, I looked at their objections,
6 I've reviewed the depositions you guys took on 7 this point, and we can now argue it intelligently.

8 MR. SCAROLA: We'll present it to Your Honor
9 in --

10 THE COURT: And please understand when I say
11 without prejudice to their right to argue the 12 propriety of the proposal, I'm not saying I think 13 the proposal is proper; I'm just saying it's 14 something I would really have to go back and think 15 about, and I can't even put it into context until 16 we do the other motion.

17 MR. CLARE: I understand your order to be 18 saying that is step two of what will be a two-step
19 process.

4hr0319.txt

20 THE COURT: Right.
21 MR. SCAROLA: Although, I would hope that we 22 can schedule both at the same time; that is --
23 THE COURT: We can try if my little brain
24 will think that fast, Mr. Scarola.
25 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. Thank you.

1 THE COURT: What else do we have besides the
2 motion for order to show cause?
3 MR. SCAROLA: The only other motion, Your
4 Honor, I believe, is the motion for admission
5 pro hac vice.
6 MR. CLARE: That's actually not correct.
7 MR. SCAROLA: Oh, okay.
8 THE COURT: What else do we have?
9 MR. CLARE: Now it's my turn to interrupt
10 Mr. Scarola, and I do apologize, but -- 11 MR. SCAROLA: You're right. I'm sorry, I've 12 forgotten, there is another discovery motion.
13 MR. CLARE: There is the Morgan Stanley's
14 motion to compel responses to the fourth set of 15 interrogatories.
16 THE COURT: Now, I know I've seen that, too.
17 MR. IANNO: That was the one that was 18 actually behind tab 3, Your Honor.
19 THE COURT: Right. I was going to say, I
20 know I've seen it.
21 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have that, or does the 22 Court need it?
23 THE COURT: I do have it.
24 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.
25 THE COURT: Yes, I did read it, okay.

0028

1 what did you want to say in support of it?
2 MR. CLARE: To back up for a moment and give
3 the Court the procedural context of our motion,
4 this is a motion to compel responses to our fourth
5 set of interrogatories, but in the summer and fall
6 of last year, we propounded our first set of 7 interrogatories where we asked the defendant to 8 identify all of the misrepresentations that they 9 intend to rely on at trial, and they complied and 10 identified, by our count, 35-some
11 misrepresentations.
12 We then propounded our fourth set of 13 interrogatories where we asked them to tell us
14 when for each of those misrepresentations they 15 allege or believe that Morgan Stanley knew the 16 representation was false or misleading. And they 17 did give us a long answer, a six-page answer, but 18 there's no substance to it in terms of answering
19 the specific questions that we asked.
20 THE COURT: Okay.
21 MR. CLARE: What we have asked for is for 22 them to tell us for each of those 35
23 representations by what date do they contend or do
24 they believe the evidence supports Morgan Stanley
25 knew or should have known the misrepresentations

1 to be false.
2 At a minimum, even if they are unable or 3 unwilling to provide us with dates, we are 4 entitled to know for each of those

4hrq0319.txt

5 misrepresentations whether they contend we knew
6 that to be false when made or after it was made we
7 learned facts to suggest that we had a duty to go
8 back and re-inform them or correct prior
9 representations that we had made. And we believe 10 that's significant given the business context and 11 the merger and acquisition transactions that 12 really form the basis of this agreement.

13 And if you'll indulge me for just a minute,
14 I'll give you an example of what I'm talking 15 about.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. CLARE: The allegations in the Complaint,
18 in the fraud count, allege that Morgan Stanley
19 made certain misrepresentations that induced
20 Coleman (Parent) Holding to enter into this
21 agreement. The merger and acquisition agreement
22 was signed on February 27th, 1998, and there was a
23 period of about one month between the merger
24 agreement and the date of the close.

25 THE COURT: Right.

1 MR. CLARE: Many of the events that are in
2 the interrogatory response that we received and
3 that are cited in the Complaint take place in that 4 intervening month, and so my question and the 5 question that the interrogatory was designed to 6 illicit an answer to was whether Morgan Stanley
7 obtained the knowledge of the fraud, supposedly,
8 before the time the misrepresentations were made
9 that supposedly induced them or after, because if 10 it's after the date of the definitive agreement,
11 the merger and acquisition agreement, there's an 12 entirely different legal construct that we need to 13 know in order to defend against those claims.

14 THE COURT: Let me ask you, and I don't know
15 if you guys can agree on this, in the February '98
16 contract, was there an out for either party prior 17 to closing?

18 MR. MARMER: Yes, Your Honor. Ron Marmer.
19 There is. There's a material adverse change
20 clause.

21 THE COURT: Thank you.

22 MR. CLARE: And in addition to the material
23 adverse change clause, which they have invoked as 24 part of the obligation that triggered some 25 obligation on the part of Morgan Stanley to come

1 forward with information they supposedly learned
2 during this time period, but there is also a
3 complex framework of representations between the 4 parties, between Sunbeam and Coleman (Parent), and
5 disclosure obligations. The parties' relationship
6 at that point changes from -- and I say "the 7 parties," I mean Sunbeam and Coleman's
8 relationship becomes contractual in nature.

9 Sunbeam's lawyers at Skadden, Arps in
10 New York are administering this contract on behalf
11 of their client, and the obligations that Sunbeam
12 and its advisors had versus, in that environment,
13 the contractual environment, are different and may 14 be different than they would be in the 15 pre-contractual environment that they're alleging.

4hrG0319.txt

16 So the question here -- And I've read
17 Mr. Scarola's response, and I really think it
18 really makes the issue too complicated. All we're 19 trying to find out is, for each of these 20 representations, are they saying we did it with 21 malice in our hearts because we knew them to be
22 false, or are they saying we made them believing
23 them to be true and subsequently learned
24 information that imposed a duty on us to go back
25 and inform them.

1 As I read the Complaint in this case and as
2 I read the answers to the interrogatory, I believe
3 it is a mix of both, and I, in order to defend 4 against it, need to know which --

5 THE COURT: So I understand, is what you're
6 really -- I was looking at how the interrogatory
7 was framed, but is what you're looking for today
8 an answer to whether each of the representations
9 was known to be true at the time it was made or 10 subsequently discovered to be true -- or untrue?
11 I'm sorry.

12 MR. CLARE: Correct. That is the information 13 we are seeking.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 Now, Mr. Scarola, I know I've read your 16 answer, and I've lost it. Do you have another
17 copy?

18 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sure I do, Your Honor. If 19 I may have just a moment.

20 MR. CLARE: I have it.

21 THE COURT: Thank you.

22 Okay. What did you want to say?

23 And first of all, you know, sort of limiting 24 or narrowing the scope of the motion to just 25 asking for whether it's your client's contention

1 that these were known to be untrue when made or
2 subsequently discovered to be untrue, what's wrong
3 with requiring your client to the extent it has 4 that information to disclose it?

5 MR. SCAROLA: There is nothing wrong with 6 requiring us to answer that question had that been 7 the question that was asked, but that's not the 8 question that was asked.

9 THE COURT: Well, they ask you to identify
10 with particularity the date and time you contend
11 Morgan Stanley knew the alleged representation to 12 be false or misleading.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, which is,
14 respectfully, a different question than whether 15 they knew at the time the representation was made.
16 I believe that the answer that has been given is 17 an answer that very thoroughly responds to the 18 question that has been asked and provides all of 19 the information that was available to us as of the 20 time of the filing of that answer.

21 THE COURT: Let me -- I apologize for 22 interrupting.

23 MR. SCAROLA: No, that's all right.

24 THE COURT: What's the response to the simple 25 contention that, yeah, the interrogatory asks when

4hrg0319.txt

1 did you find that to be false, but it doesn't ask
2 when did you say that the representation made.

3 MR. CLARE: Because we already know from the 4 answer to our first interrogatory when the answer
5 was made. We have no complaint --

6 THE COURT: When the misrepresentation was 7 made?

8 MR. CLARE: Correct.

9 THE COURT: Do you have that in an
10 interrogatory to show me?

11 MR. CLARE: I'm sure we do.

12 THE COURT: Just show it to Mr. Scarola
13 first.

14 And did it give you dates when the alleged 15 misrepresentations were made?

16 MR. CLARE: Yes, Your Honor, for many of the 17 misrepresentations.

18 For example, they describe meetings that
19 occurred on certain dates, negotiation meetings
20 that were provided and documents that were 21 provided at negotiation sessions on particular
22 dates that they contend contain
23 misrepresentations.

24 THE COURT: Okay. Let me just look at the --

25 MR. CLARE: Any objection?

0035

1 MR. SCAROLA: Oh, no, no.

2 THE COURT: Do you have both the question and 3 the answer?

4 MR. CLARE: Yes, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Let me just look at both of those 6 briefly.

7 Thanks.

8 MR. CLARE: This is the interrogatory
9 question at the bottom of the page, and the answer
10 begins on the subsequent page.

11 THE COURT: Oh, thanks.

12 Okay. Thanks. I get the flavor of it, which 13 is what I was looking for. Thanks.

14 Okay. What's the response then? Let's
15 assume then that I think this interrogatory asks
16 for the date when you found out it was false and 17 they want to say is that different than the date
18 you already said it was made.

19 MR. SCAROLA: I think it does ask for the 20 date when we found out that --

21 THE COURT: No, when they found out it was 22 false.

23 MR. SCAROLA: When they found out it was 24 false.

25 THE COURT: Right.

0036

1 MR. SCAROLA: Which, respectfully, is a
2 different question than do you contend that when
3 we made the representation we knew it was false.

4 THE COURT: Sure, but the information -- I
5 agree it's a different question, but given their
6 interrogatory 1, what they're saying is, compare
7 the two answers and they get the answer to that 8 question.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I really don't believe they do,
10 for this reason, Your Honor. If you ask me what 11 the date was when they found out X was false, my

4hr0319.txt

12 response may very well be I don't know when you
13 found out, I don't know the date. If you ask me
14 do you contend that at the time I made this 15 representation I knew it was false, I may very 16 well be able to answer that even though I can't 17 give them the date when they found out it was 18 false.

19 THE COURT: So let me ask you this. Where in 20 the answer to this interrogatory would I look to 21 see when you allege they found these items to be 22 false?

23 MR. SCAROLA: I think that the context of the 24 answer itself clearly indicates all of the 25 information that we have about the communications

1 that were made to them and when they were made
2 that were contrary to the representations that
3 were made to us. It is throughout the text of 4 this detailed six-page narrative.

5 THE COURT: All right. This is your filing
6 under seal. This has your answer attached,
7 correct?

8 MR. SCAROLA: It does have the answer
9 attached. It's Exhibit A, Your Honor.

10 If I might, I don't mean to interrupt you --

11 THE COURT: No, go ahead.

12 MR. SCAROLA: If you'll just look at page 3, 13 this is one obvious place, page 3, first full
14 paragraph, second sentence, "Morgan Stanley's
15 investigation in the summer of 1997 revealed that 16 Al Dunlop's supposed turn-around of Sunbeam was 17 strikingly similar to Dunlop's restructuring of 18 Scott Paper in 1995 which Morgan Stanley knew was 19 a volume-driven plan to prop up the company for 20 sale."

21 If you continue reading on from there, we
22 talk about all of the surrounding circumstances
23 that placed Morgan Stanley on notice that the 24 information that it was providing was false
25 information, and we have recited those facts known

1 to us, including the dates with respect to those
2 facts, that lead us to the conclusion that Morgan
3 Stanley at the time it made these representations,
4 particular representations that are detailed, was 5 aware of the fact that the representations that 6 they were making were false.

7 THE COURT: Do I have interrogatory number 3
8 in the answer?

9 MR. CLARE: I'm sorry?

10 THE COURT: The interrogatory 3, do I have 11 that, the one that's referenced in interrogatory
12 number 4?

13 MR. DRISCOLL: It's the third interrogatory,
14 the first set, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: I'm sorry?

16 MR. DRISCOLL: It's the third interrogatory,
17 first set.

18 MR. CLARE: It's the one that I think Your 19 Honor was just looking at that I just handed up.

20 THE COURT: Oh, I thought that was the first.

21 MR. CLARE: It is, but it's the third
22 interrogatory of the first set.

4hrg0319.txt

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?
24 MR. CLARE: The response is, I know what 25 Mr. Scarola's contentions are about the argument,
0039
1 and the reason why I styled my interrogatories in 2 exactly this fashion was to avoid hearing his
3 opening statement in their interrogatory response
4 about the inferences that can be drawn from 5 various historical facts.
6 My question in the interrogatories were much
7 simpler. I asked them in the manner I did
8 precisely to avoid having to discern, which I've 9 been unable to do, for which of the 10 misrepresentations do they claim we knew in 11 advance were false and which ones do they claim we 12 found out after were false. I cannot devine that 13 information from these two interrogatories.
14 MR. SCAROLA: And we'd be happy to answer
15 that interrogatory, but it's not this
16 interrogatory.
17 THE COURT: Do you have a proposed order on 18 this one?
19 MR. SCAROLA: I think I do, Your Honor. I
20 may have handed you a blank order on this one
21 already, and if I didn't, I'm sure I have one.
22 THE COURT: If you did, I lost it.
23 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, I do have a blank order,
24 Your Honor.
25 Your Honor, there is a second aspect to this 0040
1 motion that has not been addressed, and I don't
2 know whether counsel's abandoning that aspect or
3 not, but we haven't heard any argument about it.
4 THE COURT: Hold on.
5 Okay. I'm going to type this up. And I
6 understand we may --
7 Is the other issue you wanted to talk about a
8 duty to update the answer or something else?
9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, that's the
10 issue.
11 THE COURT: I think we would agree it wasn't 12 argued, but I don't know if there is a duty to 13 update it currently, but what I am going to do is 14 do an order that goes through the prior answer of 15 the interrogatory and pulls out what I think to be 16 the answer that sort of addresses the question
17 asked, which is what was false and misleading, and 18 says as to these representations, tell us when you
19 believe -- when Morgan Stanley found these to be 20 false. Okay?
21 MR. CLARE: I've learned at my very first
22 hearing in front of Your Honor that after you set
23 pen to paper, not to go beyond that.
24 THE COURT: You can ask her to type that,
25 because it's not going to make any sense until she 0041
1 types it. It takes up too much room.
2 All I've done is going through the answer to
3 the prior interrogatory and pull out what I think
4 to be sort of the core representations that they
5 contend were erroneous, which is I guess the 6 strategic plan; I'd have to look at what I wrote,
7 all the things going through the answer that they

4hr0319.txt

8 say contain incorrect information, and say as to 9 these things, tell us when you believe these items
10 to be false. Can you do that within 30 days?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Where do we go next?

13 MR. SCAROLA: I think the --

14 THE COURT: Oh, and why don't you take -- Did
15 I tear up -- I might have torn up some of the 16 things you gave me. I apologize. Here it is 17 back, the parts I have left. There was a list of 18 documents at the end with CP numbers and other 19 numbers and it would have taken me too long to 20 write it up by hand.

21 MR. CLARE: Okay. Certainly.

22 THE COURT: Okay.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the next matter to 24 be addressed before the Court is Coleman (Parent)
25 Holding Incorporated's motion for a rule to show

1 cause.

2 THE COURT: Okay. And we wanted to do that
3 in connection with the motion for pro hac vice?

4 MR. CLARE: I assume so, Your Honor.

5 MR. SCAROLA: We would request that, yes.

6 MR. CLARE: And if I could just explain why
7 it would be important --

8 THE COURT: Sure.

9 MR. CLARE: -- to address those two issues
10 together, without preempting Mr. Scarola's
11 opportunity to argue.

12 As we discussed during the last case
13 management conference on February 20th, Kirkland
14 and Ellis has a conflict with Andersen, and we 15 advised the Court that we would be adding 16 additional counsel as co-counsel in this case to 17 represent Morgan Stanley with those aspects of the 18 case going forward. And with me in the courtroom
19 today is Mr. Mark Hansen from the law firm of 20 Kellogg, Huber & Hansen.

21 MR. HANSEN: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: Good afternoon.

23 MR. CLARE: And in order to respond to some 24 of the allegations that have been made and some of 25 the arguments that have been made on the Andersen

1 side of the case, I have asked Mr. Hansen to join
2 us today and will require his assistance in 3 responding.

4 THE COURT: As an attorney or just as --

5 MR. CLARE: As an attorney.

6 THE COURT: -- or as a witness?

7 MR. CLARE: He is co-counsel in this case.

8 MR. IANNO: Mr. Hansen, Ms. Beynon and 9 Mr. Webster are making their appearances, Your 10 Honor, as counsel --

11 THE COURT: Who do you represent?

12 MR. IANNO: Morgan Stanley, the defendant in 13 this case.

14 THE COURT: And why do we need him as opposed
15 to there being a witness, just so I understand?

16 MR. IANNO: Well, they are going to actively 17 participate in this case, Your Honor, in the 18 Morgan Stanley/Coleman case, but as I understand,

4hrq0319.txt

19 their role is going to be limited to the Arthur
20 Andersen issues.

21 As the Court may be aware from reading the 22 papers, there are these two other lawsuits that
23 have been filed that involve Arthur Andersen --

24 THE COURT: Do they represent --

25 MR. IANNO: Morgan Stanley in one of these

1 other cases.

2 THE COURT: They do?

3 MR. IANNO: Yes.

4 MR. CLARE: Yes.

5 MR. SCAROLA: I have a serious problem with 6 their presence in the courtroom except to the 7 extent that they may be called to testify as 8 witnesses unless and until such time as they are 9 admitted pro hac --

10 THE COURT: Let me stop you guys.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

12 THE COURT: We have 20 minutes left. Are we 13 going to have time? I don't see that this is a
14 20-minute issue, to be honest with you.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Well, if I might just describe
16 the scope of what it is we are requesting today,
17 perhaps Your Honor will have a different
18 perspective on that, because I agree that these 19 issues cannot be resolved finally today.

20 what we are requesting is a recognition that
21 the matters raised in our motion present serious
22 concerns about a violation of a court order that 23 need to be investigated, and the means by which 24 they would be investigated would be the issuance
25 of a rule to show cause, the setting --

1 THE COURT: Let's assume I'm not even sure I
2 can do that and allow them to adequately respond
3 in 20 minutes.

4 MR. SCAROLA: Then --

5 THE COURT: I can tell you, I take all these 6 things seriously. It's apparent to me from both
7 your filings that this is something you all take 8 seriously, too, and I think even issuing a rule to 9 show cause is something I would want full argument
10 on.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Then let me narrow it even 12 further for the Court.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We are requesting an 15 opportunity to take discovery with regard to the 16 matter that we have presented by way of our 17 motion. Our discovery request is a very limited
18 request for discovery.

19 THE COURT: And your position is it's 20 broad --

21 MR. CLARE: It is.

22 THE COURT: -- and invades attorney/client
23 privilege?

24 MR. CLARE: Well, Mr. Scarola is effectively
25 giving himself the remedy he seeks in the motion

1 to show cause, because as Your Honor will see, the
2 discovery that he is requesting, which was just 3 handed to us moments before we walked in the

4hrg0319.txt

4 courtroom, is an invasion of Morgan Stanley's
5 attorney/client and work product privileges and is 6 entirely predicated on the finding of a violation.

7 And I agree with Your Honor, this is a
8 serious issue, the allegations are serious, they 9 are also false, but Morgan Stanley needs an 10 opportunity to respond.

11 THE COURT: Okay.

12 MR. CLARE: And the discovery that
13 Mr. Scarola is seeking is exactly the relief
14 sought in his motion for a rule to show cause.

15 So we would object to any discovery until 16 Your Honor has had an opportunity to hear from 17 Morgan Stanley on our belief that the motion
18 should be denied in its entirety and that no
19 discovery is appropriate.

20 MR. SCAROLA: May I be heard with regard to 21 this request, Your Honor?

22 THE COURT: Sure.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much.

24 THE COURT: well, request for what; for the 25 limited discovery?

1 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

2 THE COURT: I can tell you, Mr. Scarola,
3 that's not something I'm prepared to take argument
4 on in what is now 15 minutes; I'm just not.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

6 THE COURT: It's something I take seriously.
7 Even in 15 minutes, I couldn't allow you to fully 8 present your arguments for me to make an 9 intelligent decision on what, if anything, should 10 be done.

11 With that said, in all honesty, I think two 12 things; I would agree the motion for admission
13 pro hac vice I don't want to hear today either,
14 because it strikes me that they are intertwined
15 with the issues raised by the motion for order to 16 show cause. And as I understand sort of 17 plaintiff's concern is that defendant may be 18 trying to sort of bootstrap or eliminate a legal 19 issue by making them counsel of record in this 20 case.

21 MR. SOLOVY: Exactly.

22 THE COURT: And I understand that's the 23 concern, and quite honestly, that's something that 24 I would have to think a whole lot more about and 25 understand the context before I were to permit it.

0048

1 MR. SCAROLA: May I just -- I know that Your
2 Honor has indicated that you don't --

3 THE COURT: Where's pen and paper? I've got
4 to start writing, Mr. Scarola, so you'll be quiet.

5 MR. CLARE: This is the Tom Clare rule.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor has indicated that
7 you're not inclined to grant us this discovery,
8 but I don't know if you've had a chance to take a
9 look at what we are requesting here. What it
10 amounts to is nothing more than what we would be 11 entitled to under the terms of a privilege log.
12 This is no invasion of the attorney/client
13 privilege in any respect or the work product
14 privilege, because it simply seeks to find out

4hrq0319.txt

15 whether confidential information has been 16 communicated.
17 THE COURT: well, let me ask you this.
18 Are you happy with -- And I'm trying to think 19 where I could quickly put my hands on a copy of 20 the confidentiality order.
21 MR. SCAROLA: Right here, Your Honor.
22 THE COURT: I assume there was an attachment
23 to it of something that had to be signed before
24 its contents --
25 MR. CLARE: And that is part and parcel of 0049
1 our argument, Your Honor. These attorneys signed
2 it --
3 THE COURT: well, I understand that argument.
4 I don't think that answers the question.
5 MR. IANNO: No, there --
6 THE COURT: That's sort of saying you could
7 go hire an attorney to collect a credit card debt
8 in Minnesota and give them this and it would be 9 okay, and that's, you know, obviously not the 10 case. So I don't think that answers the question.
11 MR. IANNO: The direct answer is declaration
12 A, Your Honor, that requires any persons to be 13 bound by the confidentiality order.
14 THE COURT: So is all you're asking for is 15 all of the Exhibit A's that were signed by people
16 who received a copy of the settlement agreement?
17 MR. SCAROLA: well, certainly that would be a 18 helpful starting point, but that is not the end of 19 the inquiry.
20 THE COURT: I agree it's not, but just 21 understanding my reluctance to do anything today,
22 is that sufficient to get us started?
23 MR. SCAROLA: We would like whatever Your
24 Honor is willing to give us today --
25 THE COURT: Is there anything more I -- 0050
1 MR. SCAROLA: -- because I will have achieved
2 at least a little bit more.
3 THE COURT: At a minimum, I would be
4 requiring you to produce the Exhibit A's that have 5 been signed for people who have received the
6 settlement agreement.
7 MR. CLARE: We have already supplied to Court
8 and to counsel many of them, and so we have no
9 objection to producing all of them.
10 THE COURT: Okay.
11 MR. CLARE: But we disagree with the further
12 assertion by Mr. Scarola that anything beyond
13 that, anything in the interrogatories that he's 14 handed Your Honor, are appropriate. We object --
15 THE COURT: These are originals you gave me,
16 correct?
17 MR. SCAROLA: Those are originals, yes, Your
18 Honor.
19 THE COURT: So I need to put them in the 20 court file?
21 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.
22 THE COURT: Okay.
23 MR. SCAROLA: I have extra copies if Your
24 Honor would like extra copies.
25 MR. IANNO: Are those interrogatories?

4hrg0319.txt

1 MR. SCAROLA: Those are the same
2 interrogatories that I --
3 MR. IANNO: Interrogatories typically don't 4 get filed.
5 MR. SCAROLA: That's right, they typically
6 don't. Thank you.
7 THE COURT: Oh, so you want them back?
8 Well, if you have the notice --
9 MR. SCAROLA: I've hand-delivered them, Your 10 Honor. That's all right.
11 THE COURT: So I'll give them back then.
12 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I don't know. This 13 is the Florida lawyer here talking, because I'm 14 fully aware of TIG, a case I don't agree with, but 15 just looking at Mr. Scarola's interrogatory very 16 quickly, number 4, detail the purported factual
17 basis for Morgan Stanley's inclusion as a
18 plaintiff. I mean, obviously, that's going to 19 invade the attorney/client privilege.
20 THE COURT: I'm not looking at those.
21 MR. IANNO: Okay.
22 THE COURT: Let's assume all I'm doing today
23 is acknowledging we need a hearing on the motion
24 that probably needs to be specially set so we're 25 not looking at other stuff while we do it, and 0052

1 that in the meantime, defendant will produce all
2 of the --
3 MR. SCAROLA: Exhibit A's.
4 MR. CLARE: Exhibit A's.
5 THE COURT: -- Exhibit A's to the stipulated
6 confidentiality order executed when a copy of the 7 settlement agreement was disseminated.
8 MR. IANNO: And really, my concern was, if I
9 don't respond to this because the motion doesn't
10 get heard for 30 days, under TIG, I don't want
11 there to be the waiver. That's my concern.
12 THE COURT: I see.
13 MR. IANNO: If we're fighting about this and 14 we fight about it for 45 days --
15 MR. SCAROLA: Just file your motion for 16 protective order.
17 THE COURT: Yeah, I think that's all you need
18 to do.
19 MR. IANNO: Okay. That's my concern. Are 20 these now considered filed and they require a
21 response, or are we going to decide whether or not 22 Mr. Scarola is even allowed to serve these?
23 That's what I can't --
24 THE COURT: I think in all honesty, he can 25 serve anything he wants in the ambit of this

1 litigation, and you need to file a motion.
2 MR. SCAROLA: We do consider those to have
3 been served as of today.
4 MR. IANNO: Okay. That's what I need to
5 know.
6 MR. CLARE: we'll file our motion.
7 THE COURT: When is our next case management
8 conference, and when do we go to two hours?
9 MR. IANNO: It's a one-hour, Your Honor.
10 THE COURT: It's still one hour?

4hrg0319.txt

11 MR. CLARE: It's one hour, and I believe it's 12 April 16th, but I will confirm that.

13 MR. SOLOVY: It is April 16th, 4:00, Your
14 Honor.

15 Your Honor, Mr. Solovy. I agree with your 16 statement, we don't want to get this mixed up with
17 that.

18 THE COURT: No, I agree. I'm just looking at 19 if there's any other time that day.

20 MR. SOLOVY: Well, we view this as more
21 pressing, Your Honor, if you have time.

22 THE COURT: I do, too. In all honesty, to 23 the extent I think I would prefer more time, I
24 don't know that we do.

25 MR. SOLOVY: Your Honor, I have to tell you,

1 it's very cold in Chicago, so the quicker you get
2 us down, the happier I am.

3 THE COURT: I understand. I also have other
4 cases.

5 MR. SOLOVY: I also have a wife in Naples,
6 you see, so this works very well for me, Your 7 Honor, it keeps a happy marriage going.

8 And, Your Honor, you know, we view this very 9 seriously, so, you know...

10 THE COURT: I'm not suggesting I don't, too,
11 but I'm also suggesting that there I don't think
12 is going to be any damage that can't be remedied
13 if we wait a little time to hear it. So let me
14 look at what we got.

15 I just want to get the clerk's docket sheet.

16 The best I can do when I know I can do it is 17 April 30th, and I can tell you what time I have 18 that day. Again it's a Friday, and I have from 19 nine to 10:30 free, and I also have from three to 20 five.

21 MR. SOLOVY: Let me ask you this, Your Honor.
22 We do have the 4:00 on the 16th.

23 THE COURT: We do.

24 MR. SOLOVY: So I'd rather use that time for 25 this motion than --

1 THE COURT: My concern is whether an hour is
2 going to be sufficient. I'll be honest with
3 you --

4 MR. SOLOVY: I agree.

5 THE COURT: You guys are versed in the 6 issues, I'm not, and, you know, it's just going to 7 take you longer to explain it to me, that's all.

8 MR. CLARE: I share that concern, and I also 9 am concerned that we keep those previously
10 scheduled case management conferences --

11 THE COURT: No, I agree.

12 MR. CLARE: -- to keep this case on track.

13 THE COURT: I understand that this is an
14 important issue to both sides.

15 MR. SOLOVY: At what time, Your Honor?

16 MR. SCAROLA: It's either an hour in the 17 morning or two hours in the afternoon?

18 THE COURT: I can give you both, I don't 19 care. I mean, I've got nine to 10:30 in the 20 morning, and I also have three to five in the 21 afternoon. I'm happy to give you both; if you

4hr0319.txt

22 finish early, great; if you don't, then we have 23 the extra time to come back.
24 MR. SOLOVY: I agree. That's fine, Your
25 Honor.

0056

1 THE COURT: Okay. I have read the stuff
2 you've given me on this, and it is something I
3 would have to think about. Something that would 4 be helpful to me I think is if you don't each take
5 extreme positions in arguing it. I mean, I
6 understand that you got to zealously advocate on 7 behalf of your client, but when we get into the 8 issues, it would be helpful to me if you don't 9 each argue only the extremes, but also argue the 10 middle ground, because that's going to present
11 sort of the panoply of things to me that I
12 probably need to consider.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That tends to be the rule by 14 which we live on this side of the courtroom, but 15 we'll make an extra effort to try to apply it in 16 this circumstance diligently.

17 THE COURT: I'm not suggesting, please
18 understand, to either side that I know what I
19 would do; I simply don't, but I'm just saying, to 20 me, it's not an issue that I've been confronted 21 with before and I sort of need to think through 22 the various --

23 MR. SCAROLA: May I make this request, Your
24 Honor?

25 In light of the fact that we have served the

1 interrogatories today and we have a hearing
2 scheduled for April 16, if in fact there are going
3 to be objections rather than answers, as it
4 appears apparent there will be, may we request
5 that the time be shortened in which to file those
6 objections so that the merits of those objections
7 can be addressed on the 16th and we might perhaps
8 have answers in time for the hearing on the 30th?

9 THE COURT: Quite honestly, what I would
10 suspect is until we've done something on the 30th,
11 none of this is going to be relevant.

12 MR. IANNO: Well, that was my concern.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Well, it's difficult for me to 14 comprehend how we're going to take three hours
15 then if all we are going to do --

16 THE COURT: We probably won't, in all
17 honesty, we probably won't, but I think -- And I
18 understand your client's position, but you're 19 accelerating this at a speed I'm not comfortable
20 with.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Well, today is the 19th. Today
22 is the 19th. All we're asking for is a brief
23 acceleration on the filing of objections to 24 interrogatories in this case.

25 THE COURT: Sure, but I can tell you what the 0058

1 objections are going to be. I mean, I can guess,
2 is that this isn't relevant to the issues framed
3 by the pleadings, and you're not going to be able
4 to respond to that until you know if I'm going to 5 issue the order to show cause.

6 MR. IANNO: Which is why I brought up the

4hrg0319.txt

waiver issue with TIG --

THE COURT: No, I understand that.

MR. IANNO: -- because what you're going to see is the motion for protective order to stay this until that's decided.

10

12

THE COURT: Right. And that's sort of when I talk about being prepared to argue the middle ground, that's the kind of thing I'm talking about; it's just like if you'd give some thought to, okay -- because it could be -- well, I don't even want to speculate, because I don't know what I'm going to do on the 30th. All I know is, right now, I would not accelerate the time to file objections to the interrogatories, because I don't think it would get us anywhere. Okay?

13

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

MR. SCAROLA: I do understand that.

23

THE COURT: I understand you don't agree, Mr. Scarola.

24

0059

MR. SCAROLA: No, I don't disagree. I don't disagree at all. I just want to be sure that I have an accurate understanding of what it is the Court wants to do. And as I perceive it, there really is a three-step process involved here. The first step is a construction of the Court's order and confidentiality agreement --

THE COURT: Sure.

8

MR. SCAROLA: -- to make a determination as to what is allowed and what is prohibited.

10

THE COURT: Because as I read what you guys wrote, you acknowledge you gave the settlement agreement to counsel in a subsequent litigation.

11

13

MR. CLARE: As we were permitted to do.

14

THE COURT: Well, yeah, I don't think that there's an argument about that.

15

MR. CLARE: And also, the qualification of it being subsequent litigation. It is this litigation, it is filed in this courthouse, and a motion to transfer that case to Your Honor is pending.

17

19

20

MR. IANNO: They're all facts that will be explained to the Court.

21

THE COURT: And I read that in your response, and I understand that. Again, that's the kind of thing I got to think about a bit more.

23

0060

MR. SCAROLA: And my point is, if step one is simply a construction of the contract, step two would then be discovery to determine whether and to what extent the contract was violated, if it is construed in such a way that what is acknowledged to have occurred is in fact in violation of the contract. If what Your Honor says is I'll assume that what the plaintiff is contending happened --

8

THE COURT: Sure.

9

MR. SCAROLA: -- but it doesn't violate the order --

10

11

THE COURT: But assuming what you're saying is correct, again, we can't get to step two, which is what's the discovery, until we've first done step one --

12

14

15

MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

16

THE COURT: -- which makes the 17

4hrg0319.txt

18 interrogatories --
19 MR. SCAROLA: But the only point I'm making
20 there is that step one should not take us a very 21 long time. If all we're doing is construing the 22 contract, we've got the Court's order and the 23 confidentiality agreement, and all we're going to 24 do is address what does this mean --

25 THE COURT: Sure.

1 MR. SCAROLA: -- that's something that we
2 ought to be able to handle --
3 THE COURT: I would agree we should be able
4 to handle that.
5 On the other hand, I understand you're saying
6 that --
7 MR. CLARE: The issues need to be addressed
8 together.

9 THE COURT: Well, or that -- You know, it's 10 like a whole argument this litigation -- somehow
11 this subsequently-filed litigation against Arthur
12 Andersen is the same litigation as this.

13 MR. SOLOVY: Well, if we're going to get into 14 this, Your Honor, we drafted this protective order
15 with language saying that you could use this in 16 subsequent litigation. Mr. Clare, on behalf of 17 Morgan Stanley, said, oh, no, no, no, took that 18 out and specifically limited it.

19 THE COURT: Then what you're telling me is 20 you're going to want evidence at the hearing.

21 MR. IANNO: And that's going to take at least 22 an hour, if not more.

23 THE COURT: If it's a stipulated order, it's 24 also a contract between the parties.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, indeed.

1 MR. CLARE: And not to delve into the merits,
2 which I thought we were not going to do, but 3 Mr. Hansen is counsel in this case, he is 4 co-counsel in this case.

5 MR. SOLOVY: He's not counsel yet, Your
6 Honor, because you haven't let him in.

7 THE COURT: As I said --

8 MR. CLARE: But that goes to the construction
9 issue.

10 THE COURT: As I said, I'm not comfortable
11 doing the motions for admission pro hac vice 12 divorced from the motion for the order to show
13 cause. Okay?

14 MR. SCAROLA: All right. Thank you. I think
15 we understand what the scope of the initial 16 hearing will be, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: I've got to notice those motions
18 for hearing with the motion for order to show
19 cause. It's the 3, correct?

20 MR. IANNO: Correct, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Okay. So I can notice those 22 together with the order to show cause, together
23 with the order acknowledging defendant's
24 stipulation to produce Exhibit A's, right?

25 MR. CLARE: We have made that acknowledgment.

1 THE COURT: And when are those going to be 2 produced by?

MR. SCAROLA: Ten days?

MR. CLARE: Ten days.

THE COURT: Ten days. Okay. I will do that order and get you copies.

MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you very much.

MR. SOLOVY: Thank you for your time, Your Honor.

MR. IANNO: Thank you.

THE COURT: Hey let me ask you, I apologize, I still have defendant's motion to compel production of documents. Is that still pending?

MR. CLARE: I believe that's the agreed-upon order.

MR. SCAROLA: That's the agreed one.

THE COURT: Is that the one I have the agreed order on?

MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. IANNO: Your Honor, housekeeping matter. This doesn't really have to be on the record. Most of the time I know the Court doesn't ask for proposed orders; I noticed today you asked for one.

THE COURT: Sometimes I do.

MR. IANNO: I just want to know whether --

THE COURT: My general practice is to do my own, unless they're going to be really short and I can fill in the blank.

Dear Tom:

Jerry and I left a voicemail message for you earlier today as we would like to hear from you on the discovery issues we raised last Wednesday; namely Morgan Stanley's response to our document request (due on 6/26) and our notice of deposition, which notices the depositions of three Morgan Stanley personnel beginning on July 10.

With respect to our document request, we want to discuss a timetable for the production of documents. As for the deposition notice, you indicated last Wednesday that Mr. Kitts is no longer employed by Morgan Stanley, Mr. Tyree is a current employee, and you are undertaking to confirm the status of Mr. Fuchs' employment. Please confirm Mr. Tyree's availability and please inform us promptly whether Mr. Fuchs is currently employed by Morgan Stanley. If Mr. Fuchs is a current Morgan Stanley employee, please confirm his availability for the dates noticed for his deposition. If the deposition dates for current Morgan Stanley employees are not convenient, we are willing to make accommodations, but we want Morgan Stanley promptly to propose new dates that will allow us to take the depositions within a reasonably short period of time.

In addition to those issues, we would like to address the issue of a protective order. We assume that Morgan Stanley will want one, and we propose that the parties use the same protective order that was used in the Andersen case and In re Sunbeam (the Sunbeam shareholder case). We believe that doing so will make the use of materials from those cases less complicated. To move things along, we will send you our proposal shortly.

STIPULATED CONFIDENTIALITY ORDER

The parties hereto hereby stipulate and agree to the following Confidentiality Order:

1. Scope of Order. This Order shall apply to all non-public and Confidential (as hereinafter defined) materials produced in this litigation and all testimony given in any deposition by any party to the litigation or by any person or entity that is not a party hereto (a "non-party"), to all non-public and Confidential information disclosed by any party hereto during the course of the captioned litigation and to all non-public information disclosed to any party hereto by any non-party in response to the service of a subpoena or notice of deposition on a non-party in connection with the captioned litigation ("Litigation Materials").

2. This Order shall not apply to any document, testimony or other information that (a) is already in a receiving party's possession at the time it is produced, (b) becomes generally available to the public other than as a result of disclosure in violation of this Order or in breach of any other legal obligation, or (c) becomes available to a party other than through voluntary or required production from a person or party who obtained the document, testimony or other information without any confidentiality restriction.

3. Litigation Materials and the information derived therefrom shall be used solely for the purpose of preparing for and conducting this litigation or any other litigation arising therefrom, and shall not be disclosed or used for any other purpose.

4. Any party or non-party may designate as "Confidential" any Litigation Materials or portions thereof which the party or non-party believes, in good faith, constitute, contain, reveal or reflect proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature. If a party or non-party produces Litigation Materials that have been produced in another litigation or to any government entity and such Litigation Materials have been designated confidential or were accompanied by a request that confidential treatment be accorded them, such Litigation Materials shall be deemed to have been designated "Confidential" for purposes of this Stipulation and Order.

5. Any documents or other tangible Litigation Materials may be designated as "Confidential" by marking every such page "Confidential" or by informing the other party in writing that such material is Confidential. Such markings will be made in a manner which does not obliterate or obscure the content of the document or other tangible Litigation Material. If Litigation Material is inspected at the choice of location of the party or non-party producing or disclosing Litigation Materials (a "producing party"), all such Litigation Material shall be presumed at such inspection to have been designated as Confidential by the producing party until such time as the producing party provides copies to the party that requested the Litigation Material. Production of Confidential Material for inspection and copying shall not constitute a waiver of confidentiality.

6. Depositions or other testimony may be designated "Confidential" by any one of the following means:

(a) stating orally on the record, with reasonable precision as to the affected testimony, on the day the testimony is given that this information is "Confidential"; or

(b) sending written notice designating, by page and line, the portions of the transcript of the deposition or other testimony to be treated as "Confidential" within 10 days after receipt of the transcripts.

7. The entire transcript of any deposition shall be treated as Confidential Material until thirty days after the conclusion of the deposition. Each page of deposition transcript designated as Confidential Material shall be stamped, as set forth in paragraph 5 above, by the court reporter or counsel.

8. In the event it becomes necessary at a deposition or hearing to show any Confidential Material to a witness, any testimony related to the Confidential Material shall be deemed to be Confidential Material, and the pages and lines of the transcript that set forth such testimony shall be stamped as set forth in paragraph 5 of this Stipulation.

9. Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, shall not be given, shown, made available or communicated in any way to anyone except:

(a) The Circuit Court of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida (the "Court") (including Clerks and other Court personnel). Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, that are filed with the Court or any pleadings, motions or other papers filed with the Court, shall be filed under seal in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked "Filed Under Seal – Subject to Confidentiality Order," or with such other markings as required by Court rules, and shall be kept under seal until further order of the Court. Where possible, only those portions of filings with the Court that disclose matters designated "Confidential" shall be filed under seal;

(b) counsel to the parties, including co-counsel of record for the parties actually assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation, and the legal associates and clerical or other support staff who are employed by such counsel or attorneys and are working under the express direction of such counsel or attorneys;

(c) parties and current officers and employees of parties to the extent reasonably deemed necessary by counsel disclosing such information for the purpose of assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation;

(d) outside photocopying, graphic production services, litigation support services, or investigators employed by the parties or their counsel to assist in this litigation and computer personnel performing duties in relation to a computerized litigation system;

(e) any person who is a witness or deponent, and his or her counsel, during the course of a deposition of testimony in this litigation;

(f) any person who is a potential fact witness in the litigation, provided, however, that a person identified solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material;

(g) court reporters, stenographers, or videographers who record deposition or other testimony in the litigation;

(h) experts or consultants retained in connection with the litigation;

(i) any person who is indicated on the face of a document to have been an author, addressee or copy recipient thereof, provided, however, that a person identified

solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material; and

(j) any other person, upon written consent from the party or person who designated such Litigation Materials "Confidential."

10. Before any person included in paragraph 9(f) or (h) is given access to Litigation Materials designated "Confidential," and before any person included in subparagraph 9(e) is permitted to retain any copy of Litigation Materials designated Confidential, such person shall be provided with a copy of this Order and shall acknowledge in a written statement, in the form provided as Exhibit A hereto, that he or she read the Order and agrees to be bound by the terms thereof. Such executed forms shall be retained in the files of counsel for the party who gave access to Litigation Materials to the person who was provided such access. Such executed forms shall not be subject to disclosure under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure unless a showing of good cause is made and the Court so orders.

11. The inadvertent production of privileged or arguably privileged materials shall not be determined to be either: (a) a general waiver of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine or any other privilege; or (b) a specific waiver of any such privilege with respect to documents being produced or the testimony given. Notice of any claim of privilege as to any document claimed to have been produced inadvertently shall be given within a reasonable period of time after discovery of the inadvertent production, and, on request by the producing party, all inadvertently produced materials as to which a claim of privilege is properly asserted and any copies thereof shall be returned promptly.

12. Nothing in this Order shall prevent any producing party from disclosing or using its own "Confidential" Litigation Materials as it deems appropriate, and any such disclosure shall not be deemed a waiver of any party's right or obligations under this Order with respect to any other information. If a party or non-party that designates information "Confidential" discloses or uses such "Confidential" Litigation Materials in a manner inconsistent with the claim that such information is confidential, any party may move the Court for an order removing such "Confidential" designation pursuant to paragraph 15 herein. Nothing in this Stipulation and Order shall impose any restrictions on the use or disclosure by any party of documents, materials, testimony or other information produced as Litigation Material obtained by such party independently of discovery in this litigation.

13. The parties do not waive any right to object to any discovery request, or to the admission of evidence on any ground, or seek any further protective order, or to seek relief from the Court from any provision of this Order by application on notice on any grounds.

14. If any party objects to the designation of any Litigation Materials as "Confidential," the party shall first state the objection by letter to the party that made such designations. The parties agree to confer in good faith by telephone or in person to attempt to resolve any dispute respecting the terms or operation of this Order. If the parties are unable to resolve such dispute within 5 days of such conference, any party may then move the Court to do so. Until the Court rules on such dispute, the Litigation Materials in question shall continue to be treated as "Confidential," as designated.

15. Upon motion, the Court may order the removal of the "Confidential" designation from any information so designated. In connection with any motion concerning the propriety of a "Confidential" designation, the party making the designation shall bear the burden of proof.

16. Within 60 days of the conclusion of this litigation as to all parties, all Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and all copies or notes thereof shall be returned to counsel for the producing party who initially produced the Litigation Materials, or destroyed, except that counsel may retain their work product and copies of court filings, transcripts, and exhibits, provided said retained documents will continue to be treated as provided in this Order, as modified by rulings of the Court. If a party chooses to destroy documents after the litigation has concluded, that party shall certify such destruction in writing to the producing party upon written request for such certification by the producing party.

17. The failure of any party to challenge the designation by another production party of Litigation Material as "Confidential" during the discovery period shall not be a waiver of that party's right to object to the designation of such material at trial.

18. This Stipulation applies to all non-parties that are served with subpoenas in connection with this litigation or who otherwise produce documents or are noticed for deposition in connection with this litigation, and all such non-parties are entitled to the protection afforded hereby upon signing a copy of this agreement and agreeing to be bound by its terms.

19. Any party may move to modify the provisions of this Order at any time or the parties may agree by written stipulation, subject to further order of the Court, to modify the provisions of the Order. Should any non-party seek access to the Confidential Material, by request, subpoena or otherwise, the party or recipient of the Confidential Material from whom such access is sought, as applicable, shall promptly notify the producing party who produced such Confidential Materials of such requested access and shall not provide such materials unless required by law or with the consent of the producing party.

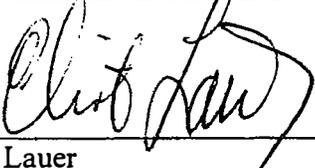

20. This Order shall not apply to any Litigation Materials offered or otherwise used by any party at trial or at any hearing held in open court. Prior to the use of any Litigation Materials that have been designated Confidential at trial or any hearing to be held in open court, counsel who desires to so offer or use such Confidential Material shall take reasonable steps to afford opposing counsel and counsel for the producing party who produced such Confidential Material a reasonable opportunity to object to the disclosure in open court of such Confidential Material, and nothing herein shall be construed a waiver of such right to object.

21. Written notice provided pursuant to this Order shall be made to counsel of record by facsimile.

22. The provisions of this Order shall survive the final termination of the case for any retained Confidential Litigation Material thereof.

Dear Mike:

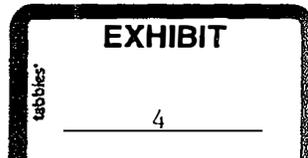

Please find the enclosed requests for production of documents from Morgan Stanley & Co Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding. Regarding the issues we discussed yesterday:

• Protective Order From Andersen Litigation: The only outstanding issue is our request to remove the "or any other litigation arising therefrom" language in Paragraph 2. We remain unconvinced that the administrative convenience of having precisely the same protective order outweighs the uncertainties created by this unnecessary and open-ended provision. Please let me know how you intend to proceed. Once we have resolved this issue, we will prepare a letter to memorialize the agreements reached during our July 14, 2003 call regarding the interpretation and administration of the protective order.

• Depositions Of Current And Former MS & Co. Employees:

- (a) We understand that you intend to prepare the necessary papers to obtain the deposition of John Tyree. We will accept service on his behalf.
- (b) We are not authorized to provide you with "last known" contact information for Alex Fuchs or Robert Kitts absent a properly framed discovery request.

• MS & Co.'s Objections To CPH's Requests For Production: We are in the process of reviewing the issues you raised during yesterday's call regarding MS & Co.'s objections to CPH's Requests for Production. MS & Co. intends -- at the time it makes its initial production -- to provide CPH with updated objections/responses to the RFPs reflecting its final decisions on those issues.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

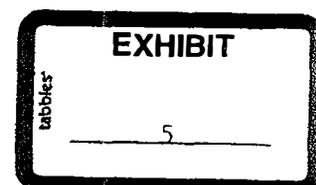

Dear Tom:

I write concerning the various topics Deirdre Connell and I discussed Monday in our meet and confer telephone conference concerning the discovery requests Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") propounded upon Morgan Stanley & Co. ("Morgan Stanley"). As you know, it is our view that Morgan Stanley has failed to respond appropriately to CPH's document requests and CPH's deposition notices. The Court has denied Morgan Stanley's motion to stay discovery, and it is apparent that Morgan Stanley is now engaging in "self help" to delay discovery that is clearly necessary and appropriate. This letter summarizes our discussions on specific items.

1. Deposition Dates. We have noticed depositions and expect to proceed with deposition discovery. While we are willing to accommodate reasonable scheduling requests, Morgan Stanley continues to refuse to offer dates for the depositions CPH noticed. You indicated in our conference that Morgan Stanley is willing to begin depositions in early September, but only if CPH produces documents by mid-August in response to document requests that Morgan Stanley served on July 15.

We do not agree to postpone depositions. We served our notice of deposition upon Morgan Stanley on May 12. Morgan Stanley now seeks unilaterally to condition its compliance with deposition discovery upon CPH's response to recently served document requests. It is unreasonable to delay deposition discovery for another two months.

Nor do we believe that Morgan Stanley's compliance with the long-pending deposition notice may be conditioned upon an agreement of CPH to produce documents by mid-August. Morgan Stanley only this week served its discovery requests. Morgan Stanley requests that CPH meet a schedule that Morgan Stanley has not even come close to meeting. CPH served document requests on May 12, and Morgan Stanley proposes to begin its production on July 25, approximately 75 days later. Morgan Stanley wants CPH to respond to the newly-served requests and produce documents by mid-August, or within 30 days. We will do our best to produce documents, and we will advise you of a schedule for production after we review Morgan

JENNER & BLOCK

Stanley's requests. But Morgan Stanley's tactical decision to delay seeking document discovery is no reason to postpone the depositions we noticed on May 12.

2. Availability of Deponents. As to the particular deponents, Morgan Stanley has refused to produce Mr. Tyree. During our conference call, you advised that Mr. Tyree is a current employee of a Morgan Stanley entity known as Morgan Stanley International, Ltd. Counsel for Morgan Stanley apparently had contacted Mr. Tyree about this case. It is transparent that your client can produce Mr. Tyree when and where you choose.

For no reason other than to obtain further delay, Morgan Stanley has insisted that CPH obtain letters rogatory to compel the deposition of Mr. Tyree in London. Once we jump over those hurdles, you indicated Mr. Tyree is willing to come to the United States for his deposition. We do not believe it is reasonable for Morgan Stanley to insist on letters rogatory.

3. Morgan Stanley's Objections to CPH's Document Requests. Under the discovery rules, Morgan Stanley is obligated to respond to CPH's document requests in good faith. Morgan Stanley failed to do so. Instead, Morgan Stanley raised a multitude of spurious objections. Morgan Stanley did not agree to produce anything in its written responses. To be clear, we do not believe it is permissible to file the kind of response you have filed. We also do not believe it is permissible to schedule a meet and confer, but then decline to provide meaningful responses to our questions.

Our objective in our meet and confer was to narrow the scope of any disagreements so that we need not burden the Court unnecessarily. To start, we asked you to explain various objections and to identify those instances in which Morgan Stanley would produce documents despite initial objections. You refused to explain Morgan Stanley's objections and have failed to articulate in the written responses what documents Morgan Stanley is producing and what it refuses to produce based on its objections. In your subsequent letter of July 15, you indicated that Morgan Stanley intends to serve a modified response along with the future document production, at which time Morgan Stanley may provide some of the answers we sought in our discovery conference.

Obviously, Morgan Stanley's principal strategy at play is to delay discovery. Morgan Stanley was obligated to provide good faith responses on June 25, not sometime after Morgan Stanley begins producing documents in July. Morgan Stanley served 46 pages of objections to our discovery responses and has refused to resolve those objections.

Morgan Stanley's particular objections are groundless. Several examples demonstrate Morgan Stanley's refusal to provide plainly relevant information. For example:

- Although the central issue in CPH's suit is the fraudulent statements made to CPH by Morgan Stanley bearing on Sunbeam's value, Morgan Stanley objected to a request that sought the production of documents relating to the value of Sunbeam securities (Request 13), claiming that such information was not relevant;

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.

JENNER & BLOCK

- Morgan Stanley asserted that the request calling for the production of documents relating to particular events that took place on March 19, 1998 (Request 24) was "vague, ambiguous, and overbroad," despite the fact that the complaint in this case details the events at issue (¶¶ 59-66);
- Morgan Stanley likewise asserted that Request 25 was "vague, ambiguous, and overbroad," despite the fact that it was a narrow request that sought Morgan Stanley's communications with Sunbeam on a single day – March 18, 1998;
- Morgan Stanley refused to produce documents relating to its procedures for due diligence (Request 43), limiting its response to those due diligence procedures that relate to the Sunbeam transaction only. Ignoring its own objections, and again demonstrating Morgan Stanley's bad faith, Morgan Stanley now has served discovery requests on CPH seeking documents relating to CPH's procedures for due diligence (Morgan Stanley Request 29). Morgan Stanley's Request 29 confirms the reasonableness of CPH's Request 43;
- Morgan Stanley refused to produce any documents relating to the personnel who performed services on behalf of Sunbeam, including the criteria used to evaluate or compensate those personnel (Requests 43-46). Those documents are directly relevant to CPH's fraud claims in Count I;

Morgan Stanley refused to produce documents relating to cases, arbitrations, and other proceedings on the ground that CPH can obtain such documents elsewhere (Requests 55, 57, 60-61). That is not a proper objection. If Morgan Stanley has the documents, it must produce them. It is not proper to tell us to ask someone else. Moreover, again ignoring its own objections, Morgan Stanley has requested from CPH (Morgan Stanley Requests 32-38) the same information that Morgan Stanley refuses to provide.

In our discovery conference, you refused to explain what Morgan Stanley would produce, and what Morgan Stanley would withhold. You refused to identify whether Morgan Stanley intended to withhold documents responsive to any particular document request based on Morgan Stanley's objections. You refused to provide explanations for Morgan Stanley's objections, and you refused to withdraw any of Morgan Stanley's objections, other than the objection (which the Court already has overruled) that discovery in this case should await the resolution of Morgan Stanley's pending motion. In response to several of our requests, Morgan Stanley's written response states that "MS & Co. stands ready to negotiate a limitation to this request." In our discovery conference, we asked you to make good on Morgan Stanley's promise. You refused to do so. Without explanation, Morgan Stanley now has served on CPH document requests including many of the same requests it has refused to honor.

We also discussed Morgan Stanley's general objections. We asked you if Morgan Stanley intended to withhold any documents pursuant to its thirteen general objections, its nine objections to definitions, and its three objections to instructions. Inexplicably, Morgan Stanley declines to state whether it intends to withhold documents on the basis of any of those objections. Morgan Stanley also was unwilling to explain any of its general objections or to modify them. We note that Morgan Stanley has adopted in its discovery requests several of the definitions that it objected to in our discovery requests.

4. Andersen Protective Order. CPH has proposed using in this case the protective order that Judge Rapp entered in the Andersen litigation. The Andersen protective order is the same protective order that Judge Middlebrooks entered in In re Sunbeam Sec. Litig., 98-8258-CIV-Middlebrooks (S.D. Fla.). We think it makes sense to use the same protective order here.

The one area in which Morgan Stanley raised an objection to the protective order is Paragraph 3, which permits the use of documents produced pursuant to the protective order in this case, or in other litigation arising therefrom." That same provision exists in both the Andersen litigation protective order and the In re Sunbeam Sec. Litig. protective order. Nonetheless, we are willing to delete that phrase from the protective order to be used in this case. With that modification, we will present the Andersen order for entry by agreement in this case next week.

You raised a number of issues concerning the language of the protective order, which we resolved. We agreed that neither party would argue that the language "of a current nature" in paragraph 4 of the Protective Order would preclude confidential treatment of documents relating to the 1998 transactions. The parties further agreed that the time to designate deposition transcripts as confidential would be the later of 10 days after receipt of the transcript or 30 days after the completion of the deposition, resolving the potential ambiguity you claim exists between Paragraphs 6(b) and 7. We agreed that Paragraph 9(e) permits providing confidential material to a witness or deponent, and his or her counsel, in the course of the deposition, and Paragraph 9(f) permits exhibiting that information to a deponent in preparation for his deposition. We agreed that Paragraph 11, which requires the return of inadvertently produced privileged documents upon the receipt of a "proper assertion" of privilege, means that in the event a party requests the return of an inadvertently produced document, the document would be returned promptly after the assertion of privilege, and the parties would thereafter resolve, if necessary, whether the document in fact was privileged. We have no objection to Morgan Stanley's request that if the parties discover after production that a document was inadvertently not designated confidential, they may add such a designation. Finally, we agreed to discuss in the future, if necessary, a protocol for adding confidential designations to unconventional documents, such as computer disks.

5. Timing and Sequence of Discovery. You suggested for the first time in our call that the parties produce documents once, for both cases. That is, the parties would produce their documents in both the CPH case and the Morgan Stanley Senior Funding case at the same time, without distinction between the two cases. That procedure is not consistent with the document requests we served and would compromise the jury's ability to determine which documents came from Morgan Stanley and which documents came from Morgan Stanley Senior Funding.

Morgan Stanley, as defined in the document requests, is required to produce documents within its possession, custody, or control in a manner that permits their identification as documents produced by Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, as defined in the document requests, likewise is required to produce documents within its possession, custody, or control in a manner that permits their identification as documents produced by Morgan Stanley Senior

Funding. If Morgan Stanley has a document in its files, and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding has the same document in its files, each company should produce a copy of the document. That permits us (and ultimately the jury) to know what documents Morgan Stanley had and what documents Morgan Stanley Senior Funding had. We do not agree to blur that distinction. Alternatively, if, contrary to the terms of the document requests, you produce Morgan Stanley's and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's documents in a single production, it will reflect that all produced documents are within the possession, custody, or control of both Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding.

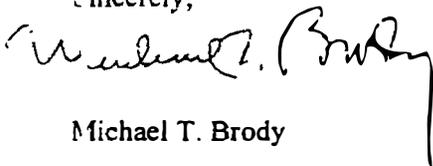

You offered for the first time in our call to produce Morgan Stanley's documents in hard copy, or in a computer readable form, on the condition that CPH will do the same. You were unable to give us an estimate of the expected volume of Morgan Stanley's production. Please advise us of Morgan Stanley's expected production so that we may respond to your request.

We discussed the third-party subpoenas that CPH has served, and that Morgan Stanley will serve. We each agreed to share documents obtained from third parties pursuant to subpoena. That is, we will make available to you all documents we obtain from third parties pursuant to subpoena, and you will do the same.

6. Time for Discovery. Beginning with the conversation Ron Marmor and I had with you on June 17, 2003, we have been asking Morgan Stanley to set forth its expected period for the completion of discovery. As in our prior conversations, you refused to do so. We renew our request that Morgan Stanley set forth its estimate of the expected discovery period in this case.

In conclusion, and as we stated in our discovery conference, we have satisfied our obligations to meet and confer. We also would like to direct your attention to the provisions of F.S. § 57.105.

Sincerely,

Michael T. Brody

Re: MSSF v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. et al.

Dear Tom:

This letter responds to your letter dated July 19, 2003 that was sent by facsimile on July 21, 2003. For ease of reference, the paragraph numbers in this letter conform to the paragraph numbers in my July 17 letter. Although we understand that Morgan Stanley & Co. ("Morgan Stanley") preferred not to have discovery proceed, Judge Maass has denied Morgan Stanley's motion to stay discovery. Accordingly, we expect Morgan Stanley to comply with its discovery obligations within the time frames provided by the applicable Florida rules.

1 and 2. Deposition Dates/Availability of Deponents. On May 9, 2003, we filed a Notice of Deposition setting Mr. Tyree's deposition for July 10 and 11. You have advised that Mr. Tyree is available to be deposed on September 8. We will agree to defer his deposition for approximately two months, commencing on September 8, provided that is a firm date, that Morgan Stanley produces Mr. Tyree in the Continental United States, and that Morgan Stanley does not require us either to seek letters rogatory or other form of international process. We hope to complete Mr. Tyree's deposition within two days.

We do not agree that you can condition producing Mr. Tyree upon other events, including our production of documents pursuant to a document request that Morgan Stanley, for tactical reasons, elected not to file until July 15, 2003. We also do not agree that we should be required to obtain letters rogatory. If we are able to reach agreement re Mr. Tyree's deposition, we will withdraw our Notices of Deposition pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.310 concerning Morgan Stanley's relationship with Morgan Stanley & Co. International Ltd. and Mr. Tyree.

JENNER & BLOCK

We will advise you when we have confirmed dates for the third parties identified in our Notice of Deposition. If there are particular dates that are inconvenient for you, please let us know now, so that we can attempt to avoid those dates.

3. Morgan Stanley's Objections to CPH's Document Requests. We are entitled to know whether Morgan Stanley is producing documents responsive to each document request or withholding documents based upon its various objections. You have declined to provide that information. Although you assert that Morgan Stanley timely filed its response to CPH's first document request, that "response" was no response at all. We do not believe Judge Maass will have any trouble seeing that filing for what it is.

Morgan Stanley advises that it will file "revised responses" on July 25, 2003 -- more than one month after Morgan Stanley was obligated to file a good-faith response to CPH's first document request. We understand that Morgan Stanley's "revised responses" will set forth Morgan Stanley's definitive positions re CPH's first document request. We reserve all of our rights, and we encourage Morgan Stanley to address clearly and specifically the deficiencies we have identified. To the extent that the parties continue to disagree, we will seek guidance from the Court.

4. Andersen Protective Order. We have submitted the revised language as an agreed order.

5. Timing and Sequence of Discovery. Morgan Stanley decries as "inefficient and wasteful" our desire to have documents produced in a manner that clearly reveals which party had those documents in its files. We disagree. It is inefficient and wasteful to have attorneys and witnesses trying to reconstruct whether a document came from Morgan Stanley or from Morgan Stanley Senior Funding. If Morgan Stanley does not produce the documents in the manner requested, but instead blurs the distinction, we shall treat that production as confirmation that all of the documents are within the possession, custody, or control of both Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, estopping both Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding from contending otherwise.

With regard to the logistics, we would like to review the documents before designating them for copying. If it is more convenient, we can conduct that review at your office in Washington, D.C. As your letter suggests, those arrangements will be reciprocal. You may review the documents CPH produces at our office, and arrange for a copy service to duplicate the documents you designate. Because both of our firms have offices in Chicago and Washington, D.C., that should facilitate our respective efforts.

JENNER & BLOCK

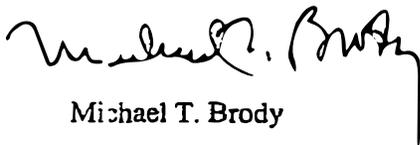

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.

6. Time for Discovery. We do not agree with your recitation of events, and we are disappointed that Morgan Stanley continues to decline our request to discuss the time frame for completing fact discovery.

Your letter also refers to Mr. Scarola's request to extend the time for the filing of our response brief. As Mr. Scarola has advised, despite our desire to have a prompt hearing on Morgan Stanley's motion to dismiss or for judgment on the pleadings, it appears that the hearing dates that worked for us did not work for you. We understand that the likely available date for a hearing that works for our schedule, your schedule, and the Court's schedule is in October. Our response brief, therefore, will not delay the hearing.

We do not believe that the appointment of a special master is appropriate. To the extent that the parties are unable to agree upon our discovery obligations, Judge Maass will be able to provide us with guidance on any such issues.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc., and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.*

Dear Mike:

This letter confirms our discussion regarding the proposed protective order on July 14, 2003 and the agreements we reached with regard to that order. As you confirmed in your July 17, 2003 and July 22, 2003 correspondence, the parties have agreed to use same protective order entered in the Andersen litigation -- but to delete the phrase "or any other litigation arising therefrom" in paragraph 3. We also agreed to the following constructions:

1. Paragraph 4. We agreed that the events of 1997 and 1998 relating to the Coleman Transaction and the related financing transactions are deemed "of a current nature" for the purposes of the protective order, to ensure that confidential treatment of those materials cannot be precluded.
2. Paragraphs 6(b) and 7. We agreed that the time to designate the confidentiality of deposition transcripts is 10 days after receipt of the transcript or 30 days after the completion of the deposition, whichever is later.
3. Paragraphs 9(e) and (f). We agreed that documents designated as confidential can be shown to deponents in preparation for their deposition and during the deposition, as long as the witnesses are not permitted to retain copies of the documents.
4. Paragraph 11. We agreed that -- upon a claim of the inadvertent production of privileged documents -- the documents subject to that claim will be promptly returned to the producing party. Any dispute or disagreement regarding the assertion of a privilege will be resolved, if at all, after the document has been returned.

In addition to these clarifications of specific paragraphs, we also agreed that the parties may subsequently add a confidentiality designation to a produced document whose confidentiality designation was inadvertently left off. Finally, we agreed to resolve, on a case-by-case basis, a protocol for adding confidentiality designations to electronic media and other things.

Sincerely,

1 TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS, TAKEN BEFORE THE
2 HONORABLE ELIZABETH T. MAASS IN COURTROOM 11A, PALM
3 BEACH COUNTY COURTHOUSE, WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA,
4 ON FRIDAY, MAY, 28, 2004, BEGINNING AT 11:28 A.M.

5 - - -

6 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: We are back on Coleman and
9 Morgan Stanley, and this is Plaintiff's motion.

10 What did you want to say in support of it?

11 MR. SCAROLA: I would request, Your Honor,
12 if I may, that we tie in some folks from 13 Chicago who would like to be able to listen in
14 and perhaps participate.

15 THE COURT: Sure. Who are they?

16 MR. SCAROLA: I know that Mr. Shaw is
17 likely to be on the other end of the line.
18 These are the Jenner and Block attorneys, Your
19 Honor, and this is the toll free number and the 20 participant number for the conference.

21 THE COURT: Okay. They represent Coleman
22 as well?

23 MR. SCAROLA: They are co-counsel with me,
24 yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Do you want to just place a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 phone call?

2 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, while we're doing
3 that, I guess pursuant to the stipulated
4 confidentiality order in this case, we are
5 designating this transcript as confidential.
6 It's not necessary to close the proceedings
7 since there is no one else in the courtroom
8 other than counsel.

9 THE COURT: Is what you're suggesting --
10 this is actually something I probably need to 11 go back and look at the transcript from the
12 last hearing -- is that any transcript of this
13 hearing will be deemed confidential for
14 purposes of that order?

15 MR. IANNO: Correct.

16 THE COURT: Just the transcript?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I believe they have the
18 unilateral right to make that designation and I
19 recognize their unilateral right to make that
20 designation. I will offer the same stipulation
21 that I entered into at the commencement of the

16div-005245

22 last hearing; and that is, that nothing that is
23 said during the course of this hearing will be
24 deemed to constitute either a violation of the 25 confidentiality order or a waiver of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 confidentiality order.

2 THE COURT: Okay. So is that -- would you
3 accept that stipulation?

4 MR. IANNO: Well, I understand that, Your
5 Honor, but --

6 MR. SCAROLA: Could we hold on just one
7 second?

8 THE BAILIFF: Ron Marmer I have on the 9 phone.

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

11 (Thereupon, Ronald Marmer appeared via telephone
12 and the following proceedings were had.)

13 THE COURT: Hi, this is Judge Maass. Who
14 do I have on the phone?

15 MR. MARMER: Good morning, Your Honor.
16 This is Ron Marmer from Jenner and Block in
17 Chicago.

18 THE COURT: Hi. I have you on the speaker
19 phone in the courtroom in Coleman Parent versus

16div-005246

20 Morgan Stanley. We're going to put you up. It
21 sometimes can be difficult to hear, so if you
22 have a problem let us know.

23 And you all might want to pull the podiums
24 forward maybe just so he can hear you a little
25 bit better.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
3 Honor.

4 THE COURT: Let's go back to where we
5 were, first dealing with, as I understand it,
6 Mr. Ianno has designated any transcript from
7 this proceeding as confidential pursuant to the
8 prior stipulated confidentiality order. And,
9 Mr. Scarola, you were offering the same
10 stipulation that counsel reached at the prior
11 hearing, which is that nothing said in this
12 hearing will be deemed to either waive or be in
13 violation of the prior confidentiality order?

14 MR. SCAROLA: That is correct, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: And would your client accept
16 that stipulation?

17 MR. IANNO: We accept that stipulation,
18 Your Honor. But I want to go also one step

16div-005247

19 further with what the Court said on the
20 transcript to make sure we clarify that even
21 though the transcript is confidential, that the
22 parties -- and I think Mr. Scarola acknowledges
23 this at the end of the last hearing -- can't go
24 out and say what was said in the transcript.
25 Even though the written word is confidential,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 you can't orally go out and disclose what the
2 transcript says to third parties.

3 And Mr. Scarola, I don't know if he agrees
4 with that or not, but that's our position.

5 Just because a transcript is confidential, you
6 shouldn't be able to disclose to third parties
7 under the confidentiality order what you can't
8 say.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I am not willing, as I stand
10 here, to enter into a verbal modification of
11 the confidentiality order which was reached
12 after considerable negotiation among counsel
13 and carefully drafted to define its proper
14 scope.

15 I will tell you that subjectively, I don't 16 think that someone can evade the

17 confidentiality order by verbally communicating
18 something that is designated as confidential.

19 THE COURT: Does either side have a copy
20 of the stipulated confidentiality order?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: That would be helpful.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have multiple copies?

24 I have one.

25 MR. IANNO: I have just one.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: We'll make a photocopy of
2 that.

3 MR. IANNO: We have another copy, Your
4 Honor, but I don't know if you have the
5 reference binder that we sent over in this
6 case.

7 THE COURT: I do. Is it in there?

8 MR. IANNO: It should be.

9 THE COURT: I should have guessed that it
10 would be in there.

11 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sure we've provided
12 copies to Your Honor on a couple of occasions.

13 THE COURT: I have seen multiple copies, I
14 just --

15 MR. IANNO: In the reference binder it

16div-005249

16 should be under one of those tabs. It's the 17 third one, tab three. It's in both cases. The 18 same one in both cases.

19 THE COURT: Okay, let me look.

20 Okay. Back to where we were. You were
21 saying you would not accept a stipulation that
22 said -- that any oral statement of what
23 transpired at this hearing will be deemed
24 confidential as well or could not be made?

25 MR. SCAROLA: What I am saying, Your

(561) 820-9066

1 Honor, is that the stipulated confidentiality
2 order says what it says. And to the extent
3 that it would apply to any of the matters that
4 are disclosed during the course of this
5 hearing, to the extent that disclosures during
6 this hearing would constitute what the
7 confidentiality order describes and defines as
8 litigation materials, once they unilaterally
9 designate the transcript as confidential, I
10 can't disclose that information, as I
11 understand the confidentiality order.

12 And my subjective belief as I stand here
13 right now is, not only could I not hand someone

16div-005250

14 the transcript while that designation remains
15 in place, I think that a reasonable reading of
16 the confidentiality order would preclude me
17 from accomplishing indirectly that which I am
18 prohibited from accomplishing directly. I not
19 only can't hand them the transcript unless and
20 until the confidentiality provisions or the
21 confidentiality designation is removed, I can't
22 tell them confidential information, either.

23 That's my subjective belief. If that's 24 what the confidentiality order says, that's
25 what we're going to do.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: I think that's probably fine
2 for today's purposes.

3 I will be honest with you, at some point
4 we all need to go back and give some, I think,
5 more thought to what we are designating as
6 confidential. For instance, it should not be
7 confidential whether or not I greeted you guys
8 when you came in the courtroom. You know, at 9 some point we're likely to get ourselves into
10 trouble if we keep sort of over-designating
11 information.

12 MR. IANNO: Agreed.

16div-005251

13 THE COURT: Okay. Are we prepared to go
14 forward today then?

15 MR. SCAROLA: We are, Your Honor, yes.

16 THE COURT: Okay. What did you want to
17 say in support of the motion?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are here
19 before the Court seeking permission to make a
20 limited disclosure of information that has been
21 designated under the terms of the
22 confidentiality order as litigation materials
23 subject to the orders provision; specifically,
24 the transcript of the last hearing held before
25 Your Honor.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 In support of that motion, I would point
2 out first that the contention on the part of
3 Morgan Stanley that we somehow stipulated to
4 preserve everything said during the course of
5 the last hearing as confidential is simply not
6 supported by the transcript of the hearing.

7 I stipulated to the following, and Your
8 Honor has a copy of the transcript. It's pages
9 five and six of the transcript. And the heart
10 of the stipulation appears at page seven.

16div-005252

11 The Court at line 3 says: "I assume what
12 you're saying is that you want sort of
13 everything we say to be deemed confidential
14 under the terms of the stipulated
15 confidentiality order?"

16 Mr. Bemis responds: "Either that, and a
17 statement that no one is going to allege later
18 that statements made in response to arguments
19 made with respect to documents filed under seal
20 are going to violate the confidentiality
21 order."

22 My response: "Your Honor, we will agree
23 that participation in this hearing will not
24 constitute a waiver of any confidentiality
25 argument. I think that's what Mr. Bemis is

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 asking for and we don't have a problem with
2 that."

3 The Court says: "Or a violation?"

4 And I agree: "Or a violation of the
5 confidentiality order."

6 THE COURT: That's what I highlighted,
7 which was my first question. Are you simply
8 trying to seek a declaration that nothing
9 prohibits your telling a third party what

16div-005253

10 transpired at this hearing? Because the only
11 thing that was stipulated to was that whatever
12 was said at the hearing wouldn't be a waiver of 13 the confidentiality provision or a violation of
14 the confidentiality order.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. Where that
16 brings us is to this point: They have said we
17 can't show it to anyone because we stipulated
18 that it was going to be confidential and the 19 burden, therefore, rests on us that it's going
20 to be confidential.

21 THE COURT: And you're saying, no, we
22 didn't?

23 MR. SCAROLA: I'm saying, no, there is no
24 such stipulation. What we acknowledged was,
25 they have the right to unilaterally designate

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 that hearing, the transcript of that hearing,
2 or they've claimed a right to unilaterally
3 designate the transcript of that hearing as
4 confidential.

5 Then, under the terms of the
6 confidentiality order we challenge that
7 stipulation, the burden shifts to them to

16div-005254

8 demonstrate that this in fact is confidential
9 information.

10 THE COURT: So let me ask you this: The
11 argument you are raising now was an argument
12 that occurred to me when I was reviewing the 13 transcript yesterday. Was this one that was
14 made to them before today?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Was what one made before
16 today?

17 THE COURT: You filed a motion. Did the
18 motion raise the issue that it's our position
19 that the transcript itself wasn't designated
20 confidential and we want to be able to disclose
21 it? Because I didn't think it did.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Please understand, I'm not
23 contending they haven't designated the
24 transcript as confidential; they have. They
25 told us that they wanted it to be confidential

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 at the hearing.

2 THE COURT: Let me find your motion then,
3 because I need to see exactly what issue the
4 motion raised.

5 MR. IANNO: It's in the notebook at tab
6 one for this hearing. I'm sorry, Your Honor.

16div-005255

7 THE COURT: I'm sure it is, I just have to
8 find the notebook for this hearing.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I can provide the Court with
10 a copy right here, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: I have it. That's okay, I do
12 have it. Thanks.

13 Where in the transcript do we think that
14 Morgan Stanley designated the entire transcript
15 as confidential? Do we think that happened at
16 that hearing?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I don't think there is any
18 dispute between us that that's --

19 THE COURT: Do we think that happened at
20 the hearing is my question.

21 MR. IANNO: We think Mr. Scarola and
22 Morgan Stanley agreed to it, Your Honor, and
23 it's on page 140 -- 140-something.

24 THE COURT: 140 what?

25 MR. IANNO: It's on page 140, line 11.

(561) 820-9066

1 It's Mr. Scarola speaking, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Let me read it, okay?

3 MR. IANNO: And, Your Honor, if you go to
4 page 142, line 3.

16div-005256

5 THE COURT: Okay. I would agree at page
6 44 is where Defendant designates it as
7 confidential.

8 MR. SCAROLA: 144, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: 144.

10 And I'm talking to Mr. Bemis at line 17:

11 "Right. And you're saying that, as I
12 understand it, you're agreeing to or you are
13 designating the entire thing as confidential,
14 correct?"

15 Mr. Bemis: "Yes."

16 And then I turn to you, Mr. Scarola, and
17 basically said: "And you're going to want to 18 file a motion."

19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, and that's why we're
20 here.

21 THE COURT: So you're saying the burden is
22 on them to show what's confidential about this?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Exactly. They are
24 obliged -- once we have challenged the
25 confidentiality designation, as we now have by

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 way of this motion, the burden shifts to them
2 to demonstrate that it is properly retained as
3 confidential under the terms of the

16div-005257

4 confidentiality order.

5 And I want to call the Court's attention
6 to just a couple of quick things before we turn
7 it over to them to meet their burden.

8 First, this order pertains to litigation
9 materials. Litigation materials are defined in
10 paragraph number one of the stipulated order.
11 And it says, "Litigation materials are all non-
12 public and confidential information disclosed
13 by any party hereto during the course of the 14 captioned litigation." That, I suggest, is the 15 relevant portion of the litigation materials
16 designation.

17 There is an exception. Paragraph two
18 says, "This order shall not apply to any
19 information that, A, is already in a receiving
20 parties' possession."

21 Now the only thing that could arguably be
22 suggested is confidential is the contents of
23 the settlement agreement; in particular, the
24 reference in this transcript to the amount of 25 the settlement. We certainly knew about that.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 We were the ones who disclosed it to them. It

2 is information that was already in our
3 possession. So they have no right to designate
4 as confidential in this proceeding information
5 that we already had, point number one.

6 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, can I object to
7 this? None of this is raised in Mr. Scarola's
8 motion. None of this argument is raised at all
9 in the motion. The motion is very bare bones
10 and fails to meet the minimal requirements.

11 I feel that now we're being ambushed by
12 Mr. Scarola's argument that this is litigation
13 materials, all this argument. So I object to
14 that argument, him going outside of his motion.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I don't see how that
16 possibly could be suggested as --

17 THE COURT: I understand your point. But
18 what else did you want to say?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Paragraph 9I. That
20 paragraph provides that even materials that
21 have properly been designated as confidential
22 may be shown to the author of the materials,
23 although the author is not supposed to retain a
24 copy.

25 What we are asking is that we disclose

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 information to Arthur Anderson that Arthur
2 Anderson already has because it was the author
3 of the materials, it signed the settlement
4 agreement.

5 THE COURT: Is it accurate to say that
6 what you're seeking permission to do is just to
7 tell them what defense counsel said in the
8 hearing about the terms of the settlement?

9 MR. SCAROLA: We want to show them the
10 entire transcript so that they understand the
11 context in which that information was
12 disclosed. Remember, this was not a closed
13 hearing.

14 THE COURT: I understand that.

15 Do we, first of all, agree that at the end
16 of the last hearing Defendant designated the
17 entire transcript as confidential under the
18 terms of the order?

19 MR. IANNO: After Mr. Scarola did, we
20 agreed with him.

21 THE COURT: Well, Mr. Scarola said ten
22 days and you guys said, no, we're designating
23 the whole thing, basically.

24 MR. IANNO: He wanted it designated as
25 confidential for at least ten days. We said

1 we're designating the whole thing.

2 THE COURT: Right. And he said, fine,
3 I'll file a motion to get the stuff I want
4 released released.

5 MR. IANNO: Correct.

6 THE COURT: Is it still you're client's
7 position that the entire thing is properly
8 designated as confidential?

9 MR. IANNO: Well, Your Honor, I don't
10 think that's our position.

11 What the Court required Mr. Scarola to do
12 when we came here a week ago Wednesday is, tell
13 me those portions you want to disclose to
14 Arthur Anderson.

15 THE COURT: And he said the whole thing.

16 MR. IANNO: The whole thing.

17 And it's our position that under the
18 Court's previous orders relating to the Arthur
19 Anderson settlement agreement, the Court
20 specifically ordered the parties to hold that
21 settlement agreement as confidential, that
22 those parts of the settlement agreement and
23 those parts of the transcript where the
24 settlement agreement was discussed needs to
25 remain confidential.

1 But it's not -- I think the point here,
2 Your Honor, is what you were catching. Mr.
3 Scarola doesn't -- the provisions he read of
4 the stipulated confidentiality order don't
5 apply. He doesn't want to disclose the
6 settlement agreement to Arthur Anderson.
7 Clearly, they have that document. He wants to
8 disclose counsel's argument.

9 THE COURT: Well, why is that
10 confidential?

11 MR. IANNO: Because the Court said the
12 terms of the settlement agreement need to
13 remain confidential. Our argument here was
14 confidential, it shouldn't be disclosed. They
15 don't need to know. There has been no purpose
16 given --

17 THE COURT: I don't know that that's the
18 standard. I mean, you know, I need -- and I'm
19 sure you can explain it to me later -- a better
20 understanding of the dynamic of why they want
21 to disclose this to Arthur Anderson -- and
22 please, I don't mean this in a derogatory
23 fashion -- other than to be tattletales. So I
24 need to have a sense of what's truly going on

25 here.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 That said, I don't know that that's really
2 going to effect the legal ruling of is this
3 properly deemed confidential or not. We don't
4 go around designating things confidential
5 unless there really is some purpose. And by
6 that, I mean some legal purpose of designating
7 this confidential.

8 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, we don't know what
9 their purpose is because their motion doesn't
10 tell us. We can assume, and that's what we put 11 in our response, that there is no legitimate
12 purpose.

13 THE COURT: Why does that matter if it
14 shouldn't be -- I mean, please understand, I
15 feel strongly that we don't keep secrets when
16 you choose to litigate in a public forum. And
17 absent a trade secret, a privilege, or some
18 overriding public policy consideration that
19 would suggest things should not be public, they
20 should be public.

21 And I would agree sometimes that means
22 embarrassing things are disclosed, derogatory

16div-005263

23 things are disclosed, things that maybe civil
24 people would prefer not be disclosed get
25 disclosed. But it doesn't change the legal

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 analysis. If it's not properly kept
2 confidential for an overriding public purpose,
3 it's simply not kept confidential.

4 So what I need -- I would agree with Mr.
5 Scarola that Defendant is the one who
6 designated the entire transcript as
7 confidential. So what I will need you to do is
8 to defend -- if you're telling me you need to
9 go back and review it and decide which parts
10 you really think are confidential, you need to
11 isolate those. And then I need you to be able
12 to defend why they are confidential. And we
13 can come back after lunch after you've had a
14 chance to do that exercise.

15 MR. IANNO: Well, Your Honor, I thought
16 Mr. Scarola was going to do that; he did not.
17 I wasn't prepared to do that today. We are
18 prepared to argue that Mr. Scarola has not met
19 any burden or stated any legitimate purpose for 20 disclosing that.

21 THE COURT: I'm just saying, I don't

16div-005264

22 think that -- that may be an interesting fact,
23 but I don't know that it's legally relevant.
24 So I am happy to come back at 1:30 and
25 hopefully you've marked up the transcript by

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 then and we can at least isolate the parts that
2 you are claiming are legitimately confidential.

3 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis, I know, has a
4 flight to catch, Your Honor, because of the
5 holiday weekend.

6 THE COURT: I am going on vacation for a
7 week. I am happy to take you guys the first
8 day I come back from my vacation, which will be
9 June -- whatever it is.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor, I
11 know that they would love to have a further
12 delay --

13 THE COURT: I understand that they
14 originally sought to push this off further.
15 But in all honesty, without an understanding of
16 the dynamic of why it's so critical this
17 information be disclosed, it's hard for me --
18 in all honesty, Mr. Scarola, the argument you
19 are making now, while it occurred to me when I

20 read the transcript, I was not aware from the 21 motion that that's what we were going to be
22 arguing. In all honesty, I wasn't aware of
23 that because I would have told them designate
24 the parts you're really trying to keep
25 confidential if I thought that's the direction

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 we were going.

2 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, the motion places
3 them on --

4 THE COURT: I understand what you're
5 telling me. All I'm saying is, I didn't
6 understand that, either. I understood it was
7 an issue from reading the transcript. I didn't
8 understand that it was an issue you were
9 pushing.

10 So I am happy to do this at 1:30 today, I
11 am happy to do it the Monday I get back from 12 vacation, even though I am not otherwise in
13 court. You guys tell me what you prefer.

14 MR. SCAROLA: The very first opportunity
15 that Your Honor has. And we would strongly
16 urge that this matter get resolved today.

17 And I will explain to the Court, although
18 I agree with you that it is legally irrelevant,

16div-005266

19 I will explain to the Court in the context of 20 the stipulation that we have arrived at why we
21 want to do what we want to do. The first
22 reason is, because we have a right to do it.
23 The second reason is, because Arthur Anderson
24 asked us for the information. And they are
25 aware of it because they have gotten a copy of

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the letter. By letter, Arthur Anderson has
2 requested to have the transcript of this last
3 proceeding.

4 And I will explain to Your Honor, as Your
5 Honor is already aware, there are provisions in
6 the settlement agreement that impose financial
7 obligations on my client as a consequence of
8 litigation that has been brought against Arthur
9 Anderson. That places us in a position where
10 we have a unity of interest with Arthur
11 Anderson. We need to be able to cooperate with 12 them and they are obliged to cooperate with us
13 as well. We want to provide the information
14 with regard to what went on in open court
15 because we believe it has implications with 16 regard to our own responsibilities under the

17 terms of the relationship created between
18 Arthur Anderson and Coleman as a consequence of 19 that settlement agreement.

20 We're not simply tattletaling. And I
21 understand that that was not said in a
22 pejorative fashion, but there is a legitimate
23 legal reason why we want to share this
24 information, and we want to share it
25 expeditiously.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 As I explained to Your Honor at the last
2 hearing, the attorney's fees exceeded $48,000
3 as of the time of that last hearing. I have no
4 idea where they are now.

5 THE COURT: When is Mr. Bemis' flight
6 back?

7 MR. BEMIS: I have a 2:30 flight. It's
8 the last flight out of here and I fly out of 9 West Palm.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Mr. Ianno is
11 the one who is doing the argument, he is here.
12 They can spend whatever time they need to to
13 try to come up with some confidential portion
14 of this transcript. I'm sure they are very 15 familiar with it.

16div-005268

16 The only claim that is made in any of the
17 eight pages that they have filed is that the 18 confidential portion is the amount of the
19 settlement, which obviously Arthur Anderson
20 already knows.

21 MR. IANNO: Why do they need to know
22 what's said at the hearing, Your Honor? I
23 still don't understand.

24 THE COURT: Well, setting that aside,
25 because as I understand it -- I don't know the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 dynamics of the case as well as you guys do.
2 I'm sure some day I will, but I don't right
3 now. But setting that aside, in all honesty,
4 what was said at that hearing that could not be
5 made known to Arthur Anderson that really could
6 be deemed confidential as to Arthur Anderson?

7 MR. IANNO: Well, it's a question of what
8 is the use of confidential material.

9 THE COURT: No. The question is, is it
10 confidential. That's the first hurdle. If
11 it's not confidential, frankly, we're not
12 addressing today whether it's used properly or 13 not.

14 MR. IANNO: I think it is confidential
15 because the Court ordered it to be confidential
16 when you ordered the settlement agreement to be
17 produced back in December.

18 THE COURT: Sure. But confidential
19 information is not -- I mean, it specifically
20 excludes information already in the receiving
21 parties' possession at the time it's produced.

22 MR. IANNO: That's not what Mr. Scarola
23 wants to disclose.

24 THE COURT: He wants to disclose the fact
25 that counsel disclosed it.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. IANNO: That it was said in open
2 court.

3 THE COURT: That's not confidential. What
4 gets said in open court is not -- any member of
5 the public could have walked in and listened to
6 that. How can you possibly claim that it's
7 confidential to tell Arthur Anderson it was
8 said?

9 MR. IANNO: Because we agreed. That's the
10 problem, Your Honor. We believe we had a
11 stipulation that that was going to be
12 confidential.

16div-005270

13 THE COURT: In all honesty, the agreement
14 that was reached at the commencement of the 15 hearing was that anything that was said in the 16 hearing would not be deemed a waiver or a
17 violation.

18 MR. BEMIS: It would be confidential under
19 the terms of the hearing, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: No, that's not the way, quite
21 honestly, I read the stipulation between
22 counsel. And I specifically asked you guys if
23 you wanted me to enter an order and you said it
24 wasn't necessary. It was only at the end of 25 the hearing that there was a designation of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 entire transcript as confidential.

2 MR. IANNO: I understand, Your Honor. But
3 what Mr. Scarola said was, it wouldn't be a
4 violation of the court order, and now they
5 attempt to use that in some way to violate the
6 Court order. What they're trying to do is get
7 from the back door what they can't get from the
8 front door.

9 THE COURT: In all honesty, I don't see it
10 that way. I understand your consternation. I

16div-005271

11 understand your concern about the reason that
12 they are pursuing this. But I have a real hard
13 time understanding how the fact that counsel
14 said the amount of the settlement is
15 confidential.

16 MR. IANNO: Or that Mr. Scarola disclosed
17 the terms of the indemnity.

18 THE COURT: When the terms of the
19 agreement itself are not confidential as
20 against Arthur Anderson, I have a hard time
21 thinking the fact that somebody disclosed them
22 as confidential. I just don't see it.

23 And again, I'm happy to come back at 1:30
24 if you think there is additional argument you
25 can present.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. BEMIS: What I would like to do is
2 take you up on your offer to revisit this on
3 the 7th because I need to confer with my client
4 as well. And if we're going to do a
5 designation, I just cannot do it between now
6 and the time we have and do it intelligently.

7 This argument that's being made today was
8 not raised. I read their papers, I wrote the 9 brief that was filed with Mr. Ianno, and this

16div-005272

10 is a totally different argument than what was
11 presented in their papers.

12 THE COURT: We will come back that Monday.

13 I understand your consternation, but we are
14 happy to do it. Happy happy. That's fine.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Three of us are happy, one
16 of us is very disappointed.

17 THE COURT: I understand.

18 And by Wednesday I need from Defendant the
19 portions highlighted that you still are
20 contending are confidential. Obviously, vast
21 portions of that transcript are not properly
22 deemed confidential.

23 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I appreciate that
24 position. I will tell you, however, that is
25 not the position that the parties have been

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 taking in the litigation. For example, every
2 deposition transcript in this case, from your
3 name to your address, is designated as
4 confidential by Coleman in this case.

5 THE COURT: We will see you all, or
6 whoever wants to come back, on June 7th at 7 1:30.

16div-005273

8 MR. BEMIS: June 7th, 1:30. Thank you,
9 Your Honor.
10 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
11 THE COURT: Thank you, sir. Bye-bye.
12 MR. MARMER: Thank you very much, Your
13 Honor.
14 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I understood from
15 Deputy Spall that there probably won't be
16 anyone in your office next week?
17 THE COURT: No, just Tuesday and
18 Wednesday. Two days.
19 MR. IANNO: Okay. We will have it hand
20 delivered.
21 THE COURT: I really won't be able to
22 review it until Monday morning, but it takes a
23 couple of days for us to get it.
24 (Thereupon, at 12:00 p.m., the proceedings
25 were concluded.)

3 BEACH COUNTY COURTHOUSE, WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA,
4 ON FRIDAY, MAY, 28, 2004, BEGINNING AT 11:28 A.M.

5 - - -

6 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: We are back on Coleman and
9 Morgan Stanley, and this is Plaintiff's motion.

10 What did you want to say in support of it?

11 MR. SCAROLA: I would request, Your Honor,
12 if I may, that we tie in some folks from 13 Chicago who would like to be able to listen in
14 and perhaps participate.

15 THE COURT: Sure. Who are they?

16 MR. SCAROLA: I know that Mr. Shaw is
17 likely to be on the other end of the line.
18 These are the Jenner and Block attorneys, Your
19 Honor, and this is the toll free number and the
20 participant number for the conference.

22 as well?

23 MR. SCAROLA: They are co-counsel with me,
24 yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Do you want to just place a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 phone call?

2 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, while we're doing
3 that, I guess pursuant to the stipulated
4 confidentiality order in this case, we are
5 designating this transcript as confidential.
6 It's not necessary to close the proceedings
7 since there is no one else in the courtroom
8 other than counsel.

9 THE COURT: Is what you're suggesting --
10 this is actually something I probably need to
11 go back and look at the transcript from the
12 last hearing -- is that any transcript of this
13 hearing will be deemed confidential for
14 purposes of that order?

15 MR. IANNO: Correct.

16 THE COURT: Just the transcript?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I believe they have the
18 unilateral right to make that designation and I
19 recognize their unilateral right to make that
20 designation. I will offer the same stipulation
21 that I entered into at the commencement of the

22 last hearing; and that is, that nothing that is
23 said during the course of this hearing will be
24 deemed to constitute either a violation of the 25 confidentiality order or a waiver of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 confidentiality order.

2 THE COURT: Okay. So is that -- would you
3 accept that stipulation?

4 MR. IANNO: Well, I understand that, Your
5 Honor, but --

6 MR. SCAROLA: Could we hold on just one
7 second?

8 THE BAILIFF: Ron Marmer I have on the 9 phone.

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

11 (Thereupon, Ronald Marmer appeared via telephone
12 and the following proceedings were had.)

13 THE COURT: Hi, this is Judge Maass. Who
14 do I have on the phone?

15 MR. MARMER: Good morning, Your Honor.
16 This is Ron Marmer from Jenner and Block in
17 Chicago.

18 THE COURT: Hi. I have you on the speaker
19 phone in the courtroom in Coleman Parent versus

20 Morgan Stanley. We're going to put you up. It
21 sometimes can be difficult to hear, so if you
22 have a problem let us know.

23 And you all might want to pull the podiums
24 forward maybe just so he can hear you a little
25 bit better.

2 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
3 Honor.

4 THE COURT: Let's go back to where we
5 were, first dealing with, as I understand it,
6 Mr. Ianno has designated any transcript from
7 this proceeding as confidential pursuant to the
8 prior stipulated confidentiality order. And,
9 Mr. Scarola, you were offering the same
10 stipulation that counsel reached at the prior
11 hearing, which is that nothing said in this
12 hearing will be deemed to either waive or be in
13 violation of the prior confidentiality order?

14 MR. SCAROLA: That is correct, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: And would your client accept
16 that stipulation?

17 MR. IANNO: We accept that stipulation,
18 Your Honor. But I want to go also one step

19 further with what the Court said on the
20 transcript to make sure we clarify that even
21 though the transcript is confidential, that the
22 parties -- and I think Mr. Scarola acknowledges
23 this at the end of the last hearing -- can't go
24 out and say what was said in the transcript.
25 Even though the written word is confidential,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 you can't orally go out and disclose what the
2 transcript says to third parties.

3 And Mr. Scarola, I don't know if he agrees
4 with that or not, but that's our position.

5 Just because a transcript is confidential, you
6 shouldn't be able to disclose to third parties
7 under the confidentiality order what you can't
8 say.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I am not willing, as I stand
10 here, to enter into a verbal modification of
11 the confidentiality order which was reached
12 after considerable negotiation among counsel
13 and carefully drafted to define its proper
14 scope.

15 I will tell you that subjectively, I don't 16 think that someone can evade the

17 confidentiality order by verbally communicating
18 something that is designated as confidential.

19 THE COURT: Does either side have a copy
20 of the stipulated confidentiality order?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: That would be helpful.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have multiple copies?

24 I have one.

25 MR. IANNO: I have just one.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: We'll make a photocopy of
2 that.

3 MR. IANNO: We have another copy, Your
4 Honor, but I don't know if you have the
5 reference binder that we sent over in this
6 case.

7 THE COURT: I do. Is it in there?

8 MR. IANNO: It should be.

9 THE COURT: I should have guessed that it
10 would be in there.

11 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sure we've provided
12 copies to Your Honor on a couple of occasions.

13 THE COURT: I have seen multiple copies, I
14 just --

15 MR. IANNO: In the reference binder it

16 should be under one of those tabs. It's the 17 third one, tab three. It's in both cases. The 18 same one in both cases.

19 THE COURT: Okay, let me look.

20 Okay. Back to where we were. You were
21 saying you would not accept a stipulation that
22 said -- that any oral statement of what
23 transpired at this hearing will be deemed
24 confidential as well or could not be made?

25 MR. SCAROLA: What I am saying, Your

(561) 820-9066

1 Honor, is that the stipulated confidentiality
2 order says what it says. And to the extent
3 that it would apply to any of the matters that
4 are disclosed during the course of this
5 hearing, to the extent that disclosures during
6 this hearing would constitute what the
7 confidentiality order describes and defines as
8 litigation materials, once they unilaterally
9 designate the transcript as confidential, I
10 can't disclose that information, as I
11 understand the confidentiality order.

12 And my subjective belief as I stand here
13 right now is, not only could I not hand someone

14 the transcript while that designation remains
15 in place, I think that a reasonable reading of
16 the confidentiality order would preclude me
17 from accomplishing indirectly that which I am
18 prohibited from accomplishing directly. I not
19 only can't hand them the transcript unless and
20 until the confidentiality provisions or the
21 confidentiality designation is removed, I can't
22 tell them confidential information, either.

23 That's my subjective belief. If that's 24 what the confidentiality order says, that's
25 what we're going to do.

1 THE COURT: I think that's probably fine
2 for today's purposes.

3 I will be honest with you, at some point
4 we all need to go back and give some, I think,
5 more thought to what we are designating as
6 confidential. For instance, it should not be
7 confidential whether or not I greeted you guys
8 when you came in the courtroom. You know, at 9 some point we're likely to get ourselves into
10 trouble if we keep sort of over-designating
11 information.

12 MR. IANNO: Agreed.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Are we prepared to go
14 forward today then?

15 MR. SCAROLA: We are, Your Honor, yes.

16 THE COURT: Okay. What did you want to
17 say in support of the motion?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are here
19 before the Court seeking permission to make a
20 limited disclosure of information that has been
21 designated under the terms of the
22 confidentiality order as litigation materials
23 subject to the orders provision; specifically,
24 the transcript of the last hearing held before
25 Your Honor.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 In support of that motion, I would point
2 out first that the contention on the part of
3 Morgan Stanley that we somehow stipulated to
4 preserve everything said during the course of
5 the last hearing as confidential is simply not
6 supported by the transcript of the hearing.

7 I stipulated to the following, and Your
8 Honor has a copy of the transcript. It's pages
9 five and six of the transcript. And the heart
10 of the stipulation appears at page seven.

11 The Court at line 3 says: "I assume what
12 you're saying is that you want sort of
13 everything we say to be deemed confidential
14 under the terms of the stipulated
15 confidentiality order?"

16 Mr. Bemis responds: "Either that, and a
17 statement that no one is going to allege later
18 that statements made in response to arguments
19 made with respect to documents filed under seal
20 are going to violate the confidentiality
21 order."

22 My response: "Your Honor, we will agree
23 that participation in this hearing will not
24 constitute a waiver of any confidentiality
25 argument. I think that's what Mr. Bemis is

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 asking for and we don't have a problem with
2 that."

3 The Court says: "Or a violation?"

4 And I agree: "Or a violation of the
5 confidentiality order."

6 THE COURT: That's what I highlighted,
7 which was my first question. Are you simply
8 trying to seek a declaration that nothing
9 prohibits your telling a third party what

10 transpired at this hearing? Because the only
11 thing that was stipulated to was that whatever
12 was said at the hearing wouldn't be a waiver of 13 the confidentiality provision or a violation of
14 the confidentiality order.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. Where that
16 brings us is to this point: They have said we
17 can't show it to anyone because we stipulated
18 that it was going to be confidential and the
19 burden, therefore, rests on us that it's going
20 to be confidential.

21 THE COURT: And you're saying, no, we
22 didn't?

23 MR. SCAROLA: I'm saying, no, there is no
24 such stipulation. What we acknowledged was,
25 they have the right to unilaterally designate

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 that hearing, the transcript of that hearing,
2 or they've claimed a right to unilaterally
3 designate the transcript of that hearing as
4 confidential.

5 Then, under the terms of the
6 confidentiality order we challenge that
7 stipulation, the burden shifts to them to

8 demonstrate that this in fact is confidential
9 information.

10 THE COURT: So let me ask you this: The
11 argument you are raising now was an argument
12 that occurred to me when I was reviewing the 13 transcript yesterday. Was this one that was
14 made to them before today?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Was what one made before
16 today?

17 THE COURT: You filed a motion. Did the
18 motion raise the issue that it's our position
19 that the transcript itself wasn't designated
20 confidential and we want to be able to disclose
21 it? Because I didn't think it did.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Please understand, I'm not
23 contending they haven't designated the
24 transcript as confidential; they have. They
25 told us that they wanted it to be confidential

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 at the hearing.

2 THE COURT: Let me find your motion then,
3 because I need to see exactly what issue the
4 motion raised.

5 MR. IANNO: It's in the notebook at tab
6 one for this hearing. I'm sorry, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: I'm sure it is, I just have to
8 find the notebook for this hearing.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I can provide the Court with
10 a copy right here, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: I have it. That's okay, I do
12 have it. Thanks.

13 Where in the transcript do we think that
14 Morgan Stanley designated the entire transcript
15 as confidential? Do we think that happened at
16 that hearing?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I don't think there is any
18 dispute between us that that's --

19 THE COURT: Do we think that happened at
20 the hearing is my question.

21 MR. IANNO: We think Mr. Scarola and
22 Morgan Stanley agreed to it, Your Honor, and
23 it's on page 140 -- 140-something.

24 THE COURT: 140 what?

25 MR. IANNO: It's on page 140, line 11.

(561) 820-9066

1 It's Mr. Scarola speaking, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Let me read it, okay?

4 page 142, line 3.

5 THE COURT: Okay. I would agree at page
6 44 is where Defendant designates it as
7 confidential.

8 MR. SCAROLA: 144, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: 144.

10 And I'm talking to Mr. Bemis at line 17:

11 "Right. And you're saying that, as I
12 understand it, you're agreeing to or you are
13 designating the entire thing as confidential,
14 correct?"

15 Mr. Bemis: "Yes."

16 And then I turn to you, Mr. Scarola, and
17 basically said: "And you're going to want to 18 file a motion."

20 here.

21 THE COURT: So you're saying the burden is
22 on them to show what's confidential about this?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Exactly. They are
24 obliged -- once we have challenged the
25 confidentiality designation, as we now have by

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 way of this motion, the burden shifts to them
2 to demonstrate that it is properly retained as
3 confidential under the terms of the

16div-005291

4 confidentiality order.

5 And I want to call the Court's attention
6 to just a couple of quick things before we turn
7 it over to them to meet their burden.

8 First, this order pertains to litigation
9 materials. Litigation materials are defined in
10 paragraph number one of the stipulated order.
11 And it says, "Litigation materials are all non-
12 public and confidential information disclosed
13 by any party hereto during the course of the 14 captioned litigation." That, I suggest, is the 15 relevant portion of the litigation materials
16 designation.

17 There is an exception. Paragraph two
18 says, "This order shall not apply to any
19 information that, A, is already in a receiving
20 parties' possession."

21 Now the only thing that could arguably be
22 suggested is confidential is the contents of
23 the settlement agreement; in particular, the
24 reference in this transcript to the amount of
25 the settlement. We certainly knew about that.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 We were the ones who disclosed it to them. It

2 is information that was already in our
3 possession. So they have no right to designate
4 as confidential in this proceeding information
5 that we already had, point number one.

6 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, can I object to
7 this? None of this is raised in Mr. Scarola's
8 motion. None of this argument is raised at all
9 in the motion. The motion is very bare bones
10 and fails to meet the minimal requirements.

11 I feel that now we're being ambushed by
12 Mr. Scarola's argument that this is litigation
13 materials, all this argument. So I object to
14 that argument, him going outside of his motion.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I don't see how that
16 possibly could be suggested as --

17 THE COURT: I understand your point. But
18 what else did you want to say?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Paragraph 9I. That
20 paragraph provides that even materials that
21 have properly been designated as confidential
22 may be shown to the author of the materials,
23 although the author is not supposed to retain a
24 copy.

25 What we are asking is that we disclose

1 information to Arthur Anderson that Arthur
2 Anderson already has because it was the author
3 of the materials, it signed the settlement
4 agreement.

5 THE COURT: Is it accurate to say that
6 what you're seeking permission to do is just to
7 tell them what defense counsel said in the
8 hearing about the terms of the settlement?

9 MR. SCAROLA: We want to show them the
10 entire transcript so that they understand the
11 context in which that information was
12 disclosed. Remember, this was not a closed
13 hearing.

14 THE COURT: I understand that.

15 Do we, first of all, agree that at the end
16 of the last hearing Defendant designated the
17 entire transcript as confidential under the
18 terms of the order?

19 MR. IANNO: After Mr. Scarola did, we
20 agreed with him.

21 THE COURT: Well, Mr. Scarola said ten
22 days and you guys said, no, we're designating
23 the whole thing, basically.

24 MR. IANNO: He wanted it designated as
25 confidential for at least ten days. We said

1 we're designating the whole thing.

2 THE COURT: Right. And he said, fine,
3 I'll file a motion to get the stuff I want
4 released released.

5 MR. IANNO: Correct.

6 THE COURT: Is it still you're client's
7 position that the entire thing is properly
8 designated as confidential?

9 MR. IANNO: Well, Your Honor, I don't
10 think that's our position.

11 What the Court required Mr. Scarola to do
12 when we came here a week ago Wednesday is, tell
13 me those portions you want to disclose to
14 Arthur Anderson.

15 THE COURT: And he said the whole thing.

16 MR. IANNO: The whole thing.

17 And it's our position that under the
18 Court's previous orders relating to the Arthur
19 Anderson settlement agreement, the Court
20 specifically ordered the parties to hold that
21 settlement agreement as confidential, that
22 those parts of the settlement agreement and
23 those parts of the transcript where the
24 settlement agreement was discussed needs to
25 remain confidential.

1 But it's not -- I think the point here,
2 Your Honor, is what you were catching. Mr.
3 Scarola doesn't -- the provisions he read of
4 the stipulated confidentiality order don't
5 apply. He doesn't want to disclose the
6 settlement agreement to Arthur Anderson.
7 Clearly, they have that document. He wants to
8 disclose counsel's argument.

9 THE COURT: Well, why is that
10 confidential?

11 MR. IANNO: Because the Court said the
12 terms of the settlement agreement need to
13 remain confidential. Our argument here was
14 confidential, it shouldn't be disclosed. They
15 don't need to know. There has been no purpose
16 given --

17 THE COURT: I don't know that that's the
18 standard. I mean, you know, I need -- and I'm
19 sure you can explain it to me later -- a better
20 understanding of the dynamic of why they want
21 to disclose this to Arthur Anderson -- and
22 please, I don't mean this in a derogatory
23 fashion -- other than to be tattletales. So I
24 need to have a sense of what's truly going on

25 here.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 That said, I don't know that that's really
2 going to effect the legal ruling of is this
3 properly deemed confidential or not. We don't
4 go around designating things confidential
5 unless there really is some purpose. And by
6 that, I mean some legal purpose of designating
7 this confidential.

8 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, we don't know what
9 their purpose is because their motion doesn't
10 tell us. We can assume, and that's what we put 11 in our response, that there is no legitimate
12 purpose.

13 THE COURT: Why does that matter if it
14 shouldn't be -- I mean, please understand, I
15 feel strongly that we don't keep secrets when
16 you choose to litigate in a public forum. And
17 absent a trade secret, a privilege, or some
18 overriding public policy consideration that
19 would suggest things should not be public, they
20 should be public.

21 And I would agree sometimes that means
22 embarrassing things are disclosed, derogatory

23 things are disclosed, things that maybe civil
24 people would prefer not be disclosed get
25 disclosed. But it doesn't change the legal

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 analysis. If it's not properly kept
2 confidential for an overriding public purpose,
3 it's simply not kept confidential.

4 So what I need -- I would agree with Mr.
5 Scarola that Defendant is the one who
6 designated the entire transcript as
7 confidential. So what I will need you to do is
8 to defend -- if you're telling me you need to
9 go back and review it and decide which parts
10 you really think are confidential, you need to
11 isolate those. And then I need you to be able
12 to defend why they are confidential. And we
13 can come back after lunch after you've had a
14 chance to do that exercise.

15 MR. IANNO: Well, Your Honor, I thought
16 Mr. Scarola was going to do that; he did not.
17 I wasn't prepared to do that today. We are
18 prepared to argue that Mr. Scarola has not met
19 any burden or stated any legitimate purpose for 20 disclosing that.

21 THE COURT: I'm just saying, I don't

22 think that -- that may be an interesting fact,
23 but I don't know that it's legally relevant.
24 So I am happy to come back at 1:30 and
25 hopefully you've marked up the transcript by

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 then and we can at least isolate the parts that
2 you are claiming are legitimately confidential.

3 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis, I know, has a
4 flight to catch, Your Honor, because of the
5 holiday weekend.

6 THE COURT: I am going on vacation for a
7 week. I am happy to take you guys the first
8 day I come back from my vacation, which will be
9 June -- whatever it is.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor, I
11 know that they would love to have a further
12 delay --

13 THE COURT: I understand that they
14 originally sought to push this off further.
15 But in all honesty, without an understanding of
16 the dynamic of why it's so critical this
17 information be disclosed, it's hard for me --
18 in all honesty, Mr. Scarola, the argument you
19 are making now, while it occurred to me when I

20 read the transcript, I was not aware from the
21 motion that that's what we were going to be
22 arguing. In all honesty, I wasn't aware of
23 that because I would have told them designate
24 the parts you're really trying to keep
25 confidential if I thought that's the direction

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 we were going.

2 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, the motion places
3 them on --

4 THE COURT: I understand what you're
5 telling me. All I'm saying is, I didn't
6 understand that, either. I understood it was
7 an issue from reading the transcript. I didn't
8 understand that it was an issue you were
9 pushing.

10 So I am happy to do this at 1:30 today, I
11 am happy to do it the Monday I get back from
12 vacation, even though I am not otherwise in
13 court. You guys tell me what you prefer.

14 MR. SCAROLA: The very first opportunity
15 that Your Honor has. And we would strongly
16 urge that this matter get resolved today.

17 And I will explain to the Court, although
18 I agree with you that it is legally irrelevant,

19 I will explain to the Court in the context of 20 the stipulation that we have arrived at why we
21 want to do what we want to do. The first
22 reason is, because we have a right to do it.
23 The second reason is, because Arthur Anderson
24 asked us for the information. And they are
25 aware of it because they have gotten a copy of

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the letter. By letter, Arthur Anderson has
2 requested to have the transcript of this last
3 proceeding.

4 And I will explain to Your Honor, as Your
5 Honor is already aware, there are provisions in
6 the settlement agreement that impose financial
7 obligations on my client as a consequence of
8 litigation that has been brought against Arthur
9 Anderson. That places us in a position where
10 we have a unity of interest with Arthur
11 Anderson. We need to be able to cooperate with 12 them and they are obliged to cooperate with us
13 as well. We want to provide the information
14 with regard to what went on in open court
15 because we believe it has implications with
16 regard to our own responsibilities under the

17 terms of the relationship created between
18 Arthur Anderson and Coleman as a consequence of 19 that settlement agreement.

20 We're not simply tattletaling. And I
21 understand that that was not said in a
22 pejorative fashion, but there is a legitimate
23 legal reason why we want to share this
24 information, and we want to share it
25 expeditiously.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

26

1 As I explained to Your Honor at the last
2 hearing, the attorney's fees exceeded $48,000
3 as of the time of that last hearing. I have no
4 idea where they are now.

5 THE COURT: When is Mr. Bemis' flight
6 back?

7 MR. BEMIS: I have a 2:30 flight. It's
8 the last flight out of here and I fly out of
9 West Palm.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Mr. Ianno is
11 the one who is doing the argument, he is here.
12 They can spend whatever time they need to to
13 try to come up with some confidential portion
14 of this transcript. I'm sure they are very
15 familiar with it.

16 The only claim that is made in any of the 17 eight pages that they have filed is that the
18 confidential portion is the amount of the
19 settlement, which obviously Arthur Anderson
20 already knows.

21 MR. IANNO: Why do they need to know
22 what's said at the hearing, Your Honor? I
23 still don't understand.

24 THE COURT: Well, setting that aside,
25 because as I understand it -- I don't know the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 dynamics of the case as well as you guys do.
2 I'm sure some day I will, but I don't right
3 now. But setting that aside, in all honesty,
4 what was said at that hearing that could not be
5 made known to Arthur Anderson that really could
6 be deemed confidential as to Arthur Anderson?

7 MR. IANNO: Well, it's a question of what
8 is the use of confidential material.

9 THE COURT: No. The question is, is it
10 confidential. That's the first hurdle. If
11 it's not confidential, frankly, we're not
12 addressing today whether it's used properly or 13 not.

14 MR. IANNO: I think it is confidential
15 because the Court ordered it to be confidential
16 when you ordered the settlement agreement to be
17 produced back in December.

18 THE COURT: Sure. But confidential
19 information is not -- I mean, it specifically
20 excludes information already in the receiving
21 parties' possession at the time it's produced.

22 MR. IANNO: That's not what Mr. Scarola
23 wants to disclose.

24 THE COURT: He wants to disclose the fact
25 that counsel disclosed it.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

28

1 MR. IANNO: That it was said in open
2 court.

3 THE COURT: That's not confidential. What
4 gets said in open court is not -- any member of
5 the public could have walked in and listened to
6 that. How can you possibly claim that it's
7 confidential to tell Arthur Anderson it was
8 said?

9 MR. IANNO: Because we agreed. That's the
10 problem, Your Honor. We believe we had a
11 stipulation that that was going to be
12 confidential.

13 THE COURT: In all honesty, the agreement
14 that was reached at the commencement of the 15 hearing was that anything that was said in the
16 hearing would not be deemed a waiver or a
17 violation.

18 MR. BEMIS: It would be confidential under
19 the terms of the hearing, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: No, that's not the way, quite
21 honestly, I read the stipulation between
22 counsel. And I specifically asked you guys if
23 you wanted me to enter an order and you said it
24 wasn't necessary. It was only at the end of 25 the hearing that there was a designation of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

29

1 entire transcript as confidential.

2 MR. IANNO: I understand, Your Honor. But
3 what Mr. Scarola said was, it wouldn't be a
4 violation of the court order, and now they
5 attempt to use that in some way to violate the
6 Court order. What they're trying to do is get
7 from the back door what they can't get from the
8 front door.

9 THE COURT: In all honesty, I don't see it
10 that way. I understand your consternation. I

11 understand your concern about the reason that
12 they are pursuing this. But I have a real hard
13 time understanding how the fact that counsel
14 said the amount of the settlement is
15 confidential.

16 MR. IANNO: Or that Mr. Scarola disclosed
17 the terms of the indemnity.

18 THE COURT: When the terms of the
19 agreement itself are not confidential as
20 against Arthur Anderson, I have a hard time
21 thinking the fact that somebody disclosed them
22 as confidential. I just don't see it.

23 And again, I'm happy to come back at 1:30
24 if you think there is additional argument you
25 can present.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

30

1 MR. BEMIS: What I would like to do is
2 take you up on your offer to revisit this on
3 the 7th because I need to confer with my client
4 as well. And if we're going to do a
5 designation, I just cannot do it between now
6 and the time we have and do it intelligently.

7 This argument that's being made today was
8 not raised. I read their papers, I wrote the
9 brief that was filed with Mr. Ianno, and this

10 is a totally different argument than what was
11 presented in their papers.

12 THE COURT: We will come back that Monday.

13 I understand your consternation, but we are
14 happy to do it. Happy happy. That's fine.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Three of us are happy, one
16 of us is very disappointed.

17 THE COURT: I understand.

18 And by Wednesday I need from Defendant the
19 portions highlighted that you still are
20 contending are confidential. Obviously, vast
21 portions of that transcript are not properly
22 deemed confidential.

23 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I appreciate that
24 position. I will tell you, however, that is
25 not the position that the parties have been

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

31

1 taking in the litigation. For example, every
2 deposition transcript in this case, from your
3 name to your address, is designated as
4 confidential by Coleman in this case.

5 THE COURT: We will see you all, or
6 whoever wants to come back, on June 7th at 7 1:30.

8 MR. BEMIS: June 7th, 1:30. Thank you,
9 Your Honor.
10 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
11 THE COURT: Thank you, sir. Bye-bye.
12 MR. MARMER: Thank you very much, Your
13 Honor.
14 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I understood from
15 Deputy Spall that there probably won't be
16 anyone in your office next week?
17 THE COURT: No, just Tuesday and
18 Wednesday. Two days.
19 MR. IANNO: Okay. We will have it hand
20 delivered.
21 THE COURT: I really won't be able to
22 review it until Monday morning, but it takes a
23 couple of days for us to get it.
24 (Thereupon, at 12:00 p.m., the proceedings
25 were concluded.)

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 - - -

3 THE COURT: Good afternoon. We're back on
4 Coleman and Morgan Stanley, which is the motion
5 to remove the confidential designation from the
6 transcript?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. We're
8 waiting for some telephone participants.

9 (Discussion held off the record.)

10 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis is going to be on
11 the phone because he's traveling to New York
12 for a deposition in this case. He apologizes
13 he couldn't be here in person again.

14 (Discussion held off the record.)

15 THE COURT: Is he the only one doing it by 16 phone?

17 MR. IANNO: And Mr. Marmer.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Someone from Jenner &
19 Block.

20 THE COURT: Hi, this is Judge Maass. Who
21 do I have on the phone?

22 MR. BEMIS: Good afternoon. This is
23 Lawrence Bemis, Kirkland & Ellis.

24 THE COURT: Hello, Mr. Bemis.

25 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 THE COURT: Good afternoon. I have you
2 each on the speakerphone in the Courtroom in
3 Coleman and Morgan Stanley. This is Coleman's
4 motion to allow Arthur Anderson access to

16div-005315

5 confidential information.

6 What did you want to say in support of it,

7 Mr. Scarola?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor. You will recall
9 that we actually began a hearing on this motion
10 previously before Your Honor, and it appears
11 that Morgan Stanley recognizes that it could
12 not meet the burdens imposed upon it as a
13 consequence of Your Honor's prior specific
14 findings, has chosen to ignore those prior
15 specific findings, and attempt to reargue again
16 that it is as a consequence of a stipulation on
17 the part of the Coleman's part that we are 18 where we are.

19 THE COURT: Let's assume I'm not inclined
20 to rehear argument on that.

21 MR. SCAROLA: I'm happy to make that
22 assumption, in which case the burden obviously
23 shifts back to Morgan Stanley. Your Honor gave
24 Morgan Stanley an opportunity to meet that
25 burden. They have submitted a written memo

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 that completely fails to address why any of
2 these materials should remain confidential.
3 They do designate certain portions but present
4 no argument whatsoever to support a position
5 that, particularly as to Arthur Anderson, these
6 matters ought not to be communicated. So, I
7 think it shifts to them at this point.

8 THE COURT: Tell me why anything said in
9 that transcript is confidential?

10 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, remember the
11 transcript itself is based on the settlement
12 agreement which the parties -- the court
13 actually ordered it be designated as
14 confidential. So that our position is Coleman
15 cannot use their confidentiality designation as
16 both a sword and a shield.

17 And if you'll allow me to digress just a
18 moment and address Mr. Scarola's comments,
19 because at the outset I want to say, the reason
20 we incorporated our previous arguments in our
21 responses, we didn't want to be constituted a

22 waiver. We understand the court's ruling, we
23 don't intend to reargue those positions. We
24 want to be understood and recognize we're not
25 waiving those either. We've included them in

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 our supplemental response.
2 The point of the matter is, Coleman and
3 Arthur Anderson now allege to have an immunity
4 of interest, are saying, we can use your
5 violation of the confidentiality order as a
6 sword and did exactly that. In the other case
7 that's pending in front of Judge Miller, they
8 have now moved to dismiss based on the same
9 grounds they have filed their rule to show
10 cause, really the contempt motion in this case
11 seeking to disqualify counsel. So, we're going

16div-005318

12 to use this confidential settlement agreement
13 as a sword, say it's a release of the
14 preexisting claims Morgan Stanley has and at 15 the same time we're going to prevent you from
16 defending yourselves in this case.

17 So, it's either -- the settlement
18 agreement is either confidential or it's not.
19 Frankly, there's nothing confidential in that
20 settlement agreement whatsoever.

21 THE COURT: Please understand at this
22 juncture we're not going back and challenging
23 whether the settlement agreement should be
24 deemed confidential or not.

25 What I'm asking you to do is defend your

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 that transcript is confidential.

3 MR. IANNO: I have to stand on the
4 argument we made before that we believe we're
5 entitled to rely on the stipulation. I don't
6 intent to reargue it. The only thing new that
7 we can add to that is that Coleman is using
8 that transcript in the settlement agreement as
9 both a sword and shield under the
10 confidentiality order. We don't believe that
11 they can selectively disclose portions of it
12 and use that against Morgan Stanley, while at
13 the same time saying Morgan Stanley, you can't
14 use it. You can't have your cake and eat it
15 too on the Coleman side. Either everything is 16 open to the public scrutiny or it's not. And
17 that's our position on this.

18 I don't know if Mr. Bemis has anything to
19 add to that. I believe with all the arguments
20 made at the previous hearing and today and in
21 our supplemental response, either they have to
22 say it's confidential and no one gets to see
23 it, or it's not confidential and it's open to 24 the public in general.

25 Your Honor, what's happening here, we have

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

16div-005320

1 a confidential document that we're discussing
2 in open court. So, they're saying, you can't
3 discuss the document but anything you say in
4 court can be disclosed to Arthur Anderson. We
5 have to either -- either it's confidential or
6 it's not. Right now we feel like we're
7 handcuffed with the designations Coleman is
8 making in this case on the confidentiality.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Bemis, did you have
10 anything you wanted to add?

11 MR. BEMIS: Nothing that would not be
12 repetitive.

13 THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate that.

14 Mr. Scarola, did you want to respond?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, clearly Morgan
16 Stanley is attempting to confuse two separate
17 issues.

18 The one issue before the court has to do

19 with our request for a limited exception to
20 confidentiality with regard to the hearing. We
21 are not before the court today to address
22 issues concerning the contractual
23 confidentiality that exists in the settlement
24 agreement. If Morgan Stanley chooses to
25 challenge that in some way at sometime in the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 future, that simply is a separate issue.
2 That's not the matter before the court right
3 now. We are here only to determine whether the
4 hearing transcript must remain confidential
5 with regard to Arthur Anderson.

6 The burden is upon Morgan Stanley to
7 establish the need for that confidentiality,
8 some legal privilege that exists that would

16div-005322

9 preclude the disclosure of the contents of that
10 hearing and they have utterly and completely
11 failed to meet that burden.

12 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Can a
13 designation of confidentiality be removed for a
14 publication one entity only?

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's all we're requesting.

16 THE COURT: So, you're saying it's a
17 stipulated order and is sort of an acceptable
18 interpretation, something of quasi
19 confidential?

20 MR. SCAROLA: What we're saying is, that
21 they have designated the entire transcript as
22 confidential. We haven't chosen to challenge
23 their entire designation. We have asked for a
24 limited exception. The limited exception that
25 we have chosen to request is disclosure to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Arthur Anderson who already has --

2 THE COURT: But I guess what I'm trying to
3 figure out is, is it implicit in that some of
4 the information you now want to disclose may be
5 confidential as to a third party but is not
6 confidential as to Arthur Anderson under the
7 order or some of this is just not confidential
8 at all and we're simply not choosing to be
9 discriminating enough to figure out which two
10 categories any particular portion of the
11 transcript falls into?

12 MR. SCAROLA: I think that both of those
13 responses pertain. I think that clearly with
14 regard to Arthur Anderson there is no basis
15 whatsoever to keep what was said in open court
16 confidential. I don't know that at this point
17 we need to address the issue beyond that and
18 we're not asking the court to address the issue
19 beyond that. There may be circumstances where
20 disclosure to one third party is appropriate
21 and disclose to some other third party may not
22 be. And, certainly, I would think that it is
23 within the contemplation of the stipulated
24 confidentiality order that there is an ability
25 to modify that order by way of application to

1 the Court. The burden of establishing any
2 confidentiality protection rests upon the party
3 making the unilateral designation. The party
4 making the unilateral designation here was
5 Morgan Stanley. They have failed to meet that
6 burden. They have the ability, because we're
7 talking only about the transcript itself, they
8 have the ability to remove the confidentiality
9 designation in its entirety if they choose to
10 do that. They could simply withdraw it. We
11 might seek then to impose a confidentiality
12 obligation ourselves. But right now that's not
13 within our control. We're dealing with their
14 unilateral designation of everything and we
15 have asked the court for a limited exception to

16 that designation.

17 And, that's really the limited issue that

18 Your Honor is dealing with at this point.

19 THE COURT: What's the response?

20 MR. IANNO: Either it's confidential or

21 it's not. If it's not confidential, as Mr.

22 Scarola argues, then it was discussed in open

23 court, it's open to the public in general.

24 Mr. Scarola always has the opportunity

25 right now if he wants to designate the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

11

1 transcript as confidential, he doesn't need us

2 to withdraw our confidential designation for

3 the plaintiff to designate it as confidential.

4 As Your Honor said, there's no limited

5 exception to the confidentiality order, we're

16div-005326

6 not agreeing to that. Either the transcript
7 remains confidential for the reasons we stated
8 or it isn't confidential.

9 THE COURT: I'll be honest with you, the
10 way I read that order, I don't want to -- we 11 parsed a lot already. I think, arguably, the 12 only part of that transcript that is
13 confidential, any part that discloses the terms
14 of the settlement agreement. And I don't think
15 we remove the designation for publication to a
16 single third party only. Either it's removed
17 or remains in place. If you guys have the time
18 and want to go through the transcript and tell
19 me where those specific discussions are,
20 certain settlement terms. My recollection is
21 there was maybe only one or two places.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Well, I don't know that
23 there would be a need to do that.

24 THE COURT: That's the part that would
25 remain confidential. The portion of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 transcript, for instance, if there was
2 reference to the total amounts of settlement, I
3 think there was at least once or twice, I think
4 that remains confidential.

5 Now, please understand that under the
6 terms of the confidentiality order, I don't
7 think anything we -- obviously Arthur Anderson
8 already knows that.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly.

10 THE COURT: Right.

11 MR. SCAROLA: But I'm trying to understand
12 what the court's inclination is at this point.

13 THE COURT: If we're going to remove the
14 confidentiality designation from any portion,
15 it gets removed for the world. It doesn't get
16 removed solely for Arthur Anderson.

17 MR. SCAROLA: That part I understand.

18 THE COURT: But with that said, my
19 recollection is there are some specific
20 references to specific terms of the settlement
21 agreement that would still remain confidential.

22 MR. SCAROLA: On what basis?

23 THE COURT: Frankly on the basis that you
24 guys -- we still have the confidentiality
25 provision of the settlement agreement itself.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

13

1 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, this is Mr.
2 Bemis. There are four locations. I couldn't
3 do a page and line without a break. There are
4 four locations in the transcript where Mr.
5 Scarola began with two references. I make a
6 reference and there's a reference at the end of
7 the transcript.

8 THE COURT: I need to read the specific
9 verbiage to see what I think what portions of 10 that remains confidential.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Let me --

12 MR. BEMIS: Each of those passages is

16div-005329

13 cited in our initial memorandum. I have to go
14 back and double check.

15 THE COURT: I would need to go back, too.
16 Hold on. Mr. Scarola is asking for a
17 clarification.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. There has been a
19 designation of the entire transcript as
20 confidential.

21 THE COURT: Correct.

22 MR. SCAROLA: We have challenged that
23 designation.

24 THE COURT: Correct.

25 MR. SCAROLA: The burden shifts to Morgan

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Stanley to demonstrate why any portion of that
2 transcript should remain confidential. Our

3 position is that they have failed to meet that
4 burden.

5 THE COURT: And, again, I need to go
6 back. My recollection when we, -- distinct
7 recollection is when we had the hearing on
8 whether the settlement agreement should be
9 disclosed, that there was a stipulation it
10 would be deemed confidential. Indeed, I know
11 my order included that. But my recollection is
12 that was stipulated to and indeed, I think you
13 know, there has been argument back and forth
14 whether the stipulation was more broad than
15 what I included in the order. But clearly at a
16 minimum, it's my recollection there was a
17 stipulation that the settlement agreement
18 itself is confidential. If that's the state of 19 the record, I don't think you can say, yes, the 20 settlement agreement is confidential.

21 But, if someone makes reference to one of
22 the terms in court having first gotten sort of 23 the stipulation that nothing we say here will
24 be deemed a violation or a waiver of the
25 confidentiality order, that now you can publish

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

16div-005331

1 what was said to the world.

2 MR. SCAROLA: We're not requesting that we
3 publish this to the world.

4 THE COURT: Right. Please understand I'm
5 not parsing it to say what we're publishing to
6 Arthur Anderson. Now, if I go back, I think
7 the stipulated confidentiality order says, it's
8 not a violation or simply not confidential with
9 any third party with knowledge of what's said.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Part of the problem is that
11 the confidentiality order itself defines what
12 litigation materials are.

13 THE COURT: Right.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And litigation materials do
15 not include any information that is already in
16 a receiving party's possession.

17 THE COURT: Right.

18 MR. SCAROLA: So, they cannot keep us from 19 sharing information that is already in our

20 possession.

21 THE COURT: Right.

22 MR. SCAROLA: And the confidentiality

23 order is already in our possession.

24 THE COURT: Yeah.

25 MR. SCAROLA: We have that confidentiality

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 order. We are entitled under the court's
2 order, not addressing what restrictions may be
3 imposed upon us by the confidentiality -- by
4 the settlement agreement itself, because the
5 settlement agreement has its own
6 confidentiality provisions --

7 THE COURT: Right.

8 MR. SCAROLA: -- which we must deal with
9 independent of the court's order. Looking only

16div-005333

10 at the court's order, the court's order tells
11 us that it is litigation materials that cannot
12 be disseminated and litigation materials do not
13 include anything already in a receiving party's
14 possession.

15 THE COURT: Correct.

16 MR. SCAROLA: So, as it stands right now,
17 the only thing that keeps us from sharing with
18 Arthur Anderson the contents of the settlement
19 agreement to which Arthur Anderson itself is a
20 party, is the designation of the transcript --

21 THE COURT: No.

22 MR. SCAROLA: -- as confidential.

23 THE COURT: That's not accurate.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I don't know where I lost
25 you.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: Because, what prevents --
2 first of all, I have to go back and look -- all
3 we're talking about today is whether the
4 transcript itself should be confidential.

5 Please understand there is a big
6 distinction between a settlement agreement that
7 says litigation is settled for X amount of
8 dollars and then a transcript where an attorney
9 says, and I am representing to the Court this
10 litigation was settled for X amount of
11 dollars. Those are two separate things.

12 What we're talking about is the latter,
13 not the former. We're not talking about the 14 use of the settlement agreement at all.

15 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the
16 transcript, correct.

17 THE COURT: We're talking about the use of
18 the transcript. All I'm saying, to the extent
19 there is a stipulation between the parties that
20 the settlement agreement is confidential,
21 references in the transcript to specific terms
22 of the settlement agreement likewise is
23 confidential.

24 MR. SCAROLA: Pursuant to stipulation.

25 THE COURT: Yeah. That's a logical --

1 MR. SCAROLA: So, the burden then shifts
2 to us if we want out of the stipulation; is
3 that what you're saying?

4 THE COURT: I would assume but that's not
5 something in front of me, I don't think,
6 today. And in all honesty, Mr. Scarola, when
7 we get the transcript, and go through the parts
8 we're referring to, I think we're talking about
9 a handful of words.

10 MR. IANNO: I think with the certain
11 amount of lines on either side to put it in 12 context.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That's what I understand
14 their burden was today, to come before the
15 court and to demonstrate a legal basis for
16 specific sections to remain confidential.

17 THE COURT: And what I'm saying is the
18 only basis I see for any portion of that
19 transcript to be deemed confidential is based
20 on the stipulation that counsel previously
21 reached the settlement agreement itself is
22 confidential.

23 MR. SCAROLA: What page and lines are we
24 not permitted to share with Arthur Anderson?

25 THE COURT: That's what I want to go

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 through right now. I think we're talking about
2 a handful of places. We need a few minutes to
3 go through and figure that out.

4 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, if we could take a
5 short break, I could talk to Mr. Ianno, I think
6 I can give him the pages and lines.

16div-005337

7 THE COURT: Do you want to do that? You
8 guys can stay and talk, I'll come back.

9 MR. BEMIS: I know I can do it relatively
10 quickly. I don't want to hold the court up
11 while I'm perusing through my papers.

12 MR. IANNO: Ron, I'll call you separately
13 on my cell phone.

14 THE COURT: You can stay here and I'll go.

15 MR. IANNO: For Friday's hearing here's
16 our notebook. And I believe --

17 THE COURT: I'm glad to see it's much
18 shorter.

19 MR. IANNO: And I know, Your Honor, there
20 is a request by Mr. Bemis if we could start the 21 hearing in the morning. We're presently
22 scheduled for 1:30. Maybe while we're taking
23 this break if there is a possibility --

24 THE COURT: As far as I know, nothing
25 cancelled. Let me check, I just don't know.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 (Recess taken.)

2 THE COURT: I'm back now.

3 MR. MARMER: I'm sorry.

4 THE COURT: That's okay, I just walked
5 in. While I'm thinking of it, I checked
6 Friday's schedule. So far I don't have any
7 openings in the morning. If something opens,
8 if you guys are both amenable, we'll call your
9 offices.

10 What, if anything, can be located?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have the transcript
12 in front of you?

13 THE COURT: I do.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We begin at page 16 lines 6
15 through 13. They have been designated as
16 confidential by Morgan Stanley. We are not at
17 this time challenging that confidentiality
18 designation. So, we are in agreement.

19 THE COURT: That's 6 through 13.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Six through 13 at page 16.

21 MR. IANNO: The only thing that concerns
22 me with that is Mr. Scarola's qualification at
23 this time.

24 THE COURT: Meaning that it wasn't part of
25 your agreement?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

21

1 MR. SCAROLA: That's the first time I've
2 heard that. It's either confidential, stays
3 confidential, unless Mr. Bemis feels
4 differently. We don't want to be back here
5 next week to remove the confidentiality
6 designation. It's either a stipulation today
7 that it's confidential or the court needs to
8 rule that it's confidential, I believe.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're not stipulating that
10 it's confidential. They have challenged, they
11 have designated these lines as confidential.
12 We are not challenging that confidentiality
13 designation. To the extent your motion seeks

16div-005340

14 to have this undesignated confidential, you're
15 abandoning that portion of your motion?

16 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. But more
19 accurately stated, that's right. They have
20 designated as confidential but we are not
21 challenging that.

22 THE COURT: Okay. So, we're not
23 stipulating it's confidential, it's just a
24 motion to abandon?

25 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

1 THE COURT: What's next?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Page 33 lines 21 through 34
3 line 3.

16div-005341

4 THE COURT: Who is the speaker?

5 MR. IANNO: I believe this is Mr. Scarola
6 still, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. SCAROLA: We are not challenging --

9 THE COURT: Again, the motion is
10 abandoned?

11 MR. SCAROLA: We are abandoning our motion
12 to challenge that confidentiality designation.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. IANNO: And Your Honor --

15 MR. SCAROLA: Going to page 46 line 5.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We are challenging the
18 confidentiality designation from lines 5
19 through line 16 ending with the word of --
20 resulted in a settlement of.

21 We are withdrawing any challenge to the
22 balance of line 16, line 17 and line 18.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. SCAROLA: So, the court is faced with
25 ruling on the appropriateness of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

16div-005342

1 designation of 46 line 5 through 16 resulted in
2 a settlement of.

3 THE COURT: Right. And, I'm sorry.

4 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I just want to say
5 equivalent to what Mr. Scarola said, in context
6 we had designated page 46 line 5 through page
7 47 line 19 as the confidential portion.

8 Mr. Scarola is abandoning the motion as it
9 pertains to where the settlement amount is
10 discussed on line 16 page 46.

11 THE COURT: Really he's abandoning
12 through --

13 MR. IANNO: Forty six line 18. Where you
14 see the numbers.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I will also be challenging
16 the designation from 46:19 through 47:9.

17 THE COURT: Oh, you are?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. So, the only portion
19 we are abandoning is from 16 after "of" through
20 18, the end of the sentence.

21 THE COURT: Okay. And this is Mr. Bemis
22 speaking?

23 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

24 THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Why would that
25 be confidential, 46:5 through 46:16?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

24

1 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I think that if
2 you look at it, what they're talking about here
3 is the consummation of the settlement
4 agreement. Although it doesn't discuss the
5 specific amount of the settlement agreement, I
6 think that the fact that the settlement
7 agreement amounts being paid is probably
8 confidential to Anderson. And I just don't
9 think you can divorce that from the settlement
10 amount or the terms. I think you need to keep

16div-005344

11 everything in context so you're not
12 inadvertently disclosing something. The fact
13 they paid a certain amount may be just as
14 confidential as the amount.

15 THE COURT: What's the response?

16 MR. SCAROLA: First of all, the entire
17 first paragraph discusses earlier court
18 proceedings that are not confidential, as far
19 as I know. It's just discussion about what
20 happened in an earlier court proceeding.

21 The fact that there has been a settlement
22 of those claims is a matter of public record.
23 Those cases were filed, they were resolved and
24 dismissed.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: And the only thing that I
2 suggest could arguably be confidential would be
3 the amount of the settlement.

4 THE COURT: Okay. The part that I believe
5 is still confidential begins at line 15 after
6 the first word. So, after agreement, the rest
7 of 15 and then all of 16, 17 and 18.

8 MR. IANNO: Okay.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We are then also challenging
10 lines 19 through line 9 on page 47.

11 THE COURT: Right. I'm reading that.
12 Somehow this is confidential.

13 MR. IANNO: I can see some portion of that
14 as being non-confidential where they talk about
15 the mere image of the claims made in the 16 complaint.

17 What I don't know, as we sit here today,
18 whether or not those exact numbers that are
19 mentioned in there are part of the settlement
20 agreements, whether they're mentioned in the 21 complaint in that.

22 So, as we sit here today, I think that
23 what we're saying here, our position on this
24 is, in order to keep the confidentiality
25 intact, you need to include all of that

1 language. I don't see any reason that it needs
2 to be disclosed. If it is a public record, it
3 is a public record, as far as the claims. I
4 agree with that. I don't know if the terms in
5 the amounts claim were somehow mentioned in the
6 settlement agreement, it's some type of recital
7 clause, things of that nature. I think that to
8 the extent anything in here is public record,
9 really, we don't need to disclose that. At
10 this point, I can't tell you what exactly the
11 complaint says as far as claim damages.

12 THE COURT: Does Mr. Bemis know?

13 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I can address that
14 issue, if you wish?

15 THE COURT: Sure.

16 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, those figures are
17 not in the settlement agreement.

18 THE COURT: I appreciate your candor.

19 I don't think any of that is

20 confidential. Where to next?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Page 143, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: I want to make my notes.

23 46:19. I'm sorry, what page next?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Page 143, lines 8 through 15

25 have been designated. We challenge the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 designation of lines 8 through 12 ending with

2 the words a million times.

3 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we'll agree to

4 that.

5 THE COURT: Okay. So, that's not

6 confidential either. Anything else, then?

7 MR. SCAROLA: We are withdrawing our

16div-005348

8 challenge to the designation as confidential of
9 the sentence that begins, "the settlement", at
10 line 12, through the word "amount" on line 15.

11 That would remain confidential.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Anything else?

13 MR. SCAROLA: That's it.

14 THE COURT: So, the only part that -- the
15 only part I ruled on is the --

16 MR. IANNO: I think, if I may, to say that 17 the plaintiff has abandoned their motion as
18 relates to page 16 line 6 through 13, 33:21
19 through 34:3, and then that portion that the 20 plaintiff abandoned on page 46 and then the 21 court ruled on the remainder.

22 THE COURT: I want to make sure I get the
23 part they abandoned.

24 MR. IANNO: Which is --

25 THE COURT: The balance of 16 through 18.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. IANNO: Right.

2 THE COURT: And then also -- no --

3 MR. IANNO: What's the numbers? Where you
4 see the numbers on line 16 through line 18 that
5 was abandoned.

6 THE COURT: Right.

7 MR. IANNO: And the court, perhaps the
8 easiest way to do this is, the defendant
9 designated 46:5 through 47 line 9. Other than 10 that portion, the court overrules a designation
11 to the balance. I think we can say they
12 abandon their motion on 143:12, the sentence
13 begins on 143:12 through 15.

14 THE COURT: 143:12 or --

15 MR. IANNO: That's where it started and
16 that's where we started our designation but we
17 withdraw that portion.

18 THE COURT: It was abandoned at 143:12
19 through 15?

20 MR. IANNO: Right. The sentence that
21 begins on line 12.

22 THE COURT: Is that it?

23 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis, is that accurate?

24 MR. BEMIS: Yes, it is. Your Honor, not

25 to beat a dead horse to life, this stipulation

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

29

1 is pursuant to the Court, obviously to the
2 court's prior direction in the case.

3 THE COURT: I understand that.

4 MR. BEMIS: All right, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: I will do this order and I'll
6 see you Friday.

7 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer. May I
8 add one thought? I want to be clear, if the 9 court recites only what we've abandoned in our
10 motion, you need another piece, I think, and
11 that is that Morgan Stanley are no longer
12 persisting in their confidentiality
13 designation. Otherwise the whole thing will
14 end up being confidential except for the parts

16div-005351

15 where -- we start with the proposition they
16 have to identify the whole thing as
17 confidential. We bring a motion to undo it,
18 abandon selective portions of our motion, that
19 means everything else we were persisting in 20 should be --

21 THE COURT: Should be opened.

22 MR. MARMER: Yes. I don't want anybody
23 pregnant reading the orders would end up --

24 THE COURT: I understand.

25 MR. IANNO: I think that's what Mr. Bemis

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

30

1 was getting at, is not abandonment of our
2 position, rather on the court's ruling, this is
3 where we ended up.

4 THE COURT: All right. I will do the

16div-005352

5 order and again you'll get copies and I'll see
6 you on Friday.

7 (At 2:25 the hearing was adjourned.)

2 - - -

3 THE COURT: Good afternoon. We're back on
4 Coleman and Morgan Stanley, which is the motion
5 to remove the confidential designation from the
6 transcript?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. We're
8 waiting for some telephone participants.

9 (Discussion held off the record.)

10 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis is going to be on
11 the phone because he's traveling to New York
12 for a deposition in this case. He apologizes
13 he couldn't be here in person again.

14 (Discussion held off the record.)

15 THE COURT: Is he the only one doing it by 16 phone?

17 MR. IANNO: And Mr. Marmer.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Someone from Jenner &
19 Block.

20 THE COURT: Hi, this is Judge Maass. Who
21 do I have on the phone?

22 MR. BEMIS: Good afternoon. This is
23 Lawrence Bemis, Kirkland & Ellis.

24 THE COURT: Hello, Mr. Bemis.

25 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: Good afternoon. I have you
2 each on the speakerphone in the Courtroom in
3 Coleman and Morgan Stanley. This is Coleman's
4 motion to allow Arthur Anderson access to

16div-005358

5 confidential information.

6 What did you want to say in support of it,

7 Mr. Scarola?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor. You will recall
9 that we actually began a hearing on this motion
10 previously before Your Honor, and it appears
11 that Morgan Stanley recognizes that it could
12 not meet the burdens imposed upon it as a
13 consequence of Your Honor's prior specific
14 findings, has chosen to ignore those prior
15 specific findings, and attempt to reargue again
16 that it is as a consequence of a stipulation on
17 the part of the Coleman's part that we are 18 where we are.

19 THE COURT: Let's assume I'm not inclined
20 to rehear argument on that.

21 MR. SCAROLA: I'm happy to make that
22 assumption, in which case the burden obviously
23 shifts back to Morgan Stanley. Your Honor gave
24 Morgan Stanley an opportunity to meet that
25 burden. They have submitted a written memo

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 that completely fails to address why any of
2 these materials should remain confidential.
3 They do designate certain portions but present
4 no argument whatsoever to support a position
5 that, particularly as to Arthur Anderson, these
6 matters ought not to be communicated. So, I
7 think it shifts to them at this point.

8 THE COURT: Tell me why anything said in
9 that transcript is confidential?

10 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, remember the
11 transcript itself is based on the settlement
12 agreement which the parties -- the court
13 actually ordered it be designated as
14 confidential. So that our position is Coleman
15 cannot use their confidentiality designation as
16 both a sword and a shield.

17 And if you'll allow me to digress just a
18 moment and address Mr. Scarola's comments,
19 because at the outset I want to say, the reason
20 we incorporated our previous arguments in our
21 responses, we didn't want to be constituted a

22 waiver. We understand the court's ruling, we
23 don't intend to reargue those positions. We
24 want to be understood and recognize we're not
25 waiving those either. We've included them in

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 our supplemental response.
2 The point of the matter is, Coleman and
3 Arthur Anderson now allege to have an immunity
4 of interest, are saying, we can use your
5 violation of the confidentiality order as a
6 sword and did exactly that. In the other case
7 that's pending in front of Judge Miller, they
8 have now moved to dismiss based on the same
9 grounds they have filed their rule to show
10 cause, really the contempt motion in this case
11 seeking to disqualify counsel. So, we're going

16div-005361

12 to use this confidential settlement agreement
13 as a sword, say it's a release of the
14 preexisting claims Morgan Stanley has and at
15 the same time we're going to prevent you from
16 defending yourselves in this case.

17 So, it's either -- the settlement
18 agreement is either confidential or it's not.
19 Frankly, there's nothing confidential in that
20 settlement agreement whatsoever.

21 THE COURT: Please understand at this
22 juncture we're not going back and challenging
23 whether the settlement agreement should be
24 deemed confidential or not.

25 What I'm asking you to do is defend your

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 that transcript is confidential.

3 MR. IANNO: I have to stand on the
4 argument we made before that we believe we're
5 entitled to rely on the stipulation. I don't
6 intent to reargue it. The only thing new that
7 we can add to that is that Coleman is using
8 that transcript in the settlement agreement as
9 both a sword and shield under the
10 confidentiality order. We don't believe that
11 they can selectively disclose portions of it
12 and use that against Morgan Stanley, while at
13 the same time saying Morgan Stanley, you can't
14 use it. You can't have your cake and eat it
15 too on the Coleman side. Either everything is 16 open to the public scrutiny or it's not. And
17 that's our position on this.

18 I don't know if Mr. Bemis has anything to
19 add to that. I believe with all the arguments
20 made at the previous hearing and today and in
21 our supplemental response, either they have to
22 say it's confidential and no one gets to see
23 it, or it's not confidential and it's open to
24 the public in general.

25 Your Honor, what's happening here, we have

1 a confidential document that we're discussing
2 in open court. So, they're saying, you can't
3 discuss the document but anything you say in
4 court can be disclosed to Arthur Anderson. We
5 have to either -- either it's confidential or
6 it's not. Right now we feel like we're
7 handcuffed with the designations Coleman is
8 making in this case on the confidentiality.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Bemis, did you have
10 anything you wanted to add?

11 MR. BEMIS: Nothing that would not be
12 repetitive.

13 THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate that.

14 Mr. Scarola, did you want to respond?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, clearly Morgan
16 Stanley is attempting to confuse two separate
17 issues.

18 The one issue before the court has to do

19 with our request for a limited exception to
20 confidentiality with regard to the hearing. We
21 are not before the court today to address
22 issues concerning the contractual
23 confidentiality that exists in the settlement
24 agreement. If Morgan Stanley chooses to
25 challenge that in some way at sometime in the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 future, that simply is a separate issue.
2 That's not the matter before the court right
3 now. We are here only to determine whether the
4 hearing transcript must remain confidential
5 with regard to Arthur Anderson.

6 The burden is upon Morgan Stanley to
7 establish the need for that confidentiality,
8 some legal privilege that exists that would

9 preclude the disclosure of the contents of that
10 hearing and they have utterly and completely
11 failed to meet that burden.

12 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Can a
13 designation of confidentiality be removed for a
14 publication one entity only?

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's all we're requesting.

16 THE COURT: So, you're saying it's a
17 stipulated order and is sort of an acceptable
18 interpretation, something of quasi
19 confidential?

20 MR. SCAROLA: What we're saying is, that
21 they have designated the entire transcript as
22 confidential. We haven't chosen to challenge
23 their entire designation. We have asked for a
24 limited exception. The limited exception that
25 we have chosen to request is disclosure to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Arthur Anderson who already has --

2 THE COURT: But I guess what I'm trying to
3 figure out is, is it implicit in that some of
4 the information you now want to disclose may be
5 confidential as to a third party but is not
6 confidential as to Arthur Anderson under the
7 order or some of this is just not confidential
8 at all and we're simply not choosing to be
9 discriminating enough to figure out which two
10 categories any particular portion of the
11 transcript falls into?

12 MR. SCAROLA: I think that both of those
13 responses pertain. I think that clearly with
14 regard to Arthur Anderson there is no basis
15 whatsoever to keep what was said in open court
16 confidential. I don't know that at this point
17 we need to address the issue beyond that and
18 we're not asking the court to address the issue
19 beyond that. There may be circumstances where
20 disclosure to one third party is appropriate
21 and disclose to some other third party may not
22 be. And, certainly, I would think that it is
23 within the contemplation of the stipulated
24 confidentiality order that there is an ability
25 to modify that order by way of application to

1 the Court. The burden of establishing any
2 confidentiality protection rests upon the party
3 making the unilateral designation. The party
4 making the unilateral designation here was
5 Morgan Stanley. They have failed to meet that
6 burden. They have the ability, because we're
7 talking only about the transcript itself, they
8 have the ability to remove the confidentiality
9 designation in its entirety if they choose to
10 do that. They could simply withdraw it. We
11 might seek then to impose a confidentiality
12 obligation ourselves. But right now that's not
13 within our control. We're dealing with their
14 unilateral designation of everything and we
15 have asked the court for a limited exception to

16 that designation.

17 And, that's really the limited issue that

18 Your Honor is dealing with at this point.

19 THE COURT: What's the response?

20 MR. IANNO: Either it's confidential or

21 it's not. If it's not confidential, as Mr.

22 Scarola argues, then it was discussed in open

23 court, it's open to the public in general.

24 Mr. Scarola always has the opportunity

25 right now if he wants to designate the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

11

1 transcript as confidential, he doesn't need us

2 to withdraw our confidential designation for

3 the plaintiff to designate it as confidential.

4 As Your Honor said, there's no limited

5 exception to the confidentiality order, we're

6 not agreeing to that. Either the transcript
7 remains confidential for the reasons we stated
8 or it isn't confidential.

9 THE COURT: I'll be honest with you, the
10 way I read that order, I don't want to -- we
11 parsed a lot already. I think, arguably, the
12 only part of that transcript that is
13 confidential, any part that discloses the terms
14 of the settlement agreement. And I don't think
15 we remove the designation for publication to a
16 single third party only. Either it's removed
17 or remains in place. If you guys have the time
18 and want to go through the transcript and tell
19 me where those specific discussions are,
20 certain settlement terms. My recollection is
21 there was maybe only one or two places.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Well, I don't know that
23 there would be a need to do that.

24 THE COURT: That's the part that would
25 remain confidential. The portion of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 transcript, for instance, if there was
2 reference to the total amounts of settlement, I
3 think there was at least once or twice, I think
4 that remains confidential.

5 Now, please understand that under the
6 terms of the confidentiality order, I don't
7 think anything we -- obviously Arthur Anderson
8 already knows that.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly.

10 THE COURT: Right.

11 MR. SCAROLA: But I'm trying to understand
12 what the court's inclination is at this point.

13 THE COURT: If we're going to remove the
14 confidentiality designation from any portion,
15 it gets removed for the world. It doesn't get
16 removed solely for Arthur Anderson.

17 MR. SCAROLA: That part I understand.

18 THE COURT: But with that said, my
19 recollection is there are some specific
20 references to specific terms of the settlement
21 agreement that would still remain confidential.

22 MR. SCAROLA: On what basis?

23 THE COURT: Frankly on the basis that you
24 guys -- we still have the confidentiality
25 provision of the settlement agreement itself.

1 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, this is Mr.
2 Bemis. There are four locations. I couldn't
3 do a page and line without a break. There are
4 four locations in the transcript where Mr.
5 Scarola began with two references. I make a
6 reference and there's a reference at the end of
7 the transcript.

8 THE COURT: I need to read the specific
9 verbiage to see what I think what portions of 10 that remains confidential.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Let me --

12 MR. BEMIS: Each of those passages is

13 cited in our initial memorandum. I have to go
14 back and double check.

15 THE COURT: I would need to go back, too.
16 Hold on. Mr. Scarola is asking for a
17 clarification.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. There has been a
19 designation of the entire transcript as
20 confidential.

21 THE COURT: Correct.

22 MR. SCAROLA: We have challenged that
23 designation.

24 THE COURT: Correct.

25 MR. SCAROLA: The burden shifts to Morgan

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Stanley to demonstrate why any portion of that
2 transcript should remain confidential. Our

3 position is that they have failed to meet that
4 burden.

5 THE COURT: And, again, I need to go
6 back. My recollection when we, -- distinct
7 recollection is when we had the hearing on
8 whether the settlement agreement should be
9 disclosed, that there was a stipulation it
10 would be deemed confidential. Indeed, I know
11 my order included that. But my recollection is
12 that was stipulated to and indeed, I think you
13 know, there has been argument back and forth
14 whether the stipulation was more broad than
15 what I included in the order. But clearly at a
16 minimum, it's my recollection there was a
17 stipulation that the settlement agreement
18 itself is confidential. If that's the state of
19 the record, I don't think you can say, yes, the 20 settlement agreement is confidential.

21 But, if someone makes reference to one of
22 the terms in court having first gotten sort of
23 the stipulation that nothing we say here will
24 be deemed a violation or a waiver of the
25 confidentiality order, that now you can publish

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 what was said to the world.

2 MR. SCAROLA: We're not requesting that we
3 publish this to the world.

4 THE COURT: Right. Please understand I'm
5 not parsing it to say what we're publishing to
6 Arthur Anderson. Now, if I go back, I think
7 the stipulated confidentiality order says, it's
8 not a violation or simply not confidential with
9 any third party with knowledge of what's said.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Part of the problem is that
11 the confidentiality order itself defines what
12 litigation materials are.

13 THE COURT: Right.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And litigation materials do
15 not include any information that is already in
16 a receiving party's possession.

17 THE COURT: Right.

18 MR. SCAROLA: So, they cannot keep us from
19 sharing information that is already in our

20 possession.

21 THE COURT: Right.

22 MR. SCAROLA: And the confidentiality

23 order is already in our possession.

24 THE COURT: Yeah.

25 MR. SCAROLA: We have that confidentiality

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 order. We are entitled under the court's
2 order, not addressing what restrictions may be
3 imposed upon us by the confidentiality -- by
4 the settlement agreement itself, because the
5 settlement agreement has its own
6 confidentiality provisions --

7 THE COURT: Right.

8 MR. SCAROLA: -- which we must deal with
9 independent of the court's order. Looking only

10 at the court's order, the court's order tells
11 us that it is litigation materials that cannot
12 be disseminated and litigation materials do not
13 include anything already in a receiving party's
14 possession.

15 THE COURT: Correct.

16 MR. SCAROLA: So, as it stands right now,
17 the only thing that keeps us from sharing with
18 Arthur Anderson the contents of the settlement
19 agreement to which Arthur Anderson itself is a
20 party, is the designation of the transcript --

21 THE COURT: No.

22 MR. SCAROLA: -- as confidential.

23 THE COURT: That's not accurate.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I don't know where I lost
25 you.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: Because, what prevents --
2 first of all, I have to go back and look -- all
3 we're talking about today is whether the
4 transcript itself should be confidential.

5 Please understand there is a big
6 distinction between a settlement agreement that
7 says litigation is settled for X amount of
8 dollars and then a transcript where an attorney
9 says, and I am representing to the Court this
10 litigation was settled for X amount of
11 dollars. Those are two separate things.

12 What we're talking about is the latter,
13 not the former. We're not talking about the
14 use of the settlement agreement at all.

15 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the
16 transcript, correct.

17 THE COURT: We're talking about the use of
18 the transcript. All I'm saying, to the extent
19 there is a stipulation between the parties that
20 the settlement agreement is confidential,
21 references in the transcript to specific terms
22 of the settlement agreement likewise is
23 confidential.

24 MR. SCAROLA: Pursuant to stipulation.

25 THE COURT: Yeah. That's a logical --

1 MR. SCAROLA: So, the burden then shifts
2 to us if we want out of the stipulation; is
3 that what you're saying?

4 THE COURT: I would assume but that's not
5 something in front of me, I don't think,
6 today. And in all honesty, Mr. Scarola, when
7 we get the transcript, and go through the parts
8 we're referring to, I think we're talking about
9 a handful of words.

10 MR. IANNO: I think with the certain
11 amount of lines on either side to put it in 12 context.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That's what I understand
14 their burden was today, to come before the
15 court and to demonstrate a legal basis for
16 specific sections to remain confidential.

17 THE COURT: And what I'm saying is the
18 only basis I see for any portion of that
19 transcript to be deemed confidential is based
20 on the stipulation that counsel previously
21 reached the settlement agreement itself is
22 confidential.

23 MR. SCAROLA: What page and lines are we
24 not permitted to share with Arthur Anderson?

25 THE COURT: That's what I want to go

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 through right now. I think we're talking about
2 a handful of places. We need a few minutes to
3 go through and figure that out.

4 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, if we could take a
5 short break, I could talk to Mr. Ianno, I think
6 I can give him the pages and lines.

7 THE COURT: Do you want to do that? You
8 guys can stay and talk, I'll come back.

9 MR. BEMIS: I know I can do it relatively
10 quickly. I don't want to hold the court up
11 while I'm perusing through my papers.

12 MR. IANNO: Ron, I'll call you separately
13 on my cell phone.

14 THE COURT: You can stay here and I'll go.

15 MR. IANNO: For Friday's hearing here's
16 our notebook. And I believe --

17 THE COURT: I'm glad to see it's much
18 shorter.

19 MR. IANNO: And I know, Your Honor, there
20 is a request by Mr. Bemis if we could start the 21 hearing in the morning. We're presently
22 scheduled for 1:30. Maybe while we're taking
23 this break if there is a possibility --

24 THE COURT: As far as I know, nothing
25 cancelled. Let me check, I just don't know.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 (Recess taken.)

2 THE COURT: I'm back now.

3 MR. MARMER: I'm sorry.

4 THE COURT: That's okay, I just walked
5 in. While I'm thinking of it, I checked
6 Friday's schedule. So far I don't have any
7 openings in the morning. If something opens,
8 if you guys are both amenable, we'll call your
9 offices.

10 What, if anything, can be located?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Do you have the transcript
12 in front of you?

13 THE COURT: I do.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We begin at page 16 lines 6
15 through 13. They have been designated as
16 confidential by Morgan Stanley. We are not at
17 this time challenging that confidentiality
18 designation. So, we are in agreement.

19 THE COURT: That's 6 through 13.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Six through 13 at page 16.

21 MR. IANNO: The only thing that concerns
22 me with that is Mr. Scarola's qualification at
23 this time.

24 THE COURT: Meaning that it wasn't part of
25 your agreement?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

21

1 MR. SCAROLA: That's the first time I've
2 heard that. It's either confidential, stays
3 confidential, unless Mr. Bemis feels
4 differently. We don't want to be back here
5 next week to remove the confidentiality
6 designation. It's either a stipulation today
7 that it's confidential or the court needs to
8 rule that it's confidential, I believe.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're not stipulating that
10 it's confidential. They have challenged, they
11 have designated these lines as confidential.
12 We are not challenging that confidentiality
13 designation. To the extent your motion seeks

14 to have this undesignated confidential, you're
15 abandoning that portion of your motion?

16 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. But more
19 accurately stated, that's right. They have
20 designated as confidential but we are not
21 challenging that.

22 THE COURT: Okay. So, we're not
23 stipulating it's confidential, it's just a
24 motion to abandon?

25 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

22

1 THE COURT: What's next?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Page 33 lines 21 through 34
3 line 3.

16div-005384

4 THE COURT: Who is the speaker?

5 MR. IANNO: I believe this is Mr. Scarola

6 still, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. SCAROLA: We are not challenging --

9 THE COURT: Again, the motion is
10 abandoned?

11 MR. SCAROLA: We are abandoning our motion
12 to challenge that confidentiality designation.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. IANNO: And Your Honor --

15 MR. SCAROLA: Going to page 46 line 5.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We are challenging the
18 confidentiality designation from lines 5
19 through line 16 ending with the word of --
20 resulted in a settlement of.

21 We are withdrawing any challenge to the
22 balance of line 16, line 17 and line 18.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. SCAROLA: So, the court is faced with
25 ruling on the appropriateness of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 designation of 46 line 5 through 16 resulted in
2 a settlement of.

3 THE COURT: Right. And, I'm sorry.

4 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I just want to say
5 equivalent to what Mr. Scarola said, in context
6 we had designated page 46 line 5 through page
7 47 line 19 as the confidential portion.

8 Mr. Scarola is abandoning the motion as it
9 pertains to where the settlement amount is
10 discussed on line 16 page 46.

11 THE COURT: Really he's abandoning
12 through --

13 MR. IANNO: Forty six line 18. Where you
14 see the numbers.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I will also be challenging
16 the designation from 46:19 through 47:9.

17 THE COURT: Oh, you are?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. So, the only portion
19 we are abandoning is from 16 after "of" through
20 18, the end of the sentence.

21 THE COURT: Okay. And this is Mr. Bemis
22 speaking?

23 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

24 THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Why would that
25 be confidential, 46:5 through 46:16?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

24

1 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, I think that if
2 you look at it, what they're talking about here
3 is the consummation of the settlement
4 agreement. Although it doesn't discuss the
5 specific amount of the settlement agreement, I
6 think that the fact that the settlement
7 agreement amounts being paid is probably
8 confidential to Anderson. And I just don't
9 think you can divorce that from the settlement
10 amount or the terms. I think you need to keep

11 everything in context so you're not
12 inadvertently disclosing something. The fact
13 they paid a certain amount may be just as
14 confidential as the amount.

15 THE COURT: What's the response?

16 MR. SCAROLA: First of all, the entire
17 first paragraph discusses earlier court
18 proceedings that are not confidential, as far
19 as I know. It's just discussion about what
20 happened in an earlier court proceeding.

21 The fact that there has been a settlement
22 of those claims is a matter of public record.
23 Those cases were filed, they were resolved and
24 dismissed.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: And the only thing that I
2 suggest could arguably be confidential would be
3 the amount of the settlement.

4 THE COURT: Okay. The part that I believe
5 is still confidential begins at line 15 after
6 the first word. So, after agreement, the rest
7 of 15 and then all of 16, 17 and 18.

8 MR. IANNO: Okay.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We are then also challenging
10 lines 19 through line 9 on page 47.

11 THE COURT: Right. I'm reading that.
12 Somehow this is confidential.

13 MR. IANNO: I can see some portion of that
14 as being non-confidential where they talk about
15 the mere image of the claims made in the
16 complaint.

17 What I don't know, as we sit here today,
18 whether or not those exact numbers that are
19 mentioned in there are part of the settlement
20 agreements, whether they're mentioned in the 21 complaint in that.

22 So, as we sit here today, I think that
23 what we're saying here, our position on this
24 is, in order to keep the confidentiality
25 intact, you need to include all of that

1 language. I don't see any reason that it needs
2 to be disclosed. If it is a public record, it
3 is a public record, as far as the claims. I
4 agree with that. I don't know if the terms in
5 the amounts claim were somehow mentioned in the
6 settlement agreement, it's some type of recital
7 clause, things of that nature. I think that to
8 the extent anything in here is public record,
9 really, we don't need to disclose that. At
10 this point, I can't tell you what exactly the
11 complaint says as far as claim damages.

12 THE COURT: Does Mr. Bemis know?

13 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I can address that
14 issue, if you wish?

15 THE COURT: Sure.

16 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, those figures are
17 not in the settlement agreement.

18 THE COURT: I appreciate your candor.

19 I don't think any of that is

20 confidential. Where to next?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Page 143, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: I want to make my notes.

23 46:19. I'm sorry, what page next?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Page 143, lines 8 through 15

25 have been designated. We challenge the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 designation of lines 8 through 12 ending with

2 the words a million times.

3 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we'll agree to

4 that.

5 THE COURT: Okay. So, that's not

6 confidential either. Anything else, then?

7 MR. SCAROLA: We are withdrawing our

8 challenge to the designation as confidential of
9 the sentence that begins, "the settlement", at
10 line 12, through the word "amount" on line 15.

11 That would remain confidential.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Anything else?

13 MR. SCAROLA: That's it.

14 THE COURT: So, the only part that -- the
15 only part I ruled on is the --

16 MR. IANNO: I think, if I may, to say that
17 the plaintiff has abandoned their motion as
18 relates to page 16 line 6 through 13, 33:21
19 through 34:3, and then that portion that the
20 plaintiff abandoned on page 46 and then the
21 court ruled on the remainder.

22 THE COURT: I want to make sure I get the
23 part they abandoned.

24 MR. IANNO: Which is --

25 THE COURT: The balance of 16 through 18.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. IANNO: Right.

2 THE COURT: And then also -- no --

3 MR. IANNO: What's the numbers? Where you
4 see the numbers on line 16 through line 18 that
5 was abandoned.

6 THE COURT: Right.

7 MR. IANNO: And the court, perhaps the
8 easiest way to do this is, the defendant
9 designated 46:5 through 47 line 9. Other than
10 that portion, the court overrules a designation
11 to the balance. I think we can say they
12 abandon their motion on 143:12, the sentence
13 begins on 143:12 through 15.

14 THE COURT: 143:12 or --

15 MR. IANNO: That's where it started and
16 that's where we started our designation but we
17 withdraw that portion.

18 THE COURT: It was abandoned at 143:12
19 through 15?

20 MR. IANNO: Right. The sentence that
21 begins on line 12.

22 THE COURT: Is that it?

23 MR. IANNO: Mr. Bemis, is that accurate?

24 MR. BEMIS: Yes, it is. Your Honor, not

25 to beat a dead horse to life, this stipulation

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

29

1 is pursuant to the Court, obviously to the
2 court's prior direction in the case.

3 THE COURT: I understand that.

4 MR. BEMIS: All right, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: I will do this order and I'll
6 see you Friday.

7 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer. May I
8 add one thought? I want to be clear, if the
9 court recites only what we've abandoned in our
10 motion, you need another piece, I think, and
11 that is that Morgan Stanley are no longer
12 persisting in their confidentiality
13 designation. Otherwise the whole thing will
14 end up being confidential except for the parts

16div-005394

15 where -- we start with the proposition they
16 have to identify the whole thing as
17 confidential. We bring a motion to undo it,
18 abandon selective portions of our motion, that
19 means everything else we were persisting in
20 should be --

21 THE COURT: Should be opened.

22 MR. MARMER: Yes. I don't want anybody
23 pregnant reading the orders would end up --

24 THE COURT: I understand.

25 MR. IANNO: I think that's what Mr. Bemis

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

30

1 was getting at, is not abandonment of our
2 position, rather on the court's ruling, this is
3 where we ended up.

4 THE COURT: All right. I will do the

5 order and again you'll get copies and I'll see
6 you on Friday.

Pursuant to the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF) hereby request that Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO") answer the following interrogatory and otherwise specify objections, if any, in accordance with the definitions and instructions contained herein.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.
2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

3. Each interrogatory should be answered separately and fully, unless it is objected to, in which event the reasons for the objections should be stated with specificity. Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc.

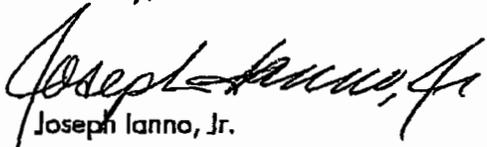

Dear Mike:

I am enclosing Morgan Stanley's responses to CPH's Interrogatories dated March 19, 2004.

As you will see from the enclosed response, Morgan Stanley has objected in part to Interrogatory No. 3 – based on the attorney-client privilege and the attorney work product doctrine – to providing a document-by-document identification of documents received by Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans in the course of their representation of Morgan Stanley. We do not intend for that objection to curtail or delay discovery, however, and are prepared – upon reaching an appropriate stipulation that the provision this information will not constitute (or argued by CPH to be) a waiver of any privilege or work product protection – to provide you with the requested information. Indeed, we are prepared, within 48 hours of executing a non-waiver stipulation meeting the requirements of Florida Rule of Judicial Administration 2.060(g), to substitute our amended response.

Please let me know your position on this issue after you have had an opportunity to review the responses.

Sincerely,

Joseph Ianno, Jr.

MORGAN STANLEY'S ANSWERS AND OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING INC.'S INTERROGATORIES

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, provides the following answers and objections to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Interrogatories dated March 19, 2004.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. Morgan Stanley objects to the Interrogatories to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney-work-product doctrine, the common interest doctrine, or any other applicable constitutional, statutory or common law privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

2. Morgan Stanley's answers and objections are based on a good faith investigation. Morgan Stanley reserves the right to amend and/or modify its answers and objections.

3. Morgan Stanley incorporates each of these General Objections into each of the Answers and Specific Objections set forth below, as though each General Objection is fully set forth therein.

ANSWERS AND SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Did any provision in the Settlement Agreement play any part in the filing of the New Morgan Stanley Litigation?

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is vague and ambiguous. Specifically, the terms "any provision," "any part," "Settlement Agreement," and "New Morgan Stanley Litigation" are undefined and overbroad. For purposes of this Interrogatory, Morgan Stanley will construe the term "Settlement Agreement" to mean the document attached as Exhibit 1 to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order on Defendant's Motion to Compel Settlement Agreement, and the term "New Morgan Stanley Litigation" to mean the civil action styled as Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA) (Miller, J.). By construing "New Morgan Stanley Litigation" in this manner, Morgan Stanley does not agree or concede that Civil Action No. CL 04-2257 AA, which arises out of the same transactions and occurrences as these consolidated actions, is a new or separate "litigation" as that term is used in the Protective Order.

Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the ground that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client and attorney-work-product privileges. Specifically, the information sought by this Interrogatory — whether or not the Settlement Agreement played any role in the filing of the New Morgan Stanley Litigation — expressly seeks the mental impressions and strategy of Morgan Stanley and its counsel, attorneys from the law firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, and Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHHTB"). That information is squarely protected by the attorney work-product doctrine and, to the extent that it would reveal communications between Morgan Stanley and its counsel, protected by the attorney-client privilege. Accordingly, it is not discoverable.

Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, and without waiving any applicable privilege, Morgan Stanley provides the following background information regarding the claims asserted in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation.

The legal claims in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation were based on the total mix of information available to Morgan Stanley and KHHTB at the time it was filed. The Complaint in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation does not in any way quote, reference, attach, or describe the Settlement Agreement, or any other "Confidential" information subject to the Protective Order.

The allegations and legal claims made in Morgan Stanley's Complaint against Arthur Andersen arise entirely from conduct that occurred in 1996, 1997, and 1998, and are based exclusively on the fraud and other actionable misconduct committed by the Arthur Andersen defendants (collectively "Arthur Andersen") in connection with the preparation and certification of Sunbeam's audited financial statements.

Specifically, as alleged in the Complaint, MSSF — in direct reliance on certified financial statements audited by Arthur Andersen — provided a $680 million loan to Sunbeam. MS & Co. — in direct reliance on those same certified financial statements — agreed to underwrite a $750 million offering of convertible debentures issued by Sunbeam. As alleged in the Complaint (and as described below in response to Interrogatory No. 4), the plaintiffs in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages as a result of the fraud and other misconduct of the Arthur Andersen defendants. Morgan Stanley has pre-existing legal claims to recover those damages — and is entitled to recover those damages from the defendants in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation.

Each of plaintiffs in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation had a cause of action against the defendants in that action that predates the Settlement Agreement — and its subsequent production to Morgan Stanley in the above-captioned consolidated actions — by several years. Those pre-existing causes of action (each consisting of multiple claims) stem from the same 1998 financial transactions and historical events that are the subject of the above-captioned consolidated actions and have existed — independent of the Settlement Agreement between Arthur Andersen and CPH — ever since.

Starting in April 2001, Morgan Stanley's pre-existing claims against Arthur Andersen were subject to various tolling agreements between the defendants in that action and Sunbeam's lenders and underwriters. The tolling agreement expressly recognized that Sunbeam's lenders and underwriters, including Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc., Bank of American, NA, and First Union National Bank, "and all of their respective successors, predecessors, affiliates, and assigns," had pre-existing claims against Arthur Andersen. The first such tolling agreement, which expressly recognizes Morgan Stanley's pre-existing claims against Arthur Andersen, was dated April 2001 — more than 18 months before the Settlement Agreement even existed, and more than 32 months before the Settlement Agreement was first produced to Morgan Stanley.

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify all individuals, other than Kirkland & Ellis and Carlton Fields attorneys, who have received a copy of all or any portion of any information designated as "Confidential" including but not limited to the Settlement Agreement or any information derived from it, whether in whole or in part, in words or in substance, directly or indirectly.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is vague and ambiguous. Specifically, the term "Settlement Agreement" is undefined and overbroad. For purposes of this Interrogatory, Morgan Stanley will construe the term "Settlement Agreement" to mean the document attached as Exhibit 1 to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order on Defendant's Motion to Compel Settlement Agreement.

Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the ground that it is overbroad and improperly seeks information covered by the attorney-client and attorney-work-product privileges. Specifically, Morgan Stanley objects to providing information regarding the identities of the current Morgan Stanley employees who have had access to "Confidential" information in the course of assisting counsel in the defense and prosecution of these consolidated actions, and whose access to "Confidential" information is expressly permitted by the Protective Order. (See Protective Order ¶ 9(b)) Similarly, Morgan Stanley objects to providing information regarding the identities of the experts and/or consultants that it has retained to assist counsel in the defense and prosecution of these consolidated actions, and whose access to "Confidential" information is expressly permitted by the Protective Order. (See Protective Order ¶ 9(h)) Morgan Stanley also objects to providing information regarding the identities of persons who have had access to "Confidential" documents originating from Morgan Stanley's own files. (See Protective Order ¶ 12)

Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, the individuals identified in the response to Interrogatory Three have received information designated as "Confidential" as described therein.

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Provide a detailed account setting forth when each individual identified in response to the preceding interrogatory received the confidential information, from whom they received it, how they received it, why it was provided to them, and any use they made of it.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is vague and ambiguous. Specifically, the term "Settlement Agreement" is undefined and overbroad. For purposes of this Interrogatories, Morgan Stanley will construe the term "Settlement Agreement" to mean the document attached as Exhibit 1 to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order on Defendant's Motion to Compel Settlement Agreement.

Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the ground that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client and attorney-work-product privileges. Specifically, the information sought by this Interrogatory — "why" certain information was provided and how it may have been "used" — expressly seeks the mental impressions and strategy of Morgan Stanley and its counsel. That information is squarely protected by the attorney work-product doctrine and, to the extent that it would reveal communications between Morgan Stanley and its counsel, protected by the attorney-client privilege. Accordingly, it is not discoverable.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Interrogatory on the ground that it is overbroad and improperly seeks information covered by the attorney-client and attorney-work-product privileges. Specifically, Morgan Stanley objects to providing information regarding the identities of the current Morgan Stanley employees who have had access to "Confidential" information in the course of assisting counsel in the defense and prosecution of these consolidated actions, and whose access to "Confidential" information is expressly permitted by the Protective Order. (See Protective Order ¶ 9(b)) Similarly, Morgan Stanley objects to providing information regarding the identities of the experts and/or consultants that it has retained to assist counsel in the defense and prosecution of these consolidated actions, and whose access to "Confidential" information is expressly permitted by the Protective Order. (See Protective Order ¶ 9(h)) Morgan Stanley also objects to providing information regarding the identities of persons who have had access to "Confidential" documents originating from Morgan Stanley's own files. (See Protective Order ¶ 12)

Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, Morgan Stanley believes that the following people received or had access to documents and information designated as "Confidential."

Morgan Stanley further states that, as expressly permitted by the Protective Order, some of the deposition witnesses identified above were shown documents during the preparation of their depositions, and that some of the documents shown to the deposition witnesses during the deposition preparation sessions may have included "Confidential" information. None of the witnesses were permitted to retain copies of any of the documents shown to them during deposition preparation. No deposition witnesses were shown the Settlement Agreement, either during a deposition or during a deposition preparation session.

Answering further, Morgan Stanley states that, between February 26, 2004 and March 3, 2004, Kirkland & Ellis LLP provided KHTE, its co-counsel in the above-captioned consolidated actions, with a limited number of documents bearing a "Confidential" designation. Morgan Stanley is prepared — upon execution of an appropriate non-waiver stipulation meeting the requirements of Florida Rule of Judicial Administration 2.060(g) — to supplement its response to identify the documents received by KHTE.

Morgan Stanley had retained KHTE on February 23, 2004, as co-counsel with Kirkland & Ellis in the consolidated civil actions of Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., (No. CA 03-5045 AD) (Maass, J.) and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. et al., (No. CA 03-5165 AD) (Maass, J.). Thereafter, as counsel to Morgan Stanley, KHTE filed the civil action styled Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA) (Miller, J.). The four KHTE attorneys who represent Morgan Stanley in these matters (Mark C. Hansen, Michael K. Kellogg, James M. Webster, and Rebecca A. Beynon) all executed the confidentiality undertaking attached as Exhibit A to the Protective Order.

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Detail the purported factual basis for Morgan Stanley & Co.'s inclusion as a plaintiff in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation, including specifically the nature and amount of any damages alleged to have been sustained by Morgan Stanley & Co.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is vague, ambiguous, overbroad, and irrelevant to the issues in the above-captioned consolidated actions. Subject to and without waiving any objections it might have in the New Morgan Stanley Litigation, MS & Co. will provide specific information regarding the amounts and types of damages it has suffered in connection with expert disclosures and discovery requests that are properly served in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA). MS & Co.'s expert disclosures and discovery responses will occur on dates agreed to by the parties or established by Judge Miller in that action.

Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, Morgan Stanley states, for purposes of this Interrogatory only, that MS & Co. suffered substantial monetary damages in connection with Sunbeam's offering of $750 million Zero-Coupon Convertible Debentures. Subsequent to the offering, for which MS & Co. served as underwriter, MS & Co. held debentures to facilitate secondary market trading. As a result of the conduct described in the Complaint filed in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA), MS & Co. suffered damages when those debentures held by MS & Co. lost value.

In addition to the direct damages described generally in the preceding paragraph, MS & Co. reserves the right to seek damages for injuries to its reputation, goodwill, and business, in amounts to be determined at trial in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA). Further, MS & Co. has reserved the right to seek leave to amend its complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to assert claims for punitive damages in excess of $1.2 billion as allowed by law.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S FOURTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS TO PLAINTIFF

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") requests that plaintiff produce the documents and things referred to in the following specific requests. The specific requests are preceded by Instructions and Definitions which shall govern the specific requests. Documents and things responsive to these requests should be produced to counsel for Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated at the law firm of Carlton Fields, P.A., 222 Lakeview Avenue, Suite 1200, West Palm Beach, FL 33401, within the time required by Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.350(b) or as otherwise agreed to by the parties or specified by the Court.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.

2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

3. Documents requested and to be produced include all Documents in the possession, custody or control of the plaintiff including, but not limited to, any agents, employees, contractors, attorneys, and consultants or experts working for or in favor of the plaintiff or its attorneys.

4. If, in responding to this Request for Production, you encounter any ambiguities when construing a request or definition, the response shall set forth the matter deemed ambiguous and the construction used in responding.

5. Whenever in this Request you are asked to identify or produce a document which is deemed by you to be properly withheld from production for inspection or copying under claim of privilege (including, but not limited to, the work product doctrine), provide a privilege log that includes: the type of document, the general subject matter of the document, the date of the document, and such other information as is sufficient to identify the document, including, where appropriate, the author, addressee, custodian, and any other recipient of the document, and where not apparent, the relationship of the author, the addressee, custodian, and any other recipient to each other, in a manner that, without revealing the information claimed to be protected, will enable this party to assess the applicability of the privilege protection claimed by you. The privilege log shall be provided within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order.

6. If production of any requested document(s) is objected to on the grounds that production is unduly burdensome, describe the burden or expense of the proposed discovery.

7. When a document contains both privileged and non-privileged material, the non-privileged material must be disclosed to the fullest extent possible without disclosing the privileged material. If a privilege is asserted with regard to part of the material contained in a document, the party claiming the privilege must clearly indicate the portions as to which the privilege is claimed. When a document has been redacted or altered in any fashion, identify as to each document the reason for the redaction or alteration. Any redaction must be clearly visible on the redacted document.

8. If a responsive document exists but is no longer in your possession, custody, or control, state: its date, author(s), recipient(s), subject matter, what disposition was made of the document, and the person or entity, if any, now in possession, custody, or control of the document. If a responsive document has been destroyed, identify the date of destruction, the person who destroyed the document and the person who directed that the document be destroyed and state the reason for its destruction.

9. Produce all of the documents responsive to the numbered requests below either as they are kept in the usual course of business or by custodian.

10. If any of these documents cannot be produced in full, you are requested to produce them to the fullest extent possible, specifying clearly the reasons for your inability to produce the remainder and stating any information, knowledge, or belief you have concerning the unproduced portion.

11. If the requested documents are maintained in a file, the file folder is included in the request for production of those documents.

12. The terms "any," "all" and "each" shall be construed to mean "any," "all," or "each".

13. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "including but not limited to."

14. The present tense shall be construed to include the past and future tenses.
15. The specificity of any request herein shall not be construed to limit the generality or reach of any other request herein.
16. Unless otherwise specified, this Request calls for the production of documents created, delivered, distributed, sent, received, accessed, or modified up to the date of your response to this Request.

JOINT SUBMISSION OF THE PARTIES FOR
JULY 2, 2004 CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE

Pursuant to the Court's Order of February 24, 2004, the parties in the above-referenced action hereby submit the following Joint Submission in advance of the July 2, 2004 Case Management Conference.

I. Agreed-Upon Statement Of Background And Procedural History

The following is the parties' agreed-upon summary of the two companion cases now pending before this Court, which have been consolidated for trial.

(Case No. 03 CA-005045 AI)

Background. This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH")

sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

CPH's Complaint alleges claims arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy. CPH's Complaint has sought damages of at least $485 million and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. Morgan Stanley denies the material allegations in CPH's Complaint and also denies CPH's entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. CPH filed its Complaint on May 8, 2003 (the "CPH Action"). Morgan Stanley filed its Answer on June 23, 2003 and, on June 25, 2003 filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant To Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In the Alternative, For Judgment On The Pleadings. The Court held a hearing on these motions on December 12, 2003. On December 15, 2003, the Court issued an Order denying both motions. On January 9, 2004, Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal regarding the denial of its motion to dismiss. See Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.130(a)(3)(A) (providing for interlocutory appellate review of non-final orders "concerning venue"). On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated CPH's action against Morgan Stanley with Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's action against CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

B. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al. (Case No. 03 CA-005165 AI)

Background. This action arises out of the same series of financial transactions as the CPH Action. In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

MSSF's Complaint alleges that, in the course of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MAFCO") and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the "synergies" that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that Defendant's inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam's lenders (including MSSF) to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. MSSF's Complaint alleges that it suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001 and defaulted on acquisition-related loans. MSSF has alleged claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. CPH denies the material allegations in MSSF's Complaint and also denies MSSF's entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. MSSF filed its Complaint against MAFCO and CPH on May 12, 2003 (the "MSSF Action"). The MSSF Action was initially assigned to Division AG. Because the MSSF Action and the CPH Action involve the same series of financial transactions and arise from a common set of operative facts, the parties agreed that the two cases are companion cases under Local Rule 2.009 and requested a transfer to Division AI, where the first-filed, lower numbered CPH Action was assigned. The motion to transfer was granted on June 9, 2003. Defendants CPH and MAFCO filed their Answer on June 25, 2003. On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated MSSF's action against CPH and MAFCO with CPH's action against Morgan Stanley.

II. Report On Discovery In The Two Cases

A. Morgan Stanley's And MSSF's Position On Discovery

1. Merits Discovery

CPH, MAFCO, Morgan Stanley, and MSSF are actively pursuing written and deposition discovery in these consolidated actions. The parties have exchanged hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, have served and answered multiple sets of interrogatories and requests for admission, and have deposed more than two dozen party and non-party witnesses. Discovery in both cases is ongoing.

At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley informed the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates — approximately seventy (70) additional depositions would need to be completed before the close of fact discovery. Thereafter, on or about March 11, the parties agreed to take alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions.

Since the February 20 Case Management Conference, seventeen (17) additional depositions have been completed. Seven (7) more depositions have been scheduled and are confirmed for the weeks and months ahead. Morgan Stanley has seven (7) outstanding requests for deposition dates of CPH and MAFCO witnesses — and has attempted to secure deposition dates for several additional non-party witnesses.

In their Position on Discovery (below), CPH and MAFCO correctly point out that Morgan Stanley did not begin taking depositions in these cases until several months after CPH. This is hardly surprising since — unlike CPH and MAFCO — Morgan Stanley has not been a party to any of the prior Sunbeam-related cases. Given their five-year “head start” in collecting and reviewing relevant documents, interviewing witnesses, taking depositions, and litigating Sunbeam-related issues, it should come as no surprise that CPH was prepared to begin taking depositions earlier than Morgan Stanley.¹ Moreover, Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss and Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings was not decided until the middle December 2003. If granted, this motion either would have eliminated the need for costly and expensive depositions or, at a minimum, would have substantially altered the manner in which deposition discovery is conducted in these cases, since the overwhelming majority of party and non-party witnesses in these cases live and work in New York.

The parties have experienced considerable difficulty scheduling depositions in light of scheduling conflicts for counsel on both sides and the location of the witnesses, almost all of whom are located outside of Florida. CPH and MAFCO have offered witnesses for depositions outside of Florida on dates previously established by the Court for Case Management Conferences and have, on several occasions, confirmed (and then canceled or postponed) depositions previously set to go forward.

For example, CPH and MAFCO twice postponed the deposition of Barry Schwartz (now completed), postponed the deposition of Bruce Slovin (now completed), and postponed the deposition of James Robinson, for various reasons ranging from "unavoidable conflicts" to "medical emergencies." Another CPH / MAFCO witness, Lawrence Jones, was only available on a day that had been previously scheduled by the Court for a Case Management Conference, and is now expected to be unavailable for an unspecified amount of time due to upcoming surgery. Similar scheduling considerations have required Morgan Stanley to postpone the depositions of other deposition witnesses, many of whom no longer work for Morgan Stanley and are no longer under its control.

Even when depositions have been successfully scheduled, the parties have experienced difficulties beyond their control that have prevented the deposition from going forward. When Mr. Schwartz's deposition was finally scheduled and confirmed for June 18, for example, the deposition needed to be postponed (for a third time) because Morgan Stanley's attorneys were unable to make it to New York for the deposition due to inclement weather and cancelled flights.

Morgan Stanley is of course willing to accommodate the legitimate scheduling considerations of witnesses and their counsel — but these schedule conflicts and difficulties have prevented the parties from proceeding with depositions at the pace contemplated during the February 20 Case Management Conference.

Finally, the parties have had to divert resources away from deposition discovery to address collateral issues unrelated to the merits of these consolidated actions. These issues are discussed in the next section.

2. Non-Merits Discovery

On March 12, CPH filed its Motion For A Rule To Show Cause, which was later converted by the Court into a motion for contempt. On May 14, 2004, the Court converted CPH's Motion for a Rule To Show Cause into a motion to contempt. On March 19, CPH served its first set of interrogatories relating to that motion. Pursuant to an agreement between the parties Morgan Stanley responded to those Interrogatories on June 16, 2004. Morgan Stanley and CPH are in the process of finalizing an agreed-upon order memorializing a stipulation that will facilitate Morgan Stanley supplementing its responses.

On May 28, CPH served its second set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt —together with a set document requests relating to that motion. On that same date, Morgan Stanley served its own interrogatories and requests for documents on CPH relating to CPH's motion for contempt. The parties' responses and objections to this "second wave" of non-merits discovery are due June 28, 2004.

CPH's contempt motion, together with CPH's related Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen Access to Confidential Transcript (filed May 5, 2004) and other motions relating to the confidentiality of documents and pleadings, have required extensive additional briefing, necessitated attendance of counsel at multiple specially-set hearings in Florida, and the preparation of non-merits discovery requests and responses. CPH's objections also have prevented attorneys from Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, and Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHHTE") from participating as co-counsel and assisting with discovery. These satellite issues have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

It is apparent that CPH and MAFCO, acting in concert with Arthur Andersen, are using the non-merits discovery served in these cases to manipulate the proceedings in these consolidated actions and Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA, now pending before Judge Miller. In pleadings filed with Judge Miller, Arthur Andersen has moved for sanctions against Morgan Stanley, sought to disqualify Morgan Stanley's attorneys in that action, and moved to stay all discovery in that action. Simultaneously, CPH (who has professed a "unity of interest" with Arthur Andersen) has sought, through the non-merits discovery served in these consolidated actions, to discover detailed information regarding Morgan Stanley's damages claims in the Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA. CPH seeks this information despite the fact that Arthur Andersen is not a party in these consolidated actions; Kirkland & Ellis LLP does not represent Morgan Stanley in Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA; and CPH has objected to Morgan Stanley's chosen counsel (KHHTE) from appearing in these consolidated actions.

The satellite issues and gamesmanship described in this section have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

B. CPH'S And MAFCO's Position On Discovery

CPH and MAFCO stipulate only to the first paragraph of Section II.A above. CPH and MAFCO object to the remaining statements concerning discovery as incomplete, misleading, and self-serving on the part of Morgan Stanley and MSSF, because it is quite clear that this case is on track to be tried as scheduled in January 2005. CPH and MAFCO expressed these objections to Morgan Stanley and MSSF, and requested that a neutral statement of the discovery status be substituted, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF refused that request. Consequently, CPH and MAFCO provide the account of discovery that follows.

1. Deposition Discovery

As of June 25, 2004, 33 depositions have been taken. Of those depositions, 26 have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and 7 have been taken by Morgan Stanley and MSSF:

In addition, both sides have requested deposition dates for certain individuals, and expressed interest in deposing still other individuals. Although Morgan Stanley and MSSF make it sound as if scheduling issues have been caused only by CPH, in fact, Morgan Stanley and MSSF frequently have delayed providing dates for depositions and have changed previously set dates. In any event, Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's finger-pointing is irrelevant, because there is no motion pending before this Court concerning deposition scheduling -- indeed, to date, no such motion ever has been filed.²

² As for the charge of Morgan Stanley and MSSF that they "did not obtain access to the overwhelming majority of documents in this case until September 2003," and that CPH only "began to" produce documents then, those statements are wrong. In timely response to the document requests of Morgan Stanley and MSSF, CPH made the vast majority of its documents available for review on August 15, 2003 and the review began then. By September 8, 2003, as a letter written by counsel for Morgan Stanley and MSSF confirms, CPH's document production was "substantially completed." That was before any deposition had occurred.

Concerning the statement of counsel for Morgan Stanley and MSSF at the February 20, 2004 hearing that at least 70 depositions would need to be completed before the fact discovery cut-off, CPH and MAFCO believe that counsel's estimate is exaggerated. In any event, given that approximately 10 attorneys presently are appearing for Morgan Stanley and MSSF in this case, Morgan Stanley and MSSF certainly have the resources to complete all necessary depositions before the September 3, 2004 discovery cut-off.

2. Discovery concerning CPH's motion for contempt

The interrogatories served thus far are as follows:

PARTY SERVING	SERVICE DATE	DATE DUE	RESPONSE RECEIVED
CPH to Morgan Stanley	March 19	April 19	June 16
MAFCO to MSSF	March 19	April 19	June 16
CPH to Morgan Stanley	May 28	June 28	Not Due
Morgan Stanley to CPH	May 28	June 28	Not Due
Morgan Stanley to CPH	June 10	July 12	Not Due

The document requests served thus far are as follows:

PARTY SERVING	SERVICE DATE	DATE DUE	RESPONSE RECEIVED
CPH to Morgan Stanley	May 28	June 28	Not Due
MS to CPH	May 28	June 28	Not Due
MS to CPH	June 10	July 12	Not Due

CPH intends to serve its responses to the discovery requests that are due on June 28 on that day.

The reason for the delay in CPH's receipt of answers to its first interrogatories on the contempt issue (the interrogatories were served on March 19 but responses were not received until June 16) is because CPH encountered considerable resistance from Morgan Stanley and MSSF. That resistance began on April 16, when Morgan Stanley and MSSF filed a motion for protective order, and the resistance continued even after this Court's May 14 Order allowing CPH's motion for contempt to proceed. Only after CPH scheduled Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's motion for protective order for hearing did Morgan Stanley and MSSF agree to answer the interrogatories.

III. Pretrial Schedule

On February 24, 2004, the Court entered an order setting this matter for trial in January 2005, and on March 23, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order setting the pretrial schedule in this matter and scheduling trial to begin on January 18, 2005.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S SEVENTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") requests that plaintiff produce the documents and things referred to in the following specific requests. The specific requests are preceded by Instructions and Definitions which shall govern the specific requests. Documents and things responsive to these requests should be produced to counsel for Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated at the law firm of Carlton Fields, P.A., 222 Lakeview Avenue, Suite 1200, West Palm Beach, FL 33401, within the time required by Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.350(b) or as otherwise agreed to by the parties or specified by the Court.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.

2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

3. Documents requested and to be produced include all Documents in the possession, custody or control of the plaintiff including, but not limited to, any agents, employees, contractors, attorneys, and consultants or experts working for or in favor of the plaintiff or its attorneys.

4. If, in responding to this Request for Production, you encounter any ambiguities when construing a request or definition, the response shall set forth the matter deemed ambiguous and the construction used in responding.

5. Whenever in this Request you are asked to identify or produce a document which is deemed by you to be properly withheld from production for inspection or copying under claim of privilege (including, but not limited to, the work product doctrine), provide a privilege log that includes: the type of document, the general subject matter of the document, the date of the document, and such other information as is sufficient to identify the document, including, where appropriate, the author, addressee, custodian, and any other recipient of the document, and where not apparent, the relationship of the author, the addressee, custodian, and any other recipient to each other, in a manner that, without revealing the information claimed to be protected, will enable this party to assess the applicability of the privilege protection claimed by you. The privilege log shall be provided within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order.

6. If production of any requested document(s) is objected to on the grounds that production is unduly burdensome, describe the burden or expense of the proposed discovery.

7. When a document contains both privileged and non-privileged material, the non-privileged material must be disclosed to the fullest extent possible without disclosing the privileged material. If a privilege is asserted with regard to part of the material contained in a document, the party claiming the privilege must clearly indicate the portions as to which the privilege is claimed. When a document has been redacted or altered in any fashion, identify as to each document the reason for the redaction or alteration. Any redaction must be clearly visible on the redacted document.

8. If a responsive document exists but is no longer in your possession, custody, or control, state: its date, author(s), recipient(s), subject matter, what disposition was made of the document, and the person or entity, if any, now in possession, custody, or control of the document. If a responsive document has been destroyed, identify the date of destruction, the person who destroyed the document and the person who directed that the document be destroyed and state the reason for its destruction.

STIPULATION REGARDING INTERROGATORIES AND ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. (collectively "CPH"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, stipulate as follows:

1. On March 19, 2004, CPH served Interrogatories upon Morgan Stanley ("Interrogatories"). Pursuant to the Agreement of the parties, Morgan Stanley responded to those Interrogatories on June 16, 2004.

2. At the time it served its responses, Morgan Stanley advised CPH that it would provide additional information to CPH if CPH agreed that the provision of the additional information would not constitute a waiver of any privilege or protection. CPH has agreed to that request, and this Stipulation reflects the parties' agreement.

3. Consequently, the parties stipulate as follows:

- a. Morgan Stanley will provide supplemental responses to CPH's Interrogatories on the close of business on the day after execution of this Stipulation and the entry of the attached Order by the Court.
- b. Morgan Stanley's supplemental response to CPH's Interrogatories will not constitute — and will not be construed as — a waiver of any privilege or protection available to Morgan Stanley, including but not limited to the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. CPH will not argue or assert, in this or any other proceeding, that Morgan Stanley has waived any applicable privilege protection by responding to the Interrogatories.

c. However, this stipulation is without prejudice for CPH to argue waiver based upon facts separate and distinct from the responses served by Morgan Stanley to the interrogatories.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSES TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS CONCERNING COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION FOR CONTEMPT

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"), by and through its attorneys, and pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, responds to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("MS & Co.'s") Request for Production of Documents concerning CPH's Motion for Contempt as follows:

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

CPH objects to MS&Co.'s requests for production, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon CPH any requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the requirements of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order. For example, CPH will not comply with Instruction Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 16 or Definition No. 7 to the extent that they purport to impose on CPH obligations that are not required by Florida rules and case law. CPH will comply with the applicable rules and law.

2. CPH objects to MS&Co.'s requests for production to the extent that they seek the production of any documents or information protected from discovery by reason of the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, the common interest doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule. CPH reserves the right to assert any and all privileges to which CPH is entitled under the law. CPH will provide a log of documents withheld from production on the basis of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule.

3. CPH objects to the extent that any request for production seeks documents that are in the public domain and accessible to all parties. In responding to the requests for production, CPH will produce publicly available documents to the extent that copies exist in CPH's files of otherwise non-public information responsive to these requests.

4. By stating that CPH will produce documents responsive to a particular document request, CPH does not represent that any such documents exist. Rather, CPH is responding that to the extent such documents are located, they will be produced.

5. By stating that CPH will produce responsive documents, CPH does not concede the relevance of any of the produced documents to the subject matter of this litigation or to the admissibility of those documents at trial.

5. CPH's objections and responses are based on a good-faith search for documents within CPH's possession, custody, and control. CPH expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

7. CPH responds to MS&Co.'s document requests without waiving the Initial Objections. CPH incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these Initial Objections into each of the Responses and Further Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES AND FURTHER OBJECTIONS TO REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION

Request No. 1. All documents that you contend support the allegations in the Motion for Contempt.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as duplicative, harassing, and unnecessary because CPH already has provided MS & Co. with all of those documents in connection with the proceedings on CPH's motion for contempt. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 1.

Request No. 2. All documents that you contend support the allegation that Morgan Stanley or its attorneys violated the Confidentiality Order.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as duplicative, harassing, and unnecessary because CPH already has provided MS & Co. with all of those documents in connection with the proceedings on CPH's motion for contempt. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 2.

Request No. 3. All documents that you contend support the allegation that Morgan Stanley or its attorneys disclosed the Settlement Agreement to attorneys from KHTE in violation of the Confidentiality Order.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because MS&Co. has conceded in open court that the settlement agreement was provided to KHTE attorneys. CPH further objects to this request as duplicative, harassing, and unnecessary because CPH already has provided MS & Co. with all of those documents in connection with the proceedings on CPH's motion for contempt. Subject to and without waiving these objections or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 3.

Request No. 4. All documents that you contend support the allegation that Morgan Stanley or its attorneys disclosed the Settlement Agreement to Wachovia Bank.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because CPH has not made the allegation "that Morgan Stanley or its attorneys disclosed the Settlement Agreement to Wachovia Bank." CPH also objects to this request as duplicative, harassing, and unnecessary because CPH already has provided MS & Co. with all of those documents in connection with the proceedings on CPH's motion for contempt. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 4.

Request No. 5. All documents that you contend support the allegation that Morgan Stanley or its attorneys used information derived from the Settlement Agreement in violation of the Confidentiality Order.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as duplicative, harassing, and unnecessary because CPH already has provided MS & Co. with all of those documents in connection with the proceedings on CPH's motion for contempt. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 5.

Request No. 6. All documents reflecting or concerning any communications since May 8, 2001 between or among any of CPH, MAFCO, Arthur Andersen, Jenner & Block, Searcy Denny, and Curtis Mallet regarding the Settlement Agreement.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it seeks documents that are not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence. CPH also objects to this request because it seeks documents that are protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, and the common interest doctrine. CPH will not produce any documents in response to Request No. 6.

Request No. 7. All documents reflecting or concerning any communication between or among CPH, MAFCO, Arthur Andersen, Jenner & Block, Searcy Denny, and Curtis Mallet regarding the investigation and decision to file the Motion for Contempt.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it seeks documents that are not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence. CPH also objects to this request because it seeks documents that are protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, and the common interest doctrine. CPH will not produce any documents in response to Request No. 7.

Request No. 8. All documents reflecting or concerning any communications between or among CPH, MAFCO, Arthur Andersen, Jenner & Block, Searcy Denny, and Curtis Mallet regarding CPH's May 5, 2004 Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen LLP Access to Confidential Information.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it seeks documents that are not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence. CPH also objects to this request because it seeks documents that are protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, and the common interest doctrine. CPH will not produce any documents in response to Request No. 8.

Request No. 9. All documents reflecting or concerning any communications between or among CPH, MAFCO, Arthur Andersen, Jenner & Block, Searcy Denny, and Curtis Mallet regarding Curtis Mallet's letters to Kirkland & Ellis, dated April 22, 2004, April 26, 2004, and May 20, 2004.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it seeks documents that are not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence. CPH also objects to this request because it seeks documents that are protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, and the common interest doctrine. CPH will not produce any documents in response to Request No. 9.

Request No. 10. All documents in your possession on March 12, 2004, or in the possession of your counsel on March 12, 2004, referring or relating to any tolling agreement between Morgan Stanley and Arthur Andersen.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request because it seeks documents that are not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Subject to and without waiving this objection or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce all non-privileged documents within its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 10.

Request No. 11. All documents concerning any investigation undertaken by you or your counsel prior to the filing of the Motion for Contempt that attempted to discover facts concerning the allegations made in that motion.

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. CPH also objects to this interrogatory as seeking the disclosure of communications that are protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, and the common interest doctrine. CPH will not produce any documents in response to Request No. 11

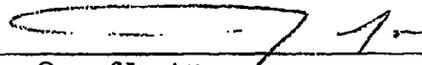

Request No. 12. All documents concerning any Indemnification Agreements between or among CPH, MAFCO, Arthur Andersen, Jenner & Block, Searcy Denny, and Curtis Mallet that relate in any way to claims arising out of the transactions and occurrences that are the subject matter of the above-captioned consolidated actions or Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP, et al., Civil Action No. 2004 CA 002257 (Miller, J.)

RESPONSE: CPH objects to this request as overbroad, not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, and as otherwise seeking information that is not discoverable insofar as the interrogatory seeks documents "concerning" indemnification agreements. Although Rule 1.280(b)(2) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure provides that "[a] party may obtain discovery of the existence and contents of any agreement under which any person may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment that may be entered in the action or to indemnify or to reimburse a party for payments made to satisfy the judgment," that Rule does not authorize discovery of all documents "concerning" indemnification agreements, and CPH therefore will not produce such documents. CPH further objects to Request No. 12 because it is not confined to indemnity agreements entered into with respect to this litigation. Instead, Request No. 12 also seeks documents concerning indemnity agreements entered into with respect to separate litigation, which is not discovery within the contemplation of Rule 1.280(b)(2). Subject to and without waiving these objections or the foregoing Initial Objections, CPH will produce the only document containing an indemnification agreement in its possession, custody, or control responsive to Request No. 12.

MORGAN STANLEY'S OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS CONCERNING ITS MOTION FOR CONTEMPT

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") (collectively "Morgan Stanley") provide the following responses and objections to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Request for Production of Documents Concerning Its Motion for Contempt dated May 28, 2004 ("Request for Production"):

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to the entire Request for Production and apply to each and every Document Request as if fully set forth with respect to each Request:

1. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production to the extent that it seeks materials protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney-work-product doctrine, the common-interest doctrine, or any other applicable constitutional, statutory, or common-law privilege, doctrine, immunity, or rule. Morgan Stanley will exchange with CPH a categorization of documents not produced based on a claim of privilege or discovery immunity within 30 days after Morgan Stanley's production of the documents from which the documents have been withheld on grounds of privilege or discovery immunity, pursuant to the Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement of Time To Prepare Privilege Log entered in the above-captioned consolidated actions on September 4, 2003.

2. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production because it seeks materials that are neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to the subject matter of the pending action as framed by the pleadings in the above-captioned consolidated actions.

3. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production to the extent that it seeks to impose obligations, including a continuing duty of supplementation, different from, or in addition to, those provided in the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, discovery guidelines of this Court, and applicable case law.

4. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production to the extent that it is intended to harass or annoy Morgan Stanley or its employees, to create additional and unnecessary expense for Morgan Stanley, or to serve any other improper purpose. In particular, many of the Document Requests improperly seek — by their express terms — only documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine, the common-interest doctrine, or other applicable privileges and immunities. Such Document Requests are patently improper and appear to have been included for the sole purpose of harassing and annoying Morgan Stanley, and for the improper purpose of requiring Morgan Stanley to incur the burden and expense of preparing a privilege log.

5. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production to the extent that it seeks the production of documents in the possession of third parties and not within Morgan Stanley's possession, custody, or control, including those documents in the sole possession of the law firms of Kirkland & Ellis LLP ("Kirkland & Ellis") and "Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. ("KHHTE").

6. Morgan Stanley objects to the entire Request for Production to the extent that it seeks the production of documents that are publicly available or otherwise equally accessible to both parties, including deposition transcripts and court records.

7. It should not be inferred from the form or substance of any objection or response contained herein that documents responsive to any particular Request exist.

8. Morgan Stanley's responses to CPH's Document Requests shall not be construed in any way as an admission that any definition provided by CPH is either factually correct or legally binding upon Morgan Stanley, or as a waiver of any of Morgan Stanley's Objections, including, but not limited to, objections regarding discoverability and admissibility of documents.

9. Morgan Stanley's objections are based on its good-faith investigations and discovery to date. Morgan Stanley expressly reserves the right to modify and supplement these objections.

OBJECTIONS TO DEFINITIONS AND INSTRUCTIONS

DEFINITIONS AND INSTRUCTIONS NO. 1: The terms "documents" and "concerning" have the meaning ascribed to them in Plaintiff's [CPH's] First Request for Production of Documents.

OBJECTIONS: Morgan Stanley incorporates by reference its objections to these definitions, as set forth in Morgan Stanley's Objections to CPH's First Request for Production of Documents.

DEFINITIONS AND INSTRUCTIONS NO. 5: CPH incorporates the instructions set forth in Plaintiff's [CPH's] First Request for Production of Documents.

OBJECTIONS: Morgan Stanley incorporates by reference its objections to these instructions, as set forth in Morgan Stanley's Objections to CPH's First Request for Production of Documents.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 1: All documents relating to (a) whether and when Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C. ("Kellogg Huber") began representing MS & Co. and/or MSSF in the above-captioned consolidated litigation; (b) whether, when, and what information contained in the Settlement Agreement was disclosed to Kellogg Huber; and/or (c) the scope of responsibilities assumed by Kellogg Huber with respect to the above-captioned consolidated litigation.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks materials protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 2: All documents concerning why firms other than Kirkland & Ellis LLP and Carlton Fields were being retained in the above-captioned consolidated litigation.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks information that is neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Morgan Stanley will not produce documents pursuant to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 3: All documents concerning why firms other than Kirkland & Ellis LLP and Carlton Fields were being retained to file suit against Arthur Andersen.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks information that is neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Morgan Stanley will not produce documents pursuant to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 4: All documents relating to why Morgan Stanley Entities waited until March 1, 2004 to sue Arthur Andersen.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks information that is neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 5: All documents relating to whether the contents of the Settlement Agreement, and/or any other material designated "Confidential," were disclosed to third parties.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that the term "third parties" is vague and ambiguous. For purposes of this Request, Morgan Stanley shall construe "third parties" to mean persons not authorized to receive "Confidential" information under Paragraphs 9 and 10 of the Protective Order. Morgan Stanley denies that the contents of the Settlement Agreement and/or any other material designated as "Confidential" were disclosed to third parties.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client and common-interest privileges and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 6: All documents referring to any portion of the Settlement Agreement.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request as overbroad, unduly burdensome, and not likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Specifically, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it purports to require the production of all documents referring to the Settlement Agreement, including those that relate only to the above-captioned consolidated actions (e.g., Morgan Stanley's potential set-off of damages) and therefore are not relevant to CPH's Motion for Contempt.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 7: All documents relating to Morgan Stanley Entities' use of the Settlement Agreement.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that the phrase "use of the Settlement Agreement" is vague and ambiguous. For purposes of this Request, Morgan Stanley shall construe "use of the Settlement Agreement" to mean the disclosure of any of the terms of the Settlement Agreement to a third party not authorized to receive "Confidential" information under Paragraphs 9 and 10

of the Protective Order, or the disclosure of any "Confidential" information subject to the Protective Order, including disclosure in a court record.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request as overbroad, unduly burdensome, and not likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Specifically, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it purports to require the production of all documents referring to the Settlement Agreement, including those that relate only to the above-captioned consolidated actions (e.g., Morgan Stanley's potential set-off of damages) and therefore are not relevant to CPH's Motion for Contempt. Morgan Stanley also objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, and without waiving any applicable privilege, Morgan Stanley states that it has, in good faith, conducted a search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, and it has located no documents that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 8: All documents relating to Morgan Stanley Entities' purpose in using the Settlement Agreement.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that the phrase "purpose in using the Settlement Agreement" is vague and ambiguous. For purposes of this Request, Morgan Stanley adopts its construction of the phrase "use of the Settlement Agreement" described in its response to Document Request No. 7, supra.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request as overbroad, unduly burdensome, and not likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties.

Specifically, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it purports to require the production of all documents referring to the Settlement Agreement, including those that relate only to the above-captioned consolidated actions (e.g., Morgan Stanley's potential set-off of damages) and therefore are not relevant to CPH's Motion for Contempt. Morgan Stanley also objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, and without waiving any applicable privilege, Morgan Stanley states that it has, in good faith, conducted a search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, and it has located no documents that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 9: All drafts of complaints by any Morgan Stanley Entities against Arthur Andersen, including all versions reflecting any handwritten comments or marginalia, and all documents reflecting when and/or by whom each draft and version was prepared.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client and common-interest privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Accordingly, it is not discoverable.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley states that it has, in good faith, conducted a search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, and it has to date located no non-privileged documents that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 10: All documents relating to any damages that MS & Co. seeks to recover in its claim against Arthur Andersen.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks information that is neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request that this discovery request is not permissible, pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(b).

Subject to and without waiving any objections it might have in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA), and without waiving its specific or general objections above, MS & Co. will provide specific information regarding the amounts and types of damages it has suffered in connection with expert disclosures and discovery requests that are properly served in Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. et al. v. Arthur Andersen LLP et al. (No. CL 04-2257 AA). MS & Co.'s expert disclosures and discovery responses will occur on dates agreed to by the parties or established by Judge Miller in that action.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 11: All documents referring to any advantages Morgan Stanley Entities hope(d) to obtain in the above-captioned consolidated litigation by suing Arthur Andersen.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request on the grounds that the term "any advantages" is vague and ambiguous. Morgan Stanley also objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley states that it has, in good faith, conducted a search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, and it has to date located no non-privileged documents that are responsive to this Request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 12: All documents relating to, or that were a source of information used in preparing, any answers to the interrogatories served on March 19, 2004 and/or on May 28, 2004.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine.

Subject to and without waiving its specific or general objections, Morgan Stanley will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, that are responsive to this Request.

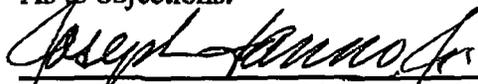

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 13: All documents, including all time sheets and billing records, reflecting time expended and/or the nature of services rendered by Kellogg Huber in either the above-captioned consolidated litigation and/or Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., et al. v.

Arthur Andersen LLP, et al., No. 50-2004-CA-2257-xxxx-NB, from the inception of such services to and including March 1, 2004.

OBJECTIONS: In addition to the general objections stated above, Morgan Stanley objects to this Request to the extent that it seeks information covered by the attorney-client privilege and the attorney-work-product doctrine. Accordingly, it is not discoverable.

Morgan Stanley further objects to this Request on the ground that it seeks information that is neither relevant nor likely to lead to the discovery of evidence related to a matter at issue among the parties. Morgan Stanley will not produce documents pursuant to this Request.

MORGAN STANLEY'S OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO PROPOUND ADDITIONAL INTERROGATORIES

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, opposes Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") Motion for Leave to Propound Additional Interrogatories, and states as follows:

1. On June 29, 2004, CPH served its Motion for Leave. On the same day, CPH noticed the Motion for Leave to be heard at the Case Management Conference ("CMC") on July 2, 2004.

Coleman v. Morgan Stanley

2. Pursuant to this Court's Order setting the CMC dated February 24, 2004, all motions to be heard must be filed at least one-week before the hearing. Consequently, any motion to be heard on July 2, 2004 should have been filed and served on or before June 25, 2004. Since CPH did not file its Motion for Leave until June 29, 2004, just 2 days before the CMC, the Motion for Leave should not be heard. Additionally, given the late filing of the Motion, counsel have not had an opportunity to discuss whether an agreement could be reached.

3. Moreover, the Motion for Leave on its face is insufficient. The Motion fails to set forth good cause for permitting CPH to propound additional Interrogatories.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court decline to hear CPH's Motion until a later date, or, in the alternative, deny the Motion as insufficient together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes
Holdings, Inc., et al

Dear Mike:

Enclosed please find an amended notice of deposition for Mr. Duffy. As we discussed, his deposition will occur on July 8, 2004. Although CSFB offered Mr. Geller on June 7, 2004 and Morgan Stanley was prepared to proceed, CPH stated that it could not attend the deposition on that date. We will therefore work with CSFB to find another date for Mr. Geller's deposition.

Sincerely,

Zhonette M. Brown

MORGAN STANLEY'S OBJECTION TO PLAINTIFF'S SUBPOENA DUCES TECUM WITHOUT DEPOSITION AND MOTION TO QUASH

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, objects to Plaintiffs' Subpoena Duces Tecum Without Deposition, and states as follows:

1. On June 29, 2004, Plaintiff served a Subpoena Duces Tecum Without Deposition directed to the Records Custodian of Wachovia Bank. The only method for obtaining documents from a non-party without a deposition is provided in Fla. R. Civ. P., Rule 1.351. This Rule provides in part:

A party desiring production under this rule shall serve notice on every other party of intent to serve a subpoena under this rule at least 10 days before the subpoena is issued if service is by delivery and 15 days before the subpoena is issued if served by mail.

2. Plaintiff failed to comply with Rule 1.351 because no notice of intent was provided to other parties in this action. Therefore, the Subpoena is invalid and should be quashed.

3. To the extent the Subpoena has not been served and Plaintiff requests that the Court consider the June 29, 2004 subpoena as a Notice of Intent, Morgan Stanley objects to the issuance of the proposed subpoena.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court quash the subpoena directed to Wachovia Bank, N.A. dated June 29, 2004 and award such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

STIPULATION REGARDING INTERROGATORIES AND ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.

(collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. (collectively "CPH"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, stipulate as follows:

1. On June 30, 2004, Morgan Stanley produced to CPH certain documents responsive to CPH's Request for Production of Documents Concerning Its Motion for Contempt ("Document Request").

2. Morgan Stanley has advised CPH that it is willing to produce the retention letter sent by Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. ("Retention Letter") in response to the Document Request if the parties agree that the production of that Retention Letter will not be deemed to be a waiver of privilege.

3. Consequently, the parties stipulate that:

- a. Morgan Stanley's production of the Retention Letter will not constitute — and will not be construed as — a waiver of any privilege or protection available to Morgan Stanley, including but not limited to the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. CPH will not argue or assert, in this or any other proceeding, that Morgan Stanley has waived any applicable privilege protection by producing the Retention Letter.
- b. This stipulation is without prejudice to CPH's right to argue waiver based upon facts separate and distinct from the production of the Retention Letter in response to the Document Request.

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO RESCHEDULE CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE AND TO AMEND HEARING PROCEDURES

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through their undersigned attorneys, file this Motion to Reschedule the Case Management Conference on July 23, 2004 and to amend the hearing procedures in this matter, and state as follows:

1. By Order dated February 24, 2004, this Court scheduled numerous Case Management Conferences ("CMC"). The next CMC is scheduled for July 23, 2004 at 9:00 a.m. with two hours reserved.

Coleman v. Morgan Stanley

2. Mr. Bemis, one of Morgan Stanley's lead attorneys, is scheduled to be out of the country from July 15, 2004 through July 25, 2004 and is unavailable to attend this hearing either in person or by telephone. Therefore, Morgan Stanley requests the Court to reschedule this hearing to another date.

3. Currently, there are no motions filed that are scheduled to be heard at the July 23rd CMC; therefore, there is no prejudice if this hearing is continued.

4. Additionally, Morgan Stanley, requests that this Court amend the hearing procedures set forth in the Court's February 24, 2004 Order.

5. Currently, any motion scheduled to be heard must be filed one week prior to the hearing. This procedure is not feasible since Plaintiff is filing substantive motions late on the Friday before the CMC. This practice deprives Morgan Stanley of a meaningful opportunity to review and research the motions and, at the same time, prepare and file a response by the following Wednesday. Moreover, this procedure does not allow the Court sufficient time to review any response memorandum prior to the hearing.

6. Morgan Stanley requests that the Court amend the hearing procedures to provide that all Motions must be filed a minimum of two weeks prior to the hearing and that any response memoranda are filed one week prior to the hearing.

7. Counsel for Morgan Stanley was advised that counsel for Plaintiff objects to a continuance of the hearing scheduled for July 23, 2004.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court reschedule the Case Management Conference and amend the hearing procedures as set forth above and award such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

In open Court counsel for Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), represented that Defendant's Supplemental Answers included a complete answer to interrogatory 2, excluding those individuals or entities identified in subparagraphs 9(c) and 9(h) of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, and that no individuals or entities identified in subparagraph 9(h) have received copies of the Settlement Agreement.

This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"), sold its 82% interest in the Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman"), to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF"), and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

CPH sued Arthur Andersen, Sunbeam's auditors and advisors, in 2001, alleging that Arthur Andersen made misrepresentations concerning Sunbeam's financial condition which CPH relied on in selling Coleman to Sunbeam in return for Sunbeam stock. That action settled in October, 2002 under a written Settlement Agreement ("Settlement Agreement").

In 2003, CPH sued Morgan Stanley here alleging claims arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy, and seeks damages of at least $485 million. Later in 2003, MSSF filed suit alleging that, in the course of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the "synergies" that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that MAFCO and CPH's inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam's lenders, including MSSF, to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. These suits have been consolidated.

Defendants sought production of the CPH/Arthur Andersen Settlement Agreement in this case. By Order filed December 18, 2003, the Court ordered its production, subject to the terms of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order ("Confidentiality Order"), which limited its dissemination and use.

By its Motion for Order to Show Cause, since renominated as a Motion for Contempt

by the Court, Plaintiff alleges that Defendants violated the December 18, 2003 Order and the Confidentiality Order by disseminating the Settlement Agreement more broadly than permitted and by using it for an improper purpose: Plaintiff claims that the Settlement Agreement's indemnification provision motivated MS & Co. to be included as a co-plaintiff in Defendants' suit against Arthur Anderson.

Plaintiff points to circumstantial evidence to support its motion: MS & Co. had to be included in the suit to trigger the indemnification provision under the Settlement Agreement; MS & Co. sued Arthur Andersen shortly after the Settlement Agreement was produced; and the basis for MS & Co.'s claim, as opposed to MSSF's claim, is not apparent.

At both the April 30 and July 2, 2004 hearings, counsel for MS & Co. attempted to persuade the Court that Plaintiff's conclusions were inaccurate. Specifically, counsel for MS & Co. repeatedly disclosed privileged information to the Court, including the reasons for and timing of his client's retention of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C; the scope of Kellogg, Huber's duties; and the reasons why the filing of the suit against Arthur Andersen was delayed. Repeatedly, when given the opportunity to withdraw the representations, he refused. Plaintiff claims this waived any privilege on the items disclosed and related matters. MS & Co. claims it did not.

MS & Co. had the choice of standing on its attorney-client and work product privileges, and refusing to divulge privileged information about the need for alternate counsel and the timing of the Arthur Andersen suit and its perceived merits, or waiving the privilege and permitting a full vetting of the subject. It may not do what it has attempted to do here, though, and selectively reveal only such privileged information as it believes helps its position. The conclusion is inescapable that Defendant MS & Co. has waived any privilege with respect to the reasons for and timing of the retention the Kellogg, Huber law firm; the scope of its representation; and the timing of the Arthur Andersen suit. See Fla. Stat. §90.507; Hamilton v. Hamilton Steel Corporation, 409 So. 2d 1111, 1114 (Fla. 4th

The Court finds, though, that MS & Co. has not waived any work product or attorney-client privilege as to the role, if any, the Settlement Agreement may have played in the filing of the subsequent litigation. Instead, the Court accepts MS & Co.'s position that its counsel's statement that ". . . there simply is no temporal or factual or legal connection between the Arthur Andersen complaint and the settlement agreement . . . Morgan Stanley didn't use the settlement agreement in . . . the Andersen complaint" [April 30, 2004 Tr. page 58, line 12] was intended to mean only that the Andersen complaint was not "brought" on the settlement agreement, as contemplated by Rule 1.130 (a), Fla. R. Civ. P., not that it was not motivated by the existence of the Settlement Agreement.

MS & Co. appears to argue, though, that if that privilege has not been waived, then its answer to Interrogatory 1 would necessarily require disclosure of privileged information. That conclusion does not necessarily follow. First, a simple yes or no does not require disclosure of either the existence or content of attorney-client communications or work product. Second, MS & Co. may have independently evaluated the impact of the Settlement Agreement and made a decision, without advice from or communication about its implications with counsel. Consequently, even an elaborated answer may not contain privileged information.

Finally, the Court agrees with Defendant that Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt cannot

¹"to us it would appear that even if a privilege would have existed, it was waived in this instance. It is black letter law that once the privilege is waived, and the horse is out of the barn, it cannot be reinvoked. In the instant case, single counsel showed up at a hearing and publicly announced on behalf of all his clients all of the details of the settlement. Later some of his clients and he himself now claim certain details of that same settlement to be 'confidential.' We cannot agree, for the settlement supposedly in its entirety, had already been publicly announced to third parties, including the judge, at the settlement hearing. An explanation of any inconsistencies now appearing must be forthcoming outside of any claim of privilege."

Hamilton at 1114.

be used to justify delving into Defendant's use of confidential documents other than the Settlement Agreement.

Based on the foregoing and on the proceedings before the Court, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that MS & Co., Inc., is bound by its counsel's representation that its Supplemental Answers included a complete answer to Interrogatory 2, excluding those individuals or entities identified in subparagraphs 9 (c) and 9 (h) of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, and that no individuals or entities identified in subparagraph 9 (h) of the Confidentiality Order have received copies of the Settlement Agreement. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Motion is Granted, in part. Interrogatory 2 is amended by interlineation to delete "any information designated as 'confidential' including but not limited to". Defendant shall serve on Plaintiff its complete answers to interrogatories 2, as so amended, and 4 and those portions of interrogatory 3 for which there is no privilege claim, within 20 days. It is further ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that within 20 days, MS & Co. shall submit directly to the Court, in a sealed envelope marked "DO NOT OPEN PER JULY 12, 2004 COURT ORDER": (i) its complete answer to Interrogatory 1 and the portions of the answers to interrogatory 3 omitted based on privilege, with all privileged information highlighted; (ii) affidavit(s) detailing the specific factual basis to support each privilege claim; (iii) any legal argument to support the privilege claims; and (iv) a copy of the Interrogatories and this Order. The Court shall reseal the items tendered and place them in the Court file following ruling on MS & Co.'s objections. The resealed item may not be unsealed or removed from the court file absent subsequent order of this or an appellate court. Those portions of (ii) and (iii) over which MS & Co. claims no privilege and the portions of the answers not claimed to be privileged shall be served on Plaintiff. Plaintiff shall serve any response to MS & Co.'s legal argument within 10 days of its service.

1 (Whereupon, the following proceedings were had:).

2 THE COURT: This is Judge Maass. Who do I
3 have on the phone?

4 MR. MARMER: Morning, this is Ron Marmer.

5 THE COURT: I have you on the speaker
6 phone in the courtroom in Coleman and Morgan
7 Stanley. Why don't you come forward so she can
8 hear. We wanted to reschedule the case
9 management conference that is September the 10 23rd.

11 MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor. Joe Ianno
12 here on behalf of Morgan Stanley, the senior 13 funding plaintiff in the other case. As you may 14 recall back in February we scheduled numerous
15 case management conferences. The next one
16 scheduled is July 23rd, a week from this Friday.
17 At the time we scheduled them no one had 18 coordinated a schedule. Mr. Bemis who is the 19 lead counsel and has been arguing all the 20 hearings in the last two months for Morgan
21 Stanley is out of the country starting tomorrow
22 for ten days. He won't be available. We have 23 asked to reschedule it a week, if possible,
24 whatever, the court has on its schedule. As it
25 sits right now there is not a single motion that

00004

1 has been filed or noticed for hearing at the
2 case management conference. So there is no
3 prejudice to any party. Now, I talked to Mr.
4 Scarola about this. He said the attorneys for 5 Jenner and Block were objecting to this. What 6 we suspect and the reason for the second part of 7 our motion is on Friday we are going to get a
8 slue of motions that were supposes to be

16div-005614

9 scheduled for the following Friday. That is 10 what has been happening throughout this case.
11 That results in the court getting these multiple
12 binders for the case.

13 THE COURT: Ask the bailiff to step in.

14 MR. IANNO: And that results in the court
15 getting as you have seen in the last couple of 16 case management conferences the first binder,
17 the second binder, then a complete binder. What 18 we are asking the court to do is amend their 19 hearing procedures in this case to provide that 20 the motions to be heard be filed two weeks prior 21 to the case management conference and then any 22 responsive memoranda be filed one week prior to 23 the case management conference and that the 24 party responsible for filing either the 25 responsive memoranda, we can work this out

00005

1 amongst ourselves because what is happening
2 now --

3 THE COURT: I understand what you are
4 saying. Response.

5 MS. BAKER: I'm saying -- Ms. Baker. I'm
6 here for Jack Scarola. Ron Marmer can better
7 address these issues.

8 THE COURT: What did you want to say?

9 MS. BAKER: Here is the one.

10 THE COURT: Is that him? We lost him.
11 Call it. I need the book. Thanks.

12 MR. MARMER: We were not connected. After
13 I said good morning, Your Honor, and my name
14 there was a beeping sound and we heard nothing
15 further.

16 THE COURT: What Mr. Ianno was suggesting
17 is there was nothing set at the case management
18 conference right now that he believes perhaps
19 plaintiffs are objecting only because they
20 intend to file a big binder on Friday with
21 substantive motions and they will have
22 insufficient time to respond. He was suggesting
23 two things, won, the case management conference
24 being reset and two that the case management
25 orders be amended to require motions be served

00006

1 two weeks before the case management hearing,
2 responses within one week and they then
3 coordinate my getting a single binder that
4 includes both the motions and the response.
5 What is your argument both in opposition I guess
6 to resetting the case management case conference
7 and amending the case management award?

8 MR. MARMER: Yes, Your Honor, there is.
9 Thank you. We do oppose both of those requests.
10 First with regard to the July 23 case management

16div-005615

11 conference, we do intent to file motions. The
12 state in Morgan Stanley papers says there is
13 nothing set yet which is not surprising because
14 the motions are not due until this Friday. We 15 do fully expect to be filing several motions for
16 the hearing on July 23, that have been the 17 subject of some correspondence between the
18 parties. So I don't think they will come to any 19 surprise to Morgan Stanley. With regards to the
20 the discovery time, case management conference,
21 itself, we understand that Mr. Bemis has a
22 scheduling conflict and we would normally try to
23 accommodate him on that. Unfortunately, with
24 the discovery cut-off coming up of September 3,
25 we really believe we need to stick to our 00007

1 existing hearing. We have really three case
2 management conferences, including July 23
3 between now and the close of discovery, July 23,
4 August 13 and August 27. And when those were
5 set back in February, on February 20th of the 6 court's hearing then, the whole point of that
7 was the parties foresaw that as we got towards
8 the close of discovery, we likely would need
9 more of the court's time. We therefore set more
10 frequent conferences and the court allowed us
11 two hours for those including --

12 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

13 MR. MARMER: I think that is right. That
14 is entirely important that we keep it and there
15 is no easy way to move these dates. Both
16 Fridays are both terrible for us.

17 THE COURT: Let me --

18 MR. MARMER: We appreciate Mr. Bemis has a
19 scheduling issue and we would normally be
20 sympathetic to that and are sympathetic to that.
21 The fact of the matter is everybody has been
22 planning around those days, February 20th. We
23 all locked them into our schedule. With regard
24 to moving it, we very much oppose that and do
25 expect to present several motions.

00008

1 THE COURT: What are the motions you
2 expect to present?

3 MR. MARMER: Which motions?

4 THE COURT: Tell me right now what the
5 motions are.

6 MR. MARMER: I'm sorry, sometimes the
7 first couple words get cut off. The answer is
8 we had one motion which is going to address
9 essentially a deficiency in the verification of
10 the interrogatories that Morgan Stanley Funding
11 has filed, the partial has verified, one in 12 particular of their sets of the interrogatories

16div-005616

13 he had his deposition taken at which point he
14 basically says "Beats me, I don't know anything
15 about this." That is fast on the heels of a
16 series of other depositions where we have not
17 been able to get to the bottom, the gist of it
18 has to do with the nature of the claims in the 19 Morgan Stanley Funding case against us. So one
20 of our motions attacks that. We have another
21 motion which we will deal with lifting certain
22 confidentiality designations from certain of the
23 pleadings, making a second motion on that as 24 well as relating -- I think it would be the 25 second one, in general it will be

00009

1 nonconfidential motion. We are going to ask
2 Your Honor to designate four words in the recent
3 order that Your Honor entered and is
4 confidential and redact them and then we have at
5 least a fourth motion which is going to deal
6 with our second wave of content discovery. Your
7 Honor has ruled on the first four
8 interrogatories. We subsequently had filed
9 additional discovery requests and there is
10 considerable disputes between the parties
11 concerning those. There are several other
12 matters where we are awaiting responses.
13 Hopefully we will get them today from Morgan
14 Stanley on some other outstanding discovery
15 requests, depending on what those responses are,
16 there may or may not be some other issues up.
17 But those are just the issues that we presently
18 have in the works and expect to be filing on
19 Friday.

20 THE COURT: Which one of these did you
21 know or not know about?

22 MR. IANNO: The one that I knew about was
23 the motion that was directed to the contempt
24 interrogatories and based --

25 THE COURT: That is the last one you

00010

1 referred to?

2 MR. IANNO: That is the one we expected
3 was coming. We were going to say with that, we
4 think that is premature until the court finishes
5 the rules on the first set. The order was just
6 received by us yesterday and I assume Mr. Marmer
7 received that same order. So we think the court
8 ought to finish with that set. We think that is
9 premature. With regard to the verification and
10 lifting of confidentiality designation, I'm
11 personally not aware of what those issues relate
12 to. I know I have seen some letters requesting
13 that. I think we can work those out in all
14 likelihood. They can all wait a week. There is

16div-005617

15 no real pressing thing that goes to the merits
16 of this case.

17 THE COURT: I understand what you are
18 telling me. The problem is I don't have time
19 the next week. I leave for vacation after work
20 on the 30th and I don't have any time on the 21 30th. I'm gone the following Friday and then we
22 are in August.

23 MR. IANNO: August 13th. There is nothing
24 here that deals with the merits of the case that
25 can't wait till August 13, if we expand the time
00011

1 on August 13th to two hours if the court had the
2 time available.

3 THE COURT: We don't.

4 MR. IANNO: In two hours we ought to be
5 able to address this. It goes to the heart of
6 the matter, Judge. If we have these motions on
7 a regular case --

8 THE COURT: I understand that. I would
9 agree that is something we need to change. I
10 can tell you I'm not inclined to reset the case
11 management conference. That is set next Friday.
12 In all honesty you are perfectly competent to
13 argue any of these things. I have no doubt that
14 your client is not going to be injured if you do
15 them and not Mr. Bemis.

16 That said I would agree that we can't have
17 a flood of substantive motions served one week
18 before we are expected to argue them. Today is
19 Wednesday. It would strike me for the case
20 management conference that is set next Friday we
21 need motions served by I think close of business
22 Thursday at least shorten it. You guys make up
23 your mind if you are serving them or not and we
24 can't been doing substantive motions the last
25 day for service. It is not fair. And then from 00012

1 now on I would agree the motions need to be
2 served two weeks before the case management
3 conference with a week to respond.

4 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer. I could
5 just respond to that, expressly, I don't want to
6 argue it, not address the court's point at all.
7 The one thing that we need to contemplate in
8 that two weeks point is that because the case
9 management conferences are actually scheduled
10 now two weeks apart, what is going to happen is
11 that on July 23 when we are at the case
12 management conference we will that day then have
13 to file any motions that will be heard on August
14 13, and on the August 13th case management
15 conference we will that day have to file any
16 motions for August 27. I'm wondering if whether

17 we couldn't adapt this just a bit to make it
18 maybe instead of one week ahead, maybe ten days
19 ahead or something --

20 THE COURT: What are --

21 MR. MARMER: -- so there is a little
22 window of opportunity and we are not at the case
23 management conference and trying to finalize
24 motions on the same day.

25 THE COURT: We have August 13th and when 00013

1 is the next one after that?

2 MR. MARMER: August 27th.

3 THE COURT: Then when after that?

4 MR. MARMER: Then we have the close of
5 discovery, out of the normal. There are some
6 other things. Those are the two.

7 THE COURT: Just the two.

8 MR. MARMER: Before, July 23, August 13.

9 THE COURT: Any objection for those two
10 requiring them ten days ahead of time?

11 MR. MARMER: The close of discovery there
12 is more stuff coming.

13 MR. IANNO: For the August 13th, Judge,
14 that would be like July 30th.

15 THE COURT: That is okay. We are really
16 only -- really only talking August 27.

17 MR. IANNO: We do that one ten days.
18 Judge, can I make a request, an ore tenus
19 request, is that the one motion that is really
20 problematic because Mr. Bemis isn't here is the
21 one dealing with interrogatories because really
22 he has to argue that for the client's behalf.
23 He is the one that has been involved in that.
24 It is the same motion we have heard. It is just 25 dealing with the different set of

00014

1 interrogatories. Those issues are really the
2 same and I'm sure the client would not want me
3 arguing those. As competent as the court may
4 think, that really is Mr. Bemis' area. The
5 other ones perhaps other attorneys can argue but
6 the most compelling interrogatories on the
7 contempt motion, we ask that the court postponed
8 it until August 13. If the court gave us 20
9 days.

10 THE COURT: I know. What is the response
11 to the request that that one motion not be heard
12 next Friday?

13 MR. MARMER: Our feeling is this has been
14 really a subject of extensive delay. We did get
15 Your Honor's ruling and we sent a letter off
16 promptly yesterday after getting the order to
17 the attorneys for Morgan Stanley and said we
18 think that Your Honor's ruling actually takes

16div-005619

19 into account virtually all of the disputes that
20 exist as to the new set. So our feeling was 21 they ought to be able to tell us now. We
22 understand you used to have all these
23 objections. The judge ruled on whole chunks of 24 this dispute, in her word. In light of the 25 judge's ruling, why don't you get back to us and 00015

1 let us know in which instances you are going
2 to -- you may want to preserve your position but
3 in which instances are you going to agree with
4 us that given the rulings that had already had
5 come down, here is where we are at and let's
6 procedure the same way. If there is some area
7 that is not addressed by the Judge's rulings
8 let's get those tendered up so we can get any
9 new feature that you believe is presented from
10 the court for ruling so we aren't waiting and
11 waiting and waiting. This is a matter that has
12 been extended for months and months.

13 THE COURT: Where is Mr. Bemis going to be
14 on vacation?

15 MR. IANNO: He is out of the country. He
16 is on a vacation.

17 THE COURT: Where out of the country?

18 MR. IANNO: Somewhere up in the North
19 Atlantic, I think and that is why he is not even
20 available by telephone.

21 THE COURT: Do this by telephone.

22 MR. IANNO: He is going to be out of
23 touch.

24 THE COURT: When is he leaving and coming
25 back.

00016

1 MR. IANNO: Leaving tomorrow. The 25th.
2 Gone from the 14th, I guess, 15th through the
3 25th.

4 MR. MARMER: Your Honor, while we are
5 sympathetic to people wanting to take vacations
6 let us say we scheduled our vacations and our
7 client commitments based on what Your Honor
8 ruled on February 20th when everything was
9 there, including Mr. Bemis where he
10 affirmatively accepted the dates that were
11 discussed. So our view is this is not any kind
12 of unfair surprise or effort on our part to
13 manipulate the schedule or set something for a
14 special hearing on a date that no one could
15 anticipate. Everybody knew since February 20th
16 to lock these dates in and plan around it, which
17 we have done.

18 THE COURT: In all honesty on this, I
19 don't want to say we won't hear that motion. I
20 understand what you are telling me. We have not

16div-005620

21 even seen it. For all I know it is going to be
22 straightforward or it is not going to be
23 straightforward so I am not going to rule on 24 that part now. I understand what it is you are 25 telling me. Is it plaintiff is going to file a

00017

1 motion to compel answers to interrogatories or
2 are there objections to interrogatories we are
3 calling up?

4 MR. MARMER: We are filing motions to
5 compel and there is also on the contempt part
6 there is also a discovery request that is
7 directed to documents as well as
8 interrogatories.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Let me do an order and
10 you each get a copy. I am going to defer ruling
11 on your ore tenus motion to continue those
12 hearings dealing with the contempt. I want to 13 see what they are. Okay. Okay. Thank you very 14 much. Bye. Thanks, sir.

15 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

16 (Whereupon, the taking of the hearing
17 was concluded at or about 9:00 o'clock a.m.)

10 THE COURT: Is that him? We lost him.
11 Call it. I need the book. Thanks.

12 MR. MARMER: We were not connected. After
13 I said good morning, Your Honor, and my name
14 there was a beeping sound and we heard nothing
15 further.

16 THE COURT: What Mr. Ianno was suggesting
17 is there was nothing set at the case management
18 conference right now that he believes perhaps
19 plaintiffs are objecting only because they
20 intend to file a big binder on Friday with
21 substantive motions and they will have
22 insufficient time to respond. He was suggesting
23 two things, won, the case management conference
24 being reset and two that the case management
25 orders be amended to require motions be served

00006

1 two weeks before the case management hearing,
2 responses within one week and they then
3 coordinate my getting a single binder that
4 includes both the motions and the response.
5 What is your argument both in opposition I guess
6 to resetting the case management case conference
7 and amending the case management award?

8 MR. MARMER: Yes, Your Honor, there is.
9 Thank you. We do oppose both of those requests.
10 First with regard to the July 23 case management

11 conference, we do intent to file motions. The
12 state in Morgan Stanley papers says there is
13 nothing set yet which is not surprising because
14 the motions are not due until this Friday. We 15 do fully expect to be filing several motions for
16 the hearing on July 23, that have been the
17 subject of some correspondence between the
18 parties. So I don't think they will come to any 19 surprise to Morgan Stanley. With regards to the
20 the discovery time, case management conference,
21 itself, we understand that Mr. Bemis has a
22 scheduling conflict and we would normally try to
23 accommodate him on that. Unfortunately, with
24 the discovery cut-off coming up of September 3,
25 we really believe we need to stick to our 00007

1 existing hearing. We have really three case
2 management conferences, including July 23
3 between now and the close of discovery, July 23,
4 August 13 and August 27. And when those were
5 set back in February, on February 20th of the
6 court's hearing then, the whole point of that
7 was the parties foresaw that as we got towards
8 the close of discovery, we likely would need
9 more of the court's time. We therefore set more
10 frequent conferences and the court allowed us
11 two hours for those including --

12 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

13 MR. MARMER: I think that is right. That
14 is entirely important that we keep it and there
15 is no easy way to move these dates. Both
16 Fridays are both terrible for us.

17 THE COURT: Let me --

18 MR. MARMER: We appreciate Mr. Bemis has a
19 scheduling issue and we would normally be
20 sympathetic to that and are sympathetic to that.
21 The fact of the matter is everybody has been
22 planning around those days, February 20th. We
23 all locked them into our schedule. With regard
24 to moving it, we very much oppose that and do
25 expect to present several motions.

00008

1 THE COURT: What are the motions you
2 expect to present?

3 MR. MARMER: Which motions?

4 THE COURT: Tell me right now what the
5 motions are.

6 MR. MARMER: I'm sorry, sometimes the
7 first couple words get cut off. The answer is
8 we had one motion which is going to address
9 essentially a deficiency in the verification of
10 the interrogatories that Morgan Stanley Funding
11 has filed, the partial has verified, one in
12 particular of their sets of the interrogatories

13 he had his deposition taken at which point he
14 basically says "Beats me, I don't know anything
15 about this." That is fast on the heels of a
16 series of other depositions where we have not
17 been able to get to the bottom, the gist of it
18 has to do with the nature of the claims in the
19 Morgan Stanley Funding case against us. So one
20 of our motions attacks that. We have another
21 motion which we will deal with lifting certain
22 confidentiality designations from certain of the
23 pleadings, making a second motion on that as
24 well as relating -- I think it would be the 25 second one, in general it will be

00009

1 nonconfidential motion. We are going to ask
2 Your Honor to designate four words in the recent
3 order that Your Honor entered and is
4 confidential and redact them and then we have at
5 least a fourth motion which is going to deal
6 with our second wave of content discovery. Your
7 Honor has ruled on the first four
8 interrogatories. We subsequently had filed
9 additional discovery requests and there is
10 considerable disputes between the parties
11 concerning those. There are several other
12 matters where we are awaiting responses.
13 Hopefully we will get them today from Morgan
14 Stanley on some other outstanding discovery
15 requests, depending on what those responses are,
16 there may or may not be some other issues up.
17 But those are just the issues that we presently
18 have in the works and expect to be filing on
19 Friday.

20 THE COURT: Which one of these did you
21 know or not know about?

22 MR. IANNO: The one that I knew about was
23 the motion that was directed to the contempt
24 interrogatories and based --

25 THE COURT: That is the last one you

00010

1 referred to?

2 MR. IANNO: That is the one we expected
3 was coming. We were going to say with that, we
4 think that is premature until the court finishes
5 the rules on the first set. The order was just
6 received by us yesterday and I assume Mr. Marmer
7 received that same order. So we think the court
8 ought to finish with that set. We think that is
9 premature. With regard to the verification and
10 lifting of confidentiality designation, I'm
11 personally not aware of what those issues relate
12 to. I know I have seen some letters requesting
13 that. I think we can work those out in all
14 likelihood. They can all wait a week. There is

15 no real pressing thing that goes to the merits
16 of this case.

17 THE COURT: I understand what you are
18 telling me. The problem is I don't have time
19 the next week. I leave for vacation after work
20 on the 30th and I don't have any time on the 21 30th. I'm gone the following Friday and then we
22 are in August.

23 MR. IANNO: August 13th. There is nothing
24 here that deals with the merits of the case that
25 can't wait till August 13, if we expand the time
00011

1 on August 13th to two hours if the court had the
2 time available.

3 THE COURT: We don't.

4 MR. IANNO: In two hours we ought to be
5 able to address this. It goes to the heart of
6 the matter, Judge. If we have these motions on
7 a regular case --

8 THE COURT: I understand that. I would
9 agree that is something we need to change. I
10 can tell you I'm not inclined to reset the case
11 management conference. That is set next Friday.
12 In all honesty you are perfectly competent to
13 argue any of these things. I have no doubt that
14 your client is not going to be injured if you do
15 them and not Mr. Bemis.

16 That said I would agree that we can't have
17 a flood of substantive motions served one week
18 before we are expected to argue them. Today is
19 Wednesday. It would strike me for the case
20 management conference that is set next Friday we
21 need motions served by I think close of business
22 Thursday at least shorten it. You guys make up
23 your mind if you are serving them or not and we
24 can't been doing substantive motions the last
25 day for service. It is not fair. And then from 00012

1 now on I would agree the motions need to be
2 served two weeks before the case management
3 conference with a week to respond.

4 MR. MARMER: This is Ron Marmer. I could
5 just respond to that, expressly, I don't want to
6 argue it, not address the court's point at all.
7 The one thing that we need to contemplate in
8 that two weeks point is that because the case
9 management conferences are actually scheduled
10 now two weeks apart, what is going to happen is
11 that on July 23 when we are at the case
12 management conference we will that day then have
13 to file any motions that will be heard on August
14 13, and on the August 13th case management
15 conference we will that day have to file any
16 motions for August 27. I'm wondering if whether

17 we couldn't adapt this just a bit to make it
18 maybe instead of one week ahead, maybe ten days
19 ahead or something --

20 THE COURT: What are --

21 MR. MARMER: -- so there is a little
22 window of opportunity and we are not at the case
23 management conference and trying to finalize
24 motions on the same day.

25 THE COURT: We have August 13th and when 00013

1 is the next one after that?

2 MR. MARMER: August 27th.

3 THE COURT: Then when after that?

4 MR. MARMER: Then we have the close of
5 discovery, out of the normal. There are some
6 other things. Those are the two.

7 THE COURT: Just the two.

8 MR. MARMER: Before, July 23, August 13.

9 THE COURT: Any objection for those two
10 requiring them ten days ahead of time?

11 MR. MARMER: The close of discovery there
12 is more stuff coming.

13 MR. IANNO: For the August 13th, Judge,
14 that would be like July 30th.

15 THE COURT: That is okay. We are really
16 only -- really only talking August 27.

17 MR. IANNO: We do that one ten days.
18 Judge, can I make a request, an ore tenus
19 request, is that the one motion that is really
20 problematic because Mr. Bemis isn't here is the
21 one dealing with interrogatories because really
22 he has to argue that for the client's behalf.
23 He is the one that has been involved in that.
24 It is the same motion we have heard. It is just 25 dealing with the different set of

00014

1 interrogatories. Those issues are really the
2 same and I'm sure the client would not want me
3 arguing those. As competent as the court may
4 think, that really is Mr. Bemis' area. The
5 other ones perhaps other attorneys can argue but
6 the most compelling interrogatories on the
7 contempt motion, we ask that the court postponed
8 it until August 13. If the court gave us 20
9 days.

10 THE COURT: I know. What is the response
11 to the request that that one motion not be heard
12 next Friday?

13 MR. MARMER: Our feeling is this has been
14 really a subject of extensive delay. We did get
15 Your Honor's ruling and we sent a letter off
16 promptly yesterday after getting the order to
17 the attorneys for Morgan Stanley and said we
18 think that Your Honor's ruling actually takes

19 into account virtually all of the disputes that
20 exist as to the new set. So our feeling was
21 they ought to be able to tell us now. We
22 understand you used to have all these
23 objections. The judge ruled on whole chunks of 24 this dispute, in her word. In light of the 25 judge's ruling, why don't you get back to us and 00015

1 let us know in which instances you are going
2 to -- you may want to preserve your position but
3 in which instances are you going to agree with
4 us that given the rulings that had already had
5 come down, here is where we are at and let's
6 procedure the same way. If there is some area
7 that is not addressed by the Judge's rulings
8 let's get those tendered up so we can get any
9 new feature that you believe is presented from
10 the court for ruling so we aren't waiting and
11 waiting and waiting. This is a matter that has
12 been extended for months and months.

13 THE COURT: Where is Mr. Bemis going to be
14 on vacation?

15 MR. IANNO: He is out of the country. He
16 is on a vacation.

17 THE COURT: Where out of the country?

18 MR. IANNO: Somewhere up in the North
19 Atlantic, I think and that is why he is not even
20 available by telephone.

21 THE COURT: Do this by telephone.

22 MR. IANNO: He is going to be out of
23 touch.

24 THE COURT: When is he leaving and coming
25 back.

00016

1 MR. IANNO: Leaving tomorrow. The 25th.
2 Gone from the 14th, I guess, 15th through the
3 25th.

4 MR. MARMER: Your Honor, while we are
5 sympathetic to people wanting to take vacations
6 let us say we scheduled our vacations and our
7 client commitments based on what Your Honor
8 ruled on February 20th when everything was
9 there, including Mr. Bemis where he
10 affirmatively accepted the dates that were
11 discussed. So our view is this is not any kind
12 of unfair surprise or effort on our part to
13 manipulate the schedule or set something for a
14 special hearing on a date that no one could
15 anticipate. Everybody knew since February 20th
16 to lock these dates in and plan around it, which
17 we have done.

18 THE COURT: In all honesty on this, I
19 don't want to say we won't hear that motion. I
20 understand what you are telling me. We have not

21 even seen it. For all I know it is going to be
22 straightforward or it is not going to be
23 straightforward so I am not going to rule on 24 that part now. I understand what it is you are
25 telling me. Is it plaintiff is going to file a

00017

1 motion to compel answers to interrogatories or
2 are there objections to interrogatories we are
3 calling up?

4 MR. MARMER: We are filing motions to
5 compel and there is also on the contempt part
6 there is also a discovery request that is
7 directed to documents as well as
8 interrogatories.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Let me do an order and
10 you each get a copy. I am going to defer ruling
11 on your ore tenus motion to continue those
12 hearings dealing with the contempt. I want to 13 see what they are. Okay. Okay. Thank you very
14 much. Bye. Thanks, sir.

15 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

16 (Whereupon, the taking of the hearing
17 was concluded at or about 9:00 o'clock a.m.)

JOINT SUBMISSION OF THE PARTIES FOR
JULY 23, 2004 CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE

Pursuant to the Court's Order of February 24, 2004, the parties in the above-referenced action hereby submit the following Joint Submission in advance of the July 23, 2004 Case Management Conference.

I. Agreed-Upon Statement Of Background And Procedural History

The following is the parties' agreed-upon summary of the two companion cases now pending before this Court, which have been consolidated for trial.

(Case No. 03 CA-005045 AI)

Background. This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH")

sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

CPH's Complaint alleges claims arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy. CPH's Complaint has sought damages of at least $485 million and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. Morgan Stanley denies the material allegations in CPH's Complaint and also denies CPH's entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. CPH filed its Complaint on May 8, 2003 (the "CPH Action"). Morgan Stanley filed its Answer on June 23, 2003 and, on June 25, 2003 filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant To Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In the Alternative, For Judgment On The Pleadings. The Court held a hearing on these motions on December 12, 2003. On December 15, 2003, the Court issued an Order denying both motions. On January 9, 2004, Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal regarding the denial of its motion to dismiss. See Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.130(a)(3)(A) (providing for interlocutory appellate review of non-final orders "concerning venue"). On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated CPH's action against Morgan Stanley with Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's action against CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

B. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al. (Case No. 03 CA-005165 AD)

Background. This action arises out of the same series of financial transactions as the CPH Action. In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

MSSF's Complaint alleges that, in the course of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MAFCO") and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the "synergies" that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that Defendant's inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam's lenders (including MSSF) to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. MSSF's Complaint alleges that it suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001 and defaulted on acquisition-related loans. MSSF has alleged claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. CPH denies the material allegations in MSSF's Complaint and also denies MSSF's entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. MSSF filed its Complaint against MAFCO and CPH on May 12, 2003 (the "MSSF Action"). The MSSF Action was initially assigned to Division AG. Because the MSSF Action and the CPH Action involve the same series of financial transactions and arise from a common set of operative facts, the parties agreed that the two cases are companion cases under Local Rule 2.009 and requested a transfer to Division AI, where the first-filed, lower numbered CPH Action was assigned. The motion to transfer was granted on June 9, 2003. Defendants CPH and MAFCO filed their Answer on June 25, 2003. On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated MSSF's action against CPH and MAFCO with CPH's action against Morgan Stanley.

II. Report On Discovery In The Two Cases

A. Morgan Stanley's And MSSF's Position On Discovery

1. Merits Discovery

CPH, MAFCO, Morgan Stanley, and MSSF are actively pursuing written and deposition discovery in these consolidated actions. The parties have exchanged hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, have served and answered multiple sets of interrogatories and requests for admission, and have deposed more than two dozen party and non-party witnesses. Discovery in both cases is ongoing.

At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley informed the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates — approximately seventy (70) additional depositions would need to be completed before the close of fact discovery. Thereafter, on or about March 11, the parties agreed to take alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions.

Since the February 20 Case Management Conference, twenty-two (22) additional depositions have been completed. Five (5) more depositions have been scheduled and are confirmed for the weeks ahead. Morgan Stanley has seven (7) outstanding requests for deposition dates of CPH and MAFCO witnesses — and has attempted to secure deposition dates for several additional non-party witnesses.

In their Position on Discovery (below), CPH and MAFCO correctly point out that Morgan Stanley did not begin taking depositions in these cases until several months after CPH. This is hardly surprising since — unlike CPH and MAFCO — Morgan Stanley has not been a party to any of the prior Sunbeam-related cases. Given their five-year "head start" in collecting and reviewing relevant documents, interviewing witnesses, taking depositions, and litigating Sunbeam-related issues, it should come as no surprise that CPH was prepared to begin taking depositions earlier than Morgan Stanley.¹ Moreover, Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss and Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings was not decided until the middle December 2003. If granted, this motion either would have eliminated the need for costly and expensive depositions or, at a minimum, would have substantially altered the manner in which deposition discovery is conducted in these cases, since the overwhelming majority of party and non-party witnesses in these cases live and work in New York.

The parties have experienced considerable difficulty scheduling depositions in light of scheduling conflicts for counsel on both sides and the location of the witnesses, almost all of whom are located outside of Florida. CPH and MAFCO have offered witnesses for depositions outside of Florida on dates previously established by the Court for Case Management Conferences and have, on several occasions, confirmed (and then canceled or postponed) depositions previously set to go forward.

For example, CPH and MAFCO twice postponed the deposition of Barry Schwartz (now completed), postponed the deposition of Bruce Slovin (now completed), and postponed the deposition of James Robinson, for various reasons ranging from "unavoidable conflicts" to "medical emergencies." Another CPH / MAFCO witness, Lawrence Jones, was only available on a day that had been previously scheduled by the Court for a Case Management Conference, and is now expected to be unavailable for an unspecified amount of time due to upcoming surgery. Similar scheduling considerations have required Morgan Stanley to postpone the depositions of other deposition witnesses, many of whom no longer work for Morgan Stanley and are no longer under its control.

Even when depositions have been successfully scheduled, the parties have experienced difficulties beyond their control that have prevented the deposition from going forward. When Mr. Schwartz's deposition was finally scheduled and confirmed for June 18, for example, the deposition needed to be postponed (for a third time) because Morgan Stanley's attorneys were unable to make it to New York for the deposition due to inclement weather and cancelled flights.

Morgan Stanley is of course willing to accommodate the legitimate scheduling considerations of witnesses and their counsel — but these schedule conflicts and difficulties have prevented the parties from proceeding with depositions at the pace contemplated during the February 20 Case Management Conference.

Finally, the parties have had to divert resources away from deposition discovery to address collateral issues unrelated to the merits of these consolidated actions. These issues are discussed in the next section.

2. Non-Merits Discovery

On March 12, CPH filed its Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. On May 14, 2004, the Court converted CPH's Motion for a Rule To Show Cause into a Motion for Contempt. On March 19, CPH served its first set of interrogatories relating to that motion. Morgan Stanley responded to those Interrogatories on June 16, 2004 and provided supplemental responses to CPH on June 29, 2004. On July 12, 2004, the Court entered an Order directing Morgan Stanley to supplement its responses to those Interrogatories within twenty days, including certain responses to be filed directly with the Court under seal.

On May 28, CPH served its second set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt — together with a set of document requests relating to that motion. On that same date, Morgan Stanley served its own interrogatories and requests for documents on CPH relating to CPH's motion for contempt. The parties served responses and objections to this "second wave" of non-merits discovery on June 28, 2004.

CPH's contempt motion, together with CPH's related Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen Access to Confidential Transcript (filed May 5, 2004) and other motions relating to the confidentiality of documents and pleadings, have required extensive additional briefing, necessitated attendance of counsel at multiple specially-set hearings in Florida, and the preparation of non-merits discovery requests and responses. CPH's objections also have prevented attorneys from Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, and Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHYTE") from participating as co-counsel and assisting with discovery. These satellite issues have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

It is apparent that CPH and MAFCO, acting in concert with Arthur Andersen, are using the non-merits discovery served in these cases to manipulate the proceedings in these consolidated actions and Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA, now pending before Judge Miller. In pleadings filed with Judge Miller, Arthur Andersen has moved for sanctions against Morgan Stanley, sought to disqualify Morgan Stanley's attorneys in that action, and moved to stay all discovery in that action. Simultaneously, CPH (who has professed a "unity of interest" with Arthur Andersen) has sought, through the non-merits discovery served in these consolidated actions, to discover detailed information regarding Morgan Stanley's damages claims in the Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA. CPH seeks this information despite the fact that Arthur Andersen is not a party in these consolidated actions; Kirkland & Ellis LLP does not represent Morgan Stanley in Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA; and CPH has objected to Morgan Stanley's chosen counsel (KHYTE) from appearing in these consolidated actions.

The satellite issues and gamesmanship described in this section have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

B. CPH'S And MAFCO's Position On Discovery

CPH and MAFCO stipulate only to the first paragraph of Section II.A above. CPH and MAFCO object to the remaining statements concerning discovery as incomplete, misleading, and self-serving on the part of Morgan Stanley and MSSF, because it is quite clear that this case is on track to be tried as scheduled in January 2005. CPH and MAFCO expressed these objections to Morgan Stanley and MSSF, and requested that a neutral statement of the discovery status be substituted, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF refused that request. Consequently, CPH and MAFCO provide the account of discovery that follows.

1. Deposition Discovery

As of July 15, 2004, 38 depositions have been taken. Of those depositions, 29 have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and 9 have been taken by Morgan Stanley and MSSF:

In addition, both sides have requested deposition dates for certain individuals, and expressed interest in deposing still other individuals. Although Morgan Stanley and MSSF make it sound as if scheduling issues have been caused only by CPH, in fact, Morgan Stanley and MSSF frequently have delayed providing dates for depositions and have changed previously set dates. In any event, Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's finger-pointing is irrelevant, because there is no motion pending before this Court concerning deposition scheduling — indeed, to date, no such motion ever has been filed.²

² As for the charge of Morgan Stanley and MSSF that they “did not obtain access to the overwhelming majority of documents in this case until September 2003,” and that CPH only “began to” produce documents then, those statements are wrong. In timely response to the document requests of Morgan Stanley and MSSF, CPH made the vast majority of its documents available for review on August 15, 2003 and the review began then. By September 8, 2003, as a

Concerning the statement of counsel for Morgan Stanley and MSSF at the February 20, 2004 hearing that at least 70 depositions would need to be completed before the fact discovery cut-off, CPH and MAFCO believe that counsel's estimate is exaggerated. In any event, given that approximately 10 attorneys presently are appearing for Morgan Stanley and MSSF in this case, Morgan Stanley and MSSF certainly have the resources to complete all necessary depositions before the September 3, 2004 discovery cut-off.

2. Discovery concerning CPH's motion for contempt

The parties have served interrogatories and document requests on each other in connection with CPH's motion for contempt. Because Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's responses to the discovery requests that CPH and MAFCO served on March 19 were insufficient, however, CPH and MAFCO filed a motion to compel. On July 12, this Court entered an order granting that motion in part, and directing Morgan Stanley and MSSF to provide further information within 20 days.

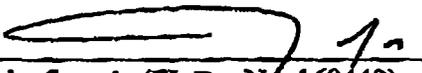

CPH and MAFCO also served further interrogatories and document requests in connection with CPH's motion for contempt on May 28, and Morgan Stanley and MSSF have several responses to those discovery requests. Because CPH and MAFCO believe that the responses are deficient in many respects, however, CPH and MAFCO have filed a motion to compel to be heard at the July 23 Case Management Conference.

letter written by counsel for Morgan Stanley and MSSF confirms, CPH's document production was "substantially completed." That was before any deposition had occurred.

III. Pretrial Schedule

On February 24, 2004, the Court entered an order setting this matter for trial in January 2005, and on March 23, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order setting the pretrial schedule in this matter and scheduling trial to begin on January 18, 2005.

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO SET A HEARING ON THE CONTEMPT MOTION AND EXTEND MERITS DISCOVERY

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by its attorneys, respectfully moves this Court, pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280 & 1.460, Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.085(d), and the Court's inherent authority to manage its docket, to amend the Pretrial Schedule in these consolidated actions to (1) extend merits discovery and other pretrial deadlines; and (2) establish a schedule for the prompt resolution of Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s ("CPH") (renominated) Motion for Contempt. In support of its motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Procedural History

1. These complex consolidated actions arise out of a 1998 acquisition transaction in which CPH sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. to Sunbeam Corporation. Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (“MSSF”) and other lenders provided senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam’s acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

2. CPH filed the initial action in this litigation (Civil Action No. CA 03-5045 AI) on May 8, 2003. CPH’s Complaint alleges claims against MS & Co. for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy. CPH seeks damages in excess of $485 million, and has reserved the right to seek leave to amend its Complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to seek punitive damages in excess of $1.5 billion.

3. MSSF filed the second action in this litigation (Civil Action No. CA 03-5165 AI) on May 12, 2003. MSSF’s Complaint, which is in the nature of a counterclaim, alleges claims against CPH and its parent company MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. (“MAFCO”) for fraudulent misrepresentation and negligent misrepresentation. MSSF seeks compensatory damages in an amount to be determined at trial and has reserved the right to seek leave to amend its Complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to seek punitive damages.

4. On June 25, 2003, MS & Co. filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 1.061 Or in the Alternative for Judgment on the Pleadings. These initial motions, if granted, would have disposed entirely of Civil Action No. CA 03-5045 AI — and would have lead to the re-filing of Civil Action No. CA 03-5165 AI in New York. Morgan Stanley sought to have these threshold motions heard promptly but, due to the repeated unavailability of CPH’s Chicago counsel, was unable to obtain a hearing on its Motion to Dismiss until December 12, 2003. The Court entered an Order denying the motions on December 15, 2003. That Order is on appeal and fully briefed.

5. While the Motion to Dismiss was pending, the parties engaged in substantial written and deposition discovery. The parties exchanged hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, served and answered hundreds of requests for admission, and dozens of interrogatories. Indeed, even before the first Case Management Conference (February 20, 2004), the parties completed eighteen (18) depositions and appeared before the Court on seven (7) separate occasions to resolve discovery motions.

6. On February 20, 2004, and after ruling on the Motion to Dismiss, the Court held the first Case Management Conference on the two actions. At that time, the Court consolidated the two cases. Additionally, counsel for CPH agreed that these consolidated actions address “matter[s] of substantial magnitude,” and would require a four-week jury trial. (Feb. 20, 2004 Hrg. at 9-10.)

7. At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley advised the Court that approximately seventy (70) fact depositions remained to be completed, and that Morgan Stanley intended to retain additional counsel.¹ Morgan Stanley retained additional counsel — attorneys from the law firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C. (“KHHTE”) — three days later on February 23, 2004.

8. At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, the parties and the Court discussed a proposed trial date. Counsel for Morgan Stanley recommended that, because of the substantial discovery and other pretrial tasks left to be completed, the Court should set a trial date no earlier than February 25, 2005.² Counsel for CPH and MAFCO proposed trial dates beginning in August 2004. The Court set the trial for January 18, 2005. The parties then agreed to negotiate the pretrial schedule working backwards from the January 18 trial date.

9. After the February 20 Case Management Conference, and continuing through early March, counsel for the parties negotiated the pretrial schedule. On March 11, 2004, counsel for the parties conducted a conference call to resolve, among other things, the proposed pretrial schedule and how depositions would be scheduled on a going-forward basis. During the call, the parties agreed on a schedule predicated on the Court's January 18 trial date — and further agreed to alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions. (Mar. 11, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody (Ex. 1).)

10. At no point during the March 11, 2004 telephone conference (or during any other discussion among the parties regarding the proposed pretrial schedule) did counsel for CPH tell Morgan Stanley's attorneys that CPH intended to file (the next day) a Motion for a Rule to Show Cause and seek additional discovery related to that motion. Accordingly, the pretrial schedule discussed by the parties (and later presented to the Court) contained no allowance or provision for these non-merits discovery and proceedings.

11. The parties submitted the proposed pretrial schedule to the Court on March 12, 2004. That same day, CPH filed its Motion for a Rule to Show Cause.

² Counsel for Morgan Stanley noted that, given the "sheer number of deposition in this case," even a February, 2005 trial date would be a "very aggressive schedule." (Feb. 20, 2004 Hrg. 10.)

12. On March 19, 2004, the Court entered an Order establishing the following pretrial deadlines:

B. The Parties Have Diligently Pursued Merits Discovery

13. Since the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, the parties have conducted substantial written and deposition discovery addressed to the merits of the consolidated actions. The parties have:

- taken 22 depositions (all of which required travel for counsel);
- briefed and resolved 11 discovery motions;
- appeared for 5 in-person discovery hearings (all of which required travel for counsel);
- served seven sets of written discovery on merits issues including interrogatories, requests for admission, and requests for production;
- served multiple third parties with document requests;
- conducted time-consuming document reviews of back-up e-mails and employee personnel files;
- fully briefed and argued the choice-of-law issue; and
- completed briefing the appeal of the venue issue in the Fourth District Court of Appeal.

14. The parties have conducted discovery on an aggressive weekly schedule, with multiple depositions, written submissions to the Court, and / or court appearances frequently taking place in a single week. Scheduling is complicated by the fact that each of the Case Management Conferences — and all of the depositions that have been conducted since the February 20 Case Management Conference — have required extensive out-of-town travel.

Indeed, since the February 20 Case Management Conference, *not a single deposition has taken place in Florida, Chicago, or Washington, D.C.*³

15. The scheduling of depositions is further complicated because many of the deponents are non-parties. Therefore, deposition scheduling requires the coordination of calendars for the witness, counsel for the parties (including travel in every instance), and sometimes counsel for third parties. (See July 9, 2004 Letters from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 2); July 1, 2004 CPH Notice of Unavailability; July 9, 2004 MS Notice of Unavailability.) Additionally, various “unavoidable conflicts” and family emergencies have arisen, requiring depositions to be cancelled or postponed on short notice. (See Apr. 22, 2004, May 21, 2004 & June 16, 2004 Letters from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 3).)

C. CPH’s (Renominated) Motion For Contempt Has Substantially Interfered With The Progress Of Merits Discovery

16. On March 12, 2004, CPH filed a Motion for a Rule to Show Cause. In its motion, CPH alleged that Morgan Stanley violated the Stipulated Confidentiality Order in these consolidated actions by (1) giving its own counsel, KHHTE, a copy of the CPH / Arthur Andersen Settlement Agreement; and (2) using the Settlement Agreement for an allegedly improper purpose — filing a pre-existing claim against Arthur Andersen. CPH has stated that, if its Motion for Contempt is granted, CPH may seek monetary damages, the striking of pleadings, and the revocation of the pro hac vice admissions of Kirkland & Ellis attorneys. (See Apr. 23, 2004 CPH’s Reply in Supp. of Its Mot. for a Rule to Show Cause at 14-17.)

³ Indeed, CPH required one key CPH witness, Paul E. Shapiro, who signed the Coleman Merger Agreement, to be deposed in New York although he claims he is a resident of Florida. (June 8, 2004 Shapiro Dep. at 6.)

17. On March 17, 2004, KHHTE attorneys filed motions for admission pro hac vice in these consolidated actions. CPH has objected to the admission of KHHTE attorneys pending the Court’s ruling on its Motion for Contempt.

18. During the March 19, 2004 Case Management Conference, the Court elected to defer ruling on KHHTE’s pro hac vice motions until it had ruled on the contempt allegations. The Court set the Motion for a Rule to Show Cause for a specially set hearing on April 30, 2004.

19. During the April 30, 2004 hearing, Morgan Stanley presented evidence and argument concerning CPH’s Motion for a Rule to Show Cause. CPH did not, however, present evidence to support its contempt allegations — but rather sought only to obtain discovery to support its allegations. Morgan Stanley objected to this procedure.

20. On May 14, 2004, the Court entered an Order renominating CPH’s “Motion for a Rule to Show Cause” as a “Motion for Contempt”. The Court’s May 14, 2004 Order did not resolve the merits of CPH’s Motion for Contempt, stating instead that “[e]ither side may set the Motion for Contempt for an evidentiary hearing, once discovery is complete.” (See May 14, 2004 Order on Plf’s Mot. for a Rule to Show Cause.) The Court’s May 14, 2004 Order did not address the scope of permissible discovery for that motion, stating instead that the Court would “rule on the permissible scope of discovery as disputes arise.” (Id.)

21. CPH has served multiple discovery requests relating to its Motion for Contempt. Morgan Stanley has done likewise. The parties have served the following discovery requests relating to the Motion for Contempt:

Date	Title
3/19/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.’s CPH Interrogatories to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.

Date	Title
3/19/2004	MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. Interrogatories to Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.
5/28/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Further Interrogatories Concerning its Motion for Contempt
5/28/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holding, Inc.'s Request for Production of Documents Concerning its Motion for Contempt
5/28/2004	Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Interrogatories Concerning Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Contempt
5/28/2004	Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Request for Production of Documents Concerning Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Contempt
6/10/2004	Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Further Request for Production of Documents Concerning Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s Motion for Contempt
6/10/2004	Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Further Interrogatory Concerning Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion for Contempt

22. The parties also have filed and argued a number of motions relating to the Motion for Contempt. These disputes have addressed the confidentiality of the related proceedings and the proper scope of the contempt discovery:

Date	Title
4/16/2004	Motion for Protective Order
4/23/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion for Removal of Confidentiality Designations
5/05/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen LLP Access to Confidential Transcript
5/21/2004	Motion for Entry of an Order to Correct Filing Error
6/04/2004	Morgan Stanley's Motion to Remove Confidential Designation from Interrogatories
6/25/2004	Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Compel Responses to Interrogatories

23. There is no deadline for discovery related to the contempt allegations, and the Motion for Contempt has not been set for a hearing. The Court has also not ruled on the pending motions for the pro hac vice admission of KHHTE attorneys.

24. Notwithstanding the time and resources the parties have devoted to the renominated Motion for Contempt, the parties also have taken depositions virtually every week in New York or other cities outside Florida:

Date	Deponent	Location
2/24/2004	Smith, Bram	New York
4/2/2004	Rafii, Lilly	New York
4/6/2004	Ginstling, Norman	New York

ARGUMENT

I. Merits Discovery Cannot Reasonably Be Completed By September 3

The remaining factual discovery on the merits of the underlying claims cannot reasonably be completed before September 3, 2004, the deadline set in the March 19, 2004 Pretrial

Schedule. The schedule, based upon the January 2005 trial date, called for the parties to complete fact discovery in two cases in five and half months. This schedule is extremely aggressive since each action asserts complex claims for hundreds of millions of dollars, involves multiple third parties that are not subject to the jurisdiction of this Court, and relates to events that occurred seven years ago.

Moreover, when Morgan Stanley agreed to the proposed pretrial schedule and the alternating-weeks deposition schedule (all based on the Court's trial date), Morgan Stanley did not know that, the very next day, CPH intended to file a Motion for a Rule to Show Cause. This motion has in turn become a "lawsuit within a lawsuit" and has barred, at least temporarily, Morgan Stanley's right to have counsel of its choice participate in the consolidated actions.

Under the parties' agreed-upon deposition schedule, Morgan Stanley now has twenty days — the weeks of July 19, and August 2, 16 and 30 — left in which to take depositions. While Morgan Stanley has endeavored to narrow its witness list from the one discussed at the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, Morgan Stanley still anticipates that it needs to take, at a minimum, an additional 26 depositions, 4 of which will involve multiple days of testimony, totaling 30 remaining days of deposition.

Scheduling these 26 witnesses is complicated because all but 4 of them are third parties who may be represented by separate counsel and because all of the depositions will require counsel (and boxes of documents) to travel to other cities.⁴ Moreover, deposition scheduling in July and August is notoriously difficult as many deponents and counsel take vacations during

that period. (See July 1, 2004 CPH Notice of Unavailability; July 9, 2004 MS Notice of Unavailability.)

Taking merits depositions is not the only discovery that remains to be completed by Morgan Stanley. CPH has requested depositions of many additional party and non-party witnesses. Moreover, there are outstanding written discovery requests and documents that remain to be produced from at least two third parties. Moreover, there are three more Case Management Conferences scheduled before September 3, 2004, which are likely to be accompanied by various motions.⁵

Moreover, Morgan Stanley should not be forced into a last-minute mad dash to complete discovery when it has persistently and actively pursued discovery. For instance, on February 26, 2004 Morgan Stanley requested the depositions of eight current and former MAFCO employees who are represented by CPH counsel. (Feb. 26, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody (Ex. 4).) For one witnesses (William Nesbitt), CPH waited until July 8, 2004 to offer a deposition date and even then the date offered overlapped with an already-scheduled deposition. (See July 2 & 8, 2004 Letters from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 5).) For another witness (Steve Engelman), CPH waited until July to offer a deposition date and the single date offered was on a date when Morgan Stanley counsel is unavailable. (See July 11, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 6); July 9, 2004 MS Notice of Unavailability.)

Likewise, on May 13, 2004 Morgan Stanley requested the deposition of an additional seven witnesses represented by CPH counsel. In the intervening two months CPH has not offered dates for three of those witnesses, offered and then cancelled the deposition of a fourth, and only offered a fifth witness during a scheduled Case Management Conference — a date unacceptable to Morgan Stanley counsel. CPH has also not offered dates for the two witnesses that Morgan Stanley requested on June 28, 2004.

Finally, CPH's cancellation of depositions has frustrated Morgan Stanley's ability to complete discovery. For instance, Morgan Stanley had multiple depositions scheduled the weeks of April 26 and May 24, but shortly before the depositions CPH informed Morgan Stanley that the witnesses were no longer available. (See Apr. 22, 2004 & May 21, 2004 Letters from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 3).) Likewise, after Morgan Stanley had coordinated third party depositions the weeks of May 24, July 5 and August 2, CPH informed Morgan Stanley that the deposition dates were unacceptable. (See July 2, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to Z. Brown (Ex. 7); July 9, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 2).)

While the purpose of this motion is not to question the events that have given rise to the cancellations of depositions and CPH's unavailability for depositions, Morgan Stanley should not be forced into the position of performing a pell-mell rush to beat the clock of discovery cut-off as a result of its good faith efforts to accommodate witnesses and counsel.

II. The Contempt Motion Has Diverted The Parties' Resources From Merits Discovery

CPH's contempt motion and related discovery have significantly disrupted discovery into the merits of the parties' claims. On March 11, 2004 when counsel were negotiating the Pretrial Schedule and deposition scheduling, CPH did not tell Morgan Stanley that the very next day CPH would file a Motion for a Rule to Show Cause, seeking discovery unrelated to the merits of the case. Given that Morgan Stanley had only five and a half months in which to complete its depositions and all discovery, CPH's lack of candor in the negotiations bespeaks volumes. The contempt motion has resulted in a serious diversion of resources, detracting from the prosecution of the core issues in this case:

- There have been six hearings related directly or indirectly to the Motion for Contempt, at least one every month since March.
- Including the show cause motion, there have been six motions filed that relate directly or indirectly to the Motion for Contempt.
- The parties have served and responded to eight sets of discovery concerning the contempt issues — each side having served two sets of interrogatories and two sets of document requests.
- CPH is also engaging in third party discovery concerning the Motion for Contempt, which is pending.

This disruption is expected to continue. Morgan Stanley anticipates that CPH will continue to seek discovery, related to its contempt allegations. As the Court has already observed, the discovery sought by CPH often goes to the heart of attorney-client and work product protected documents and information. Thus, Morgan Stanley will vigorously defend its privileges, including seeking appeals as necessary. Until the motion is set for a hearing and the Motion for Contempt denied, substantial resources will continue to be diverted from the merits.

The pending Motion for Contempt has also prevented Morgan Stanley from deploying or even fully consulting with its counsel, KHHTE, further hindering Morgan Stanley's ability to complete discovery in the allotted time. One of the assertions made in CPH's motion is that Morgan Stanley violated the Stipulated Confidentiality Order when it shared confidential information with KHHTE before they were made counsel of record in the pending cases. While Morgan Stanley denies CPH's assertion and its interpretation of the Confidentiality Order, Morgan Stanley has refrained from providing further confidential information to KHHTE pending a decision on the Motion for Contempt and on the pro hac vice motions.

Indeed, there is no apparent justice in holding Morgan Stanley to the Pretrial Schedule deadlines when Morgan Stanley has been denied the assistance of counsel it hired in late February, while at the same time CPH has enlisted an ally to its cause. After Morgan Stanley filed suit against Arthur Andersen, CPH claimed a “unity of interest” with Arthur Andersen. Arthur Andersen counsel began, at a minimum, issuing correspondence in support of positions taken by CPH. (See Apr. 22, 2004, Apr. 26, 2004 & May 20, 2004 Letters from E. Lauer to T. Clare (Ex. 8).) The extent to which Arthur Andersen counsel has assisted CPH and the exact nature of their relationship is unclear, however, as CPH and Arthur Andersen are asserting that the communications between them are the subject of a common interest privilege, another issue this Court is going to have to resolve. At a minimum, holding Morgan Stanley to discovery deadlines while it is deprived of its full resources and while CPH has bolstered its own roster is simply unfair and smacks of gamesmanship.

III. Sound Judicial Administration And Other Considerations Favor A Prompt Resolution of the Contempt Allegation And An Extension Of Merits Discovery

Morgan Stanley requests a prompt resolution of the Motion for Contempt. The procedurally defective motion was filed on March 12 as a bogus rule to show cause. The motion has now been pending for 125 days. Under ordinary circumstances, the motion should have been submitted and ruled upon within 60 days (of April 30). See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.050(F). Instead, there is no end in sight. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley is requesting that the Court close discovery on the Motion for Contempt, and set the matter for hearing as soon thereafter as possible.

There are compelling reasons why the Court should extend the deadline for completing merits discovery in light of the pending Motion for Contempt:

First, the Pretrial Schedule and deposition scheduling deadlines that the parties established are simply infeasible. Morgan Stanley agreed to the aggressive Pretrial Schedule based on discussions in which CPH never raised its intention to seek discovery related to other matters during this time period. As a result of CPH’s contempt motion, however, Morgan

Stanley has been required to divert significant resources to addressing the issues raised by CPH in its motion.

Second, CPH has opposed based on the mere pendency of the motion, the pro hac vice admission of Morgan Stanley's KHTE counsel and has stated that it may seek the revocation of the pro hac vice admissions of Morgan Stanley's Kirkland & Ellis counsel. If CPH is successful in its efforts, Morgan Stanley will, pending appeal, be forced to obtain entirely new counsel, unfamiliar with facts and issues of these cases.

Third, CPH will not be prejudiced by an extension of deadlines for merits discovery. CPH brought suit in 2003 seeking to redress only monetary damages that it claims to have suffered in 1998 — 5 years before! If CPH's claims are eventually found to have merit, CPH can be made whole through monetary damages, including interest awardable by law. Moreover, considering the complex and substantial matters at issue, even with a 90 day extension of all deadlines, this case will proceed to trial expeditiously, and well within the boundaries under the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration. See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.085(e)(1)(3).

Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(c) authorizes this Court to modify burdensome or prejudicial discovery or discovery deadlines. Rule 1.280(c) provides:

Upon motion by a party or by the person from who discovery is sought, and for good cause shown, the court in which the action is pending may make any order to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense that justice requires

Additionally, Rule 1.280(d) authorizes the Court, upon motion of one of the parties, to issue an order controlling the timing and sequence of discovery “for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interest of justice.”

Rules 1.280(c) and 1.280(d), as well as the Court's inherent authority to control its own docket, provide the Court with broad discretion to modify discovery deadlines. See, e.g.,

Rasmussen v. South Fla. Blood Serv., Inc., 500 So. 2d 533, 535 (Fla. 1987) (“The discovery rules . . . confer broad discretion on the trial court to limit or prohibit discovery.”); SCI Funeral Servs. of Fla., Inc. v. Light, 811 So. 2d 796, 798 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (“[T]he scope and limitation of discovery is within the broad discretion of the trial court.”).

CONCLUSION

An extension of merits discovery and the pretrial deadlines best serves the interests of justice and judicial economy. Requiring merits discovery to go forward at the pace originally agreed upon by the parties, when there are now significant additional discovery issues that have been raised, would be burdensome, prejudicial, and an injustice. For these reasons, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court enter an order (1) extending all merits discovery and other pretrial deadlines; and (2) establishing deadlines for the prompt resolution of the contempt motion and all discovery related to that motion.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes et al.

Dear Mike:

I write to memorialize our agreement regarding the sequencing of depositions.

We agreed — as the primary governing principle — that each side will take alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions. Each side will endeavor in the first instance to schedule its witnesses to be deposed during the weeks that have been allocated to the other side for the taking of depositions. Similarly, each side will endeavor in the first instance to schedule third party depositions during the appropriate weeks. Both sides will work together in good faith to accommodate the legitimate scheduling conflicts of third-party and party witnesses alike. Finally, I would propose, for simplicity reasons, that third-party depositions that call only for the production of documents (i.e. depositions that do not involve a personal appearance of any kind) not be subject to this sequencing agreement, and can be scheduled for any return date consistent with the applicable rules.

Please confirm that this letter accurately reflects our understanding.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Clare

Dear Tom:

I write in response to your July 7, 2004 letter offering Bram Smith for deposition on August 3 or August 4, 2004. We are not available on either of those dates. Please provide us with alternative dates for the court-ordered resumption of the deposition of Mr. Smith. In the interests of efficiency, we suggest scheduling the continuations of Mr. Smith's and Mr. Hart's depositions on the same day. Although we do not agree to your attempt to limit Mr. Smith's deposition to one hour, we anticipate that both depositions can be completed in a single day, with one being scheduled in the morning and the other for the afternoon.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your letters of February 18, 2004 and February 25, 2004.

We have taken steps to contact the former Morgan Stanley employees identified in your deposition notice. We have spoken with Ms. Rafii and Messrs. Stynes and Webber, and will be representing all three of those individuals in connection with your deposition notice. We will let you know as soon as we have confirmed the representation arrangements for Ms. Boone and Messrs. Conway and Yoo. We also are in the process of obtaining available dates from all of the deponents identified in your notice, including the current Morgan Stanley employees identified in your notice. We hope to have that process completed by the end of this week.

We wish to request the depositions of the following current and former CPH and MAFCO employees:

- Donald Drapkin
- Paul Shapiro
- Joseph Page
- Bruce Slovin
- William Nesbitt
- Irwin Engelman
- Norman Ginstling
- Barry Schwartz

You previously have indicated that you will represent all of the deponents. We therefore assume that we will not be required to obtain commissions for any former employees. If that assumption is incorrect please let me know as soon as possible so that we may begin the process of obtaining commissions.

We would like to discuss a schedule to complete -- on a mutual basis -- the depositions that both parties have requested. I propose that we schedule a conference call on March 3, 2004 at 10:30 a.m. EST to work out such a schedule. Perhaps we can take that same opportunity also

Your letter dated July 1, 2004 concerning the depositions of Mr. Duffy and Mr. Geller is incomplete. We agreed to go forward with the deposition of Mr. Geller on July 9, 2004, the date proposed by Mr. Geller's counsel. You advised me that Mr. Geller was no longer available on July 9, but could go forward on July 7. Because the attorney responsible for Mr. Geller's deposition was already committed to a different deposition on July 7, we were unable to take both depositions on the same date. You decided to postpone the Geller deposition. As you know, we are ordinarily willing to double track depositions and make necessary arrangements to accommodate the schedules of witnesses. With the brief notice provided Wednesday, however, we were unable to rearrange these depositions.

Dear Mr. Clare:

This is a shortened version of the voice mail that I left on your machine.

This firm is counsel to Arthur Andersen LLP in connection with the various Sunbeam cases.

I have your letter dated April 22, 2004 to Michael Brody of Jenner & Block concerning your interest in removing the "Confidential" designation to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order.

Andersen objects to any effort to remove such Confidential Designation or to the removal of confidential treatment for any related documents and information and we wish to bring this objection to your attention.

It goes without saying that any action to remove the Confidential Designation would be adverse to Andersen's interests and we formally advise you of this fact.

Dear Mr. Clare:

I have your letter of April 26, 2004.

As counsel for Arthur Andersen LLP in connection with the Sunbeam cases I wish to repeat our previous advice to you that Andersen objects to any effort to remove "Confidential" designation to Exhibit 1 to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order or to the removal of confidential treatment for any related documents and information.

In addition, Andersen would expect Kirkland & Ellis to refrain from taking any steps or making any argument, express or implied, that would in any way tend to negate or diminish the confidential designation for the aforementioned materials and information or which would in any way diminish their confidential treatment.

Further, Andersen would expect any individual or entity acting in consultation with Kirkland & Ellis also to refrain from taking any steps or making any statements which would in any way diminish the confidential designation for or confidential treatment of the aforementioned materials and information.

Dear Mr. Clare:

As you are aware, we are counsel for Arthur Andersen LLP in the Sunbeam matters.

On April 30, 2004, a conference in the matters captioned above was held in open court before Judge Maass, of the 15th Judicial Circuit Court, in and for Palm Beach County. We understand that the transcript of that conference was sealed.

Recently, it has come to our attention that counsel to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., has moved to unseal that transcript for the limited purpose of providing it in confidence to Arthur Andersen LLP. Other than providing a copy to this firm and its client, we understand that the transcript would remain sealed.

MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING'S MOTION FOR ENLARGEMENT OF TIME TO RESPOND TO FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF"), by and through its undersigned counsel, moves this Court to enlarge the time for MSSF to respond to Defendant's First Set of Interrogatories served June 22, 2004. In support of its motion, Morgan States as follows:

1. On June 22, 2004, MacAndrews & Forbes ("MAFCO") served MSSF with a First Set of Interrogatories (Ex. 1) ("June 22nd Interrogatories"). Even though this case has been pending for approximately one year, this is the first set of Interrogatories served by MAFCO upon MSSF.

2. MSSF's responses are due on July 22, 2004. As the Court is aware, during the last thirty days, counsel have attended several lengthy hearings before this Court that required extensive preparation and argument, have responded to other written discovery and have also attended numerous depositions, many of which required travel to other states for all counsel.

3. Consequently, counsel for MSSF requested an extension of time to respond to the June 22nd Interrogatories until August 2, 2004, which is less than a two-week extension of time. Counsel for MAFCO refused to agree to this extension. Attached hereto as Exhibit 2 is correspondence from MAFCO's counsel refusing to agree to this request.

4. There will be no prejudice to MAFCO if this short extension is granted. Counsel for Morgan Stanley have repeatedly granted such extensions to opposing counsel, including, without limitation:

- An extension to respond to Morgan Stanley's First Set of Interrogatories. See M. Brody letter to T. Clare dated August 20, 2003. (Attached as Exhibit 3.)
- An extension to respond to Morgan Stanley's First Set of Requests for Admission. See M. Brody letter to T. Clare dated September 16, 2003. (Attached as Exhibit 4)
- An extension to respond to Morgan Stanley's Fourth Request for Production of Documents. See M. Brody letter to Z. Brown dated February 23, 2004. (Attached as Exhibit 5)

WHEREFORE, MSSF respectfully requests that this Court enlarge the time for MSSF to respond with answers and objections to the June 22nd Interrogatories together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

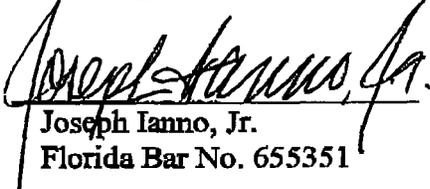

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing has been furnished to all counsel of record on the attached service list by facsimile and Federal Express on this 22nd day of July, 2004.

Dear Katie:

I write in response to your request that we agree to extend the deadline for Morgan Stanley to respond to MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.'s First Set of Interrogatories. As you know, ordinarily we agree to such requests. However, in light of our pending motion to strike Morgan Stanley's verifications on other sets of interrogatories, which is set for hearing this week, we believe it important to obtain Morgan Stanley's interrogatory responses on Thursday, as originally scheduled. The timely provision of these interrogatory answers will permit us to resolve any issues relating to the interrogatory responses without need for a further motion.

Very truly yours,

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH J.
3 MAASS, in Chambers, in the Palm Beach County
4 Courthouse, West Palm Beach, Florida, on July 23rd,
5 2004, starting at 8:58 a.m., with appearances as 6 hereinabove noted, to wit:

7 * * *

8 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're seeing slides of the
10 vacation that Mr. Bemis missed.

11 THE COURT: Don't say that. I'm sure his
12 wife does not have a sense of humor about this.
13 Where do we want to start?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 15, Your Honor, by
15 agreement.

16 THE COURT: Of which book?

17 MR. SCAROLA: The big thick one that doesn't
18 close very well.

19 THE COURT: The biggest one?

20 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, yes.

21 MR. IANNO: This is probably the reason we
22 needed the hearing procedures changed. That is
23 the updated binder with all the motions, responses
24 and case law in it.

25 THE COURT: And that's good. The only --

1 which is why we need it. I had already read the
2 first one. When I got the second one, I was
3 trying to figure out what was new. I think it's
4 good that we have an updated procedure.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 15, Your Honor, is the
6 motion to strike the verifications of Michael
7 Hart.

8 And if I might address that motion briefly,
9 it arises out of the circumstance of Mr. Hart
10 having verified answers on behalf of Morgan
11 Stanley to four separate sets of interrogatories.
12 The form of verification is uniform with regard to
13 each of those interrogatories. You can find it
14 most easily by turning to tab 15-I, going one page
15 back, and you will see the verification form

16 there. Mr. Hart says, quote, I hereby declare
17 that the following answers are true and correct
18 upon the information and belief and to the best of 19 my knowledge. And it is signed by him under oath.

20 Based upon those verifications, Mr. Hart's
21 deposition was set, and he was deposed with regard
22 to the extent of his knowledge that these were
23 true and correct answers and that he had a belief
24 to the best of his knowledge that they were
25 accurate. What we discovered is that Mr. Hart

1 admitted that he did not have any personal
2 knowledge with regard to most of the facts. He
3 admitted that he could not remember what, if
4 anything, he had done to educate himself to verify
5 answers to interrogatories. And most incredibly,
6 he admitted that a number of material errors were
7 apparent upon even cursory review of the answers
8 that he verified.

9 And arising out of the receipt of that
10 information, we filed this motion to strike his 11 verifications. Now, upon further reflection, we
12 are modifying the relief that we are asking The

13 Court for in this case. We will not request that 14 The Court strike Mr. Hart's verifications. In
15 fact, we'll deal with the issues of credibility
16 that arise as a consequence of those verifications
17 and the issues with respect to the integrity of 18 this corporation in providing such responses at
19 trial.

20 But what we do need The Court to do in the 21 context of this motion is to clarify what the
22 obligations are of the parties in providing
23 verification of interrogatory answers because we
24 do anticipate that we'll be presenting to The
25 Court, either by agreement or by future motion, a

1 request or stipulation that there be a
2 supplemental update to all interrogatory answers
3 just prior to the close of discovery.

4 And we want to be able to rely upon the
5 accuracy and integrity of those responses. And
6 based upon the position that Morgan Stanley has
7 taken in responding to this motion to strike
8 Mr. Hart's verification, it is very obvious that
9 we have a serious disagreement with regard to the

10 obligations that a party has in verifying
11 interrogatory responses.
12 Let me first clarify that we have not taken
13 the position that an individual verifying answers
14 on behalf of a corporate entity must have personal
15 knowledge of all of the responses that are given,
16 but it is our position that there must be a
17 good-faith, well-founded, reasonably investigated
18 belief that the answers that are being provided
19 are in fact true, correct and complete on behalf
20 of the corporation.

21 Now, in support of their position, Morgan
22 Stanley cites the case of Shepherd versus American
23 Broadcasting Companies (phonetic). And they
24 accurately quote that case, which says that Rule
25 33(a) permits a representative of a corporate

1 party to verify the corporation's answers without
2 personal knowledge of every response by furnishing
3 such information as is available to the party.

4 And they stop right there.

5 What they failed to quote is the remainder of
6 that holding in the Shepherd versus American

7 Broadcasting case. The very next sentence is, of
8 course, the representative must have a basis for
9 signing the responses and for thereby stating on
10 behalf of the corporation that the responses are
11 accurate. And we clearly, if Your Honor has had 12 an opportunity to review the testimony of
13 Mr. Hart, have established that Mr. Hart had no
14 such basis, and he acknowledged that he had no
15 such basis. In some circumstances he didn't even
16 read these responses before he verified them.

17 If the discovery process is to have any
18 integrity whatsoever, we believe that The Court
19 must direct Morgan Stanley to provide
20 verifications that have some substantial meaning
21 that are based upon a well-founded belief that the
22 answers are indeed complete and accurate, that
23 there has been a reasonable investigation, that
24 the sources are believed to be reliable and that
25 there is as a consequence of that a good-faith

1 belief in the accuracy and integrity of the
2 responses that are being provided.

3 We ask for a lot of other things in the

4 motion. We ask for attorneys fees in addition to
5 striking these verifications. We ask for the
6 production of another corporate representative to
7 address the factual issues that arise. We'll take
8 care of that through other means, but we do
9 believe that it is appropriate in response to this
10 motion for The Court to clarify the obligation
11 that Morgan Stanley has and to tell them that the
12 next time they answer interrogatories, they better
13 answer them with a verification that in fact is
14 true and not a blatant misrepresentation.

15 THE COURT: First of all, I assume from what
16 you said when you said you were modifying the 17 relief sought and just asking for clarification on
18 what kind of verification was required, it goes
19 both ways.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, Your Honor.
21 Absolutely. We are not seeking to impose an
22 obligation on Morgan Stanley that we ourselves are
23 not prepared to live by. We just want The Court
24 to tell both parties what that verification means.

25 We've taken a very, very different position

1 with regard to what it is. We've provided
2 verifications that we believe meet those standards
3 that I have described and intend to continue to do
4 that regardless of what Your Honor's order may be
5 because that's what we think the rules require.
6 But we want that standard imposed upon the other
7 side as well.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. IANNO: Judge, Joe Ianno. I'll be
10 responding to this motion.

11 Mr. Scarola just told me that that
12 modification was happening a few minutes before
13 this hearing at 9:00 this morning. What I think
14 he's asking for is an advisory opinion from this
15 Court that I think is improper.

16 THE COURT: That really was going to be one
17 of my questions. We have a couple things. Let's
18 back up and talk about where we want to go.

19 First of all, I agree we need interrogatory
20 answers that are complete and truthful for two
21 reasons. One, they bind the party, but, two, the
22 opposing party needs to be able to rely on the 23 answers themselves. So it strikes me that the 24 verification probably needs to be something that
25 is based on a personal, well-founded belief that

1 the answers are complete and truthful.

2 If we can reach agreement on the kind of
3 verification we need, I think that's fine. If
4 not, I would suspect what Mr. Scarola is going to
5 say is, fine, we'll go back to the motion, I'm
6 asking for any relief other than that you can
7 reverify it in a form we think is appropriate.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Almost, Your Honor. I don't
9 think that I am asking for something different
10 than what The Court is obliged to do in connection
11 with the relief that we have requested.

12 THE COURT: That's what I'm saying. It
13 would have to be confined to the single motion we
14 have unless we reach some sort of agreement on
15 some more global applications.

16 MR. SCAROLA: I agree. I think that once The 17 Court tells them with regard to these answers this 18 verification is improper, I would suspect it will
19 get proper verification.

20 THE COURT: We need to confine it to
21 just Mr. Hart's verification, or we can sort of
22 open it up and try to reach some sort of consensus
23 of what we think is appropriate for all the
24 interrogatories.

1 is blurring the line between procedure and
2 substance. There's nothing wrong with the form of
3 the verification Mr. Hart signed. What
4 Mr. Scarola is challenging is the substantive
5 deposition testimony, which we don't agree with
6 Mr. Scarola because that is an issue that I think
7 he has put his spin on it.

8 Those are issues that Mr. Scarola correctly
9 pointed out are credibility issues for trial.

10 There's no question that Morgan Stanley hasn't
11 taken the position that these interrogatories
12 responses are not binding on it. Mr. Scarola has
13 every right to rely on it.

14 The second point on that is, we are working
15 through a process of supplementing these
16 responses. If there's a different form of
17 verification required, then we can discuss it. I
18 don't think there's a question that the words that
19 are used in the interrogatory verification are 20 proper or acceptable. It's Mr. Hart -- their
21 argument is Mr. Hart didn't do what he said he did

22 there. And that's a different issue. I don't
23 think it's proper for today. After we supplement
24 and go through this process, they can come back
25 and challenge that at a later time. They can 12

1 challenge it through credibility at trial, through
2 cross examination or direction examination
3 depending on how they put their cause on.

4 I think what we're doing here today may be a
5 waste and we should be moving on, unless there is
6 an objection to the specific verification that was
7 used here.

8 THE COURT: Is there an objection to the
9 specific verification Mr. Hart signed?

10 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. We don't think
11 that the language is inadequate. We believe the 12 language is adequate.

13 The concern that we have is, that after
14 Mr. Hart has given testimony, which I suggest is
15 very clearly contradictory to the verification
16 that he has signed, Morgan Stanley comes in and
17 defends that and says that under these
18 circumstances that is adequate, that Mr. Hart can

16div-005771

19 sign these interrogatories without any
20 investigation, without reading responses, upon
21 reading them, acknowledging that there are clear
22 deficiencies in the response, and there's nothing
23 wrong with that. And That causes us great concern
24 because, if that's the attitude that they are
25 going to take in the preparation of future

13

1 verifications, we have no basis upon which to rely
2 upon those verifications.

3 THE COURT: Okay. Let's back up then. I
4 think -- I would agree the verification signed by
5 Mr. Hart is sufficient. I think the issues we're
6 faced with are what's the appropriate response if
7 one party thinks the answers to interrogatories
8 simply are incomplete. I can think of lots of 9 motions that can be filed but probably not this
10 one. Or what's the appropriate response if we
11 think a party -- not a party -- an individual has 12 verified something and violated his oath. And
13 that's a whole different thing that I didn't see
14 anybody brief today. Certainly we would need
15 Mr. Hart here if we thought we could reach that.

16div-005772

16 So I would deny the motion, but please
17 understand that I'm not saying that another motion
18 may not be well taken that raises the same sort
19 of what I think it is you're really complaining
20 about, which is incomplete or inaccurate answers
21 or somebody attesting to something that's at least
22 not true.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I think Your Honor has
24 described in your earlier comments what you
25 anticipate a verifying witness is verifying, and

14

1 we certainly intend to act upon that.

2 THE COURT: I think it's just sort of
3 intuitive. We all know what the purposes of
4 interrogatories are, and I think that's intuitive.

5 Where next?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Tabs 20 and 14 which address
7 the confidentiality designations.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I might start with a brief
10 introductory comment with regard to the issues
11 raised by these motions, Your Honor.

12 As I assume The Court recognizes, with the

13 filing of the claims before Judge Miller against
14 Arthur Andersen, there is no longer any direct
15 confidentiality interest on the part of the CPH
16 and MAFCO that stands to be protected by continued
17 secrecy. The cat, their cat, is out of the bag.

18 And --

19 THE COURT: Which cat are we speaking of?
20 Are we talking about just the settlement agreement
21 or something else?

22 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the
23 settlement agreement.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: As far as the direct interest

15

1 of CPH and MAFCO in the confidentiality of the
2 settlement agreement, that cat is out of the bag.
3 Nonetheless, CPH and MAFCO have a contractual
4 obligation to protect the confidentiality interest
5 of Arthur Andersen in the terms of the settlement
6 agreement, and that is a contractual obligation
7 which we take very seriously. We must do what we
8 can to protect Arthur Andersen's interest in
9 confidentiality in the terms of that settlement

16div-005774

10 agreement, and these motions arise out of our
11 good-faith effort to fulfill that contract
12 obligation.

13 Now, that places us in a very unusual
14 position because we are here arguing to protect
15 Arthur Andersen's confidentiality obligations
16 while Arthur Andersen's counsel, Kirkland, is
17 arguing against protecting Arthur Andersen's
18 confidentiality obligations.

19 MR. BEMIS: Excuse me, Your Honor. I don't
20 represent Arthur Andersen in this proceeding.

21 THE COURT: I was going to say, I'm not sure
22 if -- if you're impugning the integrity of
23 Mr. Bemis, that's not how we do it. If you're
24 not, I'm not sure how it's relevant.

25 MR. SCAROLA: All right, Your Honor. Well, I

16

1 think it clearly is relevant because it
2 demonstrates the nature of the bona fides of the
3 arguments that are being made on the other side in
4 opposition to these motions, and I suggest that
5 there is something unusual going on here.

6 If we take a look at the specific provisions

7 that we seek to retain confidentiality of, they
8 appear after tab 20-A, page 13.

9 THE COURT: I'm not sure I'm looking at the 10 right thing.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 20-A.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Page 13, footnote nine.

14 THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry.

15 MR. SCAROLA: We have highlighted in each of
16 the relevant documents where there's a
17 confidentiality challenge, the provisions that we
18 believe need to be retained as confidential. And
19 these all are in accord with the prior findings
20 that Your Honor has made and we believe simply an 21 extension of the earlier requests.

22 THE COURT: Okay.

23 MR. SCAROLA: The next is tab C, page five.

24 And, again, we've highlighted that language.

25 THE COURT: Page five.

17

1 MR. SCAROLA: Tab C, page five. And then tab

2 D.

3 THE COURT: Just the language, the settlement

16div-005776

4 agreement is very important to Andersen that it be
5 confidential, particularly the settlement?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

7 THE COURT: Just that language?

8 MR. SCAROLA: That's it.

9 THE COURT: Then -- I'm sorry. Where next?

11 number here is in the upper left-hand corner.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: The highlighted lines 24
14 and 25.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Page 25, line six, seven,
17 eight, and 15 through 19.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Page 26, lines 18 and 19. And 20 page 29, line 14.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SCAROLA: As I understand the position of
23 Morgan Stanley, they are not contesting the fact
24 that these requests are appropriate. They are
25 suggesting an all or nothing approach, and we are

1 obliged to resist an all or nothing approach. It
2 is our contractual obligation to point out to The
3 Court those portions of the record and pleadings
4 where there are references to matters which under
5 the terms of the settlement agreement we have a
6 contractual obligation to protect.

7 THE COURT: So I understand, the one we're
8 doing now is the motion to remove the confidential
9 designations?

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

12 MR. IANNO: Judge, what Mr. Scarola -- and we
13 point this out in our response, he fails to inform
14 The Court that these are oppositions or responses
15 to the motions filed by the plaintiffs in this
16 case which they themselves designated as
17 confidential.

18 First of all, Morgan Stanley was required to 19 designate its responses as confidential. We
20 didn't know what they were pointing to as
21 confidential in their motion. So what The Court
22 said with interrogatories a few moments ago that
23 the obligations are reciprocal, I don't think you
24 can impose upon one party to litigation
25 obligations that are different than the other

1 party. They chose to designate their motions as
2 confidential. They started the confidentiality
3 process down the road.

4 If you're going to remove confidential
5 designations, they should be removed from the
6 entirety of all the pleadings in this case that
7 are filed in the court record for the reasons we
8 set forth in our opposition papers.

9 The second point is, The Court I think had
10 some concerns as we were going through the
11 portions that Mr. Scarola said is, for instance,
12 on the last one he mentioned on page 29 of the 13 transcript, it's tab D, the only thing he says is
14 confidential is, said the amount of the
15 settlement. Well, I think that's in the court
16 record of the Coleman versus Arthur Andersen
17 litigation, and that there was a settlement, and
18 that it obviously settled for some amount. But he
19 doesn't designate the next portion where they talk
20 about terms of indemnity.

21 I think that Coleman is selectively using
22 this confidentiality order to protect interests
23 they feel is in their best interest against Morgan
24 Stanley. And I don't represent Arthur Andersen,

25 so I can be here arguing with total bona fides, as 20

1 Mr. Scarola points out, that none of this should
2 remain confidential, that what Mr. Scarola is
3 doing is trying to gain an unfair advantage for
4 Coleman in this case by designating certain
5 portions as confidential and protecting other
6 portions that are in their best interest. And I
7 think that's what The Court should encompass.

8 THE COURT: Okay. Is there anything other
9 than you think they're doing it selectively
10 improper about they're saying, sort of invoking
11 the portions of the confidentiality or that allows
12 one side or the other to comment as to how the 13 confidential designation be removed?

14 MR. IANNO: I don't think so, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Do we have any argument that the 16 things we just went through should somehow still
17 remain confidential?

18 MR. IANNO: I don't think any of the things
19 that Mr. Scarola just pointed out specifically are
20 confidential.

21 THE COURT: What you're telling me is you're

16div-005780

22 going to make a motion to remove a whole bunch of 23 other designations?

24 MR. IANNO: And we said that. To the extent
25 we've -- in our response we said that.

21

1 MR. BEMIS: We do have that prepared. We
2 didn't have time to get it filed for this hearing.
3 We just ran out of time with the shortness, but it
4 is coming. We are going to try to deal with that
5 issue.

6 MR. IANNO: There's a footnote in our
7 opposition to this particular motion at tab 20
8 that says, to the extent that we need to have the 9 confidentiality designation be removed from
10 Morgan -- Coleman's pleadings that are issued in
11 this case, the one's that Morgan Stanley responded
12 to, we asked The Court to do so.

13 I think it's the only fair and just thing to 14 do in this case, is, if they want the
15 confidentiality removed from Morgan Stanley's
16 pleadings, at the first instance they should
17 remove their own designation of confidentiality.
18 I think equity requires, for them to come in here

19 and request for relief, they have to come in with 20 clean hands to get the relief they're seeking in
21 this motion.

22 With regard to other pleadings that aren't at
23 issue in this motion, I think that has to be dealt
24 with separately, Your Honor. But for them to come
25 in and say, remove it from the opposition but not

22

1 from the moving papers is improper.

2 THE COURT: What's the response?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we've attempted in
4 good faith to identify those portions of these
5 documents which we believe we are contractually
6 obligated to protect. We are making our
7 good-faith effort to fulfill our contract
8 obligation.

9 THE COURT: Okay. I will grant the motion.
10 I'll be honest with you, and I think I've told you
11 before, my personal bias, when you choose to
12 litigate in a public forum, only the most
13 compelling of circumstances should allow the
14 parties to keep something private. I don't see a
15 lot of real compelling circumstances here from a

16 public policy perspective that would require
17 virtually anything with the settlement agreement
18 to be kept private.

19 Certainly, if you want to come in and ask to 20 have other designations removed, that's fine. So
21 it's without prejudice your right to come in and
22 say, hey, if this is coming out, all this other
23 stuff should be undesignated as well.

24 MR. IANNO: Is The Court ruling then that the 25 portions that Mr. Scarola designated are

23

1 confidential? I think that's the second part of
2 his motion or part of his motion. And my argument
3 was that the things he designated weren't even
4 confidential. So, if The Court is removing it,
5 The Court should remove the confidentiality
6 designations on everything.

7 THE COURT: On just the ones we went through,
8 the ones included in his motion.

9 MR. IANNO: Correct. I don't believe those
10 were confidential.

11 THE COURT: But they were designated
12 confidential, correct? I just want to make sure I

13 understand where we are.

14 MR. SCAROLA: The entire pleadings were
15 designated confidential. The portions that I have
16 indicated to Your Honor are those portions, the
17 only portions, which we believe need to remain
18 confidential. Our request is that only those
19 portions be retained as confidential.

20 THE COURT: Okay. That's fine.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the next motion
22 appears at tab 14.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. SCAROLA: And it addresses a reference to 25 indemnification provisions that appear in The 24

1 Court's order of July 12, 2004 at page three,
2 lines four and seven.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. SCAROLA: And we are requesting that that
5 very limited reference be redacted from the copy
6 of the court order that appears in the public
7 court file.

8 There was a response filed by Morgan Stanley
9 that points out that there is a similar reference

16div-005784

10 in the May 14, 2004 order which, quite frankly, we
11 had overlooked, at page two, line 12 and page two,
12 line 16. And we believe it would be appropriate
13 and consistent with The Court's earlier orders if
14 those references also be redacted from the public
15 record.

16 And Morgan Stanley has pointed out that the
17 clerk of the court has failed to follow The
18 Court's earlier direction to place the redacted
19 copy of the settlement agreement under seal, and
20 we agree that it would be appropriate to remind
21 the clerk of its obligation to follow The Court's
22 earlier order.

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

24 MR. IANNO: Judge, we filed a formal response
25 that I want to incorporate, but my point that I

25

1 just want to make to The Court is, this is The
2 Court's order. You write your own orders. I'm
3 sure there was a reason to do that.

4 As far as the specific words that are used,
5 the only point I'll make in addition to what
6 Mr. Scarola said, indemnification is one of those

7 few things that's recognized in the rules of civil
8 procedure that is expressly discoverable. There's 9 nothing confidential about those indemnity
10 agreements. It's just like an insurance policy.

11 Short of that, this we'll leave entirely to
12 the judgment of The Court on what you would like
13 to do with this motion.

14 THE COURT: As I understand it, this is just
15 your attempt to abide by your contractual
16 agreement with Arthur Andersen?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Okay. I would deny it. As I
19 say, I have a strong bias in favor of making
20 everything public. I don't see any reason why
21 this shouldn't be public.

22 Okay. Where next?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there was an ore
24 tenus request to remind the clerk.

25 THE COURT: Yes. And that's agreed?

26

1 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, that was your ruling.
2 We don't think that, obviously, the settlement
3 agreement should remain confidential, but, once

4 again, that was The Court's ruling, so I don't
5 know if it's agreed to, but I think --

6 THE COURT: Do you know what docket entry
7 we're talking about?

8 MR. SCAROLA: I don't, Your Honor.

9 MR. IANNO: I can tell you the date of it.
10 It was December 18th of '03.

11 THE COURT: That was my order?

12 MR. IANNO: I don't know if that's your
13 order, Your Honor, but that's where the settlement
14 agreement appears in the court record. I think
15 it's your order. Your order was, like --
16 Mr. Scarola, correct me if I'm wrong -- about ten
17 days before that.

18 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry. I just don't
19 remember with any --

20 MR. IANNO: For some reason, there was a
21 delay between the date of The Court's order and
22 the clerk's filing of the papers in the case.

23 THE COURT: Probably because we generally
24 hold them to see if anybody is going to seek
25 something and we don't want to hunt them down.

1 MR. IANNO: This particular one, I think The
2 Court had provided in the order that there was a
3 certain time period.

4 THE COURT: Right, to request copies.

5 MR. IANNO: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Let me see what I can find it
7 real quick.

8 Can you ask Mary Ann if she can get the file
9 that includes 180 in this case?

10 Okay. Where to next?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, next is tab three,
12 and that's a defense motion to extend the 13 discovery cutoff to set the motion for contempt
14 for hearing.

15 And before we get into the merits of that
16 motion, in order for us to make some assessment as
17 to what our position with regard to this motion
18 will be, we would like some guidance from The
19 Court. Obviously, a three-month discovery
20 extension that as a consequence of Your Honor's
21 trial calendar results in a six-month or year-long
22 delay in getting this case to trial is an entirely
23 different animal than an extension that results in
24 a one-month delay of the trial.

25 So, for us to be able to respond to this

1 motion and know how much there is to argue about,
2 if anything, it would help us to know, if there is
3 some extension of fact discovery, what the
4 potential implications are in terms of the
5 resetting of trial based upon what the rest of
6 Your Honor's trial calendar is.

7 THE COURT: Okay. I mean, some of these all
8 go together. Maybe we need just to have a frank
9 discussion about how you see everything fitting
10 together.

11 MR. BEMIS: And I would like to address that,
12 if I could, Your Honor, giving that is our motion.
13 And I hope to put all of those pieces together for
14 you because I think some procedural guidance from
15 The Court given the complexity as the case has
16 spun itself out since February would be immensely
17 helpful to all parties.

18 THE COURT: And I can -- let me give you sort
19 of my thumbnail sketch before you guys address it
20 because you can easily change my mind. I can tell
21 you some of the things that concern me about the 22 case.

23 First of all, to answer the question that you
24 directly raised, which was, if we extended

1 than a February '05 -- I mean, a January '05 court
2 date. And the answer is no. If this was an
3 ordinary case and it was noticed for trial today,
4 you would get a court setting of October of this
5 year for trial. So, if you extend discovery in
6 this and that means you're not going to be ready
7 to go in January, you're going to go in February,
8 March, April or May or whenever you guys are
9 actually ready. It doesn't mean that you get
10 blown off to some docket that's a year later.

11 How the merits discovery interacts with the
12 contempt discovery, I think we need to spend some
13 time talking about. I do have some concerns that
14 the contempt discovery is becoming the tail that's 15 wagging the dog. While I understand the
16 importance of the issue to plaintiffs, it strikes
17 me that some of these things, although I
18 understand your client's not a party to it, are
19 going to maybe better bedded in the other case. I
20 mean, if the claim truly lacks any merit,
21 presumably that eventually is going to be

22 addressed in that case. There's going to be some 23 sort of appropriate sanction, and that may affect
24 what's appropriate for us to do.

25 On the other hand, if the claim of Morgan

30

1 Stanley gets bedded in that case and it turns out
2 it did have merit, that may affect what's
3 appropriate here. I do want to discuss how all
4 these things interrelate, but I don't want to let
5 the contempt overwhelm the case itself.

6 MR. BEMIS: May I address this issue?

7 THE COURT: Sure.

8 MR. BEMIS: May I use the podium?

9 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable
10 is fine.

11 MR. BEMIS: In Los Angeles, Your Honor, we're 12 powerless without something to show to someone
13 else.

14 Your Honor, the relief that we've requested
15 here is first and foremost to schedule a prompt
16 resolution of the contempt issues. And that
17 involves probably three sub-issues. I'll address
18 each one separately. As an overview, we need a

19 close of discovery or an idea of when a close of 20 discovery should take place on the contempt issue.

21 We need an idea and hopefully a date for an
22 evidentiary hearing on the contempt issue.

23 Given the most recent allegations that -- of
24 crime and fraud, which is personally now directed
25 to the attorneys, we need some resolution of that.

31

1 The way that we suggest that this be accomplished
2 is that there be a continuation of the merits
3 discovery until the contempt issues are decided.

4 Now, by that I don't mean a stay. I just mean we
5 can do both, but we're going to have to have some
6 accommodations. We cannot be two places at once
7 on occasion. If we're bogged down in hearings
8 here -- and bogged down, I didn't mean it in a
9 pejorative sense.

10 THE COURT: We know you love to come here.

11 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I lived here for many 12 years. I love coming here, but that's not the
13 issue.

14 The issue is it takes days to prepare for
15 these hearings. We have very short briefing

16 schedules, and we usually end up getting the 17 motions on Thursday or Friday. We're trying to
18 get some relief from that, but still five motions
19 to respond to in three or four business days and
20 get the materials to your court is a difficult,
21 time-consuming task.

22 What we're suggesting is some type of
23 scheduling, and I'll get to more details on that,
24 and then a simple reset of the pretrial deadlines
25 which I think is a relatively simple task. We

32

1 sequenced out what needs to be done, but they all
2 trigger off of the close of merits discovery,
3 which we worked back from, as you may recall, from
4 the trial date. We got a trial date, and we went
5 then backwards from that after arguing.

6 I don't believe, in light of Your Honor's
7 comments plus just the facts of the case, that
8 there would be any substantial prejudice to either
9 of the parties for a short extension in setting
10 this contempt for hearing. After all, these
11 claims arose in 1998. They were not filed until 12 five years later in 2003. The damages that are

13 being sought on both sides are extraordinary.

14 The contempt issues are being pressed by CPH.

15 Having raised the issue, we're entitled to defend

16 ourselves. Now that they are challenging the

17 integrity of the lawyers in this case, we're

18 entitled to defend ourselves, we think, as well.

19 By way of overview -- there we go -- we do

20 have a current pretrial schedule, which I'm going

21 to address, and I want to point out what dates

22 affect The Court.

23 Second, I want to try to summarize for you

24 what we've done since February 20th on merits

25 discovery and what's happened on the contempt,

33

1 whether it's the dog or the tail that's driving

2 this proceeding. I want to outline for you what

3 we have identified that remains to be done,

4 hopefully in a nonargumentative fashion, raising

5 what both sides are running into scheduling-wise,

6 and then hopefully to present you with a schedule.

7 Let me spend a minute on some of the history

8 of this, just bring us up. I won't spend much

9 time on it. Let me go back to the February 20th

16div-005794

10 scheduling conference of 2004. At that time I
11 think I've told you before, and I keep falling
12 back on this, my knowledge of the case was about
13 14 days old. We thought or I thought at that time
14 that it would be a very aggressive schedule to set
15 us for February 25th for a trial. That was based
16 on whatever review I had been capable of
17 conducting of the background of the pleadings and
18 indexes and what have you. There was a proposal
19 for an August 2004 trial date. Your Honor said
20 January 18th. We then worked backwards from that 21 date.

22 I said at the time, and I believe that I was
23 accurate, that that was an aggressive schedule.
24 And given my calendar and how many hours I've 25 worked since then, I know it was an aggressive

34

1 schedule. And that was without the contempt
2 proceeding. And that proceeding, frankly, has
3 dominated the last four months.

4 Now, it is true that we did submit to The
5 Court on March the 12th, I believe, a negotiated
6 schedule, and I agreed to it. However, when I

7 agreed to that schedule, which was negotiated at
8 the February 20th conference in the early weeks of 9 March, it was really based -- not really. It was 10 in fact based on multiple letters and conferences
11 with counsel conducted in good faith I think on 12 both sides, my own suggestion that we alternate
13 weeks in depositions, that we have case management
14 conferences so we can try to remove things from
15 the 8:45 call. And we eventually on March 11th
16 did agree to a resolution, if you will, of some
17 few minor details. And, indeed, I was sitting on
18 the runway at Miami International on the airplane
19 on the telephone wrapping up the final details so
20 I was leaving for my 35th wedding anniversary
21 vacation.

22 We thought at that time that we had a
23 schedule, but at the moment that was agreed to
24 when I left, I did not know the motion for 25 contempt was going to be filed the following day.

35

1 It wasn't disclosed to us at that time. And I
2 don't want to revisit that other than to tell you
3 that that's the fact of how the schedule came

16div-005796

4 about because, had I known it was coming, I'm not
5 sure that I would have agreed to the schedule.

6 THE COURT: You weren't privy to that at the
7 March 5th letter?

8 MR. BEMIS: I was not. In all candor, Your
9 Honor, what happened was, the letter was sent to
10 Mr. Yannucci, who was out of his office. The 11 letter never reached Mr. Clare or me at the time.
12 We simply didn't know about it. They sent it. I
13 don't deny they sent it. We didn't get it. It's 14 one of those things that sometimes happens. We
15 did ask whether any additional motions were
16 coming. We were simply told, we can't talk about
17 it. That's water over the dam at this point. It
18 happened. The contempt motion was filed.

19 And we now have, of course, then set a very
20 aggressive schedule. This is a little bit hard
21 for The Court to see, but this is the current
22 pretrial schedule. And I've deleted the things
23 that we have completed. The red boxes, Your
24 Honor, are matters that involve directly The
25 Court's calendar. They don't necessary -- the

1 others are all matters that the lawyers must
2 attend to on their own.

3 We have, in addition to the items -- and we
4 have quite a few depositions to complete, which
5 I'll identify. And we have, on top of that we
6 have quite a few items that -- items we still need
7 to schedule. In addition to what I just showed 8 you, we need to deal with the close of the 9 contempt discovery which includes motions which
10 are pending, potential appeals of issues with
11 regard to that, evidentiary hearings on the motion
12 for contempt. We have motions to amend the
13 pleadings and motions regarding punitive damages.
14 All of that is not yet really firmly set into the 15 schedule.

16 What have we accomplished since the February
17 20th conference? Well, we have completed, I
18 believe, 22 -- 22 depositions. This is what we've
19 completed. Now, obviously, the names are probably
20 less significant to you than they are just to let
21 you know that we've been very busy. To complicate
22 matters, everything is outside of Florida. It's 23 not like we can set up a war room down here and
24 have all of our --

25 THE COURT: You've got that? Thank you very

1 much. I'm sorry. Go ahead.

2 MR. BEMIS: It's not that we can set up war
3 rooms of exhibits and document repositories. We
4 end up having to move usually seven to eight boxes
5 of materials to these different cities by Federal
6 Express the day before, take them out, get them
7 back, reorganize and what have you. So it's a
8 complex process, and both sides have been, I
9 think, diligently taking depositions. I think 23
10 have been taken, and I've identified about ten --
11 not about -- ten that we've taken and 13 that CPH
12 has taken.

13 Now, this is only the tip of the iceberg
14 because, in addition to trying to take
15 depositions, we have numerous situations where
16 witnesses simply aren't available after they are
17 scheduled. For example, here's a letter that we
18 received from counsel from Jenner & Block telling
19 us that a deposition that we had scheduled during 20 our allocated week right on the verge of
21 deposition can't be taken. We didn't quarrel with
22 it. We didn't file a motion to compel. We said,
23 okay, we'll have to reschedule. Well, we don't
24 get when we do that an alternative date. It's

1 schedule, and we can't replace it.

2 This one, I had actually flown to Washington
3 to fly to New York, and I got stuck there, and I
4 couldn't take the depo. Well, that's not the only
5 one. We've got another one on May 21 for Mr.
6 Schwartz, unavoidable conflicts, no explanation.
7 I don't quarrel with the explanation. That's not
8 my point today. He just didn't make it. We
9 didn't get a substitute. Here's another one.

10 They cancelled Mr. Robinson the following week.
11 Again, I don't quarrel with the reason. He just 12 doesn't show. I can't go. I'm already in
13 Washington. I've lost three days dealing with 14 this. Mr. Spoor, again, July 16th, he's 15 cancelled.

16 Morgan Stanley has had to do the same thing.
17 We've had several instances where we've had to
18 cancel depositions. I don't want to make it sound like
19 it's a one-side affair. It's not. I would argue
20 we've had more problems than they've had, but it's 21 still happening on both sides. And here's another

22 one where we recently had to do the same thing, a
23 couple of examples where we've had try to
24 reschedule and get people different dates.

25 What do we have outstanding at this point?

39

1 These are depositions we currently have scheduled.
2 I'm going to get to what we can accomplish in
3 August. This is just what has been requested, but
4 we don't have scheduled. I misspoke. This is
5 what has been requested. Here's the dates we
6 requested them. Some of these are very important
7 people. For example, Mr. Perelman, we've
8 requested his deposition. We don't have a date
9 for him. He's very last on the list.

10 Mr. Marher, those are some of the key players.

11 Those depositions in deposition will take two 12 days, counting travel, add the time up, back and
13 forth. They all have to be taken in New York.
14 It's not going to be in Florida. I want to remind
15 The Court, because these are there, we cannot
16 subpoena these people for trial. We either get
17 them one time, or we don't get them at all. We
18 only have that one opportunity to get them.

19 We think -- in addition to this, we have
20 what's been taken, what's now being requested. We
21 have accomplished a lot. We've resolved eleven
22 discovery motions since February. We've had five
23 in-person hearings here. We've done seven more
24 sets of written discovery, and we fully briefed
25 and argued the choice of law motion on time. It's

40

1 now pending before The Court.

2 The case management conferences are taking an
3 awful amount of time. Awful in the sense of --

4 THE COURT: A large amount.

5 MR. BEMIS: That's a much better selection of
6 words.

7 When I suggested case management conferences,
8 it was because I saw in my review of the pleadings
9 and the transcripts that there were a lot of 8:45
10 hearings that were requiring people to travel. I
11 think two days of travel for an 8:45, a short
12 hearing, which was economically wasteful, I
13 thought not an efficient use of time. I thought,
14 if we could aggregate these in a single hearing,
15 we might make some more progress.

16div-005802

16 That really hasn't happened. What has
17 happened is, we're getting very substantial
18 proceedings being noticed in this case at the 19 conferences. They're being done, as you heard on
20 the scheduling issues, a week in advance with
21 three to four business days to get materials to
22 The Court. That's a schedule that's worse than
23 Bush versus Gore in the Supreme Court.

24 THE COURT: I hope the order we gave will
25 help with that.

41

1 MR. BEMIS: I hope so. That explains what's
2 happened in the past. Going forward hopefully
3 we'll get some relief from this.

4 Even, again, with all of the challenges that
5 we've done, we have accomplished I think a great
6 deal. May I hand this up to The Court? It's kind
7 of a summary you might want to look at.

8 THE COURT: Have you shared it with the other
9 gentlemen?

10 MR. BEMIS: Of course, of course. This is
11 just a summary, Your Honor, of what we've been
12 doing by depositions and hearings and the dates

13 blocked out on calendars. It's not something that
14 you need to read through right now, but you might
15 want to look at it if you take this matter under 16 advisement.

17 We have much left to be done and not a lot of 18 time to do it in. We have -- if I can get to the 19 next slide here -- these are the depositions that
20 remain to be -- remain to be completed. We tried
21 to summarize them for you. Some of the requests
22 are out for these. Some we're working on
23 scheduling. Some are nonparty. Some are parties.
24 These people are on vacations. People are sick.
25 The way we've been doing this is, we're not

42

1 noticing. I know originally parties noticed
2 depositions, and then they argued about whether
3 they could get them done. I think that the
4 parties reached a good-faith accommodation, tell
5 us who you want to take, give us some dates, and
6 then we're renoticing them. And that's the
7 process that's being followed.

8 So these are the people that I believe are
9 going to be deposed. I've gone through our list,

10 and I think our list is relatively accurate of 11 what we're going to need. Whether they take all
12 that they originally told us about is a matter
13 they'll decide.

14 We've concluded, just looking at this, not
15 including travel time, we've got 43 business days
16 of occupied time that we have to deal with.
17 Twenty-eight of these are nonparty, so we don't
18 control them in the sense that we can make them
19 appear. Some require subpoenas all outside of the 20 jurisdiction of Florida, so we have to go get
21 commission orders, et cetera. Very time
22 consuming.

23 July and August are very difficult months to 24 schedule things because of vacations. We talked
25 about that in February. We thought that was going

43

1 to be a problem. We've got some witnesses who
2 have medical problems, and we've got three
3 witnesses that are in Europe. We're going to have
4 to go to London. And there's one that we think
5 we're going to have to go to Paris. I know this
6 sounds like hardship duty, but, you know, somebody

16div-005805

7 is going to have to go, and it's going to take a
8 couple days to get it done. And they're important
9 people.

10 August, on top of that, if we look at the 11 calendar we have for August, the blue tells you
12 what we've occupied, we're already booked in
13 August. We've only got I think --

14 THE COURT: I'm afraid we're not going to
15 have time for the other motions we have, which are
16 substantive if you take real long on this.

17 Cut to the bottom line. How much additional
18 time are you asking for on the merits?

19 MR. BEMIS: I think that what we need on the
20 merits -- I don't know precisely. What I'm
21 thinking is 90 days is a number that we could work
22 with, depending on what you do with the contempt
23 proceeding. I think the contempt proceeding has
24 to be set first. I'm not saying we won't work
25 with the rest, but if the contempt proceeding --

44

1 THE COURT: Why does the contempt have to be
2 set first?

3 MR. BEMIS: I think because of the relief

4 that they're -- first of all, it is a diversion
5 that is interfering with our ability to take care
6 of the merits. That's number one. Number two is,
7 the extraordinary relief that they are requesting,
8 including disqualification of Kirkland & Ellis, is
9 a very significant matter. We have invested -- my
10 clients have invested -- I say we. My client has 11 invested in their counsel. We have learned the 12 case. We have managed the documents. If we are
13 disqualified in any fashion from this case, it
14 will impact the ability of any counsel to be ready
15 for trial at any date.

16 Plus, I think just overriding fairness, these
17 allegations need to be resolved. It escalates
18 every hearing. We have gone from an improper
19 disclosure to most recently at the last hearing
20 just a mere reference to a crime and fraud to the
21 most recent papers asserting a crime and fraud
22 with an allegation now that the attorneys are
23 involved in the crime and fraud. Those are
24 serious allegations, and they need to be
25 addressed. We want them addressed. We want the

1 air cleared on it so that we can proceed.

2 Again, I'm not asking for a stay of
3 discovery. I thought about it, but I'm not. I
4 think we can probably proceed with the merits
5 discovery. It's going to interfere with the
6 merits discovery, maybe a day where I can't be two
7 places at once. I'm thinking 90 days, give us 90
8 days, at least on the close of fact discovery.

9 That puts us well within the Rules of Judicial
10 Administration, I believe, for a case of this
11 complexity, which I think is -- 18 months I think
12 is the standard under Florida law for cases like 13 this. We'll be a little bit over but not by very 14 much.

15 At some point in between that 90 days, Your
16 Honor, based on your calendar and your judgments,
17 tell us when the hearing is. Let's get ready for 18 the hearing. It's their motion. They have to go
19 first. If on top of the contempt they are going
20 to assert crime fraud, we need to know that. And
21 I need to know for very specific procedures I'm
22 going to address not now but on the other motion
23 of how that has to be handled. They are not in
24 the procedures that are being followed right now.
25 It's not fair for them to put -- in our view, for

1 those allegations to be made in open court and not
2 follow the proper procedures and give us our
3 rights to defend.

4 THE COURT: Backing into it, some of this
5 really jumps to the next motion. If you're
6 suggesting a 90-day delay in the time deadlines
7 for the underlying case, what are you suggesting
8 as deadlines for the resolution of the contempt
9 proceedings?

10 MR. BEMIS: I think I would pick a date. I
11 would pick a date first and work backwards. A
12 hearing date, what is a hearing date. I think you
13 should be able to set a hearing date within the 14 next 30 days.

15 THE COURT: But how -- that wouldn't even
16 give us time to resolve all the outstanding
17 discovery.

18 MR. BEMIS: I'm not sure, Your Honor, that
19 we'll get all of the outstanding discovery issues
20 resolved within 30 days. I don't know because I
21 don't know what you're going to do with them.

22 THE COURT: I can't believe we can get the
23 underlying discovery disputes on the contempt
24 proceeding resolved and what I permitted to be

1 days. It doesn't make any sense, particularly
2 since we already -- I already articulated my
3 belief that how Morgan Stanley believes it was
4 damaged by Arthur Andersen is something that needs
5 to be bedded for purposes of the contempt. I
6 gather from what I've read that that's not an easy
7 answer, and you guys aren't prepared to answer
8 that right now.

9 MR. BEMIS: Well, you've issued an order on 10 that. Our response is currently due on August
11 2nd.

12 THE COURT: Right.

13 MR. BEMIS: I'm not prepared to tell you as I
14 stand here today given the shortness of time that
15 I've had to assess it precisely how that's going
16 to be answered. I can't tell you at this point
17 whether we're going to take an appeal of it by
18 writ of certiorari, and some of that may depend on
19 what happens later on this morning.

20 I still think that, while 30 days may sound
21 aggressive, they filed the motion. Normally the

22 motion would have been filed when they had a
23 factual basis for the motion. We would have
24 answered it.

25 THE COURT: Not necessarily because the

48

1 discovery is not relevant necessarily directly to
2 the issues in this case. I'm not sure that's
3 fair.

4 MR. BEMIS: Well, then we have a disagreement
5 on that, and I won't belabor the point. I believe
6 the process is as I articulated it at the April
7 30th hearing. They should have filed a motion.
8 We would have answered the motion appropriately
9 with denials. They would have been put to their
10 proof of the date, and they were not. This was 11 not to be a preliminary hearing on whether we
12 should -- that issue you ruled on, and I'm not
13 trying to reargue it.

14 THE COURT: As I understand it, what you're
15 suggesting is a 90-day delay on the underlying 16 action and that the motion for contempt to be
17 heard within 30 days.

18 MR. BEMIS: Or such other period of time that

19 you think is reasonable within the 90-day period.
20 We may have to revisit the 90 days depending on
21 what you do with the contempt proceedings.
22 There's no way to predict how this is going to
23 eventually resolve itself until we get farther
24 down the trail. You also need to tell us, are you
25 going to allow them to proceed on crime fraud as

49

1 they allege because there are very specific
2 procedures.

3 THE COURT: I read your memo. It sort of
4 goes on. Some of the motions we still have left.

5 But, Mr. Scarola, just so we can try to
6 narrow the discussion some, what's your response
7 first to the request that the underlying action be
8 continued 90 days, the pretrial deadline be
9 extended in order to allow discovery?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Ninety days is too long. We
11 are willing to agree to a shorter extension.

12 THE COURT: What would that be?

13 MR. SCAROLA: We think that 30 days might be 14 appropriate. I would be happy to discuss the 15 details why.

16div-005812

16 And with regard to the contempt motion, we
17 would love to have the contempt motion disposed of
18 within the next 30 days, Your Honor, but I think
19 Your Honor's observations are very accurate in 20 that regard. I don't know how we can possibly
21 complete the necessary discovery in order to have
22 that hearing in 30 days, particularly if Morgan
23 Stanley continues to insist upon providing
24 unresponsive answers, asserting privileges that
25 have already been overruled by The Court and

50

1 insisting upon the full time for compliance under
2 the rules with regard to all of their responses.

3 If they agree to an abbreviated schedule and
4 The Court has the time to hear the motions
5 necessary to address legal issues that they
6 raised, we'll devote the resources necessary to
7 get that contempt proceeding done within 30 days,
8 but that's going to impose a significant burden on
9 them that I hear they're incapable of meeting;
10 although, it's difficult for me to understand
11 that, and I'll address that when I have an
12 opportunity to address these issues more broadly.

13 If they want to do it, they need to
14 understand that they're assuming very significant
15 obligations which are going to include an
16 abbreviated, a drastically abbreviated schedule
17 with regard to the resolution of all outstanding
18 discovery issues.

19 MR. BEMIS: All outstanding discovery has
20 been answered with the exception of the motions to 21 compel. There's no outstanding discovery. We've
22 answered. I'm not saying everybody like the
23 answers. And I understand that you have an order
24 we responded to on August 2nd and that there's a
25 motion today, but all the discovery has been

51

1 responded to by both sides. So that at least is
2 behind us.

3 THE COURT: I would rather go through the
4 rest of the motions now because how those turn out
5 I think in a lot of sense is going to affect the
6 timing on these other issues.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We suggest, Your Honor, that
8 the --

9 THE COURT: Yes, Mr. Scarola.

16div-005814

10 MR. SCAROLA: We suggest that the
11 consideration of the contempt issues really ought
12 not to influence what The Court determines with 13 regard to how we are going to proceed with the 14 trial.

15 THE COURT: I understand that would be your
16 position. I also understand as a practical matter
17 the timing of the resolution and the timing of the 18 discovery disputes and the contempt have a very
19 practical effect on the time available to work on
20 the underlying case. So I understand your client
21 would disagree, but I don't think you can bring a
22 substantive motion that does require attention and
23 discovery and then suggest it doesn't have an
24 effect on the timing on the remainder of the case.

25 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not suggesting that it

52

1 doesn't have an impact on the resources necessary
2 to be devoted to this case, but we really need to
3 consider the context in which this is occurring.
4 Kirkland & Ellis is a 1,000-lawyer firm, and the
5 litigation chairman of that firm is involved in
6 this lawsuit. Carlton, Fields is a 200-lawyer

7 firm. That's 1,200 lawyers available to devote
8 resources necessary to get this case done and to
9 meet the commitment that they made.

10 THE COURT: They probably don't want to have
11 to educate everyone on this case.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I understand that.

13 THE COURT: And I understand you disagree. I
14 think, in all honesty, I want a better sense of 15 where we're going with the contempt. That's going
16 to give me a better idea for the contempt and the 17 underlying litigation.

18 MR. BEMIS: I have a bad tendency to 19 interrupt. I apologize.

20 THE COURT: I do, too.

21 MR. BEMIS: On the contempt issue, there's 22 two ways we can proceed with this. They are the 23 movant on this. We have a, if you will, a cross
24 motion on the issue.

25 THE COURT: On what issue?

53

1 MR. BEMIS: It relates to the scope of the
2 waiver issues and how it interfaces with the new
3 allegations that are made. I suggest that we

4 address the broad issues before we go 20 --
5 there's 20 subparagraphs.

6 THE COURT: I know there are.

7 MR. BEMIS: Twenty subparagraphs. I suggest
8 that we address the broad issues of the privilege
9 and the crime fraud, what we're going to do with
10 those issues, and the sham pleadings because they 11 permeate the objections. For example, there are 12 21 --

13 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry to interrupt, but
14 this is our motion, and I may be able to narrow
15 the issues significantly if I'm permitted to 16 address it first.

17 MR. BEMIS: If I may just finish, and then I
18 will sit down. May I finish, Your Honor?

19 THE COURT: Yes, go ahead.

20 MR. BEMIS: There are like -- not like.
21 There are 21 cut and pasted objections which are
22 identical. We can speed some of that up by
23 addressing them if they are --

24 THE COURT: Sure. Or we can just do them in
25 order. And once I've ruled on one, you can

1 probably figure I'll rule the same way on the
2 other ones.

3 MR. BEMIS: And that is possible. I thought
4 about that process, and I respectfully do think
5 that the most expeditious way is to address the
6 structure of what they've challenged because
7 there's three things they have. One is that it's
8 a sham pleading. Number two, that crime and fraud
9 applies. And number three, that there is a
10 waiver.

11 Now, we did get your order on July 12 or
12 shortly after that. It raises substantial
13 constitutional issues. If Your Honor adheres to
14 her position, I am not going to belabor the point
15 with you, but there are issues that we didn't
16 brief that I want --

17 THE COURT: Please understand that I didn't
18 get, nor have I reviewed, nor have I set for 19 hearing any motion for rehearing, so we're not
20 going there today.

21 MR. BEMIS: Well, it's not a question of a
22 motion for rehearing. It's a question of our
23 response to their offensive position, and we, I
24 think, are entitled to raise those issues in
25 defense. If you say no, I won't address them,

1 other than to put them into the record for the
2 appellate court.

3 THE COURT: That's fine. Please understand
4 we have the July 12th order, and right now we're
5 not revisiting it.

6 Let me go to Mr. Scarola because I do want to
7 get to those motions, and we can discuss the most
8 efficient way to dispose of them.

9 What tab am I looking at?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Tab number six.

11 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor. I'll sit
12 down.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor. Your
15 Honor will recall that, in the context of our 16 earlier motion to compel, we made reference to the 17 crime fraud exception to the attorney/client
18 privilege.

19 THE COURT: If I understand, you're seeking
20 to invoke that by saying that the pleading in the 21 new litigation is a sham?

22 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. We're
23 suggesting that the crime fraud exception is
24 broader than application simply in the context of

1 want to go there today. We have raised the crime
2 fraud exception issue to be sure that it is not
3 waived. We wish to preserve it.

4 What we ask The Court to do today is
5 something that is far simpler than to get into
6 both the substantively complex and procedurally
7 protracted process of determining the crime fraud
8 exception application in this case. What we want
9 Your Honor to do is simply to apply the rulings
10 that you have already made in your prior order of 11 July 12th to the interrogatories and request to 12 produce that are presently before The Court for
13 determination.

14 The reason why we want you to do that is
15 because we believe that we may very well receive
16 sufficient information on the basis of the rulings
17 that Your Honor has already made to allow us to go
18 forward without needing to confront the broader
19 expanse of information that may be available to us
20 if we meet the crime fraud threshold to overcome
21 privilege assertions.

22 So all we want you to do is to walk through
23 these interrogatories with us to the extent that's 24 necessary and to apply the same rulings that Your
25 Honor has previously made with regard to findings

57

1 that particular questions do not involve a
2 legitimate claim of privilege or that they are
3 encompassed within the scope of those issues where
4 Your Honor has found a waiver to exist. If we can
5 get that information, I think we may not have to
6 come back to The Court.

7 THE COURT: So, as I understand what you're
8 asking me to do today is not rule on any crime
9 fraud issue?

10 MR. SCAROLA: I'm asking you to defer ruling
11 on the crime fraud issues, simply to go through
12 these interrogatories, apply the same standards
13 that you've previously applied, extend the July
14 12th order which applied to a particular set of 15 interrogatories to the subsequently filed
16 discovery requests.

17 THE COURT: Is there any objection to holding
18 the crime fraud issue in abeyance?

19 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor. This is a
20 reprise of the rule to show cause. They throw an
21 issue before The Court like on the rule to show
22 cause, which I argued, and I think you ultimately
23 accepted I was correct that it was procedurally
24 improper. They raise an allegation with no
25 evidence, impugning the integrity of the lawyers,

58

1 accusing me of a crime of fraud.

2 THE COURT: We need to get back to what we're
3 talking about here.

4 MR. BEMIS: That's exactly what they have
5 done. They have 23 times asserted in a filing in
6 a courthouse --

7 THE COURT: So you want them to either
8 withdraw it or be prepared to have it bedded?

9 MR. BEMIS: Right. That's exactly what I
10 want.

11 THE COURT: I think that's fair.

12 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just a moment?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we would request
15 permission to withdraw those allegations with

16div-005822

16 regard to the crime fraud exception without
17 prejudice to renew them when and if we believe
18 it's appropriate.

19 THE COURT: Please understand, if you're
20 going to withdraw, that's fine. It's not with or
21 without prejudice. If for some reason you think
22 they come back in, you come in and we discuss
23 whether it's procedurally appropriate or not. I
24 assume there's no objection if I just do an order
25 that says they are being withdrawn, period.

59

1 MR. BEMIS: I have an objection to the second
2 time that they have done this and then walk in and
3 say it's all right. It's not all right to make
4 these type of allegations against my client and
5 the attorneys and then say, I'm sorry, I now
6 realize I did it incorrectly, I'll withdraw it
7 after twice raising the issue. And I think anyone
8 who is sitting here and listening to it would have
9 the same reaction. It's just improper.

10 THE COURT: Well --

11 MR. BEMIS: And I apologize if I seem
12 somewhat frustrated by this, but they are serious

16div-005823

13 allegations.

14 THE COURT: I agree. And, no, you're not
15 offending me that you would take it seriously. I
16 would be upset if you didn't. I don't -- the two
17 choices I see are, either you withdraw them, I do
18 an order saying you withdrew them in open court
19 and they have left us, or we go through the 20 procedure to fully let the issues. I don't think
21 we just say, oh -- they're not going to be
22 addressed on their merits today.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, with the 45 minutes we
24 have remaining, they are not going to be addressed
25 on their merits today.

60

1 THE COURT: I think it's your call, are they
2 still with us or not.

3 MR. SCAROLA: With the understanding that
4 they are not going to be addressed on the merits
5 today, is Your Honor prepared at least to address
6 that portion of the motion that I have suggested
7 can be addressed today? And that is, application
8 of Your Honor's earlier ruling.

9 THE COURT: The first question I have to you

10 is, are you withdrawing the crime fraud issue or
11 not? That's a yes or no.

12 MR. SCAROLA: No.

13 THE COURT: Okay. So we still have those?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. And we request that the
15 order in which we address these issues is to first
16 deal with the simple extension of Your Honor's
17 order to the pending interrogatories.

18 MR. BEMIS: And I, Your Honor, request that
19 we address the crime fraud issue first. It's the 20 most serious one that's made, and we should be
21 heard on it and not let it linger for another case
22 management conference.

23 THE COURT: I think we're going to go through 24 them one by one, and the order we get to them is
25 the order we get to them.

61

1 MR. BEMIS: Crime fraud is raised in the very
2 first --

3 THE COURT: It probably is. I know I read it
4 a lot.

5 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, may we address these
6 one at a time so that each interrogatory -- so I

7 don't have to go back and do 20 of them?

8 THE COURT: That's what I'm proposing. Let
9 me figure out the best way to get the
10 interrogatories and the answers in front of me. I
11 know you repeat the interrogatories in your
12 motion. I know I have the answers. Can you tell
13 me which tab they're at?

14 MR. SCAROLA: It's under tab six, Your Honor.

15 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I have actually
16 assembled one volume which has the
17 interrogatories, the response, the argument and
18 the motion response on a single page.

19 THE COURT: Do you object to my looking at
20 that?

21 MR. SCAROLA: No. Do we have two copies of
22 it so we can be looking at the same thing?

23 MR. BEMIS: Sure, I think we have an extra
24 copy. There will be a small charge.

25 May I approach the bench, Your Honor?

62

1 THE COURT: Yes. Can I go back to the ore
2 tenus motion on The Court file? I didn't want to
3 forget that I had gotten this. I don't think that

4 the clerk has done anything improper. The order I
5 wrote said the only thing that was supposed to be
6 filed under seal was the complete copy of the 7 settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A to the
8 order. Exhibit A to the order was the redacted
9 copy where the only thing I redacted I think was
10 the account information.

11 So, no, the clerk has not violated my order.
12 If you're now saying you want something sealed
13 that's not sealed, you may want to make an
14 appropriate order.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: So that would be denied. Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I'm having the
18 first chance to look at what has been handed to
19 The Court. And while I don't object to Your Honor
20 using this to the extent that it may be of
21 assistance to you, I think what you'll find when
22 you look at it is that the interrogatory is set
23 out in full, Morgan Stanley's objections are set
24 out, and their reply is set out. And what we have
25 then is a one- or two-line summary --

1 THE COURT: Okay.

2 MR. SCAROLA: -- of CPH's argument which --

3 THE COURT: Well, I also have your motion
4 thing in front of me, so I have the full version
5 as well.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. I just don't want The
7 Court to overlook the fact that the way in which
8 they have chosen to summarize our argument may not
9 necessarily accurately reflect our argument.

10 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, that is -- it is
11 accurate that what we did was extract what we took 12 from our paper in terms of their objections and
13 didn't repeat a whole page of the objection as
14 much as edit. Mr. Scarola is correct, and I
15 should have pointed that out to The Court. I'm 16 sorry.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Interrogatory one.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. The Court
19 concluded in its July 12 order that the privilege
20 has been waived with respect to the subject matter
21 of this interrogatory. The only document that
22 Morgan Stanley has produced is the April 5
23 retention letter which, not insignificantly,
24 postdates our motion for contempt by weeks. This
25 is, we suggest, an improperly asserted objection

1 that has already been addressed in the July 12th
2 order. Your Honor should overrule the objection
3 and order a full and complete response on the
4 basis of the waiver that has already been found to
5 exist.

6 THE COURT: How do you define identified? Is
7 that defined in the interrogatories?

8 MR. SCAROLA: It is, Your Honor. I don't
9 think we've included in the interrogatories in the
10 exhibits that we provided to The Court, and I
11 can't put my hands on a copy among the materials
12 that we have with us, but I know that identify is
13 a defined term, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Do you all have a copy of the
15 interrogatories?

16 MR. IANNO: I'm looking, Your Honor.

17 MR. BEMIS: I do someplace. I think in our
18 answers we didn't repeat the definition, so I'm
19 not sure that I even have them here.

20 THE COURT: Why don't we continue and -- I
21 just was trying to figure out exactly --

22 MR. SCAROLA: Are we going to do these one at
23 a time with our position stated?

24 THE COURT: I think we need to start. We're

25 not going to finish, but I think we need to start

65

1 with one at a time and see how far we get.

2 MR. BEMIS: Are you finished?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. That's my initial
4 presentation and support.

5 THE COURT: What's the response?

6 MR. BEMIS: My response is, may I have some
7 water?

8 THE COURT: Sure.

9 MR. BEMIS: The water fountains are broken.
10 There's no water outside at all.

11 THE COURT: How long have they been broken?
12 It's a pressure issue?

13 MR. IANNO: I don't think they've worked for
14 a long time.

15 THE COURT: Really? That's bad.

16 MR. BEMIS: First of all, with regard to the
17 first allegation that we did not respond, we did
18 identify and eventually -- and I'm sure Your Honor
19 is aware of this, but pursuant to a stipulation,
20 we did produce the, what I will call the legal
21 representation agreement, some would call it a

16div-005830

22 retention letter, between Kellogg Huber and Morgan
23 Stanley. That was done, I believe, right after
24 our last hearing on July 2nd. I'm not sure that
25 Your Honor was aware of that, but we've identified

66

1 that.

2 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Is that the April 5th
3 retention letter?

4 MR. BEMIS: The April 5th retention letter.
5 There is only one that I am aware of, and that is
6 the one that is produced pursuant to our
7 stipulation. That production would not be argued
8 to be a waiver of attorney/client privilege.

9 We identified in our answers to
10 interrogatories that we -- the dates of
11 conversations which, by the way, is the same
12 information that in many respects we would be
13 required to identify pursuant to the Florida Rules
14 of Judicial Administration, 2. -- I think I've got
15 the number right off my head -- 061.

16 THE COURT: It is.

17 MR. BEMIS: We would be required to identify 18 the matter that they were retained in. We would

16div-005831

19 be required to identify the counsel, and we would
20 be required to identify the date of their
21 retention in order for foreign attorneys to
22 practice in the state. That even came up, as you
23 may recall, at the April 30th hearing. There was
24 some issues of whether we had adequately provided
25 all that information and declarations that were

67

1 filed and the application, and we did provide
2 that.

3 What I think they're asking for further under
4 the crime fraud exception were the waiver
5 argument, is that, by virtue of identifying
6 Kellogg Huber as the attorney in the case, that
7 somehow we have -- that is a sham pleading, and,
8 therefore, they're entitled to everything. And on
9 the issue of the --

10 THE COURT: I think this is just a pure
11 waiver, as I understand it.

12 MR. BEMIS: They also argue in their full
13 motion that crime fraud exception applies in the 14 very first interrogatories. I believe it's on 15 page three.

16div-005832

16 MR. SCAROLA: It is on page three at the top
17 of the page.

18 MR. BEMIS: Page three, top of the page,
19 right-hand side, runs down approximately 17 lines
20 from the top. I did not hear that withdrawn.

21 Let me address the issue of a sham pleading,
22 if I may, first. In order for them to establish a
23 sham pleading, they need to file a verified motion
24 with this court or with another court. That's an
25 issue Your Honor may have to decide, where does

68

1 that go. We think that the proper procedure under
2 Rule 1.150 is that it has to go before Judge
3 Miller. That matter is pending before her. And I
4 will not tell you that I found a case on this
5 point.

6 THE COURT: Let's, so I'm not overwhelmed --
7 I mean, I understand that argument. Let's assume
8 I'm probably not going to accept it.

9 MR. BEMIS: Then at a minimum, even if they
10 allege it's a sham pleading in this Court, they
11 need to file something that's verified that sets
12 forth the facts under verification that it's a

13 sham. That's not been done. All that's been done
14 thus far -- and if we were to go back all the way
15 to March 19th, there is no evidence that's been
16 offered in this case at all.

17 THE COURT: So you're saying they haven't
18 made a prima facie showing that would trigger it?

19 MR. BEMIS: Yes, with regard to the rule,
20 and, yes, with regard to the crime and fraud
21 exception under the Butler Pappas trilogy. Can
22 you put that up for me?

23 MR. BEMIS: I have a copy of that case. Can
24 I had that up to The Court?

25 THE COURT: I have it.

69

1 MR. BEMIS: Okay. The Butler Pappas Trilogy,
2 which has really its origin in the American
3 Tobacco case in the Fourth DCA as well as I think
4 the Supreme Court's decision in Zolon and Haines
5 (phonetic), sets forth three things that you need
6 to do and the procedure The Court has to follow.

7 The first step is that there must be an
8 allegation that the communication, whatever it is
9 that they're looking for here, and this would be

10 the communications between, I assume the way the
11 question is drafted, between Morgan Stanley and
12 Kellogg Huber, that it must have been made as part
13 of an effort to perpetrate a crime or fraud. And
14 it has to be a future crime or fraud, not past.
15 And they have to identify the crime or fraud.
16 That's what they need to do. That's not been
17 done. That's just the allegation.

18 Step two in the process is, you must
19 determine that they have made a prima fascia case,
20 and I emphasize evidence because the cases clearly
21 say argument of counsel, memorandum of law are not
22 evidence, that a client sought counsel's advice.
23 I don't know here whether their allegation is that
24 they sought my law firm's advice or they sought
25 Kellogg Huber's advice because they don't make

70

1 that allegation, and they clearly don't have any
2 evidence of it.

3 And thirdly, under step three of Butler
4 Pappas, which stems from language out of American
5 Tobacco, we are entitled to provide The Court a
6 reasonable explanation of our conduct at an

7 evidentiary hearing, a reasonable explanation of
8 our conduct which, of course, is what we have a
9 major issue with what happened on April 30th
10 because we were under the impression that you were
11 proceeding with the hearing in one fashion. It
12 turns out that ultimately the procedure became
13 more truncated. We believed at the time we were 14 entitled to provide a reasonable explanation of
15 our proceeding, and that reasonable explanation is
16 not a waiver of the privilege under the law.

17 THE COURT: Again, we're not rearguing that.

18 MR. BEMIS: I know, but, Your Honor, it's a
19 basic defense under the due process clause to the 20 allegation of crime fraud, and we're entitled to
21 present it. I make it for the record. I won't
22 repeat it, but that's our position for the record.

23 As with regard to that, we are not at any of
24 those three steps; therefore, those objections
25 ought to be plainly overruled that it's a sham

71

1 pleading. They haven't complied with whatever
2 requirement you imposed, and the Butler Pappas
3 Trilogy of procedural steps that have to be

4 followed have not been even followed in the
5 smallest element in this case.

6 Other than that, I believe we have fully
7 identified what is required by the answer, and
8 we've answered it fully. We've gone beyond that
9 by providing the legal representation agreement.

10 I don't know what more we could do other than to
11 divulge every communication between Kellogg Huber
12 and Morgan in subdetail, and we do not believe we
13 are obligated to do that, that that is protected
14 under attorney/client. That's our response to 15 interrogatory one.

16 THE COURT: What do you want to respond?

17 MR. SCAROLA: First, that Mr. Bemis has not
18 addressed the primary contention that we have
19 made, and that is that this is covered by Your
20 Honor's July 12 order that there has already been
21 a waiver with respect to these issues. That order
22 specifically found at page three, quote, it may
23 not -- referring to Morgan Stanley & Company --
24 selectively reveal only such privileged
25 information as it believes helps its position.

1 The conclusion is inescapable that defendant,
2 Morgan Stanley & Company, has waived any privilege
3 with respect to the reasons for and timing of the
4 retention of Kellogg Huber law firm, the scope of
5 its representation and the timing of the Arthur
6 Andersen suit.

7 Those determinations have been made. This
8 interrogatory addresses those issues. And on that
9 basis alone before ever reaching crime fraud
10 issues, Your Honor should overrule the objections
11 and require a full and complete response.

12 With regard to the Butler Pappas procedure,
13 we suggest that the record before this Court
14 already establishes evidentiary support for a
15 prima fascia finding of application of the crime
16 fraud exception, and that evidentiary support
17 comes by way of Mr. Bemis's own open court
18 representations to The Court about the
19 relationship between the settlement agreement and
20 the suit filed in front of Judge Miller. It comes
21 by way of the timing of that litigation, and it
22 comes by way of the patent lack of factual support
23 for damages in that Arthur Andersen suit.

24 We have cited to The Court case law that
25 supports our position that sham litigation can

1 trigger the crime fraud exception. Those cases
2 are referenced at page three of our memorandum. I
3 think it is clear that the weight of authority is
4 that baseless litigation may bring the crime fraud
5 exception into play, that any type of misconduct
6 inconsistent with the basic premises of the
7 adversary system are sufficient to trigger the
8 crime fraud exception application. But that is
9 not an issue that needs to be reached in light of
10 the fact that the waiver already found to exist
11 applies to the information being sought by this
12 interrogatory.

13 THE COURT: I will grant the motion in part.
14 I think, and I've said it before, I think we 15 clearly had a waiver as to the scope of the 16 Kellogg Huber representation and the timing of its 17 retention. I had specific representations made to 18 me in open court about why they were retained, the
19 limited purpose for which they were retained.

20 On the other hand, I do think this does ask
21 for some information which could be still deemed
22 privileged and not waived.

23 What I will do is eliminate the first
24 sentence, take out the first seven words of the

1 communication concerning the scope of the
2 representation, the entity or entities to be
3 represented and why they were retained, which I
4 think is what I previously found there was a
5 waiver on based upon the representations in court.

6 MR. BEMIS: We've answered that question.

7 THE COURT: I don't know if you've answered
8 that completely or not. If you have, you need to
9 tell us this is the complete answer. If you
10 are -- looking at the answer, I'm not sure it
11 would be complete, but you need to make that
12 representation.

13 MR. BEMIS: All right. By saying all right,
14 Your Honor, I don't want to --

15 THE COURT: I think you're saying, I
16 understand what you're telling me.

17 MR. BEMIS: Exactly. Thank you very much,
18 Your Honor. What are you doing on the crime fraud
19 sham pleading?

20 THE COURT: I would agree that there's not
21 been a prime fascia showing to support its

22 application; although, I can tell you the motion
23 for contempt I don't think requires necessarily
24 that you show -- I mean, it might sort of
25 implicate whether that was a sham pleading, but I

75

1 don't think you need to rely on that to negate all
2 the privilege claims. So I'm just -- they didn't
3 make a prime fascia showing now, but I'm still
4 finding this is something that vast portions of
5 the answers have already been published to The
6 Court.

7 MR. SCAROLA: So as to avoid having to come
8 back here to reargue these matters again, I'm 9 concerned about the representation made by
10 Mr. Bemis that the answer is already complete.

11 THE COURT: If he's going to say it's
12 complete, he's going to need to file something
13 saying I've already answered it.

14 MR. BEMIS: That's not what I said.

15 THE COURT: You know what, we have 26 minutes
16 left. We need to put it to good use.

17 MR. BEMIS: I just want the record clear that
18 I don't agree with what Mr. Scarola's conclusion

19 was. I will respond as directed by The Court or
20 preserve our objections and proceed accordingly.

21 MR. SCAROLA: May I simply inquire as to
22 whether it is Your Honor's intent that the content
23 of the communication, to the extent it falls
24 within the waiver you have described, be included
25 in the response because these responses don't

76

1 include anything about the content. That's my
2 only point.

3 THE COURT: Yes. I understand.

4 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

5 THE COURT: I mean, assuming that identified
6 was defined in a way that would have required the 7 disclosure of the content, I don't know the
8 definition, I'm not adding stuff to the
9 interrogatory that wasn't there.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I understand that. I
11 understand that.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Two.

13 MR. SCAROLA: It is our position with regard
14 to this interrogatory, Your Honor, that Morgan
15 Stanley has provided selective disclosures in its

16 answers. Your Honor has ruled that selective
17 disclosures result in a waiver of the privilege.
18 They can't choose to give us that portion of 19 information that they consider helps them and
20 withhold the balance. We want a full and complete
21 response on the basis of a waiver.

22 In addition, there is no privilege because of
23 the crime fraud and at-issue exceptions applying
24 under the circumstances of this case.

25 THE COURT: Do you want to respond?

77

1 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, with regard to the
2 crime fraud, you've already ruled, so I won't
3 address that again. With regard to the balance of
4 it, we stand on our objections that we have a
5 privilege as to certain of the communications.
6 With regard to other matters, we have provided --
7 and if you'll look at the third paragraph of our
8 objection, we did state that the parties, that is,
9 I should not say the parties, that is Kellogg
10 Huber and Morgan Stanley participated, as we say,
11 in discussions with its co-counsel, Kirkland &
12 Ellis, regarding the representation and that they

13 assigned the declaration to be bound by the 14 protective order. We believe that that is the
15 answer that is required by the interrogatory.
16 With regard to other matters, it's a substance, we
17 stand on our privilege -- we stand on our
18 privilege objection, and we don't think it's
19 foreclosed by your order.

20 THE COURT: I would sustain his objection. I
21 don't think this is something I found a waiver on,
22 and I don't think there has been a waiver of
23 privilege on this one.

24 Number three.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Our arguments with regard to

78

1 number three would be the same as those that I
2 have just stated, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Again, I don't think there's been
4 a waiver on this.

5 Four.

6 MR. SCAROLA: May I just go back to that for
7 one moment, Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: Sure.

9 MR. SCAROLA: What The Court -- is it all

10 right if I address The Court from a seated
11 position?

12 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable.

13 MR. SCAROLA: What The Court specifically
14 found in its July 12th order was that MS & Company
15 has waived any privilege with respect to the
16 reasons for the retention of the Kellogg Huber
17 firm. And it would seem that --

18 THE COURT: Which number are we on?

19 MR. SCAROLA: We're on number three.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: It would seem that, whether
22 Kellogg Huber was provided a copy of the
23 settlement agreement in connection with the
24 reasons for the retention of that Kellogg Huber
25 firm would fall within the scope of that waiver.

79

1 THE COURT: The reasons -- I would be shocked
2 to find -- and maybe this is why I didn't do it,
3 is to match the date of the retention and
4 settlement agreement. I would be shocked to find
5 that they got the settlement agreement before they
6 were retained and the reasons for the retention

7 ended at the retention. I mean, they obviously
8 don't predate the retention.

9 MR. SCAROLA: They certainly got the
10 settlement agreement before the retention letter
11 because the retention letter comes after the
12 contempt motion was filed.

13 THE COURT: I understand that. I think it --
14 I don't think there's been a waiver as to this.
15 If what you're trying to get at is, did they get
16 the settlement agreement before or after they were
17 retained, that may be something that's
18 discoverable because, if they got it before they
19 were retained, it would suggest perhaps it played
20 a part in why they were retained.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Might I also suggest, Your
22 Honor, that there's no necessary implication of
23 any privilege at all in responding to this
24 question. If Morgan Stanley provided Kellogg
25 Huber with the settlement agreement and Morgan

80

1 Stanley had a reason for doing it, that there's no
2 attorney/client privilege communication at all
3 involved in why Kellogg Huber -- why Kellogg Huber

16div-005846

4 was provided a copy of the settlement agreement.

5 There is no implication of any communication.

6 Morgan Stanley may very well have said, I
7 want this settlement agreement to go to Kellogg
8 Huber because I want Kellogg Huber to advise us as
9 to how we are going to use this settlement
10 agreement to our advantage in the currently
11 pending litigation and trigger these provisions in
12 the settlement agreement. The President of Morgan
13 Stanley could have had that conversation.

14 THE COURT: I understand the argument.
15 What's the response?

16 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we fully answered the
17 question, and we didn't waive it. And you didn't
18 find that we waived it. We've identified in prior 19 interrogatories what documents were provided, when
20 they were provided. We've identified pursuant to
21 the Rules of Judicial Administration who was
22 retained, the dates that they were retained. We
23 have provided the retention letter. I don't know
24 what more we should be obligated --

25 THE COURT: We're down to 20 minutes. I

1 think what you're suggesting is maybe you want to
2 ask who gave it to him, and we can come back.

3 MR. SCAROLA: No. I really want to ask why
4 it was given to them. Why did Morgan Stanley give
5 this settlement agreement to Kellogg Huber? Why
6 did they do it? What was Morgan Stanley's thought
7 process in giving this settlement agreement to
8 Kellogg Huber? I don't care -- I don't care what
9 Kirkland & Ellis's thought process may have been
10 at this point in time. What I want to know is 11 what Morgan -- these interrogatories are directed
12 to Morgan Stanley.

13 THE COURT: I don't have a preamble to see if
14 we're asking about agents or not.

15 What's the brief response that they should be
16 able to ask your client why you gave it to the law
17 firm?

18 MR. BEMIS: Because it calls for our mental
19 impressions and conclusions.

20 THE COURT: When you say our --

21 MR. BEMIS: Kirkland & Ellis, or in the
22 context because that would be where --

23 THE COURT: Well, why wouldn't your client
24 then simply respond, I relied on advice of 25 counsel?

1 MR. BEMIS: We have already -- first of all,
2 we waived -- you found we waived no privilege with
3 respect to our mental impressions and conclusions.

4 THE COURT: Right. But when you say "our," I
5 get confused as to who you mean, you or your
6 client.

7 MR. BEMIS: I appreciate that. I should have
8 made that clear. It is our work product privilege
9 when we --

10 THE COURT: Again, our, I don't know if you
11 mean the client or yours.

12 MR. BEMIS: Kirkland's, the lawyer's
13 privilege. We have said that we discussed certain
14 issues with regard to, I think it was
15 interrogatory number one, the information was
16 provided that the decision was made based on the 17 information that was available. For us to have 18 to isolate out in the manner that they are
19 describing invades our work product privilege and
20 our communications with the client on the matter.

21 THE COURT: What you're really saying is that
22 your client's answer is that, I relied completely
23 on the advice of counsel?

24 MR. BEMIS: I'm not going to tell you what my

1 the privilege, and I'm not going to discuss what
2 my client relied on in open court. It's
3 privileged. I'm entitled to communicate with my
4 client. My client is entitled to communicate with
5 its other counsel, Kellogg Huber.

6 THE COURT: Sure. But this is the question
7 I'm asking: Interrogatory number three, and I'm
8 asking a legal question, if your client made a
9 decision to give that agreement to new counsel
10 totally apart from any input, would we agree that
11 answer wouldn't be privileged?

12 MR. BEMIS: Can I just --

13 THE COURT: Sure. Is this one where we need
14 to answer it and just do an in-camera inspection
15 on whether it's privileged or not?

16 MR. BEMIS: It may well be because what we
17 have is an in-house legal department at Morgan
18 Stanley that we -- that our communications, as you
19 might expect, we deal with the lawyers, and they 20 are lawyers licensed to practice all over the 21 country, and we communicate with them. Whatever

22 decisions that they make, they have a -- we have a
23 litigation privilege with regard to those as well.
24 If Mr. -- if his question is what business man
25 independent of any legal advice did something,

84

1 that's a totally different question than I
2 understand is being asked. I'm not even sure at
3 this point what they are asking for.

4 THE COURT: I think they're asking the
5 question, why were they provided a settlement
6 agreement. And you're lodging a privilege for
7 what may be all or a portion of the answer, as I
8 understand what you're saying.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Why did you, Morgan Stanley
10 give the settlement agreement to these lawyers?
11 That's the question.

12 THE COURT: But --

13 MR. IANNO: My problem, Your Honor, it's
14 asking for a client's decision in conjunction,
15 potentially in conjunction with lawyers either
16 inside or outside. It's clearly a bad question
17 that's being asked because they're asking for the 18 internal mental impressions. That's the problem.

19 The question is just improper, and Mr. Scarola is 20 just trying to get at that. He's trying to get at 21 decisions made in litigation.

22 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Would it be
23 disclosure of any sort of privileged information
24 if the answer was because my lawyer told me to?

25 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, based on the rulings

85

1 we have here, I mean no disrespect, I don't know
2 what it would lead to. I just don't know. My
3 position on this I've articulated, and you don't
4 agree with me. I think we're entitled to present
5 the defense under the due process clause in
6 article one, section nine of the Florida
7 Constitution in the Fourteenth Amendment, the
8 Pappas case, American Tobacco and a legion of
9 other cases, and they don't result in a privilege.
10 There's been no fact communication disclosures.

11 What they want to get into is our top drawer
12 as to what the legal department and the law firms
13 said to each other as to what they thought about a
14 lawsuit. And that's privileged, whether it's
15 attorney/client or work product.

16div-005852

16 THE COURT: Can you represent to me that
17 there was no business person at Morgan Stanley
18 that elected to hand over the settlement agreement
19 or that the decision to turn it over was based
20 solely on advice of counsel?

21 MR. BEMIS: I think I can. Can I just ask
22 Mr. Clare? Some of this leg work has been
23 done by -- there's a lot of work on this.

24 THE COURT: Sure.

25 MR. BEMIS: The answer is, we believe that to

86

1 be the case. If it's not, we will tell The Court.
2 We will answer it as to who the business person
3 was, if that's acceptable. My representation is,
4 based on the information I'm standing here in
5 court is what I've just told you is a correct
6 statement, that it went through the legal
7 department.

8 THE COURT: Okay. What I'm going to need
9 then is just a supplemental answer that tells us
10 whether any part of the decision was made other
11 than on the advice of counsel. And if any part
12 was, then tell us what the answer is. If it was

13 all made on advice of counsel, that's fine.

14 MR. BEMIS: We'll proceed according to your
15 order.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Four.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I doubt that --

18 THE COURT: We have 12 minutes left. Do you
19 want to go back and discuss scheduling, or what do
20 we want to do?

21 MR. SCAROLA: I really think that it's
22 important that we address the scheduling issues
23 before we conclude this hearing. We all need to 24 know what's going to happen as far as our trial is 25 concerned.

87

1 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I mean, that short
2 exercise has told me the discovery and the
3 contempt is going to take a bit of time. One
4 other thing I wanted to bring up is whether you'll
5 have any interest in having a special master do
6 any of the in-camera inspection.

7 MR. BEMIS: The answer is yes. In fact, we
8 requested that, and we think it's the fairest way.

9 THE COURT: From my perspective, quite

16div-005854

10 honestly, it's just a function of time more than 11 anything else.

12 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just a moment?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are not willing
15 to agree to a special master.

16 THE COURT: That's fine. Please understand
17 that's going to affect the timing.

18 MR. SCAROLA: What we are willing to do,
19 however, is to submit the issues with regard to
20 this discovery to Your Honor on the basis of the 21 submissions that have already been made in writing
22 and have Your Honor rule on the basis of those
23 written submissions. We've had an opportunity to
24 present some argument to The Court.

25 THE COURT: Are you all willing to do that or

88

1 not?

2 MR. IANNO: I mean, what this exercise has
3 also shown us is The Court has some very probing
4 questions that aren't answered in the papers, to
5 me.

6 THE COURT: If they aren't willing to do it

16div-005855

7 without argument, I'm not inclined on something
8 like this to waive argument. But let's go back to 9 the scheduling stuff we were talking about.

10 MR. SCAROLA: May I briefly address those
11 issues before Your Honor arrives at any
12 conclusions?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we filed our
15 complaint in this case on May 8th, 2003, which was
16 more than a year after we entered into a tolling
17 agreement with Morgan Stanley with regard to this
18 litigation. So they were well aware for over a
19 year of the potential of this claim coming. On
20 July 10th, 2003 Your Honor denied Morgan
21 Stanley's motion to stay discovery, and they knew
22 from that point, obviously, that this case was
23 going to be proceeding.

24 Document discovery in the case was
25 substantially completed by September 8th, 2003,

89

1 and that left Morgan Stanley with a full year in
2 which to conduct deposition discovery before the
3 September 3rd, 2004 cutoff.

16div-005856

4 Morgan Stanley in that one year's period of
5 time has taken a total of 11 depositions. We have
6 taken 29. They have taken 11. I've already
7 referenced the resources available to both the
8 Kirkland & Ellis and Carlton, Fields firms, and
9 they are obviously substantial. And I think that
10 that's a factor that The Court needs to take into
11 consideration. The excuse that Morgan Stanley
12 agreed to discovery -- the discovery schedule
13 before it knew it would be obliged to defend
14 against the contempt charges, as stated in the 15 graphic that was shown, there was a quote,
16 unexpected, unquote, contempt proceeding, doesn't
17 stand even if we find as an excuse that Mr. Bemis
18 personally didn't get the March 5th letter and
19 ignore the fact that, obviously, Mr. Yannucci did
20 get the March 5th letter prior to the agreement.

21 And the reason why it doesn't stand even in
22 light of Mr. Bemis's contention that he personally
23 didn't know is that Morgan Stanley confirmed that
24 agreement to the pretrial schedule in open court a
25 full week after receiving the motion for contempt.

1 That motion had already been filed when they came
2 before The Court and formally agreed to that
3 schedule. They knew what demands they were
4 facing. They have the resources to meet those
5 demands if they chose to apply those resources,
6 and they simply haven't diligently chosen to apply
7 those resources.

8 As of the filing of the motion, we had been
9 provided and The Court had been provided with no
10 indication as to what discovery they really needed
11 to take. Witnesses hadn't been identified. We
12 had a graphic up on the board here, and I would
13 certainly like a copy of that because I would like
14 to know what it is they intend to do. We
15 obviously didn't have time to take that all down.
16 And I would ask The Court to direct them to
17 provide us with a copy of that.

18 MR. BEMIS: We're going to file a copy as
19 part of the court reporter transcript so anyone
20 reviewing it knows what was shown to The Court.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

22 MR. SCAROLA: The bottom line is, I don't
23 think that they have met the burden that they
24 ought to be obliged to meet in order to procure a
25 three-month continuance of the trial that they are

1 asking for.

2 Now, the other argument that they make is the
3 supposed inability of Kellogg Huber to participate
4 in this case, but, remember, that they have
5 repeatedly asserted to Your Honor that the reason
6 why Kellogg Huber was retained was in order to
7 cross examine Arthur Andersen witnesses at trial.

8 So the unavailability of Kellogg Huber,
9 particularly when very able co-counsel without a
10 conflict of interest has been involved in this
11 case from the very beginning and is certainly
12 capable of cross examining Arthur Andersen
13 witnesses if in fact some disability exists on the 14 part of the Kirkland firm, that just ought not to
15 play a role in Your Honor's decision as well.

16 This discovery can be completed in the three
17 months that remain. With the resources available
18 on both sides of this case, the discovery can be
19 completed if Your Honor tells us that it needs to
20 be completed. We certainly are prepared to do it.
21 We're prepared to devote whatever attorney
22 manpower is necessary, whatever attorney-person
23 power is necessary to get that job done. And they
24 ought to be obliged to do that as well.

1 to agree to a brief continuance, a delay of 30
2 days to give them an additional month to get the
3 job done if that's going to be of some help, but
4 we ought not to be pushed back into an April trial
5 date. One of the concerns that we have is there's
6 a different composition of the venire that exists
7 in April than exists in January and February in
8 this community. That is a concern of ours.

9 THE COURT: I appreciate your candor.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Well, I'm telling Your Honor
11 exactly what the truth is in that regard. That's
12 a factor we have taken into consideration in terms
13 of setting up this schedule. It's something that 14 we need to anticipate on behalf of our client, and 15 it's an important factor to us. We're not
16 opposing a continuance for arbitrary or capricious
17 reasons. This is an important case. Both sides
18 deserve ample time in which to get it prepared,
19 but we have been given ample time in which to get
20 it prepared.

21 THE COURT: I need you to address the

22 contempt because I do think --

23 MR. SCAROLA: As far as the contempt is
24 concerned, my position remains the same. If they
25 are willing to abbreviate the proceedings

93

1 necessary to enable us to get the discovery to
2 which we are entitled, we are prepared to go
3 forward with the contempt hearing at the very
4 earliest date that Your Honor chooses to give us
5 in light of whatever burden they are willing to
6 accept, but we ought not to be obliged to proceed
7 with the final hearing on the contempt without
8 getting at least the very basic discovery that we
9 have requested at this point. We're willing to
10 submit those issues to The Court on the basis of
11 the written pleadings that we have given you.
12 Obviously, they've resisted that for whatever
13 reason, but that ought not to interfere with our
14 ability to get our trial date.

15 Let me make sure that my co-counsel doesn't
16 wish me to add anything to that or have anything
17 else to say.

18 Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

16div-005861

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there is one more
21 comment that I might make. They put up a whole
22 lot of names on that board, and, obviously, there
23 are some people whose names on that list we
24 recognize and acknowledge to be significant
25 witnesses. Mr. Perelman, for example, we wouldn't

94

1 argue that that's testimony that they'll obviously
2 want to have in advance of trial. But without any
3 showing whatsoever with regard to the significance
4 of the other names, it would clearly be improper,
5 I suggest, to grant a continuance of this case on
6 the basis of inability to depose people the
7 significance of whom has never been demonstrated
8 to this Court.

9 THE COURT: What did you want to respond?

10 MR. BEMIS: I'm a little bit surprised by the 11 venire argument since we started with a venire in 12 August. We suggested a venire in October. Now
13 January is appropriate, and now April is
14 inappropriate. I don't think that's an
15 appropriate decision point on the case.

16 With regard to -- if they want to move this
17 proceeding along and abbreviate the schedule, I'm
18 shocked that they won't agree with a special
19 master so that we can move the process forward
20 before a special master, which we think not only
21 is more expeditious, but we think it has some side
22 benefits of having a neutral party who is not a
23 decision-maker have to review these matters. And
24 there is precedent for that. We cited it in our
25 papers. I won't repeat it here.

95

1 The argument, you know, fundamentally is,
2 we've got a thousand lawyers, we haven't acted
3 promptly. I reject that argument. We cannot walk
4 down the hall, grab people out and say, take seven
5 boxes of documents, very complex financial
6 documents, very complex merger transactions and
7 run out and take a deposition for two days. It
8 does not work that way.

9 We are -- we have been from the outset, we in
10 the sense of Kirkland & Ellis, my client, me
11 probably more so because I got into the case so
12 late, we have been, I have been, other people have

16div-005863

13 been catching up, if you will, from the five years
14 that these gentlemen have been prosecuting two
15 lawsuits. They already did two of these. The 16 fact that we got hundreds of thousands of
17 documents in September doesn't mean we knew what
18 was in the documents, that we understood the
19 documents, that we've collated them. We got, I
20 believe it was 400 deposition transcripts in that
21 time period. I still haven't read all the 400,
22 and I'm not sure I'll ever get through all of them
23 before we get to trial.

24 We have been working at a breakneck pace, as 25 the calendars show. The facts speak for it. If

96

1 you disagree with me on that, you will. The fact
2 is we have, not 30 days left as Mr. Scarola
3 suggests, we've got 11 days left in August that
4 are open to do something. We can't get done.

5 The depositions that I put up there are
6 depositions they wrote us that they wanted to
7 take, that we have notified them that we want to
8 take. They have been identified in various
9 documents as key players. That's what's there.

16div-005864

10 Now, will every one of them get deposed? The
11 chances are there will be some that will drop out
12 for a host of reasons, whether it be illness.
13 We've got a key witness who has had cancer. We've
14 got a witness who's a director who's in the 15 hospital. It may be that we never get some of 16 those people in the end result. The fact is, if
17 you just look at what's already scheduled, there's 18 16 business days of pending material that we've
19 requested that we don't have. And this week alone
20 I think we had, I think it was four days
21 originally, or next week we have like four days of
22 depositions scheduled, and stuff is just moving
23 day by day with cancellation. We just need some 24 breathing space, and we need at the same time to 25 get the contempt done.

97

1 We don't want a stay of discovery. All we
2 want is to give us a moving date so that we can
3 complete the fact discovery while simultaneously
4 Your Honor deciding what is a fair date to set
5 this for a hearing. All of the discovery has been
6 answered at this point. Now, you entered your

16div-005865

7 order. We understand that, and we've got these
8 motions to compel. It's not like this is starting
9 from scratch. They filed that motion on March
10 12th with no evidence. It was improperly filed.
11 They should have filed it with proper evidence.
12 They had their time. We responded. Yes, we've
13 got disagreement. We don't have any agreement
14 with what they responded to us either. But we're
15 the ones being charged. We're entitled to a
16 hearing, and we respectfully request you do it as
17 promptly as you can in whatever procedure you
18 think is appropriate. Give us a date to work
19 against, and we'll be here with bells on to try
20 this case.

21 THE COURT: Let's talk about a couple things
22 in the time we have left. First of all, I would
23 agree this case is not going to be ready for trial
24 in January. I do think it could be ready in 25 March. I don't -- my JA is out today, and at the

98

1 case management conference if you come with your
2 schedules for March and also check your schedules
3 for the dates. On the things we have leading up

16div-005866

4 to the trial, we're probably going to want to
5 reset some of those so we can get those set at the
6 next case management conference. For instance, I
7 want to check on spring vacation. I don't want to
8 set it now and then discover we all have problems.
9 If we know March is what we're looking at -- we
10 still think it's 15 days?

11 MR. BEMIS: Based on a four-day trial
12 schedule, I still think that's probably correct.
13 I think you said you work four days a week?

14 THE COURT: Fifteen days is what I asked.

15 MR. BEMIS: Fifteen trial days, excuse me.
16 But you're still doing a four day a week trial?

17 THE COURT: Yes.

18 MR. BEMIS: We're looking at 15 days spread
19 over four weeks?

20 THE COURT: Four weeks, right. I'm still
21 concerned about the motion for contempt just
22 because I don't think we can arbitrarily set a
23 time for it to be heard now unless everybody
24 agrees because I just see these discovery issues
25 are going to take a while. I'm afraid if I set

1 aside a day, say, in September or October, we're
2 going to get to that day, and the discovery
3 disputes aren't going to be resolved by then.

4 MR. BEMIS: If you give us a date in
5 September, you can change it.

6 THE COURT: I can but then I have a day open
7 in my book.

8 MR. BEMIS: We're going to be here before
9 that date in September, but give us a date to work
10 against.

11 THE COURT: I understand that. I need a
12 better sense of how long that's all going to take.
13 Quite honestly, to the extent I have to do
14 in-camera inspections, I have to try to fit those
15 in the same way I'm trying to fit in the order on 16 the conflict of laws. I just can't commit now to 17 a date and say six weeks and know we're going to 18 have all those disputes done by then.

19 MR. BEMIS: Then can we have a special
20 master?

21 THE COURT: Only if they agree to bear the
22 cost and they told me they won't, which I can't
23 make them.

24 MR. BEMIS: You're right.

25 THE COURT: I understand this is something

1 that everybody wants done.

2 MR. SCAROLA: What I will represent to The
3 Court, Your Honor, is that we'll carefully
4 consider the special master issue. We'll see if
5 there is someone available who we feel comfortable
6 with and whether the cost issues involved can be
7 appropriately agreed to.

8 THE COURT: It only makes sense if it's
9 somebody you're both going to be comfortable with;
10 otherwise, you'll just file the objections anyway
11 and come back.

12 MR. BEMIS: I don't see how the cost issues
13 can be paramount in this case.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We won't write that off
15 entirely. We have serious reservations about it.
16 We're not prepared to agree to it at this time,
17 but we'll certainly give it further careful
18 consideration.

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, thank you very much.

20 THE COURT: You all have a wonderful weekend.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. You do the same.

22 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

23 MR. BEMIS: Thank you.

8 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're seeing slides of the
10 vacation that Mr. Bemis missed.

11 THE COURT: Don't say that. I'm sure his
12 wife does not have a sense of humor about this.
13 Where do we want to start?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 15, Your Honor, by
15 agreement.

16 THE COURT: Of which book?

17 MR. SCAROLA: The big thick one that doesn't
18 close very well.

19 THE COURT: The biggest one?

20 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, yes.

21 MR. IANNO: This is probably the reason we
22 needed the hearing procedures changed. That is
23 the updated binder with all the motions, responses
24 and case law in it.

25 THE COURT: And that's good. The only --

1 which is why we need it. I had already read the
2 first one. When I got the second one, I was
3 trying to figure out what was new. I think it's
4 good that we have an updated procedure.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 15, Your Honor, is the
6 motion to strike the verifications of Michael
7 Hart.

8 And if I might address that motion briefly,
9 it arises out of the circumstance of Mr. Hart
10 having verified answers on behalf of Morgan
11 Stanley to four separate sets of interrogatories.
12 The form of verification is uniform with regard to
13 each of those interrogatories. You can find it
14 most easily by turning to tab 15-I, going one page
15 back, and you will see the verification form

16 there. Mr. Hart says, quote, I hereby declare
17 that the following answers are true and correct
18 upon the information and belief and to the best of 19 my knowledge. And it is signed by him under oath.

20 Based upon those verifications, Mr. Hart's
21 deposition was set, and he was deposed with regard
22 to the extent of his knowledge that these were
23 true and correct answers and that he had a belief
24 to the best of his knowledge that they were
25 accurate. What we discovered is that Mr. Hart

1 admitted that he did not have any personal
2 knowledge with regard to most of the facts. He
3 admitted that he could not remember what, if
4 anything, he had done to educate himself to verify
5 answers to interrogatories. And most incredibly,
6 he admitted that a number of material errors were
7 apparent upon even cursory review of the answers
8 that he verified.

9 And arising out of the receipt of that
10 information, we filed this motion to strike his
11 verifications. Now, upon further reflection, we
12 are modifying the relief that we are asking The

13 Court for in this case. We will not request that 14 The Court strike Mr. Hart's verifications. In
15 fact, we'll deal with the issues of credibility
16 that arise as a consequence of those verifications
17 and the issues with respect to the integrity of 18 this corporation in providing such responses at
19 trial.

20 But what we do need The Court to do in the
21 context of this motion is to clarify what the
22 obligations are of the parties in providing
23 verification of interrogatory answers because we
24 do anticipate that we'll be presenting to The
25 Court, either by agreement or by future motion, a

1 request or stipulation that there be a
2 supplemental update to all interrogatory answers
3 just prior to the close of discovery.

4 And we want to be able to rely upon the
5 accuracy and integrity of those responses. And
6 based upon the position that Morgan Stanley has
7 taken in responding to this motion to strike
8 Mr. Hart's verification, it is very obvious that
9 we have a serious disagreement with regard to the

10 obligations that a party has in verifying
11 interrogatory responses.
12 Let me first clarify that we have not taken
13 the position that an individual verifying answers
14 on behalf of a corporate entity must have personal
15 knowledge of all of the responses that are given,
16 but it is our position that there must be a
17 good-faith, well-founded, reasonably investigated
18 belief that the answers that are being provided
19 are in fact true, correct and complete on behalf
20 of the corporation.

21 Now, in support of their position, Morgan
22 Stanley cites the case of Shepherd versus American
23 Broadcasting Companies (phonetic). And they
24 accurately quote that case, which says that Rule
25 33(a) permits a representative of a corporate

1 party to verify the corporation's answers without
2 personal knowledge of every response by furnishing
3 such information as is available to the party.

4 And they stop right there.

5 What they failed to quote is the remainder of
6 that holding in the Shepherd versus American

7 Broadcasting case. The very next sentence is, of
8 course, the representative must have a basis for
9 signing the responses and for thereby stating on
10 behalf of the corporation that the responses are
11 accurate. And we clearly, if Your Honor has had
12 an opportunity to review the testimony of
13 Mr. Hart, have established that Mr. Hart had no
14 such basis, and he acknowledged that he had no
15 such basis. In some circumstances he didn't even
16 read these responses before he verified them.

17 If the discovery process is to have any
18 integrity whatsoever, we believe that The Court
19 must direct Morgan Stanley to provide
20 verifications that have some substantial meaning
21 that are based upon a well-founded belief that the
22 answers are indeed complete and accurate, that
23 there has been a reasonable investigation, that
24 the sources are believed to be reliable and that
25 there is as a consequence of that a good-faith

1 belief in the accuracy and integrity of the
2 responses that are being provided.

3 We ask for a lot of other things in the

4 motion. We ask for attorneys fees in addition to
5 striking these verifications. We ask for the
6 production of another corporate representative to
7 address the factual issues that arise. We'll take
8 care of that through other means, but we do
9 believe that it is appropriate in response to this
10 motion for The Court to clarify the obligation
11 that Morgan Stanley has and to tell them that the
12 next time they answer interrogatories, they better
13 answer them with a verification that in fact is
14 true and not a blatant misrepresentation.

15 THE COURT: First of all, I assume from what
16 you said when you said you were modifying the
17 relief sought and just asking for clarification on
18 what kind of verification was required, it goes
19 both ways.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, Your Honor.
21 Absolutely. We are not seeking to impose an
22 obligation on Morgan Stanley that we ourselves are
23 not prepared to live by. We just want The Court
24 to tell both parties what that verification means.

25 We've taken a very, very different position

1 with regard to what it is. We've provided
2 verifications that we believe meet those standards
3 that I have described and intend to continue to do
4 that regardless of what Your Honor's order may be
5 because that's what we think the rules require.
6 But we want that standard imposed upon the other
7 side as well.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. IANNO: Judge, Joe Ianno. I'll be
10 responding to this motion.

11 Mr. Scarola just told me that that
12 modification was happening a few minutes before
13 this hearing at 9:00 this morning. What I think
14 he's asking for is an advisory opinion from this
15 Court that I think is improper.

16 THE COURT: That really was going to be one
17 of my questions. We have a couple things. Let's
18 back up and talk about where we want to go.

19 First of all, I agree we need interrogatory
20 answers that are complete and truthful for two
21 reasons. One, they bind the party, but, two, the
22 opposing party needs to be able to rely on the
23 answers themselves. So it strikes me that the 24 verification probably needs to be something that
25 is based on a personal, well-founded belief that

1 the answers are complete and truthful.

2 If we can reach agreement on the kind of
3 verification we need, I think that's fine. If
4 not, I would suspect what Mr. Scarola is going to
5 say is, fine, we'll go back to the motion, I'm
6 asking for any relief other than that you can
7 reverify it in a form we think is appropriate.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Almost, Your Honor. I don't
9 think that I am asking for something different
10 than what The Court is obliged to do in connection
11 with the relief that we have requested.

12 THE COURT: That's what I'm saying. It
13 would have to be confined to the single motion we
14 have unless we reach some sort of agreement on
15 some more global applications.

16 MR. SCAROLA: I agree. I think that once The
17 Court tells them with regard to these answers this
18 verification is improper, I would suspect it will
19 get proper verification.

20 THE COURT: We need to confine it to
21 just Mr. Hart's verification, or we can sort of
22 open it up and try to reach some sort of consensus
23 of what we think is appropriate for all the
24 interrogatories.

1 is blurring the line between procedure and
2 substance. There's nothing wrong with the form of
3 the verification Mr. Hart signed. What
4 Mr. Scarola is challenging is the substantive
5 deposition testimony, which we don't agree with
6 Mr. Scarola because that is an issue that I think
7 he has put his spin on it.

8 Those are issues that Mr. Scarola correctly
9 pointed out are credibility issues for trial.
10 There's no question that Morgan Stanley hasn't
11 taken the position that these interrogatories
12 responses are not binding on it. Mr. Scarola has
13 every right to rely on it.

14 The second point on that is, we are working
15 through a process of supplementing these
16 responses. If there's a different form of
17 verification required, then we can discuss it. I
18 don't think there's a question that the words that
19 are used in the interrogatory verification are
20 proper or acceptable. It's Mr. Hart -- their
21 argument is Mr. Hart didn't do what he said he did

22 there. And that's a different issue. I don't
23 think it's proper for today. After we supplement
24 and go through this process, they can come back
25 and challenge that at a later time. They can

12

1 challenge it through credibility at trial, through
2 cross examination or direction examination
3 depending on how they put their cause on.

4 I think what we're doing here today may be a
5 waste and we should be moving on, unless there is
6 an objection to the specific verification that was
7 used here.

8 THE COURT: Is there an objection to the
9 specific verification Mr. Hart signed?

10 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. We don't think
11 that the language is inadequate. We believe the
12 language is adequate.

13 The concern that we have is, that after
14 Mr. Hart has given testimony, which I suggest is
15 very clearly contradictory to the verification
16 that he has signed, Morgan Stanley comes in and
17 defends that and says that under these
18 circumstances that is adequate, that Mr. Hart can

19 sign these interrogatories without any
20 investigation, without reading responses, upon
21 reading them, acknowledging that there are clear
22 deficiencies in the response, and there's nothing
23 wrong with that. And That causes us great concern
24 because, if that's the attitude that they are
25 going to take in the preparation of future

13

1 verifications, we have no basis upon which to rely
2 upon those verifications.

3 THE COURT: Okay. Let's back up then. I
4 think -- I would agree the verification signed by
5 Mr. Hart is sufficient. I think the issues we're
6 faced with are what's the appropriate response if
7 one party thinks the answers to interrogatories
8 simply are incomplete. I can think of lots of 9 motions that can be filed but probably not this
10 one. Or what's the appropriate response if we
11 think a party -- not a party -- an individual has 12 verified something and violated his oath. And
13 that's a whole different thing that I didn't see
14 anybody brief today. Certainly we would need
15 Mr. Hart here if we thought we could reach that.

16 So I would deny the motion, but please
17 understand that I'm not saying that another motion
18 may not be well taken that raises the same sort
19 of what I think it is you're really complaining
20 about, which is incomplete or inaccurate answers
21 or somebody attesting to something that's at least
22 not true.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I think Your Honor has
24 described in your earlier comments what you
25 anticipate a verifying witness is verifying, and

14

1 we certainly intend to act upon that.

2 THE COURT: I think it's just sort of
3 intuitive. We all know what the purposes of
4 interrogatories are, and I think that's intuitive.

5 Where next?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Tabs 20 and 14 which address
7 the confidentiality designations.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. SCAROLA: I might start with a brief
10 introductory comment with regard to the issues
11 raised by these motions, Your Honor.

12 As I assume The Court recognizes, with the

13 filing of the claims before Judge Miller against
14 Arthur Andersen, there is no longer any direct
15 confidentiality interest on the part of the CPH
16 and MAFCO that stands to be protected by continued
17 secrecy. The cat, their cat, is out of the bag.

18 And --

19 THE COURT: Which cat are we speaking of?
20 Are we talking about just the settlement agreement
21 or something else?

22 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the
23 settlement agreement.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: As far as the direct interest

15

1 of CPH and MAFCO in the confidentiality of the
2 settlement agreement, that cat is out of the bag.
3 Nonetheless, CPH and MAFCO have a contractual
4 obligation to protect the confidentiality interest
5 of Arthur Andersen in the terms of the settlement
6 agreement, and that is a contractual obligation
7 which we take very seriously. We must do what we
8 can to protect Arthur Andersen's interest in
9 confidentiality in the terms of that settlement

10 agreement, and these motions arise out of our
11 good-faith effort to fulfill that contract
12 obligation.

13 Now, that places us in a very unusual
14 position because we are here arguing to protect
15 Arthur Andersen's confidentiality obligations
16 while Arthur Andersen's counsel, Kirkland, is
17 arguing against protecting Arthur Andersen's
18 confidentiality obligations.

19 MR. BEMIS: Excuse me, Your Honor. I don't
20 represent Arthur Andersen in this proceeding.

21 THE COURT: I was going to say, I'm not sure
22 if -- if you're impugning the integrity of
23 Mr. Bemis, that's not how we do it. If you're
24 not, I'm not sure how it's relevant.

25 MR. SCAROLA: All right, Your Honor. Well, I

16

1 think it clearly is relevant because it
2 demonstrates the nature of the bona fides of the
3 arguments that are being made on the other side in
4 opposition to these motions, and I suggest that
5 there is something unusual going on here.

6 If we take a look at the specific provisions

7 that we seek to retain confidentiality of, they
8 appear after tab 20-A, page 13.

9 THE COURT: I'm not sure I'm looking at the 10 right thing.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Tab 20-A.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Page 13, footnote nine.

14 THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry.

15 MR. SCAROLA: We have highlighted in each of
16 the relevant documents where there's a
17 confidentiality challenge, the provisions that we
18 believe need to be retained as confidential. And
19 these all are in accord with the prior findings
20 that Your Honor has made and we believe simply an
21 extension of the earlier requests.

22 THE COURT: Okay.

23 MR. SCAROLA: The next is tab C, page five.

24 And, again, we've highlighted that language.

25 THE COURT: Page five.

17

1 MR. SCAROLA: Tab C, page five. And then tab

2 D.

3 THE COURT: Just the language, the settlement

4 agreement is very important to Andersen that it be
5 confidential, particularly the settlement?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

7 THE COURT: Just that language?

8 MR. SCAROLA: That's it.

9 THE COURT: Then -- I'm sorry. Where next?

11 number here is in the upper left-hand corner.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: The highlighted lines 24
14 and 25.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Page 25, line six, seven,
17 eight, and 15 through 19.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Page 26, lines 18 and 19. And 20 page 29, line 14.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SCAROLA: As I understand the position of
23 Morgan Stanley, they are not contesting the fact
24 that these requests are appropriate. They are
25 suggesting an all or nothing approach, and we are

1 obliged to resist an all or nothing approach. It
2 is our contractual obligation to point out to The
3 Court those portions of the record and pleadings
4 where there are references to matters which under
5 the terms of the settlement agreement we have a
6 contractual obligation to protect.

7 THE COURT: So I understand, the one we're
8 doing now is the motion to remove the confidential
9 designations?

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

12 MR. IANNO: Judge, what Mr. Scarola -- and we
13 point this out in our response, he fails to inform
14 The Court that these are oppositions or responses
15 to the motions filed by the plaintiffs in this
16 case which they themselves designated as
17 confidential.

18 First of all, Morgan Stanley was required to
19 designate its responses as confidential. We
20 didn't know what they were pointing to as
21 confidential in their motion. So what The Court
22 said with interrogatories a few moments ago that
23 the obligations are reciprocal, I don't think you
24 can impose upon one party to litigation
25 obligations that are different than the other

1 party. They chose to designate their motions as
2 confidential. They started the confidentiality
3 process down the road.

4 If you're going to remove confidential
5 designations, they should be removed from the
6 entirety of all the pleadings in this case that
7 are filed in the court record for the reasons we
8 set forth in our opposition papers.

9 The second point is, The Court I think had
10 some concerns as we were going through the
11 portions that Mr. Scarola said is, for instance,
12 on the last one he mentioned on page 29 of the 13 transcript, it's tab D, the only thing he says is
14 confidential is, said the amount of the
15 settlement. Well, I think that's in the court
16 record of the Coleman versus Arthur Andersen
17 litigation, and that there was a settlement, and
18 that it obviously settled for some amount. But he
19 doesn't designate the next portion where they talk
20 about terms of indemnity.

21 I think that Coleman is selectively using
22 this confidentiality order to protect interests
23 they feel is in their best interest against Morgan
24 Stanley. And I don't represent Arthur Andersen,

25 so I can be here arguing with total bona fides, as

20

1 Mr. Scarola points out, that none of this should
2 remain confidential, that what Mr. Scarola is
3 doing is trying to gain an unfair advantage for
4 Coleman in this case by designating certain
5 portions as confidential and protecting other
6 portions that are in their best interest. And I
7 think that's what The Court should encompass.

8 THE COURT: Okay. Is there anything other
9 than you think they're doing it selectively
10 improper about they're saying, sort of invoking
11 the portions of the confidentiality or that allows
12 one side or the other to comment as to how the 13 confidential designation be removed?

14 MR. IANNO: I don't think so, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Do we have any argument that the 16 things we just went through should somehow still
17 remain confidential?

18 MR. IANNO: I don't think any of the things
19 that Mr. Scarola just pointed out specifically are
20 confidential.

21 THE COURT: What you're telling me is you're

22 going to make a motion to remove a whole bunch of 23 other designations?

24 MR. IANNO: And we said that. To the extent
25 we've -- in our response we said that.

21

1 MR. BEMIS: We do have that prepared. We
2 didn't have time to get it filed for this hearing.
3 We just ran out of time with the shortness, but it
4 is coming. We are going to try to deal with that
5 issue.

6 MR. IANNO: There's a footnote in our
7 opposition to this particular motion at tab 20
8 that says, to the extent that we need to have the
9 confidentiality designation be removed from
10 Morgan -- Coleman's pleadings that are issued in
11 this case, the one's that Morgan Stanley responded
12 to, we asked The Court to do so.

13 I think it's the only fair and just thing to
14 do in this case, is, if they want the
15 confidentiality removed from Morgan Stanley's
16 pleadings, at the first instance they should
17 remove their own designation of confidentiality.
18 I think equity requires, for them to come in here

19 and request for relief, they have to come in with 20 clean hands to get the relief they're seeking in
21 this motion.

22 With regard to other pleadings that aren't at
23 issue in this motion, I think that has to be dealt
24 with separately, Your Honor. But for them to come
25 in and say, remove it from the opposition but not

22

1 from the moving papers is improper.

2 THE COURT: What's the response?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we've attempted in
4 good faith to identify those portions of these
5 documents which we believe we are contractually
6 obligated to protect. We are making our
7 good-faith effort to fulfill our contract
8 obligation.

9 THE COURT: Okay. I will grant the motion.
10 I'll be honest with you, and I think I've told you
11 before, my personal bias, when you choose to
12 litigate in a public forum, only the most
13 compelling of circumstances should allow the
14 parties to keep something private. I don't see a
15 lot of real compelling circumstances here from a

16 public policy perspective that would require
17 virtually anything with the settlement agreement
18 to be kept private.

19 Certainly, if you want to come in and ask to 20 have other designations removed, that's fine. So
21 it's without prejudice your right to come in and
22 say, hey, if this is coming out, all this other
23 stuff should be undesignated as well.

24 MR. IANNO: Is The Court ruling then that the 25 portions that Mr. Scarola designated are

23

1 confidential? I think that's the second part of
2 his motion or part of his motion. And my argument
3 was that the things he designated weren't even
4 confidential. So, if The Court is removing it,
5 The Court should remove the confidentiality
6 designations on everything.

7 THE COURT: On just the ones we went through,
8 the ones included in his motion.

9 MR. IANNO: Correct. I don't believe those
10 were confidential.

11 THE COURT: But they were designated
12 confidential, correct? I just want to make sure I

13 understand where we are.

14 MR. SCAROLA: The entire pleadings were
15 designated confidential. The portions that I have
16 indicated to Your Honor are those portions, the
17 only portions, which we believe need to remain
18 confidential. Our request is that only those
19 portions be retained as confidential.

20 THE COURT: Okay. That's fine.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the next motion
22 appears at tab 14.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. SCAROLA: And it addresses a reference to 25 indemnification provisions that appear in The 24

1 Court's order of July 12, 2004 at page three,
2 lines four and seven.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. SCAROLA: And we are requesting that that
5 very limited reference be redacted from the copy
6 of the court order that appears in the public
7 court file.

8 There was a response filed by Morgan Stanley
9 that points out that there is a similar reference

10 in the May 14, 2004 order which, quite frankly, we
11 had overlooked, at page two, line 12 and page two,
12 line 16. And we believe it would be appropriate
13 and consistent with The Court's earlier orders if
14 those references also be redacted from the public
15 record.

16 And Morgan Stanley has pointed out that the
17 clerk of the court has failed to follow The
18 Court's earlier direction to place the redacted
19 copy of the settlement agreement under seal, and
20 we agree that it would be appropriate to remind
21 the clerk of its obligation to follow The Court's
22 earlier order.

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

24 MR. IANNO: Judge, we filed a formal response
25 that I want to incorporate, but my point that I

25

1 just want to make to The Court is, this is The
2 Court's order. You write your own orders. I'm
3 sure there was a reason to do that.

4 As far as the specific words that are used,
5 the only point I'll make in addition to what
6 Mr. Scarola said, indemnification is one of those

7 few things that's recognized in the rules of civil
8 procedure that is expressly discoverable. There's 9 nothing confidential about those indemnity
10 agreements. It's just like an insurance policy.

11 Short of that, this we'll leave entirely to
12 the judgment of The Court on what you would like
13 to do with this motion.

14 THE COURT: As I understand it, this is just
15 your attempt to abide by your contractual
16 agreement with Arthur Andersen?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Okay. I would deny it. As I
19 say, I have a strong bias in favor of making
20 everything public. I don't see any reason why
21 this shouldn't be public.

22 Okay. Where next?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there was an ore
24 tenus request to remind the clerk.

25 THE COURT: Yes. And that's agreed?

26

1 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, that was your ruling.
2 We don't think that, obviously, the settlement
3 agreement should remain confidential, but, once

4 again, that was The Court's ruling, so I don't
5 know if it's agreed to, but I think --

6 THE COURT: Do you know what docket entry
7 we're talking about?

8 MR. SCAROLA: I don't, Your Honor.

9 MR. IANNO: I can tell you the date of it.
10 It was December 18th of '03.

11 THE COURT: That was my order?

12 MR. IANNO: I don't know if that's your
13 order, Your Honor, but that's where the settlement
14 agreement appears in the court record. I think
15 it's your order. Your order was, like --
16 Mr. Scarola, correct me if I'm wrong -- about ten
17 days before that.

18 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry. I just don't
19 remember with any --

20 MR. IANNO: For some reason, there was a
21 delay between the date of The Court's order and
22 the clerk's filing of the papers in the case.

23 THE COURT: Probably because we generally
24 hold them to see if anybody is going to seek
25 something and we don't want to hunt them down.

1 MR. IANNO: This particular one, I think The
2 Court had provided in the order that there was a
3 certain time period.

4 THE COURT: Right, to request copies.

5 MR. IANNO: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Let me see what I can find it
7 real quick.

8 Can you ask Mary Ann if she can get the file
9 that includes 180 in this case?

10 Okay. Where to next?

11 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, next is tab three,
12 and that's a defense motion to extend the
13 discovery cutoff to set the motion for contempt
14 for hearing.

15 And before we get into the merits of that
16 motion, in order for us to make some assessment as
17 to what our position with regard to this motion
18 will be, we would like some guidance from The
19 Court. Obviously, a three-month discovery
20 extension that as a consequence of Your Honor's
21 trial calendar results in a six-month or year-long
22 delay in getting this case to trial is an entirely
23 different animal than an extension that results in
24 a one-month delay of the trial.

25 So, for us to be able to respond to this

1 motion and know how much there is to argue about,
2 if anything, it would help us to know, if there is
3 some extension of fact discovery, what the
4 potential implications are in terms of the
5 resetting of trial based upon what the rest of
6 Your Honor's trial calendar is.

7 THE COURT: Okay. I mean, some of these all
8 go together. Maybe we need just to have a frank
9 discussion about how you see everything fitting
10 together.

11 MR. BEMIS: And I would like to address that,
12 if I could, Your Honor, giving that is our motion.
13 And I hope to put all of those pieces together for
14 you because I think some procedural guidance from
15 The Court given the complexity as the case has
16 spun itself out since February would be immensely
17 helpful to all parties.

18 THE COURT: And I can -- let me give you sort
19 of my thumbnail sketch before you guys address it
20 because you can easily change my mind. I can tell
21 you some of the things that concern me about the
22 case.

23 First of all, to answer the question that you
24 directly raised, which was, if we extended

1 than a February '05 -- I mean, a January '05 court
2 date. And the answer is no. If this was an
3 ordinary case and it was noticed for trial today,
4 you would get a court setting of October of this
5 year for trial. So, if you extend discovery in
6 this and that means you're not going to be ready
7 to go in January, you're going to go in February,
8 March, April or May or whenever you guys are
9 actually ready. It doesn't mean that you get
10 blown off to some docket that's a year later.

11 How the merits discovery interacts with the
12 contempt discovery, I think we need to spend some
13 time talking about. I do have some concerns that
14 the contempt discovery is becoming the tail that's 15 wagging the dog. While I understand the
16 importance of the issue to plaintiffs, it strikes
17 me that some of these things, although I
18 understand your client's not a party to it, are
19 going to maybe better bedded in the other case. I
20 mean, if the claim truly lacks any merit,
21 presumably that eventually is going to be

22 addressed in that case. There's going to be some 23 sort of appropriate sanction, and that may affect
24 what's appropriate for us to do.

25 On the other hand, if the claim of Morgan

30

1 Stanley gets bedded in that case and it turns out
2 it did have merit, that may affect what's
3 appropriate here. I do want to discuss how all
4 these things interrelate, but I don't want to let
5 the contempt overwhelm the case itself.

6 MR. BEMIS: May I address this issue?

7 THE COURT: Sure.

8 MR. BEMIS: May I use the podium?

9 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable
10 is fine.

11 MR. BEMIS: In Los Angeles, Your Honor, we're 12 powerless without something to show to someone
13 else.

14 Your Honor, the relief that we've requested
15 here is first and foremost to schedule a prompt
16 resolution of the contempt issues. And that
17 involves probably three sub-issues. I'll address
18 each one separately. As an overview, we need a

19 close of discovery or an idea of when a close of 20 discovery should take place on the contempt issue.

21 We need an idea and hopefully a date for an
22 evidentiary hearing on the contempt issue.

23 Given the most recent allegations that -- of
24 crime and fraud, which is personally now directed
25 to the attorneys, we need some resolution of that.

31

1 The way that we suggest that this be accomplished
2 is that there be a continuation of the merits
3 discovery until the contempt issues are decided.

4 Now, by that I don't mean a stay. I just mean we
5 can do both, but we're going to have to have some
6 accommodations. We cannot be two places at once
7 on occasion. If we're bogged down in hearings
8 here -- and bogged down, I didn't mean it in a
9 pejorative sense.

10 THE COURT: We know you love to come here.

11 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I lived here for many 12 years. I love coming here, but that's not the
13 issue.

14 The issue is it takes days to prepare for
15 these hearings. We have very short briefing

16 schedules, and we usually end up getting the 17 motions on Thursday or Friday. We're trying to
18 get some relief from that, but still five motions
19 to respond to in three or four business days and
20 get the materials to your court is a difficult,
21 time-consuming task.

22 What we're suggesting is some type of
23 scheduling, and I'll get to more details on that,
24 and then a simple reset of the pretrial deadlines
25 which I think is a relatively simple task. We

32

1 sequenced out what needs to be done, but they all
2 trigger off of the close of merits discovery,
3 which we worked back from, as you may recall, from
4 the trial date. We got a trial date, and we went
5 then backwards from that after arguing.

6 I don't believe, in light of Your Honor's
7 comments plus just the facts of the case, that
8 there would be any substantial prejudice to either
9 of the parties for a short extension in setting
10 this contempt for hearing. After all, these
11 claims arose in 1998. They were not filed until 12 five years later in 2003. The damages that are

13 being sought on both sides are extraordinary.

14 The contempt issues are being pressed by CPH.

15 Having raised the issue, we're entitled to defend

16 ourselves. Now that they are challenging the

17 integrity of the lawyers in this case, we're

18 entitled to defend ourselves, we think, as well.

19 By way of overview -- there we go -- we do

20 have a current pretrial schedule, which I'm going

21 to address, and I want to point out what dates

22 affect The Court.

23 Second, I want to try to summarize for you

24 what we've done since February 20th on merits

25 discovery and what's happened on the contempt,

33

1 whether it's the dog or the tail that's driving

2 this proceeding. I want to outline for you what

3 we have identified that remains to be done,

4 hopefully in a nonargumentative fashion, raising

5 what both sides are running into scheduling-wise,

6 and then hopefully to present you with a schedule.

7 Let me spend a minute on some of the history

8 of this, just bring us up. I won't spend much

9 time on it. Let me go back to the February 20th

10 scheduling conference of 2004. At that time I
11 think I've told you before, and I keep falling
12 back on this, my knowledge of the case was about
13 14 days old. We thought or I thought at that time
14 that it would be a very aggressive schedule to set
15 us for February 25th for a trial. That was based
16 on whatever review I had been capable of
17 conducting of the background of the pleadings and
18 indexes and what have you. There was a proposal
19 for an August 2004 trial date. Your Honor said
20 January 18th. We then worked backwards from that 21 date.

22 I said at the time, and I believe that I was
23 accurate, that that was an aggressive schedule.
24 And given my calendar and how many hours I've
25 worked since then, I know it was an aggressive

34

1 schedule. And that was without the contempt
2 proceeding. And that proceeding, frankly, has
3 dominated the last four months.

4 Now, it is true that we did submit to The
5 Court on March the 12th, I believe, a negotiated
6 schedule, and I agreed to it. However, when I

7 agreed to that schedule, which was negotiated at
8 the February 20th conference in the early weeks of
9 March, it was really based -- not really. It was
10 in fact based on multiple letters and conferences
11 with counsel conducted in good faith I think on
12 both sides, my own suggestion that we alternate
13 weeks in depositions, that we have case management
14 conferences so we can try to remove things from
15 the 8:45 call. And we eventually on March 11th
16 did agree to a resolution, if you will, of some
17 few minor details. And, indeed, I was sitting on
18 the runway at Miami International on the airplane
19 on the telephone wrapping up the final details so
20 I was leaving for my 35th wedding anniversary
21 vacation.

22 We thought at that time that we had a
23 schedule, but at the moment that was agreed to
24 when I left, I did not know the motion for
25 contempt was going to be filed the following day.

35

1 It wasn't disclosed to us at that time. And I
2 don't want to revisit that other than to tell you
3 that that's the fact of how the schedule came

4 about because, had I known it was coming, I'm not
5 sure that I would have agreed to the schedule.

6 THE COURT: You weren't privy to that at the
7 March 5th letter?

8 MR. BEMIS: I was not. In all candor, Your
9 Honor, what happened was, the letter was sent to
10 Mr. Yannucci, who was out of his office. The 11 letter never reached Mr. Clare or me at the time.
12 We simply didn't know about it. They sent it. I
13 don't deny they sent it. We didn't get it. It's 14 one of those things that sometimes happens. We
15 did ask whether any additional motions were
16 coming. We were simply told, we can't talk about
17 it. That's water over the dam at this point. It
18 happened. The contempt motion was filed.

19 And we now have, of course, then set a very
20 aggressive schedule. This is a little bit hard
21 for The Court to see, but this is the current
22 pretrial schedule. And I've deleted the things
23 that we have completed. The red boxes, Your
24 Honor, are matters that involve directly The
25 Court's calendar. They don't necessary -- the

1 others are all matters that the lawyers must
2 attend to on their own.

3 We have, in addition to the items -- and we
4 have quite a few depositions to complete, which
5 I'll identify. And we have, on top of that we
6 have quite a few items that -- items we still need
7 to schedule. In addition to what I just showed 8 you, we need to deal with the close of the 9 contempt discovery which includes motions which
10 are pending, potential appeals of issues with
11 regard to that, evidentiary hearings on the motion
12 for contempt. We have motions to amend the
13 pleadings and motions regarding punitive damages.
14 All of that is not yet really firmly set into the 15 schedule.

16 What have we accomplished since the February
17 20th conference? Well, we have completed, I
18 believe, 22 -- 22 depositions. This is what we've
19 completed. Now, obviously, the names are probably
20 less significant to you than they are just to let
21 you know that we've been very busy. To complicate
22 matters, everything is outside of Florida. It's 23 not like we can set up a war room down here and
24 have all of our --

25 THE COURT: You've got that? Thank you very

1 much. I'm sorry. Go ahead.

2 MR. BEMIS: It's not that we can set up war
3 rooms of exhibits and document repositories. We
4 end up having to move usually seven to eight boxes
5 of materials to these different cities by Federal
6 Express the day before, take them out, get them
7 back, reorganize and what have you. So it's a
8 complex process, and both sides have been, I
9 think, diligently taking depositions. I think 23
10 have been taken, and I've identified about ten --
11 not about -- ten that we've taken and 13 that CPH
12 has taken.

13 Now, this is only the tip of the iceberg
14 because, in addition to trying to take
15 depositions, we have numerous situations where
16 witnesses simply aren't available after they are
17 scheduled. For example, here's a letter that we
18 received from counsel from Jenner & Block telling
19 us that a deposition that we had scheduled during 20 our allocated week right on the verge of
21 deposition can't be taken. We didn't quarrel with
22 it. We didn't file a motion to compel. We said,
23 okay, we'll have to reschedule. Well, we don't
24 get when we do that an alternative date. It's

1 schedule, and we can't replace it.

2 This one, I had actually flown to Washington
3 to fly to New York, and I got stuck there, and I
4 couldn't take the depo. Well, that's not the only
5 one. We've got another one on May 21 for Mr.
6 Schwartz, unavoidable conflicts, no explanation.
7 I don't quarrel with the explanation. That's not
8 my point today. He just didn't make it. We
9 didn't get a substitute. Here's another one.

10 They cancelled Mr. Robinson the following week.

11 Again, I don't quarrel with the reason. He just 12 doesn't show. I can't go. I'm already in
13 Washington. I've lost three days dealing with 14 this. Mr. Spoor, again, July 16th, he's 15 cancelled.

16 Morgan Stanley has had to do the same thing.
17 We've had several instances where we've had to
18 cancel depositions. I don't want to make it sound like
19 it's a one-side affair. It's not. I would argue
20 we've had more problems than they've had, but it's 21 still happening on both sides. And here's another

22 one where we recently had to do the same thing, a
23 couple of examples where we've had try to
24 reschedule and get people different dates.
25 What do we have outstanding at this point?

39

1 These are depositions we currently have scheduled.
2 I'm going to get to what we can accomplish in
3 August. This is just what has been requested, but
4 we don't have scheduled. I misspoke. This is
5 what has been requested. Here's the dates we
6 requested them. Some of these are very important
7 people. For example, Mr. Perelman, we've
8 requested his deposition. We don't have a date
9 for him. He's very last on the list.
10 Mr. Marher, those are some of the key players.
11 Those depositions in deposition will take two
12 days, counting travel, add the time up, back and
13 forth. They all have to be taken in New York.
14 It's not going to be in Florida. I want to remind
15 The Court, because these are there, we cannot
16 subpoena these people for trial. We either get
17 them one time, or we don't get them at all. We
18 only have that one opportunity to get them.

19 We think -- in addition to this, we have
20 what's been taken, what's now being requested. We
21 have accomplished a lot. We've resolved eleven
22 discovery motions since February. We've had five
23 in-person hearings here. We've done seven more
24 sets of written discovery, and we fully briefed
25 and argued the choice of law motion on time. It's

40

1 now pending before The Court.

2 The case management conferences are taking an
3 awful amount of time. Awful in the sense of --

4 THE COURT: A large amount.

5 MR. BEMIS: That's a much better selection of
6 words.

7 When I suggested case management conferences,
8 it was because I saw in my review of the pleadings
9 and the transcripts that there were a lot of 8:45
10 hearings that were requiring people to travel. I
11 think two days of travel for an 8:45, a short
12 hearing, which was economically wasteful, I
13 thought not an efficient use of time. I thought,
14 if we could aggregate these in a single hearing,
15 we might make some more progress.

16 That really hasn't happened. What has
17 happened is, we're getting very substantial
18 proceedings being noticed in this case at the 19 conferences. They're being done, as you heard on
20 the scheduling issues, a week in advance with
21 three to four business days to get materials to
22 The Court. That's a schedule that's worse than
23 Bush versus Gore in the Supreme Court.

24 THE COURT: I hope the order we gave will
25 help with that.

41

1 MR. BEMIS: I hope so. That explains what's
2 happened in the past. Going forward hopefully
3 we'll get some relief from this.

4 Even, again, with all of the challenges that
5 we've done, we have accomplished I think a great
6 deal. May I hand this up to The Court? It's kind
7 of a summary you might want to look at.

8 THE COURT: Have you shared it with the other
9 gentlemen?

10 MR. BEMIS: Of course, of course. This is
11 just a summary, Your Honor, of what we've been
12 doing by depositions and hearings and the dates

13 blocked out on calendars. It's not something that
14 you need to read through right now, but you might
15 want to look at it if you take this matter under 16 advisement.

17 We have much left to be done and not a lot of 18 time to do it in. We have -- if I can get to the 19 next slide here -- these are the depositions that
20 remain to be -- remain to be completed. We tried
21 to summarize them for you. Some of the requests
22 are out for these. Some we're working on
23 scheduling. Some are nonparty. Some are parties.
24 These people are on vacations. People are sick.
25 The way we've been doing this is, we're not

42

1 noticing. I know originally parties noticed
2 depositions, and then they argued about whether
3 they could get them done. I think that the
4 parties reached a good-faith accommodation, tell
5 us who you want to take, give us some dates, and
6 then we're renoticing them. And that's the
7 process that's being followed.

8 So these are the people that I believe are
9 going to be deposed. I've gone through our list,

10 and I think our list is relatively accurate of 11 what we're going to need. Whether they take all
12 that they originally told us about is a matter
13 they'll decide.

14 We've concluded, just looking at this, not
15 including travel time, we've got 43 business days
16 of occupied time that we have to deal with.

17 Twenty-eight of these are nonparty, so we don't
18 control them in the sense that we can make them
19 appear. Some require subpoenas all outside of the 20 jurisdiction of Florida, so we have to go get
21 commission orders, et cetera. Very time
22 consuming.

23 July and August are very difficult months to
24 schedule things because of vacations. We talked
25 about that in February. We thought that was going

43

1 to be a problem. We've got some witnesses who
2 have medical problems, and we've got three
3 witnesses that are in Europe. We're going to have
4 to go to London. And there's one that we think
5 we're going to have to go to Paris. I know this
6 sounds like hardship duty, but, you know, somebody

7 is going to have to go, and it's going to take a
8 couple days to get it done. And they're important
9 people.

10 August, on top of that, if we look at the
11 calendar we have for August, the blue tells you
12 what we've occupied, we're already booked in
13 August. We've only got I think --

14 THE COURT: I'm afraid we're not going to
15 have time for the other motions we have, which are
16 substantive if you take real long on this.

17 Cut to the bottom line. How much additional
18 time are you asking for on the merits?

19 MR. BEMIS: I think that what we need on the
20 merits -- I don't know precisely. What I'm
21 thinking is 90 days is a number that we could work
22 with, depending on what you do with the contempt
23 proceeding. I think the contempt proceeding has
24 to be set first. I'm not saying we won't work
25 with the rest, but if the contempt proceeding --

44

1 THE COURT: Why does the contempt have to be
2 set first?

3 MR. BEMIS: I think because of the relief

4 that they're -- first of all, it is a diversion
5 that is interfering with our ability to take care
6 of the merits. That's number one. Number two is,
7 the extraordinary relief that they are requesting,
8 including disqualification of Kirkland & Ellis, is
9 a very significant matter. We have invested -- my
10 clients have invested -- I say we. My client has 11 invested in their counsel. We have learned the 12 case. We have managed the documents. If we are
13 disqualified in any fashion from this case, it
14 will impact the ability of any counsel to be ready
15 for trial at any date.

16 Plus, I think just overriding fairness, these
17 allegations need to be resolved. It escalates
18 every hearing. We have gone from an improper
19 disclosure to most recently at the last hearing
20 just a mere reference to a crime and fraud to the
21 most recent papers asserting a crime and fraud
22 with an allegation now that the attorneys are
23 involved in the crime and fraud. Those are
24 serious allegations, and they need to be
25 addressed. We want them addressed. We want the

1 air cleared on it so that we can proceed.

2 Again, I'm not asking for a stay of
3 discovery. I thought about it, but I'm not. I
4 think we can probably proceed with the merits
5 discovery. It's going to interfere with the
6 merits discovery, maybe a day where I can't be two
7 places at once. I'm thinking 90 days, give us 90
8 days, at least on the close of fact discovery.

9 That puts us well within the Rules of Judicial
10 Administration, I believe, for a case of this
11 complexity, which I think is -- 18 months I think
12 is the standard under Florida law for cases like 13 this. We'll be a little bit over but not by very
14 much.

15 At some point in between that 90 days, Your
16 Honor, based on your calendar and your judgments,
17 tell us when the hearing is. Let's get ready for
18 the hearing. It's their motion. They have to go
19 first. If on top of the contempt they are going
20 to assert crime fraud, we need to know that. And
21 I need to know for very specific procedures I'm
22 going to address not now but on the other motion
23 of how that has to be handled. They are not in
24 the procedures that are being followed right now.
25 It's not fair for them to put -- in our view, for

1 those allegations to be made in open court and not
2 follow the proper procedures and give us our
3 rights to defend.

4 THE COURT: Backing into it, some of this
5 really jumps to the next motion. If you're
6 suggesting a 90-day delay in the time deadlines
7 for the underlying case, what are you suggesting
8 as deadlines for the resolution of the contempt
9 proceedings?

10 MR. BEMIS: I think I would pick a date. I
11 would pick a date first and work backwards. A
12 hearing date, what is a hearing date. I think you
13 should be able to set a hearing date within the 14 next 30 days.

15 THE COURT: But how -- that wouldn't even
16 give us time to resolve all the outstanding
17 discovery.

18 MR. BEMIS: I'm not sure, Your Honor, that
19 we'll get all of the outstanding discovery issues
20 resolved within 30 days. I don't know because I
21 don't know what you're going to do with them.

22 THE COURT: I can't believe we can get the
23 underlying discovery disputes on the contempt
24 proceeding resolved and what I permitted to be

1 days. It doesn't make any sense, particularly
2 since we already -- I already articulated my
3 belief that how Morgan Stanley believes it was
4 damaged by Arthur Andersen is something that needs
5 to be bedded for purposes of the contempt. I
6 gather from what I've read that that's not an easy
7 answer, and you guys aren't prepared to answer
8 that right now.

9 MR. BEMIS: Well, you've issued an order on
10 that. Our response is currently due on August
11 2nd.

12 THE COURT: Right.

13 MR. BEMIS: I'm not prepared to tell you as I
14 stand here today given the shortness of time that
15 I've had to assess it precisely how that's going
16 to be answered. I can't tell you at this point
17 whether we're going to take an appeal of it by
18 writ of certiorari, and some of that may depend on
19 what happens later on this morning.

20 I still think that, while 30 days may sound
21 aggressive, they filed the motion. Normally the

22 motion would have been filed when they had a
23 factual basis for the motion. We would have
24 answered it.

25 THE COURT: Not necessarily because the

48

1 discovery is not relevant necessarily directly to
2 the issues in this case. I'm not sure that's
3 fair.

4 MR. BEMIS: Well, then we have a disagreement
5 on that, and I won't belabor the point. I believe
6 the process is as I articulated it at the April
7 30th hearing. They should have filed a motion.
8 We would have answered the motion appropriately
9 with denials. They would have been put to their
10 proof of the date, and they were not. This was 11 not to be a preliminary hearing on whether we
12 should -- that issue you ruled on, and I'm not
13 trying to reargue it.

14 THE COURT: As I understand it, what you're
15 suggesting is a 90-day delay on the underlying
16 action and that the motion for contempt to be
17 heard within 30 days.

18 MR. BEMIS: Or such other period of time that

19 you think is reasonable within the 90-day period.
20 We may have to revisit the 90 days depending on
21 what you do with the contempt proceedings.
22 There's no way to predict how this is going to
23 eventually resolve itself until we get farther
24 down the trail. You also need to tell us, are you
25 going to allow them to proceed on crime fraud as

49

1 they allege because there are very specific
2 procedures.

3 THE COURT: I read your memo. It sort of
4 goes on. Some of the motions we still have left.

5 But, Mr. Scarola, just so we can try to
6 narrow the discussion some, what's your response
7 first to the request that the underlying action be
8 continued 90 days, the pretrial deadline be
9 extended in order to allow discovery?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Ninety days is too long. We
11 are willing to agree to a shorter extension.

12 THE COURT: What would that be?

13 MR. SCAROLA: We think that 30 days might be 14 appropriate. I would be happy to discuss the 15 details why.

16 And with regard to the contempt motion, we
17 would love to have the contempt motion disposed of
18 within the next 30 days, Your Honor, but I think
19 Your Honor's observations are very accurate in 20 that regard. I don't know how we can possibly
21 complete the necessary discovery in order to have
22 that hearing in 30 days, particularly if Morgan
23 Stanley continues to insist upon providing
24 unresponsive answers, asserting privileges that
25 have already been overruled by The Court and

50

1 insisting upon the full time for compliance under
2 the rules with regard to all of their responses.

3 If they agree to an abbreviated schedule and
4 The Court has the time to hear the motions
5 necessary to address legal issues that they
6 raised, we'll devote the resources necessary to
7 get that contempt proceeding done within 30 days,
8 but that's going to impose a significant burden on
9 them that I hear they're incapable of meeting;
10 although, it's difficult for me to understand
11 that, and I'll address that when I have an
12 opportunity to address these issues more broadly.

13 If they want to do it, they need to
14 understand that they're assuming very significant
15 obligations which are going to include an
16 abbreviated, a drastically abbreviated schedule
17 with regard to the resolution of all outstanding
18 discovery issues.

19 MR. BEMIS: All outstanding discovery has
20 been answered with the exception of the motions to 21 compel. There's no outstanding discovery. We've
22 answered. I'm not saying everybody like the
23 answers. And I understand that you have an order
24 we responded to on August 2nd and that there's a
25 motion today, but all the discovery has been

51

1 responded to by both sides. So that at least is
2 behind us.

3 THE COURT: I would rather go through the
4 rest of the motions now because how those turn out
5 I think in a lot of sense is going to affect the
6 timing on these other issues.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We suggest, Your Honor, that
8 the --

9 THE COURT: Yes, Mr. Scarola.

10 MR. SCAROLA: We suggest that the
11 consideration of the contempt issues really ought
12 not to influence what The Court determines with 13 regard to how we are going to proceed with the 14 trial.

15 THE COURT: I understand that would be your
16 position. I also understand as a practical matter
17 the timing of the resolution and the timing of the 18 discovery disputes and the contempt have a very
19 practical effect on the time available to work on
20 the underlying case. So I understand your client
21 would disagree, but I don't think you can bring a
22 substantive motion that does require attention and
23 discovery and then suggest it doesn't have an
24 effect on the timing on the remainder of the case.

25 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not suggesting that it

52

1 doesn't have an impact on the resources necessary
2 to be devoted to this case, but we really need to
3 consider the context in which this is occurring.
4 Kirkland & Ellis is a 1,000-lawyer firm, and the
5 litigation chairman of that firm is involved in
6 this lawsuit. Carlton, Fields is a 200-lawyer

7 firm. That's 1,200 lawyers available to devote
8 resources necessary to get this case done and to
9 meet the commitment that they made.

10 THE COURT: They probably don't want to have
11 to educate everyone on this case.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I understand that.

13 THE COURT: And I understand you disagree. I
14 think, in all honesty, I want a better sense of 15 where we're going with the contempt. That's going
16 to give me a better idea for the contempt and the 17 underlying litigation.

18 MR. BEMIS: I have a bad tendency to 19 interrupt. I apologize.

20 THE COURT: I do, too.

21 MR. BEMIS: On the contempt issue, there's 22 two ways we can proceed with this. They are the
23 movant on this. We have a, if you will, a cross
24 motion on the issue.

25 THE COURT: On what issue?

53

1 MR. BEMIS: It relates to the scope of the
2 waiver issues and how it interfaces with the new
3 allegations that are made. I suggest that we

4 address the broad issues before we go 20 --
5 there's 20 subparagraphs.

6 THE COURT: I know there are.

7 MR. BEMIS: Twenty subparagraphs. I suggest
8 that we address the broad issues of the privilege
9 and the crime fraud, what we're going to do with
10 those issues, and the sham pleadings because they
11 permeate the objections. For example, there are 12 21 --

13 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry to interrupt, but
14 this is our motion, and I may be able to narrow
15 the issues significantly if I'm permitted to 16 address it first.

17 MR. BEMIS: If I may just finish, and then I
18 will sit down. May I finish, Your Honor?

19 THE COURT: Yes, go ahead.

20 MR. BEMIS: There are like -- not like.
21 There are 21 cut and pasted objections which are
22 identical. We can speed some of that up by
23 addressing them if they are --

24 THE COURT: Sure. Or we can just do them in
25 order. And once I've ruled on one, you can

1 probably figure I'll rule the same way on the
2 other ones.

3 MR. BEMIS: And that is possible. I thought
4 about that process, and I respectfully do think
5 that the most expeditious way is to address the
6 structure of what they've challenged because
7 there's three things they have. One is that it's
8 a sham pleading. Number two, that crime and fraud
9 applies. And number three, that there is a
10 waiver.

11 Now, we did get your order on July 12 or
12 shortly after that. It raises substantial
13 constitutional issues. If Your Honor adheres to
14 her position, I am not going to belabor the point
15 with you, but there are issues that we didn't
16 brief that I want --

17 THE COURT: Please understand that I didn't
18 get, nor have I reviewed, nor have I set for 19 hearing any motion for rehearing, so we're not
20 going there today.

21 MR. BEMIS: Well, it's not a question of a
22 motion for rehearing. It's a question of our
23 response to their offensive position, and we, I
24 think, are entitled to raise those issues in
25 defense. If you say no, I won't address them,

1 other than to put them into the record for the
2 appellate court.

3 THE COURT: That's fine. Please understand
4 we have the July 12th order, and right now we're
5 not revisiting it.

6 Let me go to Mr. Scarola because I do want to
7 get to those motions, and we can discuss the most
8 efficient way to dispose of them.

9 What tab am I looking at?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Tab number six.

11 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor. I'll sit
12 down.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor. Your
15 Honor will recall that, in the context of our
16 earlier motion to compel, we made reference to the
17 crime fraud exception to the attorney/client
18 privilege.

19 THE COURT: If I understand, you're seeking
20 to invoke that by saying that the pleading in the 21 new litigation is a sham?

22 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. We're
23 suggesting that the crime fraud exception is
24 broader than application simply in the context of

1 want to go there today. We have raised the crime
2 fraud exception issue to be sure that it is not
3 waived. We wish to preserve it.

4 What we ask The Court to do today is
5 something that is far simpler than to get into
6 both the substantively complex and procedurally
7 protracted process of determining the crime fraud
8 exception application in this case. What we want
9 Your Honor to do is simply to apply the rulings
10 that you have already made in your prior order of
11 July 12th to the interrogatories and request to
12 produce that are presently before The Court for
13 determination.

14 The reason why we want you to do that is
15 because we believe that we may very well receive
16 sufficient information on the basis of the rulings
17 that Your Honor has already made to allow us to go
18 forward without needing to confront the broader
19 expanse of information that may be available to us
20 if we meet the crime fraud threshold to overcome
21 privilege assertions.

22 So all we want you to do is to walk through
23 these interrogatories with us to the extent that's 24 necessary and to apply the same rulings that Your
25 Honor has previously made with regard to findings

57

1 that particular questions do not involve a
2 legitimate claim of privilege or that they are
3 encompassed within the scope of those issues where
4 Your Honor has found a waiver to exist. If we can
5 get that information, I think we may not have to
6 come back to The Court.

7 THE COURT: So, as I understand what you're
8 asking me to do today is not rule on any crime
9 fraud issue?

10 MR. SCAROLA: I'm asking you to defer ruling
11 on the crime fraud issues, simply to go through
12 these interrogatories, apply the same standards
13 that you've previously applied, extend the July
14 12th order which applied to a particular set of 15 interrogatories to the subsequently filed
16 discovery requests.

17 THE COURT: Is there any objection to holding
18 the crime fraud issue in abeyance?

19 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor. This is a
20 reprise of the rule to show cause. They throw an
21 issue before The Court like on the rule to show
22 cause, which I argued, and I think you ultimately
23 accepted I was correct that it was procedurally
24 improper. They raise an allegation with no
25 evidence, impugning the integrity of the lawyers,

58

1 accusing me of a crime of fraud.

2 THE COURT: We need to get back to what we're
3 talking about here.

4 MR. BEMIS: That's exactly what they have
5 done. They have 23 times asserted in a filing in
6 a courthouse --

7 THE COURT: So you want them to either
8 withdraw it or be prepared to have it bedded?

9 MR. BEMIS: Right. That's exactly what I
10 want.

11 THE COURT: I think that's fair.

12 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just a moment?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we would request
15 permission to withdraw those allegations with

16 regard to the crime fraud exception without
17 prejudice to renew them when and if we believe
18 it's appropriate.

19 THE COURT: Please understand, if you're
20 going to withdraw, that's fine. It's not with or
21 without prejudice. If for some reason you think
22 they come back in, you come in and we discuss
23 whether it's procedurally appropriate or not. I
24 assume there's no objection if I just do an order
25 that says they are being withdrawn, period.

59

1 MR. BEMIS: I have an objection to the second
2 time that they have done this and then walk in and
3 say it's all right. It's not all right to make
4 these type of allegations against my client and
5 the attorneys and then say, I'm sorry, I now
6 realize I did it incorrectly, I'll withdraw it
7 after twice raising the issue. And I think anyone
8 who is sitting here and listening to it would have
9 the same reaction. It's just improper.

10 THE COURT: Well --

11 MR. BEMIS: And I apologize if I seem
12 somewhat frustrated by this, but they are serious

13 allegations.

14 THE COURT: I agree. And, no, you're not
15 offending me that you would take it seriously. I
16 would be upset if you didn't. I don't -- the two
17 choices I see are, either you withdraw them, I do
18 an order saying you withdrew them in open court
19 and they have left us, or we go through the
20 procedure to fully let the issues. I don't think
21 we just say, oh -- they're not going to be
22 addressed on their merits today.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Clearly, with the 45 minutes we
24 have remaining, they are not going to be addressed
25 on their merits today.

60

1 THE COURT: I think it's your call, are they
2 still with us or not.

3 MR. SCAROLA: With the understanding that
4 they are not going to be addressed on the merits
5 today, is Your Honor prepared at least to address
6 that portion of the motion that I have suggested
7 can be addressed today? And that is, application
8 of Your Honor's earlier ruling.

9 THE COURT: The first question I have to you

10 is, are you withdrawing the crime fraud issue or
11 not? That's a yes or no.

12 MR. SCAROLA: No.

13 THE COURT: Okay. So we still have those?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. And we request that the
15 order in which we address these issues is to first
16 deal with the simple extension of Your Honor's
17 order to the pending interrogatories.

18 MR. BEMIS: And I, Your Honor, request that
19 we address the crime fraud issue first. It's the 20 most serious one that's made, and we should be
21 heard on it and not let it linger for another case
22 management conference.

23 THE COURT: I think we're going to go through
24 them one by one, and the order we get to them is
25 the order we get to them.

61

1 MR. BEMIS: Crime fraud is raised in the very
2 first --

3 THE COURT: It probably is. I know I read it
4 a lot.

5 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, may we address these
6 one at a time so that each interrogatory -- so I

7 don't have to go back and do 20 of them?

8 THE COURT: That's what I'm proposing. Let
9 me figure out the best way to get the
10 interrogatories and the answers in front of me. I
11 know you repeat the interrogatories in your
12 motion. I know I have the answers. Can you tell
13 me which tab they're at?

14 MR. SCAROLA: It's under tab six, Your Honor.

15 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I have actually
16 assembled one volume which has the
17 interrogatories, the response, the argument and
18 the motion response on a single page.

19 THE COURT: Do you object to my looking at
20 that?

21 MR. SCAROLA: No. Do we have two copies of
22 it so we can be looking at the same thing?

23 MR. BEMIS: Sure, I think we have an extra
24 copy. There will be a small charge.

25 May I approach the bench, Your Honor?

62

1 THE COURT: Yes. Can I go back to the ore
2 tenus motion on The Court file? I didn't want to
3 forget that I had gotten this. I don't think that

4 the clerk has done anything improper. The order I
5 wrote said the only thing that was supposed to be
6 filed under seal was the complete copy of the
7 settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A to the
8 order. Exhibit A to the order was the redacted
9 copy where the only thing I redacted I think was
10 the account information.

11 So, no, the clerk has not violated my order.
12 If you're now saying you want something sealed
13 that's not sealed, you may want to make an
14 appropriate order.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: So that would be denied. Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I'm having the
18 first chance to look at what has been handed to
19 The Court. And while I don't object to Your Honor
20 using this to the extent that it may be of
21 assistance to you, I think what you'll find when
22 you look at it is that the interrogatory is set
23 out in full, Morgan Stanley's objections are set
24 out, and their reply is set out. And what we have
25 then is a one- or two-line summary --

1 THE COURT: Okay.

2 MR. SCAROLA: -- of CPH's argument which --

3 THE COURT: Well, I also have your motion
4 thing in front of me, so I have the full version
5 as well.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Okay. I just don't want The
7 Court to overlook the fact that the way in which
8 they have chosen to summarize our argument may not
9 necessarily accurately reflect our argument.

10 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, that is -- it is
11 accurate that what we did was extract what we took
12 from our paper in terms of their objections and
13 didn't repeat a whole page of the objection as
14 much as edit. Mr. Scarola is correct, and I
15 should have pointed that out to The Court. I'm 16 sorry.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Interrogatory one.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. The Court
19 concluded in its July 12 order that the privilege
20 has been waived with respect to the subject matter
21 of this interrogatory. The only document that
22 Morgan Stanley has produced is the April 5
23 retention letter which, not insignificantly,
24 postdates our motion for contempt by weeks. This
25 is, we suggest, an improperly asserted objection

1 that has already been addressed in the July 12th
2 order. Your Honor should overrule the objection
3 and order a full and complete response on the
4 basis of the waiver that has already been found to
5 exist.

6 THE COURT: How do you define identified? Is
7 that defined in the interrogatories?

8 MR. SCAROLA: It is, Your Honor. I don't
9 think we've included in the interrogatories in the
10 exhibits that we provided to The Court, and I
11 can't put my hands on a copy among the materials
12 that we have with us, but I know that identify is
13 a defined term, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Do you all have a copy of the
15 interrogatories?

16 MR. IANNO: I'm looking, Your Honor.

17 MR. BEMIS: I do someplace. I think in our
18 answers we didn't repeat the definition, so I'm
19 not sure that I even have them here.

20 THE COURT: Why don't we continue and -- I
21 just was trying to figure out exactly --

22 MR. SCAROLA: Are we going to do these one at
23 a time with our position stated?

24 THE COURT: I think we need to start. We're

25 not going to finish, but I think we need to start

65

1 with one at a time and see how far we get.

2 MR. BEMIS: Are you finished?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. That's my initial
4 presentation and support.

5 THE COURT: What's the response?

6 MR. BEMIS: My response is, may I have some
7 water?

8 THE COURT: Sure.

9 MR. BEMIS: The water fountains are broken.
10 There's no water outside at all.

11 THE COURT: How long have they been broken?
12 It's a pressure issue?

13 MR. IANNO: I don't think they've worked for
14 a long time.

15 THE COURT: Really? That's bad.

16 MR. BEMIS: First of all, with regard to the
17 first allegation that we did not respond, we did
18 identify and eventually -- and I'm sure Your Honor
19 is aware of this, but pursuant to a stipulation,
20 we did produce the, what I will call the legal
21 representation agreement, some would call it a

22 retention letter, between Kellogg Huber and Morgan
23 Stanley. That was done, I believe, right after
24 our last hearing on July 2nd. I'm not sure that
25 Your Honor was aware of that, but we've identified

66

1 that.

2 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Is that the April 5th
3 retention letter?

4 MR. BEMIS: The April 5th retention letter.
5 There is only one that I am aware of, and that is
6 the one that is produced pursuant to our
7 stipulation. That production would not be argued
8 to be a waiver of attorney/client privilege.

9 We identified in our answers to
10 interrogatories that we -- the dates of
11 conversations which, by the way, is the same
12 information that in many respects we would be
13 required to identify pursuant to the Florida Rules
14 of Judicial Administration, 2. -- I think I've got
15 the number right off my head -- 061.

16 THE COURT: It is.

17 MR. BEMIS: We would be required to identify
18 the matter that they were retained in. We would

19 be required to identify the counsel, and we would
20 be required to identify the date of their
21 retention in order for foreign attorneys to
22 practice in the state. That even came up, as you
23 may recall, at the April 30th hearing. There was
24 some issues of whether we had adequately provided
25 all that information and declarations that were

67

1 filed and the application, and we did provide
2 that.

3 What I think they're asking for further under
4 the crime fraud exception were the waiver
5 argument, is that, by virtue of identifying
6 Kellogg Huber as the attorney in the case, that
7 somehow we have -- that is a sham pleading, and,
8 therefore, they're entitled to everything. And on
9 the issue of the --

10 THE COURT: I think this is just a pure
11 waiver, as I understand it.

12 MR. BEMIS: They also argue in their full
13 motion that crime fraud exception applies in the 14 very first interrogatories. I believe it's on 15 page three.

17 of the page.

18 MR. BEMIS: Page three, top of the page,
19 right-hand side, runs down approximately 17 lines
20 from the top. I did not hear that withdrawn.

21 Let me address the issue of a sham pleading,
22 if I may, first. In order for them to establish a
23 sham pleading, they need to file a verified motion
24 with this court or with another court. That's an
25 issue Your Honor may have to decide, where does

68

1 that go. We think that the proper procedure under
2 Rule 1.150 is that it has to go before Judge
3 Miller. That matter is pending before her. And I
4 will not tell you that I found a case on this
5 point.

6 THE COURT: Let's, so I'm not overwhelmed --
7 I mean, I understand that argument. Let's assume
8 I'm probably not going to accept it.

9 MR. BEMIS: Then at a minimum, even if they
10 allege it's a sham pleading in this Court, they
11 need to file something that's verified that sets
12 forth the facts under verification that it's a

13 sham. That's not been done. All that's been done
14 thus far -- and if we were to go back all the way
15 to March 19th, there is no evidence that's been
16 offered in this case at all.

17 THE COURT: So you're saying they haven't
18 made a prima facie showing that would trigger it?

19 MR. BEMIS: Yes, with regard to the rule,
20 and, yes, with regard to the crime and fraud
21 exception under the Butler Pappas trilogy. Can
22 you put that up for me?

23 MR. BEMIS: I have a copy of that case. Can
24 I had that up to The Court?

25 THE COURT: I have it.

69

1 MR. BEMIS: Okay. The Butler Pappas Trilogy,
2 which has really its origin in the American
3 Tobacco case in the Fourth DCA as well as I think
4 the Supreme Court's decision in Zolon and Haines
5 (phonetic), sets forth three things that you need
6 to do and the procedure The Court has to follow.

7 The first step is that there must be an
8 allegation that the communication, whatever it is
9 that they're looking for here, and this would be

10 the communications between, I assume the way the
11 question is drafted, between Morgan Stanley and
12 Kellogg Huber, that it must have been made as part
13 of an effort to perpetrate a crime or fraud. And
14 it has to be a future crime or fraud, not past.
15 And they have to identify the crime or fraud.
16 That's what they need to do. That's not been
17 done. That's just the allegation.

18 Step two in the process is, you must
19 determine that they have made a prima fascia case,
20 and I emphasize evidence because the cases clearly
21 say argument of counsel, memorandum of law are not
22 evidence, that a client sought counsel's advice.
23 I don't know here whether their allegation is that
24 they sought my law firm's advice or they sought
25 Kellogg Huber's advice because they don't make

70

1 that allegation, and they clearly don't have any
2 evidence of it.

3 And thirdly, under step three of Butler
4 Pappas, which stems from language out of American
5 Tobacco, we are entitled to provide The Court a
6 reasonable explanation of our conduct at an

7 evidentiary hearing, a reasonable explanation of
8 our conduct which, of course, is what we have a
9 major issue with what happened on April 30th
10 because we were under the impression that you were
11 proceeding with the hearing in one fashion. It
12 turns out that ultimately the procedure became
13 more truncated. We believed at the time we were 14 entitled to provide a reasonable explanation of
15 our proceeding, and that reasonable explanation is
16 not a waiver of the privilege under the law.

17 THE COURT: Again, we're not rearguing that.

18 MR. BEMIS: I know, but, Your Honor, it's a
19 basic defense under the due process clause to the
20 allegation of crime fraud, and we're entitled to
21 present it. I make it for the record. I won't
22 repeat it, but that's our position for the record.

23 As with regard to that, we are not at any of
24 those three steps; therefore, those objections
25 ought to be plainly overruled that it's a sham

71

1 pleading. They haven't complied with whatever
2 requirement you imposed, and the Butler Pappas
3 Trilogy of procedural steps that have to be

4 followed have not been even followed in the
5 smallest element in this case.

6 Other than that, I believe we have fully
7 identified what is required by the answer, and
8 we've answered it fully. We've gone beyond that
9 by providing the legal representation agreement.

10 I don't know what more we could do other than to
11 divulge every communication between Kellogg Huber
12 and Morgan in subdetail, and we do not believe we
13 are obligated to do that, that that is protected
14 under attorney/client. That's our response to
15 interrogatory one.

16 THE COURT: What do you want to respond?

17 MR. SCAROLA: First, that Mr. Bemis has not
18 addressed the primary contention that we have
19 made, and that is that this is covered by Your
20 Honor's July 12 order that there has already been
21 a waiver with respect to these issues. That order
22 specifically found at page three, quote, it may
23 not -- referring to Morgan Stanley & Company --
24 selectively reveal only such privileged
25 information as it believes helps its position.

1 The conclusion is inescapable that defendant,
2 Morgan Stanley & Company, has waived any privilege
3 with respect to the reasons for and timing of the
4 retention of Kellogg Huber law firm, the scope of
5 its representation and the timing of the Arthur
6 Andersen suit.

7 Those determinations have been made. This
8 interrogatory addresses those issues. And on that
9 basis alone before ever reaching crime fraud
10 issues, Your Honor should overrule the objections
11 and require a full and complete response.

12 With regard to the Butler Pappas procedure,
13 we suggest that the record before this Court
14 already establishes evidentiary support for a
15 prima fascia finding of application of the crime
16 fraud exception, and that evidentiary support
17 comes by way of Mr. Bemis's own open court
18 representations to The Court about the
19 relationship between the settlement agreement and
20 the suit filed in front of Judge Miller. It comes
21 by way of the timing of that litigation, and it
22 comes by way of the patent lack of factual support
23 for damages in that Arthur Andersen suit.

24 We have cited to The Court case law that
25 supports our position that sham litigation can

1 trigger the crime fraud exception. Those cases
2 are referenced at page three of our memorandum. I
3 think it is clear that the weight of authority is
4 that baseless litigation may bring the crime fraud
5 exception into play, that any type of misconduct
6 inconsistent with the basic premises of the
7 adversary system are sufficient to trigger the
8 crime fraud exception application. But that is
9 not an issue that needs to be reached in light of
10 the fact that the waiver already found to exist
11 applies to the information being sought by this
12 interrogatory.

13 THE COURT: I will grant the motion in part.
14 I think, and I've said it before, I think we
15 clearly had a waiver as to the scope of the 16 Kellogg Huber representation and the timing of its
17 retention. I had specific representations made to
18 me in open court about why they were retained, the
19 limited purpose for which they were retained.

20 On the other hand, I do think this does ask
21 for some information which could be still deemed
22 privileged and not waived.

23 What I will do is eliminate the first
24 sentence, take out the first seven words of the

1 communication concerning the scope of the
2 representation, the entity or entities to be
3 represented and why they were retained, which I
4 think is what I previously found there was a
5 waiver on based upon the representations in court.

6 MR. BEMIS: We've answered that question.

7 THE COURT: I don't know if you've answered
8 that completely or not. If you have, you need to
9 tell us this is the complete answer. If you
10 are -- looking at the answer, I'm not sure it
11 would be complete, but you need to make that
12 representation.

13 MR. BEMIS: All right. By saying all right,
14 Your Honor, I don't want to --

15 THE COURT: I think you're saying, I
16 understand what you're telling me.

17 MR. BEMIS: Exactly. Thank you very much,
18 Your Honor. What are you doing on the crime fraud
19 sham pleading?

20 THE COURT: I would agree that there's not
21 been a prime fascia showing to support its

22 application; although, I can tell you the motion
23 for contempt I don't think requires necessarily
24 that you show -- I mean, it might sort of
25 implicate whether that was a sham pleading, but I

75

1 don't think you need to rely on that to negate all
2 the privilege claims. So I'm just -- they didn't
3 make a prime fascia showing now, but I'm still
4 finding this is something that vast portions of
5 the answers have already been published to The
6 Court.

7 MR. SCAROLA: So as to avoid having to come
8 back here to reargue these matters again, I'm
9 concerned about the representation made by
10 Mr. Bemis that the answer is already complete.

11 THE COURT: If he's going to say it's
12 complete, he's going to need to file something
13 saying I've already answered it.

14 MR. BEMIS: That's not what I said.

15 THE COURT: You know what, we have 26 minutes
16 left. We need to put it to good use.

17 MR. BEMIS: I just want the record clear that
18 I don't agree with what Mr. Scarola's conclusion

19 was. I will respond as directed by The Court or
20 preserve our objections and proceed accordingly.

21 MR. SCAROLA: May I simply inquire as to
22 whether it is Your Honor's intent that the content
23 of the communication, to the extent it falls
24 within the waiver you have described, be included
25 in the response because these responses don't

76

1 include anything about the content. That's my
2 only point.

3 THE COURT: Yes. I understand.

4 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

5 THE COURT: I mean, assuming that identified
6 was defined in a way that would have required the
7 disclosure of the content, I don't know the
8 definition, I'm not adding stuff to the
9 interrogatory that wasn't there.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I understand that. I
11 understand that.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Two.

13 MR. SCAROLA: It is our position with regard
14 to this interrogatory, Your Honor, that Morgan
15 Stanley has provided selective disclosures in its

16 answers. Your Honor has ruled that selective
17 disclosures result in a waiver of the privilege.
18 They can't choose to give us that portion of 19 information that they consider helps them and
20 withhold the balance. We want a full and complete
21 response on the basis of a waiver.

22 In addition, there is no privilege because of
23 the crime fraud and at-issue exceptions applying
24 under the circumstances of this case.

25 THE COURT: Do you want to respond?

77

1 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, with regard to the
2 crime fraud, you've already ruled, so I won't
3 address that again. With regard to the balance of
4 it, we stand on our objections that we have a
5 privilege as to certain of the communications.
6 With regard to other matters, we have provided --
7 and if you'll look at the third paragraph of our
8 objection, we did state that the parties, that is,
9 I should not say the parties, that is Kellogg
10 Huber and Morgan Stanley participated, as we say,
11 in discussions with its co-counsel, Kirkland &
12 Ellis, regarding the representation and that they

13 assigned the declaration to be bound by the 14 protective order. We believe that that is the
15 answer that is required by the interrogatory.
16 With regard to other matters, it's a substance, we
17 stand on our privilege -- we stand on our
18 privilege objection, and we don't think it's
19 foreclosed by your order.

20 THE COURT: I would sustain his objection. I
21 don't think this is something I found a waiver on,
22 and I don't think there has been a waiver of
23 privilege on this one.

24 Number three.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Our arguments with regard to

78

1 number three would be the same as those that I
2 have just stated, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Again, I don't think there's been
4 a waiver on this.

5 Four.

6 MR. SCAROLA: May I just go back to that for
7 one moment, Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: Sure.

9 MR. SCAROLA: What The Court -- is it all

10 right if I address The Court from a seated
11 position?

12 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable.

13 MR. SCAROLA: What The Court specifically
14 found in its July 12th order was that MS & Company
15 has waived any privilege with respect to the
16 reasons for the retention of the Kellogg Huber
17 firm. And it would seem that --

18 THE COURT: Which number are we on?

19 MR. SCAROLA: We're on number three.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: It would seem that, whether
22 Kellogg Huber was provided a copy of the
23 settlement agreement in connection with the
24 reasons for the retention of that Kellogg Huber
25 firm would fall within the scope of that waiver.

79

1 THE COURT: The reasons -- I would be shocked
2 to find -- and maybe this is why I didn't do it,
3 is to match the date of the retention and
4 settlement agreement. I would be shocked to find
5 that they got the settlement agreement before they
6 were retained and the reasons for the retention

7 ended at the retention. I mean, they obviously
8 don't predate the retention.

9 MR. SCAROLA: They certainly got the
10 settlement agreement before the retention letter
11 because the retention letter comes after the
12 contempt motion was filed.

13 THE COURT: I understand that. I think it --
14 I don't think there's been a waiver as to this.
15 If what you're trying to get at is, did they get
16 the settlement agreement before or after they were
17 retained, that may be something that's
18 discoverable because, if they got it before they
19 were retained, it would suggest perhaps it played
20 a part in why they were retained.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Might I also suggest, Your
22 Honor, that there's no necessary implication of
23 any privilege at all in responding to this
24 question. If Morgan Stanley provided Kellogg
25 Huber with the settlement agreement and Morgan

80

1 Stanley had a reason for doing it, that there's no
2 attorney/client privilege communication at all
3 involved in why Kellogg Huber -- why Kellogg Huber

4 was provided a copy of the settlement agreement.

5 There is no implication of any communication.

6 Morgan Stanley may very well have said, I
7 want this settlement agreement to go to Kellogg
8 Huber because I want Kellogg Huber to advise us as
9 to how we are going to use this settlement
10 agreement to our advantage in the currently
11 pending litigation and trigger these provisions in
12 the settlement agreement. The President of Morgan
13 Stanley could have had that conversation.

14 THE COURT: I understand the argument.
15 What's the response?

16 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we fully answered the
17 question, and we didn't waive it. And you didn't
18 find that we waived it. We've identified in prior
19 interrogatories what documents were provided, when
20 they were provided. We've identified pursuant to
21 the Rules of Judicial Administration who was
22 retained, the dates that they were retained. We
23 have provided the retention letter. I don't know
24 what more we should be obligated --

25 THE COURT: We're down to 20 minutes. I

1 think what you're suggesting is maybe you want to
2 ask who gave it to him, and we can come back.

3 MR. SCAROLA: No. I really want to ask why
4 it was given to them. Why did Morgan Stanley give
5 this settlement agreement to Kellogg Huber? Why
6 did they do it? What was Morgan Stanley's thought
7 process in giving this settlement agreement to
8 Kellogg Huber? I don't care -- I don't care what
9 Kirkland & Ellis's thought process may have been
10 at this point in time. What I want to know is 11 what Morgan -- these interrogatories are directed
12 to Morgan Stanley.

13 THE COURT: I don't have a preamble to see if
14 we're asking about agents or not.

15 What's the brief response that they should be
16 able to ask your client why you gave it to the law
17 firm?

18 MR. BEMIS: Because it calls for our mental
19 impressions and conclusions.

20 THE COURT: When you say our --

21 MR. BEMIS: Kirkland & Ellis, or in the
22 context because that would be where --

23 THE COURT: Well, why wouldn't your client
24 then simply respond, I relied on advice of 25 counsel?

1 MR. BEMIS: We have already -- first of all,
2 we waived -- you found we waived no privilege with
3 respect to our mental impressions and conclusions.

4 THE COURT: Right. But when you say "our," I
5 get confused as to who you mean, you or your
6 client.

7 MR. BEMIS: I appreciate that. I should have
8 made that clear. It is our work product privilege
9 when we --

10 THE COURT: Again, our, I don't know if you
11 mean the client or yours.

12 MR. BEMIS: Kirkland's, the lawyer's
13 privilege. We have said that we discussed certain
14 issues with regard to, I think it was
15 interrogatory number one, the information was
16 provided that the decision was made based on the 17 information that was available. For us to have
18 to isolate out in the manner that they are
19 describing invades our work product privilege and
20 our communications with the client on the matter.

21 THE COURT: What you're really saying is that
22 your client's answer is that, I relied completely
23 on the advice of counsel?

24 MR. BEMIS: I'm not going to tell you what my

1 the privilege, and I'm not going to discuss what
2 my client relied on in open court. It's
3 privileged. I'm entitled to communicate with my
4 client. My client is entitled to communicate with
5 its other counsel, Kellogg Huber.

6 THE COURT: Sure. But this is the question
7 I'm asking: Interrogatory number three, and I'm
8 asking a legal question, if your client made a
9 decision to give that agreement to new counsel
10 totally apart from any input, would we agree that
11 answer wouldn't be privileged?

12 MR. BEMIS: Can I just --

13 THE COURT: Sure. Is this one where we need
14 to answer it and just do an in-camera inspection
15 on whether it's privileged or not?

16 MR. BEMIS: It may well be because what we
17 have is an in-house legal department at Morgan
18 Stanley that we -- that our communications, as you
19 might expect, we deal with the lawyers, and they
20 are lawyers licensed to practice all over the 21 country, and we communicate with them. Whatever

22 decisions that they make, they have a -- we have a
23 litigation privilege with regard to those as well.
24 If Mr. -- if his question is what business man
25 independent of any legal advice did something,

84

1 that's a totally different question than I
2 understand is being asked. I'm not even sure at
3 this point what they are asking for.

4 THE COURT: I think they're asking the
5 question, why were they provided a settlement
6 agreement. And you're lodging a privilege for
7 what may be all or a portion of the answer, as I
8 understand what you're saying.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Why did you, Morgan Stanley
10 give the settlement agreement to these lawyers?
11 That's the question.

12 THE COURT: But --

13 MR. IANNO: My problem, Your Honor, it's
14 asking for a client's decision in conjunction,
15 potentially in conjunction with lawyers either
16 inside or outside. It's clearly a bad question
17 that's being asked because they're asking for the 18 internal mental impressions. That's the problem.

19 The question is just improper, and Mr. Scarola is 20 just trying to get at that. He's trying to get at
21 decisions made in litigation.

22 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Would it be
23 disclosure of any sort of privileged information
24 if the answer was because my lawyer told me to?

25 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, based on the rulings

85

1 we have here, I mean no disrespect, I don't know
2 what it would lead to. I just don't know. My
3 position on this I've articulated, and you don't
4 agree with me. I think we're entitled to present
5 the defense under the due process clause in
6 article one, section nine of the Florida
7 Constitution in the Fourteenth Amendment, the
8 Pappas case, American Tobacco and a legion of
9 other cases, and they don't result in a privilege.
10 There's been no fact communication disclosures.

11 What they want to get into is our top drawer
12 as to what the legal department and the law firms
13 said to each other as to what they thought about a
14 lawsuit. And that's privileged, whether it's
15 attorney/client or work product.

16 THE COURT: Can you represent to me that
17 there was no business person at Morgan Stanley
18 that elected to hand over the settlement agreement
19 or that the decision to turn it over was based
20 solely on advice of counsel?

21 MR. BEMIS: I think I can. Can I just ask
22 Mr. Clare? Some of this leg work has been
23 done by -- there's a lot of work on this.

24 THE COURT: Sure.

25 MR. BEMIS: The answer is, we believe that to

86

1 be the case. If it's not, we will tell The Court.
2 We will answer it as to who the business person
3 was, if that's acceptable. My representation is,
4 based on the information I'm standing here in
5 court is what I've just told you is a correct
6 statement, that it went through the legal
7 department.

8 THE COURT: Okay. What I'm going to need
9 then is just a supplemental answer that tells us
10 whether any part of the decision was made other
11 than on the advice of counsel. And if any part
12 was, then tell us what the answer is. If it was

13 all made on advice of counsel, that's fine.

14 MR. BEMIS: We'll proceed according to your
15 order.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Four.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I doubt that --

18 THE COURT: We have 12 minutes left. Do you
19 want to go back and discuss scheduling, or what do
20 we want to do?

21 MR. SCAROLA: I really think that it's
22 important that we address the scheduling issues
23 before we conclude this hearing. We all need to 24 know what's going to happen as far as our trial is 25 concerned.

87

1 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I mean, that short
2 exercise has told me the discovery and the
3 contempt is going to take a bit of time. One
4 other thing I wanted to bring up is whether you'll
5 have any interest in having a special master do
6 any of the in-camera inspection.

7 MR. BEMIS: The answer is yes. In fact, we
8 requested that, and we think it's the fairest way.

9 THE COURT: From my perspective, quite

10 honestly, it's just a function of time more than 11 anything else.

12 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just a moment?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are not willing
15 to agree to a special master.

16 THE COURT: That's fine. Please understand
17 that's going to affect the timing.

18 MR. SCAROLA: What we are willing to do,
19 however, is to submit the issues with regard to
20 this discovery to Your Honor on the basis of the 21 submissions that have already been made in writing
22 and have Your Honor rule on the basis of those
23 written submissions. We've had an opportunity to
24 present some argument to The Court.

25 THE COURT: Are you all willing to do that or

88

1 not?

2 MR. IANNO: I mean, what this exercise has
3 also shown us is The Court has some very probing
4 questions that aren't answered in the papers, to
5 me.

6 THE COURT: If they aren't willing to do it

7 without argument, I'm not inclined on something
8 like this to waive argument. But let's go back to 9 the scheduling stuff we were talking about.

10 MR. SCAROLA: May I briefly address those
11 issues before Your Honor arrives at any
12 conclusions?

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we filed our
15 complaint in this case on May 8th, 2003, which was
16 more than a year after we entered into a tolling
17 agreement with Morgan Stanley with regard to this
18 litigation. So they were well aware for over a
19 year of the potential of this claim coming. On
20 July 10th, 2003 Your Honor denied Morgan
21 Stanley's motion to stay discovery, and they knew
22 from that point, obviously, that this case was
23 going to be proceeding.

24 Document discovery in the case was
25 substantially completed by September 8th, 2003,

89

1 and that left Morgan Stanley with a full year in
2 which to conduct deposition discovery before the
3 September 3rd, 2004 cutoff.

4 Morgan Stanley in that one year's period of
5 time has taken a total of 11 depositions. We have
6 taken 29. They have taken 11. I've already
7 referenced the resources available to both the
8 Kirkland & Ellis and Carlton, Fields firms, and
9 they are obviously substantial. And I think that
10 that's a factor that The Court needs to take into
11 consideration. The excuse that Morgan Stanley
12 agreed to discovery -- the discovery schedule
13 before it knew it would be obliged to defend
14 against the contempt charges, as stated in the
15 graphic that was shown, there was a quote,
16 unexpected, unquote, contempt proceeding, doesn't
17 stand even if we find as an excuse that Mr. Bemis
18 personally didn't get the March 5th letter and
19 ignore the fact that, obviously, Mr. Yannucci did
20 get the March 5th letter prior to the agreement.

21 And the reason why it doesn't stand even in
22 light of Mr. Bemis's contention that he personally
23 didn't know is that Morgan Stanley confirmed that
24 agreement to the pretrial schedule in open court a
25 full week after receiving the motion for contempt.

1 That motion had already been filed when they came
2 before The Court and formally agreed to that
3 schedule. They knew what demands they were
4 facing. They have the resources to meet those
5 demands if they chose to apply those resources,
6 and they simply haven't diligently chosen to apply
7 those resources.

8 As of the filing of the motion, we had been
9 provided and The Court had been provided with no
10 indication as to what discovery they really needed
11 to take. Witnesses hadn't been identified. We
12 had a graphic up on the board here, and I would
13 certainly like a copy of that because I would like
14 to know what it is they intend to do. We
15 obviously didn't have time to take that all down.
16 And I would ask The Court to direct them to
17 provide us with a copy of that.

18 MR. BEMIS: We're going to file a copy as
19 part of the court reporter transcript so anyone
20 reviewing it knows what was shown to The Court.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

22 MR. SCAROLA: The bottom line is, I don't
23 think that they have met the burden that they
24 ought to be obliged to meet in order to procure a
25 three-month continuance of the trial that they are

1 asking for.

2 Now, the other argument that they make is the
3 supposed inability of Kellogg Huber to participate
4 in this case, but, remember, that they have
5 repeatedly asserted to Your Honor that the reason
6 why Kellogg Huber was retained was in order to
7 cross examine Arthur Andersen witnesses at trial.

8 So the unavailability of Kellogg Huber,
9 particularly when very able co-counsel without a
10 conflict of interest has been involved in this
11 case from the very beginning and is certainly
12 capable of cross examining Arthur Andersen
13 witnesses if in fact some disability exists on the
14 part of the Kirkland firm, that just ought not to
15 play a role in Your Honor's decision as well.

16 This discovery can be completed in the three
17 months that remain. With the resources available
18 on both sides of this case, the discovery can be
19 completed if Your Honor tells us that it needs to
20 be completed. We certainly are prepared to do it.
21 We're prepared to devote whatever attorney
22 manpower is necessary, whatever attorney-person
23 power is necessary to get that job done. And they
24 ought to be obliged to do that as well.

1 to agree to a brief continuance, a delay of 30
2 days to give them an additional month to get the
3 job done if that's going to be of some help, but
4 we ought not to be pushed back into an April trial
5 date. One of the concerns that we have is there's
6 a different composition of the venire that exists
7 in April than exists in January and February in
8 this community. That is a concern of ours.

9 THE COURT: I appreciate your candor.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Well, I'm telling Your Honor
11 exactly what the truth is in that regard. That's
12 a factor we have taken into consideration in terms
13 of setting up this schedule. It's something that
14 we need to anticipate on behalf of our client, and 15 it's an important factor to us. We're not
16 opposing a continuance for arbitrary or capricious
17 reasons. This is an important case. Both sides
18 deserve ample time in which to get it prepared,
19 but we have been given ample time in which to get
20 it prepared.

21 THE COURT: I need you to address the

22 contempt because I do think --

23 MR. SCAROLA: As far as the contempt is
24 concerned, my position remains the same. If they
25 are willing to abbreviate the proceedings

93

1 necessary to enable us to get the discovery to
2 which we are entitled, we are prepared to go
3 forward with the contempt hearing at the very
4 earliest date that Your Honor chooses to give us
5 in light of whatever burden they are willing to
6 accept, but we ought not to be obliged to proceed
7 with the final hearing on the contempt without
8 getting at least the very basic discovery that we
9 have requested at this point. We're willing to
10 submit those issues to The Court on the basis of
11 the written pleadings that we have given you.
12 Obviously, they've resisted that for whatever
13 reason, but that ought not to interfere with our
14 ability to get our trial date.

15 Let me make sure that my co-counsel doesn't
16 wish me to add anything to that or have anything
17 else to say.

18 Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there is one more
21 comment that I might make. They put up a whole
22 lot of names on that board, and, obviously, there
23 are some people whose names on that list we
24 recognize and acknowledge to be significant
25 witnesses. Mr. Perelman, for example, we wouldn't

94

1 argue that that's testimony that they'll obviously
2 want to have in advance of trial. But without any
3 showing whatsoever with regard to the significance
4 of the other names, it would clearly be improper,
5 I suggest, to grant a continuance of this case on
6 the basis of inability to depose people the
7 significance of whom has never been demonstrated
8 to this Court.

9 THE COURT: What did you want to respond?

10 MR. BEMIS: I'm a little bit surprised by the
11 venire argument since we started with a venire in
12 August. We suggested a venire in October. Now
13 January is appropriate, and now April is
14 inappropriate. I don't think that's an
15 appropriate decision point on the case.

16 With regard to -- if they want to move this
17 proceeding along and abbreviate the schedule, I'm
18 shocked that they won't agree with a special
19 master so that we can move the process forward
20 before a special master, which we think not only
21 is more expeditious, but we think it has some side
22 benefits of having a neutral party who is not a
23 decision-maker have to review these matters. And
24 there is precedent for that. We cited it in our
25 papers. I won't repeat it here.

95

1 The argument, you know, fundamentally is,
2 we've got a thousand lawyers, we haven't acted
3 promptly. I reject that argument. We cannot walk
4 down the hall, grab people out and say, take seven
5 boxes of documents, very complex financial
6 documents, very complex merger transactions and
7 run out and take a deposition for two days. It
8 does not work that way.

9 We are -- we have been from the outset, we in
10 the sense of Kirkland & Ellis, my client, me
11 probably more so because I got into the case so
12 late, we have been, I have been, other people have

13 been catching up, if you will, from the five years
14 that these gentlemen have been prosecuting two
15 lawsuits. They already did two of these. The
16 fact that we got hundreds of thousands of
17 documents in September doesn't mean we knew what
18 was in the documents, that we understood the
19 documents, that we've collated them. We got, I
20 believe it was 400 deposition transcripts in that
21 time period. I still haven't read all the 400,
22 and I'm not sure I'll ever get through all of them
23 before we get to trial.

24 We have been working at a breakneck pace, as 25 the calendars show. The facts speak for it. If

96

1 you disagree with me on that, you will. The fact
2 is we have, not 30 days left as Mr. Scarola
3 suggests, we've got 11 days left in August that
4 are open to do something. We can't get done.

5 The depositions that I put up there are
6 depositions they wrote us that they wanted to
7 take, that we have notified them that we want to
8 take. They have been identified in various
9 documents as key players. That's what's there.

10 Now, will every one of them get deposed? The
11 chances are there will be some that will drop out
12 for a host of reasons, whether it be illness.
13 We've got a key witness who has had cancer. We've
14 got a witness who's a director who's in the 15 hospital. It may be that we never get some of 16 those people in the end result. The fact is, if
17 you just look at what's already scheduled, there's 18 16 business days of pending material that we've
19 requested that we don't have. And this week alone
20 I think we had, I think it was four days
21 originally, or next week we have like four days of
22 depositions scheduled, and stuff is just moving
23 day by day with cancellation. We just need some 24 breathing space, and we need at the same time to 25 get the contempt done.

97

1 We don't want a stay of discovery. All we
2 want is to give us a moving date so that we can
3 complete the fact discovery while simultaneously
4 Your Honor deciding what is a fair date to set
5 this for a hearing. All of the discovery has been
6 answered at this point. Now, you entered your

7 order. We understand that, and we've got these
8 motions to compel. It's not like this is starting
9 from scratch. They filed that motion on March
10 12th with no evidence. It was improperly filed.
11 They should have filed it with proper evidence.
12 They had their time. We responded. Yes, we've
13 got disagreement. We don't have any agreement
14 with what they responded to us either. But we're
15 the ones being charged. We're entitled to a
16 hearing, and we respectfully request you do it as
17 promptly as you can in whatever procedure you
18 think is appropriate. Give us a date to work
19 against, and we'll be here with bells on to try
20 this case.

21 THE COURT: Let's talk about a couple things
22 in the time we have left. First of all, I would
23 agree this case is not going to be ready for trial
24 in January. I do think it could be ready in 25 March. I don't -- my JA is out today, and at the

98

1 case management conference if you come with your
2 schedules for March and also check your schedules
3 for the dates. On the things we have leading up

4 to the trial, we're probably going to want to
5 reset some of those so we can get those set at the
6 next case management conference. For instance, I
7 want to check on spring vacation. I don't want to
8 set it now and then discover we all have problems.
9 If we know March is what we're looking at -- we
10 still think it's 15 days?

11 MR. BEMIS: Based on a four-day trial
12 schedule, I still think that's probably correct.
13 I think you said you work four days a week?

14 THE COURT: Fifteen days is what I asked.

15 MR. BEMIS: Fifteen trial days, excuse me.
16 But you're still doing a four day a week trial?

17 THE COURT: Yes.

18 MR. BEMIS: We're looking at 15 days spread
19 over four weeks?

20 THE COURT: Four weeks, right. I'm still
21 concerned about the motion for contempt just
22 because I don't think we can arbitrarily set a
23 time for it to be heard now unless everybody
24 agrees because I just see these discovery issues
25 are going to take a while. I'm afraid if I set

1 aside a day, say, in September or October, we're
2 going to get to that day, and the discovery
3 disputes aren't going to be resolved by then.

4 MR. BEMIS: If you give us a date in
5 September, you can change it.

6 THE COURT: I can but then I have a day open
7 in my book.

8 MR. BEMIS: We're going to be here before
9 that date in September, but give us a date to work
10 against.

11 THE COURT: I understand that. I need a
12 better sense of how long that's all going to take.
13 Quite honestly, to the extent I have to do
14 in-camera inspections, I have to try to fit those
15 in the same way I'm trying to fit in the order on 16 the conflict of laws. I just can't commit now to 17 a date and say six weeks and know we're going to
18 have all those disputes done by then.

19 MR. BEMIS: Then can we have a special
20 master?

21 THE COURT: Only if they agree to bear the
22 cost and they told me they won't, which I can't
23 make them.

24 MR. BEMIS: You're right.

25 THE COURT: I understand this is something

1 that everybody wants done.

2 MR. SCAROLA: What I will represent to The
3 Court, Your Honor, is that we'll carefully
4 consider the special master issue. We'll see if
5 there is someone available who we feel comfortable
6 with and whether the cost issues involved can be
7 appropriately agreed to.

8 THE COURT: It only makes sense if it's
9 somebody you're both going to be comfortable with;
10 otherwise, you'll just file the objections anyway
11 and come back.

12 MR. BEMIS: I don't see how the cost issues
13 can be paramount in this case.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We won't write that off
15 entirely. We have serious reservations about it.
16 We're not prepared to agree to it at this time,
17 but we'll certainly give it further careful
18 consideration.

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, thank you very much.

20 THE COURT: You all have a wonderful weekend.

21 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. You do the same.

22 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

23 MR. BEMIS: Thank you.

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION FOR ENLARGEMENT OF TIME TO COMPLY
WITH THIS COURT'S JULY 12, ORDER

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned counsel, moves this Court to enlarge the time for Morgan Stanley to comply with the Court's July 12, 2004 Order that require an in camera submission of privilege material. In support of its motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. On July 12, 2004, this Court entered an Order requiring Morgan Stanley to supplement and provide answers to certain Interrogatories relating to Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt. Specifically, the July 12, 2004 Order required Morgan Stanley to provide certain amended responses directly to the Court in a sealed envelope within twenty (20) days. The deadline for in camera submission is August 2, 2004.

2. In its Order, the Court recognized the potential for appellate review concerning waiver of certain privileges. Any review of the July 12, 2004 Order would be via Petition for Certiorari which is not required to be filed and served until August 11, 2004.

3. Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court extend the deadline for providing the amended responses for in camera review until August 20, 2004 for the following reasons:

- a) On July 26, 2004, counsel for Plaintiff refused to agree to a Special Master to issue a report and recommendation concerning privilege issues. As the Court stated on July 23, 2004, the Court would not be able to rule on these issues quickly; therefore, there would be no prejudice if this short extension was granted.
- b) The deadline for seeking appellate review of the July 12, 2004 Order is August 11, 2004. Due to the other issues pending in this action, Morgan Stanley requires additional time to analyze whether to seek appellate review of the July 12, 2004 Order. If appellate review is sought, it would be unnecessary for the Court to conduct an in camera inspection until the appellate review is completed. At the very least, the deadline should be extended until after the deadline for filing a Petition for Certiorari.
- c) The next Case Management Conference in this matter is scheduled for August 13, 2004. It is anticipated that additional issues concerning the Motion for Contempt and related discovery be raised at that conference. Morgan Stanley believes that the Court's rulings at the Case Management Conference on August 13, 2004 will have a direct impact on the application of the Court's July 12, 2004 Order.

Therefore, compliance with the July 12, 2004 Order should be delayed until after the August 13, 2004 Case Management Conference.

4. Morgan Stanley will provide amended responses to the Interrogatories as required by the July 12, 2004 Order for any non-privileged information that was not required to be submitted to the Court for in camera inspection.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court enlarge the time for Morgan Stanley to comply with the Court's July 12, 2004 Order until August 20, 2004 together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

WACHOVIA BANK, N.A.'S
MOTION TO QUASH SUBPOENA OR,
IN THE ALTERNATIVE, MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

Non-party Wachovia Bank, N.A. ("Wachovia"), pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.410(c), moves to quash the subpoena served upon Wachovia by Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc., issued on July 12, 2004, or, in the alternative, pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(c), moves for entry of a protective order, and in support states:

1. On or about August 4, 2003, Wachovia was served by CPH with a Notice of Deposition for August 15, 2003, together with a Subpoena Duces Tecum directed to the Custodian of Records of Wachovia bank (the “First Subpoena”).

2. The First Subpoena requested 58 categories of documents for the period January 1, 1996 through the date of trial in this matter. The First Subpoena further requested documents from two arbitrations, nine other lawsuits and two separate SEC Administrative Proceedings.

3. After an extensive review of over 20,000 pages of documents, Wachovia produced 7 banker boxes of documents responsive to the First Subpoena.

4. On or about July 12, 2004, CPH and MAFCO issued a second subpoena duces tecum for the deposition of Wachovia’s Custodian of Records (the “Second Subpoena”) attached as exhibit A.

5. Attachment A to the Second Subpoena requests 13 categories of documents for the period January 1, 2001 “through the date of trial” of this matter. See instructions paragraph 3, page 4. Further, the Second Subpoena seeks documents regarding four distinct Morgan Stanley entities. See definitions paragraph 6, page 4.

6. On its face, the Second Subpoena is patently overbroad, unduly burdensome, vague, ambiguous, requests commercially sensitive, privileged and/or confidential documents. Indeed, the instruction seeking documents from January 1, 2001 “through the date of trial” of this matter appears to be an attempt to make the subpoena a continuing request. Surely, if the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure do not require a party to supplement its discovery responses, a non-party cannot be expected to do so.

7. Further, in preparing this Motion, Wachovia has reviewed the Court file for the instant case to determine the relevant issues. During the course of this review, Wachovia has learned that at least some of the documents sought from Wachovia are publicly available in as much as the Coleman/Andersen settlement is attached to an order in the court file dated December 4, 2003. Accordingly, it would seem at least certain items listed in the Second Subpoena are unnecessary as the documents are publicly available to CPH and MAFCO.

8. Accordingly, Wachovia has written CPH and MAFCO's counsel to inform them of Wachovia's position and to request a narrowing of the documents sought by the Second Subpoena.

9. Due to the breadth of the Second Subpoena, some of the documents responsive to the Second Subpoena have previously been produced in response to the First Subpoena.

10. Moreover, certain documents requested may concern a depositor or borrower other than CPH and MAFCO. Pursuant to Florida Statute 655.059, the books and records of a financial institution are confidential and are only available for inspection and examination as proscribed by Florida Statute 655.059(2)(b).

11. Further, there may be confidentiality provisions in Wachovia's agreements with its borrower/depositors that preclude Wachovia from disclosing the information requested to third parties without the borrower/depositor's consent and/or prior court order.

12. Wachovia is unaware of any "agreement" by the borrower/depositor or court order requiring the release of the information requested in the Second Subpoena.

13. For these reasons, the Second Subpoena should be quashed. Alternatively, and at a minimum, a protective order is warranted to reduce the scope of the Second Subpoena, to ensure the confidentiality of Wachovia's books and records is maintained, to allow sufficient time for the preparation of a privilege log and confidentiality agreement, and to allow Wachovia sufficient time to review its records prior to producing any responsive documents.¹

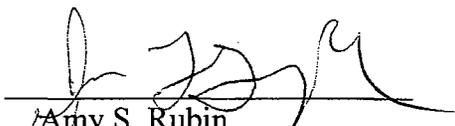

14. If required to produce documents in response to the Second Subpoena, Wachovia requests it be compensated in accordance with Florida Statute 655.059(1)(e), effective July 1, 2004, and Florida Statute 92.153. Wachovia requests the Court to establish the appropriate rate of compensation for Wachovia's search, retrieval, copying and preparation of documents in response to the Second Subpoena.

WHEREFORE, Wachovia Bank, N.A., respectfully requests entry of an order quashing the Second Subpoena or, in the alternative, entry of a protective order and for such other and further relief the Court deems just and proper.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AND
MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.'S
MOTION FOR ENTRY OF ORDER CONCERNING
SUPPLEMENTATION OF INTERROGATORY RESPONSES

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), by their attorneys, hereby request that this Court enter an Order concerning the supplementation of interrogatory responses in the form set forth in Exhibit A. In support of this motion, CPH and MAFCO state as follows:

1. Throughout the course of discovery in this case, the parties have served interrogatory answers that might have become out of date with the passage of time. Given that fact and that the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure do not provide that discovery responses need to be supplemented, CPH and MAFCO respectfully request that this Court enter an Order providing for supplementation of interrogatory responses.

2. The parties already have agreed in principle that supplementation should occur. Indeed, the parties have exchanged drafts of a stipulation providing for the supplementation of interrogatory responses, and the parties have agreed to much of the language in that stipulation. There is, however, one important point about which the parties disagree. CPH and MAFCO want to ensure that the parties' responses are "complete and accurate," but Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively, "Morgan Stanley") object to the inclusion of such language. The parties' competing versions of the disputed stipulation provision are as follows:

CPH's and MAFCO's version: "All parties shall supplement and update their Interrogatory responses to the extent necessary to render all responses complete and accurate as of the time of the update, thirty days prior to the close of fact discovery.

Morgan Stanley's version: "All parties shall supplement and update their Interrogatory responses in compliance with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, to the extent necessary, on or before thirty days prior to the close of fact discovery.

3. We have asked Morgan Stanley what it finds objectionable about the "complete and accurate" standard. We also have asked whether Morgan Stanley believes that its proposed language — "in compliance with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure" — means that interrogatory answers do not have to be "complete and accurate." But Morgan Stanley demurs, repeating only that it will provide interrogatory answers that comply with Florida's rules. If Morgan Stanley believes that Florida's rules require something other than "complete and accurate" answers, we have a very significant disagreement about the parties' discovery obligations, and since the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure do not require any supplementation, language requiring updates "in compliance with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure" creates an ambiguity.

4. CPH's and MAFCO's version of the disputed provision is straightforward and in accordance with this Court's views about the information that interrogatories should contain. Specifically, at the July 23 hearing, this Court expressly stated that "we need interrogatory answer: that are complete and truthful." See Ex. B, 7/23/04 Tr. 9:19-20. Morgan Stanley's refusal to agree with the uncontroversial proposition that the supplemental interrogatory responses must be "complete and accurate" causes us concern and leads us to seek relief from the Court.

5. The Court should require both sides to provide complete and accurate supplements to their interrogatory responses 30 days before the close of fact discovery.

For the foregoing reasons, CPH and MAFCO request that this Court enter the Order concerning supplementation of interrogatories that is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

Date: July 30, 2004

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO DISMISS OR STRIKE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR CONTEMPT

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively, "Morgan Stanley"), move to dismiss or strike the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt as legally insufficient. This motion presents a single issue: Whether Morgan Stanley can be found in contempt of court for disclosing to its counsel a document that was a matter of public record at the time of disclosure and remains so today. The answer is no, and the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt should be dismissed now as legally insufficient. In support of this motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows.

Statement of Undisputed Facts

1. On March 12, 2004, the plaintiff filed its Motion for an Order for a Rule to Show Cause Against Morgan Stanley. On May 14, 2004, the Court entered an Order (“May 14 Order”) converting the motion to a Motion for Contempt. At this time, the motion has not been set for an evidentiary hearing.

2. The gravamen of the Motion for Contempt is that Morgan Stanley violated the terms of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, dated July 31, 2003, by improperly disclosing the Arthur Andersen Settlement Agreement to Morgan Stanley’s counsel Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C., and thereafter using the Settlement Agreement in “other litigation.”

3. On October 29, 2003, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion to Compel Plaintiff to Produce Settlement Agreement with Arthur Anderson. The Motion was heard on November 25, 2003.

4. On December 4, 2003, the Court ordered production of the Settlement Agreement (Exhibit 1), with certain provisions redacted. The Court also ordered the Clerk to file under seal the unredacted Settlement Agreement.

5. On December 8, 2003, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the redacted Settlement Agreement. Morgan Stanley did not receive and does not possess a copy of the unredacted Settlement Agreement.

6. On December 18, 2003, the Clerk docketed the Court’s December 4 Order. Pursuant to the Court’s Order, the Clerk filed under seal the unredacted copy of the Andersen Settlement Agreement. In addition, and pursuant to the December 4 order, the Clerk filed — not under seal — a redacted copy of the Settlement Agreement. The redacted copy of the Settlement Agreement in the court file discloses all of the terms of the settlement between the plaintiff and

Arthur Anderson, including the provisions that are at issue in the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt.

7. On March 1, 2004, three Morgan Stanley entities (Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc., and Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated) filed a civil action against Arthur Anderson. This action is pending before Judge Karen Miller.

8. On March 12, 2004, the plaintiff filed what the Court has renominated a Motion for Contempt. See May 14 Order at 3. The motion, which is predicated entirely upon a violation of the Confidentiality Order and the Court's December 4 Order, makes two allegations. First, that Morgan Stanley violated the Stipulated Confidentiality Order by disclosing to third parties, including attorneys from Kellogg Huber, on or about February 26, 2004, the Settlement Agreement that was a matter of public record as of December 18, 2003. And second, that Morgan Stanley then (after February 26, 2004) "used" the Settlement Agreement in other litigation — the action against Arthur Andersen filed before Judge Miller — by including as a plaintiff in that action Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated for the sole purpose of triggering the indemnity provision of the Settlement Agreement.

9. At the July 23, 2004 Case Management Conference, the plaintiff made an ore tenus motion to seal the redacted version of the Andersen Settlement Agreement. The Court stated that the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement was not filed under seal, and as a result, was and is a part of the public record in these consolidated actions. The Court further stated that "the only thing that was supposed to be filed under seal was the complete copy of the settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A [Exhibit 1] to the [December 4, 2003] order. Exhibit A was the redacted copy where the only thing I redacted I think was the account information [of Ronald Perelman]." Transcript of July 23, 2004, Hearing at 62:5-10.

10. On July 26, 2004, the Court entered a written order “that Plaintiff’s ore tenus Motion to Direct Clerk to Seal Exhibit to the Court’s Order on Defendant’s Motion to Compel Production of Settlement Agreement entered December 4, 2003 is Denied.”

Argument

The plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt is the legal equivalent of a complaint. The plaintiff makes specific allegations of fact unrelated to these consolidated actions, which facts the plaintiff claims entitle it to both equitable and legal relief. See Motion for Contempt at 10. Morgan Stanley has denied the plaintiff’s allegations.¹ Morgan Stanley brings this motion because the undisputed facts alleged in the Motion for Contempt and those of record establish that the plaintiff’s motion is legally deficient. In short, the Motion for Contempt does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted under the legal standards applicable to civil contempt proceedings in Florida. See In re S.L.T., 180 So. 2d 374, 379 (Fla. 2d DCA 1965) (holding “[d]ue process of law requires that the party accused be advised of the charge and accorded opportunity to defend himself); Merrill Lynch Trust Co. v. Alzheimer's Lifeliners Ass'n, Inc., 832 So. 2d 948, 954 (Fla. 2d DCA 2002) (holding “[a]n essential finding to support contempt is the party's intent to violate the court order at issue,” citing Power Line Components, Inc. v. Mil-Spec Components, Inc., 720 So 2d 546, 548 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998); see also Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.140(b)(6). Accordingly, Morgan Stanley respectfully submits that the Motion for Contempt should either be dismissed or stricken.

¹ Morgan Stanley denies that it violated the Stipulated Confidentiality Order. For purposes of this Motion only, however, Morgan Stanley treats the allegations of plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt as true in the same manner as the Court would treat allegations of a complaint for purposes of deciding a Motion to Dismiss.

A. The Settlement Agreement Is Not Confidential Pursuant To The Terms Of The Stipulated Confidentiality Order Because It Is Publicly Available.

Pursuant to this Court's Order of December 4, 2003, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the redacted Settlement Agreement on December 8, 2003. The Court's December 4, 2003 Order ordered the redacted Settlement Agreement (Exhibit 1) "deemed 'Confidential'" and subject to the terms of the parties Stipulated Confidentiality Order entered July 31, 2003. Paragraph 2 of the Confidentiality Order provides that its terms do not apply to any document "generally available to the public."

This Order shall not apply to any document, testimony or other information that . . . (b) becomes generally available to the public other than as a result of disclosure in violation of this Order or in breach of any other legal obligation, or (c) becomes available to a party other than through voluntary or required production from a person or party who obtained the document, testimony or other information without any confidentiality restriction. (emphasis added)

As set forth above, the redacted Settlement Agreement has been included in the court file and publicly available since December 18, 2003. Pursuant to the express terms of the Confidentiality Order, the redacted Settlement Agreement is not "Confidential" and has not been Confidential since it was placed in the public records of this Court on December 18, 2003.

The plaintiff's first "claim" in its Motion for Contempt is that Morgan Stanley gave the Settlement Agreement to individuals not entitled to receive Confidential information. See Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶ 9(c). The plaintiff alleges that Morgan Stanley's attorneys in the Andersen action were not entitled to receive a copy of the Settlement Agreement because they were not attorneys "of record" in these consolidated actions. See Motion for Contempt at 4. Even assuming that the plaintiff is correct, which Morgan Stanley denies, the Motion for Contempt is legally insufficient because the Settlement Agreement has been a public record since December 18, 2003. Therefore, any dissemination of the "public" document cannot, as a matter of law, constitute a violation of the Confidentiality Order or the Court's December 4 Order.

The plaintiff's second "claim" is that Morgan Stanley allegedly used the Settlement Agreement for a purpose not authorized by the Confidentiality Order. This claim is also legally and factually insufficient. To find such a violation, this Court must necessarily find that the Settlement Agreement is protected by the Confidentiality Order. This claim fails as a matter of law because the Settlement Agreement is contained in the court file, which is available to anyone willing to go to the Clerk's office and ask to see the court file. The express terms of the Confidentiality Order exclude any document that is either publicly available or becomes available to any party other than through a violation of the Confidentiality Order. The Settlement Agreement is both publicly available and became available to any party once it was openly filed in the court file of this action. Because the Settlement Agreement is publicly available, whatever use was made of the document cannot constitute a violation of the Confidentiality Order. The plaintiff's real complaint is that the Andersen action is a sham pleading. That claim should be addressed in Judge Miller's courtroom pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.150. See, e.g., Pacheco v. Wasserman, 701 So. 2d 104, 106 (Fla. 3^d DCA 1997) (holding "[t]o strike a pleading as a sham, a party must so move before trial, and the trial court must conduct an evidentiary hearing") (emphasis added).²

In sum, the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt is based entirely on alleged violations of the Confidentiality Order. In turn, these alleged violations depend entirely on the fact that the

² On July 23, 2004, Judge Miller entered an order in the Andersen action Granting the Defendants' Motion for a More Definite Statement." Andersen has not, however, according to the court record, made any claim that the action is a sham pleading under rule 1.150.

Settlement Agreement is a confidential document in accordance with the terms of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order. The facts are undisputed that as of December 18, 2003, the redacted Settlement Agreement was not a Confidential document. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley could not, as a matter of law, violate the December 4 Order by giving a copy of the Settlement Agreement to its counsel on February 26, 2004, even if they were not counsel in “this action.” Moreover, there can be no misuse of the Settlement Agreement under these circumstances that amount to contempt in this courtroom. At most, Andersen — not the plaintiff here — can proceed in Judge Miller’s courtroom pursuant to rule 1.150, which it has not elected to do at this time.

B. As A Matter Of Florida Law The Alleged Confidentiality Of A Commercial Settlement Agreement Does Not Trump The Presumption Of Public Access To Court Records.

The Court’s orders of December 4, 2003 and July 26, 2004, are in accord with the law and public policy of Florida. Florida public policy and the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration establish a presumption that “[t]he public shall have access to all records of the judicial branch of government.” Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(a); see Goldberg v. Johnson, 485 So. 2d 1386, 1388 (Fla. 4th DCA 1986) (noting “the public and press have a right to know what goes on in a courtroom”); see also Smithwick v. Television 12 of Jacksonville, Inc., 730 So. 2d 795, 799 (Fla. 1st DCA 1999) (noting strong public policy in favor of open government overcame potential injury that disclosure of court record may cause to third party). These records are explicitly defined to include “the contents of the court file.” Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(b)(1)(A).

According to the Florida Rules and case law, there are a very narrow set of circumstances which can overcome the presumption supporting public access and the decision of a court to seal records or proceedings “should be exercised cautiously and only for the most cogent reasons.” Goldberg, 485 So. 2d at 1388. These exceptions are codified at rule 2.051(c)(9). See Gombert v.

Gombert, 727 So. 2d 355, 357 (Fla. 1st DCA 1999) (finding that rule 2.051 incorporates judicial decisions concerning when confidentiality concerns may support sealing a record). A commercial settlement agreement between two private parties does not meet the demanding criteria necessary in order to overcome the strong presumption in favor of public access to court records.

The Settlement Agreement — which is merely a contract between two parties — does not meet any of the established criteria for sealing what would otherwise be public records. Certainly the Settlement Agreement does not need to be sealed to protect the “orderly administration of justice,” a “compelling government interest,” or constitutional or statutory public policy. See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(i, iii & vii). Nor will the revelation of the Settlement Agreement result in “substantial injury” to an innocent third party or party. See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(v & vi). Finally, the Settlement Agreement does not contain a trade secret and need not be kept under seal in order to “obtain evidence to determine legal issues in a case.” See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(ii & iv).

The only argument that CPH has advanced in support of the confidential treatment of the Settlement Agreement is the fact that the Settlement Agreement itself contractually obligates the parties to the Agreement to keep the terms confidential. This sort of contract is not sufficient to thwart public access to court records. Goldberg, 485 So. 2d at 1389 (“[A] litigant’s preference that the public not be apprised of the details of his litigation is not grounds for closure.”).

C. The Settlement Agreement Is Not “Confidential.”

Even if the Settlement Agreement is somehow still “deemed Confidential” notwithstanding its filing the court files, the Settlement Agreement does not qualify as “Confidential” information under the Confidentiality Order. The Confidentiality Order affords Confidential treatment only to “proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel [sic] information of a current nature.” July 31, 2003 Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶ 4 (emphasis added). The Settlement Agreement does not fit within any of these categories. CPH cannot, therefore, sustain its burden to establish the confidential nature of the Settlement Agreement. Id. at ¶ 15 (placing the burden upon the party making the “Confidential” designation).

First, the Settlement Agreement is not “proprietary or confidential trade secrets.” See Fla. Stat. § 812.081(1)(c) (Trade secrets are information “for use . . . in the operation of a business and which provides the business an advantage, or an opportunity to obtain an advantage, over those who do not know or use it.”); see also Fla. Stat. § 364.183 (defining “proprietary confidential business information” to include, inter alia, trade secrets and other information that would affect the competitive position of the business); Fla. Stat. § 688.002 (defining a trade secret as “information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process that [d]erives independent economic value . . . from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by . . . , other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use”). The information contained in a 2002 commercial settlement agreement between a shell corporation that does not operate a business and an accounting firm resolving a dispute arising from a 1998 transaction is not for use “in the operation of business” and does not provide a business advantage over competitors. See American Express Travel Related Servs., Inc. v. Cruz, 761 So. 2d 1206 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000) (reviewing process for assertion of trade secret privilege and noting burden of establishing trade secret rests on party asserting it); Crocker Constr. Co. v. Hornsby, 562 So. 2d 842 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (denying writ of certiorari for review of court order requiring production of financial information).

Second, the Settlement Agreement is not “technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature.” There is no “technical” or “personnel” information contained in the Agreement. Nor is there any business or financial information of a current nature.

Finally, settlement agreements and indemnity provisions are widely recognized as discoverable information that is not subject to special protection. See City of Homestead v. Rogers, 789 So. 2d 483 (Fla. 3^d DCA 2001) (ordering production of settlement agreement over objection based upon confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); Scott v. Nelson, 697 So. 2d 1300 (Fla. 1st DCA 1997) (ordering deposition of party to settlement agreement despite confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); Fla. Stat. § 44.102(3) (providing that privilege for communications that occur during mediation do not apply to an executed settlement agreement); Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(2) (providing specifically that indemnity agreements are within the proper scope of discovery).

Conclusion

The plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt is legally deficient and fatally so. Nothing can save it. Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court enter an order dismissing or striking the Motion for Contempt and enter such other and further orders as are necessary and proper. Morgan Stanley further requests that the Court reserve jurisdiction to award Morgan Stanley its attorney fees and costs as a result of having to defend the Motion for Contempt.

Dear Jack:

Enclosed please find Morgan Stanley's Motion to Remove Confidentiality Designations. Based on the Court's rulings and statements at the July 23, 2004 Case Management Conference, we believe that there should be no objection to the Motion and that hopefully we can submit an Agreed Order so that a hearing on the Motion is not necessary.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED AND MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.'S MOTION TO REMOVE CONFIDENTIALITY DESIGNATIONS

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively, "Morgan Stanley") respectfully request that the Court enter an order removing the confidentiality designation from the documents set forth below that the plaintiff filed with the Court, and direct the Clerk of Court to unseal the filings of those documents. In support of this motion Morgan Stanley states as follows.

1. At the July 23, 2004 Case Management Conference, the plaintiff made an ore tenus motion to seal the redacted version of the Arthur Andersen Settlement Agreement, which is Exhibit A to the Court's December 4, 2003 order compelling production of the Settlement Agreement.

2. The Court stated that the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement was not filed under seal, and as a result, was and is a part of the public record in these consolidated actions. The Court further stated that “the only thing that was supposed to be filed under seal was the complete copy of the settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A to the [December 4, 2003] order. Exhibit A was the redacted copy where the only thing I redacted I think was the account information [of Ronald Perelman].” (July 23, 2004 Hrg. at 62:5-10.)

3. On July 26, 2004, the Court entered a written order “that Plaintiff’s ore tenus Motion to Direct Clerk to Seal Exhibit to the Court’s Order on Defendant’s Motion to Compel Production of Settlement Agreement entered December 4, 2003 is Denied.”

4. The plaintiff filed the following documents with the Court under seal.
- (a) CPH’s March 12, 2004 Motion for a Rule to Show Cause
 - (b) CPH’s April, 23, 2004 Motion for Removal of Confidentiality Designations
 - (c) CPH’s April 23, 2004 Reply in Support of Motion for a Rule to Show Cause
 - (d) CPH’s May 5, 2004 Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen LLP Access to Confidential Transcript
 - (e) CPH’s May 20, 2004 Notice of Compliance with Order of May 17, 2004
 - (f) CPH’s May 27, 2004 Letter to Judge Maass enclosing transcript of April 30, 2004 hearing
 - (g) CPH’s May 28, 2004 Further Interrogatories Concerning Its Motion for Contempt
 - (h) CPH’s June 9, 2004 Response in Opposition to Motion for Protective Order
 - (i) CPH’s June 25, 2004 Motion to Compel Responses to Interrogatories
 - (j) CPH’s June 30, 2004 Answers to Morgan Stanley & Co.’s Interrogatories Concerning CPH’s Motion for Contempt
 - (k) CPH’s July 14, 2004 Response to Morgan Stanley & Co.’s Further Request for Production of Documents Concerning CPH’s Motion for Contempt

- (l) CPH's July 14, 2004 Answer to Morgan Stanley & Co.'s Further Interrogatory Concerning CPH's Motion for Contempt
- (m) CPH's July 15, 2004 Motion to Redact Certain References to Andersen Settlement Agreement Terms from July 12, 2004 Order
- (n) CPH and MAFCO's July 15, 2004 Motion to Compel Answers to Interrogatories and Requests for Production
- (o) CPH and MAFCO's July 15, 2004 Motion to Remove Confidentiality Designations

5. The confidentiality designations of each of these documents flows either directly or indirectly from CPH's mistaken belief that the redacted version of the Andersen Settlement Agreement was filed under seal and thus was confidential. Indeed, the Court made clear that it did not "see any reason why [the redacted Settlement Agreement] shouldn't be public." Supra, ¶ 2.

6. The Court's finding is entirely consistent with Florida law. See City of Homestead v. Rogers, 789 So. 2d 483 (Fla. 3d DCA 2001) (ordering production of settlement agreement over objection based upon confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); Scott v. Nelson, 697 So. 2d 1300 (Fla. 1st. DCA 1997) (ordering deposition of party to settlement agreement despite confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); FLA. STAT. § 44.102(3) (2003) (providing that privilege for communications that occur during mediation do not apply to an executed settlement agreement); Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(2) (providing specifically that indemnity agreements are within the proper scope of discovery).

7. As further support for this Motion, Morgan Stanley submits that none of the above documents are protected by the parties' Stipulated Confidentiality Order. First, the Stipulated Confidentiality Order only protects information that "constitute[s], contain[s], reveal[s] or reflect[s] proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel [sic] information of a current nature." (July 31, 2003 Stipulated Confidentiality Order

¶ 4.) And second, the Stipulated Confidentiality Order excludes any document that becomes publicly available by means other than a violation of the Order. (Id. ¶ 2.) None of the documents (or their contents) qualify as "confidential" pursuant to the parties' Stipulated Confidentiality Order.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court remove the confidentiality designation from the above documents and direct the Clerk of Court to unseal the filings of those documents together with such other and further relief as is just and proper.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AND MACANDREWS
& FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.'S MOTION TO RESET DATE
FOR FILING MOTIONS TO AMEND PLEADINGS

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), by their attorneys, respectfully request this Court to reset the deadline for filing motions to amend pleadings to August 20, 2004. In support of this motion, CPH and MAFCO state as follows:

1. Under the current pretrial schedule set by this Court, motions to amend the pleadings are due to be filed or before August 6, 2004. At the July 23 case management conference, this Court indicated its intention to extend the relevant pretrial dates, and stated that it would address the new schedule further at the August 13, 2004 case management conference.

2. After the July 23 case management conference, CPH and MAFCO wrote Morgan Stanley stating CPH's and MAFCO's belief that the August 6 deadline for motions to amend pleadings remained unchanged, and asking whether Morgan Stanley had a different view. On Monday, August 2, 2004, Morgan Stanley responded in a letter stating that it disagreed with CPH's and MAFCO's position, but refusing to elaborate further.

3. In light of this Court's intention to extend the pretrial and trial dates, and in light of Morgan Stanley's apparent belief that the August 6 deadline for filing motions to amend pleadings is among the dates to be reset, CPH and MAFCO respectfully request that this Court reset the deadline for filing motions to amend the pleadings to August 20, 2004.

Dated August 4, 2004

Respectfully submitted,

JOINT SUBMISSION OF THE PARTIES FOR
AUGUST 13, 2004 CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE

Pursuant to the Court's Order of February 24, 2004, the parties in the above-referenced action hereby submit the following Joint Submission in advance of the August 13, 2004 Case Management Conference.

I. Agreed-Upon Statement Of Background And Procedural History

The following is the parties' agreed-upon summary of the two companion cases now pending before this Court, which have been consolidated for trial.

(Case No. 03 CA-005045 AI)

Background. This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH")

sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. (“Coleman”) to Sunbeam Corporation (“Sunbeam”). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (“Morgan Stanley”) served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

CPH’s Complaint alleges claims arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy. CPH’s Complaint has sought damages of at least $485 million and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. Morgan Stanley denies the material allegations in CPH’s Complaint and also denies CPH’s entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. CPH filed its Complaint on May 8, 2003 (the “CPH Action”). Morgan Stanley filed its Answer on June 23, 2003 and, on June 25, 2003 filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant To Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In the Alternative, For Judgment On The Pleadings. The Court held a hearing on these motions on December 12, 2003. On December 15, 2003, the Court issued an Order denying both motions. On January 9, 2004, Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal regarding the denial of its motion to dismiss. See Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.130(a)(3)(A) (providing for interlocutory appellate review of non-final orders “concerning venue”). On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated CPH’s action against Morgan Stanley with Morgan Stanley Senior Funding’s action against CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

B. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al. (Case No. 03 CA-005165 AD)

Background. This action arises out of the same series of financial transactions as the CPH Action. In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (“MSSF”) and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

MSSF's Complaint alleges that, in the course of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MAFCO") and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the "synergies" that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that Defendant's inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam's lenders (including MSSF) to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. MSSF's Complaint alleges that it suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001 and defaulted on acquisition-related loans. MSSF has alleged claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. CPH denies the material allegations in MSSF's Complaint and also denies MSSF's entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. MSSF filed its Complaint against MAFCO and CPH on May 12, 2003 (the "MSSF Action"). The MSSF Action was initially assigned to Division AG. Because the MSSF Action and the CPH Action involve the same series of financial transactions and arise from a common set of operative facts, the parties agreed that the two cases are companion cases under Local Rule 2.009 and requested a transfer to Division AI, where the first-filed, lower numbered CPH Action was assigned. The motion to transfer was granted on June 9, 2003. Defendants CPH and MAFCO filed their Answer on June 25, 2003. On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated MSSF's action against CPH and MAFCO with CPH's action against Morgan Stanley.

II. Report On Discovery In The Two Cases

A. Morgan Stanley's And MSSF's Position On Discovery

1. Merits Discovery

CPH, MAFCO, Morgan Stanley, and MSSF are actively pursuing written and deposition discovery in these consolidated actions. The parties have exchanged hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, have served and answered multiple sets of interrogatories and requests for admission, and have deposed more than two dozen party and non-party witnesses. Discovery in both cases is ongoing.

At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley informed the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates — approximately seventy (70) additional depositions would need to be completed before the close of fact discovery. Thereafter, on or about March 11, the parties agreed to take alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions.

Since the February 20 Case Management Conference, twenty-seven (27) additional depositions have been completed. Four (4) more depositions have been scheduled and are confirmed for the weeks ahead. Morgan Stanley has ten (10) outstanding requests for deposition dates of CPH, MAFCO, and Coleman witnesses — and has attempted to secure deposition dates for several additional non-party witnesses. At the July 23 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley advised the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates — approximately forty-three (43) days of deposition testimony remain to be completed. That number will increase, however, in light of additional depositions requested by CPH and MAFCO since the July 23 Case Management Conference. CPH and MAFCO have requested the depositions of four (4) additional current or former Morgan Stanley employees — and have requested one (1) additional Rule 1.310 deposition (bringing the total number to 7).

In their Position on Discovery (below), CPH and MAFCO state that thirty (30) depositions have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and fourteen (14) have been taken by MS & Co. and MSSF. But those figures — and the table prepared by CPH and MAFCO to summarize the depositions — do not accurately reflect the depositions taken by Morgan Stanley. Seven (7) of the third-party witnesses identified by CPH and MAFCO as “taken by” CPH and MAFCO were, in reality, examined by Morgan Stanley as well. Moreover, CPH and MAFCO count the Rule 1.310 deposition of Steven Fasman (taken by Morgan Stanley) as a single deposition, when in fact Mr. Fasman appeared for two separate Rule 1.310 depositions.¹ In reality, twenty-one (21) witnesses have been deposed by Morgan Stanley.

The parties have experienced considerable difficulty scheduling depositions in light of scheduling conflicts for counsel on both sides and the location of the witnesses, almost all of whom are located outside of Florida. CPH and MAFCO have offered witnesses for depositions outside of Florida on dates previously established by the Court for Case Management Conferences (or on the day before in New York) and have, on several occasions, confirmed (and then canceled or postponed) depositions previously set to go forward.

For example, CPH and MAFCO twice postponed the deposition of Barry Schwartz (now completed), postponed the deposition of Bruce Slovin (now completed), and postponed the deposition of James Robinson, for various reasons ranging from “unavoidable conflicts” to “medical emergencies.” Another CPH / MAFCO witness, Lawrence Jones, was only available on a day that had been previously scheduled by the Court for a Case Management Conference, and is now expected to be unavailable for an unspecified amount of time due to upcoming surgery. Similar scheduling considerations have required Morgan Stanley to postpone the depositions of other deposition witnesses, many of whom no longer work for Morgan Stanley and are no longer under its control.

Even when depositions have been successfully scheduled, the parties have experienced difficulties beyond their control that have prevented the deposition from going forward. When Mr. Schwartz's deposition was finally scheduled and confirmed for June 18, for example, the deposition needed to be postponed (for a third time) because Morgan Stanley's attorneys were unable to make it to New York for the deposition due to inclement weather and cancelled flights.

Morgan Stanley is of course willing to accommodate the legitimate scheduling considerations of witnesses and their counsel — but these schedule conflicts and difficulties have prevented the parties from proceeding with depositions at the pace contemplated during the February 20 Case Management Conference.

Finally, the parties have had to divert resources away from deposition discovery to address collateral issues unrelated to the merits of these consolidated actions. These issues are discussed in the next section.

2. Non-Merits Discovery

On March 12, CPH filed its Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. On May 14, 2004, the Court converted CPH's Motion for a Rule To Show Cause into a Motion for Contempt. On July 30, 2004, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt. That motion, which is based on the Court's determination and July 26 Order that the Settlement Agreement was properly in the public domain as part of the Court's public file since December 2003, will be heard during the August 13 Case Management Conference. If granted, Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike would obviate the need for further non-merits discovery, and would allow the parties and the Court to return their full attention to the merits of these consolidated actions.

On March 19, CPH served its first set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt. Morgan Stanley responded to those Interrogatories on June 16, 2004 and provided supplemental responses to CPH on June 29, 2004. On July 12, 2004, the Court entered an Order directing Morgan Stanley to supplement its responses to those Interrogatories within twenty days, including certain responses to be filed directly with the Court under seal. Morgan Stanley provided the non-privileged portions of its amended responses to CPH on August 2, 2004. Morgan Stanley has completed the in camera portion of its amended responses and is prepared to submit the in camera portion directly to the Court, pending the Court's ruling on Morgan Stanley's Motion for Enlargement of Time, which will be heard during Uniform Motion Calendar on August 10.

On May 28, CPH served its second set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt — together with a set of document requests relating to that motion. On that same date, Morgan Stanley served its own interrogatories and requests for documents on CPH relating to CPH's motion for contempt. The parties served responses and objections to this “second wave” of non-merits discovery on June 28, 2004. Based on correspondence received from CPH and MAFCO, Morgan Stanley expects additional “waves” of non-merits discovery to be served in the weeks and months ahead, further diverting the parties from the merits.

CPH's contempt motion, together with CPH's related Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen Access to Confidential Transcript (filed May 5, 2004) and other motions relating to the confidentiality of documents and pleadings, have required extensive additional briefing, necessitated attendance of counsel at multiple specially-set hearings in Florida, and the preparation of non-merits discovery requests and responses. CPH's objections also have prevented attorneys from Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, and Evans P.L.L.C. (“KHHTTE”) from participating as co-counsel and assisting with discovery. These satellite issues have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

CPH and MAFCO, acting in concert with Arthur Andersen, are using the non-merits discovery served in these cases to manipulate the proceedings in these consolidated actions and Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA, now pending before Judge Miller. In pleadings filed with Judge Miller, Arthur Andersen has moved for sanctions against Morgan Stanley, sought to disqualify Morgan Stanley's attorneys in that action, and moved to stay all discovery in that action. Simultaneously, CPH (who has professed a "unity of interest" with Arthur Andersen) has sought, through the non-merits discovery served in these consolidated actions, to discover detailed information regarding Morgan Stanley's damages claims in the Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA. CPH seeks this information despite the fact that Arthur Andersen is not a party in these consolidated actions; Kirkland & Ellis LLP does not represent Morgan Stanley in Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA; and CPH has objected to Morgan Stanley's chosen counsel (KHTE) from appearing in these consolidated actions.

The satellite issues and gamesmanship described in this section have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

B. CPH'S And MAFCO's Position On Discovery

CPH and MAFCO stipulate only to the first paragraph of Section II.A above. CPH and MAFCO object to the remaining statements concerning discovery as incomplete, misleading, and self-serving on the part of Morgan Stanley and MSSF. CPH and MAFCO expressed these objections to Morgan Stanley and MSSF, and requested that a neutral statement of the discovery status be substituted, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF refused that request. Consequently, CPH and MAFCO provide the account of discovery that follows.

1. Deposition Discovery

As of August 6, 2004, 44 depositions have been taken. Of those depositions, 30 have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and 14 have been taken by Morgan Stanley and MSSF:

In addition, both sides have requested deposition dates for certain individuals, and expressed interest in deposing still other individuals. Although Morgan Stanley and MSSF attempt to make it appear as if scheduling issues have been caused solely by CPH, in fact, Morgan Stanley and MSSF frequently have delayed providing dates for depositions and have changed previously set dates. In any event, Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's finger-pointing is irrelevant, because there is no motion pending before this Court concerning deposition scheduling — indeed, to date, no such motion ever has been filed.

Concerning counsel for Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's estimates about the depositions to be taken, CPH and MAFCO believe that counsel's estimate is exaggerated. In any event, given that approximately 10 attorneys presently are appearing for Morgan Stanley and MSSF in this case, Morgan Stanley and MSSF certainly have the resources to complete all necessary depositions within any schedule dictated by the Court.

2. Discovery concerning CPH's motion for contempt

The parties have served interrogatories and document requests on each other in connection with CPH's motion for contempt. Because Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's responses to the discovery requests that CPH and MAFCO served on March 19 were insufficient, however, CPH and MAFCO filed a motion to compel. On July 12, this Court entered an order granting that motion in part, and directing Morgan Stanley and MSSF to provide further information within 20 days. On August 2, Morgan Stanley and MSSF purported to provide non-privileged information in compliance with the July 12 order, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF did not comply with the Court's direction to provide privileged information for in camera review. Instead, Morgan Stanley and MSSF filed a motion to enlarge the deadline for doing so. That motion, which CPH and MAFCO have opposed, is scheduled to be heard on August 10.

CPH and MAFCO also served further interrogatories and document requests in connection with CPH's motion for contempt on May 28, and Morgan Stanley and MSSF have served responses to those discovery requests. Because CPH and MAFCO believe that the responses are deficient in many respects, however, CPH and MAFCO filed a motion to compel. The Court made some rulings on that motion at the July 23 case management conference, but did not complete its review of the motion. CPH and MAFCO have re-noticed the motion for the upcoming case management conference on August 13.

III. Pretrial Schedule

On February 24, 2004, the Court entered an order setting this matter for trial in January 2005, and on March 23, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order setting the pretrial schedule in this matter and scheduling trial to begin on January 18, 2005. At the case management conference on July 23, this Court stated that it would be extending the trial date to March 2005.

The Court directed the parties to come to the August 13 case management conference prepared to discuss scheduling the trial as well as associated adjustments to the pretrial schedule.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S SECOND SET OF REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co."), by its attorneys and pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.370, hereby responds and objects to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Second Set of Requests for Admission.

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Second Set of Requests for Admission, including all Definitions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon MS & Co. any requirements that exceed or are otherwise inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order.

2. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Second Set of Requests for Admission to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

3. MS & Co. objects to the definitions of “Morgan Stanley” and “MSSF” to the extent that they include MS & Co.’s or MSSF’s counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MS & Co. interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP and Carlton Fields, P.A and affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action.

4. MS & Co. objects to the Requests for Admission as unduly burdensome, abusive, and vexatious, since many of them are duplicative and constitute an unnecessary waste of time and concern factual allegations uniquely within the possession of CPH, MAFCO, or third parties, which could be confirmed with less expense and burden on the parties through more traditional techniques of discovery.

5. MS & Co. incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these General Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES

1. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are true and authentic copies of original documents within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.901.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

2. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 0084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are records of regularly conducted business activity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).

RESPONSE: Admitted in part and denied in part. MS & Co. admits that the referenced documents are generated in the course of a regularly conducted business activity, but denies that the documents, which largely reflect the opinions of out-of-court declarants, qualify for the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). MS & Co. reserves all evidentiary objections to the admissibility of the referenced documents, but will not dispute that the documents are kept in the ordinary course of its business.

MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDING INC.'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, hereby responds and objects to MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.'s ("MAFCO") First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. MSSF objects to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon MSSF any requirements that exceed or are otherwise inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order.

2. MSSF objects to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney-work-product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

3. MSSF objects to the definitions of “Morgan Stanley” and “MSSF” to the extent that they include counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MSSF interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Carlton Fields, P.A, Kellogg Huber Hansen Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. as well as affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action.

4. MSSF objects to the definition of “Identify” when used with respect to a person to the extent that it seeks the addresses and phone numbers of persons named. Such persons who are employees of MSSF should not be contacted directly, but rather communications must go through counsel.

5. MSSF’s response to any interrogatory is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgement of relevance or factual accuracy, or that any person identified actually possesses knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action.

6. MSSF’s objections and responses are based on a good faith investigation. MSSF expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

7. MSSF incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these General Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES AND SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Identify each individual who relied upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part, at any time and for any purpose. For each individual, describe in detail when and how each individual relied upon Exhibit A or in information derived from Exhibit A, and what each individual did with the information contained in Exhibit A or derived from Exhibit A.

RESPONSE: MSSF notes that Defendant’s Interrogatory No. 1 constitutes at least three separate interrogatories. Subject to and without waving its general and specific objections, MSSF responds as follows:

MAFCO and its wholly-owned subsidiary, CPH, made false statements to Sunbeam, Sunbeam's financial advisors, and Sunbeam's lenders regarding the "synergies" that Sunbeam could expect to achieve from an acquisition of The Coleman Company.

Specifically, throughout the negotiations leading to Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, MAFCO and CPH falsely represented that the acquisition would result in post-closing synergies of $150.5 million per year, falsely stated that lower synergy figures were "understated," and falsely stated that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley were not giving MAFCO and CPH "enough credit" for synergies in the valuation of a combined Sunbeam/Coleman entity. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557-558] MAFCO and CPH made false synergy representations to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley verbally and in writing. The false synergy information provided by MAFCO and CPH in writing (memorialized in the document attached as Exhibit A to MSSF's Complaint), and false synergy information derived from that document became part of the total mix of information relied on by Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley & Co., and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in the acquisition and financing transactions that followed.

On or about December 12, 1997, Sunbeam and Coleman representatives held a meeting at MAFCO's offices in New York to discuss the proposed acquisition of Coleman and the benefits that would accrue to Sunbeam if the deal went forward. This meeting was attended by, among others, Jerry W. Levin, Coleman's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Joseph P. Page, Coleman's Chief Financial Officer, and Paul E. Shapiro, Coleman's General Counsel. Representatives of Sunbeam included Russell A. Kersh, Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer, David C. Fannin, Sunbeam's Chief Legal Officer, and Peter Langerman, a director of Sunbeam and representative of its then-largest shareholder, Franklin Mutual Advisors, Inc. Coleman's

financial advisors also were present for the meeting. [CPH 1042288, at 292; CPH 1401525 at 528]

During this meeting, CPH and MAFCO representatives provided Sunbeam with a detailed written schedule identifying 15 different areas of synergies between Sunbeam and Coleman, predicting that the acquisition would result in post-closing synergies totaling $150.5 million per year. [CPH 1020748] To maintain the credibility of this representation, CPH's and MAFCO's written schedule included detailed figures for each of the 15 areas of purported synergies, and a detailed "build-up" of these 15 areas totaling $150.5 million. Those categories of synergies which were presented by Coleman and MAFCO to Sunbeam included the following line-items: "Transfer BBQ License," "Synergies re CG BBQ," "Corporate Staff," "International Group Staff," "Latin America Staff," "[Coleman] Europe Network Sells [Sunbeam] Products," "[Coleman] Japan Network Sells [Sunbeam] Products," "Factory Outlet Staff," "S Catalytic Appliance Line," "Consolidate Division HQ To [Del Ray Beach, FL]," "Consolidate Domestic Salesforces," "Eliminate $20 million Oracle Expense," "Additional $25M Writeoffs," "Global Sourcing Raw Materials," "Consolidation Logistics & Warehousing"

During the December 12, 1997 meeting, CPH and MAFCO verbally supplemented and affirmed the synergy figures contained in this schedule by providing additional information and detail about each of the fifteen line-items. These verbal representations purported to confirm the facts built into each figure and affirmed that the total calculation of $150.5 million was a fair and prudent estimate of synergies to be gained annually from Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. Shortly following this meeting, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the synergy schedule from the Sunbeam officials who had participated in the meeting. [CPH 1020748] From this point forward, the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule, and information derived from it, was important information considered by Sunbeam in determining the price Sunbeam was willing to pay for Coleman; was important information considered by MS & Co. in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering; and was important information considered by MSSF in going forward with its bank loan to Sunbeam.

As the negotiation of the Coleman acquisition progressed, CPH and MAFCO repeatedly and consistently vouched for the $150.5 million figure represented in their December 12, 1997 synergy schedule, as well as the factual basis from which that figure was purportedly derived. Defendants repeated these false synergy representations during negotiations leading up to the Coleman acquisition.

Specifically, on January 27, 1998, William Reid of Morgan Stanley had a discussion with representatives of The Coleman Company, in which Coleman expressed their position that the synergies had been "understated," and that it was Coleman's view that there were "at least $150MM in synergies." [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 558]

Subsequently, representatives of Sunbeam and Coleman held another meeting on January 29, 1998, at MAFCO's New York offices to discuss the proposed acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam, to update the parties' discussions of synergies from the December 12, 1997 meeting, and to discuss the benefits that would accrue to Sunbeam from the proposed acquisition of Coleman. Representatives from Morgan Stanley also attended the meeting, including Tyrone Chang, Alex Fuchs, and Jim Stynes. Senior officials from the CPH and MAFCO, including MAFCO executives James Maher and William Nesbitt, attended the meeting

on behalf of Coleman. [CPH 1401525 at 529, MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0033256 at 260, and CPH 1042291 at 294]

And again, on February 16, 1998, representatives from Morgan Stanley had a conversation with James Maher, of MAFCO, who reiterated MAFCO's and CPH's belief that Sunbeam/Morgan Stanley was not "giving them enough credit in for synergies in the valuation" of the combined entity. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557]

At each opportunity, CPH's and MAFCO's agents and representatives discussed, affirmed, and ratified the information contained in the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule. CPH's and MAFCO's agents and representatives represented that $150.5 million was the fair and prudent projection of annual synergies to be gained by Sunbeam through its acquisition of Coleman, and that any lower synergies figures were "understated." [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557-558] These assurances by CPH and MAFCO regarding the $150 million synergies figures was important information considered by Sunbeam in determining the price Sunbeam was willing to pay for Coleman; was important information considered by MS & Co. in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering; and was important information considered by MSSF in going forward with its bank loan to Sunbeam.

Because the December 12, 1997 schedule of synergies and subsequent verbal affirmations by CPH and MAFCO were presented to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley during the negotiations leading to the acquisition and related financing transactions, Exhibit A, and information derived from it, played a role in the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman.

Accordingly, the following individuals, each of whom played a role in the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman, may have relied, directly or indirectly, upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A:

- Shani Boone, Analyst, Investment Banking Division
- Tyrone Chang, Analyst, Investment Banking Division [Chang at 171:24-172:12, 203:6-17]
- Benjamin D. Derito, Analyst, Investment Banking Division
- Alex Fuchs, Vice President, Investment Banking Division
- Johannes Groeller, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- Michael Hart, Executive Director, Investment Banking Division [Hart at 31:23-32:7, and 58:3-21]
- Robert Kitts, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division [Kitts at 125:12-19]
- Ruth Porat, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- Lily Rafii, Analyst, Global Private Wealth Management Division [Rafii at 158:23-25]
- Andrew B. Savarie, Vice President, Investment Banking Division
- Bram Smith, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- William Strong, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- James Stynes, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- John Tyree, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- Joshua A. Webber, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- William H. Wright, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- Gene K. Yoo, Associate, Investment Banking Division

Further, synergies resulting from the proposed combination of Sunbeam and Coleman were modeled, based in part on Exhibit A and information derived from Exhibit A under various scenarios with a midpoint of $150 million, the same synergy figure represented by MAFCO and CPH. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0026443 at 472-479] These models and results were subsequently presented to Sunbeam's Board of Directors, which included Albert Dunlap, Charles Elson, Russell Kersh, Howard Kristol, Peter Langerman, William Rutter and Faith Whittlesey, who relied on the information in the course of their analysis and ultimate resolution of matters presented before them. [CPH 0075371]

Synergies analyses were also presented to Morgan Stanley's Leveraged Finance Commitment Committee, which in the spring of 1998 may have included all or some of the following individuals: Leslie E. Bradford, Steven L. Brown, Joel P. Feldmann, Richard B. Felix, William Kourakos, Tarek F. Abdel-Meguid, Stephen R. Munger, Stephan F. Newhouse, Ralph L. Pellecchio, Michael L. Rankowitz, William J. Sanders, Marium A. Short, Dwight D. Sipprelle, Bram Smith and William Strong, [See, MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 214], and Morgan Stanley's Equity Commitment Committee, which in the spring of 1998 may have included all or some of the following individuals: Mayree C. Clark, Michael Curtis, John H. Faulkner, Carla A. Harris, John P. Havens, Richard L. Kaufman, Jim Little, Tarek F. Abdel-Meguid, Ralph L. Pellecchio, Ruth M. Porat, William J. Sanders, Dennis F. Shea, Scott M. Sipprelle, Ed Sullivan, and William H. Wright. [Conway at 62:11-63:3] Synergy information, including information derived from Exhibit A, was considered by MS & Co.'s and MSSF's decision-making groups in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering, and in going forward with the bank loan to Sunbeam. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 230, 232 and 237; MORGAN STANLEY

CONFIDENTIAL 0026545 at 567]; and MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0000513 at 525 and 529] Indeed, the presentations to the Leveraged Finance Commitment and Equity Commitment Committees estimated that the synergy figures presented were “conservative” estimates [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 232], and that there could be an “upside” to the figures presented. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 237; MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0000513 at 529]

Morgan Stanley further relied on CPH’s and MAFCO’s synergy figures through discussions with, among others, Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand, whose views regarding synergies appear to have been based (at least in part) on the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule and the subsequent statements by CPH and MAFCO regarding synergies. Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand were also involved in the preparation, development, and analysis of synergies, and thereby also may have relied, to varying degrees, on Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A.

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify with particularity what steps MSSF, Morgan Stanley and/or Sunbeam undertook to develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman. Your response should identify each individual involved.

RESPONSE: MSSF notes that Defendant’s Interrogatory No. 2 constitutes at least two separate requests. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, MSSF states that MSSF, Morgan Stanley, and/or Sunbeam took the following steps to “develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman”:

Morgan Stanley participated in numerous meetings and conference calls with Sunbeam and Coleman management in an effort to learn about the Sunbeam and Coleman businesses and about potential synergies and cost savings associated with such a combination.

[MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0035935]
- Date uncertain -- Morgan Stanley personnel, including Michael Hart, spoke to Coleman personnel, including Jerry Levin, and Sunbeam personnel, including Albert Dunlap, about the achievability of synergies numbers. [Hart at 40:3-15]

Additionally, Morgan Stanley researched and requested information from Coleman and Sunbeam necessary for the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0031791-799] Morgan Stanley probed management and asked questions regarding synergy plans, testing their ability to execute those synergies on the given timetable. [Smith at 278:7-18] Morgan Stanley reviewed this information, including, but not limited to the listing of synergies and cost savings provided to Morgan Stanley by Coleman (via Sunbeam) on December 12, 1997 [CPH 1020748-749]. Morgan Stanley personnel involved in this process included Tyrone Chang, Andrew Conway, Alexander Fuchs and Gene Yoo. [Fuchs at 127:7-21; Yoo at 105:2-12]

Furthermore, Morgan Stanley personnel, including Tyrone Chang and Andrew Conway, created and compiled pro forma models for the new combined business on a going forward basis, which entailed a valuation of potential synergies and an analysis and compilation of publicly available information regarding the parties to the transaction. [Chang at 47:10-16, 174:1-10, 186;23-188:1, 190-196; Conway at 72:9-11, 77:5-78:12] Morgan Stanley received a document outlining potential synergies, which were then modeled using a range of synergies, i.e., a range of dollar values which resulted in a range of potential impacts on the transaction. [Chang at 172:6-12, 176:24-178:2; CPH 1020748-749]. Specifically, Morgan Stanley created models, including but not limited to those which examined trading analyses, precedent transaction analyses, discounted cash flow analyses, and estimated value of synergies analyses. [Chang at 190-196]

Morgan Stanley modeled the synergies under various assumptions, and discussed the synergies with the relevant companies, however Morgan Stanley did not perform an independent valuation of the potential synergies that would result from the transaction. The financial synergy data came from CPH, MAFCO, Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand. Morgan Stanley ultimately presented the information that was provided by the companies. [Stynes at 62:23-63:8; Yoo at 126:14-127:4, 145:21-146:4]

Apart from Morgan Stanley's efforts to "develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman," Morgan Stanley believes that representatives from Coopers & Lybrand and from Sunbeam also were involved in preparing, developing, and analyzing the synergy figures. For example, Coopers & Lybrand "physically visited facilities and would comment positively and/or negatively on the ability to achieve the preliminary synergies that ha[d] been identified." [Kitts at 100:24-101:7; Page 202:1-5; CPH 1401525 at 531; MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0007317]

Sunbeam “develop[ed], analyze[d], consider[ed], model[ed], evaluate[d], or review[ed] potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman” in several ways. Sunbeam personnel participated in numerous meetings and conference calls pertaining to due diligence issues, including but not limited to business due diligence, legal due diligence, human resources due diligence, insurance due diligence and tax due diligence. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0007317] Additionally, Scott Yales has testified to having performed synergies analyses -- validating the assumptions, testing their viability, and coordinating these efforts with Coleman -- the source of these synergies numbers, and to having worked with Coopers & Lybrand, who was retained to validate synergistic opportunities. [Yales at 119:20-24, 127:12-128:3, 129:11-130:18]

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Identify each individual involved on behalf of MSSF and Morgan Stanley in conducting, reviewing, or participating in due diligence of Sunbeam in connection with (i) the Coleman Transaction, (ii) the February 27 Agreements; (iii) the Subordinated Debenture Offering; and (iv) the Bank Facility, and for each such individual, describe in detail what steps that individual undertook to conduct that due diligence.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley notes that Defendant’s Interrogatory No. 4 constitutes at least four separate requests. Morgan Stanley objects to Request No. 4 as overbroad and unduly burdensome to the extent that this request seeks an enumeration of every specific instance Morgan Stanley performed “due diligence” on Sunbeam. As Morgan Stanley’s witnesses have repeatedly testified, due diligence is a broad term that encompasses, among other activities, nearly every discussion that Morgan Stanley had with Sunbeam’s personnel and advisors and nearly every instance in which a Morgan Stanley representative requested information from Sunbeam or reviewed that information.

Morgan Stanley further objects to Request No. 4 as overbroad and unduly burdensome to the extent that this request seeks an enumeration of every specific instance Morgan Stanley performed “due diligence” on Sunbeam because the due diligence activities contemplated by Request No. 4 occurred over five years ago. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, Morgan Stanley states the individuals listed below were among the Morgan Stanley representatives who conducted due diligence in connection with the Coleman transaction, the convertible debenture offering and the bank loan:

Name	Due Diligence Conducted

[Hart at 103:23-106:6] Morgan Stanley notes that First Union and Bank of America also conducted due diligence in connection with the senior loan.
Robert Kitts	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and associated debenture offering, Mr. Kitts researched publicly available information regarding Sunbeam, conducted interviews with Sunbeam management, maintained an ongoing dialogue with Sunbeam personnel, reviewed research reports, and attended due diligence meetings with Sunbeam and Coleman representatives. [Kitts at 73:22-74:25; 87:6-17, 91:15-92:13] Mr. Kitts did not have any role in bring-down due diligence for the debt offering. [Kitts at 151:17-20]
Andrew Savarie	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and associated debenture offering, Mr. Savarie attended due diligence meetings with Sunbeam, gathered information regarding Sunbeam, reviewed drafts of the offering documents, visited Sunbeam's offices, and had ongoing discussions with Sunbeam representatives about Sunbeam's business forecasts. [Savarie at 50:14-25, 57:2-23, 68:8-21, 90:2-20 and 112:16-22] Mr. Savarie also had at least one discussion with Sunbeam's accountants at Arthur Andersen and was involved in discussions with lawyers for Sunbeam and for the other banks. [Savarie at 58:12-59:3, 78:6-21] Mr. Savarie does not recall being involved in due diligence of the acquisition targets.

Bram Smith	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the senior loan, Mr. Smith supervised aspects of due diligence that were conducted with respect to the structuring of the senior loan. [Smith at 85:2-20] Mr. Smith attended at least one due diligence meeting at Sunbeam's offices on March 4 and 5, 1998, analyzed available projections and the possible loan structures, and participated in telephone calls and review of documents regarding Sunbeam's financial performance. [Smith at 85:21-86:9, 91:5-19, 92:8-19, 144:10-145:6] Mr. Smith also maintained an ongoing dialogue with Sunbeam in the context of asking questions related to the debt financing. [Tyree at 434:18-435:6] Morgan Stanley notes that First Union and Bank of America also conducted due diligence in connection with the senior loan.
Ruth Porat	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the debenture offering, Ms. Porat participated in telephone discussions with Sunbeam representatives regarding Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance, and reviewed documents prepared and presented by senior Sunbeam sales officials regarding projected sales for the balance of the first quarter. [Smith at 82:6-83:2, 141:25-142:6; Porat at 18:2-15, 73:24-74:12]
Jim Stynes	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction, Mr. Stynes had regular discussions with Sunbeam management and employees, participated in conference calls with Sunbeam, visited Sunbeam locations, and presented the materials Morgan Stanley was developing back to Sunbeam management and employees to insure that Morgan Stanley's material accurately reflected the information provided to Morgan Stanley by Sunbeam management. [Strong at 313:6-22]
William Strong	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and related debenture offering, Mr. Strong participated in telephone discussions with Sunbeam representatives regarding Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance, and reviewed documents prepared and presented by senior Sunbeam sales officials regarding projected sales for the balance of the first quarter. John Tyree	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and related debenture offering, Mr. Tyree: visited Sunbeam's offices in Florida; had ongoing discussions, including teleconferences, with Sunbeam's management; conducted bring-down due diligence; reviewed financial forecasts, including the net sales for the First Quarter 1998; facilitated the due diligence process by setting up meetings and making sure the appropriate people from Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam attended the meetings; inspected Sunbeam's facilities and headquarters; requested and reviewed financial information such as publicly filed quarterly and annual reports; and analyzed research and analyst reports. [Tyree at 124:3-17, 322:10-16, 376:8-11, 409:13-18, 432:18-25, 449:6-12, 493:18-21, 501:10-18 and 558:5-17] Mr. Tyree participated in telephone discussions with Sunbeam representatives regarding Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance, and reviewed documents prepared and presented by senior Sunbeam sales officials regarding projected sales for the balance of the first quarter. Mr. Tyree also spoke with representatives from Arthur Andersen on multiple occasions during the due diligence process.

Furthermore, as part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence on the Coleman transaction and related debenture offering, unspecified members of Morgan Stanley's Sunbeam teams requested documentation from Sunbeam management and employees, including a) backup numbers for all new revenue streams, including any methodologies implemented in arriving at such revenue projections; b) historical and projected pricing and unit sales trends for both existing and new products; and c) information regarding new pipeline products, including how revenue projections were arrived at, and a description of the product development cycle. ORDER ON MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED AND MORGAN
STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.'S MOTION FOR APPLICATION OF NEW YORK LAW

THIS CAUSE came before the Court June 28, 2004 on Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.'s Motion for Application of New York Law, with all parties well represented by counsel.

I. Introduction

This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH"), sold its 82% interest in the Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman"), to Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("MS & Co."), served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF"), and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

CPH's Complaint alleges claims against MS & Co. arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy, and seeks damages of at least $485 million.

MSSF's Complaint alleges that, in the course of Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), CPH's parent company, and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the "synergies" that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that MAFCO and CPH's inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam's lenders, including MSSF, to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. MSSF's Complaint asserts claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation and alleges that MSSF suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001 and defaulted on acquisition-related loans.

II. Analysis

A. An overview

MS & Co. and MSSF (together "Morgan Stanley"), filed their Motion for Application of New York Law ("Motion"). The Motion seeks a determination that New York substantive law controls all claims in these consolidated cases.

Florida's choice of law rules govern the conflict of laws analysis. Hoffman v. Ouellette, 798 So. 2d 42 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001). A conflict of laws analysis involves a three step process. First, the court must consider whether there are potentially outcome determinative differences between the substantive laws alleged to apply. See Tune v. Philip Morris, Inc., 766 So. 2d 350 (Fla. 2d DCA 2000), rev. den. 786 So. 2d 1188 (Fla. 2001). If there are, the Court must next determine the choice of law rule to be applied for the type of claim alleged. Finally, the court must apply the appropriate choice of law rule. Hoffman.

The parties agree that Florida applies the "significant relationship" test in tort cases. The parties disagree on whether there are potentially outcome determinative differences in New York and Florida substantive law and, if there are, which state's law prevails on application of the conflicts principles. Choice of law is made on an issue by issue basis. Crowell v. Clay Hayden Trucking Lines, Inc., 700 So. 2d 120 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997), rev. den. 705 So. 2d 569 (Fla. 1998). To resolve the dispute, then, the Court must determine whether there are material differences between New York and Florida law on each issue and, if there are, apply the appropriate conflicts principles to determine the controlling substantive law on each contested issue.

B. Step One - New York v. Florida Law

(i) Negligent Misrepresentation

Morgan Stanley contends that New York law requires Coleman to prove that it had a "special relationship" with Coleman before it can bring a claim for negligent misrepresentation. Coleman contends that the "special relationship" requirement in the New York case law is merely a term of art that designates the same group of potential recipients of misrepresentations who have a cause of action as in Florida.

Florida has adopted §552 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts as a statement of the elements for a negligent misrepresentation claim:

Information Negligently Supplied for the Guidance of Others.

(1) One who, in the course of his business, profession or employment, or in any other transaction in which he has a pecuniary interest, supplies false information for the guidance of others in their business transactions, is subject to liability for pecuniary loss caused to them by their justifiable reliance upon the information, if he fails to exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information.

(2) Except as stated in Subsection (3), the liability stated in Subsection (1) is limited to loss suffered

(a) by the person or one of a limited group of persons for whose benefit and guidance he intends to supply the information or knows that the recipient intends to supply it; and

(b) through reliance upon it in a transaction that he intends the information to influence or knows that the recipient so intends or in a substantially similar transaction.

(3) The liability of one who is under a public duty to give the information extends to loss suffered by any of the class of persons for whose benefit the duty is created, in any of the transactions in which it is intended to protect them.

See Gilchrist Timber Co. v. ITT Rayonier, Inc., 696 So. 2d 334, 337 (Fla. 1997). Thus, in Florida, one who has a pecuniary interest in a transaction is liable if he negligently supplies incorrect information for the benefit or guidance of another who justifiably relies on it.

New York, however, circumscribes a tighter circle of potential claimants, engrafting a requirement that the information's recipient be in a position of trust or confidence to its publisher. See American Protein Corp. v. AB Volvo, 844 F. 2d 56 (2d Cir. 1988), cert. den. 488 U.S. 852 (1988); DynCorp v. GTE Corporation, 215 F. Supp. 2d 308 (S.D.N.Y. 2002); Citibank, N.A. v. Itochu International, Inc., 2003 WL 1797847 (S.D.N.Y. 2003); Fleet Bank v. Pine Knoll Corp., 736 N.Y.S. 2d 737 (A.D. 3 Dept. 2002); St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. v. Health Fielding Insurance Brokerage, Ltd., 976 F. Supp. 198 (S.D.N.Y. 1996). The difference between Florida and New York law is material, and may be outcome determinative: the parties dispute whether MS & Co. held or acquired a position of trust or confidence over CPH, and whether MAFCO and CPH held or acquired a position of trust or confidence over MSSF.

(ii) Fraudulent Misrepresentation

Morgan Stanley contends that New York law prevents a recipient of a fraudulent misrepresentation from bringing a claim if it is a "sophisticated party" with access to information which, if checked, would have allowed it to determine the representation was inaccurate. CPH maintains that New York law is merely a specific application of the general rule that a misrepresentation is not actionable unless reliance on it was reasonable, and that it is unreasonable for a sophisticated party in an arms' length commercial transaction to rely on information provided by its opponent that could have been verified.

Under New York law, reliance on a fraudulent misrepresentation is not reasonable if the recipient “has the means available to him of knowing, by the exercise of ordinary intelligence, the truth . . .” See Schumaker v. Mather, 133 N.Y. 590; 30 N.E. 755, 757 (1892). Thus, a sophisticated investor may not claim it was fraudulently induced to enter into a transaction if it failed to use the means available to test the representations. UST Private Equity Investors Fund v. Salomon Smith Barney, 733 N.Y.S. 2d 385, 288 A.D. 2d 87 (N.Y. App. Div. 2001).

In contrast, in Florida a recipient of a fraudulent misrepresentation may rely on it unless he knows it is false or its falsity is obvious, even if it had the means to verify the representation's accuracy. See Besett v. Basnett, 389 So. 2d 995 (Fla. 1980); M/I Schottenstein Homes, Inc. v. Azam, 813 So. 2d 91 (Fla. 2002); Sheer v. Jenkins, 629 So. 2d 1033 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993).

Clearly, there is a fundamental distinction on this point between New York and Florida which could be outcome determinative. MS & Co. claims CPH had access to information which would have allowed it to test the allegedly false representations but CPH failed to do its due diligence. MAFCO and CPH claim that MSSF had access to information that would have allowed MSSF to test the synergy representations, but MSSF failed to do its due diligence. If true, a jury could find reliance that is reasonable under Florida law to be unreasonable under New York law.

C. Step Two - Choice of Law Rule

(i) Applicable Rule

Florida has adopted the Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws' significant relationships test. See Bishop v. Florida Specialty Paint Company, 389 So. 2d 999 (Fla. 1980). Section 145 states the general principles with respect to tort. Section 148 states the choice of law principles for fraud and misrepresentation. Counsel agree section 148 applies.

See Trumpet Vine Investments, N.V. v. Union Capital Partners I, Inc., 92 F. 3d 1110 (11th Cir. 1996).

(ii) Procedure

The Court was unable to find any cases specifically delineating the procedure to be used for a judicial choice of law determination prior to trial. However, because application of the significant relationships test is fact-dependent, the Court concludes that a pre-trial determination is controlled by the summary judgment rule, Rule 1.510, Fla. R. Civ. P. First, the Court is unaware of any other procedural vehicle that would permit a pre-trial determination of facts. Second, it appears that when summary judgment has been used by the trial courts, the appellate courts have reviewed the orders without comment on the procedure employed. See, e.g., Rush v. Joyner, 540 So. 2d 266 (Fla. 4th DCA 1989); Bishop.

(iii) The Undisputed Facts

The following facts are undisputed:

1. CPH is a wholly owned subsidiary of MAFCO. Before the transaction with Sunbeam in March 1998, CPH was a holding company with an 82% interest in Coleman. CPH is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in New York City, New York.
2. MS & Co. is an investment banking firm providing financial and securities services. MS & Co. is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in New York City, New York.
3. CPH retained the investment bank of Credit Suisse First Boston ("CSFB") to serve as its financial advisor on the Sunbeam transaction. CSFB is a global investment bank with offices in New York. CPH worked with CSFB personnel in the New York office on the Sunbeam deal.
4. MS & Co. served as Sunbeam's financial advisor during the negotiations that led to the Coleman acquisition. MS & Co.'s contract with Sunbeam was governed by New York law.
5. New York counsel represented CPH, MS & Co., and MSSF during the course of the negotiations and closing of the Sunbeam transaction.

6. CPH retained the accounting firm of Ernst & Young, a national accounting firm with offices in New York. CPH worked with accountants in the New York office on the Coleman deal.
7. MSSF is a financial services company that provides credit services to its clients. MSSF is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in New York .
8. MAFCO relied on New York-based personnel at CSFB for financial services; on Wachtell, Lipton Rosen & Katz, a New York based law firm, for legal advice; and on Ernst & Young for accounting services.
9. There were numerous telephone calls between MS & Co. personnel and Sunbeam personnel in Florida concerning MS & Co.'s retention; its work for Sunbeam; and the Coleman transaction.
10. MS & Co. personnel met with Sunbeam personnel in Florida several times to discuss MS & Co.'s retention as Sunbeam's financial advisor, strategy, potential acquisition candidates, and merger issues.
11. On or about September 23 and 24, 1997; October 29, 1997; and March 4 and 5, 1998, MS & Co. personnel conducted due diligence at Sunbeam's Florida offices.
12. MS & Co. corresponded with Sunbeam at its Florida offices on a variety of issues dealing with its representation of Sunbeam and the merger.
13. On or about December 18, 1997, representatives of Sunbeam and MAFCO met in Florida to discuss a potential transaction involving Sunbeam and Coleman.
14. On or about February 3, 1998, Sunbeam personnel met with an Arthur Andersen representative at Sunbeam's Florida offices in connection with the Coleman transaction.
15. On March 5, 1998, MS & Co. personnel attended a drafting session in Florida in connection with the subordinated debenture offering.
16. On or about March 12, 1998, MS & Co. personnel conducted an accounting due diligence conference call with Arthur Andersen personnel in Florida regarding Sunbeam's financial circumstances.
17. The March 19, 1998 press release was publicly issued from Sunbeam's headquarters

- in Delray Beach, Florida; was drafted by Sunbeam's lawyers at the New York offices of Skadden Arps; was reviewed by MS & Co. in New York; and was received by CPH in New York.
18. The statements by Lawrence Bornstein of Arthur Andersen concerning Sunbeam's earnings shortfalls took place at the offices of Global Financial Press in New York.
 19. Any representations that MAFCO and CPH made to MSSF at the December 12, 1997 and January 29, 1998 meetings were made and received in New York.
 20. On February 4, 1998, Coleman sent Sunbeam a proposed Confidentiality Agreement in connection with the proposed merger. Sunbeam executed the Confidentiality Agreement. The Confidentiality Agreement provided that New York law applies to it.
 21. On February 27, 1998, Sunbeam and CPH's boards of directors met in New York and approved the merger agreement. MS & Co. made a presentation to Sunbeam's Board of Directors at the meeting in New York and provided a "fairness opinion" prior to the Board's approval of the transaction.
 22. Sunbeam and CPH signed the merger agreement later that day in New York.
 23. The merger agreement specified that the acquisition would close in New York and that all share certificates and other consideration would be exchanged by the parties at the closing in New York.
 24. Written notice of changes in circumstances having a material adverse effect was to be delivered to CPH's wholly owned subsidiary in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. No notice was received.
 25. On March 29, 1998, Sunbeam and CPH entered into a Registration Rights Agreement which provided for the registration by Sunbeam of 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam common stock that were issued to a wholly owned subsidiary of CPH. The Registration Rights Agreement provided that it was governed by New York law without regard to New York conflicts of law principles.
 26. The Sunbeam transaction closed on March 30, 1998 in New York.
 27. CPH tendered its shares of Coleman to Sunbeam in New York. At the time of the transaction, Coleman was a public company traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

28. CPH accepted shares of Sunbeam stock in New York. At the time of the transaction, Sunbeam was a public company traded on the New York Stock Exchange.
29. The Sunbeam financing transactions were closed in New York on March 31, 1998.
30. MSSF loaned Sunbeam $680 million in New York in part to be used for the Coleman deal.

D. Step Three - Application of the Law to the Facts

(i) Negligent Misrepresentation - CPH v. MS & Co.

Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §148 (1971) provides:

§148. Fraud and Misrepresentation

(1) When the plaintiff has suffered pecuniary harm on account of his reliance on the defendant's false representations and when the plaintiff's action in reliance took place in the state where the false representations were made and received, the local law of this state determines the rights and liabilities of the parties unless, with respect to the particular issue, some other state has a more significant relationship under the principles stated in §6 to the occurrence and the parties, in which event the local law of the other state will be applied.

(2) When the plaintiff's action in reliance took place in whole or in part in a state other than that where the false representations were made, the forum will consider such of the following contacts, among others, as may be present in the particular case in determining the state which, with respect to the particular issue, has the most significant relationship to the occurrence and the parties:

- (a) the place, or places, where the plaintiff acted in reliance upon the defendant's representations,
- (b) the place where the plaintiff received the representation,
- (c) the place where the defendant made the representations,
- (d) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties,

(e) the place where a tangible thing which is the subject of the transaction between the parties was situated at the time, and

(f) the place where the plaintiff is to render performance under a contract which he has been induced to enter by the false representations of the defendant.

MS & Co. argues that subsection (1) applies; CPH argues that subsection (2) applies. The correct answer is unclear, since subsection (1) applies only if the false statements were both made and received in the same state, and subsection (2) applies if reliance occurs in whole or in part in a different state than where the representation was made. §148 does not state a rule where the place of reliance and representation are the same, but different from the place where the representation was received.

The representations were received in New York. The actionable part of CPH's reliance occurred in New York, where the contract was entered into and closed. Finally, it is undisputed that the representations relied on in Count I of CPH's Complaint were made in New York. Consequently, New York law controls unless Florida has a more significant relationship under the principles stated in section 6 of the Restatement. It does not. While Florida's public policy provides broader protection for the recipients of false information in commercial transactions, which creates greater incentives for parties to take reasonable care that their representations are correct, that interest is not paramount to New York's, under the principles outlined in section 6. Instead, certainty and predictability in commercial transactions require that New York law apply.

Even if the choice of laws was not dictated by subsection (1), application of subsection (2) would lead to the same result: CPH relied on the statements in New York; it received the representations in New York; the representations were made in New York; the parties are domiciled in New York; and CPH was required to perform in New York.

(ii) Negligent Misrepresentation: MSSF v. MAFCO and CPH

MSSF's claims against MAFCO and CPH are centered on two meetings where MSSF alleges MAFCO and CPH gave inflated synergy projections, on December 12, 1997, and

January 29, 1998. Both were face to face meetings in New York. Consequently, the allegedly false synergy projections were made, received, and relied on in New York. Florida does not have a more significant relationship to the particular issue--the group of people to which MSSF owed a duty--under the principles listed in section 6. Consequently, New York law governs whether MSSF owed a duty to MAFCO and CPH.

(iii) Fraudulent Misrepresentation: CPH v. MS & Co.

As outlined above, section 148 (1) of the Restatement dictates the application of New York law to determine whether reliance on a fraudulent misstatement is justified. Florida does not have a more significant relationship to this issue than New York, based on application of the principles outlined in section 6 of the Restatement. Though Florida has a strong public policy dictating that “(a) person guilty of fraudulent misrepresentation should not be permitted to hide behind the doctrine of caveat emptor,” that interest does not override New York’s. Besset at 997. Certainty and predictability require that the standards of due diligence governing sophisticated New York domiciled corporations entering into a commercial transaction in New York be governed by New York law.

(iv) Fraudulent Misrepresentation: MSSF v. MAFCO and CPH

Section 148 (1) of the Restatement dictates the application of New York law to determine the due diligence required to find reliance on a false statement reasonable. Application of section 6's principles does not dictate a different result.

(v) Conspiracy and Aiding and Abetting-CPH v. MS & Co.

The Court is unable to apply section 148's principles or conclude whether Florida or New York has the more significant relationship to CPH's aiding and abetting fraud and conspiracy claims, found at Counts II and III of its Complaint.

Both counts claim that MS & Co. actively worked with Sunbeam personnel to manipulate Sunbeam's finances to make it appear that Sunbeam had successfully rebounded from poor performance; to conceal and misrepresent Sunbeam's true financial condition to entice a potential purchaser or investor; and to provide CPH, both through MS & Co. and by materials it scripted for Sunbeam, false and inaccurate financial information to persuade

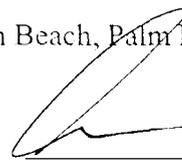

CPH to agree to, then consummate, a merger with Sunbeam.

It is unclear to the Court how, if at all, the two claims differ. However, if MS & Co. were found liable based on allegations of its participation with Sunbeam personnel in an elaborate fraud, then it would be liable for the entire fraud. See Hoch v. Rissman, Weisberg, Barrett, 742 So. 2d 451 (Fla. 5th DCA 1999), rev. den. 760 So. 2d 948 (Fla. 2000); Ford v. Rowland, 562 So. 2d 731 (Fla. 5th DCA 1990), rev. den. 574 So. 2d 141 (1990); Nicholson v. Kellin, 481 So. 2d 931 (Fla. 5th DCA 1985). Further, MS & Co. could be liable for Sunbeam's actions prior to its retention if it joined with Sunbeam to perpetuate a fraud with knowledge of its general purpose and scope. See James v. Nationsbank Trust Co. (Florida), N.A., 639 So. 2d 1031 (Fla. 5th DCA 1994). The fraud alleged is largely Florida based, and the location of its ultimate victim incidental. Florida has a strong public policy in favor of protecting the recipients of fraudulent misrepresentations. Besset. That policy is more clearly implicated if CPH is able to prove that MS & Co. was an actor in a Florida-based fraud. The allegations of conspiracy are disputed, precluding summary judgment at this juncture on the choice of law issue.

Based on the foregoing, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.'s Motion for Application of New York Law is Granted, in part. As to Counts I and IV of CPH's Complaint and MSSF's claims against MAFCO and CPH, the Court determines that New York substantive law applies (i) to engraft a requirement that the recipient of a negligent misrepresentation be in a special relationship to its publisher for the misrepresentation to be actionable, and (ii) to engraft a requirement that a party perform reasonable due diligence as to available information in order to prove that its reliance on a misrepresentation was reasonable.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, West Palm
4 Beach, Florida, on Friday, August 13, 2004, starting
5 at 8:00 a.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted,
6 to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

9 MR. BEMIS: Good morning.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your Honor.

11 MR. IANNO: Good morning, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Maybe we can take care of a
13 couple of administrative matters first.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We have an agreed suggested
15 order if you'd like us to share that with you.

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We thought that we might first
18 take up the issue of the trial date. Flowing from

19 that will be a discussion of related deadlines as 20 to which there is only one dispute, and that is 21 the deadline for the amendment of pleadings.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Following that, both the motion
24 for clarification -- I'm sorry, there's a minor
25 issue with regard to the supplementation of

1 interrogatories --

2 THE COURT: Right.

3 MR. SCAROLA: -- that would be the third
4 matter to take up.

5 MR. BEMIS: Basically, get the merits issues
6 behind us.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Those would be the merits
8 issues. And then we would deal with the issues
9 relating to the motion to contempt, including the
10 related issues of clarification of the motion to
11 dismiss, and then finally, the discovery that
12 arises from that, assuming that the motion to
13 dismiss is not granted.

14 THE COURT: I'm happy to do it in that order.
15 The only question I would have is that what I am

16 going to do is treat the defendant's motion to
17 strike the motion for contempt as including a
18 motion for rehearing on the December order dealing
19 with the settlement agreement, and I do want to 20 rehear that. And the reason is, I've been very
21 straightforward with you guys from the beginning,
22 I am a strong proponent that if you choose to
23 litigate in a public forum, things are public
24 unless there's a compelling reason to keep them
25 private.

1 The reason the redacted version of the
2 settlement agreement was made confidential was
3 because that's what the parties agreed to. On
4 reflection, I'm not sure that's sufficient to
5 override the public policy reasons for having it
6 be public. And to the extent that we're now
7 fighting over, you know, was it a clerical error
8 of whether or not even the redacted version should
9 have been sealed, to me, that's immaterial if it
10 should have been public in any event, and I would
11 prefer to go back and reconsider that order.

12 There are obviously a lot of implications

16div-006181

13 that flow from what happens with that order. And
14 the reason I'm bringing that up now is, I don't
15 know that I want to do the non-merits issues today
16 until we have a chance to go back, and I want to 17 do the rehearing quickly on that, because this is
18 an important issue, but really, the reason I'm 19 bringing this up now is if I were to grant the 20 motion for rehearing and remove the
21 confidentiality provision on the settlement
22 agreement -- and really, quite honestly, I think
23 we need to go back and look at the underlying
24 confidentiality order, because it strikes me, to
25 the extent that was agreed to, it's essentially a

1 contract between the parties, and I need to go
2 back and look at it in light of Florida's public
3 policy in favor of open litigation. And I am
4 concerned that so many items in this case are
5 being filed under seal.

6 If that happens, is that going to affect the
7 trial date, because all of a sudden, all this time
8 and resources that we've been devoting to the
9 motion for contempt aren't needed anymore, and I'm

16div-006182

10 wondering if we can go back to the January trial
11 setting.

12 So the only reason I'm bringing it up now is,
13 you know, I'm happy to do all the resetting now
14 and talk about a March date, but I don't know if 15 we're going to get to this within a week or two if
16 it makes more sense to address all this as a
17 package when we know exactly where we're going.

18 MR. BEMIS: My initial response is that no
19 matter what Your Honor would do today with the
20 contempt proceeding, we're still behind by virtue
21 of already having spent the period from March
22 until --

23 THE COURT: I understand that, but even when
24 we were talking about moving the date to March,
25 that was assuming we were going to have

1 substantial resources devoted to the contempt, and
2 if that's not going to happen, I think we need to
3 go back and re-think that March date, because that
4 March date assumed in it a block of time that we
5 may not now need to devote.

6 MR. BEMIS: Well, we're going to have a real

7 problem. Our discovery cutoff would be like in
8 two weeks.

9 THE COURT: Well, those are things we'll have
10 to sit and do, but if we're not going to have the
11 contempt anymore, we need to go back and really
12 look at the pieces of the puzzle again to figure
13 out what the timing is.

14 MR. BEMIS: We have prepared an electronic
15 document that would allow the Court to see all the
16 calendar scheduling based on whatever date we plug
17 in. We can put in one date and generate a
18 calendar automatically for the Court. If you want
19 to tackle that issue now, it will take us a few
20 minutes and we can give you a suggested date.

21 THE COURT: The only thing is, I don't know
22 that it makes sense until we know what's happening
23 with the contempt.

24 MR. BEMIS: Well, then you want to proceed
25 with the contempt first, is that your suggestion?

1 THE COURT: No, because if I'm going to treat
2 it as a motion for rehearing, I think it's unfair
3 to plaintiffs to have them argue it now.

16div-006184

4 MR. SCAROLA: We may be prepared to argue it
5 now. I'd like just a moment --

6 THE COURT: Sure.

7 MR. SCAROLA: -- to consider that with
8 co-counsel. But let me share my initial reaction
9 with the Court, and that is, the Court may
10 determine that there is no current compelling
11 reason to maintain the confidentiality of the 12 settlement agreement. Even if the Court were to
13 make that determination that there is currently no
14 compelling reason to maintain the confidentiality
15 of the settlement agreement, that does not dispose
16 of the issue of the violation of the order that
17 was then in existence.

18 THE COURT: I understand that argument and it
19 is something I've thought about, but then I think
20 we start talking about the difference between a
21 civil contempt and a criminal contempt, and nobody
22 has ever attempted to characterize what's alleged
23 as a criminal contempt. If it's a civil contempt
24 and all I'm trying to do is coerce their behavior,
25 if it's in the public domain, it becomes sort of

1 so what.

2 MR. SCAROLA: Well, respectfully, Your Honor,
3 there are two potential remedies that attach to a
4 civil contempt. Not only does the Court have an
5 opportunity to and an obligation to consider what
6 sanction is necessary in order to compel future
7 compliance, but civil contempt also allows for
8 compensatory damages. And in this case where our
9 allegation is that as a consequence of the 10 violation, litigation was initiated for the
11 specific purpose of imposing a financial
12 obligation on us that has cost us a significant
13 amount of money already and continues to cost us
14 money and expose us to future liability, there is
15 a substantial compensatory component to a sanction
16 that would attach to the violation of that order.

17 So independent of any criminal sanction
18 concerns, any criminal contempt concerns, in the
19 context strictly of a civil contempt, the law is
20 very clear that the Court has the opportunity to 21 consider compensatory sanctions, and we would
22 certainly be asking the Court to consider
23 compensatory sanctions even if there were no
24 prospective interests to protect.

25 The second point is that the purpose of a

1 civil contempt sanction in terms of compelling
2 future compliance is not limited to that
3 particular order. It is for the purpose of
4 compelling compliance with the Court's orders,
5 period. So the imposition of a coercive sanction
6 is not strictly limited to that sole order, but to
7 compel respect for the Court's orders in general.
8 So the Court could still, even if there were no
9 prospective prospect of violation of that
10 particular order, impose a sanction to assure that 11 due respect was given to future orders of the 12 Court.

13 THE COURT: I understand that, and that's
14 something certainly we can talk about if we go
15 back and -- or when we go back and reconsider the 16 December order and how that segues into your
17 motion to strike.

18 And it's what I've said before, at some point
19 I get concerned that this case is going to get
20 derailed on a tangent. If truly Morgan Stanley &
21 Company has no claim, presumably, eventually
22 they'll be awarded 57.105 fees and eventually your
23 client will be reimbursed for the money it put 24 forward for the defense of the litigation, and at

1 that that case will be properly determined and
2 that issue will be fully vetted in that case
3 versus injecting that whole issue into this case
4 and the affect it has on the underlying
5 litigation, which is serious litigation. I mean,
6 we need to -- I mean, as I go through this stuff
7 and I look at the things that need to be done, you
8 know, it's a substantial case, and I hate to see
9 our attention diverted.

10 And as an aside, I apologize, I forgot, I did
11 finally enter the order on the conflicts of laws
12 issue. You probably haven't gotten it yet.

13 MR. SCAROLA: We did not.

14 THE COURT: If you want, we can have copies
15 run. My secretary had to take some stuff to her
16 car. It went out on Wednesday.

17 MR. BEMIS: We're prepared to argue what you
18 wish argued.

19 THE COURT: I just don't know. I mean,
20 again, this is something I understand that you
21 guys didn't know that I thought we needed to go

22 back and readdress, so it really is --
23 Do you want to take a moment?
24 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. Yes, Your Honor.
25 THE COURT: We can do that or --

12

1 MR. SCAROLA: We'd just like to consider
2 that. Maybe --
3 THE COURT: I'm happy also to get the book
4 and see how quickly we can set a hearing just on
5 this issue, because I think this is sort of a
6 threshold issue we need to reach.
7 MR. BEMIS: I think we did brief the issue.
8 THE COURT: You did. You did some.
9 MR. BEMIS: It's articulated different.
10 THE COURT: I don't know that I saw -- I did
11 see a response from plaintiff to that argument, I
12 just didn't know if it was as fully as you would
13 have briefed it if you had known I was going to go
14 back and look at it.
15 MR. BEMIS: Our position on it was laid out
16 in two sets of papers, and I think the first is 17 that the order in itself is not inconsistent, and 18 in any event, if there is some confusion --

16div-006189

19 THE COURT: Well, I understand your position.
20 MR. BEMIS: -- it should be confidential.
21 THE COURT: You're telling me you're
22 prepared.
23 MR. BEMIS: I'm prepared.
24 THE COURT: I'm going to let plaintiffs
25 decide if they're prepared.

13

1 MR. SCAROLA: If we could just have a couple
2 of minutes then, Your Honor.
3 THE COURT: Sure. You want me to take a
4 break and you guys can talk in private?
5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, fine.
6 THE COURT: Okay.
7 (Recess taken from 8:11 a.m. to 8:24 a.m.)
8 THE COURT: Okay. What did you decide?
9 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are going to
10 request some additional time to submit --
11 THE COURT: That's fine.
12 MR. SCAROLA: -- a written response to the 13 Court's concerns.
14 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor --
15 MR. SCAROLA: We --

16div-006190

16 MR. BEMIS: I'm sorry.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We would like until a week from 18 today. We have time set before Your Honor on the 19 27th of August.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: And while we would like to be
22 able to come back prior to the 27th, I'm scheduled
23 to be in Honduras taking depositions for eight or
24 nine days beginning on Sunday, so as a practical
25 matter, I don't know that we'd be able to get back

14

1 much before the 27th of August.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. SCAROLA: In light of that, we would
4 request --

5 THE COURT: Do we have two hours set then?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I think we do.

7 MR. CLARE: Yes, eight to ten.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Yeah. That's fine.

10 What I will do then is an order that treats
11 the motion to strike as including a motion for 12 rehearing. If we're going to go back and look at

16div-006191

13 this, I do want to go back and have us look at the 14 underlying confidentiality order as well, because 15 sort of the public policy implications are the 16 same.

17 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: It was the 27th, right?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay. So what I'm going to do is
21 specially set a hearing on the -- I'm going to do
22 an order that treats your motion to strike as a
23 motion for rehearing, grant the motion for
24 rehearing, put the rehearing on the 27th together
25 with a hearing I'm setting on my own accord to go

15

1 back and reconsider the underlying confidentiality
2 order, because I think we need to go back and look
3 at that again as well.

4 And contrary to our prior modification of
5 when we need things for the case management
6 conferences, filings for those two issues, I just
7 need them the week ahead of time, and you guys
8 each give me what you want.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Simultaneous exchange on

10 Friday?

11 THE COURT: Yeah.

12 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor. I
13 appreciate that.

14 THE COURT: Where do we want to go next then?

15 MR. SCAROLA: I think, Your Honor, that there
16 are only two matters that we can address in light
17 of the procedures that have been outlined, and the 18 first of those is the issue with regard to
19 deadline for filing motions to amend.

20 THE COURT: Right. One other thing, I'm
21 sorry, before we leave. We had talked about this
22 earlier in the week.

23 MR. IANNO: Right. And I was going to bring
24 that up as soon as Mr. Scarola finished. One
25 other thing we need to address is what we're doing

16

1 with the in camera submissions pursuant to the
2 existing court orders and the amended responses to
3 interrogatories that are coming due.

4 THE COURT: I would rather stay discovery on
5 the contempt issue until we resolve this and let
6 you guys spend two weeks doing merits stuff.

16div-006193

7 MR. IANNO: That's what we would suggest,
8 Your Honor.

9 MR. BEMIS: That was going to be our
10 suggestion.

11 MR. SCAROLA: While that ordinarily would not
12 have practical implications that we couldn't live
13 with, there has been a petition for certiorari
14 filed with regard to rulings concerning the
15 contempt matter that is currently pending.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: And if Your Honor were to
18 conduct an in camera inspection and were to find
19 that none of the materials that have been
20 proffered to the Court for in camera inspection
21 are obliged to be turned over for whatever reason,
22 those issues are mooted and we no longer need to
23 worry about the potential of having to address a
24 petition for certiorari.

25 THE COURT: Sure. But if they could do an

17

1 order to show cause, you know, that's going to
2 take them a couple weeks probably to look at at a
3 minimum.

4 MR. SCAROLA: I don't --

5 THE COURT: In all honesty, I mean, we can
6 come back -- If they do an order to show cause and
7 you're concerned that now you're spending time
8 responding to the writ of certiorari where it may 9 be mooted if I did the in camera inspection, we
10 can talk about it then, but I don't think it makes 11 sense to devote time to this until we settle this
12 issue.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Could we at least make some
14 determination as to whether there is a significant
15 amount of time involved? I understand that there
16 are very few -- that what Your Honor would need to
17 review in camera is a very limited inspection.

18 THE COURT: Do you have it now?

19 MR. IANNO: The in camera?

20 THE COURT: Yeah.

21 MR. IANNO: The one that was due on the 2nd,
22 I don't have it with me. I had it with me on 23 Tuesday. I was due to have it back to the Court
24 by five.

25 THE COURT: No, I know. I'm just wondering.

1 MR. IANNO: That one is completed, Your
2 Honor. That one is done. The rest of them; the
3 amendment to the interrogatories, the
4 non-privileged, I believe, Mr. Clare can correct
5 me, and the privileged information, those haven't
6 been completed yet. They're not due.

7 THE COURT: So is there any reason why I
8 couldn't at least look at the in camera inspection
9 on the one?

10 MR. IANNO: There's no reason you shouldn't,
11 Judge, but it does reveal attorney/client and work
12 product privilege and information that I don't
13 know if the Court really needs to look at if this
14 whole contempt issue goes away.

15 We have it prepared. I represented to the
16 Court on Tuesday that if you wanted it, we have
17 it, and I'll leave it to your discretion, but I
18 really think it's a tangential issue that the
19 Court doesn't need to review.

20 MR. SCAROLA: And my response is that it
21 would be a tangential issue with no particular
22 time pressures between now and August 27th but for
23 the petition for certiorari.

24 THE COURT: That's fine. I mean, what I'll
25 do is go ahead and look at that. I can't

1 represent that I'll have done an in camera
2 inspection before we come back. I have one in
3 front of you guys, and I'm in trial, but I'll do
4 my best and see.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: I mean, if it's already prepared,
7 I guess --

8 MR. BEMIS: It's prepared, Your Honor. May I
9 speak?

10 THE COURT: No, Mr. Bemis. Yes, you may
11 speak. Go ahead.

12 MR. BEMIS: I would respectfully request that
13 you not look at it until you make a decision. I
14 am concerned, and it's in the petition for writ of
15 certiorari that the matters that are in there go
16 to the core nature of a lawyer's representation of 17 his client, what he tells his client, what he
18 thinks, and it is highly unusual -- and I
19 understand that the Court frequently does in
20 camera inspections, this is not unusual in that
21 sense; however, the order that you entered in this
22 case, which I respect entirely, I am not here to
23 re-argue that, it does raise some very, very 24 serious issues about attorney/client privilege and

1 those pandora's boxes, you know about it, and I'm
2 concerned that it never goes away once you've
3 opened it.

4 I'm not concerned about what you're going to
5 ultimately read about what was said, but it allows
6 you to begin to understand what our strategies are
7 and thinking of the case, which normally you would
8 never be privy to. And given that we only have
9 two more weeks before this issue is likely going
10 to come to a head, and we've done the work as you
11 ordered, I respectfully request that you hold on
12 to the document or allow us to hold it and open it
13 at the moment you make a decision that you think
14 is appropriate based on the developments either at
15 the hearing or the Court of Appeals, how that
16 resolves itself.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, just a reminder
18 that this discovery does not relate to this
19 lawsuit. It relates to a case that's not even 20 pending before Your Honor. It relates to the 21 Andersen claim.

22 MR. BEMIS: All the more reason to wait.
23 THE COURT: Hold on.
24 MR. BEMIS: Excuse me. I'm sorry,
25 Mr. Scarola.

21

1 MR. SCAROLA: And any concern that Your Honor
2 might be influenced by learning what the strategy
3 was in the Andersen case obviously can have no
4 practical impact on this matter.

5 What does have a very clear practical impact
6 on this matter is that there's a petition for writ
7 of certiorari which may become moot if Your Honor
8 agrees that this is all privileged information
9 that should not be disclosed. In that case,
10 there's nothing for the appellate court to concern
11 itself about and there's nothing for us to be
12 addressing and responding to a writ if a writ
13 issues, and that's something that we ought to 14 know.

15 MR. BEMIS: May I address that briefly?

16 THE COURT: No. We got to stop at some
17 point.

18 MR. BEMIS: Okay. Would Your Honor like a

16div-006199

19 copy of the petition for your own reading for any
20 reason? We have it.

21 THE COURT: That's okay.

22 MR. BEMIS: All right.

23 THE COURT: Okay. Let me take that under
24 advisement. I want to think about it a little bit 25 more.

22

1 Where do we want to go next?

2 MR. IANNO: Judge, the other orders, this one
3 relates to the in camera submission that was due
4 August 2nd, is there any objection to staying the
5 other discovery that is subject to the July 28th
6 order?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Which is due when?

8 MR. IANNO: Next week.

9 MR. BEMIS: We had two interrogatories we
10 needed to supplement based on the hearing last
11 time which are part of the ones that are under 12 consideration. We suggest that that be stayed and
13 taken as a parcel based on whatever ruling you
14 enter; otherwise, we're going to be doing this --

15 THE COURT: I understand.

16div-006200

16 MR. IANNO: We had I think only four
17 interrogatories, and we still had the rest of that
18 one set to go through, but the Court had entered
19 that partial order on the part we got through.

20 THE COURT: Right.

21 In all honesty, it makes sense to me that
22 that gets stayed. I want to go back and
23 reconsider whether we're going to be proceeding
24 down the contempt road or not.

25 Where do we go next?

23

1 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the two remaining
2 matters have to do with the deadline for filing
3 amendment to pleadings.

4 THE COURT: Yes.

5 MR. SCAROLA: That deadline was August 5th
6 pursuant to the original trial order entered by
7 Your Honor. When Your Honor indicated an
8 intention to move the case from its present trial
9 setting, there was a general agreement that all of 10 the deadlines would be pushed back, but there is 11 concern about amendments to pleadings, and we
12 request that the deadline for amendment to

13 pleadings be maintained at no later than August
14 20th.

15 Clearly, the parties have had ample time to
16 make a determination as to whether any amendments
17 are to be made. Because there is certainly a
18 possibility of a significantly-earlier trial date
19 than the spring trial date that was being
20 discussed, even as early as --

21 THE COURT: So I'm clear, the court order
22 now, is the date August 5th?

23 MR. SOLOVY: 6th.

24 THE COURT: The 6th? So it's passed.

25 MR. SCAROLA: It's passed, that's correct.

24

1 And there was a tacit agreement between the
2 parties that we would address that issue at this
3 hearing.

4 I think they want that date tied into
5 whatever the future trial date is in the same
6 manner in which it was tied in initially to the
7 January trial date.

8 Our position is that there is no reason for
9 further delay. And particularly now that the

10 Court has expressed an intention of moving the 11 trial back up, it's very important to us that any
12 amendments to pleadings be made promptly so that
13 the motion should be filed no later than August
14 20th.

15 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I'm not going to --

16 THE COURT: Let me ask you a practical
17 question. I assume as you stand here, you have no
18 to intention to amend your pleadings? Because 19 otherwise, you would have come in on some sort of 20 motion.

21 MR. BEMIS: Actually, Your Honor, the answer
22 is, we do have an attention to do some amendment
23 to the pleading, and the reason we didn't have a
24 motion was because you told us at the last hearing
25 you were going to move the trial date and we

25

1 reached an agreement we would address this today
2 in the context of --

3 THE COURT: But again, the question I'm
4 really asking is what information would you expect
5 to get between now and, you know, September,
6 whatever it is you want to move it to, that would

7 allow you to -- that would affect how you chose to
8 amend your pleadings, or wouldn't you have
9 sufficient information now if you're going to
10 amend to go ahead and amend?

11 MR. BEMIS: Well, there are two issue in
12 response to that. In direct response to your
13 question, I think the answer is that we don't know
14 that, because we still have so many depositions we
15 wish to complete. Number two, there are some 16 issues with regard to what would be in the
17 amendments that involve issues that are related to
18 matters I've already brought to the attention of
19 the Court as to how those matters can be pursued.
20 And I'm afraid if I say anything further, I'm
21 going to be accused of waiving the attorney/client
22 or the work product privilege. I don't know how
23 to be more explicit than that without telling you
24 directly what I want to do or what my client
25 thinks may have to be done.

26

1 THE COURT: But what you're telling me then
2 is you think you have sufficient information now
3 to file the motion to amend?

16div-006204

4 MR. BEMIS: I'm not sure that we do. We are
5 still in the process of taking some very, very key
6 depositions, and we knew we were not going to
7 complete those.

8 Our thought is that we simply have the
9 spacing on the amendment that we had -- whatever
10 trial date you pick, we just pick the same
11 spacing. And when I say "spacing," under the 12 order that was entered last time, the parties had
13 agreed that the amendment would be 165 days before
14 trial. That was the spacing we selected. And
15 we're suggesting, you pick a trial date based upon
16 Your Honor's judgment when we're supposed to be
17 ready, and that same spacing would apply to the 18 amendments. We'll go back 165 days, which would
19 tie all of the dates together to the same
20 reasoning we applied in March when we negotiated a
21 schedule.

22 THE COURT: Well, the only sort of flaw I see
23 in that is if we go back to a January trial date,
24 we're beyond the date.

25 MR. BEMIS: Well, if you were to go back to a

1 January trial date, which would just -- that is
2 going to be a real problem in terms of scheduling,
3 because discovery is going to close in like two
4 weeks, and we're not even close to being done. So
5 I don't know what to tell you would be the result
6 of trying to renegotiate a schedule if we had to
7 adjust the spacing that we had put in the original
8 scheduling order.

9 Your Honor may understand, we picked a date,
10 we work backward with all of those --

11 THE COURT: I understand all of that.

12 MR. BEMIS: And all we've done is said, you
13 pick a date and we can space those dates
14 automatically on the calculation formula, just go
15 back and give us the new dates.

16 THE COURT: It strikes me that we probably --
17 this is the kind of thing that needs to be
18 compromised in the middle. I understand
19 plaintiff's position that discovery has been
20 proceeding, it doesn't make sense to continue --
21 you know, the extent of the trial date was moved
22 back to accommodate some other things, it doesn't
23 make sense to continue to tie the date for
24 amendment to the trial date.

25 MR. SOLOVY: May I take a leave from

1 Mr. Bemis and may I say something, Your Honor?

2 THE COURT: Yes, you may, sir.

3 MR. SOLOVY: This is very counterproductive,
4 because this has been going on a long time. If we
5 proceed with discovery and then Mr. Bemis brings a
6 new claim at the last minute, then all that
7 discovery, you know, we're going to see, oh, Your
8 Honor, this is new, we need more time.

9 We want a trial date. They know as they
10 stand here what they want to amend, and they ought
11 to amend it, and we ought to be about our
12 business, as Your Honor said.

13 You know, a January trial date, if you're 14 going to review the contempt and there's a
15 possibility of a January trial date, let's stick
16 to it, and we're ready to file our pleading, which
17 is only to seek leave to amend the Complaint to
18 ask for punitive damages, I'll tell the Court that 19 as we stand here. They know what they're going to 20 do. And if there's going to be a January trial
21 date, they have the resources, we have the
22 resources, but if we shilly-shally around and two
23 months from now, you know -- It's all backwards,
24 Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: No, I understand that concern.

29

1 What's the response?

2 MR. BEMIS: We need the additional -- We need
3 to resolve the contempt motion before we amend the
4 pleading is our position.

5 THE COURT: You need to what?

6 MR. BEMIS: We need to resolve the contempt
7 proceeding and the related issue as to the
8 admission of Kellogg Huber before we file an
9 amended pleading.

10 THE COURT: I understand your reluctance to
11 disclose your process to me, but I can tell you,
12 the reasoning behind that is not readily apparent
13 to me.

14 MR. BEMIS: Well, I'm afraid to say anything
15 else at this point.

16 THE COURT: I understand that to be your
17 position.

18 MR. SCAROLA: May I approach the bench, Your
19 Honor?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MR. SCAROLA: This is just a blank order on

16div-006208

22 that issue with envelopes. I have provided
23 opposing counsel with a copy of that order.
24 THE COURT: Okay. What I did was grant it in
25 part. Motions for leave to amend pleadings need

30

1 to be served by September 7th. That's the day
2 after Labor Day.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the last remaining
6 issue has to do with supplementing interrogatory
7 responses.

8 THE COURT: We're fighting over the language?

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're fighting over five words
10 I think, Your Honor.

11 MR. IANNO: Well, it's not five words. It's
12 more of the theory behind the words, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Can you enlighten me
14 though what you think -- Give me an example of a
15 fact pattern that would be a distinction between
16 what each of you was proposing.

17 MR. IANNO: Sure. This has to relate,
18 obviously, back to the motion for contempt,

16div-006209

19 because what Mr. Scarola wants is an order from
20 this Court requiring us to provide, quote,
21 complete and accurate answers to the
22 interrogatories as opposed to answers in
23 accordance with the Rules of Civil Procedure.

24 THE COURT: What's the difference?

25 MR. IANNO: The difference is, Mr. Scarola's

31

1 interpretation of the word complete and accurate
2 may be totally different than what the Court or
3 counsel -- And here's two examples.

4 Complete answer to interrogatory, I met with
5 so-and-so on May 23rd. Mr. Scarola's version of
6 complete may be I met with so-and-so at 8:10 p.m.
7 at a specific location on May 23rd. And all of a
8 sudden, I'm complete as far as the Rules of Civil
9 Procedure go, because I've answered I met with
10 so-and-so on a date, but Mr. Scarola's
11 interpretation of the word complete may be you
12 have to put the time, the date, the location. And
13 that's my concern, Your Honor, is that those words
14 complete and accurate don't appear in the Rules of 15 Civil Procedure. The Rules of Civil Procedure say

16div-006210

16 you answer to the best of your ability, as I
17 understand them.

18 With regard to accurate, what happens if we
19 answer an interrogatory that says the light was
20 red and the evidence that comes out at trial says
21 and the jury finds the light was green. Was our
22 answer to interrogatory inaccurate that subjects
23 us to a contempt because we've now violated a
24 court order to provide accurate information in
25 response to an interrogatory?

32

1 And this is all coming about because of the
2 motion for contempt. I'm afraid that the
3 interpretation Mr. Scarola puts on whatever court
4 order is entered here is going to be different
5 than what we interpret the Court or an Appellate
6 Court may interpret.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Let me -- And I apologize,
8 let me back up a moment. What number is this
9 motion? I know I read it, but I can't find it.

10 MR. IANNO: It is number six.

11 THE COURT: Six.

12 MR. IANNO: And the background on it, Your

16div-006211

13 Honor, is they filed a motion, and we had gone
14 back and forth and thought we had an agreement on
15 a stipulation on doing it, and then --

16 THE COURT: Right. Now you guys -- I think
17 what you're acknowledging is that you've
18 stipulated that you'll do updated answers to
19 interrogatories, we're just fighting over the
20 words to go in the order.

21 MR. IANNO: Our position is we supplement in
22 accordance with the Rules of Civil Procedure.

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's wrong with that?

24 MR. SCAROLA: What's wrong with it is that it
25 creates an inherent ambiguity in the order,

33

1 because the Rules of Civil Procedure require no
2 supplement.

3 THE COURT: Well, why don't we say the rules
4 excluding the provision requiring that you don't
5 supplement?

6 MR. SCAROLA: You know, obviously we could do
7 that, Your Honor, but let me remind the Court that
8 when we began to address this issue at the July
9 23rd hearing, Your Honor said, quote,

10 interrogatory answers should be complete and
11 truthful, and you said that's what you expect,
12 that's what you would believe that all
13 interrogatory answers -- that's the standard that
14 you would believe all interrogatory answers would
15 meet. And whether it is expressly stated in the 16 rules or it is there by implication, it is clear
17 that the rules require complete and truthful
18 and/or accurate responses.

19 The concern about our using that language as
20 a basis for a motion for contempt is absolutely
21 illusory, because we all know that contempt
22 requires an intentional violation of the court
23 order. If Mr. Ianno believes in good faith that
24 the response that he is giving is an accurate
25 response as of the time it's filed and a jury

34

1 decides otherwise at a later time, there's no way
2 that that could form the basis for a contempt.

3 My concern is that by the very act of
4 contesting the obligation to provide accurate and
5 complete responses, the message is being conveyed
6 that there's an intent in advance to do something

7 other than that, and there ought to be no intent
8 to do something other than that. We ought to be
9 able to rely upon the supplements as being
10 complete and accurate as of the time that they are 11 filed. And this is a very real concern on our 12 part in light of qualifications that have been
13 included in virtually every interrogatory response
14 that we have received.

15 Have we found that? Okay.

16 I can't pull out the exact language right
17 now, but if it's necessary, I can provide that to
18 Your Honor, but I will represent to the Court that
19 almost every interrogatory -- in fact, I think
20 every interrogatory response we have received has
21 said that discovery is ongoing, you should not
22 consider that these responses are complete and
23 accurate, you cannot rely upon the completeness
24 and accuracy of these responses as of this time,
25 and there needs to come a point in time when

35

1 discovery ends and they're willing to stand behind
2 the responses that they are giving as the most
3 complete and most accurate information that they

4 have as of that date. We're entitled to be able
5 to rely upon interrogatory answers at some point
6 in time as giving us everything they know in the
7 most accurate form in which they know it. That's
8 all we're asking for.

9 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

10 Is it sufficient if we say -- I'll have to
11 think about the words we use -- that the answer,
12 supplemental answer, needs to comply with the rule
13 as if the interrogatory itself had been
14 promulgated on the date of the supplemental
15 answer?

16 MR. IANNO: That's what we're saying. That's
17 what we said, Judge. And I'm personally offended
18 by Mr. Scarola's argument that there's any intent
19 here, but the point is, our only obligation as 20 officers of the court is to comply with the Rules
21 of Civil Procedure.

22 THE COURT: But does that get us where we
23 need to go? If the answer has to be in compliance
24 with the rule as if the interrogatory had been
25 promulgated as of the date of the supplemental

1 answer?

2 MR. IANNO: That's never been the issue.

3 MR. SCAROLA: In light of the Court's express
4 statement that this Court believes that the rules
5 require complete and truthful responses, we're
6 satisfied with that.

7 THE COURT: Okay. So you gave me an order,
8 correct, Mr. Scarola?

9 MR. SCAROLA: I did provide you with an
10 order, Your Honor. It includes my language.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Well, we'll just...

12 Paragraph 2 and 3 are okay. It's just
13 paragraph 1, I assume.

14 Did you share a copy of this with Mr. Ianno?

15 MR. IANNO: Yes.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 Okay. So paragraph 1 would then read all
19 parties shall supplement and update their
20 interrogatory responses with answers in compliance
21 with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure as if
22 the interrogatory had been promulgated as of the 23 date the supplemental answers are served prior to
24 the date of close of fact discovery.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: I already got two sets.

3 MR. IANNO: I don't know if you're rendering
4 other orders as well on your own.

5 THE COURT: Yes.

6 MR. IANNO: So just in case you need them.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

8 One last thing.

9 MR. IANNO: Judge, while you're doing that,
10 if I may inquire. You took under advisement the 11 in camera submission that's due at 5:00. Should I
12 call the Court's JA to see if we're supposed to do
13 that at five or not?

14 THE COURT: Yeah. Well, she generally leaves
15 at 4:30, but I don't know if she's going to leave
16 early today because of --

17 MR. IANNO: The situation.

18 THE COURT: Yeah. But you can try to call
19 her right after lunch.

20 MR. IANNO: Okay. And if we don't get a hold
21 of her, do we want to agree on Monday? I mean,
22 this is purely a logistical question, Your Honor.
23 If you want it when we get it over here, if you
24 don't want it, do we get it over here anyway?

1 THE COURT: Well, I think then you get it
2 over here, and if I decided you didn't have to get
3 it over, I'll just send it back.

4 MR. BEMIS: Okay. Just send it over.

5 MR. IANNO: That's fine. We'll get it over
6 to the Court.

7 THE COURT: I'm looking for the date, and I
8 apologize, but I need to reset the date for the
9 case management conference, because I realize it
10 was set on a date I'm out of the office.

11 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the August
12 27th case management conference?

13 THE COURT: No. I'm here. I think it's in
14 October.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

16 THE BAILIFF: The 18th through the 29th,
17 that's the days you're out.

18 THE COURT: No, I know when I'm out. I'm
19 trying to figure out which day it was we had a
20 conference.

21 MR. CLARE: The 15th is the date.

22 MR. IANNO: October 15th.
23 THE COURT: When is the September one? I
24 know it's not August.
25 MR. SOLOVY: September 23, Your Honor.

39

1 THE COURT: That's the next one after August?
2 MR. SOLOVY: Yes.
3 THE COURT: Okay. That's not an issue. The
4 next one after that is October 15th?
5 MR. IANNO: Yes.
6 THE COURT: Yeah, that's the one I need to
7 reset.
8 We could do it the day before.
9 MR. BEMIS: What day of the week is that,
10 Your Honor?
11 THE COURT: That's a Thursday.
12 MR. SOLOVY: That's fine with us, Your Honor.
13 THE COURT: Is that okay?
14 MR. SOLOVY: Yes.
15 THE COURT: Can we do it -- Do you want to do
16 it at 8:00 that day and I'll just suspend uniform
17 motion calendar, do it eight to ten?
18 MR. BEMIS: Eight to ten?

16div-006219

19 THE COURT: Is that fine or not?
20 MR. BEMIS: No, we're here.
21 THE COURT: I'm looking at that face.
22 MR. BEMIS: We're up anyway.
23 MR. IANNO: It's not a problem.
24 THE COURT: Why don't we move it to eight to
25 ten on the 14th instead of the 15th. And I

40

1 apologize.
2 MR. BEMIS: That's all right.
3 THE COURT: Okay. Anything else?
4 MR. SCAROLA: May I make a suggestion?
5 THE COURT: Yes, sir.
6 MR. SCAROLA: Since nature abhors a vacuum
7 and we have over an hour left and we all arrived
8 here expecting to talk about trial dates, does it
9 make any sense to discuss alternative dates, one
10 date if the contempt motion goes away and another
11 date if the contempt motion stays and get that
12 done now while we've got time to talk about it?
13 THE COURT: Are you-all willing to do that?
14 MR. SCAROLA: We certainly are. We would
15 very much like to do that. We'd like to know how

16div-006220

16 to make alternative plans.

17 THE COURT: Sure. Is that something we can
18 talk about?

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, normally I would say
20 yes. My reluctance to do that is I have to go
21 back -- I've already told people the trial date is
22 been moved to March sometime based on what you
23 said last time; experts, fact witnesses, whatever.
24 I've now got to go back and think about what their
25 schedules are if this thing is going to go forward

41

1 say in February or going to go forward in January,
2 which I still think is going to be impossible
3 given the compression of the schedule and the
4 delays we've already had.

5 I would suggest that I'd be willing to
6 exchange some ideas with Mr. Scarola in the next
7 week. I don't think the setting is going to be a
8 problem once you give us -- you decide the date
9 whether we all agree upon it. The other dates are
10 going to have to be dealt with. I don't know how
11 to resolve like fact discovery dates. I can't 12 tell you right now what my reaction is going to be

13 on this. I don't think I can get it done in 30
14 days.
15 We're just having a difficult time completing
16 the depositions. Every week we run into a problem
17 over this August period with people not being
18 available, and we're flying to New York every
19 week. I got up to New York this week, the
20 deposition didn't go forward. Now, I'm not going
21 to get into why it didn't go forward, but it
22 didn't go forward. We had to cancel it. I had to
23 move it. This person is not available now until 24 September after the Jewish holidays. This kind of 25 problem goes on week after week.

42

1 They had a deposition scheduled, they didn't
2 get a subpoena out last week in time for the
3 deposition, that deposition cancelled. It has to
4 be moved forward. It's just a difficult problem.

5 We've got a witness in Dallas, a key witness,
6 Mr. Uzzi, we're still trying to get the subpoena
7 served on him. We can't. We don't think we're
8 going to get him on Thursday as it stands right
9 now, but we don't know. This case is a bear in

16div-006222

10 terms of getting witnesses into depositions.

11 THE COURT: And, Mr. Scarola, I assume your
12 response is that if we have a trial date, stuff
13 starts getting done?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely, Your Honor. That's
15 my primary response.

16 And my second response is that it will make
17 it much easier for Mr. Bemis to talk to his
18 witnesses about their availability if he knows
19 what date we're targeting. And if we find out
20 today what that date is and he comes back on
21 August 27th and says I've got five experts that
22 can't be here at that time, we can readdress it at
23 that point, but at least we have something
24 tentative to begin to work with.

25 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Originally,

43

1 what was the January start date?

2 MR. BEMIS: January 18th, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: I don't know why we couldn't go
4 back to that.

5 MR. SCAROLA: That's great for us.

6 THE COURT: I can tell you, I looked also

16div-006223

7 at -- because we were talking about March if we do
8 the contempt, and I have to go back and check what
9 my kids' spring vacation is just in case I wasn't
10 going to be here, and that's March 21st to 28th.

11 MR. BEMIS: Yes, that's spring break, Your
12 Honor.

13 THE COURT: I suspect I probably will be
14 here, but I don't know for sure.

15 How many trial days do we need?

16 MR. IANNO: We have like 15 or 16.

17 MR. BEMIS: It's 15 trial days spread over
18 four weeks is what we calculated based on a
19 four-day trial week.

20 And, Your Honor, just moving the trial date,
21 if you go back to the original trial date, we're
22 all now back to a discovery cutoff of September
23 6th. We're not going to make that.

24 MR. IANNO: That implicates the summary
25 judgment, Your Honor, mediation deadlines and all

44

1 these things that, you know, either party files a
2 motion for summary judgment, I haven't taken this
3 deposition yet. And that's the problem with --

16div-006224

4 THE COURT: I'll tell you what I want you to
5 do. I want you to assume that if we don't do the
6 contempt, we're going back to that January 18th
7 date. And when we come back to the next case
8 management conference, if you're still complaining
9 about specific discovery issues or specific things
10 that are delaying the preparation of the trial, we
11 need to be prepared to address those in a very
12 specific fashion, not just sort of the general
13 stuff, oh, they cancelled depositions in New York
14 and I can't get this guy in Texas. You know, we
15 need very -- If there are specific issues, we need
16 to address the specific issues.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

18 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, just to advise you,
19 we cannot complete fact discovery with a January
20 trial date.

21 THE COURT: I understand that that's what
22 you're telling me, and if that's your position,
23 you need to show me very specifically why you
24 cannot; what still needs to be done, what efforts
25 you've made to get that done, why it's not gotten

1 done and when it's going to get done.

2 MR. BEMIS: All right.

3 THE COURT: Okay? And I will see you in two
4 weeks.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

6 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

7 THE COURT: Thanks.

6 to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat.

9 MR. BEMIS: Good morning.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your Honor.

11 MR. IANNO: Good morning, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Maybe we can take care of a
13 couple of administrative matters first.

14 MR. SCAROLA: We have an agreed suggested
15 order if you'd like us to share that with you.

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We thought that we might first
18 take up the issue of the trial date. Flowing from

19 that will be a discussion of related deadlines as
20 to which there is only one dispute, and that is 21 the deadline for the amendment of pleadings.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Following that, both the motion
24 for clarification -- I'm sorry, there's a minor
25 issue with regard to the supplementation of

1 interrogatories --

2 THE COURT: Right.

3 MR. SCAROLA: -- that would be the third
4 matter to take up.

5 MR. BEMIS: Basically, get the merits issues
6 behind us.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Those would be the merits
8 issues. And then we would deal with the issues
9 relating to the motion to contempt, including the
10 related issues of clarification of the motion to
11 dismiss, and then finally, the discovery that
12 arises from that, assuming that the motion to
13 dismiss is not granted.

14 THE COURT: I'm happy to do it in that order.
15 The only question I would have is that what I am

16 going to do is treat the defendant's motion to
17 strike the motion for contempt as including a
18 motion for rehearing on the December order dealing
19 with the settlement agreement, and I do want to 20 rehear that. And the reason is, I've been very
21 straightforward with you guys from the beginning,
22 I am a strong proponent that if you choose to
23 litigate in a public forum, things are public
24 unless there's a compelling reason to keep them
25 private.

1 The reason the redacted version of the
2 settlement agreement was made confidential was
3 because that's what the parties agreed to. On
4 reflection, I'm not sure that's sufficient to
5 override the public policy reasons for having it
6 be public. And to the extent that we're now
7 fighting over, you know, was it a clerical error
8 of whether or not even the redacted version should
9 have been sealed, to me, that's immaterial if it
10 should have been public in any event, and I would
11 prefer to go back and reconsider that order.

12 There are obviously a lot of implications

13 that flow from what happens with that order. And
14 the reason I'm bringing that up now is, I don't
15 know that I want to do the non-merits issues today
16 until we have a chance to go back, and I want to
17 do the rehearing quickly on that, because this is
18 an important issue, but really, the reason I'm 19 bringing this up now is if I were to grant the
20 motion for rehearing and remove the
21 confidentiality provision on the settlement
22 agreement -- and really, quite honestly, I think
23 we need to go back and look at the underlying
24 confidentiality order, because it strikes me, to
25 the extent that was agreed to, it's essentially a

1 contract between the parties, and I need to go
2 back and look at it in light of Florida's public
3 policy in favor of open litigation. And I am
4 concerned that so many items in this case are
5 being filed under seal.

6 If that happens, is that going to affect the
7 trial date, because all of a sudden, all this time
8 and resources that we've been devoting to the
9 motion for contempt aren't needed anymore, and I'm

10 wondering if we can go back to the January trial
11 setting.

12 So the only reason I'm bringing it up now is,
13 you know, I'm happy to do all the resetting now
14 and talk about a March date, but I don't know if
15 we're going to get to this within a week or two if
16 it makes more sense to address all this as a
17 package when we know exactly where we're going.

18 MR. BEMIS: My initial response is that no
19 matter what Your Honor would do today with the
20 contempt proceeding, we're still behind by virtue
21 of already having spent the period from March
22 until --

23 THE COURT: I understand that, but even when
24 we were talking about moving the date to March,
25 that was assuming we were going to have

1 substantial resources devoted to the contempt, and
2 if that's not going to happen, I think we need to
3 go back and re-think that March date, because that
4 March date assumed in it a block of time that we
5 may not now need to devote.

6 MR. BEMIS: Well, we're going to have a real

7 problem. Our discovery cutoff would be like in
8 two weeks.

9 THE COURT: Well, those are things we'll have
10 to sit and do, but if we're not going to have the
11 contempt anymore, we need to go back and really
12 look at the pieces of the puzzle again to figure
13 out what the timing is.

14 MR. BEMIS: We have prepared an electronic
15 document that would allow the Court to see all the
16 calendar scheduling based on whatever date we plug
17 in. We can put in one date and generate a
18 calendar automatically for the Court. If you want
19 to tackle that issue now, it will take us a few
20 minutes and we can give you a suggested date.

21 THE COURT: The only thing is, I don't know
22 that it makes sense until we know what's happening
23 with the contempt.

24 MR. BEMIS: Well, then you want to proceed
25 with the contempt first, is that your suggestion?

8

1 THE COURT: No, because if I'm going to treat
2 it as a motion for rehearing, I think it's unfair
3 to plaintiffs to have them argue it now.

4 MR. SCAROLA: We may be prepared to argue it
5 now. I'd like just a moment --

6 THE COURT: Sure.

7 MR. SCAROLA: -- to consider that with
8 co-counsel. But let me share my initial reaction
9 with the Court, and that is, the Court may
10 determine that there is no current compelling
11 reason to maintain the confidentiality of the 12 settlement agreement. Even if the Court were to
13 make that determination that there is currently no
14 compelling reason to maintain the confidentiality
15 of the settlement agreement, that does not dispose
16 of the issue of the violation of the order that
17 was then in existence.

18 THE COURT: I understand that argument and it
19 is something I've thought about, but then I think
20 we start talking about the difference between a
21 civil contempt and a criminal contempt, and nobody
22 has ever attempted to characterize what's alleged
23 as a criminal contempt. If it's a civil contempt
24 and all I'm trying to do is coerce their behavior,
25 if it's in the public domain, it becomes sort of

1 so what.

2 MR. SCAROLA: Well, respectfully, Your Honor,
3 there are two potential remedies that attach to a
4 civil contempt. Not only does the Court have an
5 opportunity to and an obligation to consider what
6 sanction is necessary in order to compel future
7 compliance, but civil contempt also allows for
8 compensatory damages. And in this case where our
9 allegation is that as a consequence of the
10 violation, litigation was initiated for the
11 specific purpose of imposing a financial
12 obligation on us that has cost us a significant
13 amount of money already and continues to cost us
14 money and expose us to future liability, there is
15 a substantial compensatory component to a sanction
16 that would attach to the violation of that order.

17 So independent of any criminal sanction
18 concerns, any criminal contempt concerns, in the
19 context strictly of a civil contempt, the law is
20 very clear that the Court has the opportunity to
21 consider compensatory sanctions, and we would
22 certainly be asking the Court to consider
23 compensatory sanctions even if there were no
24 prospective interests to protect.

25 The second point is that the purpose of a

1 civil contempt sanction in terms of compelling
2 future compliance is not limited to that
3 particular order. It is for the purpose of
4 compelling compliance with the Court's orders,
5 period. So the imposition of a coercive sanction
6 is not strictly limited to that sole order, but to
7 compel respect for the Court's orders in general.
8 So the Court could still, even if there were no
9 prospective prospect of violation of that
10 particular order, impose a sanction to assure that 11 due respect was given to future orders of the
12 Court.

13 THE COURT: I understand that, and that's
14 something certainly we can talk about if we go
15 back and -- or when we go back and reconsider the
16 December order and how that segues into your
17 motion to strike.

18 And it's what I've said before, at some point
19 I get concerned that this case is going to get
20 derailed on a tangent. If truly Morgan Stanley &
21 Company has no claim, presumably, eventually
22 they'll be awarded 57.105 fees and eventually your
23 client will be reimbursed for the money it put
24 forward for the defense of the litigation, and at

1 that that case will be properly determined and
2 that issue will be fully vetted in that case
3 versus injecting that whole issue into this case
4 and the affect it has on the underlying
5 litigation, which is serious litigation. I mean,
6 we need to -- I mean, as I go through this stuff
7 and I look at the things that need to be done, you
8 know, it's a substantial case, and I hate to see
9 our attention diverted.

10 And as an aside, I apologize, I forgot, I did
11 finally enter the order on the conflicts of laws
12 issue. You probably haven't gotten it yet.

13 MR. SCAROLA: We did not.

14 THE COURT: If you want, we can have copies
15 run. My secretary had to take some stuff to her
16 car. It went out on Wednesday.

17 MR. BEMIS: We're prepared to argue what you
18 wish argued.

19 THE COURT: I just don't know. I mean,
20 again, this is something I understand that you
21 guys didn't know that I thought we needed to go

22 back and readdress, so it really is --

23 Do you want to take a moment?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. Yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: We can do that or --

12

1 MR. SCAROLA: We'd just like to consider

2 that. Maybe --

3 THE COURT: I'm happy also to get the book

4 and see how quickly we can set a hearing just on

5 this issue, because I think this is sort of a

6 threshold issue we need to reach.

7 MR. BEMIS: I think we did brief the issue.

8 THE COURT: You did. You did some.

9 MR. BEMIS: It's articulated different.

10 THE COURT: I don't know that I saw -- I did

11 see a response from plaintiff to that argument, I

12 just didn't know if it was as fully as you would

13 have briefed it if you had known I was going to go

14 back and look at it.

15 MR. BEMIS: Our position on it was laid out

16 in two sets of papers, and I think the first is

17 that the order in itself is not inconsistent, and

18 in any event, if there is some confusion --

19 THE COURT: Well, I understand your position.
20 MR. BEMIS: -- it should be confidential.
21 THE COURT: You're telling me you're
22 prepared.
23 MR. BEMIS: I'm prepared.
24 THE COURT: I'm going to let plaintiffs
25 decide if they're prepared.

13

1 MR. SCAROLA: If we could just have a couple
2 of minutes then, Your Honor.
3 THE COURT: Sure. You want me to take a
4 break and you guys can talk in private?
5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, fine.
6 THE COURT: Okay.
7 (Recess taken from 8:11 a.m. to 8:24 a.m.)
8 THE COURT: Okay. What did you decide?
9 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, we are going to
10 request some additional time to submit --
11 THE COURT: That's fine.
12 MR. SCAROLA: -- a written response to the 13 Court's concerns.
14 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor --
15 MR. SCAROLA: We --

16 MR. BEMIS: I'm sorry.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We would like until a week from 18 today. We have time set before Your Honor on the 19 27th of August.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: And while we would like to be
22 able to come back prior to the 27th, I'm scheduled
23 to be in Honduras taking depositions for eight or
24 nine days beginning on Sunday, so as a practical
25 matter, I don't know that we'd be able to get back

14

1 much before the 27th of August.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. SCAROLA: In light of that, we would
4 request --

5 THE COURT: Do we have two hours set then?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I think we do.

7 MR. CLARE: Yes, eight to ten.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Yeah. That's fine.

10 What I will do then is an order that treats
11 the motion to strike as including a motion for 12 rehearing. If we're going to go back and look at

13 this, I do want to go back and have us look at the 14 underlying confidentiality order as well, because 15 sort of the public policy implications are the 16 same.

17 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: It was the 27th, right?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay. So what I'm going to do is
21 specially set a hearing on the -- I'm going to do
22 an order that treats your motion to strike as a
23 motion for rehearing, grant the motion for
24 rehearing, put the rehearing on the 27th together
25 with a hearing I'm setting on my own accord to go

15

1 back and reconsider the underlying confidentiality
2 order, because I think we need to go back and look
3 at that again as well.

4 And contrary to our prior modification of
5 when we need things for the case management
6 conferences, filings for those two issues, I just
7 need them the week ahead of time, and you guys
8 each give me what you want.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Simultaneous exchange on

10 Friday?

11 THE COURT: Yeah.

12 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor. I
13 appreciate that.

14 THE COURT: Where do we want to go next then?

15 MR. SCAROLA: I think, Your Honor, that there
16 are only two matters that we can address in light
17 of the procedures that have been outlined, and the
18 first of those is the issue with regard to
19 deadline for filing motions to amend.

20 THE COURT: Right. One other thing, I'm
21 sorry, before we leave. We had talked about this
22 earlier in the week.

23 MR. IANNO: Right. And I was going to bring
24 that up as soon as Mr. Scarola finished. One
25 other thing we need to address is what we're doing

16

1 with the in camera submissions pursuant to the
2 existing court orders and the amended responses to
3 interrogatories that are coming due.

4 THE COURT: I would rather stay discovery on
5 the contempt issue until we resolve this and let
6 you guys spend two weeks doing merits stuff.

7 MR. IANNO: That's what we would suggest,
8 Your Honor.

9 MR. BEMIS: That was going to be our
10 suggestion.

11 MR. SCAROLA: While that ordinarily would not
12 have practical implications that we couldn't live
13 with, there has been a petition for certiorari
14 filed with regard to rulings concerning the
15 contempt matter that is currently pending.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: And if Your Honor were to
18 conduct an in camera inspection and were to find
19 that none of the materials that have been
20 proffered to the Court for in camera inspection
21 are obliged to be turned over for whatever reason,
22 those issues are mooted and we no longer need to
23 worry about the potential of having to address a
24 petition for certiorari.

25 THE COURT: Sure. But if they could do an

17

1 order to show cause, you know, that's going to
2 take them a couple weeks probably to look at at a
3 minimum.

4 MR. SCAROLA: I don't --

5 THE COURT: In all honesty, I mean, we can
6 come back -- If they do an order to show cause and
7 you're concerned that now you're spending time
8 responding to the writ of certiorari where it may
9 be mooted if I did the in camera inspection, we
10 can talk about it then, but I don't think it makes 11 sense to devote time to this until we settle this
12 issue.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Could we at least make some
14 determination as to whether there is a significant
15 amount of time involved? I understand that there
16 are very few -- that what Your Honor would need to
17 review in camera is a very limited inspection.

18 THE COURT: Do you have it now?

19 MR. IANNO: The in camera?

20 THE COURT: Yeah.

21 MR. IANNO: The one that was due on the 2nd,
22 I don't have it with me. I had it with me on
23 Tuesday. I was due to have it back to the Court
24 by five.

25 THE COURT: No, I know. I'm just wondering.

1 MR. IANNO: That one is completed, Your
2 Honor. That one is done. The rest of them; the
3 amendment to the interrogatories, the
4 non-privileged, I believe, Mr. Clare can correct
5 me, and the privileged information, those haven't
6 been completed yet. They're not due.

7 THE COURT: So is there any reason why I
8 couldn't at least look at the in camera inspection
9 on the one?

10 MR. IANNO: There's no reason you shouldn't,
11 Judge, but it does reveal attorney/client and work
12 product privilege and information that I don't
13 know if the Court really needs to look at if this
14 whole contempt issue goes away.

15 We have it prepared. I represented to the
16 Court on Tuesday that if you wanted it, we have
17 it, and I'll leave it to your discretion, but I
18 really think it's a tangential issue that the
19 Court doesn't need to review.

20 MR. SCAROLA: And my response is that it
21 would be a tangential issue with no particular
22 time pressures between now and August 27th but for
23 the petition for certiorari.

24 THE COURT: That's fine. I mean, what I'll
25 do is go ahead and look at that. I can't

1 represent that I'll have done an in camera
2 inspection before we come back. I have one in
3 front of you guys, and I'm in trial, but I'll do
4 my best and see.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: I mean, if it's already prepared,
7 I guess --

8 MR. BEMIS: It's prepared, Your Honor. May I
9 speak?

10 THE COURT: No, Mr. Bemis. Yes, you may
11 speak. Go ahead.

12 MR. BEMIS: I would respectfully request that
13 you not look at it until you make a decision. I
14 am concerned, and it's in the petition for writ of
15 certiorari that the matters that are in there go
16 to the core nature of a lawyer's representation of
17 his client, what he tells his client, what he
18 thinks, and it is highly unusual -- and I
19 understand that the Court frequently does in
20 camera inspections, this is not unusual in that
21 sense; however, the order that you entered in this
22 case, which I respect entirely, I am not here to
23 re-argue that, it does raise some very, very
24 serious issues about attorney/client privilege and

1 those pandora's boxes, you know about it, and I'm
2 concerned that it never goes away once you've
3 opened it.

4 I'm not concerned about what you're going to
5 ultimately read about what was said, but it allows
6 you to begin to understand what our strategies are
7 and thinking of the case, which normally you would
8 never be privy to. And given that we only have
9 two more weeks before this issue is likely going
10 to come to a head, and we've done the work as you
11 ordered, I respectfully request that you hold on
12 to the document or allow us to hold it and open it
13 at the moment you make a decision that you think
14 is appropriate based on the developments either at
15 the hearing or the Court of Appeals, how that
16 resolves itself.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, just a reminder
18 that this discovery does not relate to this
19 lawsuit. It relates to a case that's not even 20 pending before Your Honor. It relates to the
21 Andersen claim.

22 MR. BEMIS: All the more reason to wait.
23 THE COURT: Hold on.
24 MR. BEMIS: Excuse me. I'm sorry,
25 Mr. Scarola.

21

1 MR. SCAROLA: And any concern that Your Honor
2 might be influenced by learning what the strategy
3 was in the Andersen case obviously can have no
4 practical impact on this matter.

5 What does have a very clear practical impact
6 on this matter is that there's a petition for writ
7 of certiorari which may become moot if Your Honor
8 agrees that this is all privileged information
9 that should not be disclosed. In that case,
10 there's nothing for the appellate court to concern
11 itself about and there's nothing for us to be
12 addressing and responding to a writ if a writ
13 issues, and that's something that we ought to 14 know.

15 MR. BEMIS: May I address that briefly?

16 THE COURT: No. We got to stop at some
17 point.

18 MR. BEMIS: Okay. Would Your Honor like a

19 copy of the petition for your own reading for any
20 reason? We have it.

21 THE COURT: That's okay.

22 MR. BEMIS: All right.

23 THE COURT: Okay. Let me take that under
24 advisement. I want to think about it a little bit
25 more.

22

1 Where do we want to go next?

2 MR. IANNO: Judge, the other orders, this one
3 relates to the in camera submission that was due
4 August 2nd, is there any objection to staying the
5 other discovery that is subject to the July 28th
6 order?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Which is due when?

8 MR. IANNO: Next week.

9 MR. BEMIS: We had two interrogatories we
10 needed to supplement based on the hearing last
11 time which are part of the ones that are under 12 consideration. We suggest that that be stayed and
13 taken as a parcel based on whatever ruling you
14 enter; otherwise, we're going to be doing this --

15 THE COURT: I understand.

16 MR. IANNO: We had I think only four
17 interrogatories, and we still had the rest of that
18 one set to go through, but the Court had entered
19 that partial order on the part we got through.

20 THE COURT: Right.

21 In all honesty, it makes sense to me that
22 that gets stayed. I want to go back and
23 reconsider whether we're going to be proceeding
24 down the contempt road or not.

25 Where do we go next?

23

1 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the two remaining
2 matters have to do with the deadline for filing
3 amendment to pleadings.

4 THE COURT: Yes.

5 MR. SCAROLA: That deadline was August 5th
6 pursuant to the original trial order entered by
7 Your Honor. When Your Honor indicated an
8 intention to move the case from its present trial
9 setting, there was a general agreement that all of
10 the deadlines would be pushed back, but there is
11 concern about amendments to pleadings, and we
12 request that the deadline for amendment to

13 pleadings be maintained at no later than August
14 20th.

15 Clearly, the parties have had ample time to
16 make a determination as to whether any amendments
17 are to be made. Because there is certainly a
18 possibility of a significantly-earlier trial date
19 than the spring trial date that was being
20 discussed, even as early as --

21 THE COURT: So I'm clear, the court order
22 now, is the date August 5th?

23 MR. SOLOVY: 6th.

24 THE COURT: The 6th? So it's passed.

25 MR. SCAROLA: It's passed, that's correct.

24

1 And there was a tacit agreement between the
2 parties that we would address that issue at this
3 hearing.

4 I think they want that date tied into
5 whatever the future trial date is in the same
6 manner in which it was tied in initially to the
7 January trial date.

8 Our position is that there is no reason for
9 further delay. And particularly now that the

10 Court has expressed an intention of moving the 11 trial back up, it's very important to us that any
12 amendments to pleadings be made promptly so that
13 the motion should be filed no later than August
14 20th.

15 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, I'm not going to --

16 THE COURT: Let me ask you a practical
17 question. I assume as you stand here, you have no
18 to intention to amend your pleadings? Because 19 otherwise, you would have come in on some sort of 20 motion.

21 MR. BEMIS: Actually, Your Honor, the answer
22 is, we do have an attention to do some amendment
23 to the pleading, and the reason we didn't have a
24 motion was because you told us at the last hearing
25 you were going to move the trial date and we

25

1 reached an agreement we would address this today
2 in the context of --

3 THE COURT: But again, the question I'm
4 really asking is what information would you expect
5 to get between now and, you know, September,
6 whatever it is you want to move it to, that would

7 allow you to -- that would affect how you chose to
8 amend your pleadings, or wouldn't you have
9 sufficient information now if you're going to
10 amend to go ahead and amend?

11 MR. BEMIS: Well, there are two issue in
12 response to that. In direct response to your
13 question, I think the answer is that we don't know
14 that, because we still have so many depositions we
15 wish to complete. Number two, there are some
16 issues with regard to what would be in the
17 amendments that involve issues that are related to
18 matters I've already brought to the attention of
19 the Court as to how those matters can be pursued.
20 And I'm afraid if I say anything further, I'm
21 going to be accused of waiving the attorney/client
22 or the work product privilege. I don't know how
23 to be more explicit than that without telling you
24 directly what I want to do or what my client
25 thinks may have to be done.

26

1 THE COURT: But what you're telling me then
2 is you think you have sufficient information now
3 to file the motion to amend?

4 MR. BEMIS: I'm not sure that we do. We are
5 still in the process of taking some very, very key
6 depositions, and we knew we were not going to
7 complete those.

8 Our thought is that we simply have the
9 spacing on the amendment that we had -- whatever
10 trial date you pick, we just pick the same
11 spacing. And when I say "spacing," under the
12 order that was entered last time, the parties had
13 agreed that the amendment would be 165 days before
14 trial. That was the spacing we selected. And
15 we're suggesting, you pick a trial date based upon
16 Your Honor's judgment when we're supposed to be
17 ready, and that same spacing would apply to the 18 amendments. We'll go back 165 days, which would
19 tie all of the dates together to the same
20 reasoning we applied in March when we negotiated a
21 schedule.

22 THE COURT: Well, the only sort of flaw I see
23 in that is if we go back to a January trial date,
24 we're beyond the date.

25 MR. BEMIS: Well, if you were to go back to a

1 January trial date, which would just -- that is
2 going to be a real problem in terms of scheduling,
3 because discovery is going to close in like two
4 weeks, and we're not even close to being done. So
5 I don't know what to tell you would be the result
6 of trying to renegotiate a schedule if we had to
7 adjust the spacing that we had put in the original
8 scheduling order.

9 Your Honor may understand, we picked a date,
10 we work backward with all of those --

11 THE COURT: I understand all of that.

12 MR. BEMIS: And all we've done is said, you
13 pick a date and we can space those dates
14 automatically on the calculation formula, just go
15 back and give us the new dates.

16 THE COURT: It strikes me that we probably --
17 this is the kind of thing that needs to be
18 compromised in the middle. I understand
19 plaintiff's position that discovery has been
20 proceeding, it doesn't make sense to continue --
21 you know, the extent of the trial date was moved
22 back to accommodate some other things, it doesn't
23 make sense to continue to tie the date for
24 amendment to the trial date.

25 MR. SOLOVY: May I take a leave from

1 Mr. Bemis and may I say something, Your Honor?

2 THE COURT: Yes, you may, sir.

3 MR. SOLOVY: This is very counterproductive,
4 because this has been going on a long time. If we
5 proceed with discovery and then Mr. Bemis brings a
6 new claim at the last minute, then all that
7 discovery, you know, we're going to see, oh, Your
8 Honor, this is new, we need more time.

9 We want a trial date. They know as they
10 stand here what they want to amend, and they ought
11 to amend it, and we ought to be about our
12 business, as Your Honor said.

13 You know, a January trial date, if you're
14 going to review the contempt and there's a
15 possibility of a January trial date, let's stick
16 to it, and we're ready to file our pleading, which
17 is only to seek leave to amend the Complaint to
18 ask for punitive damages, I'll tell the Court that
19 as we stand here. They know what they're going to
20 do. And if there's going to be a January trial
21 date, they have the resources, we have the
22 resources, but if we shilly-shally around and two
23 months from now, you know -- It's all backwards,
24 Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: No, I understand that concern.

29

1 What's the response?

2 MR. BEMIS: We need the additional -- We need
3 to resolve the contempt motion before we amend the
4 pleading is our position.

5 THE COURT: You need to what?

6 MR. BEMIS: We need to resolve the contempt
7 proceeding and the related issue as to the
8 admission of Kellogg Huber before we file an
9 amended pleading.

10 THE COURT: I understand your reluctance to
11 disclose your process to me, but I can tell you,
12 the reasoning behind that is not readily apparent
13 to me.

14 MR. BEMIS: Well, I'm afraid to say anything
15 else at this point.

16 THE COURT: I understand that to be your
17 position.

18 MR. SCAROLA: May I approach the bench, Your
19 Honor?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MR. SCAROLA: This is just a blank order on

22 that issue with envelopes. I have provided
23 opposing counsel with a copy of that order.
24 THE COURT: Okay. What I did was grant it in
25 part. Motions for leave to amend pleadings need

30

1 to be served by September 7th. That's the day
2 after Labor Day.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the last remaining
6 issue has to do with supplementing interrogatory
7 responses.

8 THE COURT: We're fighting over the language?

9 MR. SCAROLA: We're fighting over five words
10 I think, Your Honor.

11 MR. IANNO: Well, it's not five words. It's
12 more of the theory behind the words, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Can you enlighten me
14 though what you think -- Give me an example of a
15 fact pattern that would be a distinction between
16 what each of you was proposing.

17 MR. IANNO: Sure. This has to relate,
18 obviously, back to the motion for contempt,

19 because what Mr. Scarola wants is an order from
20 this Court requiring us to provide, quote,
21 complete and accurate answers to the
22 interrogatories as opposed to answers in
23 accordance with the Rules of Civil Procedure.

24 THE COURT: What's the difference?

25 MR. IANNO: The difference is, Mr. Scarola's

31

1 interpretation of the word complete and accurate
2 may be totally different than what the Court or
3 counsel -- And here's two examples.

4 Complete answer to interrogatory, I met with
5 so-and-so on May 23rd. Mr. Scarola's version of
6 complete may be I met with so-and-so at 8:10 p.m.
7 at a specific location on May 23rd. And all of a
8 sudden, I'm complete as far as the Rules of Civil
9 Procedure go, because I've answered I met with
10 so-and-so on a date, but Mr. Scarola's
11 interpretation of the word complete may be you
12 have to put the time, the date, the location. And
13 that's my concern, Your Honor, is that those words
14 complete and accurate don't appear in the Rules of
15 Civil Procedure. The Rules of Civil Procedure say

16 you answer to the best of your ability, as I
17 understand them.

18 With regard to accurate, what happens if we
19 answer an interrogatory that says the light was
20 red and the evidence that comes out at trial says
21 and the jury finds the light was green. Was our
22 answer to interrogatory inaccurate that subjects
23 us to a contempt because we've now violated a
24 court order to provide accurate information in
25 response to an interrogatory?

32

1 And this is all coming about because of the
2 motion for contempt. I'm afraid that the
3 interpretation Mr. Scarola puts on whatever court
4 order is entered here is going to be different
5 than what we interpret the Court or an Appellate
6 Court may interpret.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Let me -- And I apologize,
8 let me back up a moment. What number is this
9 motion? I know I read it, but I can't find it.

10 MR. IANNO: It is number six.

11 THE COURT: Six.

12 MR. IANNO: And the background on it, Your

13 Honor, is they filed a motion, and we had gone
14 back and forth and thought we had an agreement on
15 a stipulation on doing it, and then --

16 THE COURT: Right. Now you guys -- I think
17 what you're acknowledging is that you've
18 stipulated that you'll do updated answers to
19 interrogatories, we're just fighting over the
20 words to go in the order.

21 MR. IANNO: Our position is we supplement in
22 accordance with the Rules of Civil Procedure.

23 THE COURT: Okay. What's wrong with that?

24 MR. SCAROLA: What's wrong with it is that it
25 creates an inherent ambiguity in the order,

33

1 because the Rules of Civil Procedure require no
2 supplement.

3 THE COURT: Well, why don't we say the rules
4 excluding the provision requiring that you don't
5 supplement?

6 MR. SCAROLA: You know, obviously we could do
7 that, Your Honor, but let me remind the Court that
8 when we began to address this issue at the July
9 23rd hearing, Your Honor said, quote,

10 interrogatory answers should be complete and
11 truthful, and you said that's what you expect,
12 that's what you would believe that all
13 interrogatory answers -- that's the standard that
14 you would believe all interrogatory answers would
15 meet. And whether it is expressly stated in the
16 rules or it is there by implication, it is clear
17 that the rules require complete and truthful
18 and/or accurate responses.

19 The concern about our using that language as
20 a basis for a motion for contempt is absolutely
21 illusory, because we all know that contempt
22 requires an intentional violation of the court
23 order. If Mr. Ianno believes in good faith that
24 the response that he is giving is an accurate
25 response as of the time it's filed and a jury

34

1 decides otherwise at a later time, there's no way
2 that that could form the basis for a contempt.

3 My concern is that by the very act of
4 contesting the obligation to provide accurate and
5 complete responses, the message is being conveyed
6 that there's an intent in advance to do something

7 other than that, and there ought to be no intent
8 to do something other than that. We ought to be
9 able to rely upon the supplements as being
10 complete and accurate as of the time that they are
11 filed. And this is a very real concern on our
12 part in light of qualifications that have been
13 included in virtually every interrogatory response
14 that we have received.

15 Have we found that? Okay.

16 I can't pull out the exact language right
17 now, but if it's necessary, I can provide that to
18 Your Honor, but I will represent to the Court that
19 almost every interrogatory -- in fact, I think
20 every interrogatory response we have received has
21 said that discovery is ongoing, you should not
22 consider that these responses are complete and
23 accurate, you cannot rely upon the completeness
24 and accuracy of these responses as of this time,
25 and there needs to come a point in time when

35

1 discovery ends and they're willing to stand behind
2 the responses that they are giving as the most
3 complete and most accurate information that they

4 have as of that date. We're entitled to be able
5 to rely upon interrogatory answers at some point
6 in time as giving us everything they know in the
7 most accurate form in which they know it. That's
8 all we're asking for.

9 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

10 Is it sufficient if we say -- I'll have to
11 think about the words we use -- that the answer,
12 supplemental answer, needs to comply with the rule
13 as if the interrogatory itself had been
14 promulgated on the date of the supplemental
15 answer?

16 MR. IANNO: That's what we're saying. That's
17 what we said, Judge. And I'm personally offended
18 by Mr. Scarola's argument that there's any intent
19 here, but the point is, our only obligation as 20 officers of the court is to comply with the Rules
21 of Civil Procedure.

22 THE COURT: But does that get us where we
23 need to go? If the answer has to be in compliance
24 with the rule as if the interrogatory had been
25 promulgated as of the date of the supplemental

1 answer?

2 MR. IANNO: That's never been the issue.

3 MR. SCAROLA: In light of the Court's express
4 statement that this Court believes that the rules
5 require complete and truthful responses, we're
6 satisfied with that.

7 THE COURT: Okay. So you gave me an order,
8 correct, Mr. Scarola?

9 MR. SCAROLA: I did provide you with an
10 order, Your Honor. It includes my language.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Well, we'll just...

12 Paragraph 2 and 3 are okay. It's just
13 paragraph 1, I assume.

14 Did you share a copy of this with Mr. Ianno?

15 MR. IANNO: Yes.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 Okay. So paragraph 1 would then read all
19 parties shall supplement and update their
20 interrogatory responses with answers in compliance
21 with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure as if
22 the interrogatory had been promulgated as of the
23 date the supplemental answers are served prior to
24 the date of close of fact discovery.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: I already got two sets.

3 MR. IANNO: I don't know if you're rendering
4 other orders as well on your own.

5 THE COURT: Yes.

6 MR. IANNO: So just in case you need them.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

8 One last thing.

9 MR. IANNO: Judge, while you're doing that,
10 if I may inquire. You took under advisement the 11 in camera submission that's due at 5:00. Should I
12 call the Court's JA to see if we're supposed to do
13 that at five or not?

14 THE COURT: Yeah. Well, she generally leaves
15 at 4:30, but I don't know if she's going to leave
16 early today because of --

17 MR. IANNO: The situation.

18 THE COURT: Yeah. But you can try to call
19 her right after lunch.

20 MR. IANNO: Okay. And if we don't get a hold
21 of her, do we want to agree on Monday? I mean,
22 this is purely a logistical question, Your Honor.
23 If you want it when we get it over here, if you
24 don't want it, do we get it over here anyway?

1 THE COURT: Well, I think then you get it
2 over here, and if I decided you didn't have to get
3 it over, I'll just send it back.

4 MR. BEMIS: Okay. Just send it over.

5 MR. IANNO: That's fine. We'll get it over
6 to the Court.

7 THE COURT: I'm looking for the date, and I
8 apologize, but I need to reset the date for the
9 case management conference, because I realize it
10 was set on a date I'm out of the office.

11 MR. SCAROLA: We're talking about the August
12 27th case management conference?

13 THE COURT: No. I'm here. I think it's in
14 October.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

16 THE BAILIFF: The 18th through the 29th,
17 that's the days you're out.

18 THE COURT: No, I know when I'm out. I'm
19 trying to figure out which day it was we had a
20 conference.

21 MR. CLARE: The 15th is the date.

22 MR. IANNO: October 15th.
23 THE COURT: When is the September one? I
24 know it's not August.
25 MR. SOLOVY: September 23, Your Honor.

39

1 THE COURT: That's the next one after August?
2 MR. SOLOVY: Yes.
3 THE COURT: Okay. That's not an issue. The
4 next one after that is October 15th?
5 MR. IANNO: Yes.
6 THE COURT: Yeah, that's the one I need to
7 reset.
8 We could do it the day before.
9 MR. BEMIS: What day of the week is that,
10 Your Honor?
11 THE COURT: That's a Thursday.
12 MR. SOLOVY: That's fine with us, Your Honor.
13 THE COURT: Is that okay?
14 MR. SOLOVY: Yes.
15 THE COURT: Can we do it -- Do you want to do
16 it at 8:00 that day and I'll just suspend uniform
17 motion calendar, do it eight to ten?
18 MR. BEMIS: Eight to ten?

19 THE COURT: Is that fine or not?
20 MR. BEMIS: No, we're here.
21 THE COURT: I'm looking at that face.
22 MR. BEMIS: We're up anyway.
23 MR. IANNO: It's not a problem.
24 THE COURT: Why don't we move it to eight to
25 ten on the 14th instead of the 15th. And I

40

1 apologize.
2 MR. BEMIS: That's all right.
3 THE COURT: Okay. Anything else?
4 MR. SCAROLA: May I make a suggestion?
5 THE COURT: Yes, sir.
6 MR. SCAROLA: Since nature abhors a vacuum
7 and we have over an hour left and we all arrived
8 here expecting to talk about trial dates, does it
9 make any sense to discuss alternative dates, one
10 date if the contempt motion goes away and another
11 date if the contempt motion stays and get that
12 done now while we've got time to talk about it?
13 THE COURT: Are you-all willing to do that?
14 MR. SCAROLA: We certainly are. We would
15 very much like to do that. We'd like to know how

16 to make alternative plans.

17 THE COURT: Sure. Is that something we can
18 talk about?

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, normally I would say
20 yes. My reluctance to do that is I have to go
21 back -- I've already told people the trial date is
22 been moved to March sometime based on what you
23 said last time; experts, fact witnesses, whatever.
24 I've now got to go back and think about what their
25 schedules are if this thing is going to go forward

41

1 say in February or going to go forward in January,
2 which I still think is going to be impossible
3 given the compression of the schedule and the
4 delays we've already had.

5 I would suggest that I'd be willing to
6 exchange some ideas with Mr. Scarola in the next
7 week. I don't think the setting is going to be a
8 problem once you give us -- you decide the date
9 whether we all agree upon it. The other dates are
10 going to have to be dealt with. I don't know how
11 to resolve like fact discovery dates. I can't
12 tell you right now what my reaction is going to be

13 on this. I don't think I can get it done in 30
14 days.
15 We're just having a difficult time completing
16 the depositions. Every week we run into a problem
17 over this August period with people not being
18 available, and we're flying to New York every
19 week. I got up to New York this week, the
20 deposition didn't go forward. Now, I'm not going
21 to get into why it didn't go forward, but it
22 didn't go forward. We had to cancel it. I had to
23 move it. This person is not available now until 24 September after the Jewish holidays. This kind of
25 problem goes on week after week.

42

1 They had a deposition scheduled, they didn't
2 get a subpoena out last week in time for the
3 deposition, that deposition cancelled. It has to
4 be moved forward. It's just a difficult problem.

5 We've got a witness in Dallas, a key witness,
6 Mr. Uzzi, we're still trying to get the subpoena
7 served on him. We can't. We don't think we're
8 going to get him on Thursday as it stands right
9 now, but we don't know. This case is a bear in

10 terms of getting witnesses into depositions.

11 THE COURT: And, Mr. Scarola, I assume your
12 response is that if we have a trial date, stuff
13 starts getting done?

14 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely, Your Honor. That's
15 my primary response.

16 And my second response is that it will make
17 it much easier for Mr. Bemis to talk to his
18 witnesses about their availability if he knows
19 what date we're targeting. And if we find out
20 today what that date is and he comes back on
21 August 27th and says I've got five experts that
22 can't be here at that time, we can readdress it at
23 that point, but at least we have something
24 tentative to begin to work with.

25 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Originally,

43

1 what was the January start date?

2 MR. BEMIS: January 18th, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: I don't know why we couldn't go
4 back to that.

5 MR. SCAROLA: That's great for us.

6 THE COURT: I can tell you, I looked also

7 at -- because we were talking about March if we do
8 the contempt, and I have to go back and check what
9 my kids' spring vacation is just in case I wasn't
10 going to be here, and that's March 21st to 28th.

11 MR. BEMIS: Yes, that's spring break, Your
12 Honor.

13 THE COURT: I suspect I probably will be
14 here, but I don't know for sure.

15 How many trial days do we need?

16 MR. IANNO: We have like 15 or 16.

17 MR. BEMIS: It's 15 trial days spread over
18 four weeks is what we calculated based on a
19 four-day trial week.

20 And, Your Honor, just moving the trial date,
21 if you go back to the original trial date, we're
22 all now back to a discovery cutoff of September
23 6th. We're not going to make that.

24 MR. IANNO: That implicates the summary
25 judgment, Your Honor, mediation deadlines and all

44

1 these things that, you know, either party files a
2 motion for summary judgment, I haven't taken this
3 deposition yet. And that's the problem with --

4 THE COURT: I'll tell you what I want you to
5 do. I want you to assume that if we don't do the
6 contempt, we're going back to that January 18th
7 date. And when we come back to the next case
8 management conference, if you're still complaining
9 about specific discovery issues or specific things
10 that are delaying the preparation of the trial, we
11 need to be prepared to address those in a very
12 specific fashion, not just sort of the general
13 stuff, oh, they cancelled depositions in New York
14 and I can't get this guy in Texas. You know, we
15 need very -- If there are specific issues, we need
16 to address the specific issues.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

18 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, just to advise you,
19 we cannot complete fact discovery with a January
20 trial date.

21 THE COURT: I understand that that's what
22 you're telling me, and if that's your position,
23 you need to show me very specifically why you
24 cannot; what still needs to be done, what efforts
25 you've made to get that done, why it's not gotten

1 done and when it's going to get done.

2 MR. BEMIS: All right.

3 THE COURT: Okay? And I will see you in two
4 weeks.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

6 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

7 THE COURT: Thanks.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AND
MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.'S
MOTION TO COMPEL SUPPLEMENTATION OF RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), by their attorneys, respectfully request that this Court enter an Order directing Morgan Stanley to supplement its responses to CPH's second set of requests for admission. In support of this motion, CPH and MAFCO state as follows:

1. This motion arises from Morgan Stanley's failure to provide sufficient answers to CPH's second set of requests for admission, which sought basic information relating to the admissibility at trial of certain specified Morgan Stanley documents. CPH's second set of request for admission contained the following two requests (Ex. A):

1. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 0084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are true and authentic copies of original documents within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.901.

2. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are records of regularly conducted business activity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).

2. Morgan Stanley admitted Request No. 1 but admitted Request No. 2 only in part

(Ex. B):

Admitted in part and denied in part. MS&Co. admits that the referenced documents are generated in the course of a regularly conduct business activity, but denies that the documents, which largely reflect the opinions of out-of-court declarants, qualify for the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). MS&Co. reserves all evidentiary objections to the admissibility of the referenced documents, but will not dispute that the documents are kept in the ordinary course of its business.

3. Morgan Stanley's vague assertion, with respect to all of the specified documents, that they do not qualify for the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6) because they "largely" reflect opinions of out-of-court declarants is an insufficient response. Under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.370(a), a party responding to a request for admission is required to be as specific as possible concerning its denials (emphasis added):

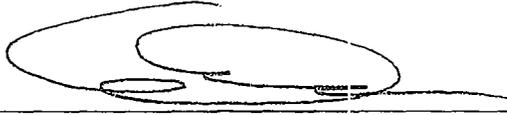

A denial shall meet the substance of the requested admission, and when good faith requires that a party qualify an answer or deny only a party of the matter of which an admission is requested, the party shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder.

4. Under Rule 1.370, it is not sufficient for Morgan Stanley to refer to an undifferentiated group of documents, and state that they "largely" reflect opinions of out-of-court declarants. Morgan Stanley instead must "specify" the particular portions of the documents that supposedly reflect the so-called opinions. CPH and MAFCO respectfully request that this Court direct Morgan Stanley to supplement its responses to CPH's second set of requests for admission to provide this information within 14 days.

JOINT SUBMISSION OF THE PARTIES FOR
AUGUST 27, 2004 CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE

Pursuant to the Court's Order of February 24, 2004, the parties in the above-referenced action hereby submit the following Joint Submission in advance of the August 27, 2004 Case Management Conference.

I. Agreed-Upon Statement Of Background And Procedural History

The following is the parties' agreed-upon summary of the two companion cases now pending before this Court, which have been consolidated for trial.

A. Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated. (Case No. 03 CA-005045 AI)

Background. This case arises out of an acquisition transaction that was negotiated and consummated in late 1997 and early 1998, in which Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. (“CPH”) sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. (“Coleman”) to Sunbeam Corporation (“Sunbeam”). Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (“Morgan Stanley”) served as financial advisor to Sunbeam for parts of the acquisition transaction and served as the lead underwriter for a $750,000,000 debenture offering that Sunbeam used to finance the acquisition.

CPH’s Complaint alleges claims arising from this transaction for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, aiding and abetting fraud, and conspiracy. CPH’s Complaint has sought damages of at least $485 million and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. Morgan Stanley denies the material allegations in CPH’s Complaint and also denies CPH’s entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. CPH filed its Complaint on May 8, 2003 (the “CPH Action”). Morgan Stanley filed its Answer on June 23, 2003 and, on June 25, 2003 filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant To Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In the Alternative, For Judgment On The Pleadings. The Court held a hearing on these motions on December 12, 2003. On December 15, 2003, the Court issued an Order denying both motions. On January 9, 2004, Morgan Stanley timely filed a Notice of Appeal regarding the denial of its motion to dismiss. See Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.130(a)(3)(A) (providing for interlocutory appellate review of non-final orders “concerning venue”). On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated CPH’s action against Morgan Stanley with Morgan Stanley Senior Funding’s action against CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.

B. Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al. (Case No. 03 CA-005165 Al)

Background. This action arises out of the same series of financial transactions as the CPH Action. In 1998, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (“MSSF”) and other lenders entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide senior secured financing to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam’s acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies.

MSSF’s Complaint alleges that, in the course of Sunbeam’s acquisition of Coleman, Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. (“MAFCO”) and CPH provided false information to MSSF about the “synergies” that Sunbeam would achieve from the combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. MSSF alleges that Defendant’s inflated synergy projections caused Sunbeam to pay a higher price to acquire Coleman and consequently caused Sunbeam’s lenders (including MSSF) to make larger loans to finance the acquisition. MSSF’s Complaint alleges that it suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages when Sunbeam declared bankruptcy in February 2001 and defaulted on acquisition-related loans. MSSF has alleged claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, and has reserved the right to seek punitive damages. CPH denies the material allegations in MSSF’s Complaint and also denies MSSF’s entitlement to damages.

Procedural History. MSSF filed its Complaint against MAFCO and CPH on May 12, 2003 (the “MSSF Action”). The MSSF Action was initially assigned to Division AG. Because the MSSF Action and the CPH Action involve the same series of financial transactions and arise from a common set of operative facts, the parties agreed that the two cases are companion cases under Local Rule 2.009 and requested a transfer to Division AI, where the first-filed, lower numbered CPH Action was assigned. The motion to transfer was granted on June 9, 2003. Defendants CPH and MAFCO filed their Answer on June 25, 2003. On February 20, 2004, the Court consolidated MSSF’s action against CPH and MAFCO with CPH’s action against Morgan Stanley.

II. Report On Discovery In The Two Cases

A. Morgan Stanley's And MSSF's Position On Discovery

1. Merits Discovery

CPH, MAFCO, Morgan Stanley, and MSSF are actively pursuing written and deposition discovery in these consolidated actions. The parties have exchanged hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, have served and answered multiple sets of interrogatories and requests for admission, and have deposed more than two dozen party and non-party witnesses. Discovery in both cases is ongoing.

At the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley informed the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates — approximately seventy (70) additional depositions would need to be completed before the close of fact discovery. Thereafter, on or about March 11, the parties agreed to take alternate weeks for taking and defending depositions.

Since the February 20 Case Management Conference, twenty-seven (27) additional depositions have been completed. Four (4) more depositions have been scheduled and are confirmed for the weeks ahead. Morgan Stanley has ten (10) outstanding requests for deposition dates of CPH, MAFCO, and Coleman witnesses — and has attempted to secure deposition dates for several additional non-party witnesses. At the July 23 Case Management Conference, counsel for Morgan Stanley advised the Court that — according to counsel's best estimates approximately forty-three (43) days of deposition testimony remain to be completed. That number will increase, however, in light of additional depositions requested by CPH and MAFCO since the July 23 Case Management Conference. CPH and MAFCO have requested the depositions of four (4) additional current or former Morgan Stanley employees — and have requested one (1) additional Rule 1.310 deposition (bringing the total number to 7).

In their Position on Discovery (below), CPH and MAFCO state that thirty (30) depositions have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and fourteen (14) have been taken by MS & Co. and MSSF. But those figures — and the table prepared by CPH and MAFCO to summarize the depositions — do not accurately reflect the depositions taken by Morgan Stanley. Seven (7) of the third-party witnesses identified by CPH and MAFCO as “taken by” CPH and MAFCO were, in reality, examined by Morgan Stanley as well. Moreover, CPH and MAFCO count the Rule 1.310 deposition of Steven Fasman (taken by Morgan Stanley) as a single deposition, when in fact Mr. Fasman appeared for two separate Rule 1.310 depositions.’¹ In reality, twenty-one (21) witnesses have been deposed by Morgan Stanley.

The parties have experienced considerable difficulty scheduling depositions in light of scheduling conflicts for counsel on both sides and the location of the witnesses, almost all of whom are located outside of Florida. CPH and MAFCO have offered witnesses for depositions outside of Florida on dates previously established by the Court for Case Management Conferences (or on the day before in New York) and have, on several occasions, confirmed (and then canceled or postponed) depositions previously set to go forward.

For example, CPH and MAFCO twice postponed the deposition of Barry Schwartz (now completed), postponed the deposition of Bruce Slovin (now completed), and postponed the deposition of James Robinson, for various reasons ranging from “unavoidable conflicts” to “medical emergencies.” Another CPH / MAFCO witness, Lawrence Jones, was only available on a day that had been previously scheduled by the Court for a Case Management Conference, and is now expected to be unavailable for an unspecified amount of time due to upcoming surgery.

Similar scheduling considerations have required Morgan Stanley to postpone the depositions of other deposition witnesses, many of whom no longer work for Morgan Stanley and are no longer under its control.

Even when depositions have been successfully scheduled, the parties have experienced difficulties beyond their control that have prevented the deposition from going forward. When Mr. Schwartz's deposition was finally scheduled and confirmed for June 18, for example, the deposition needed to be postponed (for a third time) because Morgan Stanley's attorneys were unable to make it to New York for the deposition due to inclement weather and cancelled flights.

Morgan Stanley is of course willing to accommodate the legitimate scheduling considerations of witnesses and their counsel — but these schedule conflicts and difficulties have prevented the parties from proceeding with depositions at the pace contemplated during the February 20 Case Management Conference.

Finally, the parties have had to divert resources away from deposition discovery to address collateral issues unrelated to the merits of these consolidated actions. These issues are discussed in the next section.

2. Non-Merits Discovery

On March 12, CPH filed its Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. On May 14, 2004, the Court converted CPH's Motion for a Rule To Show Cause into a Motion for Contempt. On July 30, 2004, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt. That motion, which is based on the Court's determination and July 26 Order that the Settlement Agreement was properly in the public domain as part of the Court's public file since December 2003, will be heard during the August 13 Case Management Conference. If granted, Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike would obviate the need for further non-merits discovery, and would allow the parties and the Court to return their full attention to the merits of these consolidated actions.

On March 19, CPH served its first set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt. Morgan Stanley responded to those Interrogatories on June 16, 2004 and provided supplemental responses to CPH on June 29, 2004. On July 12, 2004, the Court entered an Order directing Morgan Stanley to supplement its responses to those Interrogatories within twenty days, including certain responses to be filed directly with the Court under seal. Morgan Stanley provided the non-privileged portions of its amended responses to CPH on August 2, 2004. Morgan Stanley has completed the in camera portion of its amended responses and is prepared to submit the in camera portion directly to the Court, pending the Court's ruling on Morgan Stanley's Motion for Enlargement of Time, which will be heard during Uniform Motion Calendar on August 10.

On May 28, CPH served its second set of interrogatories relating to its motion for contempt — together with a set of document requests relating to that motion. On that same date, Morgan Stanley served its own interrogatories and requests for documents on CPH relating to CPH's motion for contempt. The parties served responses and objections to this “second wave” of non-merits discovery on June 28, 2004. Based on correspondence received from CPH and MAFCO, Morgan Stanley expects additional “waves” of non-merits discovery to be served in the weeks and months ahead, further diverting the parties from the merits.

CPH's contempt motion, together with CPH's related Motion to Allow Arthur Andersen Access to Confidential Transcript (filed May 5, 2004) and other motions relating to the confidentiality of documents and pleadings, have required extensive additional briefing, necessitated attendance of counsel at multiple specially-set hearings in Florida, and the preparation of non-merits discovery requests and responses. CPH's objections also have prevented attorneys from Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, and Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHTE") from participating as co-counsel and assisting with discovery. These satellite issues have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

CPH and MAFCO, acting in concert with Arthur Andersen, are using the non-merits discovery served in these cases to manipulate the proceedings in these consolidated actions and Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA, now pending before Judge Miller. In pleadings filed with Judge Miller, Arthur Andersen has moved for sanctions against Morgan Stanley, sought to disqualify Morgan Stanley's attorneys in that action, and moved to stay all discovery in that action. Simultaneously, CPH (who has professed a "unity of interest" with Arthur Andersen) has sought, through the non-merits discovery served in these consolidated actions, to discover detailed information regarding Morgan Stanley's damages claims in the Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA. CPH seeks this information despite the fact that Arthur Andersen is not a party in these consolidated actions; Kirkland & Ellis LLP does not represent Morgan Stanley in Civil Action No. 04-22577 AA; and CPH has objected to Morgan Stanley's chosen counsel (KHTE) from appearing in these consolidated actions.

The satellite issues and gamesmanship described in this section have prevented the parties from conducting depositions at the pace originally contemplated during the February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference.

B. CPH'S And MAFCO's Position On Discovery

CPH and MAFCO stipulate only to the first paragraph of Section II.A above. CPH and MAFCO object to the remaining statements concerning discovery as incomplete, misleading, and self-serving on the part of Morgan Stanley and MSSF. CPH and MAFCO expressed these objections to Morgan Stanley and MSSF, and requested that a neutral statement of the discovery status be substituted, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF refused that request. Consequently, CPH and MAFCO provide the account of discovery that follows,

1. Deposition Discovery

As of August 20, 2004, 44 depositions have been taken. Of those depositions, 30 have been taken by CPH and MAFCO, and 14 have been taken by Morgan Stanley and MSSF:

In addition, both sides have requested deposition dates for certain individuals, and expressed interest in deposing still other individuals. Although Morgan Stanley and MSSF attempt to make it appear as if scheduling issues have been caused solely by CPH, in fact, Morgan Stanley and MSSF frequently have delayed providing dates for depositions and have changed previously set dates. In any event, Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's finger-pointing is irrelevant, because there is no motion pending before this Court concerning deposition scheduling — indeed, to date, no such motion ever has been filed.

Concerning counsel for Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's estimates about the depositions to be taken, CPH and MAFCO believe that counsel's estimate is exaggerated. In any event, given that approximately 10 attorneys presently are appearing for Morgan Stanley and MSSF in this case, Morgan Stanley and MSSF certainly have the resources to complete all necessary depositions within any schedule dictated by the Court.

2. Discovery concerning CPH's motion for contempt

The parties have served interrogatories and document requests on each other in connection with CPH's motion for contempt. Because Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's responses to the discovery requests that CPH and MAFCO served on March 19 were insufficient, however, CPH and MAFCO filed a motion to compel. On July 12, this Court entered an order granting that motion in part, and directing Morgan Stanley and MSSF to provide further information within 20 days. On August 2, Morgan Stanley and MSSF purported to provide non-privileged information in compliance with the July 12 order, but Morgan Stanley and MSSF did not comply with the Court's direction to provide privileged information for in camera review. Instead, Morgan Stanley and MSSF filed a motion to enlarge the deadline for doing so. The in camera materials were submitted to the Court following the August 13 case management conference.

CPH and MAFCO also served further interrogatories and document requests in connection with CPH's motion for contempt on May 28, and Morgan Stanley and MSSF have served responses to those discovery requests. Because CPH and MAFCO believe that the responses are deficient in many respects, however, CPH and MAFCO filed a motion to compel. The Court made some rulings on that motion at the July 23 case management conference, but did not complete its review of the motion. CPH and MAFCO have re-noticed the motion for the upcoming case management conference on August 27.

III. Pretrial Schedule

On February 24, 2004, the Court entered an order setting this matter for trial in January 2005, and on March 23, 2004, this Court entered an Agreed Order setting the pretrial schedule in this matter and scheduling trial to begin on January 18, 2005. At the case management conference on July 23, this Court stated that it would be extending the trial date to March 2005. The Court directed the parties to come to the August 13 case management conference prepared to discuss scheduling the trial as well as associated adjustments to the pretrial schedule.

At that case management conference, the Court indicated that depending on the disposition of the motion for contempt, the Court might go back to an earlier trial date. In an Order entered after the case management conference, the Court directed the parties to come to the August 27 conference "prepared to discuss with specificity each party's ability to be prepared for trial beginning January 18, 2005."

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S AND
MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.'S
MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"), by their attorneys, respectfully submit this response to Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of a 1999 Report (erroneously identified by Morgan Stanley as a 1998 Report) for the Board of Directors of Sunbeam that was prepared by the Skadden Arps law firm.

Neither CPH nor MAFCO has a copy of the 1999 Report within their possession, custody, or control. Based on an inquiry following the July 28, 2004 deposition of Paul Shapiro, however, Jenner & Block determined that MAFCO in-house attorneys still have a copy of the exhibits that were attached to the 1999 Report. MAFCO attorneys obtained the exhibits in 1999 when they were providing legal assistance to Sunbeam, pursuant to an undertaking in an August 1993 settlement agreement between Sunbeam and CPH, which stated that CPH and associated companies such as MAFCO would "provide assistance and support to Sunbeam" on “compliance, litigation, insurance, regulatory and other legal matters.” See 8/12/98 Settlement Agreement ¶ 3(d)(v).

After receiving Morgan Stanley’s motion, we contacted Sunbeam to determine whether it intended to invoke the privilege.¹ Sunbeam has advised us that it does invoke the privilege.

In addition, Morgan Stanley’s assertion (at 5) that the privilege has been waived because Mr. Shapiro made voluntary disclosures during his deposition regarding the 1999 Report without any objection from counsel, is without merit. There was no waiver of the privilege by Mr. Shapiro or by counsel for CPH and MAFCO because neither of those individuals had the authority to waive Sunbeam’s privilege. Mr. Shapiro, as Morgan Stanley concedes (at 5), is “a former Sunbeam executive” (Morgan Stanley also states that Mr. Shapiro is “a current MAFCO executive,” but by the time of his deposition session on July 28, 2004, he had left MAFCO). A former Sunbeam executive has no authority to waive Sunbeam’s privilege. And the Jenner & Block attorney who attended the deposition on behalf of CPH and MAFCO obviously had no authority to waive Sunbeam’s privilege either.

Finally, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s assertion (at 5), Mr. Shapiro did not testify “to the process and to the substance of the report” at his deposition. As Mr. Shapiro’s testimony establishes (MS Mot., Ex. 4, at 361:14-364:8), he remembered little or nothing about the report. Thus, Mr. Shapiro did not waive the privilege by making selective disclosures about the 1999 Report even if he had authority to waive Sunbeam’s privilege — which he clearly did not.

¹ Since emerging from bankruptcy, Sunbeam has been known as American Household, Inc.

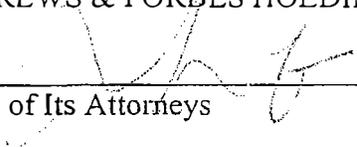

Conclusion

Because neither CPH nor MAFCO has a copy of the 1999 Report, and because Sunbeam has invoked the privilege, Morgan Stanley's motion to compel should be denied.

MORGAN STANLEY'S OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING INC.'S
AND MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL
SUPPLEMENTATION OF RESPONSES TO REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.'s (collectively "CPH") Motion to Compel Supplementation of Responses to Requests for Admission improperly seeks to impose discovery obligations on Morgan Stanley that exceed the requirements of Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370, which establishes the standard for responses to requests for admission. Accordingly, the motion must be denied.

BACKGROUND

1. On July 6, 2004, CPH served its Second Set of Requests for Admission, consisting of two separately-numbered requests. Requests for Admission Nos. 1 and 2 both relate to documents bearing bates-numbers Morgan Stanley Confidential 084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032.

2. The documents referenced in Requests for Admission Nos. 1 and 2 are personnel evaluation materials for 28 current and former Morgan Stanley employees, consisting of 1044 pages. Morgan Stanley produced the referenced personnel evaluation materials to CPH pursuant to this Court's March 15, 2004 Order. The referenced documents also are subject to the Court's April 25, 2004 Protective Order, which limits the use of personnel evaluations during depositions.

3. Request for Admission No. 1 asked Morgan Stanley to "[a]dmit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are true and authentic copies of original documents within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.901." (Aug. 5, 2004 Morgan Stanley Resp. & Objs. to CPH 2d Req. for Admiss., Admiss. 1 (Ex. 1).) Morgan Stanley responded to Request For Admission No. 1 by admitting that the referenced documents are true and authentic copies of original documents. (Id., Resp. 1.)

4. Request For Admission No. 2 asked Morgan Stanley to "[a]dmit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 0084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are records of regularly conducted business activity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6)." (Id., Admiss. 2.) Morgan Stanley admitted Request For Admission No. 2 in part and denied the request in part. The full text of Morgan Stanley's response to Request for Admission No. 2 is set forth below:

RESPONSE: Admitted in part and denied in part. MS & Co. admits that the referenced documents are generated in the course of a regularly conducted business activity, but denies that the documents, which largely reflect the opinions of out-of-court declarants, qualify for the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). MS & Co. reserves all evidentiary objections to the admissibility of the referenced documents, but will not dispute that the documents are kept in the ordinary course of its business.

5. On August 18, 2004, CPH filed the instant motion to compel seeking an Order from this Court directing Morgan Stanley “to supplement its responses” to Request for Admission No. 2, arguing that Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370(a) requires Morgan Stanley to specify the “particular portions” of the documents that reflect the opinions of out-of-court declarants. (Aug. 17, 2004 CPH’s & MAFCO’s Mot. to Compel Supp. Resps. to Reqs. for Admiss. ¶ 4.)

ARGUMENT

CPH misstates the requirements of Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370. Without citing any authority, CPH argues that Rule 1.370(a) requires a party responding to a request for admission to be “as specific as possible” concerning its denials. (CPH Motion ¶ 3.) But that requirement — which appears nowhere in Rule 1.370 or the Florida case law interpreting it — is squarely rejected by the express terms of Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370(a). To the contrary, the obligation sought to be imposed by CPH in its motion would turn the express requirements of Rule 1.370 on its head.

Rule 1.370(a) clearly states the requirements for responding to a request for admission:

A denial shall fairly meet the substance of the requested admission, and when good faith requires that a party qualify an answer or deny only part of the matter of which an admission is requested, the party shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder.

Rule 1.370(a) — by its express terms — does not require a party responding to a request for admission to “specify” the portions of the request the party intends to deny. Rather, where a request for admission is comprised of a “part” to be admitted and a “part” that is to be denied, Rule 1.370(a) requires only that the responding party “specify so much of [the request] as is true.” Id. The responding party is directed to “qualify or deny the remainder” of the request. Id. (emphasis added). Accordingly, Rule 1.370(a) expressly permits Morgan Stanley to “specify” the portions of Request for Admission No. 2 that are true — and “deny,” without additional specification, “the remainder.” Id.

CPH’s Request for Admission No. 2 asks Morgan Stanley to admit that the referenced personnel evaluation documents are “records of regularly conducted business activity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).” (Ex. 1, Admiss 2.) That request is comprised of at least two “parts.” First, the request asks whether the referenced documents are “records of regularly conducted business activities,” which is only one of the required elements that must be established to meet the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). Second, the request for admission Morgan Stanley to admit that the documents meet all of the requirements of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).²

Morgan Stanley’s response to Request for Admission No. 2 answered both “parts” of CPH’s request — and “specified” the “parts” of the request that are true. Morgan Stanley admitted that the referenced documents were “generated in the course of a regularly conducted business activity” and that the documents are “kept in the ordinary course of its business.” (Ex. 1, Resp. 2.) Morgan Stanley denied the “remainder” of the request because — for the reasons stated in the response — the referenced documents meet all of the requirements of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). Accordingly, Morgan Stanley’s response “fairly meets” the substance of Request for Admission No. 2.

² This conclusion is confirmed by a review of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6)(a)-(c), which sets forth all of the requirements that must be established before a document will qualify for the “business records” hearsay exception. All of the requirements in these three subsections are grouped under the single subheading “Records of regularly conducted business activity.” See Fla. Evidence Code § 90.803(6).

CPH argues that it is not sufficient for Morgan Stanley's response to "refer to an undifferentiated group of documents" when identifying its basis for denying portions of the request. (CPH Motion ¶ 4.) But it is CPH (not Morgan Stanley) that has failed to comply with the requirements of Rule 1.370(a) in that regard. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370(a) requires that "[e]ach matter of which admission is requested shall be separately set forth." CPH's Request For Admission No. 2, which itself refers to "an undifferentiated group" of 77 documents consisting of 1044 pages, in a single request, fails to meet this requirement. Having served a blunderbuss request that does not distinguish between individual documents or "particular portions" of documents (CPH Motion ¶ 4), CPH cannot complain that Morgan Stanley framed its response in similar terms. In this respect as well, therefore, Morgan Stanley's response "fairly meets the substance of the requested admission."

CONCLUSION

CPH's Motion should be denied. Alternatively, because Request for Admission No. 2 relates to an evidentiary issue that will arise (if at all) in connection with motions in limine directed to the admissibility of particular trial exhibits, the Court should "determine that final disposition of the request be made at a pretrial conference or at a designated time before trial," as expressly permitted by Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.370(a).

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S SECOND SET OF REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co."), by its attorneys and pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.370, hereby responds and objects to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Second Set of Requests for Admission.

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Second Set of Requests for Admission, including all Definitions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon MS & Co. any requirements that exceed or are otherwise inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order.
2. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Second Set of Requests for Admission to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

3. MS & Co. objects to the definitions of "Morgan Stanley" and "MSSF" to the extent that they include MS & Co.'s or MSSF's counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MS & Co. interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP and Carlton Fields, P.A and affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action.

4. MS & Co. objects to the Requests for Admission as unduly burdensome, abusive, and vexatious, since many of them are duplicative and constitute an unnecessary waste of time and concern factual allegations uniquely within the possession of CPH, MAFCO, or third parties, which could be confirmed with less expense and burden on the parties through more traditional techniques of discovery.

5. MS & Co. incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these General Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES

1. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are true and authentic copies of original documents within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.901.

RESPONSE: Admitted.

2. Admit that documents bates-numbered Morgan Stanley Confidential 0084771 through 0085783 and Morgan Stanley Confidential 0094003 through 0094032 are records of regularly conducted business activity within the meaning of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6).

RESPONSE: Admitted in part and denied in part. MS & Co. admits that the referenced documents are generated in the course of a regularly conducted business activity, but denies that the documents, which largely reflect the opinions of out-of-court declarants, qualify for the hearsay exception of Florida Evidence Code § 90.803(6). MS & Co. reserves all evidentiary objections to the admissibility of the referenced documents, but will not dispute that the documents are kept in the ordinary course of its business.

MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.'S OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING INC.'S AND MACANDREWS & FORBES
HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL COMPLETE ANSWERS TO INTERROGATORY NOS. 1 AND 3 IN MAFCO'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES TO MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.'s ("MAFCO" and collectively "CPH") motion to compel further responses to Interrogatory Nos. 1 and 3 should be denied because: (1) Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") has provided complete responses to MAFCO's interrogatories that comply with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure and the standard of practice established by the Court and the parties in this case; and (2) CPH's motion improperly asks this Court to rewrite MAFCO's vague and overbroad interrogatories.

BACKGROUND

1. On June 22, 2004, MAFCO served its First Set of Interrogatories. Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3, those at issue in this motion to compel, relate to the potential synergies resulting from the proposed combination of Sunbeam and Coleman. More specifically, they inquire about Morgan Stanley's reliance on synergy information, and Morgan Stanley's involvement in the creation, development, preparation or use of certain synergy documents.

2. Interrogatory No. 1 asks MSSF to "[i]dentify each individual who relied upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part, at any time and for any purpose. For each individual, describe in detail when and how each individual relied upon Exhibit A or in information derived from Exhibit A, and what each individual did with the information contained in Exhibit A or derived from Exhibit A." (Aug. 9, 2004 MSSF Resp. & Objs. to MAFCO's 1st Set of Interrogs., Interrog. 1 (Ex. 1) ("MSSF Resp.")). MSSF responded fully to this Interrogatory. (Id., Resp. 1.)

3. Interrogatory No. 3 asks MSSF to "[i]dentify each individual involved in creating, developing, preparing, or using the following documents, or the information contained therein: MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 3136, 3931, 33911, 36113, 31983-31984, 84007-84010, and 84012-84019. As to each person identified, describe in detail that individual's role in creating, developing, preparing, or using such documents or the information contained therein." (Id., Interrog. 3.) Again, MSSF responded fully to this Interrogatory. (Id., Resp. 3.)

4. On August 17, 2004, CPH and MAFCO filed the instant motion to compel seeking an Order directing MSSF "to provide supplemental answers to Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3 in MAFCO's first set of interrogatories," arguing merely that MSSF's responses were "patently inadequate." (Aug. 17, 2004 CPH's & MAFCO's Motion to Compel Complete Answer to Interrog. Nos. 1 & 3 in MAFCO's 1st Set of Interrogs. to MSSF at 3, 6.)

ARGUMENT

1. MSSF's Responses Are Complete Pursuant To The Florida Rules And Prior Findings Of This Court.

CPH complains that MSSF has "failed to provide complete responses to Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3" in that MSSF has "list[ed] several individuals who 'may have relied' on Coleman's synergies estimates" or "who 'may have had a role' in the creation, development, or use of particular synergy documents." (Aug. 11, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 2).) This criticism is without merit.

MSSF has responded to MAFCO's interrogatories in good faith and to the best of its ability – i.e., in a manner which is consistent with its obligations under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure. Before responding to MAFCO's interrogatories, MSSF conducted a thorough inquiry into the details and facts underlying MAFCO's requests. As has been the case throughout this discovery process, the passage of over six years time since the transaction at issue, and the resignation and/or death of numerous Morgan Stanley personnel who were involved in the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, have limited the availability of information.

Additionally, MSSF was required to answer the interrogatories based on the broad scope and indeterminate nature of MAFCO's interrogatories themselves. Specifically, Interrogatory No. 1 requested the identity of "each individual who relied upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part, at any time for any purpose." (MSSF Resp., Interrog. 1 (emphasis added).) Similarly vague and overbroad is Interrogatory No. 3, which sought the identity of "each individual involved in creating, developing, preparing, or using" certain enumerated synergy documents. (Id., Interrog. 3.) The breadth and vagueness of MAFCO's interrogatories necessarily compound the difficulty in providing absolute certainty in MSSF's responses.

Nonetheless, MSSF was able to identify a number of current and former Morgan Stanley employees it believed had relied, either directly or indirectly on Exhibit A in whole or in part, at any time, for any purpose, with regard to Interrogatory No. 1, or who it believed, based on its investigation, had had a role in the creation, preparation, development or use of the documents identified in Interrogatory No. 3. MSSF's good faith effort to respond to the Interrogatories is evidenced by the fact that in response to each request for the identity of relevant employees associated with a particular topic, MSSF provided MAFCO with a discrete list – one which differed according to the subject matter of the interrogatory, and the corresponding roles of Morgan Stanley personnel at the time of the transaction. As Morgan Stanley has argued before, “[s]hort of omniscience, it is impossible to determine [whether] third parties (former employees) [relied, either directly or indirectly on Exhibit A in whole or in part, at any time, for any purpose, about any particular topic].” (April 14, 2004 MS's Opp. to CPH's Motion to Compel Answers to Interrogs. at 3.)

Furthermore, this Court has already rejected CPH's efforts to manufacture a dispute regarding the semantics of MSSF's interrogatory responses. Specifically, when presented with nearly identical arguments in relation to a differing set of interrogatories, this Court determined that:

It's apparent to me that these answers to the interrogatories were prepared in good faith, that voluminous information was reviewed before they were prepared. This is not a case where we got a list of 200 people in response and you said they may have information. Clearly it was apparent ... that this was Defendant's good faith belief that these people have information, we simply cannot confirm for each one that he or she does.... In all honesty, I think the responses to the interrogatories sort have met the standard of practice that's been established in the case.

The same standard applies today. The only fact that has changed since the Court last heard this issue is that six years, rather than five and a half, have passed since the Sunbeam transaction closed. Morgan Stanley's former employees still work for others. MSSF has again reviewed large number of depositions and discovery documents in its efforts to respond to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories. In fact, the discovery responses that MSSF served in response to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories – the discovery responses at issue in the attendant motion to compel – are replete with substantiating citations to documents and deposition testimony, thereby exceeding even the thoroughness of the interrogatory responses that this Court found satisfactory at the April 16, 2004 hearing. As a result, the current motion before the Court is simply an attempt to have the Court reverse its prior order.

CPH argues that the Court should now apply a different standard to these interrogatories because their questions are more tailored, the parties have taken discovery, and MSSF is the plaintiff. While portions of CPH's argument may be true, the fact remains that MSSF was unable to engage in detailed questioning of relevant former employees regarding the subject matter of Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3. MSSF did question current employees, it did review deposition testimony, it did review a multitude of documents, and it did review computerized meta-data information in search of answers to MAFCO's interrogatories. MSSF did the best that it could with the information that was available to it – and that is all that is required under Florida law.

Finally, CPH has further challenged the veracity of MSSF's interrogatory answers through misleading or incomplete references to the deposition testimony of various current and former Morgan Stanley employees. CPH points to specific questions and answers on discreet topics, and then extrapolates from the answers the conclusion that Morgan Stanley could not have relied on synergy numbers provided to it by CPH or MAFCO. CPH thus concludes that MSSF's interrogatory answers are "especially egregious." (CPH Motion at 5.)

As an example of lack of veracity of MSSF's answers, CPH cites the testimony of Bram Smith, and states that "he has no basis to believe that the acquisition price of Coleman was affected by any synergy representations of CPH or MAFCO." (Id.) The exact question that was asked of Mr. Smith is as follows: "Do you remember anyone at the Leveraged Finance Commitment Committee's meeting saying that with respect to the potential Coleman synergies, we're relying on Coleman management for those concepts or the values associated with them?" (Feb. 24, 2004 Smith Dep. at 223 (Ex. 3).) Interrogatory No. 1 does not, however merely ask for those who relied solely or directly on Coleman synergies. To the contrary, the text of the discovery request is much broader, encompassing the actual synergies numbers themselves (Exhibit A), as well as information derived from Exhibit A. Further, the request broadly encompassed complete and partial reliance, at any time, and for any purpose. To the extent that someone, at some point had relied on the Coleman synergies figures, and incorporated that reliance into his or her analysis of the transaction, then a complete interrogatory answer necessarily includes any person who later reviewed and relied on that analysis.¹ This is the comprehensive response that was required of, and provided by, MSSF based on the language of the interrogatories.

¹ Interestingly, CPH and MAFCO omitted any mention of Tyrone Chang's testimony, which revealed that he did in fact review the synergy document at issue, that he modeled those synergies, and that various committee and Board presentations were presented with financial and synergy information that derived from the one-page listing that had been provided to Morgan Stanley by CPH or MAFCO. (Jan. 8, 2004 Chang Dep. at 171-172, 203 (Ex. 4).)

2. CPH's Motion Again Seeks To Have The Court Rewrite Its Interrogatories.

CPH is again trying to rewrite its interrogatory requests via motions to compel. CPH seeks the Court's assistance now because MAFCO's interrogatory requests were poorly worded, and they did not get the response that they wanted. For example, in their motion, CPH asserts that they are "entitled to know who, if anyone, in fact relied upon the synergy numbers." (CPH Motion at 3 (emphasis in original).) That is not what was asked. Rather, MAFCO broadly extended the reach of Interrogatory No. 1 to incorporate not only the synergy numbers (Exhibit A), but also "information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part." (MSSF Resp., Interrog. 1 (emphasis added).) Neither through its questions nor its definitions did MAFCO ask MSSF to distinguish between those individuals who relied on Exhibit A, those who relied on information derived from Exhibit A, those who relied in whole, those who relied in part, those who relied at different times, or for different purposes. MSSF responded to Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3 as written. That is all the rules require.

3. CPH Misapprehends General Objection No. 5.

CPH falsely states that MSSF has made a general objection stating "in essence that MSSF was not vouching for the accuracy of any of its responses." (CPH Motion at 3.) CPH knows this is wrong. When asked about the meaning of General Objection No. 5, Morgan Stanley wrote CPH and MAFCO that "[t]he objection was intended to disclaim the 'relevance,' 'factual accuracy' or 'actual[] possess[ion of] knowledge' of the text of MAFCO's interrogatories -- not MSSF's verified answers." (Aug. 13, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody (Ex. 5).)

For the foregoing reasons, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court deny CPH's and MAFCO's Motion to Compel Complete Answers To Interrogatory Nos. 1 and 3 In MAFCO'S First Set Of Interrogatories To Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. in its entirety.

MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDING INC.'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, hereby responds and objects to MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc.'s ("MAFCO") First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. MSSF objects to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories, including all Definitions and Instructions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon MSSF any requirements that exceed or are otherwise inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order.

2. MSSF objects to MAFCO's First Set of Interrogatories to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney-work-product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

3. MSSF objects to the definitions of "Morgan Stanley" and "MSSF" to the extent that they include counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MSSF interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Carlton Fields, P.A, Kellogg Huber Hansen Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. as well as affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action.

4. MSSF objects to the definition of "Identify" when used with respect to a person to the extent that it seeks the addresses and phone numbers of persons named. Such persons who are employees of MSSF should not be contacted directly, but rather communications must go through counsel.

5. MSSF's response to any interrogatory is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgement of relevance or factual accuracy, or that any person identified actually possesses knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action.

6. MSSF's objections and responses are based on a good faith investigation. MSSF expressly reserves the right to amend and/or modify its objections and responses.

7. MSSF incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these General Objections into each of the Responses and Objections set forth below.

RESPONSES AND SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Identify each individual who relied upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part, at any time and for any purpose. For each individual, describe in detail when and how each individual relied upon Exhibit A or in information derived from Exhibit A, and what each individual did with the information contained in Exhibit A or derived from Exhibit A.

RESPONSE: MSSF notes that Defendant's Interrogatory No. 1 constitutes at least three separate interrogatories. Subject to and without waving its general and specific objections, MSSF responds as follows:

MAFCO and its wholly-owned subsidiary, CPH, made false statements to Sunbeam, Sunbeam's financial advisors, and Sunbeam's lenders regarding the "synergies" that Sunbeam could expect to achieve from an acquisition of The Coleman Company.

Specifically, throughout the negotiations leading to Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, MAFCO and CPH falsely represented that the acquisition would result in post-closing synergies of $150.5 million per year, falsely stated that lower synergy figures were "understated," and falsely stated that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley were not giving MAFCO and CPH "enough credit" for synergies in the valuation of a combined Sunbeam/Coleman entity. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557-558] MAFCO and CPH made false synergy representations to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley verbally and in writing. The false synergy information provided by MAFCO and CPH in writing (memorialized in the document attached as Exhibit A to MSSF's Complaint), and false synergy information derived from that document became part of the total mix of information relied on by Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley & Co., and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in the acquisition and financing transactions that followed.

On or about December 12, 1997, Sunbeam and Coleman representatives held a meeting at MAFCO's offices in New York to discuss the proposed acquisition of Coleman and the benefits that would accrue to Sunbeam if the deal went forward. This meeting was attended by, among others, Jerry W. Levin, Coleman's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Joseph P. Page, Coleman's Chief Financial Officer, and Paul E. Shapiro, Coleman's General Counsel. Representatives of Sunbeam included Russell A. Kersh, Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer, David C. Fannin, Sunbeam's Chief Legal Officer, and Peter Langerman, a director of Sunbeam and representative of its then-largest shareholder, Franklin Mutual Advisors, Inc. Coleman's

During this meeting, CPH and MAFCO representatives provided Sunbeam with a detailed written schedule identifying 15 different areas of synergies between Sunbeam and Coleman, predicting that the acquisition would result in post-closing synergies totaling $150.5 million per year. [CPH 1020748] To maintain the credibility of this representation, CPH's and MAFCO's written schedule included detailed figures for each of the 15 areas of purported synergies, and a detailed "build-up" of these 15 areas totaling $150.5 million. Those categories of synergies which were presented by Coleman and MAFCO to Sunbeam included the following line-items: "Transfer BBQ License," "Synergies re CG BBQ," "Corporate Staff," "International Group Staff," "Latin America Staff," "[Coleman] Europe Network Sells [Sunbeam] Products," "[Coleman] Japan Network Sells [Sunbeam] Products," "Factory Outlet Staff," "S Catalytic Appliance Line," "Consolidate Division HQ To [Del Ray Beach, FL]," "Consolidate Domestic Salesforces," "Eliminate $20 million Oracle Expense," "Additional $25M Writeoffs," "Global Sourcing Raw Materials," "Consolidation Logistics & Warehousing"

During the December 12, 1997 meeting, CPH and MAFCO verbally supplemented and affirmed the synergy figures contained in this schedule by providing additional information and detail about each of the fifteen line-items. These verbal representations purported to confirm the facts built into each figure and affirmed that the total calculation of $150.5 million was a fair and prudent estimate of synergies to be gained annually from Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. Shortly following this meeting, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the synergy schedule from the Sunbeam officials who had participated in the meeting. [CPH 1020748] From this point forward, the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule, and information derived from it, was important information considered by Sunbeam in determining the price Sunbeam was willing to pay for Coleman; was important information considered by MS & Co. in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering; and was important information considered by MSSF in going forward with its bank loan to Sunbeam.

As the negotiation of the Coleman acquisition progressed, CPH and MAFCO repeatedly and consistently vouched for the $150.5 million figure represented in their December 12, 1997 synergy schedule, as well as the factual basis from which that figure was purportedly derived. Defendants repeated these false synergy representations during negotiations leading up to the Coleman acquisition.

Specifically, on January 27, 1998, William Reid of Morgan Stanley had a discussion with representatives of The Coleman Company, in which Coleman expressed their position that the synergies had been "understated," and that it was Coleman's view that there were "at least $150MM in synergies." [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 558]

Subsequently, representatives of Sunbeam and Coleman held another meeting on January 29, 1998, at MAFCO's New York offices to discuss the proposed acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam, to update the parties' discussions of synergies from the December 12, 1997 meeting, and to discuss the benefits that would accrue to Sunbeam from the proposed acquisition of Coleman. Representatives from Morgan Stanley also attended the meeting, including Tyrone Chang, Alex Fuchs, and Jim Stynes. Senior officials from the CPH and MAFCO, including MAFCO executives James Maher and William Nesbitt, attended the meeting

on behalf of Coleman. [CPH 1401525 at 529, MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0033256 at 260, and CPH 1042291 at 294]

And again, on February 16, 1998, representatives from Morgan Stanley had a conversation with James Maher, of MAFCO, who reiterated MAFCO's and CPH's belief that Sunbeam/Morgan Stanley was not "giving them enough credit in for synergies in the valuation" of the combined entity. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557]

At each opportunity, CPH's and MAFCO's agents and representatives discussed, affirmed, and ratified the information contained in the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule. CPH's and MAFCO's agents and representatives represented that $150.5 million was the fair and prudent projection of annual synergies to be gained by Sunbeam through its acquisition of Coleman, and that any lower synergies figures were "understated." [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0044556 at 557-558] These assurances by CPH and MAFCO regarding the $150 million synergies figures was important information considered by Sunbeam in determining the price Sunbeam was willing to pay for Coleman; was important information considered by MS & Co. in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering; and was important information considered by MSSF in going forward with its bank loan to Sunbeam.

Because the December 12, 1997 schedule of synergies and subsequent verbal affirmations by CPH and MAFCO were presented to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley during the negotiations leading to the acquisition and related financing transactions, Exhibit A, and information derived from it, played a role in the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman.

Accordingly, the following individuals, each of whom played a role in the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman, may have relied, directly or indirectly, upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A:

- Shani Boone, Analyst, Investment Banking Division
- Tyrone Chang, Analyst, Investment Banking Division [Chang at 171:24-172:12, 203:6-17]
- Benjamin D. Derito, Analyst, Investment Banking Division
- Alex Fuchs, Vice President, Investment Banking Division
- Johannes Groeller, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- Michael Hart, Executive Director, Investment Banking Division [Hart at 31:23-32:7, and 58:3-21]
- Robert Kitts, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division [Kitts at 125:12-19]
- Ruth Porat, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- Lily Rafii, Analyst, Global Private Wealth Management Division [Rafii at 158:23-25]
- Andrew B. Savarie, Vice President, Investment Banking Division
- Bram Smith, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- William Strong, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- James Stynes, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- John Tyree, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- Joshua A. Webber, Associate, Investment Banking Division
- William H. Wright, Managing Director, Investment Banking Division
- Gene K. Yoo, Associate, Investment Banking Division

Further, synergies resulting from the proposed combination of Sunbeam and Coleman were modeled, based in part on Exhibit A and information derived from Exhibit A under various scenarios with a midpoint of $150 million, the same synergy figure represented by MAFCO and CPH. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0026443 at 472-479] These models and results were subsequently presented to Sunbeam's Board of Directors, which included Albert Dunlap, Charles Elson, Russell Kersh, Howard Kristol, Peter Langerman, William Rutter and Faith Whittlesey, who relied on the information in the course of their analysis and ultimate resolution of matters presented before them. [CPH 0075371]

Synergies analyses were also presented to Morgan Stanley's Leveraged Finance Commitment Committee, which in the spring of 1998 may have included all or some of the following individuals: Leslie E. Bradford, Steven L. Brown, Joel P. Feldmann, Richard B. Felix, William Kourakos, Tarek F. Abdel-Meguid, Stephen R. Munger, Stephan F. Newhouse, Ralph L. Pellecchio, Michael L. Rankowitz, William J. Sanders, Mariam A. Short, Dwight D. Sippelle, Bram Smith and William Strong, [See, MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 214], and Morgan Stanley's Equity Commitment Committee, which in the spring of 1998 may have included all or some of the following individuals: Mayree C. Clark, Michael Curtis, John H. Faulkner, Carla A. Harris, John P. Havens, Richard L. Kaufman, Jim Little, Tarek F. Abdel-Meguid, Ralph L. Pellecchio, Ruth M. Porat, William J. Sanders, Dennis F. Shea, Scott M. Sippelle, Ed Sullivan, and William H. Wright. [Conway at 62:11-63:3] Synergy information, including information derived from Exhibit A, was considered by MS & Co.'s and MSSF's decision-making groups in underwriting and fixing the terms of Sunbeam's $750 million convertible debt offering, and in going forward with the bank loan to Sunbeam. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 230, 232 and 237; MORGAN STANLEY

CONFIDENTIAL 0026545 at 567]; and MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0000513 at 525 and 529] Indeed, the presentations to the Leveraged Finance Commitment and Equity Commitment Committees estimated that the synergy figures presented were "conservative" estimates [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 232], and that there could be an "upside" to the figures presented. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0028214 at 237; MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0000513 at 529]

Morgan Stanley further relied on CPH's and MAFCO's synergy figures through discussions with, among others, Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand, whose views regarding synergies appear to have been based (at least in part) on the December 12, 1997 synergy schedule and the subsequent statements by CPH and MAFCO regarding synergies. Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand were also involved in the preparation, development, and analysis of synergies, and thereby also may have relied, to varying degrees, on Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A.

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify with particularity what steps MSSF, Morgan Stanley and/or Sunbeam undertook to develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman. Your response should identify each individual involved.

RESPONSE: MSSF notes that Defendant's Interrogatory No. 2 constitutes at least two separate requests. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, MSSF states that MSSF, Morgan Stanley, and/or Sunbeam took the following steps to "develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman":

Morgan Stanley participated in numerous meetings and conference calls with Sunbeam and Coleman management in an effort to learn about the Sunbeam and Coleman businesses and about potential synergies and cost savings associated with such a combination.

forward basis, which entailed a valuation of potential synergies and an analysis and compilation of publicly available information regarding the parties to the transaction. [Chang at 47:10-16, 174:1-10, 186;23-188:1, 190-196; Conway at 72:9-11, 77:5-78:12] Morgan Stanley received a document outlining potential synergies, which were then modeled using a range of synergies, i.e., a range of dollar values which resulted in a range of potential impacts on the transaction. [Chang at 172:6-12, 176:24-178:2; CPH 1020748-749]. Specifically, Morgan Stanley created models, including but not limited to those which examined trading analyses, precedent transaction analyses, discounted cash flow analyses, and estimated value of synergies analyses. [Chang at 190-196]

Morgan Stanley modeled the synergies under various assumptions, and discussed the synergies with the relevant companies, however Morgan Stanley did not perform an independent valuation of the potential synergies that would result from the transaction. The financial synergy data came from CPH, MAFCO, Sunbeam and Coopers & Lybrand. Morgan Stanley ultimately presented the information that was provided by the companies. [Stynes at 62:23-63:8; Yoo at 126:14-127:4, 145:21-146:4]

Apart from Morgan Stanley's efforts to "develop, analyze, consider, model, evaluate, or review potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman," Morgan Stanley believes that representatives from Coopers & Lybrand and from Sunbeam also were involved in preparing, developing, and analyzing the synergy figures. For example, Coopers & Lybrand "physically visited facilities and would comment positively and/or negatively on the ability to achieve the preliminary synergies that ha[d] been identified." [Kitts at 100:24-101:7; Page 202:1-5; CPH 1401525 at 531; MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0007317]

- On February 25-26, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel, including Robert Kitts, James Stynes and Joshua Webber, participated on a conference call with Sunbeam personnel, including David Fannin and Russell Kersh; MAFCO personnel, including James Maher; and Wachtell Lipton personnel to discuss due diligence on the Coleman/Sunbeam transaction. [CPH 1042288, at 2302, MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0033255 at 262]
- On February 26, 1998, Joshua Webber of Morgan Stanley communicated with MAFCO personnel, including James Maher, regarding synergies analyses. [CPH 1120533]
- On March 4-5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel, including Thomas Burchill, Seth Ishaan, Andrew Savarie, Bram Smith, and John Tyree, met with Sunbeam personnel, including Debra MacDonald to conduct due diligence on the Coleman/Sunbeam transaction with relation to the credit facility. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0035935]
- Date uncertain -- Morgan Stanley personnel, including Michael Hart, spoke to Coleman personnel, including Jerry Levin, and Sunbeam personnel, including Albert Dunlap, about the achievability of synergies numbers. [Hart at 40:3-15]

Additionally, Morgan Stanley researched and requested information from Coleman and Sunbeam necessary for the development, analysis, consideration, modeling, evaluation, or review of potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0031791-799] Morgan Stanley probed management and asked questions regarding synergy plans, testing their ability to execute those synergies on the given timetable. [Smith at 278:7-18] Morgan Stanley reviewed this information, including, but not limited to the listing of synergies and cost savings provided to Morgan Stanley by Coleman (via Sunbeam) on December 12, 1997 [CPH 1020748-749]. Morgan Stanley personnel involved in this process included Tyrone Chang, Andrew Conway, Alexander Fuchs and Gene Yoo. [Fuchs at 127:7-21; Yoo at 105:2-12]

Furthermore, Morgan Stanley personnel, including Tyrone Chang and Andrew Conway, created and compiled pro forma models for the new combined business on a going

Sunbeam "develop[ed], analyze[d], consider[ed], model[ed], evaluate[d], or review[ed] potential synergies, cost savings, and/or financial benefits that Sunbeam could achieve from a business combination with Coleman" in several ways. Sunbeam personnel participated in numerous meetings and conference calls pertaining to due diligence issues, including but not limited to business due diligence, legal due diligence, human resources due diligence, insurance due diligence and tax due diligence. [MORGAN STANLEY CONFIDENTIAL 0007317] Additionally, Scott Yales has testified to having performed synergies analyses -- validating the assumptions, testing their viability, and coordinating these efforts with Coleman -- the source of these synergies numbers, and to having worked with Coopers & Lybrand, who was retained to validate synergistic opportunities. INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Identify each individual involved on behalf of MSSF and Morgan Stanley in conducting, reviewing, or participating in due diligence of Sunbeam in connection with (i) the Coleman Transaction, (ii) the February 27 Agreements; (iii) the Subordinated Debenture Offering; and (iv) the Bank Facility, and for each such individual, describe in detail what steps that individual undertook to conduct that due diligence.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley notes that Defendant's Interrogatory No. 4 constitutes at least four separate requests. Morgan Stanley objects to Request No. 4 as overbroad and unduly burdensome to the extent that this request seeks an enumeration of every specific instance Morgan Stanley performed "due diligence" on Sunbeam. As Morgan Stanley's witnesses have repeatedly testified, due diligence is a broad term that encompasses, among other activities, nearly every discussion that Morgan Stanley had with Sunbeam's personnel and advisors and nearly every instance in which a Morgan Stanley representative requested information from Sunbeam or reviewed that information.

Morgan Stanley further objects to Request No. 4 as overbroad and unduly burdensome to the extent that this request seeks an enumeration of every specific instance Morgan Stanley performed "due diligence" on Sunbeam because the due diligence activities contemplated by Request No. 4 occurred over five years ago. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, Morgan Stanley states the individuals listed below were among the Morgan Stanley representatives who conducted due diligence in connection with the Coleman transaction, the convertible debenture offering and the bank loan:

Robert Kitts	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and associated debenture offering, Mr. Kitts researched publicly available information regarding Sunbeam, conducted interviews with Sunbeam management, maintained an ongoing dialogue with Sunbeam personnel, reviewed research reports, and attended due diligence meetings with Sunbeam and Coleman representatives. [Kitts at 73:22-74:25; 87:6-17, 91:15-92:13] Mr. Kitts did not have any role in bring-down due diligence for the debt offering. [Kitts at 151:17-20]
Andrew Savarie	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and associated debenture offering, Mr. Savarie attended due diligence meetings with Sunbeam, gathered information regarding Sunbeam, reviewed drafts of the offering documents, visited Sunbeam's offices, and had ongoing discussions with Sunbeam representatives about Sunbeam's business forecasts. [Savarie at 50:14-25, 57:2-23, 68:8-21, 90:2-20 and 112:16-22] Mr. Savarie also had at least one discussion with Sunbeam's accountants at Arthur Andersen and was involved in discussions with lawyers for Sunbeam and for the other banks. [Savarie at 58:12-59:3, 78:6-21] Mr. Savarie does not recall being involved in due diligence of the acquisition targets.

Bram Smith	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the senior loan, Mr. Smith supervised aspects of due diligence that were conducted with respect to the structuring of the senior loan. [Smith at 85:2-20] Mr. Smith attended at least one due diligence meeting at Sunbeam's offices on March 4 and 5, 1998, analyzed available projections and the possible loan structures, and participated in telephone calls and review of documents regarding Sunbeam's financial performance. [Smith at 85:21-86:9, 91:5-19, 92:8-19, 144:10-145:6] Mr. Smith also maintained an ongoing dialogue with Sunbeam in the context of asking questions related to the debt financing. [Tyree at 434:18-435:6] Morgan Stanley notes that First Union and Bank of America also conducted due diligence in connection with the senior loan.
Ruth Porat	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the debenture offering, Ms. Porat participated in telephone discussions with Sunbeam representatives regarding Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance, and reviewed documents prepared and presented by senior Sunbeam sales officials regarding projected sales for the balance of the first quarter. [Smith at 82:6-83:2, 141:25-142:6; Porat at 18:2-15, 73:24-74:12]
Jim Stynes	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction, Mr. Stynes had regular discussions with Sunbeam management and employees, participated in conference calls with Sunbeam, visited Sunbeam locations, and presented the materials Morgan Stanley was developing back to Sunbeam management and employees to insure that Morgan Stanley's material accurately reflected the information provided to Morgan Stanley by Sunbeam management. [Strong at 313:6-22]
William Strong	As part of Morgan Stanley's due diligence for the Coleman Transaction and related debenture offering, Mr. Strong participated in telephone discussions with Sunbeam representatives regarding Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance, and reviewed documents prepared and presented by senior Sunbeam sales officials regarding projected sales for the balance of the first quarter. Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Tom:

I write concerning certain deficiencies in MSSF's August 9, 2004 responses to Mafo's interrogatories.

General Objection No. 3: MSSF objects to CPH's definitions of "Morgan Stanley" and "MSSF" to the extent that they include entities not a party to this action. MSSF may not unilaterally modify our interrogatories by redefining their terms. By doing so, MSSF has violated Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.340(a), which provides that a party "shall furnish the information available to that party." To the extent that MSSF has information responsive to Mafo's interrogatories as phrased, MSSF must provide that information. Please inform us if as a result of that objection, MSSF withheld any information otherwise responsive to the interrogatories. If so, we request that MSSF withdraw that objection and provide a full response to the interrogatories immediately.

General Objection No. 5: MSSF states that its response to any interrogatory "is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgment of the relevance or factual accuracy, or that any person identified actually possesses knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action." MSSF cannot circumvent Florida Rule of Civil procedure 1.340(a) requiring verifications that interrogatory answers are true and correct with an objection that essentially disclaims the verification. Please retract General Objection No. 5 immediately.

Interrogatory Response Nos. 1 & 3: MSSF fails to provide complete responses to Interrogatory Nos. 1 and 3. In response to those interrogatories, MSSF lists several individuals who "may have relied" on Coleman's synergies estimates, and several others who "may have had a role" in the creation, development, or use of particular synergy documents. Given the extensive discovery that has taken place in this case to date, MSSF's responses are insufficient and inadequate under the Florida rules. Please amend those responses immediately to provide more definitive answers.

Given MSSF's delay in providing responses to these interrogatories, it is imperative that MSSF amend its interrogatory answers immediately. Please provide amended interrogatory responses by August 13, 2004 or the parties will be at issue.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Jenner & Block, LLP
One IBM Plaza
Chicago, IL 60611-7603Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
MSSF v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. et al.

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your August 11, 2004 letter regarding alleged "deficiencies" contained in Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's Responses and Objections to MacAndrews and Forbes Holding Inc.'s First Set of Interrogatories.

General Objection No. 3: MSSF has not withheld any information based on its General Objection No. 3, which states that "MSSF objects to the definitions of 'Morgan Stanley' and 'MSSF' to the extent that they include counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MSSF interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Carlton Fields, P.A., Kellogg Huber Hansen Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. as well as affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action." MSSF has provided to MAFCO all information available to both MSSF and MS & Co.

General Objection No. 5: MAFCO misreads MSSF's General Objection No. 5, which reads, "MSSF's response to any interrogatory is not intended and should not be construed as an acknowledgement of relevance or factual accuracy, or that any person identified actually possesses knowledge or information relevant to the subject matter of this action." The objection was intended to disclaim the "relevance," "factual accuracy" or "actual[] possess[ion of] knowledge" of the text of MAFCO's interrogatories – not MSSF's verified answers.

Interrogatory Response Nos. 1 & 3: MAFCO complains that MSSF has "fail[ed] to provide complete responses to Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3" because of the utilization of terms "may have relied" and "may have had a role" in MSSF's responses. As an initial matter, MSSF has responded to Interrogatories Nos. 1 and 3 as definitively as possible in light of (a) the manner in which MAFCO asked the questions (i.e., "who relied upon Exhibit A or information derived from Exhibit A, in whole or in part, at any time and for any purpose"); (b) the limited information available to Morgan Stanley about who created or worked on certain documents; and (c) the fact that the interrogatories purport to request, at least in part, information known solely by third parties outside of Morgan Stanley's control.

Furthermore, the Court has already rejected your efforts to manufacture a dispute regarding the semantics of interrogatory responses; In denying Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s April 9, 2004 Motion to Compel Answers To Interrogatories, which raised substantially identical issues, Judge Maas determined:

"[i]t's apparent to me that these answers to the interrogatories were prepared in good faith, that voluminous information was reviewed before they were prepared. This is not a case where we got a list of 200 people in response and you said they may have information. Clearly it was apparent . . . that this was Defendant's good faith belief that these people have information, we simply cannot confirm for each one that he or she does.... In all honesty, I think the responses to the interrogatories sort have met the standard of practice that's been established in the case." (4/16/04 Case Management Conference, at 51:14-52:7)

The same standard applies today.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Clare

MORGAN STANLEY'S SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN RESPONSE TO THE COURT'S ORDER OF AUGUST 13, 2004, AND MOTION TO DISMISS OR STRIKE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR CONTEMPT

Something has gone wrong here, very wrong. For almost six months the parties have been embroiled in a unilaterally "sealed" contempt proceeding about a document — a settlement agreement explicitly discoverable under Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(2) — that is not confidential under Florida law, should not be confidential under the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, has properly been a matter of public record since no later than December 18, 2003, and in any event was never treated in a contemptuous manner by Morgan Stanley or its counsel. To make matters worse, the contempt proceeding has nothing to do with the merits of these consolidated actions.

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively, "Morgan Stanley") move for reconsideration of two of the Court's earlier Orders, and also move to dismiss or strike the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt as legally insufficient. This motion presents three issues:

First, whether the Court should reconsider its “approval” of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order to the extent it authorizes the sealing of court records in violation of Florida law. The answer is yes. (Arguments A and B)

Second, whether the Court should reconsider that portion of the December 4, 2003 Order that makes the Settlement Agreement subject to the Confidentiality Order. The answer is yes. The Settlement Agreement should not have designated as confidential even for the limited period set forth in the Court’s order. (Argument C)

And third, whether Morgan Stanley can be found in contempt of court for disclosing to its counsel a document that was a matter of public record at the time of disclosure and remains so today. The answer is no. The plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt should be dismissed now as legally insufficient. (Argument D)

In support of this motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows.

Statement of Undisputed Facts

1. On March 12, 2004, the plaintiff filed its Motion for an Order for a Rule to Show Cause Against Morgan Stanley. On May 14, 2004, the Court entered an Order (“May 14 Order”) converting the motion to a “Motion for Contempt.”

2. The gravamen of the Motion for Contempt is that Morgan Stanley violated the terms of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order (“Confidentiality Order”) dated July 31, 2003 by improperly disclosing the Arthur Andersen Settlement Agreement (“Settlement Agreement”) to Morgan Stanley’s counsel Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C., and thereafter using the Settlement Agreement in “other litigation.”

The Stipulated Confidentiality Order

3. On July 28, 2003, the parties submitted to the Court a "proposed Stipulated Confidentiality Order," which the parties asked the Court to sign if it met with the Court's "approval." (July 28, 2004 Letter to the Court from J. Scarola (Ex. 1).)

4. The parties did not request a hearing on the Confidentiality Order, and the Court did not hold a hearing.

5. The Court "signed and dated" the Confidentiality Order on July 31, 2003, without modification or amendment. (July 31, 2003 Stipulated Confidentiality Order (Ex. 2).)

The Motion to Compel Production of the Settlement Agreement

6. On October 29, 2003, Morgan Stanley moved to compel the production of the Settlement Agreement between the plaintiff and Arthur Andersen, which served as the public accountant and the outside auditor for Sunbeam Corporation between 1996 and 1998, the time period at issue in the plaintiff's complaint. There is no dispute that the Settlement Agreement was called for under various Morgan Stanley requests for production served upon CPH. There is also no dispute that CPH refused to produce the Settlement Agreement, even under the terms of the Confidentiality Order.¹

7. The Court heard the motion on November 25, 2003. At the outset of the hearing, the Court stated that a number of documents had been filed under seal and questioned the propriety of filing documents under seal.

¹ CPH argued that the Settlement Agreement was subject to a contractual confidentiality provision that prohibited disclosure of the Settlement Agreement to Morgan Stanley. CPH did not claim and has never claimed that the Settlement Agreement is privileged from disclosure. Indeed, CPH conceded that at least the Settlement Agreement amount would be discoverable, albeit after trial and assuming a judgment against Morgan Stanley. (See, e.g., Nov. 5, 2003 CPH's Resp. in Opp. To Def's Mot. to Compel Prod. of Settlement Agreement with Arthur Andersen.)

THE COURT: This is Coleman and Morgan Stanley. It's defendant's motion, I think, to compel production of a settlement agreement.

MR. IANNO: That's correct.

MR. CLARE: That's correct.

THE COURT: You-all can have a seat. The first motion I have though, and I apologize, I didn't have time to go through the files to try to find this, I see that defendant has filed certain things under seal or has tendered certain things under seal, and I hope that none of them have been filed yet. Was there an order entered that permitted that procedure?

MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor. Joe Ianno. I believe that the confidentiality order that was entered in this case provided for that.

THE COURT: You're going to have to tell me, because I thought —

MR. IANNO: I didn't bring the confidentiality order with me.

THE COURT: Because, obviously, under the Rules of Judicial Administration, things can't get filed under seal --

MR. IANNO: Without notice to media.

THE COURT: And all that. And I thought when I looked at the proposed order in this case, either I struck through that stuff or I mailed it back to you guys and said I can't sign this. And if I haven't done that yet, that's why we need to find that order.

I haven't looked at any of the stuff that was given to me under seal. I need to just give it back to you. It's not my policy to look at things that can't be part of the court record absent a clear order that permits me to do so.

It could be somehow I signed it and I forgot.

(Nov. 25, 2003 Hrg. at 3-4 (Ex. 3).)

8. In the course of the November 25, 2003 hearing, CPH provided the Court with a copy of the Settlement Agreement. The Court apparently made a copy of the Settlement Agreement and then returned the original to counsel for CPH. (Id. at 20, 24.)

The December 4, 2003 Order

9. On December 4, 2003, the Court entered its order ("December 4 Order") compelling production of a redacted copy of the Settlement Agreement, which was attached to the order as "Exhibit 1." The Court placed the unredacted Settlement Agreement in the Court file in a "sealed" envelope, with directions that it not be opened without further order of the Court or an appellate court.

10. The Court ordered the redacted Settlement Agreement be produced to Morgan Stanley, sequenced as follows:

- December 5 at 12 noon, production to CPH
- December 8 at 4 p.m., production to Morgan Stanley
- December 9 at 4 p.m., the file was released from the Court's chambers.

11. On December 8, 2003, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the redacted Settlement Agreement. Morgan Stanley did not receive and does not possess a copy of the unredacted Settlement Agreement.

12. On December 18, 2003, the clerk docketed the Court's December 4 Order. Pursuant to the December 4 Order, the clerk filed under seal the unredacted copy of the Settlement Agreement. In addition, and pursuant to the December 4 Order, the clerk filed — not under seal — a redacted copy of the Settlement Agreement. Thus, as of August 20, 2004, the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement has been a matter of public record for 247 days.

13. The redacted copy of the Settlement Agreement in the public court file discloses all of the terms of the settlement between the plaintiff and Arthur Andersen, including the provisions that are at issue in the plaintiff's Motion for Contempt.

The Motion for Contempt

14. On March 1, 2004, three Morgan Stanley entities (Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc., and Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated) filed a civil action against Arthur Andersen. This action is pending before Judge Karen Miller. Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC (“KHHTE”) represents Morgan Stanley in that action.

15. On March 12, 2004, the plaintiff filed the Motion for Contempt. The motion, which is predicated entirely upon a violation of the Confidentiality Order and the Court’s December 4 Order, makes two allegations. First, that Morgan Stanley violated the Confidentiality Order by disclosing to third parties — including attorneys from KHHTE — on or about February 26, 2004, the Settlement Agreement that was a matter of public record as of December 18, 2003. And second, that Morgan Stanley then (after February 26, 2004) “used” the Settlement Agreement in other litigation — the action against Arthur Andersen — by including as a plaintiff in that action Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated for the sole purpose of triggering the indemnity provision of the Settlement Agreement.

16. Ever since CPH filed the Motion for Contempt, the parties have been engaged in contentious discovery and have appeared before the Court six times at Case Management Conferences to argue matters spawned by the Motion. The Motion has, for all practical purposes, dominated these proceedings since March 12.

17. At the July 23, 2004 Case Management Conference, the plaintiff made an ore tenus motion to seal the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement. The Court stated that the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement was not filed under seal, and as a result, was and is a part of the public record in these consolidated actions. The Court further stated that “the only thing that was supposed to be filed under seal was the complete copy of the settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A [Exhibit 1] to the [December 4, 2003] order. Exhibit A to the order was the redacted copy where the only thing I redacted I think was the account information [of Ronald Perelman].” (July 23, 2004 Hrg. at 62 (Ex. 4).)

18. On July 26, 2004, the Court entered a written order “that Plaintiff’s ore tenus Motion to Direct Clerk to Seal Exhibit to the Court’s Order on Defendant’s Motion to Compel Production of Settlement Agreement entered December 4, 2003 is Denied.”

19. On July 30, 2004, Morgan Stanley moved to Dismiss or Strike the Motion for Contempt on the grounds that it was legally insufficient because: (a) the Settlement Agreement is publicly available and thus was not confidential under the terms of the Confidentiality Order; (b) the Settlement Agreement is a public record; and (c) the Settlement Agreement is not “Confidential” under the terms of the Confidentiality Order.

20. On August 13, 2004, the Court entered an order on Morgan Stanley’s Motion to Dismiss or Strike (“August 13 Order”). In that order the Court elected to treat Morgan Stanley’s motion as including a “Rehearing of a portion of the Court’s December 4, 2003 Order.” And on its own motion, the Court is reconsidering the “July 31, 2003, Stipulated Confidentiality Order.”

Argument

In Miami Herald Publishing Company v. Lewis, 426 So. 2d 1, 8 (Fla. 1982), which was a criminal proceeding, the Florida Supreme Court, following decisions of the United States Supreme Court, held that a trial is a public event and what transpires in the courtroom is “public property.” Several years later the court held in Barron v. Florida Freedom Newspapers, Inc., 531 So. 2d 113, 116 (Fla. 1988) that the same was true of civil proceedings; both civil and criminal court proceedings in the state are “public events and adhere to the well established common law right of access to court proceedings and records.” The plaintiff, having filed an action in this state against Morgan Stanley for hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars, is not only trying to litigate in secret, but it is using this secrecy as a predicate for a baseless contempt proceeding that has as its objective defaulting Morgan Stanley in this courtroom, and dismissing Morgan Stanley's 1998 claims against a third party — Andersen — in Judge Miller's courtroom.

The root of this secrecy is the Stipulated Confidentiality Order of July 31, 2003.

A. The Court Should Reconsider The July 31, 2003 Confidentiality Order Because The Order Is Contrary To Florida Law To The Extent It Allows Parties To Unilaterally File Documents Under "Seal".

The July 31 Confidentiality Order allows the parties to designate documents, depositions and court filings ("Litigation Materials") as "Confidential." (See Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶¶ 1, 4.) The Confidentiality Order further permits the parties to file unilaterally and without further order of the Court, Confidential Litigation Materials under seal. (See Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶¶ 9(a), 14-15 (setting forth the procedure for filing documents under seal and removing confidentiality designation).) Indeed, CPH has filed thirty-six court documents "under seal" since the first Case Management Conference on February 20, 2004.² This procedure violates Florida law, and until a few weeks ago, an administrative rule of this Court.

Article 1, section 24 of the Florida Constitution provides that the public has a right to inspect or copy any public record, which includes the records of this Court.

Every person has the right to inspect or copy any public record made or received in connection with the official business of any public body This section specifically includes the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government

FLA. CONST. Art. I, § 24.

² Morgan Stanley has filed court filings under seal, but only as a consequence of CPH's motion for contempt, and only with respect to matters relating to the Settlement Agreement. In addition, Morgan Stanley has moved to strike the Confidential designation of numerous CPH court filings. (See July 30, 2004 Morgan Stanley's Motion To Remove Confidentiality Designations.)

In addition, the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration provide that the “public shall have access to all records of the judicial branch of government, except as provided ...” Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(a). Litigation Materials, as defined in the Confidentiality Order are, to the extent they are filed with the court, clearly “records of the judicial branch.” See Id. at 2.051(b)(1). And while the rule contemplates that “confidential” records can be withheld, the rule places strict limits on what is confidential. See Id. at 2.051(c)(9)(A)(i)-(vii). Moreover, the court cannot close — or “seal” — a court record without reasonable notice to the public. Id. at 2.051(c)(9)(D). And while this rule does not itself apply to court proceedings, which requires prior notice, a court can elect to give prior notice in appropriate cases. Id. 2.051 (Committee Commentary).³

The Confidentiality Order and CPH’s continuous filings under seal fly in the face of these legal requirements for denying the public access to court records. Indeed, the Stipulated Confidentiality Order is contrary to the court’s own Administrative Order that existed until July 13, 2004, which prohibited the filing of documents under seal unless pursuant to court order entered after notice to the media of the hearing on the motion.⁴ Administrative Order 2-032-2/00 (vacated as unnecessary because covered by existing law).

Accordingly, the Court should reconsider its order of July 31, 2003 approving the Confidentiality Order. Specifically, the Court should strike from the Confidentiality Order:

³ Florida courts cannot close their proceedings to the public without prior notice to the media. See, e.g., Miami Herald Publishing Co. v. Lewis, 426 So. 2d 1 (1982) (criminal); Barron v. Florida Freedom Newspapers, Inc., 531 So. 2d 113 (Fla. 1988) (civil).

⁴ On July 13, 2004, Judge Fine signed Administrative Order 2.032-7/04, vacating Administrative Order 2-032-2/00, which order specifically addressed the sealing of court records and the closure of proceedings. As Judge Fine stated in Administrative Order 2.032-7/04, the earlier order was no longer necessary because “it is a matter of existing law.”

- Paragraph 9 (a) after the first full sentence ending with "... Court personnel)." The court should add a sentence that reads: "No document may be filed under seal without complying with Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051."
- Paragraph 4 should be amended to add the following sentence at the conclusion of the paragraph: "Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this paragraph 4, the parties' designation of Litigation Materials as Confidential shall not be determinative of whether such Litigation Materials are Confidential pursuant to Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)."
- Paragraph 20 should be deleted in its entirety after the first full sentence ending with the word "court."

B. The Court Should Rehear That Portion Of The December 4 Order That Makes The Redacted Settlement Agreement Subject To The Stipulated Confidentiality Order

The Court should reconsider that portion of its December 4 Order that provides the redacted Settlement Agreement is "hereby deemed 'Confidential' and subject to the terms of the parties' Stipulated Confidentiality Order entered July 31, 2003."⁵ This issue, which turns on an agreement of the parties, is separate and apart from whether under Florida law the Settlement Agreement can be filed under seal in the Court's file.

Even if the Settlement Agreement is somehow still "deemed Confidential" notwithstanding its filing in the Court file, the Settlement Agreement does not qualify as "Confidential" information under the Confidentiality Order. Morgan Stanley has never been heard on this issue.

⁵ At the hearing on Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of the Settlement Agreement, Morgan Stanley stated, without having seen the Settlement Agreement, that Morgan Stanley would agree not to disclose the Settlement Agreement in violation of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order. (11/25/2003 Hrg. at 23 (Ex. 3).) This statement did not preclude Morgan Stanley from challenging the Confidentiality of the Settlement Agreement after Morgan Stanley actually saw the Agreement. (See Stipulated Confidentiality Agreement ¶¶ 14-15.) And in fact, Morgan Stanley attempted to get CPH to remove the Confidential designation, which it refused to do. (See April 22, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody (Ex. 5); April 22, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to T. Clare (Ex. 6).)

The Confidentiality Order affords Confidential treatment only to “proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel [sic] information of a current nature.” (Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶ 4 (emphasis added).) The Settlement Agreement does not fit within any of these categories. CPH cannot, therefore, sustain its burden to establish the confidential nature of the Settlement Agreement. (Id. at ¶ 15 (placing the burden upon the party making the “Confidential” designation).)

First, the Settlement Agreement is not “proprietary or confidential trade secrets.” See Fla. Stat. § 812.081(1)(c) (Trade secrets are information “for use . . . in the operation of a business and which provides the business an advantage, or an opportunity to obtain an advantage, over those who do not know or use it.”); see also Fla. Stat. § 364.183 (defining “proprietary confidential business information” to include, inter alia, trade secrets and other information that would affect the competitive position of the business); Fla. Stat. § 688.002 (defining a trade secret as “information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process that [d]erives independent economic value . . . from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by . . . , other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use”). The information contained in a 2002 commercial settlement agreement between a shell corporation that does not operate a business and an accounting firm resolving a dispute arising from a 1998 transaction is not for use “in the operation of business” and does not provide a business advantage over competitors. See American Express Travel Related Servs., Inc. v. Cruz, 761 So. 2d 1206 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000) (reviewing process for assertion of trade secret privilege and noting burden of establishing trade secret rests on party asserting it); Crocker Constr. Co. v. Hornsby, 562 So. 2d 842 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990) (denying writ of certiorari for review of court order requiring production of financial information).

Second, the Settlement Agreement is not “technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature.” There is no “technical” or “personnel” information contained in the Agreement. Nor is there any business or financial information “of a current nature.”

Finally, settlement agreements and indemnity provisions are widely recognized as discoverable information that is not subject to special protection. See City of Homestead v. Rogers, 789 So. 2d 483 (Fla. 3d DCA 2001) (ordering production of settlement agreement over objection based upon confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); Scott v. Nelson, 697 So. 2d 1300 (Fla. 1st DCA 1997) (ordering deposition of party to settlement agreement despite confidentiality provision in settlement agreement); Fla. Stat. § 44.102(3) (providing that privilege for communications that occur during mediation do not apply to an executed settlement agreement); Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(2) (providing specifically that indemnity agreements are within the proper scope of discovery).

C. The Settlement Agreement Is Not Confidential Under Florida Law And Therefore Cannot Be “Sealed”.

The Court’s orders of December 4, 2003 and July 26, 2004 are in accord with the law and public policy of Florida. The plaintiff made the Settlement Agreement a court record when it refused to produce the Agreement, thereby forcing Morgan Stanley to move to compel its production. The Court made the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement a judicial record on December 4, 2003. Once the Settlement Agreement became a judicial record, the Agreement could not be “sealed” without compliance with the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration. Those rules require both a finding that the document is “confidential,” and reasonable notice to the public of any order closing any court record. Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A),(D).

Florida public policy and the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration establish a presumption that “[t]he public shall have access to all records of the judicial branch of government.” Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(a); see Goldberg v. Johnson, 485 So. 2d 1386, 1388 (Fla. 4th DCA 1986) (noting “the public and press have a right to know what goes on in a courtroom”); see also Smithwick v. Television 12 of Jacksonville, Inc., 730 So. 2d 795, 799 (Fla. 1st DCA 1999) (noting strong public policy in favor of open government overcame potential injury that disclosure of court record may cause to third party). These records are explicitly defined to include “the contents of the court file.” Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(b)(1)(A).

Because the power and authority of a court to seal records or proceedings “should be exercised cautiously and only for the most cogent reasons,” Goldberg, 485 So. 2d at 1388, Florida rules and case law provide very few exceptions to the general rule of public access. See Gombert v. Gombert, 727 So. 2d 355, 357 (Fla. 1st DCA 1999) (finding that rule 2.051 incorporates judicial decisions concerning when confidentiality concerns may support sealing a record). The Settlement Agreement — which is merely a contract between two parties — does not meet any of the established criteria for sealing what would otherwise be public records. Certainly the Settlement Agreement does not need to be sealed to protect the “orderly administration of justice,” a “compelling government interest,” or constitutional or statutory public policy. See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(i, iii & vii). Nor will the revelation of the Settlement Agreement result in “substantial injury” to an innocent third party or party. See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(v & vi). And as shown in section B, the Settlement Agreement does not contain a trade secret and need not be kept under seal in order to “obtain evidence to determine legal issues in a case.” See Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051(c)(9)(A)(ii & iv). Finally, the Settlement Agreement could not be sealed without notice to the public, as explicitly set forth in rule 2.051 (c)(9)(D).

The only argument that CPH has advanced in support of the confidential treatment of the Settlement Agreement is the fact that the Settlement Agreement itself contractually obligates the parties to the Agreement to keep the terms confidential. This sort of contract is not sufficient to thwart public access to court records. Goldberg, 485 So. 2d at 1389 (“[A] litigant’s preference that the public not be apprised of the details of his litigation is not grounds for closure.”).

D. The Settlement Agreement Is Not Confidential Pursuant To The Terms Of The Stipulated Confidentiality Order Because It Is Publicly Available.

The plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt is the legal equivalent of a complaint. The plaintiff makes specific allegations of fact unrelated to these consolidated actions, which facts the plaintiff claims entitle it to both equitable and legal relief. (See March 12, 2004 CPH’s Motion for a Rule to Show Cause at 10 (“CPH Motion for Contempt”).) Morgan Stanley has denied the plaintiff’s allegations.⁶ Morgan Stanley contends that the facts alleged in the Motion for Contempt and those of record establish that the plaintiff’s motion does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Accordingly, the Motion for Contempt should either be dismissed or stricken.

Pursuant to this Court’s Order of December 4, 2003, Morgan Stanley received a copy of the redacted Settlement Agreement on December 8, 2003. The Court ordered the redacted Settlement Agreement (Exhibit 1) “deemed ‘Confidential’” and subject to the terms of the parties Stipulated Confidentiality Order entered July 31, 2003. Paragraph 2 of the Stipulated

⁶ For purposes of this Motion only, however, Morgan Stanley treats the allegations of plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt as true in the same manner as the Court would treat allegations of a complaint for purposes of deciding a Motion to Dismiss.

Confidentiality Order provides that its terms do not apply to any document “generally available to the public.”

This Order shall not apply to any document, testimony or other information that . . . (b) becomes generally available to the public other than as a result of disclosure in violation of this Order or in breach of any other legal obligation, or (c) becomes available to a party other than through voluntary or required production from a person or party who obtained the document, testimony or other information without any confidentiality restriction.

(Emphasis added.)

The redacted Settlement Agreement has been included in the court file and publicly available since December 18, 2003. Pursuant to the express terms of the Confidentiality Order, the redacted Settlement Agreement is not “Confidential” and has not been Confidential since it was placed in the public records of this Court on December 18, 2003. And even if this construction of the Confidentiality Agreement is wrong, the unmistakable fact is that the court filed the Settlement Agreement in the public records, making it available to anyone who wanted to look at it. See, e.g., Lifecare Int’l, Inc. v. Barad, 573 So. 2d 1044 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991) (holding that records previously available in court file could not be made confidential); Sarasota Herald Tribune v. Holtzendorf, 507 So. 2d 667 (Fla. 2d DCA 1987) (affirming public’s right to view court files).

The plaintiff’s first “claim” in its Motion for Contempt is that Morgan Stanley gave the Settlement Agreement to individuals not entitled to receive Confidential information. (See Stipulated Confidentiality Order ¶ 9(c).) The plaintiff alleges that Morgan Stanley’s attorneys in the Andersen action — KHHTE — were not entitled to receive a copy of the Settlement Agreement because they were not attorneys “of record” in these consolidated actions. (See CPH Motion for Contempt at 4.) Even assuming that the plaintiff is correct, which Morgan Stanley denies, the Motion for Contempt is legally insufficient because the Settlement Agreement has been a public record since December 18, 2003. Therefore, any dissemination of the “public” document cannot, as a matter of law, constitute a violation of the Confidentiality Order or the Court’s December 4 Order.

The plaintiff’s second “claim” is that Morgan Stanley allegedly used the Settlement Agreement for a purpose not authorized by the Confidentiality Order. This claim is also legally and factually insufficient. To find such a violation, this Court must necessarily find that the Settlement Agreement is protected by the Confidentiality Order. This claim fails as a matter of law because the Settlement Agreement is contained in the public court file.

The express terms of the Confidentiality Order exclude any document that is either publicly available or becomes available to any party other than through a violation of the Confidentiality Order. The Settlement Agreement is both publicly available and became available to any party once it was openly filed in the court file of this action. Because the Settlement Agreement is publicly available, whatever use was made of the document cannot constitute a violation of the Confidentiality Order. The plaintiff’s real complaint, if any, is that the Andersen action is a sham pleading. That claim should be addressed in Judge Miller’s courtroom pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.150. See, e.g., Pacheco v. Wasserman, 701 So. 2d 104, 106 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (holding “[t]o strike a pleading as a sham, a party must so move before trial, and the trial court must conduct an evidentiary hearing”) (emphasis added).

In sum, the plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt is based entirely on alleged violations of the Confidentiality Order. In turn, these alleged violations depend entirely on the fact that the Settlement Agreement is a confidential document in accordance with the terms of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order. The facts are undisputed that as of December 18, 2003, the redacted Settlement Agreement was not a Confidential document. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley could not, as a matter of law, violate the December 4 Order by giving a copy of the Settlement Agreement to its counsel on February 26, 2004, even if they were not counsel in “this action.” Moreover, there can be no misuse of the Settlement Agreement under these circumstances that amounts to contempt in this courtroom. At most, Andersen — not the plaintiff here — can proceed in Judge Miller’s courtroom under rule 1.150.

Conclusion

The Court should reconsider its July 31, 2003 Order and amend the Confidentiality Agreement to comply with Florida law.

Under Florida law and the Confidentiality Agreement itself, the Settlement Agreement is not Confidential. Accordingly, the Court should reconsider and amend its December 4, 2003 Order by deleting the language making the redacted Settlement Agreement subject to the Confidentiality Agreement.

Moreover, and equally as important to these proceedings, the Court should dismiss or strike the plaintiff’s Motion for Contempt because it is legally deficient and fatally so. Nothing can save it.

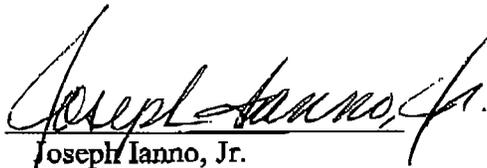

Finally, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court reserve jurisdiction to award Morgan Stanley its attorney fees and costs as a result of having to defend the Motion for Contempt. Lamb v. Fowler, 574 So. 2d 262, 263 (Fla. 1st DCA 1991) (“[I]t is now well established that the court is empowered, in its discretion, to assess fines and award attorney’s fees and costs as sanctions for civil contempt.”).

4. Any party or non-party may designate as "Confidential" any Litigation Materials or portions thereof which the party or non-party believes, in good faith, constitute, contain, reveal or reflect proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature. If a party or non-party produces Litigation Materials that have been produced in another litigation or to any government entity and such Litigation Materials have been designated confidential or were accompanied by a request that confidential treatment be accorded them, such Litigation Materials shall be deemed to have been designated "Confidential" for purposes of this Stipulation and Order.

5. Any documents or other tangible Litigation Materials may be designated as "Confidential" by marking every such page "Confidential" or by informing the other party in writing that such material is Confidential. Such markings will be made in a manner which does not obliterate or obscure the content of the document or other tangible Litigation Material. If Litigation Material is inspected at the choice of location of the party or non-party producing or disclosing Litigation Materials (a "producing party"), all such Litigation Material shall be presumed at such inspection to have been designated as Confidential by the producing party until such time as the producing party provides copies to the party that requested the Litigation Material. Production of Confidential Material for inspection and copying shall not constitute a waiver of confidentiality.

6. Depositions or other testimony may be designated "Confidential" by any one of the following means:

(a) stating orally on the record, with reasonable precision as to the affected testimony, on the day the testimony is given that this information is "Confidential"; or

(b) sending written notice designating, by page and line, the portions of the transcript of the deposition or other testimony to be treated as "Confidential" within 10 days after receipt of the transcripts.

7. The entire transcript of any deposition shall be treated as Confidential Material until thirty days after the conclusion of the deposition. Each page of deposition transcript designated as Confidential Material shall be stamped, as set forth in paragraph 5 above, by the court reporter or counsel.

8. In the event it becomes necessary at a deposition or hearing to show any Confidential Material to a witness, any testimony related to the Confidential Material shall be deemed to be Confidential Material, and the pages and lines of the transcript that set forth such testimony shall be stamped as set forth in paragraph 5 of this Stipulation.

9. Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, shall not be given, shown, made available or communicated in any way to anyone except:

(a) The Circuit Court of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida (the "Court") (including Clerks and other Court personnel). Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, that are filed with the Court or any pleadings, motions or other papers filed with the Court, shall be filed under seal in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked "Filed Under Seal - Subject to Confidentiality Order," or with such other markings as required by Court rules, and shall be kept under seal until further order of the Court. Where possible, only those portions of filings with the Court that disclose matters designated "Confidential" shall be filed under seal;

(b) counsel to the parties, including co-counsel of record for the parties actually assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation, and the legal associates and clerical or other support staff who are employed by such counsel or attorneys and are working under the express direction of such counsel or attorneys;

(c) parties and current officers and employees of parties to the extent reasonably deemed necessary by counsel disclosing such information for the purpose of assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation;

(d) outside photocopying, graphic production services, litigation support services, or investigators employed by the parties or their counsel to assist in this litigation and computer personnel performing duties in relation to a computerized litigation system;

(e) any person who is a witness or deponent, and his or her counsel, during the course of a deposition of testimony in this litigation;

(f) any person who is a potential fact witness in the litigation, provided, however, that a person identified solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material;

(g) court reporters, stenographers, or videographers who record deposition or other testimony in the litigation;

(h) experts or consultants retained in connection with the litigation;

(i) any person who is indicated on the face of a document to have been an author, addressee or copy recipient thereof, provided, however, that a person identified

solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material; and

(j) any other person, upon written consent from the party or person who designated such Litigation Materials "Confidential."

10. Before any person included in paragraph 9(f) or (h) is given access to Litigation Materials designated "Confidential," and before any person included in subparagraph 9(e) is permitted to retain any copy of Litigation Materials designated Confidential, such person shall be provided with a copy of this Order and shall acknowledge in a written statement, in the form provided as Exhibit A hereto, that he or she read the Order and agrees to be bound by the terms thereof. Such executed forms shall be retained in the files of counsel for the party who gave access to Litigation Materials to the person who was provided such access. Such executed forms shall not be subject to disclosure under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure unless a showing of good cause is made and the Court so orders.

11. The inadvertent production of privileged or arguably privileged materials shall not be determined to be either: (a) a general waiver of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine or any other privilege; or (b) a specific waiver of any such privilege with respect to documents being produced or the testimony given. Notice of any claim of privilege as to any document claimed to have been produced inadvertently shall be given within a reasonable period of time after discovery of the inadvertent production, and, on request by the producing party, all inadvertently produced materials as to which a claim of privilege is properly asserted and any copies thereof shall be returned promptly.

12. Nothing in this Order shall prevent any producing party from disclosing or using its own "Confidential" Litigation Materials as it deems appropriate, and any such disclosure shall not be deemed a waiver of any party's right or obligations under this Order with respect to any other information. If a party or non-party that designates information "Confidential" discloses or uses such "Confidential" Litigation Materials in a manner inconsistent with the claim that such information is confidential, any party may move the Court for an order removing such "Confidential" designation pursuant to paragraph 15 herein. Nothing in this Stipulation and Order shall impose any restrictions on the use or disclosure by any party of documents, materials, testimony or other information produced as Litigation Material obtained by such party independently of discovery in this litigation.

13. The parties do not waive any right to object to any discovery request, or to the admission of evidence on any ground, or seek any further protective order, or to seek relief from the Court from any provision of this Order by application on notice on any grounds.

14. If any party objects to the designation of any Litigation Materials as "Confidential," the party shall first state the objection by letter to the party that made such designations. The parties agree to confer in good faith by telephone or in person to attempt to resolve any dispute respecting the terms or operation of this Order. If the parties are unable to resolve such dispute within 5 days of such conference, any party may then move the Court to do so. Until the Court rules on such dispute, the Litigation Materials in question shall continue to be treated as "Confidential," as designated.

15. Upon motion, the Court may order the removal of the "Confidential" designation from any information so designated. In connection with any motion concerning the propriety of a "Confidential" designation, the party making the designation shall bear the burden of proof.

16. Within 60 days of the conclusion of this litigation as to all parties, all Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and all copies or notes thereof shall be returned to counsel for the producing party who initially produced the Litigation Materials, or destroyed, except that counsel may retain their work product and copies of court filings, transcripts, and exhibits, provided said retained documents will continue to be treated as provided in this Order, as modified by rulings of the Court. If a party chooses to destroy documents after the litigation has concluded, that party shall certify such destruction in writing to the producing party upon written request for such certification by the producing party.

17. The failure of any party to challenge the designation by another production party of Litigation Material as "Confidential" during the discovery period shall not be a waiver of that party's right to object to the designation of such material at trial.

18. This Stipulation applies to all non-parties that are served with subpoenas in connection with this litigation or who otherwise produce documents or are noticed for deposition in connection with this litigation, and all such non-parties are entitled to the protection afforded hereby upon signing a copy of this agreement and agreeing to be bound by its terms.

19. Any party may move to modify the provisions of this Order at any time or the parties may agree by written stipulation, subject to further order of the Court, to modify the provisions of the Order. Should any non-party seek access to the Confidential Material, by request, subpoena or otherwise, the party or recipient of the Confidential Material from whom such access is sought, as applicable, shall promptly notify the producing party who produced such Confidential Materials of such requested access and shall not provide such materials unless required by law or with the consent of the producing party.

20. This Order shall not apply to any Litigation Materials offered or otherwise used by any party at trial or at any hearing held in open court. Prior to the use of any Litigation Materials that have been designated Confidential at trial or any hearing to be held in open court, counsel who desires to so offer or use such Confidential Material shall take reasonable steps to afford opposing counsel and counsel for the producing party who produced such Confidential

Material a reasonable opportunity to object to the disclosure in open court of such Confidential Material, and nothing herein shall be construed a wavier of such right to object.

21. Written notice provided pursuant to this Order shall be made to counsel of record by facsimile.

22. The provisions of this Order shall survive the final termination of the case for any retained Confidential Litigation Material thereof.

STIPULATED CONFIDENTIALITY ORDER

The parties hereto hereby stipulate and agree to the following Confidentiality Order:

1. Scope of Order. This Order shall apply to all non-public and Confidential (as hereinafter defined) materials produced in this litigation and all testimony given in any deposition by any party to the litigation or by any person or entity that is not a party hereto (a "non-party"), to all non-public and Confidential information disclosed by any party hereto during the course of the captioned litigation and to all non-public information disclosed to any party hereto by any non-party in response to the service of a subpoena or notice of deposition on a non-party in connection with the captioned litigation ("Litigation Materials").

2. This Order shall not apply to any document, testimony or other information that (a) is already in a receiving party's possession at the time it is produced, (b) becomes generally available to the public other than as a result of disclosure in violation of this Order or in breach of any other legal obligation, or (c) becomes available to a party other than through voluntary or required production from a person or party who obtained the document, testimony or other information without any confidentiality restriction.

3. Litigation Materials and the information derived therefrom shall be used solely for the purpose of preparing for and conducting this litigation, and shall not be disclosed or used for any other purpose.

4. Any party or non-party may designate as "Confidential" any Litigation Materials or portions thereof which the party or non-party believes, in good faith, constitute, contain, reveal or reflect proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature. If a party or non-party produces Litigation Materials that have been produced in another litigation or to any government entity and such Litigation Materials have been designated confidential or were accompanied by a request that confidential treatment be accorded them, such Litigation Materials shall be deemed to have been designated "Confidential" for purposes of this Stipulation and Order.

5. Any documents or other tangible Litigation Materials may be designated as "Confidential" by marking every such page "Confidential" or by informing the other party in writing that such material is Confidential. Such markings will be made in a manner which does not obliterate or obscure the content of the document or other tangible Litigation Material. If Litigation Material is inspected at the choice of location of the party or non-party producing or disclosing Litigation Materials (a "producing party"), all such Litigation Material shall be presumed at such inspection to have been designated as Confidential by the producing party until such time as the producing party provides copies to the party that requested the Litigation Material. Production of Confidential Material for inspection and copying shall not constitute a waiver of confidentiality.

6. Depositions or other testimony may be designated "Confidential" by any one of the following means:

(a) stating orally on the record, with reasonable precision as to the affected testimony, on the day the testimony is given that this information is "Confidential"; or

(b) sending written notice designating, by page and line, the portions of the transcript of the deposition or other testimony to be treated as "Confidential" within 10 days after receipt of the transcripts.

7. The entire transcript of any deposition shall be treated as Confidential Material until thirty days after the conclusion of the deposition. Each page of deposition transcript designated as Confidential Material shall be stamped, as set forth in paragraph 5 above, by the court reporter or counsel.

8. In the event it becomes necessary at a deposition or hearing to show any Confidential Material to a witness, any testimony related to the Confidential Material shall be deemed to be Confidential Material, and the pages and lines of the transcript that set forth such testimony shall be stamped as set forth in paragraph 5 of this Stipulation.

9. Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, shall not be given, shown, made available or communicated in any way to anyone except:

(a) The Circuit Court of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida (the "Court") (including Clerks and other Court personnel). Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, that are filed with the Court or any pleadings, motions or other papers filed with the Court, shall be filed under seal in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked "Filed Under Seal - Subject to Confidentiality Order," or with such other markings as required by Court rules, and shall be kept under seal until further order of the Court. Where possible, only those portions of filings with the Court that disclose matters designated "Confidential" shall be filed under seal;

(b) counsel to the parties, including co-counsel of record for the parties actually assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation, and the legal associates and clerical or other support staff who are employed by such counsel or attorneys and are working under the express direction of such counsel or attorneys;

(c) parties and current officers and employees of parties to the extent reasonably deemed necessary by counsel disclosing such information for the purpose of assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation;

(d) outside photocopying, graphic production services, litigation support services, or investigators employed by the parties or their counsel to assist in this litigation and computer personnel performing duties in relation to a computerized litigation system;

(e) any person who is a witness or deponent, and his or her counsel, during the course of a deposition of testimony in this litigation;

(f) any person who is a potential fact witness in the litigation, provided, however, that a person identified solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material;

(g) court reporters, stenographers, or videographers who record deposition or other testimony in the litigation;

(h) experts or consultants retained in connection with the litigation;

(i) any person who is indicated on the face of a document to have been an author, addressee or copy recipient thereof, provided, however, that a person identified

solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material; and

(j) any other person, upon written consent from the party or person who designated such Litigation Materials "Confidential."

10. Before any person included in paragraph 9(f) or (h) is given access to Litigation Materials designated "Confidential," and before any person included in subparagraph 9(e) is permitted to retain any copy of Litigation Materials designated Confidential, such person shall be provided with a copy of this Order and shall acknowledge in a written statement, in the form provided as Exhibit A hereto, that he or she read the Order and agrees to be bound by the terms thereof. Such executed forms shall be retained in the files of counsel for the party who gave access to Litigation Materials to the person who was provided such access. Such executed forms shall not be subject to disclosure under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure unless a showing of good cause is made and the Court so orders.

11. The inadvertent production of privileged or arguably privileged materials shall not be determined to be either: (a) a general waiver of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine or any other privilege; or (b) a specific waiver of any such privilege with respect to documents being produced or the testimony given. Notice of any claim of privilege as to any document claimed to have been produced inadvertently shall be given within a reasonable period of time after discovery of the inadvertent production, and, on request by the producing party, all inadvertently produced materials as to which a claim of privilege is properly asserted and any copies thereof shall be returned promptly.

12. Nothing in this Order shall prevent any producing party from disclosing or using its own "Confidential" Litigation Materials as it deems appropriate, and any such disclosure shall not be deemed a waiver of any party's right or obligations under this Order with respect to any other information. If a party or non-party that designates information "Confidential" discloses or uses such "Confidential" Litigation Materials in a manner inconsistent with the claim that such information is confidential, any party may move the Court for an order removing such "Confidential" designation pursuant to paragraph 15 herein. Nothing in this Stipulation and Order shall impose any restrictions on the use or disclosure by any party of documents, materials, testimony or other information produced as Litigation Material obtained by such party independently of discovery in this litigation.

13. The parties do not waive any right to object to any discovery request, or to the admission of evidence on any ground, or seek any further protective order, or to seek relief from the Court from any provision of this Order by application on notice on any grounds.

14. If any party objects to the designation of any Litigation Materials as "Confidential," the party shall first state the objection by letter to the party that made such designations. The parties agree to confer in good faith by telephone or in person to attempt to resolve any dispute respecting the terms or operation of this Order. If the parties are unable to resolve such dispute within 5 days of such conference, any party may then move the Court to do so. Until the Court rules on such dispute, the Litigation Materials in question shall continue to be treated as "Confidential," as designated.

15. Upon motion, the Court may order the removal of the "Confidential" designation from any information so designated. In connection with any motion concerning the propriety of a "Confidential" designation, the party making the designation shall bear the burden of proof.

16. Within 60 days of the conclusion of this litigation as to all parties, all Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and all copies or notes thereof shall be returned to counsel for the producing party who initially produced the Litigation Materials, or destroyed, except that counsel may retain their work product and copies of court filings, transcripts, and exhibits, provided said retained documents will continue to be treated as provided in this Order, as modified by rulings of the Court. If a party chooses to destroy documents after the litigation has concluded, that party shall certify such destruction in writing to the producing party upon written request for such certification by the producing party.

17. The failure of any party to challenge the designation by another production party of Litigation Material as "Confidential" during the discovery period shall not be a waiver of that party's right to object to the designation of such material at trial.

18. This Stipulation applies to all non-parties that are served with subpoenas in connection with this litigation or who otherwise produce documents or are noticed for deposition in connection with this litigation, and all such non-parties are entitled to the protection afforded hereby upon signing a copy of this agreement and agreeing to be bound by its terms.

19. Any party may move to modify the provisions of this Order at any time or the parties may agree by written stipulation, subject to further order of the Court, to modify the provisions of the Order. Should any non-party seek access to the Confidential Material, by request, subpoena or otherwise, the party or recipient of the Confidential Material from whom such access is sought, as applicable, shall promptly notify the producing party who produced such Confidential Materials of such requested access and shall not provide such materials unless required by law or with the consent of the producing party.

20. This Order shall not apply to any Litigation Materials offered or otherwise used by any party at trial or at any hearing held in open court. Prior to the use of any Litigation Materials that have been designated Confidential at trial or any hearing to be held in open court, counsel who desires to so offer or use such Confidential Material shall take reasonable steps to afford opposing counsel and counsel for the producing party who produced such Confidential

Material a reasonable opportunity to object to the disclosure in open court of such Confidential Material, and nothing herein shall be construed a wavier of such right to object.

21. Written notice provided pursuant to this Order shall be made to counsel of record by facsimile.

22. The provisions of this Order shall survive the final termination of the case for any retained Confidential Litigation Material thereof.

CASE NO. 2003-CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

ORIGINAL

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & COMPANY, INC.

Defendant.

TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE
THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH MAASS

West Palm Beach, Florida
November 25, 2003
4:37 p.m. - 5:18 p.m.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, West Palm
4 Beach, Florida, on November 25, 2003, starting at
5 4:37 p.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted,
6 to wit:

7

- - - -

8 THE COURT: This is Coleman and Morgan
9 Stanley. It's defendant's motion, I think, to 10 compel production of a settlement agreement.

11 MR. IANNO: That's correct.

12 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

13 THE COURT: You-all can have a seat.

14 The first motion I have though, and I
15 apologize, I didn't have time to go through the 16 files to try to find this, I see that defendant
17 has filed certain things under seal or has 18 tendered certain things under seal, and I hope
19 that none of them have been filed yet. Was there
20 an order entered that permitted that procedure?

21 MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor. Joe Ianno.
22 I believe that the confidentiality order that was 23 entered in this case provided for that.

24 THE COURT: You're going to have to tell me,
25 because I thought --

1 MR. IANNO: I didn't bring the
2 confidentiality order with me.

3 THE COURT: Because, obviously, under the 4 Rules of Judicial Administration, things can't get
5 filed under seal --

6 MR. IANNO: Without notice to media.

7 THE COURT: And all that. And I thought when
8 I looked at the proposed order in this case,
9 either I struck through that stuff or I mailed it
10 back to you guys and said I can't sign this. And 11 if I haven't done that yet, that's why we need to 12 find that order.

13 I haven't looked at any of the stuff that was 14 given to me under seal. I need to just give it
15 back to you. It's not my policy to look at things
16 that can't be part of the court record absent a
17 clear order that permits me to do so.

18 It could be somehow I signed it and I forgot.

19 MR. IANNO: I don't believe that the motion
20 at issue though, Your Honor, was filed under seal.

21 THE COURT: No, just some of the stuff. I'll 22 give you guys -- Whoever gave me this stuff, I'm 23 just going to give it back.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I think what was filed under 25 seal was your reply memorandum.

1 amount of the settlement which relates solely to
2 the issue of setoff, and upon court order, we are 3 prepared to make a confidential disclosure of the 4 amount of that settlement under the terms of the 5 confidentiality agreement previously entered. We
6 would designate that as confidential information
7 in order to restrict its proper use to this case
8 and make the disclosure with regard to that 9 amount.

10 THE COURT: Any objection to my making a
11 photocopy of it?

12 MR. SCAROLA: No, not at all.

13 THE COURT: Thanks.

14 Was the settlement consummated?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Under its terms?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 Do you accept that representation?

20 MR. CLARE: That it was consummated under its 21 terms?

22 THE COURT: Yeah.

23 MR. CLARE: I don't have any reason to 24 believe or not believe that that's incorrect.

25 I would say that this is a non-privileged

1 that agreement, and we believe that to the extent
2 permissible by law, that it should be enforced,
3 and it should only be breached or allowed to come
4 out in the open to the extent that it is clearly
5 established that it is relevant. And we believe
6 that the proper procedure is for the Court to look
7 at it in camera and to make that judgment, and 8 we'd ask that you do that.

9 THE COURT: What did you want to respond,
10 sir?

11 MR. CLARE: On Mr. Scarola's final point,
12 with the Court's permission, I'll hand to counsel
13 and to Your Honor just some citations to Florida
14 cases that are all cited in our brief that make 15 the point that a contractual confidentiality
16 provision cannot be used to subvert discovery.

17 There's a protective order in this case. We 18 will agree to be bound by the full extent of the 19 confidentiality order in terms of disclosing it.
20 We will go one step further and agree to make it
21 attorney's eyes only with the proviso that I be
22 able to show it to a limited number of in-house
23 attorneys at Morgan Stanley for the purposes of 24 evaluating it for the purposes that I've
25 identified for Your Honor.

1 So with the confidentiality order, the
2 balancing test that Mr. Scarola has already
3 identified has already been done. Those privacy
4 considerations that Arthur Andersen is worried
5 about about disclosure, nothing's going to be in 6 the open. This is all going to be treated as the 7 highest degree of confidentiality under the 8 protective order that Your Honor has already 9 signed, and we agree and are willing to accept
10 those restrictions on our use of it.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Let me take another
12 advisement, okay?

13 Thank you very much.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there is one
15 additional brief matter, if we could impose upon
16 the Court. We had actually set it for an 8:45
17 hearing this morning, and because of Your Honor's
18 crowded calendar, we hoped that we might just 19 bring it to you this afternoon.

20 THE COURT: Sure. What is that?

21 You can take this back, sir. Thanks.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, it relates to the 23 exchange of correspondence with which we barraged
24 you concerning the entry of an order --

25 THE COURT: Oh, yeah. Okay.

TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE
THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH J. MAASS

West Palm Beach, Florida
July 23rd, 2004
8:58 a.m. - 11:03 a.m.

1 THE COURT: Yes. Can I go back to the ore
2 tenus motion on The Court file? I didn't want to
3 forget that I had gotten this. I don't think that
4 the clerk has done anything improper. The order I
5 wrote said the only thing that was supposed to be
6 filed under seal was the complete copy of the
7 settlement agreement, not the Exhibit A to the
8 order. Exhibit A to the order was the redacted
9 copy where the only thing I redacted I think was
10 the account information.

11 So, no, the clerk has not violated my order.
12 If you're now saying you want something sealed
13 that's not sealed, you may want to make an
14 appropriate order.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: So that would be denied. Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I'm having the
18 first chance to look at what has been handed to
19 The Court. And while I don't object to Your Honor
20 using this to the extent that it may be of
21 assistance to you, I think what you'll find when
22 you look at it is that the interrogatory is set
23 out in full, Morgan Stanley's objections are set
24 out, and their reply is set out. And what we have
25 then is a one- or two-line summary --

Dear Mike:

Pursuant to Paragraph 14 of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, we object to the designation of Exhibit 1 to the Court's December 4, 2003 Order as "Confidential." The document does not contain "proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature" as required by Paragraph 2 of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order, and is not otherwise confidential under Florida law.

Please let me know by the close of business today whether you will consent to the removal of the "Confidential" designation for this document. Anticipating that you will not consent, and given the pendency of the Motion to Show Cause, we believe that additional procedures set forth in Paragraph 14 of the Stipulated Confidentiality Order are futile. Please let me know by the close of business today whether you disagree.

THIRD PARTY SUNBEAM'S MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO COMPEL DOCUMENTS

Third Party, Sunbeam Corporation, n/k/a American Household, Inc. ("Sunbeam"), is in receipt of Morgan Stanley's Motion to Compel Production of Documents and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc.'s Memorandum in Opposition to Morgan Stanley's Motion to Compel Production of Documents.

While Third Party Sunbeam was not served with the Motion and Opposition as it is not a party to the case, Sunbeam received courtesy copies of the pleadings. Since Morgan Stanley raised in its Motion the issue of whether a Report to the Board of Directors of Sunbeam prepared by the law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, LLP is privileged, Sunbeam hereby responds to Morgan Stanley's Motion. Sunbeam files this submission invoking Sunbeam's privilege because the Report is subject to a privilege belonging to Sunbeam, and Sunbeam has a continuing interest in protecting that privilege. Sunbeam apologizes for its late submission to the court; Sunbeam only recently was advised of the Motion, has not been subpoenaed for the Report, and has not made an appearance in this action.

Under Florida law, a "court shall protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, and opinions or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning . . . litigation." Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(3). In this case, the Board of Directors of Sunbeam hired the law firm of Skadden Arps to investigate and prepare a report providing their legal opinions, analyses and theories regarding the legal implications of Sunbeam's accounting practices. The Report is quintessential work product, protected by the attorney-client privilege, and therefore not subject to discovery under Rule 1.280(b)(3) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure.

Florida law also provides that "[a] person who has a privilege against the disclosure of a confidential matter or communication waives the privilege if the person . . . while holder of the privilege, voluntarily discloses . . . or consents to disclosure of, any significant part of the matter or communication." Fla. Stat. §90.507 (2004) (emphasis added). Thus, as discussed in greater detail below, only Sunbeam, as holder of the work product and attorney client privileges that protect against disclosure of the Report, has the authority to waive such privileges. Sunbeam has consistently maintained and treated the Report as privileged and has never voluntarily provided, or consented to the production of the Report to any third party.

Contrary to Morgan Stanley's assertions, and despite the SEC's numerous requests, Sunbeam did not provide the Report to the SEC. Sunbeam maintained that the Report is protected by the work product and attorney client privileges. Moreover, Sunbeam has refused to produce the Report in each of the many lawsuits pending against it. The Report is consistently listed on Sunbeam's privilege logs as a privileged document.¹ Sunbeam asserts now, as it has always asserted, that the Report is privileged and confidential.

II. SUNBEAM HAS NEVER WAIVED THE PRIVILEGE.

Morgan Stanley asserts that Sunbeam waived any privileges it has associated with the Report because of the deposition testimony of Mr. Paul E. Shapiro. Morgan Stanley is wrong. At the time of his July 28, 2004 deposition, Mr. Shapiro was a former executive of Sunbeam and a former employee of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc.² During the deposition, Mr. Shapiro acknowledged the existence of the Report and explained that it was the subject to "all kinds of issues regarding confidentiality and privilege." July 28, 2004 Shapiro deposition at pg. 363. Contrary to Morgan Stanley's Motion, Mr. Shapiro "did not discuss the document in detail" nor did he "testify] extensively about the internal investigation undertaken by Sunbeam in 1998, including the substance of the written report issued by the Special Committee, as well as the oral presentation of the [R]eport's findings to the Sunbeam Board." Motion pgs. 1 and 3. Instead, Mr. Shapiro acknowledged the existence of the document and provided his vague recollection. He certainly did not discuss the document in detail as suggested by Morgan Stanley.

¹ Sunbeam would be severely prejudiced if this Court were to find that the Report is not privileged as Sunbeam is still a party to lawsuits involving the issues raised in the Report and it would be patently unfair and prejudicial for Sunbeam's lawyers work product and analysis to become discoverable.

² Sunbeam has not been provided a copy of Mr. Shapiro's deposition and Sunbeam was not present at the deposition. The only pages that Sunbeam has been provided were those attached to the Motion.

a. Mr. Shapiro did not have the authority to waive Sunbeam's privilege.

The attorney client and work product privileges belong to Sunbeam and cannot be waived by Mr. Shapiro who is without corporate authority to waive such privileges. See Fla. Stat. § 90.507 (2004). It is well settled that the attorney client and work product privileges apply when the client is a corporation. Fla. Stat. § 90.502(1)(b) (2004). The power to exercise the corporate attorney-client privilege in particular rests with the corporation's management. See Tail of the Pup, Inc. v. Webb, 528 So.2d 506, 507 (Fla. 2d DCA 1988). Moreover, as the United States Supreme Court explained in Commodity Futures Trading Commission v. Weintraub, ". . . when control of a corporation passes to new management, the authority to assert and waive the corporation's attorney-client privilege passes as well." 471 U.S. 343, 349 (1985) (emphasis added); see generally Scottsdale Ins. Co. v. Camara De Comercio Latino-Americana de los Estados Unidos, Inc., 813 So.2d 250 (Fla. 3d DCA 2002) (standing for the proposition that the work product privilege cannot be asserted by someone other than the holder of the privilege). Accordingly, a former executive, like Mr. Shapiro, is without authority to waive the attorney client or work product privilege on behalf of a corporation.

Nevertheless, Morgan Stanley relies on the Third District's decision in Hoyas v. State, 456 So.2d 1225 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984), for the proposition that "Mr. Shapiro's voluntary disclosures have waived any privileges associated with the [Report]." Motion, pg. 5. Hoyas is inapposite. In Hoyas, the court found that a criminal defendant, as holder of the attorney client privilege, waived the privilege when he voluntarily disclosed, on direct examination at trial, that he "told [his] attorney [he] hadn't done it." Id. at 1227.³ Unlike the criminal defendant in

³ The court further explained that although the Florida Supreme Court had held in Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Parker, 62 So. 589 (1913), that no waiver occurred where a client/plaintiff testified on cross-examination, without objection, that he had not made a certain statement to his then-attorney, Hoyas "made an affirmative statement in response to a question from his own counsel during direct examination, thus belying any claim that he was

Hoyas, Mr. Shapiro was not the holder of the privilege, let alone a party to the action, and he did not voluntarily disclose privileged information.

- b. Even if Mr. Shapiro had the authority to waive the privilege, which he did not, his comments about the Report did not waive the privilege.

Even if it were true that former executives have the authority to waive a corporate privilege (they do not), Mr. Shapiro did not waive Sunbeam's attorney client and work product privileges by way of his vague recollection of the Report during his July 28, 2004 deposition. Waiver occurs only where "[a] person who has a privilege against the disclosure of a confidential matter or communication waives the privilege if the person . . . while holder of the privilege, voluntarily discloses . . . or consents to disclosure of, any significant part of the matter or communication." Fla. Stat. §90.507 (2004) (emphasis added). It is evident that Mr. Shapiro did not disclose "any significant part of the matter or communication." In fact, Mr. Shapiro indicated that the Report was privileged and confidential. July 28, 2004 Shapiro deposition at pg. 363. Clearly, Mr. Shapiro's deposition testimony did not waive Sunbeam's privileges.

- c. Sunbeam has never waived the privilege and does not waive it now.

Morgan Stanley in an offhanded fashion and in the last sentence of its Motion, suggests that if MAFCO or Coleman Parent has a copy of the Report, then their possession of it would establish a waiver of any privilege that Sunbeam has. Morgan Stanley is wrong. If MAFCO or Coleman Parent were to have a copy of the Report, the Report would have been given to the attorneys at MAFCO who were providing legal services to Sunbeam pursuant to an August 12, 1998 Settlement Agreement. Pursuant to that Agreement, MAFCO was to provide management services to Sunbeam including, assistance and support with "litigation...and other legal matters."

surprised or misled." Hoyas v. State, 456 So.2d 1225 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984) (emphasis added). Mr. Shapiro's situation was more akin to the facts presented in Parker because he was not being deposed by his own counsel.

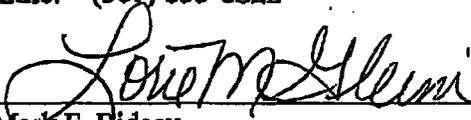

See Agreement ¶3(v). Any disclosure to MAFCO or Coleman Parent would have been made pursuant to the Agreement, subject to the attorney client and work product privileges, and in furtherance of Sunbeam obtaining legal advice and counsel. Therefore, such purported disclosure was no waiver of Sunbeam's privilege. Since Sunbeam has never voluntarily provided the Report to any third party and has never waived the privilege, the Report is protected by the attorney client and work product privileges and as such cannot be produced in this litigation.

WHEREFORE Sunbeam respectfully requests that this Court deny Morgan Stanley's Motion to Compel Production of Documents to the extent that it seeks to obtain Sunbeam's privileged Report.

ORDER AND NOTICE OF HEARING

This case came before the Court August 27, 2004 on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Compel Production of Documents, with all parties and non-party Sunbeam Corporation, n/k/a American Household, Inc. ("Sunbeam"), well represented by counsel. In open Court counsel for Sunbeam consented to this Court's jurisdiction over Sunbeam solely to determine whether the subject report, its exhibits, and the transmittal letter to MAFCO are privileged and whether the privilege has been waived, and agreed to waive the formality of subpoenaing the items from Sunbeam. Counsel for MAFCO agreed to supply a copy of the transmittal letter to counsel to Sunbeam and acknowledged that it has no independent basis to claim the item is privileged. Based on the foregoing, it is

We will be in touch with you in the near future regarding that date.

Very truly yours,

duces tecum and ad testificandum for certain specified witnesses and “other witnesses whose discovery is sought” (emphasis added) in New York, which would include Brooks Harris, who resides in New York. See page 2 of the true and correct certified copy of the Commission, which is annexed hereto as Exhibit A.

3. The Florida Action arises out of, among other things, the participation of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., the defendant in the Florida Action in the massive fraud perpetrated by Florida-based Sunbeam Corporation in the late 1990s. The person whose testimony and documents are sought is believed to have knowledge relating to the circumstances surrounding the Sunbeam fraud and Morgan Stanley's participation in it. Upon information and belief, such information is material and necessary for Petitioner's prosecution of their claims in the Florida Action.

4. I am informed by counsel for the Petitioner in the Florida Action that counsel for defendant in that Action has been served with notice of the deposition (a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B).

5. Attached hereto as Exhibit C is the subpoena addressed to Mr. Harris.

6. This request seeks an Order requiring the deposition within 20 days. The parties to the Florida Action and the deponent have all agreed to submit to the deposition on September 14, 2004, and, I am informed, travel plans have been made in anticipation of this deposition.

7. It is respectfully requested that the Order submitted herewith be made pursuant to CPLR 3102(e) requiring Brooks Harris to appear for a deposition as aforesaid, and directing him to bring with him the documents specified in the Notice of Deposition, and authorizing the commissioner to issue a judicial subpoena as necessary to obtain the witness' attendance.

8. This application is made in good faith to obtain the testimony and documents pursuant to CPLR 3102(e) and for no other reason.

9. No previous application for relief similar to that prayed for herein has been made.

10. I, therefore, respectfully request that an Order be entered directing Brooks Harris to appear at the date and time set forth for deposition upon oral examination, and directing said witness to produce for examination and copying all documents referred to above.

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION FOR ENLARGEMENT OF TIME TO AMEND THE PLEADINGS

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, respectfully moves this Court to enlarge the time for the parties to file and serve motions for leave to amend the pleadings in these consolidated actions to and including September 21, 2004. In support of its motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. On August 12, 2004, this Court entered an Order requiring the parties to serve all motions for leave to file amended pleadings by September 7, 2004.
2. On September 1, 2004, the Palm Beach County Commission declared a state of emergency for Palm Beach County in preparation for the approach of Hurricane Frances. On September 2, 2004, the National Hurricane Center issued a Hurricane Warning condition for Palm Beach County. Governor Jeb Bush has declared — in anticipation of the hurricane — a state of emergency for the entire State of Florida. Due to preparations for the approaching hurricane and the evacuation of substantial portions of Palm Beach County and many of the surrounding areas, Morgan Stanley's Florida counsel will be unable, in the days ahead, to participate in the preparation and review of amended pleadings and related motions.

3. Due to the approaching hurricane, the Case Management Conference that was originally scheduled for September 2, 2004 has been rescheduled (conditions permitting) for September 7, 2004. If the hearing goes forward as scheduled, it will be necessary for Morgan Stanley's out-of-town counsel to travel to Florida on September 6, 2004, and for all counsel to prepare for and appear at the Case Management Conference on the date currently set for amendment of the pleadings.

4. The Court has not yet ruled on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt or the pending motions for the pro hac vice admission of attorneys from Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. ("KHHTE"). The Court has taken these motions under advisement, with rulings expected in the near term. Morgan Stanley requests that KHHTE attorneys be permitted to participate in proceedings related to the amendment of the pleadings, and that the deadline for such amendments be extended until the Court has resolved the pending contempt issues and ruled on the motions for the pro hac vice admission of KHHTE lawyers.

5. No other deadlines or hearings related to the amendment of pleadings would need to be re-set — and there would be no prejudice to any of the parties — if this short extension was granted. The next Case Management Conference is scheduled (conditions permitting) for September 7, 2004 at 1:30 p.m., at which time the parties and the Court will discuss a workable schedule for trial and other pretrial deadlines. It is anticipated that, as part of the overall schedule, the parties and the Court will develop a schedule for the briefing and argument of any motions relating to the amendment of the pleadings.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court enlarge the time for the parties to file and serve motions to amend the pleadings until September 21, 2004, together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF STAY OF CONTEMPT DISCOVERY

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, respectfully moves this Court to extend the previously-entered stay of discovery relating to Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt. In support of its motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. On August 15, 2004, this Court entered an Order staying all discovery relating to issues raised by Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt until August 30, 2004.
2. On August 27, 2004, the Court entered an Order extending the stay of contempt through September 3, 2004.
3. On September 1, 2004, the Palm Beach County Commission declared a state of emergency for Palm Beach County in preparation for the approach of Hurricane Frances. On September 2, 2004, the National Hurricane Center issued a Hurricane Warning condition for

Palm Beach County. Governor Jeb Bush has declared — in anticipation of the hurricane — a state of emergency for the entire State of Florida.

4. Due to the approaching hurricane, the Case Management Conference that was originally scheduled for September 2, 2004 has been rescheduled (conditions permitting) for September 7, 2004. Accordingly, the parties did not have an opportunity — prior to the September 3, 2004 expiration — to appear before the Court, as originally contemplated, and address a further extension of the stay of contempt discovery.

5. The Court has not yet ruled on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt. The Court has taken that motion under advisement, with a ruling expected in the near term. Morgan Stanley requests that the stay of discovery related to Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt be extended until the Court has ruled on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt.

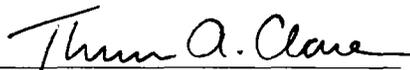

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court extend the stay of discovery relating to Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt until the Court has ruled on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion For Contempt, together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

MORGAN STANLEY'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT COLEMAN (PARENT)
HOLDINGS INC.'S FIFTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") and Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") (collectively "Morgan Stanley"), hereby interposes the following objections and responses to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Fifth Request for Production dated August 5, 2004.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

Morgan Stanley incorporates by reference its Objections to Definitions and Instructions and its General Objections to Plaintiff's First, Second, Third, and Fourth Request for Production of Documents.

SPECIFIC RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS

Request No. 1. All documents involving, relating to, or referring to the Subordinated Debentures or to any transaction involving Subordinated Debentures, including but not limited to

(i) all documents relating or referring to any transaction in which Morgan Stanley bought or sold Subordinated Debentures or any interest therein; (ii) all communications with any Morgan Stanley customer or counter-party to any trade involving Morgan Stanley as a broker or principal relating to the Subordinated Debentures; and (iii) any market for the Subordinated Debentures.

Morgan Stanley Response. Morgan Stanley objects to this request on the ground that it is not limited to a time period relevant to these consolidated actions, is overbroad and unduly burdensome, and seeks communications and transaction-level data regarding the trading activities of third-parties that are irrelevant to the subject matter of these consolidated actions and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Morgan Stanley has already produced, in response to CPH's First, Second, and Third Requests for Production, documents located after a good faith search involving, relating, or referring to the Sunbeam Convertible Debentures, including without limitation documents relating to Sunbeam's decision to finance the acquisitions in part with the proceeds from the Zero-Coupon Convertible Debentures, documents relating to MS & Co.'s due diligence and other activities undertaken as underwriter of the Zero-Coupon Convertible Debentures, documents relating to the marketing of the Zero-Coupon Convertible Debentures, and documents relating to MS & Co.'s decision to underwrite Sunbeam's offering of the Zero-Coupon Convertible Debentures.

Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.340(c), Morgan Stanley also produced, in response to the Court's July 12, 2004 Order regarding contempt discovery, and subject to objections to the relevance of such documents to the merits of these consolidated actions, records of secondary market trading activity of Sunbeam Zero-Coupon Convertible debentures by MS & Co. in its convertible arbitrage facilitation account during the time period from March 19, 1998 to February 5, 2003. (See Morgan Stanley Confidential 0095741-812)

To the extent that additional documents relating to the Sunbeam Convertible Debentures exist, or to the extent that documents exist regarding the trading activity of Sunbeam Zero-Coupon Convertible Debenture by parties other than Morgan Stanley, CPH, or MAFCO, such documents are irrelevant to the subject matter of these consolidated actions and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley will not produce additional documents in response to this request.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
THIRD SET OF REQUESTS FOR ADMISSION

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co."), by its attorneys and pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.370, hereby responds and objects to Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") Third Set of Requests for Admission.

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Third Set of Requests for Admission, including all Definitions, to the extent that they purport to impose upon MS & Co. any requirements that exceed or are otherwise inconsistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable rule or court order.

2. MS & Co. objects to CPH's Third Set of Requests for Admission to the extent that they seek information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or any other applicable privilege, doctrine, immunity or rule.

3. MS & Co. objects to the definition of “Morgan Stanley” to the extent that it includes MS & Co.’s counsel in this litigation and entities not a party to this action. Specifically, MS & Co. interprets these definitions to exclude Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Carlton Fields, P.A., Kellogg Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC and affiliates, parents, and others not a party to this action.

4. MS & Co. objects to the Requests for Admission as unduly burdensome, abusive, and vexatious, since many of them are duplicative and constitute an unnecessary waste of time and concern factual allegations uniquely within the possession of CPH, MAFCO, or third parties, which could be confirmed with less expense and burden on the parties through other techniques of discovery.

5. MS & Co. incorporates, as though fully set forth therein, these General Objections into each of the Responses set forth below.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has made reasonable inquiry into the documents and information in its possession, however, Morgan Stanley lacks information or knowledge sufficient to answer this request, and therefore denies this request.

7. The consideration paid to CPH in connection with Sunbeam’s acquisition of CPH’s interest in Coleman did not include Sunbeam’s assumption of Coleman’s debt.

RESPONSE: Morgan Stanley has made reasonable inquiry into the documents and information in its possession, however, Morgan Stanley lacks information or knowledge sufficient to answer this request, and therefore denies this request.

10. In exchange for its interest in Coleman, CPH received consideration consisting solely of (a) $159,958,756; [sic] (b) 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam stock; and (3) the assumption of the CLN Holdings Notes.

ORDER ON MORGAN STANLEY & CO. AND MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.'S MOTION TO DISMISS OR STRIKE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR CONTEMPT

THIS CAUSE came before the Court August 27, 2004 on the Court's own Motion and on Morgan Stanley & Co. ("MS & Co.") and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.'s ("MSSF") Motion to Dismiss or Strike Plaintiff's Motion for Contempt, with all affected parties well represented by counsel.

On July 31, 2003, the Court entered a Stipulated Confidentiality Order ("Confidentiality Order"), without hearing. Paragraph 9 (a) of the Confidentiality Order provided that:

Litigation Materials designated "Confidential" and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, that are filed with the Court or any pleadings, motions or other papers filed with the Court, shall be filed under seal in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked "Filed Under Seal-Subject to Confidentiality Order," or with such other markings as required by Court rules, and shall be kept under seal until further order of the Court. Where possible, only those portions of filings with the Court that disclose matters designated "Confidential" shall be filed under seal.

The Confidentiality Order permitted a party to designate items as confidential, subject to any other party's right to apply to the Court for a determination of the item's protectability.

On December 4, 2003, the Court entered its Order on Defendants' Motion to Compel Production of Settlement Agreement. The Order attached as Exhibit 1 a redacted copy a settlement agreement between Coleman Parent Holdings ("CPH") and certain related entities and Arthur Andersen ("Settlement Agreement"). The exhibit redacted account information only. Pursuant to the agreement of counsel, and without independent analysis by the Court, the exhibit was deemed "Confidential" and subjected to the terms of the Confidentiality Order. The Confidentiality Order requires that Confidential items may not be used for purposes outside this litigation.

The Settlement Agreement contained a provision requiring CPH to indemnify Arthur Andersen if it was sued by MS & Co. MS & Co. sued Arthur Andersen. CPH maintains that it did so, without a colorable claim against it, to trigger the indemnification provision of the Settlement Agreement. It filed a Motion for Order to Show Cause, which the Court elected to treat as a Motion for Contempt, contending that MS & Co. violated the Court's December 4, 2003 Order. Preparation of that motion for hearing has consumed substantial time by the parties and the Court.

Contrary to counsels' obvious expectations, Exhibit 1 was not filed under seal. It has been a part of the public record since December 18, 2003. Once CPH realized the omission, it sought to have the item sealed. The Court denied the application. MS & Co. and MSSF have now moved to have the Motion for Contempt dismissed or stricken, arguing that the item has been part of the public record and therefore exempt from the Confidentiality Order by its terms; that the Confidentiality Order improperly permitted items, including the Settlement Agreement, to be deemed confidential; and that the Settlement Agreement does not meet the requirements for protection under either the Confidentiality Order or Rule 2.051 (c) (9), Rules of Judicial Administration.

The Court concludes that the Confidentiality Order impermissibly empowered the parties to file under seal items without requirement that the public be notified and delegated to the parties the right to designate items as Confidential, without judicial intervention unless they disagreed. The Court concludes these two provisions were in error.

The Court concludes, too, that the redacted version of the Settlement Agreement does not meet the requirements to permit it to be excluded from the public domain under the Rules of Judicial Administration or case law.

Finally, the Court concludes that the Motion for Contempt should not go forward. First, it is undisputed that the terms of the Settlement Agreement alleged to have been improperly used have been part of the public record since December 18, 2003. Second, the Court finds that the redacted Settlement Agreement is not subject to protection from public disclosure.

Based on the foregoing, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Stipulated Confidentiality Order is amended:

1. Paragraph 9 (a) is deleted and the following substituted:

(a) The Circuit Court of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida (the "Court") (including Clerks and other Court personnel). No document shall be filed under seal without complying with Fla. R. Jud. Admin. 2.051;

2. A new paragraph 10 is added, and the subsequent paragraphs renumbered:

10. Any party wishing to file a paper or pleading in the court file which it contends contains information or items deemed Confidential hereunder shall simultaneously file (i) a redacted version of the paper or pleading, with only the material deemed Confidential redacted, and (ii) an unredacted version in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked "Filed Under Seal-Subject to Confidentiality Order." Information redacted in the public filing shall be designated as either redacted pursuant to a prior order determining the material is subject to protection under the Confidentiality Order and the Rules of Judicial Administration, which shall reference the date of the order, or as redacted without prior determination of protectability. If material is redacted without a prior order finding it entitled to protection, it shall be the filing party's obligation to, within 30 days, file and serve a motion for a judicial determination of the material's protectability; schedule a hearing on the matter to be held within 90 days; and provide sufficient notice of the hearing to the public. See Rule 2.051 (c) (9) (D), Rules of Judicial Administration

It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the Motion for Contempt is stricken. It is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that Morgan Stanley's Motion for Reconsideration of July 12, 2004 Order on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Responses to Interrogatories is Granted. The Court's July 12, 2004 Order on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Responses to Interrogatories is vacated.

3 THE COURT: We can start talking about a
4 couple of preliminary matters. We need to
5 reset --

6 MR. SCAROLA: -- the hearing relating to 7 our trial setting.

8 THE COURT: Right. That was the
9 continuation of the case management conference
10 including the discussion of the trial setting.
11 Is that the only one we missed?

12 MR. IANNO: No. I don't think we got to a 13 lot of the motions that were scheduled for the 14 hearing, was it the 23rd?

15 THE COURT: But that's still the
16 continuation of the case management conference.

17 MR. IANNO: Right. Yes.

18 MR. SCAROLA: There are various discovery
19 issues pending. There is the reset of the 20 trial date. We're awaiting an order from Your 21 Honor with regard to the contempt.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. SCAROLA: And I think that that's the 24 general description.

25 THE COURT: But the only hearing we missed

1 was the continuation of the case management for
2 the 7th.

3 We probably need we think at least an

4 hour, two hours? You tell me how long we need.

5 MR. SCAROLA: For what piece, for the 6 setting the trial date?

7 THE COURT: Well, in the pieces we had
8 left from the last case management conference.

9 MR. IANNO: I would say we will probably 10 spend 45 minutes to an hour just talking about 11 the trial setting and those dates, just as a
12 guess. Maybe not. But an hour at a minimum I
13 would say, Your Honor, to handle everything.

14 I know, Mr. Scarola, we were just talking
15 about some scheduling issues.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Scheduling hearing
17 issues or scheduling other issues?

18 MR. SCAROLA: I have some conflict issues.

19 THE COURT: You guys are coming back on 20 the 23rd, right?

21 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. Yes.

22 THE COURT: At this point, I would rather 23 do it then.

24 MR. IANNO: Well, that's one of the 25 scheduling concerns.

1 THE COURT: Is that one of the scheduling
2 concerns?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. The problem, Your
4 Honor, is that I am scheduled to be out of town
5 and my client would like me to be present when

6 we deal with --

7 THE COURT: Hi, this is Judge Maass. Who
8 do I have on the phone?

9 MR. SOLOVY: In Chicago we have Mr. Marmer
10 and Solovy.

11 MR. BEMIS: Good morning, Your Honor. In 12 Washington, Larry Bemis and Tom Clare.

13 THE COURT: Anybody else?

14 MR. BEMIS: No, Your Honor. That's all
15 from our side.

16 THE COURT: Okay. The court reporter
17 asked that you identify yourself when you
18 speak, okay?

19 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor. Larry Bemis.

20 THE COURT: We were talking about, before
21 you all got on the phone, we were simply 22 talking about what we need to reset and what 23 the parameters were, and it was at least my 24 understanding that what we need to reset is the 25 continuation of the case management conference

1 that was set for the afternoon of the 7th and
2 that includes the discussion of the trial
3 setting; is that correct?

4 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, this is Larry
5 Bemis. That is our understanding.

6 THE COURT: And before you got on the

7 phone we decided we needed probably, to 8 complete those items, at least an hour and 9 preferably a little bit more. Do you think
10 that's correct.

11 MR. BEMIS: I think that's a fair
12 assessment. We might be able to do it a little 13 shorter, but that's pretty close.

14 THE COURT: Okay. And I had asked counsel
15 whether we thought we could incorporate it in 16 the hearing set Thursday afternoon.

17 Mr. Scarola said he had a conflict next week
18 that he needed to discuss and that's when we 19 got you all on the phone.

20 So Mr. Scarola, what's your concern about 21 next week?

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

23 Obviously, we would like to be able to 24 reach the trial-setting issues as soon as 25 possible, and if there were a way for us to do

1 that this week sometime before Friday morning,
2 that is our strong preference because I can be
3 present for that. I leave Friday morning and 4 don't return until Monday of the week after 5 next. That is the last week in September is 6 when I get back. I think the date is the 28th
7 or something like that. So our preference is 8 to deal with those issues before I leave.

9 THE COURT: But I thought, maybe I'm not 10 remembering, I thought when we talked about 11 this once before Mr. Bemis said that he had 12 wanted to be here physically present when we 13 discussed those issues or not.

14 MR. BEMIS: This is Larry Bemis. Yes, I
15 do want to be present. And we have a case
16 management conference next Thursday.

17 MR. SCAROLA: I understand that, and we
18 were prepared to have the case management
19 conference go forward while we were dealing 20 with discovery issues.

21 But if we are dealing with a trial-setting
22 issue, my client would like me to be present
23 when we deal with the trial-setting issue.
24 That's why we would very much like to be able 25 to resolve that before the end of this week if 8

1 that's possible.

2 THE COURT: Right. I understand that
3 concern. I'll be honest, we're closed tomorrow
4 for Rosh Hashanah and I am out of town on 5 Friday. So I can do it this afternoon, but in 6 fairness to Mr. Bemis, he's been adamant sort
7 of all along that he wanted to be present for 8 that discussion.

9 So then the question is, do you want to

10 keep that discussion on the 23rd or are you
11 also making a motion to continue that case
12 management conference?

13 MR. SCAROLA: We have two problems with 14 regard to the 23rd. We would not want to deal
15 with the trial-setting issue in my absence and 16 I will be absent on the 23rd. We're prepared
17 to go forward with other issues on the 23rd.

18 THE COURT: But we still need a hearing on 19 the trial issues.

20 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. But we
21 would also request, Your Honor, for the 22 convenience of my Chicago co-counsel, if
23 there's a way to move the 23rd hearing earlier 24 in the day that will allow them to be able to 25 get back to Chicago for the Jewish holidays

1 that week.

2 THE COURT: Right. Unfortunately, that's
3 a day when the longest hearing I have the rest
4 of the day is an hour, and I have a bunch of 15
5 minute and 30-minute hearings. So there's not 6 a block of time.

7 MR. SCAROLA: What does it look like the 8 following week in terms of moving everything to 9 the following week?

10 THE COURT: The following week is set to 11 be a jury trial.

12 MR. BEMIS: This is Mr. Bemis. The 13 following week we've got depositions set in New 14 York on Tuesday which requires travel on Monday
15 and we have commitments of a firm partners'
16 meeting in Chicago and we are all tied up
17 starting on Friday. I'm just not available on 18 the 29th and the 30th.

19 I will do anything on the 23rd that they 20 want including coming in and out of court on 21 15-minute segments if that's what they want.
22 But the next week has been blocked out as a
23 result of prior scheduling.

24 THE COURT: I just lost the bailiff.

25 Hold on one second, let me go grab my JA.

10

1 (Brief recess.)

2 THE COURT: Sorry. I just wanted to check
3 on something because we spent most of yesterday
4 resetting stuff. What I can do on the 23rd
5 starting there is take you guys from 3:00 to 6 5:00 and limit you, if you can, to at 9:30 and 7 I can actually can give you two and a half
8 hours at 9:30 that day. Weren't we 9 discussing --

10 MR. SCAROLA: 9:30 on the 23rd.

11 THE COURT: Right. Instead of 3:00, just 12 flip you with some hearings that I have.

13 Because those notices, the ones that I have 14 beginning at 9:30, we only sent out the notices
15 of hearing yesterday. Those were ones I had 16 already missed, so if they are going to 17 complain about the 23rd --

18 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Solovy, how does that 19 sound?

20 MR. SOLOVY: What would that be?

21 MR. SCAROLA: It would be 9:30 a.m. on 22 Thursday, the 23rd.

23 MR. SOLOVY: 9:30 to what, Your Honor?

24 THE COURT: Until noon. I can give you
25 until noon that day. I have a 30-minute and 11

1 then two hour hearings and then I will just --
2 wait, because then I won't fit those in.

3 I can give you a 10:00.

4 MR. SOLOVY: 10:00 to noon?

5 THE COURT: 10:00 to noon.

6 MR. SOLOVY: That would be good.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, 10:00 to noon is 9 fine for me for the 23rd.

10 THE COURT: Although we still have the 11 issue of going back, right, and trying to get 12 the hearing discussed about the trial setting.

13 MR. SCAROLA: If it is possible somehow to 14 do that this week, then that's our preference.

16 a motion to extend the amendment to next
17 Tuesday. That's later than we would like, but 18 we're agreeable to that date, Your Honor,
19 rather than just shilly-shallying along with 20 this.

21 THE COURT: So what you're telling me is I
22 can do an agreed order extending the time to 23 file amended pleadings until next Tuesday, the 24 22nd?

25 MR. SOLOVY: The 21st.
13

1 MR. SCAROLA: The 21st.

2 THE COURT: Is everybody in agreement on
3 that?

4 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, the answer is no,
5 we're not, because until such time as we get
6 some pending matters resolved which Your Honor
7 has under consideration, we have issues with 8 regard to getting the filing made with the 9 Court.

10 THE COURT: I'm confused. I thought the 11 only thing I had under advisement was the 12 motion to dismiss the contempt.

13 MR. IANNO: And that, the reason the 21st
14 was picked is because we thought because 15 everything was happening, we would have a 16 resolution of that.

17 THE COURT: So why does that have anything

18 to deal with the pleadings in the primary case?

19 MR. IANNO: It has to do -- and, Larry, I
20 don't know if you would like to address that or 21 do you want me to?

22 MR. BEMIS: You can go ahead and address
23 it.

24 MR. IANNO: It has to do with the 25 objection to the pro hac vice objection that is 14

1 based on contempt. If they would agree to the
2 pro hac vice admission of Kellog, Huber, that
3 issue may get resolved.

4 THE COURT: What you're telling me is that
5 their participation was so critical that you're 6 unable to determine whether you need to amend
7 the pleadings?

8 MR. IANNO: We need to have somebody that 9 can sign the pleadings.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Ianno has repeatedly
11 represented that his firm has no conflict in 12 that regard, Your Honor.

13 MR. IANNO: I can't, for other reasons.

14 MR. BEMIS: Mr. Ianno has correctly
15 summarized what our position is on this. We 16 need to have a ruling. It's not a delay
17 problem. We obviously have been internally
18 addressing this, but there are simply issues

19 that I cannot address on the telephone that our 20 other counsel are involved that implicate this 21 and they are pending a ruling on these other
22 matters and that is where we stand on this. We 23 are prepared to proceed promptly once we have 24 these other issues resolved, but, again,
25 because there are other --

15

1 THE COURT: Promptly, like a day?

2 MR. BEMIS: -- counsel involved, we are
3 not involved in the discussion related to it,
4 they cannot participate on the telephone calls
5 to the Court, we are just at a standstill on 6 this.

7 MR. SOLOVY: Well, Your Honor, obviously,
8 we take exception to that, obviously.

9 THE COURT: I understand. And I
10 understand plaintiff's consternation. In all
11 fairness, though, that motion wasn't set for a
12 hearing today, I don't think it gets argued. I
13 understand your concern.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Well, if it doesn't get 15 argued they ought to be complying with the 16 previously entered order. Simply by filing a
17 motion for extension --

18 THE COURT: I understand it doesn't toll
19 and I understand that's the argument you're 20 going to make when they come in and they want

16div-006599

21 to amend the pleading.

22 Okay. I will see everybody but

23 Mr. Scarola on the 23rd.

24 Was there anything else?

25 MR. IANNO: Mr. Scarola and I discussed,
16

1 because of these extensions, we're continuing

2 the stay of the contempt discovery that had

3 been previously extended.

4 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine. Do I need to 5 do an order?

6 MR. IANNO: I don't think so. We have it

7 on the record.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Only the order on the motion

9 to dismiss the contempt proceeding.

10 MR. IANNO: Right.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much.

12 Thank you, sirs.

13 (The hearing was concluded.)
