Attorneys for Defendant,
Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated

Complaint does not adequately plead a claim of actual knowledge. Thus, there is no allegation — nor could there be an allegation — of knowing participation. Similarly, there is no allegation that MS & Co. and Sunbeam insiders acted with common objective. To the contrary, the Complaint concedes that MS & Co. had nothing to gain from the transaction other than the collection of normal investment banking fees (Compl. ¶ 66) and in fact put its own name and reputation on the line in the course of marketing the convertible notes (Id. ¶¶ 47-52). That is hardly enough to plead a “common objective” with Al Dunlap, whose acknowledged aim was to “collect tens of millions of dollars for himself before the outside world could learn the truth of Sunbeam’s phony ‘turnaround.’” (Id. ¶ 28.)

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO STAY DISCOVERY

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co."), pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(c), moves for a protective order staying all discovery in this action until the Court has had an opportunity to rule on MS & Co.'s Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 (forum non conveniens), and to rule on MS & Co.'s case dispositive Motion For Judgment on the Pleadings. The protective order sought in this motion is designed to protect MS & Co. — and non-party witnesses in this case — from the undue burden and unnecessary expense that would occur from allowing discovery to go forward in a case that is not even properly before this Court.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") filed this action on May 8, 2003, alleging that it was persuaded to sell its stake in the Coleman Company ("Coleman") to the Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam") in reliance on false and misleading representations about Sunbeam's financial health. The only named defendant is MS & Co., who served as a financial advisor to Sunbeam for part of the deal and who played no role in auditing Sunbeam's financial statements or making representations regarding Sunbeam's financial health. CPH has recently pursued identical claims in this Court against Arthur Anderson — Sunbeam's auditor — and settled those claims for an undisclosed sum.

Immediately after filing its Complaint, Plaintiff served MS & Co. with notice to take depositions of ten individuals over a two week period starting July 10, 2003. (See May 9, 2003 Notice of Taking Videotaped Deps. ("Notice of Deps.") (Ex. A).) Most of these individuals are New York residents; only one is an MS & Co. employee (and he works and lives in London); and only one is under the legal control of MS & Co. Plaintiff also served MS & Co. with a blanket request for production of documents, containing sixty-one separate paragraphs many of which themselves contain two or three separate and independent requests. (See May 9, 2003 Pl.'s 1st Request for Prod. of Docs. ("1st Request") (Ex. B).) These requests have nothing to do with Florida — to the contrary, all or substantially all of the requested documents are located in New York.¹

MS & Co. answered the Complaint on June 23, 2003. The Answer demonstrates that the Complaint fails to state any legally valid claims. The Complaint contains no factual allegation that CPH relied on any representation attributed to MS & Co. and the documents quoted in the Complaint foreclose such reliance as a matter of law. Moreover, MS & Co.'s affiliate lent and

¹ They are also redundant and abusive. See, e.g., id. ¶ 2 ("All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you, including without limitation all billing statements, invoices, time detail records, individual calendars, daily diaries (including electronic calendar programs), or other documents that describe or record the time spent, or expenses incurred (including back-up for any out-of-pocket expenses), by any Morgan Stanley personnel, or that describe or record any aspect of their activities concerning any services performed on behalf of, or concerning Sunbeam."); id. ¶ 29 ("All documents concerning the closing of the Subordinated Debenture Offering including without limitation all documents concerning the decision to close the Subordinated Debenture Offering."); id. ¶ 30 ("All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture Offering."); id. ¶ 35 ("All documents concerning the Coleman Transaction."); id. ¶ 36 ("All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture Offering."); id. ¶ 39 ("All documents concerning Coleman or CPH."); id. ¶ 41 ("All documents concerning the events and matters that are the subject of the Complaint filed [in] this action.").

lost hundreds of millions of dollars to Sunbeam in the course of the Coleman transaction. Thus, rather than being complicit in the fraud alleged in the Complaint, the pleadings show that MS & Co. was itself a victim of that fraud.

Simultaneously with this Motion to Stay Discovery, MS & Co. has filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In The Alternative, For Judgment On The Pleadings (“Motion to Dismiss”), which provides the Court with two substantial and independent grounds for disposing of Plaintiff’s Complaint in its entirety.

First, MS & Co. moves to dismiss on the ground of forum non conveniens pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061. Under Rule 1.061, CPH’s lawsuit should proceed in New York — where the events and injuries it complains of allegedly occurred, where both parties are headquartered, and where the overwhelming majority of the witnesses and relevant documents are located. This strong preference for a New York forum is confirmed by the fact that this Court — or any other court adjudicating this controversy — will have to apply New York law to Plaintiff’s claims.

Second, MS & Co. moves for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.140(c). As set forth in detail in the Motion to Dismiss and Memorandum of Law filed in support thereof, Plaintiff’s Complaint suffers from numerous legal defects and should be dismissed in its entirety for failure to state a legally valid Claim.

DISCUSSION

I. This Court Has Broad Discretion To Control The Timing And Sequence Of Discovery.

Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(c) authorizes this Court to stay burdensome and ultimately wasteful discovery pending decision on dispositive motions. Rule 1.280(c) provides:

Upon motion by a party or the person from who discovery is sought, and for good cause shown, the court in which the action is pending may make any order to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense that justice requires

Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(c). Additionally, Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(d) authorizes the Court, upon motion of one of the parties, to issue an order controlling the timing and sequence of discovery “for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interest of justice.”

Together, Rule 1.280(c) and Rule 1.280(d) provide the court with broad discretion to impose a stay of discovery pending the determination of dispositive motions by the issuance of a protective order. See, e.g., Rasmussen v. South Fla. Blood Serv., Inc., 500 So. 2d 533, 535 (Fla. 1987) (“The discovery rules . . . confer broad discretion on the trial court to limit or prohibit discovery.”); SCI Funeral Servs. of Fla., Inc. v. Light, 811 So. 2d 796, 798 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (“[T]he scope and limitation of discovery is within the broad discretion of the trial court.”).

II. A Stay Of Discovery Is Particularly Appropriate Here Because MS & Co.’s Motion To Dismiss Raises Substantial Forum Non Conveniens Issues — And May Dispose of Plaintiff’s Entire Action As A Matter Of Law.

The requested stay of discovery pending resolution of MS & Co.’s Motion to Dismiss would best serve the interests of justice and judicial economy in this case because that Motion raises the serious threshold question whether — under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 — Florida is the even appropriate forum for resolution of Plaintiff’s claims.

Indeed, nothing compels this Court to oversee the discovery of a New York plaintiff against a New York defendant regarding a transaction that was based entirely in New York. And the oversight required here would be substantial. As stated above, Plaintiff here requests discovery from non-party witnesses over whom MS & Co. has no legal control and of potentially hundreds of thousands of documents, few of which have anything to do with the merits of Plaintiff’s claims, and all (or substantially all) of which are located outside of Florida. (See 1st Request and Notice of Deps.) None of this discovery, of course, is relevant to the dispositive questions now pending before this Court — i.e., whether this Court is the proper forum to resolve this New York-based controversy and/or whether the Complaint states any legally valid claim — either of which may dispose of this case in its entirety.

Under these circumstances, a stay of the discovery sought by Plaintiff is warranted on a number of independent grounds:

First, because this action should proceed — if at all — in New York, not Florida, this Court is not the proper forum for directing discovery on the merits of Plaintiff’s claims. See, e.g., Gleneagle Ship Mgmt. Co. v. Leondakos, 602 So. 2d 1282, 1284 (Fla. 1992) (discovery conducted during pendency of motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction should not address merits of case and “should not be broad, onerous or expansive”); Church of Scientology of Cal., Inc. v. Cazares, 401 So. 2d 810, 810 (Fla. 2d DCA 1981) (authority of a trial court found to lack venue is limited to entry of an order dismissing or transferring the case).

Second, it would impose an unnecessary burden and expense to require the parties to engage in extensive discovery prior to this Court’s ruling on a motion that is likely to dispose of the entire case as a matter of law. See, e.g., Chudasama v. Mazda Motor Corp., 123 F.3d 1353, 1367 (11th Cir. 1997) (“Facial challenges to the legal sufficiency of a claim or defense, such as a motion to dismiss based on failure to state a claim for relief, should . . . be resolved before discovery begins.”) (emphasis added).²

² Florida courts look to federal decisions for guidance in interpreting Florida’s Rules of Civil Procedure. See, e.g., Gleneagle, 602 So. 2d at 1283-84; Smith v. Southern Baptist Hosp. of Fla., Inc., 564 So. 2d 1115, 1117 & n.2 (Fla. 1st DCA 1990) (federal cases are “pertinent and highly persuasive” for construing Rule 1.280(c)). These federal decisions typically stay discovery in circumstances materially indistinguishable from this case — indeed, there appears to be no reported case of any jurisdiction questioning a trial court’s broad discretion to limit discovery in the circumstances presented here. See, e.g., Enplanar, Inc. v. Marsh, 11 F.3d 1284, 1291 (5th Cir. 1994) (“[Plaintiffs] cite to no authority, and we have found none, holding the district court has abused its discretion in denying merits-related discovery pending ruling on a motion for change of venue.”) (emphasis added); Landry v. Air Line Pilots Ass’n Int’l, 901 F.2d 404, 435-36 (5th Cir. 1990) (affirming stay of broad discovery not related to (Continued...))

Third, non-party witnesses should not be forced to retain counsel and appear for depositions before it is determined that there is some basis for this suit to proceed in this forum, if at all. See Chudasama, 123 F.3d at 1368 (“Allowing a case to proceed through the pretrial process with an invalid claim. . . . does nothing but waste the resources of the litigants in the action before the court, delay resolution of disputes between other litigants, squander scarce judicial resources, and damage the integrity and the public’s perception of the . . . judicial system.”).

Fourth, the discovery sought here imposes the sort of “undue burden or expense” for which “justice requires” a temporary stay under Rule 1.280(c). Plaintiff has indiscriminately demanded every scrap of information from “Morgan Stanley” — defined broadly to include all subsidiaries, divisions, predecessors, successors, and representatives — that even tangentially relates to claims alleged in the Complaint. This information would come in the form of hardcopy files, electronic servers, computer hard drives, and electronic mail, among other sources, and could generate hundreds of thousands of documents from multiple facilities. It is hard to imagine a more burdensome or unnecessary request at this stage of the litigation.

dispositive motion); Transunion Corp. v. PepsiCo, Inc., 811 F.2d 127, 130 (2d Cir. 1987) (affirming stay of discovery pending decision on motion to dismiss for forum non conveniens); Spencer Trask Software & Info. Servs., L.L.C. v. RPost Int’l Ltd., 206 F.R.D. 367, 368 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (“[S]tay of discovery should be granted where motion to dismiss ‘is potentially dispositive, and appears to be not unfounded in the law.’”) (emphasis added) (quoting Gandler v. Nazarov, No. 94 Civ. 2272 (CSH), 1994 WL 702004, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 14, 1994)); Johnson v. New York Univ. School of Educ., 205 F.R.D. 433, 434 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (granting stay where “defendant’s motion to dismiss is potentially dispositive and does not appear to be unfounded in the law”) (emphasis added); Chavous v. D.C. Fin. Responsibility & Mgmt Assistance Auth., 201 F.R.D. 1, 2 (D.D.C. 2001) (“It is well settled that discovery is generally considered inappropriate while a motion that would be thoroughly dispositive of the claims in the Complaint is pending.”) (internal quotation & citation omitted; emphasis added); Anti-Monopoly, Inc. v. Hasbro, Inc., No. 94 Civ. 2120 (LMM), 1996 WL 101277, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. March 7, 1996) (granting stay on the ground that discovery “will be totally unnecessary if [Defendant’s] motion for judgment on the pleadings . . . is granted”) (emphasis added).

Finally, Plaintiff will not be prejudiced if discovery is postponed. The question whether the Plaintiff states any legally valid claims is a pure question of law — no factual development can assist the Court in making that determination. Nor do any of Plaintiff's discovery requests pertain to whether this Court is a proper forum for this suit. At bottom, Plaintiff has filed suit in a foreign jurisdiction with no connection to the underlying claim and now seeks to have discovery directed by a foreign court against a foreign defendant and non-party witnesses. The interests of justice, judicial economy, fundamental fairness and common sense require that such discovery be stayed prior to a ruling on whether this case even belongs in Florida and/or whether this case presents any legally valid claims.

CONCLUSION

Staying discovery pending resolution of MS & Co.'s Motion to Dismiss best serves the interest of justice and judicial economy. MS & Co.'s Motion to Dismiss will allow the Court to dispose of Plaintiff's entire action with no additional expenditure of resources by the parties. Compared to the burden of discovery, especially for non-party and non-resident witnesses, Plaintiff will suffer no cognizable injury from allowing the Court to determine whether the Florida courts are a proper forum for this case before discovery commences. Allowing discovery to go forward, however — before the forum issue has been determined and the legal sufficiency of Plaintiff's Complaint has been established — would be wasteful, burdensome, and prejudicial.

For these reasons, Defendant MS & Co. respectfully requests that this Court enter an order staying all discovery pending the Court's rulings on MS & Co.'s Motion to Dismiss.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.
2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1997 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a) The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b) The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation";
and
- c) The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

SUBPOENA TO CUSTODIAN OF RECORDS OF
BANK OF AMERICA NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

You are hereby requested to produce the following documents pursuant to the definitions and instructions contained herein:

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents concerning synergies that might be achieved from a business combination of Sunbeam, Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, or any combination thereof.
2. All documents concerning the potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, studies, reports, analyses, evaluations, projections, estimates, comments, or other work, performed by Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Bank of America, or First Union.
3. All documents concerning any evaluation or assessment of the Bank Facilities, either prior to or after March 31, 1998, by you or any of the Lenders, including, but not limited to, any credit review or portfolio review, credit review sheets, call reports, contact reports, credit approval forms, portfolio forms, credit risk reviews, and covenant compliance reports.
4. All communications by and among the Lenders concerning the Credit Agreement, the Bank Facilities, Sunbeam, Coleman, or the Coleman Transaction.
5. All documents concerning the Lenders' plans or efforts to syndicate or sell off any portion of the Lenders' Commitments, as reflected in Schedule 2.01 of the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, information packages provided to potential lenders, lists or designations of potential lenders, communications with potential lenders, expressions of interest and/or commitment made by any potential lender, and/or presentations or handouts used at lender group meetings.

6. All documents concerning Sunbeam's intention to draw down any portion of the Credit Agreement, specifically including, but not limited to, any and all written Borrowing Requests.

7. All documents concerning whether or not you or any of the Lenders considered exercising their right to terminate service under the Credit Agreement following any material adverse change in the financial status of Sunbeam.

8. All documents concerning any offer to buy Reorganized Sunbeam, or the sale, or possible sale of Reorganized Sunbeam or any subsidiary or material group of assets thereof.

9. All documents concerning your efforts to have Sunbeam retain or maintain your lending services both prior to and after the closing of the Bank Facilities.

10. All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you including, but not limited to, any Documentation Agent (as defined in the Credit Agreement) fee and any other fee related to the Credit Agreement.

11. All documents concerning the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, the sources and uses of the Bank Facilities, the decision to close the Bank Facilities, and the closing of the Bank Facilities.

12. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Sunbeam conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

13. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Coleman or CPH conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

14. All documents concerning the negotiation and signing of the February 27, 1998 Agreements.
15. All documents concerning the closing of the Coleman Transaction, including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Coleman Transaction.
16. All documents concerning the meetings of Sunbeam's Board of Directors.
17. All documents concerning any valuation of Sunbeam or Sunbeam securities.
18. All documents concerning the stock market's valuation of Sunbeam securities, including, without limitation, documents describing or analyzing the increase or decline in the market price of Sunbeam stock in any portion of the period from and including July 1, 1996 through and including December 31, 1998.
19. All documents concerning your role as Documentation Agent for the Credit Agreement or Bank Facilities.
20. All documents concerning your April 28, 1998 meeting with Sunbeam, First Union, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley, including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents memorializing, describing, or referring to the meeting.
21. All documents concerning any amendment to the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, the April 1998, June 1998, and July 1998 amendments. Your response should include, but is not limited to, all documents concerning the reasons for the amendments.
22. All documents concerning your meetings with Sunbeam, First Union, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley at which the topics of Sunbeam or the Bank Facilities were discussed including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents concerning the meeting. Your response should include documents from the period after the Bank Facilities closed on March 31, 1998.

23. All documents concerning the lien placed by you and/or MSSF and First Union on Coleman stock owned by Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, documents concerning the reason or decision to seek the lien.

24. All documents concerning the collateral for the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that collateral.

25. All documents concerning the settlement agreement between CPH and Sunbeam dated August 12, 1998.

26. All documents concerning any write-off or loss reserve you have taken against the Bank Facilities.

27. All documents concerning your rating of the Bank Facilities and any change made to that rating.

28. All documents concerning any distribution you received as part of Sunbeam's bankruptcy reorganization plan, including, but not limited to, the value of the Sunbeam stock you received, and all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that distribution.

29. All documents concerning Sunbeam's decision to file for bankruptcy.

30. All documents concerning Sunbeam's plan of reorganization.

31. All documents concerning any settlement or compromise reached with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Sunbeam Corporation.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Mafco to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

a. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;

b. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and

c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

SUBPOENA TO CUSTODIAN OF RECORDS OF FIRST UNION NATIONAL BANK
(NOW KNOWN AS WACHOVIA BANK NATIONAL ASSOCIATION)

You are hereby requested to produce the following documents pursuant to the definitions and instructions contained herein:

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents concerning synergies that might be achieved from a business combination of Sunbeam, Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, or any combination thereof.
2. All documents concerning the potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, studies, reports, analyses, evaluations, projections, estimates, comments, or other work, performed by Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Bank of America, or First Union.
3. All documents concerning any evaluation or assessment of the Bank Facilities, either prior to or after March 31, 1998, by you or any of the Lenders, including, but not limited to, any credit review or portfolio review, credit review sheets, call reports, contact reports, credit approval forms, portfolio forms, credit risk reviews, and covenant compliance reports.
4. All communications by and among the Lenders concerning the Credit Agreement, the Bank Facilities, Sunbeam, Coleman, or the Coleman Transaction.
5. All documents concerning the Lenders' plans or efforts to syndicate or sell off any portion of the Lenders' Commitments, as reflected in Schedule 2.01 of the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, information packages provided to potential lenders, lists or designations of potential lenders, communications with potential lenders, expressions of interest and/or commitment made by any potential lender, and/or presentations or handouts used at lender group meetings.

6. All documents concerning Sunbeam's intention to draw down any portion of the Credit Agreement, specifically including, but not limited to, any and all written Borrowing Requests.

7. All documents concerning whether or not you or any of the Lenders considered exercising their right to terminate service under the Credit Agreement following any material adverse change in the financial status of Sunbeam.

8. All documents concerning any offer to buy Reorganized Sunbeam, or the sale, or possible sale of Reorganized Sunbeam or any subsidiary or material group of assets thereof.

9. All documents concerning your efforts to have Sunbeam retain or maintain your lending services both prior to and after the closing of the Bank Facilities.

10. All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you, including, but not limited to, any Administrative Agent (as defined in the Credit Agreement) fee and any other fee related to the Credit Agreement.

11. All documents concerning the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, the sources and uses of the Bank Facilities, the decision to close the Bank Facilities, and the closing of the Bank Facilities.

12. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Sunbeam conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

13. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Coleman or CPH conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

14. All documents concerning the negotiation and signing of the February 27, 1998 Agreements.
15. All documents concerning the closing of the Coleman Transaction, including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Coleman Transaction.
16. All documents concerning the meetings of Sunbeam's Board of Directors.
17. All documents concerning any valuation of Sunbeam or Sunbeam securities.
18. All documents concerning the stock market's valuation of Sunbeam securities, including, without limitation, documents describing or analyzing the increase or decline in the market price of Sunbeam stock in any portion of the period from and including July 1, 1996 through and including December 31, 1998.
19. All documents concerning your role as Administrative Agent for the Credit Agreement or Bank Facilities.
20. All documents concerning your April 28, 1998 meeting with Sunbeam, Bank of America, and MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley, including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents memorializing, describing, or referring to the meeting.
21. All documents concerning any amendment to the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, the April 1998, June 1998, and July 1998 amendments. Your response should include, but is not limited to, all documents concerning the reasons for the amendments.
22. All documents concerning your meetings with Sunbeam, Bank of America, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley at which the topics of Sunbeam or the Bank Facilities were discussed including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents concerning the meeting. Your response should include documents from the period after the Bank Facilities closed on March 31, 1998.

23. All documents concerning the lien placed by you and/or Bank of America and MSSF on Coleman stock owned by Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, documents concerning the reason or decision to seek the lien.

24. All documents concerning the collateral for the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that collateral.

25. All documents concerning the settlement agreement between CPH and Sunbeam dated August 12, 1998.

26. All documents concerning any write-off or loss reserve you have taken against the Bank Facilities.

27. All documents concerning your rating of the Bank Facilities and any change made to that rating.

28. All documents concerning any distribution you received as part of Sunbeam's bankruptcy reorganization plan, including, but not limited to, the value of the Sunbeam stock you received, and all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that distribution.

29. All documents concerning Sunbeam's decision to file for bankruptcy.

30. All documents concerning Sunbeam's plan of reorganization.

31. All documents concerning any settlement or compromise reached with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Sunbeam Corporation.

32. All documents concerning any valuation of Coleman or Coleman securities.
33. All documents concerning Sunbeam's or Coleman's financial statements and/or Sunbeam's restated financial statements.
34. All documents concerning the increase in the size of the Subordinated Debenture Offering from $500 million to $750 million.
35. All documents concerning the decrease in the amount of the Bank Facilities from $2.0 billion to $1.7 billion.
36. All documents concerning any draft or executed "comfort letters" prepared in connection with the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
37. All documents concerning the sale of Subordinated Debentures, including, without limitation, documents concerning road shows, communications with potential investors, or communications with or among Morgan Stanley's sales personnel.
38. All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture offering, including, but not limited to, the pricing, conversion features, and/or "book of demand" for the Subordinated Debentures.
39. All documents concerning the events that took place on March 19, 1998 at Global Financial Press, including, without limitation, documents concerning Lawrence Bornstein and/or John Tyree.
40. All documents concerning the "bring-down" due diligence for the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
41. All documents concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and/or earnings.

42. All documents concerning the closing of the Subordinated Debenture Offering including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Subordinated Debenture Offering.

43. All documents concerning any press releases or any statement contained in any press release by Sunbeam bearing the following dates or issued on or about October 23, 1997, March 19, 1998, April 3, 1998, May 9, 1998, June 15, 1998, June 25, 1998, June 30, 1998, October 20, 1998, or November 12, 1998.

44. All documents concerning communications relating to Sunbeam, Coleman, or CPH, concerning the subject of the Coleman Transaction or the Bank Facility, including, without limitation, internal communications within First Union or communications between or among First Union and Sunbeam; Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP; Coopers & Lybrand; Llama Company; Arthur Andersen LLP; Sard Verbinnen & Co., Inc.; Hill & Knowlton, Inc.; Coleman, Credit Suisse First Boston; CPH.; Mafco; Wachtell Lipton, Rosen & Katz; Davis Polk & Wardwell; or any other person or company, and/or any of their respective employees, agents, or representatives.

45. All documents concerning any inquiry from, or any communication between or among you and any Sunbeam investor, potential investor, securities or financial analyst, or rating agency relating to Sunbeam.

46. All documents concerning any meeting between and among you, Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Coleman, First Alert, or Signature Brands related to the 1998 acquisitions, the integration of the acquisitions, including, but not limited to, documents prepared for, disseminated at, utilized during, or prepared after such meetings.

47. All documents concerning the Coleman Transaction.

48. All documents concerning Albert Dunlap and/or Russell Kersh.

49. Organizational charts, memoranda, or similar documents that describe the business organizational structure and the administrative, management, and reporting structure of First Union from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

50. All documents concerning First Union's policies, procedures, manuals, guidelines, reference materials, or checklists that were in effect during any period from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998 for the performance of due diligence, including, without limitation, due diligence performed in connection with underwriting credit facilities.

51. All of your document retention or document destruction policies or procedures or similar procedures for the preservation, storage, destruction, back-up or deletion of documents of any kind, including electronic or hard copy versions of documents, for any time during 1996 through the present, including, without limitation, any amendment to any such policies or procedures, schedules or related documents, any and all records concerning adherence to and failure to adhere to or abide by any such policies or procedures, and any memoranda or other instructions concerning the obligation and procedures to be utilized to preserve all relevant documents, including without limitation evidence concerning the Litigations, the Arbitrations, and the SEC Administrative Proceedings.

52. All documents or other information you have provided or produced to any party (whether voluntarily or in response to a document request, subpoena duces tecum, interrogatories, requests for admission, or other requests for information and/or documents) in any of the Litigations, the Arbitrations, or the SEC Administrative Proceedings (including, without limitation, any reports, communications, filings, testimony, legal memoranda, statements, or other documents submitted to the Securities & Exchange Commission or any other party). Your response should include:

- a. All discovery requests, subpoenas duces tecum, interrogatories, or requests for admissions served on you in any of the Litigations, the Arbitrations, or the SEC Administrative Proceedings;

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Mafco to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a) The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b) The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and
- c) The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

VERIFIED MOTION TO ADMIT
THOMAS A. CLARE, PRO HAC VICE

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., pursuant Fla. R. Jud. Adm. 2.061, requests this Court to admit attorney Thomas A. Clare, pro hac vice, and in support of this Motion, states the following:

1. Defendant requests that this Court permit Thomas A. Clare, an attorney with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis whose address is 655 15th Street, N.W. – 12th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, to appear pro hac vice and participate fully in this action as additional counsel on behalf of Defendant.

2. Mr. Clare has been admitted to practice before all courts in the Commonwealth of Virginia since October 11, 1995, and all courts in the District of Columbia since February 1, 1999. Mr. Clare also has been admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Virginia and the District of Maryland. Mr. Clare is a member of the State Bar of Virginia and the Bar of

District of Columbia and is in good standing with respect to such memberships. Mr. Clare has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Clare has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Mr. Clare has previously filed a motion on May 29, 2001 for permission to appear in Florida state courts in Siemens Information v. Qtera Corp., CL-99-12321 (15th Jud. Cir., Palm Beach County, Fla.). That case was terminated in October, 2001. The representation of Defendant in this matter commenced on May 8, 2003.

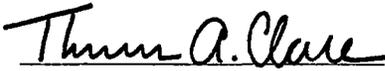

7. Mr. Clare will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Plaintiff has been consulted regarding this motion and has no objection.

WHEREFORE, Defendant respectfully requests that this Court enter an order admitting Thomas A. Clare, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing Defendant as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that he has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., pursuant Fla. R. Jud. Adm. 2.061, requests this Court to admit attorney Thomas D. Yannucci, pro hac vice, and in support of this Motion, states the following:

1. Defendant requests that this Court permit Thomas D. Yannucci, an attorney with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis whose address is 655 15th Street, N.W. – 12th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, to appear pro hac vice and participate fully in this action as additional counsel on behalf of Defendant.

2. Mr. Yannucci has been admitted to practice before all courts in the District of Columbia since December 18, 1981. Mr. Yannucci also has been admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court; the United States Courts of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, First Circuit, Second Circuit, Third Circuit, Fourth Circuit, Fifth Circuit, Sixth Circuit, Seventh Circuit, Eighth Circuit, Tenth Circuit and Eleventh Circuit; and the United States

District Courts for the District of Columbia, the Eastern District of Missouri, the Central District of Illinois, and the Eastern District of Wisconsin. Mr. Yannucci is a member of the Bar of District of Columbia and is in good standing with respect to such memberships. Mr. Yannucci has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Yannucci has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Mr. Yannucci has previously filed a motion on January 24, 2000 for permission to appear in Florida state courts in Siemens Information v. Qtera Corp., CL 99-12321 (15th Jud. Cir., Palm Beach County, FL). That case was terminated in October, 2001. The representation of Defendant in this matter commenced on May 8, 2003.

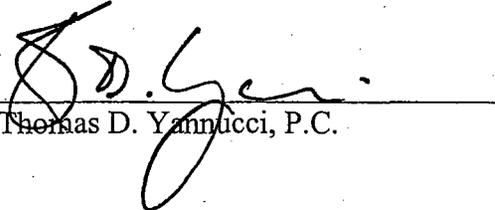

7. Mr. Yannucci will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Plaintiff has been consulted regarding this motion and has no objection.

WHEREFORE, Defendant respectfully requests that this Court enter an order admitting Thomas D. Yannucci, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing Defendant as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that he has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

Thomas D. Yannucci, P.C.

SUBPOENA TO CUSTODIAN OF RECORDS OF
BANK OF AMERICA NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

You are hereby requested to produce the following documents pursuant to the definitions and instructions contained herein:

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents concerning synergies that might be achieved from a business combination of Sunbeam, Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, or any combination thereof.
2. All documents concerning the potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, studies, reports, analyses, evaluations, projections, estimates, comments, or other work, performed by Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Bank of America, or First Union.
3. All documents concerning any evaluation or assessment of the Bank Facilities, either prior to or after March 31, 1998, by you or any of the Lenders, including, but not limited to, any credit review or portfolio review, credit review sheets, call reports, contact reports, credit approval forms, portfolio forms, credit risk reviews, and covenant compliance reports.
4. All communications by and among the Lenders concerning the Credit Agreement, the Bank Facilities, Sunbeam, Coleman, or the Coleman Transaction.
5. All documents concerning the Lenders' plans or efforts to syndicate or sell off any portion of the Lenders' Commitments, as reflected in Schedule 2.01 of the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, information packages provided to potential lenders, lists or designations of potential lenders, communications with potential lenders, expressions of interest and/or commitment made by any potential lender, and/or presentations or handouts used at lender group meetings.

6. All documents concerning Sunbeam's intention to draw down any portion of the Credit Agreement, specifically including, but not limited to, any and all written Borrowing Requests.

7. All documents concerning whether or not you or any of the Lenders considered exercising their right to terminate service under the Credit Agreement following any material adverse change in the financial status of Sunbeam.

8. All documents concerning any offer to buy Reorganized Sunbeam, or the sale, or possible sale of Reorganized Sunbeam or any subsidiary or material group of assets thereof.

9. All documents concerning your efforts to have Sunbeam retain or maintain your lending services both prior to and after the closing of the Bank Facilities.

10. All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you including, but not limited to, any Documentation Agent (as defined in the Credit Agreement) fee and any other fee related to the Credit Agreement.

11. All documents concerning the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, the sources and uses of the Bank Facilities, the decision to close the Bank Facilities, and the closing of the Bank Facilities.

12. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Sunbeam conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

13. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Coleman or CPH conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

14. All documents concerning the negotiation and signing of the February 27, 1998 Agreements.

15. All documents concerning the closing of the Coleman Transaction, including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Coleman Transaction.

16. All documents concerning the meetings of Sunbeam's Board of Directors.

17. All documents concerning any valuation of Sunbeam or Sunbeam securities.

18. All documents concerning the stock market's valuation of Sunbeam securities, including, without limitation, documents describing or analyzing the increase or decline in the market price of Sunbeam stock in any portion of the period from and including July 1, 1996 through and including December 31, 1998.

19. All documents concerning your role as Documentation Agent for the Credit Agreement or Bank Facilities.

20. All documents concerning your April 28, 1998 meeting with Sunbeam, First Union, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley, including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents memorializing, describing, or referring to the meeting.

21. All documents concerning any amendment to the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, the April 1998, June 1998, and July 1998 amendments. Your response should include, but is not limited to, all documents concerning the reasons for the amendments.

22. All documents concerning your meetings with Sunbeam, First Union, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley at which the topics of Sunbeam or the Bank Facilities were discussed including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents concerning the meeting. Your response should include documents from the period after the Bank Facilities closed on March 31, 1998.

23. All documents concerning the lien placed by you and/or MSSF and First Union on Coleman stock owned by Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, documents concerning the reason or decision to seek the lien.

24. All documents concerning the collateral for the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that collateral.

25. All documents concerning the settlement agreement between CPH and Sunbeam dated August 12, 1998.

26. All documents concerning any write-off or loss reserve you have taken against the Bank Facilities.

27. All documents concerning your rating of the Bank Facilities and any change made to that rating.

28. All documents concerning any distribution you received as part of Sunbeam's bankruptcy reorganization plan, including, but not limited to, the value of the Sunbeam stock you received, and all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that distribution.

29. All documents concerning Sunbeam's decision to file for bankruptcy.

30. All documents concerning Sunbeam's plan of reorganization.

31. All documents concerning any settlement or compromise reached with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Sunbeam Corporation.

32. All documents concerning any valuation of Coleman or Coleman securities.
33. All documents concerning Sunbeam's or Coleman's financial statements and/or Sunbeam's restated financial statements.
34. All documents concerning the increase in the size of the Subordinated Debenture Offering from $500 million to $750 million.
35. All documents concerning the decrease in the amount of the Bank Facilities from $2.0 billion to $1.7 billion.
36. All documents concerning any draft or executed "comfort letters" prepared in connection with the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
37. All documents concerning the sale of Subordinated Debentures, including, without limitation, documents concerning road shows, communications with potential investors, or communications with or among Morgan Stanley's sales personnel.
38. All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture Offering, including, but not limited to the pricing, conversion features, and/or "book of demand" for the Subordinated Debentures.
39. All documents concerning the events that took place on March 19, 1998 at Global Financial Press, including, without limitation, documents concerning Lawrence Bornstein and/or John Tyree.
40. All documents concerning the "bring-down" due diligence for the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
41. All documents concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and/or earnings.

42. All documents concerning the closing of the Subordinated Debenture Offering including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Subordinated Debenture Offering.

43. All documents concerning any press releases or any statement contained in any press release by Sunbeam bearing the following dates or issued on or about October 23, 1997, March 19, 1998, April 3, 1998, May 9, 1998, June 15, 1998, June 25, 1998, June 30, 1998, October 20, 1998, or November 12, 1998.

44. All documents concerning communications relating to Sunbeam, Coleman, or CPH, concerning the subject of the Coleman Transaction or the Bank Facility, including, without limitation, internal communications within Bank of America or communications between or among Bank of America and Sunbeam; Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP; Coopers & Lybrand; Llama Company; Arthur Andersen LLP; Sard Verbinnen & Co., Inc.; Hill & Knowlton, Inc.; Coleman; Credit Suisse First Boston; CPH; Mafco.; Wachtell Lipton, Rosen & Katz; Davis Polk & Wardwell; or any other person or company, and/or any of their respective employees, agents, or representatives.

45. All documents concerning any inquiry from, or any communication between or among you and any Sunbeam investor, potential investor, securities or financial analyst, or rating agency relating to Sunbeam.

46. All documents concerning any meeting between and among you, Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, First Union, Coleman, First Alert, or Signature Brands related to the 1998 acquisitions, the integration of the acquisitions, including, but not limited to, documents prepared for, disseminated at, utilized during, or prepared after such meetings.

47. All documents concerning the Coleman Transaction.

48. All documents concerning Albert Dunlap and/or Russell Kersh.

49. Organizational charts, memoranda, or similar documents that describe the business organizational structure and the administrative, management, and reporting structure of Bank of America from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

50. All documents concerning Bank of America's policies, procedures, manuals, guidelines, reference materials, or checklists that were in effect during any period from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998 for the performance of due diligence, including, without limitation, due diligence performed in connection with underwriting credit facilities.

51. All of your document retention or document destruction policies or procedures or similar procedures for the preservation, storage, destruction, back-up or deletion of documents of any kind, including electronic or hard copy versions of documents, for any time during 1996 through the present, including, without limitation, any amendment to any such policies or procedures, schedules or related documents, any and all records concerning adherence to and failure to adhere to or abide by any such policies or procedures, and any memoranda or other instructions concerning the obligation and procedures to be utilized to preserve all relevant documents, including without limitation evidence concerning the Litigations, the Arbitrations, and the SEC Administrative Proceedings.

52. All documents or other information you have provided or produced to any party (whether voluntarily or in response to document requests, subpoena duces tecum, interrogatories, requests for admission, or other requests for information and/or documents) in any of the Litigations, the Arbitrations, or the SEC Administrative Proceedings (including, without limitation, any reports, communications, filings, testimony, legal memoranda, statements, or other documents submitted to the Securities & Exchange Commission or any other party). Your response should include:

- a. All discovery requests, subpoenas duces tecum, interrogatories, or requests for admissions served on you in any of the Litigations, the Arbitrations, or the SEC Administrative Proceedings;

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Mafco to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;

b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and

c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

(NOW KNOWN AS WACHOVIA BANK NATIONAL ASSOCIATION)

You are hereby requested to produce the following documents pursuant to the definitions and instructions contained herein:

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents concerning synergies that might be achieved from a business combination of Sunbeam, Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, or any combination thereof.
2. All documents concerning the potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, studies, reports, analyses, evaluations, projections, estimates, comments, or other work, performed by Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Bank of America, or First Union.
3. All documents concerning any evaluation or assessment of the Bank Facilities, either prior to or after March 31, 1998, by you or any of the Lenders, including, but not limited to, any credit review or portfolio review, credit review sheets, call reports, contact reports, credit approval forms, portfolio forms, credit risk reviews, and covenant compliance reports.
4. All communications by and among the Lenders concerning the Credit Agreement, the Bank Facilities, Sunbeam, Coleman, or the Coleman Transaction.
5. All documents concerning the Lenders' plans or efforts to syndicate or sell off any portion of the Lenders' Commitments, as reflected in Schedule 2.01 of the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, information packages provided to potential lenders, lists or designations of potential lenders, communications with potential lenders, expressions of interest and/or commitment made by any potential lender, and/or presentations or handouts used at lender group meetings.

6. All documents concerning Sunbeam's intention to draw down any portion of the Credit Agreement, specifically including, but not limited to, any and all written Borrowing Requests.

7. All documents concerning whether or not you or any of the Lenders considered exercising their right to terminate service under the Credit Agreement following any material adverse change in the financial status of Sunbeam.

8. All documents concerning any offer to buy Reorganized Sunbeam, or the sale, or possible sale of Reorganized Sunbeam or any subsidiary or material group of assets thereof.

9. All documents concerning your efforts to have Sunbeam retain or maintain your lending services both prior to and after the closing of the Bank Facilities.

10. All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you, including, but not limited to, any Administrative Agent (as defined in the Credit Agreement) fee and any other fee related to the Credit Agreement.

11. All documents concerning the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, the sources and uses of the Bank Facilities, the decision to close the Bank Facilities, and the closing of the Bank Facilities.

12. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Sunbeam conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

13. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Coleman or CPH conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

14. All documents concerning the negotiation and signing of the February 27, 1998 Agreements.
15. All documents concerning the closing of the Coleman Transaction, including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Coleman Transaction.
16. All documents concerning the meetings of Sunbeam's Board of Directors.
17. All documents concerning any valuation of Sunbeam or Sunbeam securities.
18. All documents concerning the stock market's valuation of Sunbeam securities, including, without limitation, documents describing or analyzing the increase or decline in the market price of Sunbeam stock in any portion of the period from and including July 1, 1996 through and including December 31, 1998.
19. All documents concerning your role as Administrative Agent for the Credit Agreement or Bank Facilities.
20. All documents concerning your April 28, 1998 meeting with Sunbeam, Bank of America, and MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley, including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents memorializing, describing, or referring to the meeting.
21. All documents concerning any amendment to the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, the April 1998, June 1998, and July 1998 amendments. Your response should include, but is not limited to, all documents concerning the reasons for the amendments.
22. All documents concerning your meetings with Sunbeam, Bank of America, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley at which the topics of Sunbeam or the Bank Facilities were discussed including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents concerning the meeting. Your response should include documents from the period after the Bank Facilities closed on March 31, 1998.

23. All documents concerning the lien placed by you and/or Bank of America and MSSF on Coleman stock owned by Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, documents concerning the reason or decision to seek the lien.

24. All documents concerning the collateral for the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that collateral.

25. All documents concerning the settlement agreement between CPH and Sunbeam dated August 12, 1998.

26. All documents concerning any write-off or loss reserve you have taken against the Bank Facilities.

27. All documents concerning your rating of the Bank Facilities and any change made to that rating.

28. All documents concerning any distribution you received as part of Sunbeam's bankruptcy reorganization plan, including, but not limited to, the value of the Sunbeam stock you received, and all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that distribution.

29. All documents concerning Sunbeam's decision to file for bankruptcy.

30. All documents concerning Sunbeam's plan of reorganization.

31. All documents concerning any settlement or compromise reached with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Sunbeam Corporation.

32. All documents concerning any valuation of Coleman or Coleman securities.
33. All documents concerning Sunbeam's or Coleman's financial statements and/or Sunbeam's restated financial statements.
34. All documents concerning the increase in the size of the Subordinated Debenture Offering from $500 million to $750 million.
35. All documents concerning the decrease in the amount of the Bank Facilities from $2.0 billion to $1.7 billion.
36. All documents concerning any draft or executed "comfort letters" prepared in connection with the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
37. All documents concerning the sale of Subordinated Debentures, including, without limitation, documents concerning road shows, communications with potential investors, or communications with or among Morgan Stanley's sales personnel.
38. All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture offering, including, but not limited to, the pricing, conversion features, and/or "book of demand" for the Subordinated Debentures.
39. All documents concerning the events that took place on March 19, 1998 at Global Financial Press, including, without limitation, documents concerning Lawrence Bornstein and/or John Tyree.
40. All documents concerning the "bring-down" due diligence for the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
41. All documents concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and/or earnings.

42. All documents concerning the closing of the Subordinated Debenture Offering including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Subordinated Debenture Offering.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Mafco to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a) The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b) The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and
- c) The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

STIPULATED CONFIDENTIALITY ORDER

The parties hereto hereby stipulate and agree to the following Confidentiality Order:

1. Scope of Order. This Order shall apply to all non-public and Confidential (as hereinafter defined) materials produced in this litigation and all testimony given in any deposition by any party to the litigation or by any person or entity that is not a party hereto (a “non-party”), to all non-public and Confidential information disclosed by any party hereto during the course of the captioned litigation and to all non-public information disclosed to any party hereto by any non-party in response to the service of a subpoena or notice of deposition on a non-party in connection with the captioned litigation (“Litigation Materials”).

2. This Order shall not apply to any document, testimony or other information that (a) is already in a receiving party’s possession at the time it is produced, (b) becomes generally available to the public other than as a result of disclosure in violation of this Order or in breach of any other legal obligation, or (c) becomes available to a party other than through voluntary or required production from a person or party who obtained the document, testimony or other information without any confidentiality restriction.

3. Litigation Materials and the information derived therefrom shall be used solely for the purpose of preparing for and conducting this litigation, and shall not be disclosed or used for any other purpose.

4. Any party or non-party may designate as "Confidential" any Litigation Materials or portions thereof which the party or non-party believes, in good faith, constitute, contain, reveal or reflect proprietary or confidential trade secrets or technical, business, financial or personnel information of a current nature. If a party or non-party produces Litigation Materials that have been produced in another litigation or to any government entity and such Litigation Materials have been designated confidential or were accompanied by a request that confidential treatment be accorded them, such Litigation Materials shall be deemed to have been designated "Confidential" for purposes of this Stipulation and Order.

5. Any documents or other tangible Litigation Materials may be designated as "Confidential" by marking every such page "Confidential" or by informing the other party in writing that such material is Confidential. Such markings will be made in a manner which does not obliterate or obscure the content of the document or other tangible Litigation Material. If Litigation Material is inspected at the choice of location of the party or non-party producing or disclosing Litigation Materials (a "producing party"), all such Litigation Material shall be presumed at such inspection to have been designated as Confidential by the producing party until such time as the producing party provides copies to the party that requested the Litigation Material. Production of Confidential Material for inspection and copying shall not constitute a waiver of confidentiality.

6. Depositions or other testimony may be designated "Confidential" by any one of the following means:

(a) stating orally on the record, with reasonable precision as to the affected testimony, on the day the testimony is given that this information is “Confidential”; or

(b) sending written notice designating, by page and line, the portions of the transcript of the deposition or other testimony to be treated as “Confidential” within 10 days after receipt of the transcripts.

7. The entire transcript of any deposition shall be treated as Confidential Material until thirty days after the conclusion of the deposition. Each page of deposition transcript designated as Confidential Material shall be stamped, as set forth in paragraph 5 above, by the court reporter or counsel.

8. In the event it becomes necessary at a deposition or hearing to show any Confidential Material to a witness, any testimony related to the Confidential Material shall be deemed to be Confidential Material, and the pages and lines of the transcript that set forth such testimony shall be stamped as set forth in paragraph 5 of this Stipulation.

9. Litigation Materials designated “Confidential” and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, shall not be given, shown, made available or communicated in any way to anyone except:

(a) The Circuit Court of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit in and for Palm Beach County, Florida (the “Court”) (including Clerks and other Court personnel). Litigation Materials designated “Confidential” and any copies thereof, and the information contained therein, that are filed with the Court or any pleadings, motions or other papers filed with the Court, shall be filed under seal in a separate sealed envelope conspicuously marked “Filed Under Seal – Subject to Confidentiality Order,” or with such other markings as required by Court rules, and shall be kept under seal until further order of the Court. Where possible, only those portions of filings with the Court that disclose matters designated "Confidential" shall be filed under seal;

(b) counsel to the parties, including co-counsel of record for the parties actually assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation, and the legal associates and clerical or other support staff who are employed by such counsel or attorneys and are working under the express direction of such counsel or attorneys;

(c) parties and current officers and employees of parties to the extent reasonably deemed necessary by counsel disclosing such information for the purpose of assisting in the prosecution or defense of this litigation;

(d) outside photocopying, graphic production services, litigation support services, or investigators employed by the parties or their counsel to assist in this litigation and computer personnel performing duties in relation to a computerized litigation system;

(e) any person who is a witness or deponent, and his or her counsel, during the course of a deposition of testimony in this litigation;

(f) any person who is a potential fact witness in the litigation, provided, however, that a person identified solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material;

(g) court reporters, stenographers, or videographers who record deposition or other testimony in the litigation;

(h) experts or consultants retained in connection with the litigation;

(i) any person who is indicated on the face of a document to have been an author, addressee or copy recipient thereof, provided, however, that a person identified solely in this subparagraph shall not be permitted to retain copies of such Litigation Material; and

(j) any other person, upon written consent from the party or person who designated such Litigation Materials “Confidential.”

10. Before any person included in paragraph 9(f) or (h) is given access to Litigation Materials designated “Confidential,” and before any person included in subparagraph 9(e) is permitted to retain any copy of Litigation Materials designated Confidential, such person shall be provided with a copy of this Order and shall acknowledge in a written statement, in the form provided as Exhibit A hereto, that he or she read the Order and agrees to be bound by the terms thereof. Such executed forms shall be retained in the files of counsel for the party who gave access to Litigation Materials to the person who was provided such access. Such executed forms shall not be subject to disclosure under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure unless a showing of good cause is made and the Court so orders.

11. The inadvertent production of privileged or arguably privileged materials shall not be determined to be either: (a) a general waiver of the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine or any other privilege; or (b) a specific waiver of any such privilege with respect to documents being produced or the testimony given. Notice of any claim of privilege as to any document claimed to have been produced inadvertently shall be given within a reasonable period of time after discovery of the inadvertent production, and, on request by the producing party, all inadvertently produced materials as to which a claim of privilege is properly asserted and any copies thereof shall be returned promptly.

12. Nothing in this Order shall prevent any producing party from disclosing or using its own “Confidential” Litigation Materials as it deems appropriate, and any such disclosure shall not be deemed a waiver of any party’s right or obligations under this Order with respect to any other information. If a party or non-party that designates information “Confidential” discloses or uses such “Confidential” Litigation Materials in a manner inconsistent with the claim that such information is confidential, any party may move the Court for an order removing such “Confidential” designation pursuant to paragraph 15 herein. Nothing in this Stipulation and Order shall impose any restrictions on the use or disclosure by any party of documents, materials, testimony or other information produced as Litigation Material obtained by such party independently of discovery in this litigation.

13. The parties do not waive any right to object to any discovery request, or to the admission of evidence on any ground, or seek any further protective order, or to seek relief from the Court from any provision of this Order by application on notice on any grounds.

14. If any party objects to the designation of any Litigation Materials as “Confidential,” the party shall first state the objection by letter to the party that made such designations. The parties agree to confer in good faith by telephone or in person to attempt to resolve any dispute respecting the terms or operation of this Order. If the parties are unable to resolve such dispute within 5 days of such conference, any party may then move the Court to do so. Until the Court rules on such dispute, the Litigation Materials in question shall continue to be treated as “Confidential,” as designated.

15. Upon motion, the Court may order the removal of the “Confidential” designation from any information so designated. In connection with any motion concerning the propriety of a “Confidential” designation, the party making the designation shall bear the burden of proof.

16. Within 60 days of the conclusion of this litigation as to all parties, all Litigation Materials designated “Confidential” and all copies or notes thereof shall be returned to counsel for the producing party who initially produced the Litigation Materials, or destroyed, except that counsel may retain their work product and copies of court filings, transcripts, and exhibits, provided said retained documents will continue to be treated as provided in this Order, as modified by rulings of the Court. If a party chooses to destroy documents after the litigation has concluded, that party shall certify such destruction in writing to the producing party upon written request for such certification by the producing party.

17. The failure of any party to challenge the designation by another production party of Litigation Material as “Confidential” during the discovery period shall not be a waiver of that party’s right to object to the designation of such material at trial.

18. This Stipulation applies to all non-parties that are served with subpoenas in connection with this litigation or who otherwise produce documents or are noticed for deposition in connection with this litigation, and all such non-parties are entitled to the protection afforded hereby upon signing a copy of this agreement and agreeing to be bound by its terms.

19. Any party may move to modify the provisions of this Order at any time or the parties may agree by written stipulation, subject to further order of the Court, to modify the provisions of the Order. Should any non-party seek access to the Confidential Material, by request, subpoena or otherwise, the party or recipient of the Confidential Material from whom such access is sought, as applicable, shall promptly notify the producing party who produced such Confidential Materials of such requested access and shall not provide such materials unless required by law or with the consent of the producing party.

20. This Order shall not apply to any Litigation Materials offered or otherwise used by any party at trial or at any hearing held in open court. Prior to the use of any Litigation Materials that have been designated Confidential at trial or any hearing to be held in open court, counsel who desires to so offer or use such Confidential Material shall take reasonable steps to afford opposing counsel and counsel for the producing party who produced such Confidential

Material a reasonable opportunity to object to the disclosure in open court of such Confidential Material, and nothing herein shall be construed a wavier of such right to object.

21. Written notice provided pursuant to this Order shall be made to counsel of record by facsimile.

22. The provisions of this Order shall survive the final termination of the case for any retained Confidential Litigation Material thereof.

MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME

COMES NOW, non-party, WACHOVIA BANK, N.A. ("Wachovia"), and hereby moves for an enlargement of time to serve its response to the Notice of Deposition/Subpoena Duces Tecum directed to Custodian of Records of Wachovia on July 29, 2003 (the "Subpoena") served by Plaintiff. As grounds therefore, Wachovia states as follows:

1. On or about August 4, 2003 Wachovia was served with the Notice of Deposition for August 15, 2003 at 1:30 P.M. together with the Subpoena with Attachment A, which categorized the documents requested, a copy of which is attached hereto and marked as Composite Exhibit "A".

2. Attachment A to the Subpoena requests 58 categories of documents for the period January 1, 1996 through the date of trial in this matter (see instructions paragraph 3 on page 15). It further requests documents from two arbitrations, nine other lawsuits and two separate SEC Administrative Proceedings (see Definitions, paragraphs 1, 2, and 18 found on pages 9, 12 and 13, respectfully of Attachment A).

3. On its face, the Subpoena is patently overbroad, vague, ambiguous and requests commercially sensitive and/or confidential documents.

4. Moreover, the bulk of the documents requested concern a depositor or borrower other than Plaintiff herein. Pursuant to Section 655.059, Florida Statutes, the access to books and records of a financial institution are confidential and are only available for inspection and examination as proscribed in Rule 655.059(2)(b).

5. Further, there may be confidentiality provisions in Wachovia's agreements with its borrower, referenced in the Subpoena, (the "Borrower") that preclude Wachovia from disclosing the information requested to third parties without the Borrower's consent and/or prior court order.

6. Wachovia is unaware of any "agreement" by the Borrower or court order requiring the release of the information requested in the Subpoena.

7. However, in an effort to evaluate the relevancy of the request, Wachovia has ordered copies of the Complaints entitled "Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., Case No: 2003 CA 05045 AI and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., Case No: 2003 CA 005165 AI.

8. Wachovia is also in the process of ascertaining the location and availability of the documents requested in the voluminous Subpoena to the extent the documents are identifiable.

9. Within (30) thirty days, Wachovia should be in a better position to ascertain what, if any, documents should be produced and are available for production, should Plaintiff overcome the confidentiality requirements of 655.059, and any confidentiality agreements Wachovia has with the Borrower.

10. Wachovia has provided written notification to counsel for Plaintiff of its position.

11. Wachovia is not intentionally delaying the production of the documents requested, but is in need of additional time in light of the breadth of the Subpoena and the issues raised herein.

WHEREFORE, for good cause shown, non-party, Wachovia, prays this court to enter its order granting it thirty (30) additional days to and including September 21, 2003 to serve a response to Plaintiff's Deposition Notice/Subpoena Duces Tecum directed to the Custodian of Records of Wachovia and for any other relief the court may deem just and proper under the premises.

You are hereby requested to produce the following documents pursuant to the definitions and instructions contained herein:

DOCUMENTS REQUESTED

1. All documents concerning synergies that might be achieved from a business combination of Sunbeam, Coleman, Signature Brands, and First Alert, or any combination thereof.
2. All documents concerning the potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, studies, reports, analyses, evaluations, projections, estimates, comments, or other work, performed by Coopers & Lybrand, Morgan Stanley, MSSF, Bank of America, or First Union.
3. All documents concerning any evaluation or assessment of the Bank Facilities, either prior to or after March 31, 1998, by you or any of the Lenders, including, but not limited to, any credit review or portfolio review, credit review sheets, call reports, contact reports, credit approval forms, portfolio forms, credit risk reviews, and covenant compliance reports.
4. All communications by and among the Lenders concerning the Credit Agreement, the Bank Facilities, Sunbeam, Coleman, or the Coleman Transaction.
5. All documents concerning the Lenders' plans or efforts to syndicate or sell off any portion of the Lenders' Commitments, as reflected in Schedule 2.01 of the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, information packages provided to potential lenders, lists or designations of potential lenders, communications with potential lenders, expressions of interest and/or commitment made by any potential lender, and/or presentations or handouts used at lender group meetings.

6. All documents concerning Sunbeam's intention to draw down any portion of the Credit Agreement, specifically including, but not limited to, any and all written Borrowing Requests.

7. All documents concerning whether or not you or any of the Lenders considered exercising their right to terminate service under the Credit Agreement following any material adverse change in the financial status of Sunbeam.

8. All documents concerning any offer to buy Reorganized Sunbeam, or the sale, or possible sale of Reorganized Sunbeam or any subsidiary or material group of assets thereof.

9. All documents concerning your efforts to have Sunbeam retain or maintain your lending services both prior to and after the closing of the Bank Facilities.

10. All documents reflecting all fees and expenses paid by Sunbeam to you, including, but not limited to, any Administrative Agent (as defined in the Credit Agreement) fee and any other fee related to the Credit Agreement.

11. All documents concerning the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, the sources and uses of the Bank Facilities, the decision to close the Bank Facilities, and the closing of the Bank Facilities.

12. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Sunbeam conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

13. All documents concerning any investigation, analysis, or due diligence of Coleman or CPH conducted by you or on your behalf or by Morgan Stanley in 1997 or 1998.

14. All documents concerning the negotiation and signing of the February 27, 1998 Agreements.
15. All documents concerning the closing of the Coleman Transaction, including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Coleman Transaction.
16. All documents concerning the meetings of Sunbeam's Board of Directors.
17. All documents concerning any valuation of Sunbeam or Sunbeam securities.
18. All documents concerning the stock market's valuation of Sunbeam securities, including, without limitation, documents describing or analyzing the increase or decline in the market price of Sunbeam stock in any portion of the period from and including July 1, 1996 through and including December 31, 1998.
19. All documents concerning your role as Administrative Agent for the Credit Agreement or Bank Facilities.
20. All documents concerning your April 28, 1998 meeting with Sunbeam, Bank of America, and MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley, including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents memorializing, describing, or referring to the meeting.
21. All documents concerning any amendment to the Credit Agreement, including, but not limited to, the April 1998, June 1998, and July 1998 amendments. Your response should include, but is not limited to, all documents concerning the reasons for the amendments.
22. All documents concerning your meetings with Sunbeam, Bank of America, MSSF and/or Morgan Stanley at which the topics of Sunbeam or the Bank Facilities were discussed including, but not limited to, all notes taken of or during the meeting and documents concerning the meeting. Your response should include documents from the period after the Bank Facilities closed on March 31, 1998.

23. All documents concerning the lien placed by you and/or Bank of America and MSSF on Coleman stock owned by Sunbeam, including, but not limited to, documents concerning the reason or decision to seek the lien.

24. All documents concerning the collateral for the Bank Facilities, including, but not limited to, all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that collateral.

25. All documents concerning the settlement agreement between CPH and Sunbeam dated August 12, 1998.

26. All documents concerning any write-off or loss reserve you have taken against the Bank Facilities.

27. All documents concerning your rating of the Bank Facilities and any change made to that rating.

28. All documents concerning any distribution you received as part of Sunbeam's bankruptcy reorganization plan, including, but not limited to, the value of the Sunbeam stock you received, and all documents evaluating or assessing the value of that distribution.

29. All documents concerning Sunbeam's decision to file for bankruptcy.

30. All documents concerning Sunbeam's plan of reorganization.

31. All documents concerning any settlement or compromise reached with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Sunbeam Corporation.

32. All documents concerning any valuation of Coleman or Coleman securities.
33. All documents concerning Sunbeam's or Coleman's financial statements and/or Sunbeam's restated financial statements.
34. All documents concerning the increase in the size of the Subordinated Debenture Offering from $500 million to $750 million.
35. All documents concerning the decrease in the amount of the Bank Facilities from $2.0 billion to $1.7 billion.
36. All documents concerning any draft or executed "comfort letters" prepared in connection with the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
37. All documents concerning the sale of Subordinated Debentures, including, without limitation, documents concerning road shows, communications with potential investors, or communications with or among Morgan Stanley's sales personnel.
38. All documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture offering, including, but not limited to, the pricing, conversion features, and/or "book of demand" for the Subordinated Debentures.
39. All documents concerning the events that took place on March 19, 1998 at Global Financial Press, including, without limitation, documents concerning Lawrence Bornstein and/or John Tyree.
40. All documents concerning the "bring-down" due diligence for the Subordinated Debenture Offering.
41. All documents concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and/or earnings.

42. All documents concerning the closing of the Subordinated Debenture Offering including, without limitation, all documents concerning the decision to close the Subordinated Debenture Offering.

43. All documents concerning any press releases or any statement contained in any press release by Sunbeam bearing the following dates or issued on or about October 23, 1997, March 19, 1998, April 3, 1998, May 9, 1998, June 15, 1998, June 25, 1998, June 30, 1998, October 20, 1998, or November 12, 1998.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Maico to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a) The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b) The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and
- c) The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

AGREED ORDER REGARDING ENLARGEMENT
OF TIME TO PREPARE PRIVILEGE LOG

THIS CAUSE, having come before the Court on the agreement of the parties, and the Court having reviewed the pleadings on file and otherwise being fully advised in the premises, it is hereby

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. This Order shall apply to all current and future document discovery requests served by the parties in this action.
2. Upon review of the document requests served by the parties in this action, certain documents may be within the scope of the request that are protected by the attorney-client or work product privileges.
3. If any documents are withheld from production on the basis of privilege, the Court orders that each party provide a privilege log listing those documents pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(b)(5). The parties have indicated that they expect to produce documents on a "rolling" basis. Accordingly, the privilege log also shall be provided on a rolling basis within thirty (30) days after each portion of the party's production of documents from which the documents have been withheld on the basis of privilege. For any production of documents made prior to the date of this Order, the producing party shall provide the privilege log within thirty (30) days after the entry of this Order.

4. To the extent privilege logs were created in connection with other proceedings, the parties may use those privilege logs in this action, supplementing those logs as necessary to identify each individual document withheld on the basis of privilege.

5. The privilege log shall include, without limitation, any otherwise responsive documents that were created by the parties' lawyers in connection with the underlying transactions.

6. The parties are not required to provide a privilege log listing otherwise responsive documents where those documents involve privileged communications between the parties and their lawyers in connection with litigation arising from the transactions at issue in this case. For purposes of this paragraph, such litigation shall include, without limitation, this action and antecedent litigation involving the same transactions.

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO SET HEARING ON DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley"), requests this Court set a hearing on its Motion to Dismiss as a result of the parties' inability to agree upon a mutually convenient date within a reasonable time frame.

1. On June 25, 2003, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Fla.R.Civ.P., Rule 1.061 or, in the alternative, for Judgment on the Pleadings. The grounds for the Motion to Dismiss include forum non conveniens and failure to properly state a cause of action.

2. The parties had originally agreed to a hearing on this Motion for October, 2003. After this date was agreed to by counsel, Morgan Stanley's counsel was informed that this date was no longer convenient for certain Plaintiff's counsel. Thus, the hearing was not scheduled and the parties attempted to obtain other dates.

3. Despite numerous attempts to reschedule the hearing, the parties have been unable to agree upon mutually convenient dates that are within a reasonable time. This Court provided counsel with several hearing dates in October and November. The undersigned originally attempted to schedule this hearing during one of the Court's available October dates. However, Plaintiff's counsel, despite having at least 12 members of the Jenner & Block firm admitted pro hac vice as well as very competent local counsel, have indicated that they are not available for any hearing dates in October but were available for the November 14th date provided by the Court.

4. Because Plaintiff's counsel were not available during any of the October dates, the undersigned reluctantly agreed to the November 14, 2003 date. Although Plaintiff's counsel originally indicated that they were available on this date, the undersigned was recently informed that this date is no longer convenient for Plaintiff's counsel.

5. Because the Motion requests dismissal of this action based on forum non conveniens grounds, Morgan Stanley is being subjected to unnecessary burden and expense until the Motion is heard and determined by this Court.

WHEREFORE, Defendant, Morgan Stanley, respectfully requests that this Court enter an order Specially Setting the Motion to Dismiss for hearing together with such other and further relief as is just and proper.

RE: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
Case No.: CA 03-5045 AI

Dear Mr. Scarola:

I am in receipt of your letter dated September 22, 2003 and the proposed Agreed Order Permitting Foreign Attorneys to Appear for the action referenced above.

The copy of Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Permit Foreign Attorney to Appear included seeks admission of Clark C. Johnson only. The Motion fails to address the items required by Rule 2.061 (b) (4) and (5), Fla. R. Jud. Admin. Further, the proposed Agreed Order admits Jerold S. Solovy, Ronald L. Marnner, Robert T. Markowski, Michael T. Brody, Jeffrey T. Shaw, Deirdre E. Connell, Elizabeth A. Coleman, Denise K. Bowler, John W. Joyce, Christopher M. O'Connor, Stephen P. Baker, and Daniel E. Shaw as co-counsel. I have not, then, signed the proposed Agreed Order, which, together with the copy of the Motion, is returned with this letter.

Very truly yours,

VERIFIED MOTION TO ADMIT
ZHONETTE BROWN, PRO HAC VICE

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., pursuant Fla. R. Jud. Adm. 2.061, requests this Court to admit attorney Zhonette Brown, pro hac vice, and in support of this Motion, states the following:

1. Defendant requests that this Court permit Zhonette Brown, an attorney with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis LLP whose address is 655 15th Street, N.W. – 12th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, to appear pro hac vice and participate fully in this action as additional counsel on behalf of Defendant.

2. Ms. Brown has been admitted to practice before all courts in the State of Maryland since December 15, 1998, and all courts in the District of Columbia since August 2, 1999. Ms. Brown also has been admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Ms. Brown is a member of the State Bar of Maryland and the Bar of the District of Columbia and is in good standing with respect to such memberships. Ms. Brown has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Ms. Brown has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Ms. Brown has not filed a motion for permission to appear in Florida state courts in the preceding five years. The representation of Defendant in this matter commenced on May 8, 2003.

7. Ms. Brown will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Plaintiff has been consulted regarding this motion and has no objection.

WHEREFORE, Defendant respectfully requests that this Court enter an order admitting Zhonette Brown, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing Defendant as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that she has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period,

even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH and Mafco to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

a. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;

b. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and

c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., 2003 CA 005165

Dear Mr. Scarola:

Thank you for your letter of September 10, 2003 and the enclosed confidentiality order.

As I mentioned in my previous letter, unless the advance consent of Sunbeam is procured, or a court order issues specifically overriding the statute, Section 655.059(2)(b), Florida Statutes restricts Bank of America from disclosing the borrower account and loan information the subpoenas request, on pain of liability for a third degree felony as provided by § 655.059(2)(c). A review of the confidentiality order indicates that it does not address this statutory restriction on disclosure. To protect itself, Bank of America must wait for the written consent of Sunbeam, n/k/a American Household, Inc., or an order from the Court that specifically addresses § 655.059(2)(b) before it can produce the bulk of the responsive documents it has agreed to produce to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. If you are aware of any legal authority to the contrary, or an opinion construing the statute differently, please advise me of the same.

Very truly yours,

David M. Wells

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1996 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and
- c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.

CASE NO.: 2003 CA 005045 AI

Defendant.

AMENDED MOTION OF NON-PARTY TO APPEAR
THROUGH USE OF COMMUNICATION EQUIPMENT

Non-Party, Bank of America, N.A., pursuant to Rule 2.071(c) of the Florida Judicial Administration Rules, hereby requests this Court that it be permitted to participate through communication equipment in the motion calendar hearing which has been scheduled by plaintiff for 8:45 a.m. Thursday, October 2, 2003 and as grounds therefor would show:

1. Bank of America, N.A. is a non-party in this action. Bank of America, N.A. has been served with certain subpoenas to produce documents.
2. Because the subpoenas seek disclosure of banking records protected by Fla. Stat. § 655.059(2)(b), Bank of America, N.A. has advised plaintiff that the documents Bank of America, N.A. has agreed to produce can only be produced upon the entry of an appropriate order pursuant to § 655.059(2)(b).

3. The undersigned counsel for Bank of America, N.A. cannot be present in West Palm Beach on Thursday, October 2, but does not wish to impede the ability of the parties to proceed forward with discovery. Accordingly, Bank of America, N.A. is prepared to proceed with the hearing and appear by telephone. Pursuant to Rule 2.071(c) of the Florida Judicial Administrative Rules, appearance by telephone is appropriate, absent a showing of good cause to deny the request, where the hearing is set for not longer than 15 minutes. The pending motion is set for the Court's motion calendar which is intended to deal with motions of less than 15 minutes.

WHEREFORE, Bank of America, N.A. requests that it be permitted to appear for the above-referenced hearing by telephone or that the hearing be rescheduled to a mutually convenient date.

VIA HAND DELIVERY

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Co. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Case No. 2003 CA 5045 AI

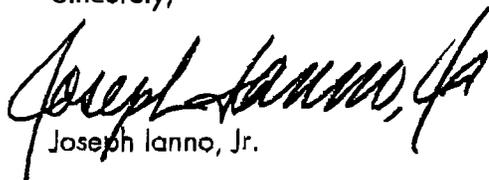

Dear Judge Maass:

At 4:33 p.m. this afternoon, we received Mr. Scarola's letter via facsimile unilaterally electing December 5, 2003 for the hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss in the above matter. No attempt was made to coordinate this date and time with the undersigned. It was the undersigned's understanding that the Court's ruling at Uniform Motion Calendar was that if the parties were unable to agree on either of the alternative dates that the Court provided, the hearing would be set by default on October 31, 2003 at 4:00 p.m.

At this time, the Defendant does not agree to delay the hearing on our Motion to Dismiss until December 5th; therefore, we respectfully request that Your Honor require the parties to appear on October 31, 2003 at 4:00 p.m. as the Court ruled at the hearing this morning.

Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

Joseph Ianno, Jr.

ORDER ON DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO SET HEARING ON DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

THIS CAUSE came before the Court September 29, 2003 on Defendant's Motion to Set Hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss, with both counsel present. Based on the proceedings before the Court, it is hereby

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that Defendant's Motion to Set Hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss is Granted. In open Court the undersigned offered three possible dates to counsel for hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss: (1) October 31, 2003, at 4:00 p.m., 1 hour reserved; (2) November 20, 2003, at 4:00 p.m., 1 hour reserved; and (3) December 5, 2003, at 8:00 a.m., 1 hour reserved. Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that unless Plaintiff's counsel contacts the undersigned's office by 4:00 p.m. September 29, 2003 to select November 20, 2003, at 4:00 p.m. or December 5, 2003, at 8:00 a.m., the Court shall schedule the hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss on October 31, 2003, at 4:00 p.m.

DONE AND ORDERED in West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida this 29
day of September, 2003.

5 North Dixie Highway, Courtroom 11-B, West Palm
6 Beach, Florida, beginning at the hour of 9:29
7 a.m., on Monday, September 29, 2003, pursuant to
8 the Notice filed herein, in the above-entitled
9 cause pending before the above-named Court.

10 P R O C E E D I N G S

11
12 THE COURT: Good morning. Do we have
13 a copy of the motion we're on today?

14 MR. IANNO: Yes. This is the case of 15 Coleman vs. Morgan Stanley. Joe Ianno, I'm
16 here on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

17 THE COURT: Thank you.

18 MR. IANNO: We've tried to work this
19 out, Your Honor. This is basically a
20 request of the Court to try to get a hearing
21 scheduled on our motion to dismiss.

22 The Court may recall back in July we
23 were here on a motion to stay discovery
24 based on our motion to dismiss which alleges 25 format and convenience grounds as well as

1 some other grounds.

2 Pending a hearing on that motion --
3 when we were here in July the parties had
4 agreed to an October hearing date on that
5 motion, and subsequent to that hearing, that 6 date fell apart.

7 We've been trying to get it worked in 8 again into the Court's calendar based on 9 dates your assistant has provided to us. We 10 had agreed on a November 14th date.

11 Well, first of all, Plaintiff's

16div-003821

12 counsel said November 14th wasn't an
13 available date. We had tried to get it in 14 September. That didn't work. We called him
15 back and we said, okay, we'll do November
16 14th.

17 THE COURT: How long is this going to 18 take?

19 MR. IANNO: Half hour to an hour.

20 THE COURT: Is it set now?

21 MR. IANNO: No.

22 THE COURT: So we just want to get the 23 book and try to find something?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. We do have a date
25 where everyone is available. The problem is

1 that the Defendants are anxious to resolve
2 the motion prior to that mutually agreeable
3 date cleared on Your Honor's calendar.

4 THE COURT: That's fine.

5 MR. IANNO: That date is December
6 12th, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Let's look at the book and
8 even see what's a possibility. The only
9 thing, it references a bunch of pro hac vice
10 attorneys. I don't think I signed that off
11 yet.

12 MR. SCAROLA: There are probably,
13 there are probably 20 who have already been 14 admitted. There may be others who are still 15 outstanding.

16 THE COURT: I've got a couple, because
17 there's a related case, there's another
18 Morgan Stanely?

19 MR. IANNO: Yes, there's two before
20 Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: I got a letter, Mr.
22 Scarola, from your office enclosing a motion
23 signed by one and a proposed order for about 24 a dozen people. So I wrote a letter and 25 sent it back saying -- you hadn't signed a

1 letter, I think somebody had signed it in
2 your absence, so it will show up, and just
3 so you know you need to follow up on it.

4 Okay, you said tentatively we have a
5 December 12th, is that the date?

6 MR. IANNO: Well, December 12th, your
7 assistant gave us a three hour time span
8 from 8 to 11.

9 THE COURT: That's not even all
10 available now still. That's what happened.

11 MR. IANNO: Yeah.

12 THE COURT: But you're telling me it's 13 not in the book for now, correct?

16div-003822

14 MR. IANNO: It is not in the book,
15 Your Honor.
16 THE COURT: Okay, so let's figure out
17 what we can do.
18 I can do it at 4:00 on October 31st.
19 MR. IANNO: That's fine, Your Honor.
20 THE COURT: Do you know if you're 21 available then?
22 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, the problem
23 is not really either Mr. Ianno's
24 availability or my availability. The 25 problem is that we are both local counsel

1 for out of state law firms who will be the
2 ones that will be primarily --
3 THE COURT: Can we call them now?
4 MR. SCAROLA: My out of state counsel
5 is Chicago and so it's only 8:00 there.
6 MR. IANNO: My national counsel, Your
7 Honor, said whatever date the Court orders
8 somebody will be here, and if not I'll argue
9 it.
10 THE COURT: I'll tell you what, hold
11 on.
12 MR. SCAROLA: If you could give us
13 three alternatives --
14 THE COURT: What I'm going to do is 15 say give you two or three dates and say if 16 you don't call my office by 4:00 today and 17 pick this date, then by default it's the 18 October 31st date.
19 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine. Thank you.
20 THE COURT: Okay? Number one is 21 10-31-03, 4:00 p.m., one hour.
22 MR. SCAROLA: I've got to caution the 23 Court that I think Mr. Ianno is being a
24 little optimistic in light of the number of 25 lawyers involved that we could finish this

00008

1 in one hour.
2 THE COURT: Oh, but that's a Friday
3 afternoon, everyone loves to stay late on
4 Friday. If we go over, that's life.
5 MR. IANNO: It doesn't get dark for 6 trick or treating until six or seven, Your
7 Honor. That's the only thing my calendar
8 would be conflicted on.
9 THE COURT: Option Number 2, 11-20-03,
10 4:00 p.m.
11 THE COURT: Option Number 3 is 8:00
12 a.m., 12-5-03.
13 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
14 THE COURT: So if we don't hear from 15 you by 4:00 today, we're going to plug it in

16div-003823

16 for that October 31st date.
17 MR. IANNO: Thank you very much.
18 I appreciate it.
19 THE COURT: Okay, bye-bye.

Case No. 2003 CA 005045 AI
Judge Elizabeth I. Maass

PLAINTIFF COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO PERMIT FOREIGN ATTORNEY TO APPEAR

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., joined by its Florida counsel, Jack Scarola, move this Court pursuant to Rule 2.061(b) of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration, for an Order permitting Clark C. Johnson to appear pro hac vice in this action on behalf of Plaintiff. In support of the motion, Plaintiff states:

1. Plaintiff has retained attorney Jack Scarola and the firm of Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley, P.A., 2139 Palm Beach Lakes Boulevard, West Palm Beach, Florida, as Florida counsel to assist in this matter.

2. Plaintiff and its Florida counsel seek the assistance of Clark C. Johnson of Jenner & Block, LLC, One IBM Plaza, Chicago, Illinois, in this matter. Plaintiff has previously retained the above-named law firm to provide legal representation in connection with this matter in 2001.

3. Clark C. Johnson is a member in good standing of the following bars: U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit; U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit; U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois (trial bar); U.S. District Court for the Central District of Illinois;

U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan; and the Illinois Supreme Court. Outside of this case and its companion case, No. 2003 CA 005165 AG, Mr. Johnson has not filed an application in any Florida state court to appear as counsel under Florida Rule of Judicial Administration 2.061 in the last five years. Mr. Johnson has never been disciplined, suspended, or disbarred by any court.

4. Mr. Johnson has read all applicable provisions of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating the Florida Bar, and this motion complies with those rules.

5. Jack Scarola has been a member of the Florida Bar since 1973, Florida Bar No. 169440, and consents to act as co-counsel with the foreign attorney in this action.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff moves this Court for an Order permitting Clark C. Johnson to appear on behalf of Plaintiff's counsel in this action.

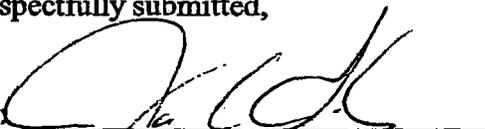

Under penalty of perjury, I declare that I have read the foregoing motion and with respect to my credentials the facts stated in it are true.

Clark C. Johnson

Respectfully submitted,

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AJ

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER, SANCTIONS AND IMPOSITION OF A COST BOND

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") requests that this Court enter a Protective Order concerning depositions unilaterally scheduled by the Plaintiff in 5 different cities in 4 states during a 17-day period in late October and early November. Plaintiff previously represented to this Court (and to Defendant) that its attorneys were unavailable to participate in a hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss on at least two of the days they now seek to take depositions. In support of its motion, Defendant states as follows:

1. Attached hereto as Exhibit I is Plaintiff's Notice of Taking Videotaped Depositions received on October 2, 2003 at 5:08 p.m. In order to appreciate the Plaintiff's bad faith in scheduling these depositions, a chronology of events is necessary:

- a) On June 25, 2003, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion To Dismiss Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 or, in the alternative, for Judgment on the Pleadings. The grounds for the Motion to Dismiss include forum non conveniens and failure to properly state a cause of action.

- b) The parties had originally agreed to hold a hearing on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss on October 10, 2003. After this date was agreed to by counsel, Morgan Stanley's counsel was informed that this date was no longer convenient for certain of Plaintiff's counsel. Indeed, Counsel for Morgan Stanley was advised by Attorney Deirdre Connell that the law firm of Jenner & Block was not available for any of the potential hearing dates during the month of October for a hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss. Ms. Connell is also the attorney who signed the deposition notice at issue in this motion.
- c) On September 29, 2003, the parties attended a hearing before this Court on Defendant's Motion to Set Hearing. At the hearing, the Court indicated that October 31, 2003 was an available hearing date for the Motion to Dismiss. Mr. Scarola indicated that before he could agree to the October 31, 2003 date, he would need to check with his co-counsel at Jenner & Block. The Court provided Mr. Scarola with alternative options if the Jenner & Block attorneys were not available on that date.
- d) Not surprisingly, Plaintiff chose the last possible date offered by the Court for a hearing on the Motion to Dismiss. The hearing was then scheduled by the Court for December 5, 2003.
- e) On October 2, 2003, at the request of the undersigned, the Court rescheduled the hearing to December 12, 2003 and increased the time allotted for the hearing from 60 minutes to 90 minutes.

f) Less than 12 hours after that hearing, Plaintiff served the Notice of Taking Videotaped Depositions that is the subject of this Motion. The Deposition Notice purports to schedule 10 depositions for 10 consecutive business days in October and to schedule depositions during the first 4 business days in November. The notice includes a date upon which Defendant's counsel had previously indicated to Plaintiff that Defendant's counsel could not be available. This notice also includes two dates, October 24 and October 31, where Plaintiff's counsel expressly indicated that they were unavailable for a hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss.

2. In order to avoid the undue burden and expense of depositions during the pendency of Defendant's Motion to Dismiss, Defendant had previously requested that this Court stay discovery until the Court had had an opportunity to rule on the Motion to Dismiss. That motion was denied, in part because — at the time the Motion to Stay — counsel had agreed to a prompt hearing on the Motion to Dismiss in early October. As the chronology above indicates, the hearing on the Motion to Dismiss now will not occur until December 2003, nearly five months after it was filed.

3. Since the Court denied Morgan Stanley's Motion to Stay, the parties have engaged in substantial written discovery. The parties have propounded the following written discovery requests in this case:

- Plaintiff's First Request for Production of Documents (61 Requests);
- Plaintiff CPH's Second Request for Production of Documents (15 Requests);
- Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's First Request for Production of Documents to Plaintiff (41 Requests);
- Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's First Set of Interrogatories to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. (5 Interrogatories);

- Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's First Set of Request for Admission (273 Requests);
- Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc's First Set of Interrogatories to Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (10 Interrogatories, plus subparts);
- Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's Second Set of Interrogatories and Second Request for Production of Documents to Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. (7 Interrogatories, 1 Request); and
- Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc.'s First Set of Requests For Admission (314 Requests).

4. In addition, the parties have engaged in substantial written discovery in the related case that is also pending in this Court, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes, Case Number 2003CA005165:

- Defendant CPH's First Request for Production of Documents (86 Requests);
- Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's First Request for Production of Documents to Plaintiff (44 Requests);
- Defendant Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc's First Set of Interrogatories to Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (8 Interrogatories, plus subparts);
- Defendant Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc's Second Set of Interrogatories to Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (4 Interrogatories, plus subparts);
- Morgan Stanley Senior Funding's First Set of Interrogatories and Second Request for Production of Documents to Defendants MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. (3 Interrogatories, 1 Request); and
- Coleman (Parent) Holding Inc.'s First Set of Requests for Admission (314 Requests).

5. In response to the requests identified in the preceding paragraphs, the parties have exchanged hundreds of boxes of documents and provided dozens of pages of responses to interrogatories and requests for admissions. The parties also have exchanged privilege logs in accordance with the Court's September 4, 2003 Agreed Order.

6. Moreover, the parties have served discovery requests on third parties such as Andersen Worldwide, Bank of America, Wachovia, Davis Polk & Wardwell, and Wachtell, Lipton Rosen & Katz. Two depositions of these third parties' custodians of records have been scheduled. Indeed, Plaintiff scheduled one such deposition on October 24, the second deposition that Plaintiff has scheduled on a date when it previously represented it was unavailable for a hearing on the Motion to Dismiss. There is a significant amount of additional third party discovery yet to be served. Thus, there remains a significant volume of documents to be produced by third parties and reviewed by the parties.

7. The parties also have engaged in deposition discovery. Specifically, each party has conducted depositions of the other party's corporate representative on issues relating to document retention, location, collection and production. Additionally, Morgan Stanley has already made John Tyree, a fact witness who currently resides in the United Kingdom, available to CPH for deposition on September 15, 2003. Mr. Tyree was in the United States to attend to a personal family matter, and, at an inconvenience to himself and his family, made himself available in New York for a full day's deposition.

8. Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss raises substantial forum non conveniens issues — and may dispose of Plaintiff's entire action as a matter of law. Plaintiff has effectively delayed the hearing on the Motion to Dismiss because of its counsel's alleged unavailability. It is now clear, however, that although Plaintiff's counsel are allegedly unavailable to attend a hearing before this Court, those same attorneys are apparently available to schedule 120 hours of depositions during that same time period (assuming 8 hour depositions).

9. The potential cost to the Defendant of proceeding with these depositions is enormous. A conservative estimate of the attorneys' fees and costs that would be incurred to prepare for and attend the depositions as currently scheduled is approximately $150,000.00.

10. Defendant submits that the service of the Deposition Notice on October 2, 2003, only a few hours after the hearing before this Court, evidences Plaintiff's clear intent to delay the hearing while at the same time subject the Defendant to harassment, annoyance, undue burden and expenses in responding to further deposition discovery.

11. Morgan Stanley does not seek to stay all discovery during the pendency of its Motion to Dismiss (a request the Court has already denied). Morgan Stanley does not oppose proceeding with document discovery. However, Plaintiff's conduct in delaying the hearing on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss, while at the same time scheduling depositions during the same time period, justifies the requested Protective Order prohibiting further depositions. Plaintiff should not be permitted to proceed with burdensome and expensive deposition discovery while at the same time avoiding a hearing on Morgan Stanley's Motion to Dismiss.

WHEREFORE, in order to avoid the undue burden and expense of additional depositions, and as a sanction for Plaintiff's bad faith in scheduling these depositions, Defendant Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court:

(A) enter a Protective Order prohibiting further depositions, other than depositions of custodians of records, until the Court has ruled on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss; or

(B) alternatively, prohibiting the taking of the depositions listed on Plaintiff's October 2, 2003 deposition notice and requiring Plaintiff to coordinate mutually convenient dates and times with counsel for Defendant; and

- (C) reserving jurisdiction for the imposition of sanctions; and
- (D) such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Dated: October 7, 2003

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

v.

Judge Elizabeth T. Maass

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS RELATING TO SCOTT PAPER

Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.380(a)(1), Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully requests that the Court direct Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") to produce documents relating to Scott Paper Company (Request No. 38). In support of this motion, CPH states as follows:

1. Request No. 38 seeks "[a]ll documents concerning the Scott Paper Company" from January 1, 1997 to the present. (See Exh. A.) Scott Paper is the company where Albert Dunlap was CEO prior to his tenure at Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). As alleged in CPH's complaint, based in large part on his work at Scott Paper, Mr. Dunlap "was viewed as a 'turnaround specialist' — that is, someone who could take a poorly performing company and significantly increase its value by 'turning around' its financial performance." (See Exh. B ¶ 17.) As the complaint also alleges, during the course of Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam in 1998, Morgan Stanley created promotional materials that touted Mr. Dunlap and his prior "'turnaround' accomplishments." See id. ¶ 50. In fact, however, Mr. Dunlap's supposed "turnaround" of Scott Paper was a sham and he used many of the same fraudulent techniques — albeit more egregiously — at Sunbeam. In requesting Morgan Stanley's Scott Paper documents, we are seeking relevant facts concerning the allegations in the complaint, including information about whether Morgan Stanley doubted Mr. Dunlap's "turnaround" of Scott Paper at the time Morgan Stanley was trumpeting his credentials in the Sunbeam promotional materials.

2. Prior to working with Mr. Dunlap at Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley had experience with and knowledge of Scott Paper's business. It is a matter of public record that during the 1990s — including the April 1994-December 1996 time period in which Mr. Dunlap was Scott Paper's CEO — Morgan Stanley analysts were following Scott Paper's business closely. It also is a matter of public record that in early 1998, Morgan Stanley was hired to assist the parent company of Scott Paper (Kimberly-Clark) in finding a buyer for some of Scott Paper's business holdings. In short, Morgan Stanley must have documents concerning Mr. Dunlap's tenure at Scott Paper, and those documents would be relevant to test Morgan Stanley's claim that it knew nothing of Mr. Dunlap's improper business methods and was as much the "victim" of his fraud at Sunbeam as anyone else.

3. Despite the obvious relevance of Morgan Stanley's Scott Paper documents, Morgan Stanley has objected on a number of boilerplate grounds to producing them, and has "agreed" to produce documents only "to the extent that the documents relate to the Coleman Transaction or Sunbeam, and are also responsive to one of the other requests" of CPH. (See Exh. C ¶ 38.) When given the opportunity to explain exactly what this objection means during the parties' meet-and-confers, Morgan Stanley demurred. By limiting its production to documents that are "responsive to one of the other requests," however, it is clear that Morgan Stanley is saying in effect that it is not producing any documents that are responsive only to Request No. 38.

4. Morgan Stanley has no legitimate basis for withholding any of the documents responsive to Request No. 38. Morgan Stanley has offered nothing but boilerplate objections such as that the document requests involved are "overbroad" or "unduly burdensome" or "not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." As the Appellate Court has held, however, unsubstantiated objections like those are "patently without merit" and "constitute discovery abuse" (First Healthcare Corp. v. Hamilton, 740 So. 2d 1189, 1193 n.1 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999), review dismissed, 743 So. 2d 12 (Fla. 1999)):

Each of these objections, stated baldly and without particulars, is patently without merit as the court found following the hearing on plaintiff's motion to compel. Such "stonewalling tactics," designed to delay making a timely response to valid discovery requests, constitute discovery abuse and should not be condoned.

5. Counsel for CPH contacted counsel for Morgan Stanley in an attempt to resolve this discovery dispute without a hearing but was unable to do so.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff CPH respectfully requests that this Court direct Morgan Stanley to produce within 10 days of the Court's order the documents responsive to Request No. 38 of CPH's first set of document requests.

COMPLAINT

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") alleges the following against Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley"):

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. This action arises from Morgan Stanley's participation in a massive fraud centered on Florida-based Sunbeam Corporation ("Sunbeam"). As a direct result of that fraud, CPH was induced to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock when CPH sold its 82% interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") to Sunbeam on March 30, 1998. Morgan Stanley misrepresented Sunbeam's financial condition and assisted Sunbeam's CEO, Albert Dunlap, in concealing Sunbeam's true financial condition so that Sunbeam could complete the purchase of Coleman on March 30, 1998.

2. In April 1997, Morgan Stanley began serving as Sunbeam's investment banker. Morgan Stanley originally attempted to find someone to buy Sunbeam. When Morgan Stanley was unable to find a buyer, Morgan Stanley developed a strategy for Sunbeam to use its

16. Sunbeam's disappointing earnings caused its stock price to plummet. During 1995, the price at which Sunbeam's stock traded fell 40%, from a high of $25-1/2. In 1996, Sunbeam's stock price continued to decline until it reached a low of $12-1/4 in July.

B. Sunbeam Hires A New Management Team (July 1996).

17. On July 18, 1996, Sunbeam's board of directors hired Albert Dunlap as Sunbeam's new Chief Executive Officer. Based upon brief terms as Chief Executive Officer of other publicly traded companies, including Scott Paper Company ("Scott Paper"), Dunlap was viewed as a "turnaround specialist" — that is, someone who could take a poorly performing company and significantly increase its value by "turning around" its financial performance. Because Dunlap touted the benefits from firing large numbers of employees and closing large numbers of plants, Dunlap became widely known as "Chainsaw Al." Dunlap lived in Boca Raton, Florida, and one of his first tasks at Sunbeam was to consolidate the company's six headquarters into one located in Delray Beach, Florida.

18. Immediately after joining Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Kersh as Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer. Kersh had teamed with Dunlap for over 15 years, serving as a senior executive with Dunlap at other companies, including Scott Paper. Dunlap also brought in several other hand-picked executives to make up his senior management team.

19. Dunlap and his senior management team entered into employment agreements with Sunbeam. Under those agreements, Dunlap and his senior management team stood to make tens of millions of dollars if they were able to boost Sunbeam's apparent value and then sell Sunbeam to another company at a premium.

J. Morgan Stanley Serves As The Underwriter For Sunbeam's $750 Million Convertible Debenture Offering (March 1998).

47. Dunlap knew that Sunbeam needed to raise funds to pay the cash portion of the acquisition consideration. Dunlap also knew that Sunbeam needed cash to purchase two other smaller companies in addition to Coleman. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam raise funds through a $500 million offering of convertible subordinated debentures. To assure the offering's success, Morgan Stanley lent its name to the offering. Indeed, Morgan Stanley agreed to serve as the sole underwriter for the offering.

48. The money raised from the sale of the debentures was used by Sunbeam to complete the acquisition of Coleman.

49. Unbeknownst to CPH or the public, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a small fraction of the financial community's expectations for the quarter. If Dunlap could consolidate Sunbeam's sales with Coleman's sales, Dunlap knew that he could obscure Sunbeam's actual first quarter sales. As a result, Dunlap was especially anxious to complete the acquisition of Coleman before Sunbeam announced its first quarter 1998 sales. Indeed, the success of the scheme depended upon Sunbeam's ability to complete the Coleman acquisition before Sunbeam's first quarter results were announced. To satisfy Dunlap's objectives, Morgan Stanley moved up the launch date of the offering.

50. The debentures were marketed to investors at a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls arranged by Morgan Stanley. Morgan Stanley prepared and distributed a memorandum for its sales force to use in marketing the debentures to investors. Morgan Stanley also developed the script for Dunlap and Kersh to deliver during the road show. In those materials,

Morgan Stanley misrepresented Sunbeam's financial performance and emphasized Dunlap's purported "turnaround" accomplishments.

51. Morgan Stanley launched the debenture offering with a research analyst presentation to the Morgan Stanley sales force. As part of Morgan Stanley's growing relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's top-rated research analysts planned to initiate equity coverage of Sunbeam. That Morgan Stanley analyst had modeled values for Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman that were higher than even Sunbeam's management had predicted.

52. Although Morgan Stanley initially planned to sell $500 million worth of debentures, Morgan Stanley's efforts were so successful that the size of the offering was increased to $750 million on March 19, 1998 — the day of the last road show. The debentures were sold to investors nationwide, including investors based in Florida.

K. Morgan Stanley Is Told That Sunbeam's First Quarter Sales Are Down Dramatically (March 17 -18, 1998).

53. As Sunbeam's investment banker and the sole underwriter for the debenture offering, Morgan Stanley had a duty to investigate Sunbeam's finances and business operations. As a matter of law, that duty included an obligation to verify management's claims about Sunbeam's finances and business. Morgan Stanley, which had been working hand-in-hand with Sunbeam for almost a year and had traveled to Sunbeam's Florida offices, repeatedly asserted that it had satisfied that duty.

54. Strong, who was one of the senior Morgan Stanley investment bankers involved, has admitted in sworn testimony that he may have had more than 100 telephone conversations with Dunlap and Kersh (whose offices were in Sunbeam's Delray Beach headquarters)

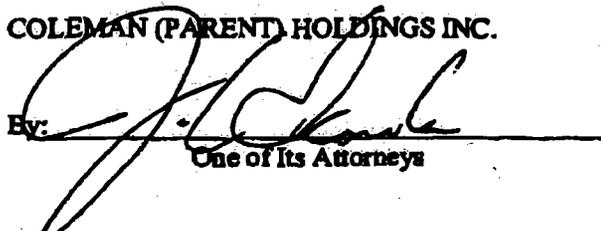

- A. Compensatory damages to be determined at trial in an amount in excess of $485 million;
- B. An award of costs and expenses incurred in this action, including reasonable attorneys' and experts' fees and expenses; and
- C. Any further relief as the Court may deem just and proper in light of all the circumstances of the case.
- D. CPH expressly reserves the right to seek leave to amend its complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to assert claims for punitive damages in excess of $1.5 billion as allowed by law.

JURY DEMAND

Plaintiff demands a trial by jury on all claims.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC. FIRST REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") hereby interposes the following second supplemental objections to plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s ("CPH") First Request for Production of Documents ("Request for Production").

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following general objections apply to all specifications of CPH's Request for Production. Each General Objection is hereby incorporated in the response to each specific request as if fully set forth therein:

1. MS & Co. objects to the entire Request for Production as over broad and unduly burdensome. CPH has requested the production of impermissibly broad categories of documents that, if read literally and in combination with the equally overbroad Definitions, would require MS & Co. to collect, review and produce potentially hundreds of thousands of pages of

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 38

All documents concerning the Scott Paper Company.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request as vague, ambiguous, overly broad, and unduly unduly burdensome. Further, MS & Co. objects to this request in that it is wholly irrelevant to the instant litigation and is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The Scott Paper Company is not party to this action. MS & Co. will produce documents, located after a good faith search for documents in its possession, custody, or control, responsive to this request, to the extent that the documents relate to the Coleman Transaction or Sunbeam, and are also responsive to one of the other requests.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 39

All documents concerning Coleman or CPH.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request to the extent it seeks documents which MS & Co. has previously produced in response to subpoenas in related legal proceedings, and which MS & Co. has previously agreed to make available to CPH. In addition, MS & Co. objects to this request because it is duplicative of other document requests, including, but not limited to Request Nos. 4, 8, 12, 15, 16, 34, 35, 40, 49 and 50. Requiring MS & Co. to produce all documents "concerning Coleman or CPH," with no further specification or identification of requested documents would impose an unreasonable and undue burden on MS & Co. It is unreasonable to so broadly tailor a request so as to encompass absolutely every document pertaining to Coleman or CPH. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, MS & Co. will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Tom:

On October 2, 2003, we noticed a series of depositions, including four present or former Morgan Stanley employees. In response to the notice of deposition, you advised us that all requests for depositions of current and former Morgan Stanley employees should go through you. (T. Clare to M. Brody letter, October 10, 2003.) We requested that you provide us with dates for the depositions of the Morgan Stanley witnesses. (M. Brody to T. Clare letter, October 13, 2003.) Weeks have come and gone, but you have still not scheduled a single deposition of a Morgan Stanley witness. Moreover, our most recent letter on the subject, which called for a response on or before October 24, 2003, has gone unanswered. (M. Brody to T. Clare letter, October 21, 2003.) Despite your promise to reschedule these depositions, we are no closer to scheduling the depositions of Morgan Stanley witnesses than we were on October 2, 2003.

We have attempted to reach reasonable accommodations with you as to the dates for the depositions of Morgan Stanley witnesses. You have been unwilling to schedule any depositions. I enclose an amended notice for the depositions of Messrs. Savarie, Chang, and Strong. Mr. Smith was noticed originally for November 5, 2003. Having received no alternative dates from you, we intend to go forward with Mr. Smith's deposition on that date. If you are unable to go forward on the date originally noticed for Mr. Smith or the remaining dates identified in the attached notice, we insist that you provide reasonable alternative dates by November 3, 2003 so that all of these depositions may be completed in the month of November. Otherwise, you will need to seek relief from the Court.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

New York, NY 10022

- T. Chang
10990 Rochester Ave., Apt. 307
Los Angeles, CA 90024-6281

CPH seeks to have the following commissions appointed for this purpose of obtaining documents and depositions from the above-listed witnesses:

Jerold S. Solovy
Jenner & Block, LLC
One IBM Plaza, Suite 4400
Chicago, IL 60611
(312) 222-9350

or any person duly authorized by him and able to administer oaths pursuant to the laws of Illinois.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S
MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF SETTLEMENT
AGREEMENT WITH ARTHUR ANDERSEN

Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of CPH's settlement agreement with Arthur Andersen fails to establish any persuasive reason why this Court should refuse to honor the contractual undertaking between CPH and Andersen to keep the settlement terms confidential. As is shown below, pursuant to the strong public policies of encouraging settlements and enforcing private contracts, courts routinely uphold the confidentiality of settlement agreements in the face of generalized requests for disclosure like the one at issue here. This Court should do the same.^{1/}

I. Morgan Stanley Has Not Shown Any Need For Discovery Of The Settlement Agreement At This Time.

Morgan Stanley offers two reasons why it supposedly needs to discover the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement: (1) the settlement agreement might be relevant to Morgan Stanley's "potential liability exposure" or to a set-off of damages to which Morgan Stanley could be entitled in the event that there is a damages verdict against it; and (2) the settlement agreement supposedly is needed to explore the biases, interests, and credibility of Andersen witnesses — some of whom are scheduled to be deposed in the near future (MS Mot. 4-5). Neither of those contentions supports Morgan Stanley's request to discover the settlement agreement at this early stage of the litigation.

^{1/} At the threshold, CPH is compelled to point out that Morgan Stanley's recitation of the facts and law in its motion is inaccurate in material respects. First, Morgan Stanley asserts that CPH's claims against Morgan Stanley are based on factual allegations that deal "exclusively with misrepresentations by Sunbeam insiders and Sunbeam's auditor, Arthur Andersen" (MS Mot. 2). That is not correct. CPH's complaint specifically alleges that Morgan Stanley made direct and materially false representations to CPH (e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 38-40). Second, Morgan Stanley also contends that "[s]ettled choice-of-law principles require the Court to apply New York law to plaintiff's claims" (MS Mot. 4 n.1). That too is not correct. As CPH will show in its response to Morgan Stanley's motion to dismiss, Florida law applies. In those and other material respects, Morgan Stanley's recitation of the applicable facts and law is simply wrong.

Set-off. Morgan Stanley suggests that it is entitled to discover the settlement agreement "to evaluate its potential liability exposure" (MS Mot. 4). That assertion is much too vague and lacking in specificity to overcome the contractual right to confidentiality that is at stake in this case. See, e.g., Florida Patient's Compensation Fund v. Reyka, 434 So. 2d 363, 364 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983) ("to use the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure to obtain information for settlement or related purposes was not, in our view, the intent of Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(b)(1)"); All AT&T Corp. Fiber Optic PLTFs v. All AT&T Fiber Optic Defendants, 2002 WL 1364157, *2 (S.D. Ind. 2002) (denying motion to compel settlement agreement from prior litigation: "[t]he fact that thorough knowledge of AT&T's finances might help plaintiffs formulate a strategy for settlement negotiations does not render the terms of the agreement discoverable"); Centellion Data Systems, Inc. v. Ameritech Corp., 193 F.R.D. 550, 552 (S.D. Ind. 1999) (refusing to compel production of settlement agreement: "information is not relevant or discoverable under Rule 26(b) because it might assist a party's evaluation of whether to settle or try a case or help a party prepare negotiating strategies").

To the extent the settlement agreement might be relevant to a set-off, that certainly does not justify Morgan Stanley's request to discover all of the terms of the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement. At most, all that Morgan Stanley needs to discover is the settlement amount. And even with respect to the settlement amount, there certainly is no need for Morgan Stanley to discover the amount now, given that the issue of set-off will not arise until there is a damages verdict against Morgan Stanley. Only then would Morgan Stanley have an arguable need to discover the settlement amount. Morgan Stanley's request for production of the entire CPH-Andersen settlement agreement at this time therefore seeks far too much, and far too soon. See Rowe Entertainment, Inc. v. William Morris Agency, Ltd., 2001 WL 699051, *1 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (denying motion to compel production of settlement agreement and rejecting argument that agreement was relevant to reduction of damages: “While that fact will make the agreement discoverable after trial, it does not make it relevant now”); ABF Capital Mgmt. v. Askin Capital, 2000 WL 191698, *3 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (citation omitted) (denying motion to compel production of settlement agreement and rejecting offset argument as premature: “Even [after final judgment has been rendered], the settlement would not be evidence relevant to any issue in this case other than the ministerial apportionment of damages. . . . Hence, the amount of the settlement is not relevant to any issue in this case at this time”).

Bias. To the extent Morgan Stanley argues that it needs to examine the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement to evaluate the biases of the Andersen witnesses who are going to be deposed (MS Mot. 4-5), there is no basis for that argument. That no such need exists is demonstrated by the conduct of Morgan Stanley’s counsel during the first deposition of an Andersen witness (Vance Kistler), which took place on October 29. During the deposition, although Morgan Stanley’s counsel questioned Mr. Kistler at length, not once did counsel ask Mr. Kistler about the settlement agreement. Nor did counsel state or suggest in any way that his questioning was being hampered because he did not have access to the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement. Counsel’s silence in that regard is impossible to square with Morgan Stanley’s present assertion that it needs the settlement agreement to explore the biases of Andersen witnesses.

In any event, the settlement agreement would be of no use to Morgan Stanley in its effort to explore witness bias, because it contains no “cooperation” or any other provision whereby Andersen undertakes to assist CPH in any way that might have an impact on this litigation. CPH can, if the Court desires, tender the settlement agreement for an in-camera inspection to verify that fact.

Morgan Stanley ends by arguing that, at a minimum, it should be allowed during the depositions of Andersen and CPH witnesses to explore “whether any promises have been made’ by Arthur Andersen in the settlement agreement that could affect the present action” (MS Mot. 5). CPH has no objection to that inquiry — although, again, it is telling that Morgan Stanley did not even attempt to ask those kinds of questions during the first Andersen deposition. CPH has no objection, although the likely response from most if not all of the witnesses will be, “What settlement agreement are you talking about?” or “I don’t know what the settlement agreement provides.”

II. The Settling Parties’ Contractual Right To Confidentiality Is Entitled To Respect.

Although Morgan Stanley’s motion proceeds as if confidential settlement agreements are available for the asking, the reality is that unless a specific showing of need is made, courts honor the contractual rights of the parties to settlement agreements along with the confidentiality provisions that those agreements contain. “[T]he strong public policy favoring settlement of disputed claims dictates that confidentiality agreements regarding such settlements not be lightly abrogated.” Flynn v. Portland General Electric Corp., 1989 WL 112802, *2 (D. Ore. 1989); see also Centellion Data Systems, 193 F.R.D. at 553 (finding that stated need for disclosure was “not strong enough to overcome the confidentiality of the AT&T-Centellion settlement agreement”: “we believe, on balance, that settlements are and will be encouraged, in the run of cases, more by maintaining the confidentiality of agreements than by disclosure”); Hasbrouck v. BankAmerica Housing Services, 187 F.R.D. 453, 461-62 (N.D.N.Y. 1999) (Magistrate Judge’s ruling) (issuing a protective order to bar discovery of settlement agreement in part because of the “substantial public interest in maintaining confidentiality of settlements”), aff’d, 190 F.R.D. 42, 44 (N.D.N.Y. 1999); Kalinauskas v. Wong, 151 F.R.D. 363, 365 (D. Nev. 1993) (“Confidential settlements benefit society and the parties involved by resolving disputes relatively quickly” and “[t]he secrecy of the settlement agreement and the contractual rights of the parties thereunder deserve court protection”).

As the foregoing cases establish, contrary to the impression left by Morgan Stanley’s motion, much more is at stake here than Morgan Stanley’s general curiosity about the settlement terms of the CPH-Andersen agreement: the contractual confidentiality rights of the parties to the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement also are entitled to respect and consideration. If Morgan Stanley is to overcome those rights, Morgan Stanley should be required to make a particularized showing of need for the discovery it is seeking, and not simply rely on generalized arguments. As shown above, however, Morgan Stanley has not come close to providing a persuasive reason why it is entitled to discover any aspect of the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement at this stage of the litigation.

Morgan Stanley's request for disclosure of the settlement agreement constitutes an improper intrusion into confidential matters that Morgan Stanley has not begun to justify. Consequently, Plaintiff CPH respectfully requests that Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of the CPH-Andersen settlement agreement be denied.

1 TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS, TAKEN BEFORE
2 THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH MAASS IN COURTROOM 11B, PALM

4 THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 2003, BEGINNING AT 8:55 A.M.

5 - - -

6 THE COURT: Do we really think we're going to
7 do this this morning?

8 MR. SCAROLA: We are going to surprise Your
9 Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay. How are we doing that?

11 MR. SCAROLA: We're going to surprise you by
12 telling you first that with regard to the motion
13 to compel production of emails, we have come to an 14 agreement.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. SCAROLA: And we will describe the terms
17 of that agreement for the record.

18 For the record, my name is Jack Scarola. I'm
19 hear on behalf of the Plaintiff Coleman (Parent)
20 Holdings. There are two motions. First is motion
21 to compel directed to the production of emails.

22 The agreement that we have reached is that
23 the Defendant Morgan Stanley will produce a

24 witness who is knowledgeable with respect to the
25 retention and retrieval -- the retention policies

1 and retrieval capabilities with regard to emails.
2 They will also produce all documents that were
3 submitted to federal regulators with regard to
4 Morgan Stanley's email retention policies and
5 retrieval capabilities.

6 THE COURT: I don't think I have that motion.
7 The only one I have deals with the objections to
8 production of the settlement agreement. Are you
9 submitting a proposed agreed order on this?

10 MR. SCAROLA: We will submit a proposed
11 agreed order.

12 THE COURT: You're just telling me stuff and
13 hopefully I'll remember it when I see the order.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

15 We have agreed reciprocally that we will
16 provide a corporate representative who will
17 address the same issues on behalf of Coleman
18 (Parent) Holdings, Incorporated.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: With regard to the second
21 motion, that's the Defense's motion, so I'll allow
22 them to go first.

16div-003933

23 THE COURT: That's the one. Do we really
24 think we're going to get this done at an 8:45?
25 MR. CLARE: Judge, this is on Morgan

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Stanley's motion to compel the production of a
2 single document, the settlement agreement between
3 Coleman (Parent) and Arthur Andersen. And just
4 briefly, I think it's fairly straightforward in
5 terms of the history of this, that prior to
6 initiating the lawsuit against Morgan Stanley,
7 Coleman (Parent) brought a virtually identical
8 lawsuit against Arthur Andersen, same allegations,
9 same claim of damages, and now have settled.

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. This is the
11 notebook you gave me for this; right?

12 MR. CLARE: That includes the cases that
13 we've cited.

14 THE COURT: I can't do this on an 8:45.
15 Please understand, 8:45's are things -- I can read
16 everything. I can walk in and not know anything.
17 I can read everything I've got to read, absorb
18 everything I've got to, and I can do it in ten
19 minutes. I can't even read your motion in ten
20 minutes.

16div-003934

21 MR. CLARE: I have one case, City of
22 Homestead case, that --
23 THE COURT: I'm happy to get the book and
24 specially set. I'm happy to do it on an expedited
25 basis. I cannot do this on an 8:45. If you

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 bothered to put together a notebook like this, I
2 know I need more time with it, okay?

3 Do you want me to get the book? Do you have
4 access to your schedules?

5 MR. CLARE: Sure.

6 MR. SCAROLA: I don't, but can make a phone
7 call to my office.

8 THE COURT: Okay. That's great.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like me to get my
10 office on the line, Your Honor?

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. CLARE: Just in the interest of
13 completeness and while we're waiting for the
14 schedule, Mr. Scarola described in broad outlines
15 what the agreed upon order would be on this other
16 motion. There is one caveat I explained to
17 Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we will work it
18 out between the parties before we submit an agreed
19 upon order to Your Honor. I am not aware as I sit

16div-003935

20 here right now what limitations there are right
21 now without disclosing to Mr. Scarola's client
22 information we provided to federal regulators. We
23 agreed to provide whatever it is we can provide.

24 THE COURT: Are you saying we might have a
25 legal dispute later about what you're permitted to

2 MR. CLARE: About what we're permitted to
3 disclose, and I just don't know all the details
4 without consulting with my client. We have an
5 agreement in principle that whatever we can
6 provide on this, we'll provide. I know there are
7 materials we can provide, I just don't know the
8 scope of it. And I don't want to represent to the 9 court that we're waiving or even have the ability
10 to waive protections that I'm not aware of right
11 now.

12 MR. SCAROLA: The only caveat to that is that
13 there's a commitment that they will provide good
14 faith cooperation in obtaining whatever
15 information is necessary in order to make full
16 disclosure.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

19 THE COURT: We can try the 14th, which is a
20 week from tomorrow at 4:30. Do you know if you're 21 available, sir?

22 MR. CLARE: There was a deposition that was
23 scheduled that day.

5 THE COURT: You have depositions in this

7 find a better time.

8 We could try 4:30 on Tuesday, November 25.
9 That's the Tuesday of Thanksgiving week, just so
10 you-all are clear.

11 MR. CLARE: That's fine with me, Your Honor.

12 MR. IANNO: That's not a problem.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That works, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Is that okay? We will do it
15 then. And I'll hold the stuff you gave me. If 16 you want me to look at anything else, send it to

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and/or Other Litigations with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by You. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1997 through the date of service of this subpoena, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct Your responses to these requests if, at any time, You become aware that Your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If You claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, You shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and
- c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

	Argument	20
I.	Morgan Stanley Has Shown No Reason Why This Court Should Exercise Its Discretion To Dismiss This Case On Forum Non Conveniens Grounds	20
A.	The Private Interest Favors CPH’s Venue Choice	20
	This lawsuit, as Morgan Stanley has admitted, centers on Florida events	20
	Many important non-party witnesses live in Florida	21
	The numerous Florida contacts favor Florida	23
B.	The Public Interest Also Favors This Case Staying In Florida	30
C.	Morgan Stanley’s Arguments Are Unavailing	30
II.	Florida Law, Not New York Law, Applies In Determining Whether CPH’s Claims Are Actionable For Purposes Of Morgan Stanley’s Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings	31
A.	Florida Has The Most Significant Relationship To This Dispute	31
1.	The complaint allegations, which must be accepted as true at this stage, establish that Florida has the most significant relationship to this dispute	33
2.	Florida has a strong interest in the application of its law	36

- B. Morgan Stanley’s Contention That New York Rather Than Florida Law Applies Is Without Merit 36

- III. If This Court Concludes That Florida Law Applies, The Court Should Deny Morgan Stanley’s Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings Without Further Inquiry 38

- IV. Morgan Stanley’s Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings Is Meritless No Matter What Law Applies 38
 - A. CPH’s Fraud Count (Count I) States A Claim 39
 - 1. CPH did not “disclaim” reliance on Morgan Stanley’s misrepresentations by agreeing to the integration clause in the Merger Agreement 40
 - 2. CPH’s fraud claim should proceed notwithstanding its supposed “failure” to inspect Sunbeam’s books and records 43
 - 3. CPH has alleged that it relied on the misrepresentations identified in the complaint and has done so sufficiently 46
 - 4. CPH’s allegations of scienter also are more than sufficient 48
 - B. CPH’s Aiding-And-Abetting Count (Count II) States A Claim 51
 - 1. CPH’s “knowledge” allegations are sufficient 51
 - Morgan Stanley’s knowledge need not be pleaded with particularity ... 51
 - Morgan Stanley’s “equal access to books” argument is baseless 52
 - Morgan Stanley’s constructive fraud argument is a nonissue 53
 - Economic motive also is not an issue 53
 - 2. CPH’s “substantial assistance” allegations are sufficient 53
 - C. CPH’s Negligent Misrepresentation Count (Count IV) States A Claim 55
 - 1. Morgan Stanley’s “special” or “near privity” relationship argument is baseless 55
 - 2. Morgan Stanley’s reliance argument also is baseless 56

D. CPH's Conspiracy Count (Count III), Which is Based On Its Underlying Fraud Count, States A Claim 56

Introduction

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. (“Morgan Stanley”) attempts to portray this lawsuit as a “spurious” action that “revolves around negotiations that occurred in New York.” See MS Mem. 1. In fact, the well-pleaded complaint allegations of plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. (“CPH”) establish that this action arises from Morgan Stanley’s active participation in the massive fraud surrounding Florida-based Sunbeam Corporation. That fraud, which had Florida as its epicenter, has resulted in the litigation of no less than 24 lawsuits in the federal and state courts of Florida.¹⁷

Morgan Stanley’s deep involvement in the Sunbeam fraud shows beyond meaningful dispute that this lawsuit should proceed here so that a Florida jury can require Morgan Stanley to answer in damages for its participation in the fraud — as have the many other participants sued here in Florida. That result is especially appropriate in light of the fact that Morgan Stanley’s own sister company, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (“MSSF”), chose to file its own Sunbeam-related lawsuit in this Court. See Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc., et al., No. 2003 CA 005165 (Fla. Cir. Ct., Palm Beach County). MSSF, which is represented by the same counsel as Morgan Stanley, alleges in its complaint that venue is proper here because its claims arise out of activities that occurred in Florida. Given MSSF's venue choice, and Morgan Stanley's concession in its supporting brief that this case and the MSSF lawsuit "involve common facts" (MS Mem. 17 n.11), Morgan Stanley's argument that Florida is an inappropriate forum for the resolution of CPH's claims is not credible.

In Morgan Stanley's alternative motion for judgment on the pleadings, which Morgan Stanley filed two days after answering CPH's complaint, Morgan Stanley contends that this case should be dismissed because CPH was a so-called "sophisticated" player in the Sunbeam transaction and had the wherewithal to go out and investigate for itself whether Morgan Stanley and its client Sunbeam were lying. The assumption underlying Morgan Stanley's argument is that the law does not protect sophisticated business people who fall victim to the perpetrators of a massive financial fraud. And the unstated, but inevitable, corollary to Morgan Stanley's assumption is that firms such as Morgan Stanley may lie with impunity — because the parties with whom they deal always can be characterized as sophisticated parties who, according to Morgan Stanley, should bear the sole responsibility for discovering the fraud.

Morgan Stanley's theory is as untenable as it is contrary to law. Although Morgan Stanley has strived mightily in its brief to disclaim any responsibility for the Sunbeam fraud, the reality is that the law protects all victims of fraud — even "sophisticated" victims — and requires defrauders such as Morgan Stanley to pay for the consequences of their wrongdoing. CPH's complaint in this case alleges, in great detail, Morgan Stanley's direct involvement in the Sunbeam fraud. Those detailed allegations raise many issues concerning Morgan Stanley's misrepresentations and intent to deceive CPH, as well as CPH's reasonable reliance, that are for the jury to resolve as a matter of fact — and cannot therefore be disposed of as a matter of law on a motion for judgment on the pleadings.

Statement of Facts

This action arises from the deep involvement of Morgan Stanley in the massive fraud perpetrated by Florida-based Sunbeam Corporation (“Sunbeam”). As a result of that fraud, which was accomplished with Morgan Stanley’s active participation, CPH was induced to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock when CPH sold its 82% investment in The Coleman Company, Inc. (“Coleman”) to Sunbeam on March 30, 1998. See Complaint ¶¶ 1-2. A detailed exposition of the Sunbeam fraud, and Morgan Stanley’s direct participation in it, is set forth next. The facts are taken from the allegations of the complaint and must therefore be accepted as true for purposes of Morgan Stanley’s motion. See Scarborough Assocs. v. Fin. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass’n of Dade County, 647 So. 2d 1001, 1002 (Fla. 3d DCA 1994).

A. Sunbeam’s Business And Lackluster Performance (1995-1996).

Sunbeam designed and manufactured outdoor and household consumer products, which it marketed under the Sunbeam and Oster brand names. Many of the country’s leading retail stores, including Wal-Mart, Target, and Home Depot, were among Sunbeam’s major customers. See Complaint ¶ 14.

Despite Sunbeam’s well-known brands and strong customer base, its financial performance was disappointing. In 1994, Sunbeam earned $1.30 per share. In 1995, Sunbeam’s earnings declined to $0.61 per share. In 1996, Sunbeam’s earnings continued to suffer. On March 22, 1996, Sunbeam issued an early warning that its first quarter earnings would be well under analysts’ expectations and down from first quarter 1995. Shortly after issuing the March 22 earnings warning, Sunbeam’s Chief Executive Officer and two of Sunbeam’s directors announced their resignations. Less than a week later, Sunbeam announced that its first quarter 1996 earnings had plunged 42% from first quarter 1995 levels. Sunbeam also announced that its second quarter 1996 earnings would be lower than its second quarter 1995 earnings. See Complaint ¶ 15.

The stock market reacted predictably. During 1995, the price at which Sunbeam’s stock traded fell 40%, from a high of $25-1/2. In 1996, Sunbeam’s stock price continued to decline until it reached a low of $12-1/4 in July. See Complaint ¶ 16.

B. Sunbeam Hires A New Management Team (July 1996).

On July 18, 1996, Sunbeam’s board of directors hired Albert Dunlap as Sunbeam’s new

Chief Executive Officer. Dunlap, based on his performance at other struggling companies, was heralded as a “turnaround specialist” — someone who could take a poorly performing company and significantly increase its value by “turning around” its financial performance. Because Dunlap touted the benefits from firing large numbers of employees and closing large numbers of plants, Dunlap became widely known as “Chainsaw Al.” Dunlap lived in Boca Raton, Florida, and one of his first tasks at Sunbeam was to consolidate the company’s six headquarters into one located in Delray Beach, Florida. See Complaint ¶ 17.

Immediately after joining Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Russell Kersh as Sunbeam’s Chief Financial Officer. Kersh had teamed with Dunlap for over 15 years, serving as a senior executive with Dunlap at other companies, including Scott Paper. Dunlap also brought in several other hand-picked executives to make up his senior management team. See Complaint ¶ 18.

Dunlap and his team entered into employment agreements with Sunbeam. Under those agreements, Dunlap and his team stood to make tens of millions of dollars if they were able to boost Sunbeam’s apparent value and then sell Sunbeam to another company at a premium. See Complaint ¶ 19.

C. Dunlap Cooks The Books At Sunbeam (1996-1997).

To validate his reputation and convince other companies that they should want to purchase Sunbeam, which was Dunlap’s objective from the outset, Dunlap needed to improve Sunbeam’s reported financial performance quickly and dramatically. It was, of course, no small task to transform Sunbeam from a poorly performing company, with weak sales and declining profits, into a strong company with rapidly growing sales and soaring profits. In fact, as the world later learned, Dunlap did not achieve that change in Sunbeam’s fortunes. Instead, Dunlap created the illusion of a dramatic turnaround at Sunbeam by engaging in what a senior SEC official subsequently described as a “case study” in financial fraud. See Complaint ¶ 20.

Dunlap had a three-step plan at Sunbeam. In the first step, Dunlap overstated Sunbeam’s financial problems so that Sunbeam appeared to be in worse shape than it really was. After artificially deflating Sunbeam’s financial results, Dunlap moved to step two, where he made

Sunbeam look more valuable than it really was by inflating Sunbeam's sales and engaging in other earnings manipulations. In step three, Dunlap planned to cash in by selling Sunbeam before it became known that the "improved" results were fictional. By doing so, Dunlap would make tens of millions of dollars and would be free to blame his successor for any subsequent decline in Sunbeam's fortunes. See Complaint ¶ 21.

1. Step One: Make Sunbeam Appear Worse Than It Really Was (1996).

Dunlap began implementing his strategy soon after his arrival at Sunbeam in 1996. Claiming to be engaged in a clean-up of Sunbeam's financial problems, Dunlap recorded artificially high reserves and booked expenses that should not have been recorded until later periods. Both of those actions made Sunbeam's reported performance appear worse than it really was, thus lowering the benchmark for measuring Sunbeam's financial results in future years. See Complaint ¶ 22.

The overstated reserves also provided Dunlap a means by which he could inflate Sunbeam's future results during the second step of his plan. Dunlap later could "re-evaluate" and release millions of dollars from the overstated reserves to boost income in later periods. The income from released reserves contributed to the illusion of a rapid turnaround in Sunbeam's performance. Using inflated reserves to enhance income in future periods is a fraudulent practice. Overstated reserves are commonly called "cookie jar" reserves. See Complaint ¶ 23.

2. Step Two: Create The False Appearance Of Dramatically Improved Performance (1997).

After making Sunbeam look worse than it really was in 1996, Dunlap manipulated Sunbeam's sales and expenses in 1997 to create the false appearance of quarter after quarter improvement in financial performance. For example, Dunlap caused Sunbeam to inflate its sales revenues by engaging in phony "bill and hold" sales. Under this practice, Sunbeam recognized revenues from "sales," even though customers did not actually pay for or even take delivery of the products, which continued to sit in Sunbeam's own warehouses. Although Sunbeam recorded the "bill and hold" sales as if they were current sales, they were, in reality, simply sales stolen from future quarters. In 1997, phony "bill and hold" sales added approximately $29 million in sales and

Throughout 1997, Sunbeam also engaged in a sales practice known as “channel stuffing” — accelerating sales that otherwise would occur in a later period, sometimes by offering steep discounts or other extraordinary customer inducements. On the grand scale employed by Sunbeam, channel stuffing inevitably leads to major sales shortfalls in later periods when “stuffed” customers simply stop buying while they burn off their inflated inventories. Sunbeam’s senior sales officer referred to Sunbeam’s unsustainable practice of inflating performance through accelerated sales as the “doom loop.” See Complaint ¶ 25.

Dunlap further “enhanced” Sunbeam’s income in 1997 by causing Sunbeam to record a “profit” of $10 million from a sham sale of its warranty and spare parts business. Dunlap also made Sunbeam appear to be more successful than it really was by reaching into the “cookie jar,” reversing inflated reserves, and recording $35 million as income. Sunbeam’s 1997 profit margins also looked better than they really were because Dunlap already had recorded millions of dollars of 1997 expenses in 1996. See Complaint ¶ 26.

In October 1997, Dunlap declared that Sunbeam’s “turnaround” was complete. Compared to the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam’s third quarter 1997 performance was remarkable. In the third quarter of 1996, Sunbeam had reported a loss of $18.1 million. In the third quarter of 1997, however, Sunbeam reported earnings of $34.5 million — an extraordinary turnaround from substantial losses to hefty profits. Sunbeam’s combined results for the first three quarters showed dramatic improvement as well. Sunbeam reported that its profits for the first nine months were up tenfold over the same period the year before — from $6.5 million in 1996 to $67.7 million in 1997. Sunbeam’s reversal of fortune caused a spectacular increase in the price of its stock. In July 1996, when Dunlap was hired, Sunbeam’s shares traded at $12-1/4. By October 1997, Sunbeam’s shares had risen to $49-13/16. See Complaint ¶ 27.

3. Step Three: Cash In Before The Turnaround Fraud Is Discovered (1997-1998).

With steps one and two successfully completed, Dunlap was more than eager to complete the final step of his scheme: to sell Sunbeam to another company and collect tens of millions of dollars for himself before the outside world could learn the truth about Sunbeam's phony "turnaround." To accomplish that third and final step, Dunlap needed an investment banking firm to serve as his shill. In exchange for its lucrative fees, Morgan Stanley was more than pleased to play that role. See Complaint ¶ 28.

D. Morgan Stanley Vies For A Spot On Dunlap's Team (April-September 1997).

When Dunlap announced in early 1997 that he would begin interviewing investment bankers, Morgan Stanley immediately began pursuing the job. Although Morgan Stanley had no previous relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's senior executives, William Strong, had worked closely with Dunlap on other large transactions when Strong worked for Salomon Brothers. See Complaint ¶ 29.

Morgan Stanley knew that it was competing with other investment bankers, including Chase Securities, for Dunlap's business. Mark Davis, the head of the mergers and acquisitions department at Chase Securities, had worked previously with Strong at Salomon Brothers. Davis had a very close relationship with Dunlap and had served as Dunlap's investment advisor on numerous transactions, including Dunlap's sale of Scott Paper. Shortly after arriving at Sunbeam, Dunlap hired Davis to handle the sale of one of Sunbeam's businesses. See Complaint ¶ 30.

Eager to obtain this engagement, Morgan Stanley put together a team headed by its Vice Chairman, Bruce Fiedorek, and Strong. Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley's personnel traveled to Sunbeam's offices in Delray Beach, Florida to study Sunbeam and woo Dunlap. After months of uncompensated work, in September 1997, Morgan Stanley finally persuaded Dunlap to name Morgan Stanley as Sunbeam's exclusive investment banker. Dunlap's directive to Morgan Stanley was to find a buyer for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley knew that if it failed to deliver a major transaction, Morgan Stanley would not be compensated for the extensive work it had performed for Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley also knew that Davis and Chase Securities were standing by — ready and willing to reclaim their position as Dunlap's investment banker of choice. See Complaint ¶ 31.

E. Morgan Stanley Seeks A Buyer For Sunbeam (Fall 1997).

Under Dunlap's constant pressure, Morgan Stanley aggressively searched for a buyer for

Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley put together extensive and detailed materials to use in marketing Sunbeam to potential buyers. Morgan Stanley pitched the transaction to numerous companies — including Gillette, Colgate, Sara Lee, Rubbermaid, Whirlpool, and Black & Decker — hoping that those companies might have an interest in acquiring Sunbeam. Morgan Stanley, however, was not able to find a buyer. See Complaint ¶ 32.

As 1998 approached, the pressure on Dunlap increased. Dunlap was aware that Sunbeam would be unable to sustain the appearance of a successful turnaround in 1998 because Sunbeam had stolen massive amounts of sales from 1998 to inflate artificially 1997's numbers and the "cookie jar" reserves had been depleted. Dunlap needed a way to cash in on Sunbeam's high stock price and to conceal Sunbeam's phony turnaround until a buyer could be found. Eager to help, and to earn its massive fees, Morgan Stanley provided the solution. See Complaint ¶ 33.

F. Unable To Find A Buyer For Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley Looks For An Acquisition (December 1997).

Morgan Stanley knew that its failure to find a buyer for Sunbeam could prove fatal to the relationship it had worked so hard to establish with Dunlap. As the pressure on Dunlap increased, the pressure on Morgan Stanley to produce results increased as well. Morgan Stanley responded with a plan that would allow Dunlap to conceal his fraud. Morgan Stanley advised that Sunbeam should acquire other companies, using Sunbeam's stock, which was fraudulently inflated, as the "currency" that would be used to pay for the acquisitions. See Complaint ¶ 34.

Morgan Stanley's strategy was doubly deceptive. First, it would allow Dunlap to consolidate Sunbeam's results with those of the newly acquired companies. That would help Dunlap camouflage Sunbeam's results and make it difficult to detect any shortfall in Sunbeam's performance. Dunlap simply could label any problem that surfaced as attributable to the poor performance of the acquired companies or as a temporary "blip" caused by the distraction of integrating the acquired companies with Sunbeam. Second, Morgan Stanley's strategy would allow Dunlap to take new massive restructuring charges (purportedly relating to the acquisitions) and thus create more "cookie jar" reserves available to bolster the future earnings of the combined companies. See Complaint ¶ 35.

Morgan Stanley identified Coleman as a key acquisition target. CPH owned 82% of Coleman's stock. Morgan Stanley searched the ranks of its investment bankers to locate those with the best access to CPH. Drawing on relationships between some of Morgan Stanley's investment bankers and senior CPH officers, Morgan Stanley set about the task of persuading CPH to sell its interest in Coleman to Sunbeam — and, most importantly, to accept Sunbeam stock as consideration. See Complaint ¶ 36.

Morgan Stanley laid the groundwork for a meeting to take place in December 1997 in Palm Beach, Florida among Dunlap, Kersh, and representatives of CPH. In advance of the Palm Beach meeting, Morgan Stanley provided materials to Sunbeam to prepare Sunbeam for the meeting. Morgan Stanley also met with Kersh and other Sunbeam personnel to prepare for the Palm Beach meeting. However, Dunlap nearly scuttled Morgan Stanley's carefully crafted plan at the outset. During the December 1997 Palm Beach meeting, when CPH rejected Dunlap's initial all-stock offer, Dunlap became so angry that he cursed and ranted at the CPH representatives and stormed out. See Complaint ¶ 37.

G. Morgan Stanley Revives The Deal And Negotiates With CPH (January-February 1998).

Dunlap's tantrum appeared to kill Morgan Stanley's plan to have CPH take Sunbeam stock in exchange for its interest in Coleman. Morgan Stanley, however, worked to revive the discussions. Drawing again on Morgan Stanley's relationships with CPH officers, Morgan Stanley was able to restart the discussions with CPH, promising that Dunlap would be kept away from the negotiating table. Thereafter, Morgan Stanley, through Managing Directors Strong, James Stynes, and Robert Kitts, led the discussions on Sunbeam's behalf. See Complaint ¶ 38.

Morgan Stanley knew that it had to persuade CPH not only to sell Coleman, but also to accept Sunbeam stock — ultimately, 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock — as a major part of the purchase price. During the course of negotiations, Morgan Stanley prepared and provided CPH with false financial and business information about Sunbeam designed to create the appearance that Sunbeam was prospering and that Sunbeam's stock had great value. For example, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with false 1996 and 1997 sales and revenue figures, as well as false projections that Sunbeam could not expect to achieve.

In face-to-face discussions, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together assured CPH that (a) Sunbeam would meet or exceed its first quarter 1998 earnings estimates; (b) analysts' 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct; and (c) Sunbeam's plan to earn $2.20 per share in 1998 was easily achievable and probably low. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam also falsely assured CPH that Sunbeam's "early buy" sales program would not hurt Sunbeam's future revenues. However, the "early buy" program was one of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs — and the devastating effects of Sunbeam's revenue acceleration programs already had begun to materialize at Sunbeam. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales were down drastically, although those results were not disclosed to CPH or the public. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together falsely advised CPH that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were "tracking fine" and running ahead of analysts' estimates. See Complaint ¶ 39.

Before the truth came out, Morgan Stanley persuaded CPH to sell its shares in Coleman to Sunbeam and to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration. Based on the price at which Sunbeam's stock was trading, the 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock had a market value of $600 million or more. See Complaint ¶ 40.

H. Morgan Stanley Advises Sunbeam's Board On The Acquisition (February 27, 1998).

On February 27, 1998, Sunbeam's Board of Directors met at Morgan Stanley's offices to consider the purchase of Coleman, as negotiated by Morgan Stanley. At the meeting, Morgan Stanley made an extensive presentation to Sunbeam's Board concerning the proposed transaction. Numerous Morgan Stanley representatives, including Managing Directors Strong, Kitts, Stynes, Ruth Porat, and Vikram Pandit, attended the meeting. See Complaint ¶¶ 41-42. Morgan Stanley presented Sunbeam's board with Morgan Stanley's opinion on the value of Coleman. Using a discounted cash flow analysis, which Morgan Stanley represented was the best gauge of stand-alone economic value and the best method of capturing the unique value of Coleman, Morgan Stanley valued CPH's Coleman stock at a range of $31.06 to $53.24 per share. Morgan Stanley's own analysis therefore shows that CPH's 44,067,520 Coleman shares were worth between $1.369 billion and $2.346 billion. See Complaint ¶ 43.

Following Morgan Stanley's presentation, Sunbeam's Board of Directors voted to acquire Coleman on the very favorable terms that Morgan Stanley had negotiated. See Complaint ¶ 44.

I. Morgan Stanley Develops Sunbeam's Public Announcement Of The Coleman Acquisition (February 28-March 1, 1998).

Morgan Stanley spent the following weekend developing Sunbeam's public relations strategy to announce the Coleman transaction. Morgan Stanley scripted the points for Dunlap to make in a conference call with analysts. Morgan Stanley also crafted a list of "key media messages" for Dunlap to use in his communications with the press. On Sunday, March 1, 1998, Morgan Stanley spoke with a reporter for the Wall Street Journal to inform him that Sunbeam would announce its acquisition of Coleman the following morning. See Complaint ¶ 45.

Sunbeam announced its acquisition of Coleman on Monday, March 2, 1998, prior to the opening of the financial markets. Consistent with Morgan Stanley's valuation, investors viewed Sunbeam's acquisition — and the price that Sunbeam had paid for Coleman — very favorably. The day before the acquisition was announced, Sunbeam's stock closed at $41-3/4. In the days following Sunbeam's announcement of the transaction, Sunbeam's stock rose approximately 25%, to a high of $52. See Complaint ¶ 46.

J. Morgan Stanley Serves As The Underwriter For Sunbeam's $750 Million Convertible Debenture Offering (March 1998).

Dunlap knew that Sunbeam needed to raise funds to pay the cash portion of the acquisition consideration. Dunlap also knew that Sunbeam needed cash to purchase two other smaller companies in addition to Coleman. Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam raise funds through a $500 million offering of convertible subordinated debentures. To assure the offering's success, and in exchange for substantial fees, Morgan Stanley lent its name to the offering. Indeed, Morgan Stanley agreed to serve as the sole underwriter for the offering. The money raised from the sale of the debentures was used by Sunbeam to complete the acquisition of Coleman. See Complaint ¶¶ 47-48.

Unbeknownst to CPH or the public, as a direct consequence of Sunbeam's manipulation of its 1997 financial results, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a small fraction of the financial community's expectations for the quarter. If Dunlap could consolidate Sunbeam's sales with Coleman's sales, Dunlap knew that he could obscure the implications of Sunbeam's collapsed first quarter sales. As a result, Dunlap was especially anxious to complete the acquisition of Coleman before Sunbeam announced its first quarter results. Indeed, the success of the scheme depended upon Sunbeam's ability to complete the Coleman acquisition before Sunbeam's first quarter results were announced. To satisfy Dunlap's objectives, Morgan Stanley moved up the launch date of the debenture offering. See Complaint ¶ 49.

Morgan Stanley arranged a series of "road show" meetings and conference calls to market the debentures to investors. Morgan Stanley prepared and distributed a memorandum for its sales force to use in marketing the debentures to investors. Morgan Stanley also developed the script for Dunlap and Kersh to deliver during the road show. In those materials, Morgan Stanley misrepresented Sunbeam's financial performance and emphasized Dunlap's purported "turnaround" accomplishments. See Complaint ¶ 50.

Morgan Stanley launched the debenture offering with a research analyst presentation to the Morgan Stanley sales force. As part of Morgan Stanley's growing relationship with Sunbeam, one of Morgan Stanley's top-rated research analysts planned to initiate equity coverage of Sunbeam. That Morgan Stanley analyst had modeled values for Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman that were higher than even Sunbeam's management had predicted. See Complaint ¶ 51.

Although Sunbeam initially planned to sell $500 million worth of debentures, Morgan Stanley's marketing efforts were so successful that the size of the offering was increased to $750 million on March 19, 1998 — the day of the last road show. Morgan Stanley sold the debentures to investors nationwide, including investors based in Florida. See Complaint ¶ 52.

K. Morgan Stanley Receives Written Notice That Sunbeam's First Quarter Sales Are Down Dramatically (March 17-18, 1998).

As Sunbeam's investment banker and the sole underwriter for the debenture offering, Morgan Stanley had a duty to investigate Sunbeam's finances and business operations. That duty included an obligation to verify management's claims about Sunbeam's finances and business. Morgan Stanley, which had been working hand-in-hand with Sunbeam for almost a year and had traveled to Sunbeam's Florida offices, repeatedly asserted that it had satisfied that duty. See Complaint ¶ 53.

Strong, who was one of the senior Morgan Stanley investment bankers involved, has admitted in sworn testimony that he may have had 100 or more telephone conversations with Dunlap and Kersh (whose offices were in Sunbeam's Delray Beach headquarters) and that Strong was "sure" that he would have been apprised of Sunbeam's financial performance during the first two months of 1998. See Complaint ¶ 54.

With the $750 million debenture offering and the Coleman transaction set to close at the end of March 1998, Sunbeam's Florida-based outside auditors were shocked that Morgan Stanley had not asked them about Sunbeam's financial performance for first quarter 1998. Sunbeam's auditors were alarmed because Sunbeam's first quarter results were a disaster, but Dunlap, Kersh, and Morgan Stanley were telling CPH and the investing public, including investors in Florida, that Sunbeam's turnaround was a success, that Sunbeam's sales for the first quarter of 1998 were ahead of the expectations of outside financial analysts, and that Sunbeam was poised for record sales. See Complaint ¶ 55.

On March 17, Sunbeam's auditors forced the issue. From their Florida offices, Sunbeam's auditors sent Morgan Stanley a letter reporting that Sunbeam's net sales through January 1998 were down a stunning 60% — $28 million in January 1998, as compared to $73 million in January 1997. The March 17 letter explained that the decline was "primarily due to the . . . new early buy program for grills which accelerated grill sales into the fourth quarter of fiscal 1997." The next day, Morgan Stanley was faxed a schedule from Sunbeam's Florida office that showed that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 net sales totaled $72 million — 50% lower than Sunbeam's January and February 1997 net sales of $143.5 million. See Complaint ¶¶ 56-57.

Based on information that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley had disseminated, CPH, investors, and Wall Street analysts were anticipating that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 net sales would be in the range of $285 million to $295 million. Sales in that range would have been approximately 15% higher than first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's January and February 1998 sales, however, totaled $72 million, barely 25% of $285 million. As Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the sales drop-off was driven by Sunbeam's sales acceleration program, a fraudulent program that manipulated the fourth quarter 1997 financial results. The information put into Morgan Stanley's hands on March 17 and March 18 placed Morgan Stanley on written notice that Morgan Stanley's and Sunbeam's assertions to CPH and other investors were false. Contrary to what Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented, Sunbeam had not undergone a successful turnaround, Sunbeam's financial performance had not dramatically improved, and Sunbeam's performance in 1998 was not going to be better than Wall Street analysts' expectations. It was imperative to Morgan Stanley, therefore, that the truth be kept from CPH until the Coleman transaction closed at the end of March 1998. See Complaint ¶ 58.

L. Morgan Stanley Assists Sunbeam In Concealing The Fraud: The False March 19, 1998 Press Release.

Morgan Stanley did not disclose Sunbeam's disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not insist that Sunbeam disclose its disastrous first quarter, Morgan Stanley did not correct any of the false and misleading statements it and Sunbeam had made to CPH about Sunbeam's business or performance, and Morgan Stanley did not suspend any of the critical transactions that were scheduled to close in the next two weeks. Instead, with Morgan Stanley's knowledge and assistance, Sunbeam prepared and issued a false press release on March 19, 1998 that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true condition. See Complaint ¶ 59. The press release stated (Complaint ¶ 60):

Sunbeam Corporation . . . said today that it is possible that its net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million, but net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. . . . The shortfall from analysts' estimates, if any, would be due to changes in inventory management and order patterns at certain of the Company's major retail customers. The Company further stated that based on the strength of its new product offerings and powerful brand names, it remains highly confident about the overall sales outlook for its products for the entire year.

As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the March 19, 1998 press release was false, misleading, and failed to disclose material information. The press release failed to disclose Sunbeam's disastrous

January and February 1998 sales results or the true reasons for the first quarter collapse. Instead, the press release held out the false possibility that Sunbeam still could achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and suggested that, if any shortfall occurred, that shortfall would be due to the fact that certain retailers had decided to defer first quarter purchases to the second quarter. The press release also assured that Sunbeam at least would exceed first quarter 1997 net sales of $253.4 million. See Complaint ¶ 61.

Based on information that Morgan Stanley had in its hands on March 18, 1998, it was obvious that Sunbeam would not achieve sales of $285 million to $295 million and that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales would be below its first quarter 1997 numbers. Simply to meet 1997 first quarter sales, much less than the much higher figures investors expected, Sunbeam needed sales of $123.3 million over the 12 remaining days of the quarter — an average of $10.28 million per day. Sales of $10.28 million per day would be 306% more than the average per day sales in March 1997, and 281% more than the average per day sales for the first 17 days of March 1998.

Furthermore, Morgan Stanley knew that the shortfall from analysts' estimates was not caused by retailers' deciding to defer purchases from the first quarter of 1998 to the second quarter, as the press release implied. Rather, as Sunbeam's outside auditors had advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the collapse in first quarter sales was driven by Sunbeam's acceleration of 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997. See Complaint ¶ 62.

After Sunbeam's false press release was issued, Morgan Stanley stood arm-in-arm with Sunbeam while Dunlap and Kersh told CPH, analysts, and investors that the March 19, 1998 release was immaterial and was a purely cautionary statement made because of the possibility that some first quarter 1998 sales might simply "spillover" into the second quarter and that Sunbeam still believed that it actually would meet analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million in first quarter 1998 sales. See Complaint ¶ 63.

Morgan Stanley knew that a full and truthful disclosure of Sunbeam's first quarter sales collapse would doom Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman, which was scheduled to close on March 30, 1998. As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the written contract between CPH and Sunbeam gave CPH the express legal right to refuse to close the sale if there was a material adverse change in Sunbeam's "business, results of operation or financial condition." Morgan Stanley knew that CPH, which was about to receive 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock, would exercise its right to walk away from the transaction if CPH became aware of the extent and reasons for Sunbeam's disastrous first quarter results. See Complaint ¶¶ 64-65.

Furthermore, if the transactions did not close, Morgan Stanley would not be paid its $10.28 million fee for the Coleman acquisition or its $22.5 million fee for underwriting the subordinated debenture offering. Morgan Stanley also knew that Sunbeam might replace Morgan Stanley with another investment banking firm — such as the Chase Securities team led by Mark Davis. Everything, therefore, depended on closing the Coleman acquisition before CPH learned the truth. See Complaint ¶ 66.

M. Sunbeam's Auditors Advise Morgan Stanley That The March 19, 1998 Release Is False.

Although Sunbeam's outside auditors already had made it perfectly clear to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were a disaster, Morgan Stanley was intent on proceeding based upon the false March 19, 1998 press release. See Complaint ¶ 67.

One of Sunbeam's senior outside auditors, Lawrence Bornstein, has testified under oath that on March 19, 1998, he told Morgan Stanley's John Tyree that the statement in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release — that Sunbeam would at least exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million — was not credible: "Just do the math . . . they've done a million dollars in sales the first 70 days of the year and now they need to do $10 million worth of sales for the next . . . I think it was 11 days . . . I mean, something ridiculous." Bornstein also told Tyree: "I've been to every [Sunbeam] shipping dock domestically, I've been to Hattiesburg, I've been to Neosho, I've been to Mexico City, and I don't think these guys can physically ship this much stuff." See Complaint ¶ 68.

N. Morgan Stanley, By No Later Than March 19, Knew That It Would Be Facing Legal Action For Its Role In The Debenture Offering.

During his confrontation of Tyree, Bornstein warned that "there's going to be a lot of lawsuits" if Sunbeam did not achieve the numbers in the March 19, 1998 press release — and internal Morgan Stanley documents bear out Morgan Stanley's understanding of that fact. Although discovery still is ongoing, CPH has learned recently that by the time the press release came out on March 19, Morgan Stanley knew that it would be facing legal action. CPH obtained that information from the privilege log that Morgan Stanley has served, which lists a document dated March 19, 1998 relating to the offering of subordinated debentures as "work product" — that is, that it was prepared in anticipation of litigation.

O. Morgan Stanley Marches Ahead With The Closings (March 19-March 30, 1998).

Morgan Stanley knew that the March 19 press release was false and misleading, and as Morgan Stanley's privilege log confirms, Morgan Stanley knew it would be facing lawsuits as a result of its participation in the Sunbeam fraud. Despite that knowledge and Bornstein's explicit statements, Morgan Stanley continued with its drive to close the debenture offering on March 25, 1998 and the Coleman acquisition on March 30, 1998 — before the first quarter results became public.

As part of those preparations, on March 24, 1998, Morgan Stanley's Tyree spoke by telephone with Sunbeam's Kersh, who was located in Sunbeam's Delray Beach offices, to obtain an updated report concerning Sunbeam's first quarter performance. By the time of that March 24, 1998 call, Sunbeam had fallen even further behind first quarter 1997 sales. As of March 18, 1998, Sunbeam needed to achieve average sales of $10.28 million per day, over 12 days, to reach first quarter 1997 sales. Sunbeam's sales between March 18 and March 24, 1998 had averaged only $6.81 million per day — well short of the $10.28 million per day that Sunbeam needed to achieve. Sunbeam's March 18 through March 24, 1998 sales were further proof that Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release was false and that Sunbeam would not achieve first quarter 1998 sales in excess of first quarter 1997 sales. See Complaint ¶¶ 69-70.

Morgan Stanley also knew no later than March 25, 1998, if not much earlier, that Sunbeam's earnings for the first quarter of 1998 were going to miss Wall Street analysts' earnings expectations, which were in the range of $0.28 to $0.31 per share (excluding one-time charges). Sunbeam's outside auditors advised Morgan Stanley on March 25 that Sunbeam had suffered a $41.19 million loss during the first two months of 1998, including a one-time charge of $30.2 million. Even excluding that one-time charge, Sunbeam's loss for the first two months was $0.13 per share. To achieve first quarter 1998 operating earnings of $0.28 per share, which were at the low end of analyst expectations, Sunbeam needed to realize a profit of $35.5 million during March 1998 alone. A net profit of $35.5 million in March would be 500% more than Sunbeam's net profit for the entire first quarter of 1997. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings fell far short of Wall Street's expectations. Although the collapse of Sunbeam's first quarter earnings was another material fact, that information was not disclosed to CPH or the public until after the closing of the Coleman transaction on March 30, 1998. See Complaint ¶ 71.

P. Morgan Stanley Allows The Debenture Offering And The Coleman Acquisition To Close (March 25-30, 1998).

Having directly participated in misleading CPH and other investors, Morgan Stanley had a duty to disclose the true facts before the closing of the debenture offering and the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley also could have required Sunbeam to postpone the closings of those transactions until the necessary disclosures were made. Morgan Stanley did neither. Instead, Morgan Stanley marched forward and closed the $750 million debenture offering on March 25, 1998, which was needed to consummate the Coleman transaction, and assisted Sunbeam in closing the acquisition of Coleman on March 30, 1998. See Complaint ¶ 72.

Morgan Stanley was richly rewarded for directly facilitating Sunbeam's fraud. Among other things, Morgan Stanley received $22.5 million for the subordinated debenture offering and $10.28 million for the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley would have received nothing if the transactions had failed to close. See Complaint ¶ 73.

Q. Sunbeam's Fraudulent Scheme Begins To Unravel, Causing The Market Value Of Sunbeam's Stock To Plummet.

On April 3, 1998 — just four days after the Coleman transaction closed — Sunbeam announced that sales for the first quarter of 1998 would be approximately 5% below the $253.4 million in sales that Sunbeam reported in the first quarter of 1997. In other words, Sunbeam was expecting sales in the range of $240 million. That sales shortfall was shocking news, particularly in view of assurances provided by Sunbeam both in and after its March 19, 1998 press release that $285 million to $295 million of sales was still a real possibility. The April 3, 1998 press release also disclosed for the first time that Sunbeam would fall far short of Wall Street's earnings estimates and, in fact, now expected to show a loss for the quarter. Sunbeam's news stunned CPH and the market. On April 3, Sunbeam's stock price dropped 25% — from $45-9/16 to $34-3/8. See Complaint ¶ 74.

Sunbeam's actual first quarter 1998 performance was even worse than Sunbeam disclosed on April 3, 1998. The April 3 press release indicated that Sunbeam's first quarter sales were in the range of $240 million. In fact, Sunbeam's first quarter sales were $224.5 million. Sunbeam obscured the true shortfall by extending its quarter from March 29 to March 31, 1998 — thereby adding two more days of Sunbeam sales. Sunbeam also failed to disclose that it had included two days of Coleman sales due to the closing of the Coleman transaction on March 30. And even the $224.5 million sales figure was inflated by $29 million of new phony "bill and hold" sales. See Complaint ¶ 75.

Just as Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales had been a disaster, so, too, were Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam had represented to CPH that Sunbeam would achieve or exceed analyst first quarter 1998 earnings estimates. At the time of that representation, the consensus among analysts was that Sunbeam would enjoy first quarter 1998 earnings of $0.33 per share. However, on May 9, 1998, Sunbeam disclosed that it would record a first quarter loss of $0.09 per share (excluding one-time charges) — more than $0.40 per share lower than CPH had been told to expect. See Complaint ¶ 76.

Within weeks, Dunlap's fraudulent scheme began to unravel. In June 1998, after a number of news articles critical of Sunbeam's practices, Sunbeam's Board of Directors launched an internal investigation. That investigation led quickly to the firing of Dunlap and Kersh, and, subsequently, to a restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements for 1996, 1997, and the first quarter of 1998. See Complaint ¶ 77.

R. The Defrauders Are Brought To Justice.

As observed above, the Sunbeam fraud has resulted in dozens of lawsuits in this State, and many of the responsible actors have been required to answer for their involvement in the wrongdoing as a result. In this case, CPH seeks to hold Morgan Stanley accountable for its involvement in the same fraud.

Argument

I. Morgan Stanley Has Shown No Reason Why This Court Should Exercise Its Discretion To Dismiss This Case On Forum Non Conveniens Grounds.

Morgan Stanley has shown no reason why this Court should decline to exercise its jurisdiction and instead dismiss this case on forum non conveniens grounds. A court that has been asked to dismiss a complaint on forum non conveniens grounds must conduct the following four-part inquiry (Kinney Sys., Inc. v. Cont'l Ins. Co., 674 So. 2d 86, 90 (Fla. 1996) (citation omitted, emphasis in original)):

“(1) As a prerequisite, the court must establish whether an adequate alternative forum exists which possesses jurisdiction over the whole case. (2) Next, the trial judge must consider all relevant factors of private interest, weighing in the balance a strong presumption against disturbing plaintiffs’ initial forum choice. (3) If the trial judge finds this balance of private interest in equipoise or near equipoise, he must then determine whether or not factors of public interest tip the balance in favor of a trial in [another] forum. (4) If he decides that the balance favors such a . . . forum, the trial judge must finally ensure that plaintiffs can reinstate their suit in the alternative forum without undue inconvenience or prejudice.”

Accord Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.061. Here, the first factor is not an issue because a New York court would possess jurisdiction over the whole case, and the fourth factor also is not an issue because a party seeking a forum non conveniens dismissal is automatically deemed to stipulate that the filing date of the action in the new forum will be treated as the same as the filing date of the Florida action, thereby avoiding questions relating to the statute of limitations. See Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.061(c). The other two factors, however, clearly preclude dismissal of this case on forum non conveniens grounds.

A. The Private Interest Favors CPH’s Venue Choice.

This lawsuit, as Morgan Stanley has admitted, centers on Florida events. The relevant factors of private interest, far from overcoming the presumption against disturbing CPH’s choice of Florida as the forum for this lawsuit, affirmatively favor CPH’s venue selection. Although Morgan Stanley now pretends otherwise, this case centers on events that occurred in Florida. Indeed, Morgan

Stanley and its sister company, MSSF, contended as much in pleadings filed earlier in this litigation. See Fla. Stat. § 90.202(6) (2003) (court documents are subject to judicial notice). MSSF, which is represented by the same counsel as Morgan Stanley, filed its complaint against CPH and another defendant here in this State and Country. In that complaint, MSSF admitted that venue is proper in this State and County pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 47.051 and that personal jurisdiction over CPH and the other defendant is present “because the cause of action arises out of Defendants’ activities in the State.” See MSSF Complaint, ¶¶ 13-14 (emphasis added). That is a telling admission because Morgan Stanley asserted in the brief that it filed in support of the instant motion that this case and the MSSF lawsuit “involve common facts” (MS Mem. 17 n.11), and also asserted in an earlier motion that this case and the MSSF lawsuit “involve the same series of financial transactions, involve a common set of operative facts, and will require the Court to consider and resolve . . . substantially similar legal issues.” See MS 5/23/03 / Motion ¶ 3. Those binding admissions confirm the appropriateness of CPH’s choice of forum.

Many important non-party witnesses live in Florida. The private interest also weighs heavily in favor of this case staying in Florida because many important non-party witnesses reside in Florida. Those witnesses, whose roles in this case for the most part are detailed in the allegations of the complaint just summarized, include former Sunbeam directors, executives, and employees; former Arthur Andersen partners and employees; and former First Union National Bank employees.

A partial list of non-party witnesses who have Florida residences include the following:

- Albert Dunlap, the former Chairman and CEO of Sunbeam who hired Morgan Stanley to assist Sunbeam with the sale of the company or the acquisition of other companies. Dunlap maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- David Fannin, the former Vice President, Secretary, and General Counsel of Sunbeam who was intimately involved with Morgan Stanley’s work over the course of the entire transaction. Fannin maintains a residence in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.
- Donald Denkhaus, a former Arthur Andersen audit supervisor who worked on the 1998 Restatement investigation. Denkhaus maintains a residence in Miami, Florida.
- Richard Goudis, the former Vice President of Investor Relations and Corporate Planning at Sunbeam who worked with Morgan Stanley in developing the roadshow strategy that falsely represented Sunbeam’s financial condition. Goudis maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.

- Lee Griffith, the former Vice President of Sales at Sunbeam who has knowledge of Sunbeam's "bill and hold" and "channel stuffing" practices. Griffith maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- Russell Kersh, the former Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer at Sunbeam who teamed with Dunlap for over 15 years and played a key role in the Sunbeam "turnaround" fraud. Kersh maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- Howard Kristol, a former outside director of Sunbeam when Albert Dunlap served as Chairman and CEO. Kristol maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- Deborah MacDonald, the former Director of Corporate Planning and Director of Worldwide Strategy and Planning at Sunbeam who was responsible for forecasting Sunbeam's financial performance and providing financial information to Morgan Stanley. MacDonald maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- Lawrence Bornstein, the former senior audit manager at Arthur Andersen who was involved in the due diligence for the subordinated debenture offering and confronted Morgan Stanley about the false statements in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release. Bornstein maintains a residence in Lake Worth, Florida.
- Mark Brockelman, the former senior audit manager at Arthur Andersen who was involved in the due diligence for the subordinated debenture offering and was present when Lawrence Bornstein confronted Morgan Stanley about the false statements in Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release. Brockelman maintains a residence in Lake Worth, Florida.
- Philip Harlow, the former Sunbeam engagement partner at Arthur Andersen who worked with Lawrence Bornstein on the subordinate debenture offering and comfort letters. Harlow maintains a residence in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.
- Vance Kistler, a former financial auditor at Arthur Andersen who worked on the 1997 audit of Sunbeam. Kistler maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- Dennis Pastrana, the former senior audit partner and senior accountant at Arthur Andersen who worked with Lawrence Bornstein on the subordinated debenture offering and physically monitored Sunbeam's practices on shipping docks on the eve of the close of the first quarter of 1998. Pastrana maintains a residence in Miami, Florida.
- William Pruitt, the former senior audit partner at Arthur Andersen and concurring partner on the subordinated debenture offering and comfort letters. Pruitt maintains a residence in Miami, Florida.
- M. Walker Duvall, the former Senior Vice President of Corporate Banking at First Union National Bank, a financial institution that was part of a group of lenders that provided financing to Sunbeam in conjunction with the acquisitions. Duvall maintains a residence in Boca Raton, Florida.
- William Rutter, a former Senior Vice President at First Union National Bank and former outside director of Sunbeam. Rutter maintains a residence in Lighthouse Point, Florida.

See Exh. A (Declaration of Christopher M. O'Connor attesting to the sources of the foregoing addresses); see also Safety Nat'l Cas. Corp. v. Florida Mun. Ins. Trust, 818 So. 2d 612, 613 (Fla. 5th DCA 2002) (recognizing use of declarations in connection with forum non conveniens motions). The only way to ensure that those important non-party witnesses will be available to testify in person at trial is to have the case pending here.

There are, as Morgan Stanley undoubtedly will emphasize in its reply, some potential trial witnesses who live and work in New York. But virtually without exception, those witnesses are employed by the parties or are lawyers or agents for the parties. Those witnesses, who are under the control of the parties, will appear to testify no matter where the trial occurs. So what matters for purposes of Morgan Stanley's motion are the Dunlaps, the Kersh, the Bornsteins, and the Fannins of the world — key witnesses who cannot be compelled to appear at trial outside their home state. It is beyond serious dispute that the vast majority of those witnesses reside in Florida and can be compelled to testify at trial only if the trial takes place here.

The numerous Florida contacts favor Florida. The appropriateness of a Florida court to hear this lawsuit is underscored by the significant number of Florida contacts to this dispute. Those contacts, which Morgan Stanley simply ignores, are evidenced by documents produced in this litigation and by sworn testimony in related litigation. Those contacts include the following:

- On or about April 22, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel traveled to Delray Beach, Florida to meet with Albert Dunlap and Russell Kersh at Sunbeam's headquarters to discuss the retention of Morgan Stanley as financial advisor to Sunbeam.
- On or about July 18, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in a conference call with Russell Kersh, who was in Florida, concerning synergies that could result from various potential business combinations.
- On or about July 21, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in a conference call with Sunbeam personnel, who were located in Florida, concerning possible business combination synergies.
- On or about July 24, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel met in Florida with Albert Dunlap and Russell Kersh to discuss strategic alternatives for Sunbeam.
- On or about August 8, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel met with Sunbeam personnel in Florida to discuss potential acquisition candidates.

- On or about September 5, 1997, Morgan Stanley sent an engagement letter to Sunbeam's Florida offices leading to Morgan Stanley's sale, merger, and acquisition work for Sunbeam.
- On or about September 11, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel sent discussion materials to Sunbeam's Florida offices regarding an overview of the proposed selling process.
- On or about September 18, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel sent to Sunbeam's Florida offices a draft of an informational memorandum for Sunbeam's review.
- On or about September 19, 1997, William Strong of Morgan Stanley sent Albert Dunlap in Florida a letter seeking an amendment to the September 5, 1997 engagement letter between Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley.
- On or about September 22, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel met with Sunbeam personnel in Florida in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam.
- On or about September 23 and 24, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel conducted due diligence of Sunbeam at Sunbeam's offices in Florida.
- On or about October 9, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel sent briefing materials to Russell Kersh and David Fannin in Florida.
- On October 23, 1997, Sunbeam issued a press release from its headquarters in Florida announcing the retention of Morgan Stanley to serve as Sunbeam's financial advisor in exploring strategic alternatives.
- On or about October 29, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel conducted due diligence of Sunbeam at Sunbeam's offices in Florida.
- On or about December 11, 1997, James Stynes of Morgan Stanley sent to Sunbeam's Florida offices preliminary discussion materials regarding a potential transaction involving Coleman.
- On or about December 16, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel sent a fax to Sunbeam's Florida offices containing documents concerning a potential transaction involving Coleman and Sunbeam.
- On or about December 18, 1997, Albert Dunlap, Michael Price, Ronald Perelman, and Howard Gittis met in Florida to discuss a potential transaction involving Sunbeam and Coleman.
- On or about December 24, 1997, Morgan Stanley personnel sent a memorandum to Sunbeam's offices in Florida attaching documents concerning durable consumer product companies.
- On or about January 5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel met with Sunbeam personnel in Florida in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam.
- On or about January 15, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in a conference call with Russell Kersh, who was in Florida, concerning updates on project status and organizational issues.

- On or about January 20, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel conducted a conference call with Sunbeam personnel, who were in Florida, concerning potential buyers and acquisition targets.
- On or about January 26, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel faxed materials to Russell Kersh in Florida involving a potential transaction between Sunbeam and Coleman.
- On or about February 2, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel faxed a document concerning income projections for Coleman and Sunbeam to Sunbeam's Florida offices.
- On or about February 2, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in a conference call with Sunbeam personnel, who were in Florida, in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam, including work relating to the Coleman transaction.
- On or about February 3, 1998, Sunbeam personnel met with an Arthur Andersen representative at Sunbeam's Florida offices in connection with the Coleman transaction.
- On or about February 5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in a conference call with Sunbeam personnel, who were in Florida, in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam, including work relating to the Coleman transaction.
- On or about February 20, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel faxed to Sunbeam's Florida offices proposed summary transaction terms and information on the public relations firm Sard Verbinnen & Co.
- Sunbeam's March 2, 1998 press release announcing the Coleman transaction, which Morgan Stanley was instrumental in putting together, was issued out of Sunbeam's Florida offices.
- On or about March 4 and 5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel conducted due diligence at Sunbeam's Florida offices.
- On or about March 5, 1998, John Tyree of Morgan Stanley attended a drafting session in Florida in connection with the subordinated debenture offering.
- On March 5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel met at Sunbeam's offices in Delray Beach, Florida in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam on the Coleman transaction.
- On or about March 5, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel issued to Sunbeam in Florida a "highly confident" letter concerning the financing of the Coleman transaction.
- On or about March 11, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel sent a letter to Arthur Andersen in Florida requesting a "comfort letter" for the subordinated debenture offering.
- On or about March 11, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel faxed to Deborah MacDonald in Florida pro forma financial information concerning Sunbeam's acquisitions.

- On or about March 12, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel conducted an accounting due diligence conference call regarding Sunbeam's financial circumstances with Arthur Andersen personnel, who were in Florida.
- On or about March 18, 1998, Sunbeam personnel in Florida faxed to Morgan Stanley information showing that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales were less than half of Sunbeam's January and February 1997 sales.
- On March 18, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel participated in one or more conference calls with Sunbeam personnel, who were in Florida, concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales and the issuance of a press release.
- Sunbeam's March 19, 1998 press release was issued from Sunbeam's offices in Florida.
- On or about March 19, 1998, Arthur Andersen's Fort Lauderdale office issued a "comfort letter" to Morgan Stanley.
- Lock Up Letters concerning restrictions on Sunbeam stock signed by Charles Elson, Howard Kristol, Faith Whittlesey, William Rutter, and Donald Uzzi were faxed from Sunbeam's offices in Florida.
- On or about March 23, 1998, John Tyree of Morgan Stanley faxed a memorandum concerning bring-down due diligence to Sunbeam in Florida.
- On or about March 24, 1998, John Tyree of Morgan Stanley spoke by telephone with Russell Kersh, who was in Sunbeam's Florida offices, concerning due diligence.
- On or about March 25, 1998, Arthur Andersen's Fort Lauderdale office issued a "comfort letter" to Morgan Stanley.
- On or about March 31, 1998, Morgan Stanley sent to Sunbeam's Florida offices a $9.6 million invoice for services performed for Sunbeam.
- William Strong of Morgan Stanley testified that it is possible that he had between 50 and 100 telephone conversations with Albert Dunlap and Russell Kersh between December 1997 and April 1998 in connection with Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam.
- Morgan Stanley's counsel in connection with the subordinated debenture offering, Davis Polk & Wardwell, faxed, mailed, or caused to be delivered by other means correspondence, documents, and other communications to Sunbeam's offices in Florida.

See Exh. A (Declaration of Christopher M. O'Connor attesting to the sources of the foregoing contacts).

Morgan Stanley, in its responses to interrogatories, has confirmed the extensive contacts that its personnel had with Florida. See MS Resp. to Int. No. 9. When Morgan Stanley was asked which of its personnel communicated in writing or by e-mail, telecopy, or overnight courier with individuals in Florida concerning the Sunbeam matter, Morgan Stanley stated in its interrogatory responses that it would be “unduly burdensome” to provide that information. See MS Resp. to Int. No. 10. The reason it supposedly is “unduly burdensome” for Morgan Stanley to respond is plain: Morgan Stanley personnel had countless contacts with individuals in Florida regarding the Sunbeam matter.

Morgan Stanley, in its responses to requests for admission, further confirmed that there were significant and numerous Florida contacts with this case. Although Morgan Stanley’s admissions in that regard are too numerous to list here, the following is a sampling of instances in which Morgan Stanley admitted Florida’s connection to the key events giving rise to this case, to the individuals involved in those events, and to the many lawsuits arising from the Sunbeam fraud:

- admitting that Morgan Stanley has an office in Florida and that Morgan Stanley DW has multiple branch offices in Florida (Resp. No. 1).
- admitting that at the time of the Coleman transaction Morgan Stanley had an office in Florida and that Morgan Stanley DW had several branch offices in Florida (Resp. No. 2).
- admitting that at the time of the Coleman transaction Sunbeam’s principal place of business was located in Delray Beach, Florida (Resp. No. 59).
- admitting that Sunbeam personnel and representatives involved with the Coleman transaction had offices in Florida (Resp. No. 60).
- admitting that at the time of the Coleman transaction Albert Dunlap, the former CEO of Sunbeam, worked at Sunbeam’s headquarters in Florida (Resp. No. 61).
- admitting that at the time of the Coleman transaction Philip Harlow worked for Arthur Andersen in Florida (Resp. No. 105).
- admitting that at the time of the Coleman transaction Lawrence Bornstein worked for Arthur Andersen in Florida (Resp. No. 108).
- admitting that Morgan Stanley conducted business in Florida with Sunbeam in connection with the Coleman transaction (Resp. No. 129).
- admitting that MSSF conducted business with Sunbeam in Florida in connection with the Coleman transaction (Resp. No. 130).
- admitting that Morgan Stanley conducted due diligence in Florida in connection with the Coleman transaction (Resp. No. 131).
- admitting that MSSF conducted due diligence in Florida in connection with the Coleman transaction (Resp. No. 132).

- admitting that Morgan Stanley conducted due diligence in Florida in connection with the Subordinated Debenture Offering (Resp. No. 143).

The foregoing admissions are just the tip of the iceberg. All told, although Morgan Stanley struggled mightily in its responses to avoid conceding any Florida nexus, Morgan Stanley admitted Florida's connection to the key events and parties involved in this case in response to 113 separate requests for admission. See id.; see also Resp. Nos. 10, 44, 45, 47, 49, 57, 58, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 94, 102, 103, 104, 111, 114, 117, 127, 133, 134, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 145, 146, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 157, 158, 178, 184, 207, 213, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 226, 229, 233, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 243, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279.

Insofar as Morgan Stanley asserts that it conducted a number of its activities from New York, that assertion is beside the point because as an active co-conspirator in the fraudulent activities occurring in this State (as alleged in Count III of the complaint), Morgan Stanley most certainly could expect to be haled into Florida to answer for its conduct. See Execu-Tech Bus. Sys., Inc. v. New Oji Paper Co., 752 So. 2d 582, 585 (Fla. 2000) (personal jurisdiction exists over co-conspirator, even if co-conspirator's conduct was all out-of-state, if that conduct was in aid of a tortious act occurring in this State); see also Acquadro v. Bergeron, 851 So. 2d 665, 670 (Fla. 2003) (“telephonic, electronic, or written communications into Florida may form the basis for personal jurisdiction . . . if the alleged cause of action arises from the communications”) (quoting Wendt v. Horowitz, 822 So. 2d 1252, 1260 (Fla. 2002)). So the private interest, far from tipping the balance in favor of another forum, strongly favors this case staying here in Florida — where MSSF, Morgan Stanley's sister company, itself has filed suit.

B. The Public Interest Also Favors This Case Staying In Florida.

This Court need address the public interest only if the competing private interests are in equipoise. As shown above, that is not the case: the private interests plainly favor keeping this lawsuit in Florida, along with the lawsuit that MSSF filed here. Nonetheless, were the Court to evaluate the public interest, it is clear that the public interest also favors keeping this litigation in Florida. As set forth above, at least two-dozen cases arising from the Sunbeam fraud have been litigated in this State. The fact that many Sunbeam cases have been adjudicated in this State and County demonstrates that the public interest weighs in favor of this litigation staying here in Florida. See Pafco Gen. Ins. Co. v. Wah-Wai Furniture Co., 701 So. 2d 902, 904 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (rejecting forum non conveniens argument, observing that “[l]itigation of related claims in the same tribunal is favored in order to avoid duplicative litigation, attendant unnecessary expense, loss of time to courts, witnesses and litigants, and inconsistent results”) (citations omitted).

C. Morgan Stanley’s Arguments Are Unavailing.

The additional points cited by Morgan Stanley are neither among the factors recognized by Florida law nor otherwise sufficient to warrant a forum non conveniens dismissal. See MS Mem. 16-17. With respect to Morgan Stanley’s choice of law point, Morgan Stanley’s motion should be denied without further inquiry if this Court decides that Florida law applies (the choice of law question is addressed in Section II below), because Morgan Stanley stakes virtually its entire forum non conveniens argument on the assumption that New York law applies. But even if New York law were to apply to the claims in this case, which it does not, that would not be sufficient to warrant a forum non conveniens dismissal given all of the private and public interests favoring this case remaining here, and given that Florida courts regularly apply the laws of other states without relinquishing their virtually unflagging obligation to exercise jurisdiction over lawsuits filed here. See 12A Fla. Jur. 2d, Courts and Judges § 71 (1998) (“a court cannot improperly refuse to exercise jurisdiction once it has been shown to exist”).

With respect to Morgan Stanley’s argument about the supposed “unfairness” of imposing jury duty on Florida residents and this Court’s “busy docket,” Morgan Stanley’s argument is meritless.

The Sunbeam fraud is a Florida-based fraud, which has been adjudicated in Florida courts time and again, so Florida residents have a strong interest in the resolution of the matters involved here. And although this Court's docket undoubtedly is very busy, Morgan Stanley has not shown that New York courts are any less busy, or that it is ever permissible for a court to decline jurisdiction on the ground of overwork.

In sum, Morgan Stanley has not begun to make the strong showing that it must to demonstrate the propriety of a forum non conveniens dismissal. Consequently, Morgan Stanley's motion to dismiss on that ground should be denied.

II. Florida Law, Not New York Law, Applies In Determining Whether CPH's Claims Are Actionable For Purposes Of Morgan Stanley's Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings.

Morgan Stanley's brief begins with a consideration of which substantive law this Court should apply in adjudicating Morgan Stanley's motion for judgment on the pleadings, which Morgan Stanley filed two days after it answered CPH's complaint. The parties dispute the answer to that question, with Morgan Stanley arguing that New York law governs, and CPH arguing that Florida law applies. CPH, as is demonstrated below, is correct.

A. Florida Has The Most Significant Relationship To This Dispute.

Florida law, contrary to Morgan Stanley's contention, applies to this Florida-initiated fraud centering on a large Florida corporation. That conclusion is confirmed by applying the choice of law rule adopted by the courts of this State, the "most significant relationship" test of the Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws. See Bishop v. Florida Specialty Paint Co., 389 So. 2d 999, 1001 (Fla. 1980); see also Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 6 (1971). Morgan Stanley acknowledges Florida's adoption of the Restatement, but then proceeds (MS Mem. 10) to make an argument under Restatement § 148(1), which is the wrong section. That section is confined to situations where all of the plaintiff's actions in reliance on the purported representations took place in the same state where the false representations were made and received. As CPH's complaint and Morgan Stanley's own arguments establish, Morgan Stanley's fraudulent actions and CPH's reliance took place in at least two states: primarily in Florida, but also in New York. See, e.g., Complaint ¶¶ 36-44; MS

Mem. 10-12. As a result, the governing choice of law test is Restatement § 148(2), which provides:

(2) When the plaintiff's action in reliance [on the defendant's false representations] took place in whole or in part in a state other than that where the false representations were made, the forum will consider such of the following contacts . . . as may be present . . .

- (a) the place, or places, where the plaintiff acted in reliance upon the defendant's representations,
- (b) the place where the plaintiff received the representations,
- (c) the place where the defendant made the representations,
- (d) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties,
- (e) the place where a tangible thing which is the subject of the transaction between the parties was situated at the time, and
- (f) the place where the plaintiff is to render performance under a contract which he has been induced to enter by the false representations of the defendant.

The first Comment to Restatement § 148(2) further elaborates that the choice of law inquiry under § 148(2) should be undertaken in light of the "most significant relationship" principles of Restatement § 6. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 148, cmt. e (1971); see also id. § 6 (providing that factors relevant to choice of law include "(a) the needs of the interstate and international systems, (b) the relevant policies of the forum, (c) the relevant policies of other interested states and the relative interests of the states in the determination of the particular issue, (d) the protection of justified expectations, (e) the basic policies underlying the particular field of law, (f) certainty, predictability and uniformity of result, and (g) ease in the determination and application of the law to be applied").

Indeed, although Morgan Stanley attempts to portray the choice of applicable law as essentially preordained under Restatement § 148(1), the truth is that the search for the state with the most significant relationship must be conducted under § 148(1) (emphasis added):

When the plaintiff has suffered pecuniary harm on account of his reliance on the defendant's false representations and when the plaintiff's action in reliance took place in the state where the false representations were made and received, the local law of this state determines the rights and liabilities of the parties unless, with respect to the particular issue, some other state has a more significant relationship under the principles stated in § 6 to the occurrence and the parties, in which event the local law of the other state will be applied.

The underscored language, which Morgan Stanley surprisingly omits from its quotation of Restatement § 148(1), confirms that the choice of law inquiry under § 148(1), like the inquiry under § 148(2), requires an evaluation of which state has the most significant relationship to the claim.

When determining which state has the most significant relationship to a misrepresentation claim, courts consider the location of the place where the fraud was “initiated and perpetuated.” Tew v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 728 F. Supp. 1551, 1563-64 (S.D. Fla. 1990). In Tew, for example, the court rejected a New York bank’s contention that New York law governed and instead applied Florida law because the fraud “was centered” at the Fort Lauderdale office of the corporation where “the former officers and directors initiated and perpetrated the fraud.” Id. at 1563. The court observed that, “[g]ranted the injury [at issue] encompassed victims around the nation, including New York.” Id. at 1564. But that did not alter the fact that “the locus of the harm was in Florida.” Id. Given Florida’s “interest in punishing fraudulent actions committed by corporate entities and principals doing business here” — and given that “Chase Manhattan was contacted from Florida via written correspondence and telephone calls” and that Chase also sent two of its employees to Florida on one occasion — the court rejected Chase’s argument and held that “Florida has the most significant relationship to the fraudulent activities at issue.” Id. at 1564-65.

Here, despite Morgan Stanley’s attempts to invoke the wrong section of the Restatement and then to quote selectively from it, as is demonstrated below, Florida has the most significant relationship to the fraudulent scheme giving rise to CPH’s claims against Morgan Stanley.

1. The complaint allegations, which must be accepted as true at this stage, establish that Florida has the most significant relationship to this dispute.

The allegations of CPH’s complaint reveal numerous Florida contacts such as the following:

First, the financial information that was obscured, manipulated, and altered by Morgan Stanley originated in Florida. See Complaint ¶¶ 49, 54, 57, 67-71. The truth regarding Sunbeam’s poor financial performance — which Morgan Stanley worked so effectively to hide from CPH and the public — was communicated in telephone calls and facsimile messages sent from Florida. See Complaint ¶¶ 54, 57, 67-71.

Second, Florida was the source of one of the biggest misrepresentations giving rise to CPH's claims — the false March 19, 1998 press release that was revised and approved by Morgan Stanley. See Complaint ¶¶ 59-62. The false press release prevented CPH from exercising its right to avoid closing its transaction by concealing Florida-based Sunbeam's horrendous first quarter collapse. See Complaint ¶¶ 59-62.

Third, Florida was the locus of the complicated campaign of deceit orchestrated by Morgan Stanley and Florida-based Sunbeam. The claims at issue are centered around a massive fraud perpetrated by a Florida corporation, arising from misrepresentations regarding the performance of a Florida corporation. See Complaint ¶¶ 1, 31, 37, 54.

In addition, the complaint catalogues numerous other Florida contacts, including the following:

- “Morgan Stanley put together a team headed by its Vice Chairman, Bruce Fiedorek, and [William] Strong. Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley's personnel traveled to Sunbeam's offices in Delray Beach, Florida to study Sunbeam and woo Dunlap. After months of uncompensated work, in September 1997, Morgan Stanley finally persuaded Dunlap to name Morgan Stanley as Sunbeam's exclusive investment banker. Dunlap instructed Morgan Stanley to find a buyer for Sunbeam.” See Complaint ¶ 31.
- “Morgan Stanley laid the groundwork for a meeting to take place in December 1997 in Palm Beach, Florida between Dunlap and Kersh and representatives of CPH. In advance of the Palm Beach meeting, Morgan Stanley provided materials to Sunbeam to prepare Sunbeam for the meeting. Morgan Stanley also met with Kersh and other Sunbeam personnel to prepare for the Palm Beach meeting.” See Complaint ¶ 37.
- “On March 17, Sunbeam's auditors forced the issue. From their Florida offices, Sunbeam's auditors sent Morgan Stanley a letter reporting that Sunbeam's net sales through January 1998 were down 60% — $28 million in January 1998, as compared to $73 million in January 1997. The March 17 letter explained that the decline was ‘primarily due to the . . . new early buy program for grills which accelerated grill sales into the fourth quarter of fiscal 1997.’” See Complaint ¶ 56.
- “The next day, Morgan Stanley was faxed a schedule from Sunbeam's Florida office that showed that Sunbeam's January and February 1998 net sales totaled $72 million, an amount that was 50% lower than Sunbeam's January and February 1997 net sales of $143.5 million.” See Complaint ¶ 57.
- “[W]ith Morgan Stanley's knowledge and assistance, Sunbeam prepared and issued a false press release on March 19, 1998 [from Delray Beach, Florida] that affirmatively misstated and concealed Sunbeam's true condition.” See Complaint ¶ 59.

- “Sunbeam . . . was a publicly-traded company headquartered in Delray Beach, Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 10.
- “Dunlap still resides in Boca Raton, Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 11.
- “Upon information and belief, Kersh still resides in Boca Raton, Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 12.
- “Arthur Andersen LLP (‘Andersen’) provided outside accounting services to Sunbeam through its West Palm Beach, Florida office. Andersen auditors provided information concerning Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 sales and earnings to Morgan Stanley. Upon information and belief, several of the Andersen auditors who provided information to Morgan Stanley concerning Sunbeam, including Lawrence Bornstein, still reside in Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 13.
- “Dunlap lived in Boca Raton, Florida, and one of his first tasks at Sunbeam was to consolidate the company’s six headquarters into one located in Delray Beach, Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 17.
- “Although Morgan Stanley initially planned to sell $500 million worth of debentures, Morgan Stanley’s efforts were so successful that the size of the offering was increased to $750 million on March 19, 1998 — the day of the last road show. The debentures were sold to investors nationwide, including investors based in Florida.” See Complaint ¶ 52.
- “Morgan Stanley . . . had been working hand-in-hand with Sunbeam for almost a year and had traveled to Sunbeam’s Florida offices” See Complaint ¶ 53.
- “Strong, who was one of the senior Morgan Stanley investment bankers involved, has admitted in sworn testimony that he may have had more than 100 telephone conversations with Dunlap and Kersh (whose offices were in Sunbeam’s Delray Beach headquarters) and that Strong was ‘sure’ that he would have been apprised of Sunbeam’s financial performance during the first two months of 1998.” See Complaint ¶ 54.
- “With the $750 million debenture offering and the Coleman transaction set to close at the end of March 1998, Sunbeam’s Florida-based outside auditors were shocked that Morgan Stanley had not asked them about Sunbeam’s financial performance for first quarter 1998. Sunbeam’s auditors were alarmed because Sunbeam’s first quarter results were a disaster, but Dunlap, Kersh, and Morgan Stanley were telling CPH and the investing public, including investors in Florida, that Sunbeam’s turnaround was a success” See Complaint ¶ 55.
- “[O]n March 24, 1998, Morgan Stanley’s Tyree spoke by telephone with Sunbeam’s Kersh, who was located in Sunbeam’s Delray Beach offices, to obtain an updated report concerning Sunbeam’s first quarter performance.” See Complaint ¶ 70.

In sum, the complaint amply demonstrates that Florida has the most significant relationship to CPH’s claims.

2. Florida has a strong interest in the application of its law.

An independent reason why Florida law should govern CPH's claims is that Florida has a strong interest in the application of its law to this dispute. See Tew, 728 F. Supp. at 1564 (applying Florida law in part because Florida has an "interest in punishing fraudulent actions committed by corporate entities and principals doing business here"); Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 6 (1971) (additional choice of law factors to consider include "the relevant policies of the forum"). Many of the misrepresentations that caused CPH to deal with Florida-based Sunbeam occurred in Florida, and the misrepresentations were designed to obscure the truth about a Florida-based corporation's financial condition, so this Court has a strong interest in regulating the substantive claims in this Florida-centered fraud in accordance with Florida law. Indeed, given that at least 24 cases arising from the Sunbeam fraud have been adjudicated in this State, it is hard to imagine that a State could have a greater interest in bringing the actors in the Sunbeam fraud to justice in accordance with Florida law.

B. Morgan Stanley's Contention That New York Rather Than Florida Law Applies Is Without Merit.

In arguing that New York law applies to CPH's claims, not once does Morgan Stanley address any of the numerous Florida contacts just discussed, which establish Florida's most significant relationship to this dispute. Instead of addressing the complaint allegations — with one exception that does not remotely support its argument that New York law applies — Morgan Stanley bases its choice of law argument exclusively on a handful of declarations that supposedly catalogue the New York contacts with this dispute. See MS Mem. 10-12. The one exception is Morgan Stanley's glancing allusion to the Merger Agreement among Sunbeam, CPH, and others. See MS Mem. 11. Morgan Stanley, however, fails to disclose that the Merger Agreement expressly provides that it is governed by the law of Delaware. See MS Answer, Exh. 1, § 12.8. The Merger Agreement does not support the application of New York law.

As for the remainder of Morgan Stanley's argument, it is based entirely on declarations that are not part of the pleadings, and is therefore improper. Although declarations can be considered in connection with a forum non conveniens motion, see Safety Nat'l, 818 So. 2d at 613, Morgan Stanley's use of declarations to argue the choice of law point in its motion for judgment on the pleadings violates two cardinal rules governing such motions:

First, in adjudicating Morgan Stanley's motion, this Court "must accept as true all well-pleaded allegations" of the complaint. See Scarborough Assocs., 647 So. 2d at 1002. Morgan Stanley, however, has disregarded that rule.

Second, a motion for judgment on the pleadings "must be decided on the pleadings without reference to facts which may be properly considered under other procedural vehicles and without the aid of outside matters." See Ray v. Elks Lodge No. 1870, 649 So. 2d 292, 293 (Fla. 4th DCA 1995); see also Forbes v. Gimbel, 539 So. 2d 18, 19 (Fla. 1st DCA 1989) ("[O]nly the pleadings may be considered in ruling on a motion for judgment on the pleadings"); Skubal v. Cooley, 639 So. 2d 1126, 1126 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994) (a motion for judgment on the pleadings "must be decided on the pleadings, without reference to facts which may be properly considered under other procedural vehicles"); Domres v. Perrigan, 760 So. 2d 1028, 1029 (Fla. 5th DCA 2000) ("Matters extraneous to the pleadings are not considered" in adjudicating a motion for judgment on the pleadings). Morgan Stanley, in violation of that rule, bases its choice of law argument on declarations that are not part of the pleadings. These declarations must be disregarded by this Court in deciding the motion.

Because Morgan Stanley has chosen not to address the numerous Florida contacts alleged in the complaint, and instead has opted to rely on declarations that cannot be considered in connection with a motion for judgment on the pleadings, this Court need not address the choice of law issue any further. Florida substantive law governs the sufficiency of CPH's claims in this case.

In any event, the same conclusion would be required even if the declarations were fair game in undertaking the choice of law inquiry. As shown in Section I above, based on the complaint allegations — as supplemented by the declaration that CPH submitted in connection with Morgan Stanley's forum non conveniens motion, by Morgan Stanley's interrogatory responses, and by its response to requests to admit — it is clear that the Florida contacts are considerably more significant than the New York contacts. Thus, because Florida has the most significant relationship to this dispute, Florida law governs.

III. If This Court Concludes That Florida Law Applies, The Court Should Deny Morgan Stanley's Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings Without Further Inquiry.

In the event this Court concludes that Florida substantive law applies to CPH's claims, this Court should deny Morgan Stanley's motion for judgment on the pleadings without reading another word beyond this section, because Morgan Stanley has staked its entire motion on its faulty assumption that New York law applies. With the exception of three vague references to Florida cases that lend no support to Morgan Stanley's arguments — two in footnotes on page 19 and the other following a New York law citation on page 34 — Morgan Stanley's 18-page explanation of why it supposedly is entitled to judgment on the pleadings is supported exclusively by citations to cases applying New York law. Morgan Stanley has not endeavored to show that Florida law is the same or similar, nor could Morgan Stanley credibly make that argument now, given that it has insisted that this Court undertake a detailed choice of law analysis, an analysis that would need to be undertaken only if the law that the movant wants to have applied is materially different from the law of the forum. See Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 587 So. 2d 483, 486 (Fla. 4thDCA 1991) (where there was no real conflict between Florida law and the law of Ohio, Appellate Court concluded that Florida law properly was applied), decision approved pursuant to Fla. Const. art. V, § 3(b)(4), 609 So. 2d 1315 (Fla. 1992). Morgan Stanley obviously has urged this Court to reject Florida law and to apply New York law instead because Morgan Stanley knows that it has absolutely no chance of succeeding if Florida law applies.

Morgan Stanley's neglect of Florida law in its motion for judgment on the pleadings is fatal. As the movant with the burden of persuasion, it is incumbent upon Morgan Stanley to demonstrate to this Court's satisfaction why it is entitled to judgment in its favor, with appropriate citations to the applicable law. Because Morgan Stanley's opening brief has provided no meaningful citation to Florida law, if this Court finds that Florida law applies to CPH's claims, this Court should deny that motion without further inquiry.

IV. Morgan Stanley's Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings Is Meritless No Matter What Law Applies.

Even if this Court considers the substance of Morgan Stanley's arguments, its motion for judgment on the pleadings should be denied because regardless of whether Florida or New York law applies, it is clear that CPH has stated actionable claims against Morgan Stanley. A party requesting judgment on the pleadings has a "heavy burden." Covert v. South Florida Stadium Corp., 762 So. 2d 938, 939 (Fla. 3d DCA 2000). As the Appellate Court explained in Scarborough Associates, 647 So. 2d at 1002 (citation omitted):

In ruling on a motion for judgment on the pleadings material allegations of the moving party which have been denied are taken as false. Conclusions of law also are not deemed admitted for purposes of the motion. The court must accept as true all well-pleaded allegations of the non-moving party. Judgment on the pleadings can be granted only if, on the facts as admitted for purposes of the motion, the moving party is clearly entitled to judgment.

See also Domres, 760 So. 2d at 1029 ("A defensive motion for judgment on the pleadings is submitted to the same legal test as a motion to dismiss. . . . [M]atters extraneous to the pleadings are not considered.").

Here, taking all of the allegations in CPH's complaint to be true and all of the contentions in Morgan Stanley's answer and affirmative defenses to be false, Morgan Stanley's motion should be denied because the pleadings plainly set forth actionable claims for relief. That conclusion is confirmed not only under Florida law, which governs here, but also under the New York case authorities that Morgan Stanley erroneously relies on as controlling.

A. CPH's Fraud Count (Count I) States A Claim.

Although Morgan Stanley introduces its fraud section by stating that CPH's claim fails for "three separate and independent reasons" (MS Mem. 17), the argument that follows actually identifies four: (1) CPH cannot establish reliance because reliance supposedly is "expressly disclaimed in the Merger Agreement's integration clause" (MS Mem. 18-20); (2) CPH cannot establish its justifiable reliance on the misrepresentations for the additional reason that CPH supposedly "failed to make use of the means of verification that were available to it" as to Sunbeam's books (MS Mem. 21-23); (3) CPH "cannot allege" that it relied on any of the misrepresentations identified in the complaint (MS Mem. 23-24); and (4) CPH's allegations of intent or scienter are "legally deficient" as well as contrary to "economic reason" (MS Mem. 25-27).

As a preliminary matter, it bears observing that Morgan Stanley has elected to make a set of arguments that are especially ill-suited for resolution on the pleadings, because they all involve either the reasonableness of CPH's reliance or the adequacy of CPH's allegations concerning Morgan Stanley's intent. However, the law is clear that reliance and intent are questions of fact for the jury and not for the Court to resolve. See, e.g., Pinzl v. LaPointe, 426 So. 2d 65, 66 (Fla. 5th DCA 1983) (reversing dismissal: "Reliance on misrepresentations and a duty to inquire are usually determinations for the trier of fact"); Thor Bear, Inc. v. Crocker Mizner Park, Inc., 648 So. 2d 168, 173 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994) ("a determination of reliance is typically left to the trier of fact"); Cohen v. Kravit Estate Buyers, Inc., 843 So. 2d 989, 991 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) ("In fraud cases, [even] summary judgment is rarely proper as the issue so frequently turns on the axis of the circumstances surrounding the complete transaction, including circumstantial evidence of intent and knowledge"); Doehla v. Wathne Ltd., Inc., No. 98 Civ. 6087 CSH, 1999 WL 566311, at *10-11 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 1999) (refusing to dismiss fraud claim under New York law because question whether reliance is justifiable "is intensely fact-specific and generally considered inappropriate for determination on a motion to dismiss"); Country World, Inc. v. Imperial Frozen Foods Co., 589 N.Y.S. 2d 81, 82 (N.Y. App. Div. 1992) (same); Rudolph v. Turecek, 658 N.Y.S.2d 769, 771 (N.Y. App. Div. 1997) ("whether a party could have ascertained the facts with reasonable diligence is a factual question for resolution by the jury"); State v. First Investors Corp., 592 N.Y.S.2d 561, 568 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992) ("fraudulent intent is a question of fact, not of law, and . . . '[a]ctual intent to defraud, or fraud in fact, like any other fact, may be shown by circumstantial evidence'") (citation omitted). In this case, as is demonstrated below, there is no basis for departing from that general rule.

1. CPH did not "disclaim" reliance on Morgan Stanley's misrepresentations by agreeing to the integration clause in the Merger Agreement.

Morgan Stanley first contends that CPH supposedly disclaimed reliance on any misrepresentation by Morgan Stanley in the following provision of a Merger Agreement, an agreement with respect to which Morgan Stanley is not even a party (MS Answer, Exh. A, § 12.5):

Entire Agreement. This Agreement (including all Schedules and Exhibits) contains the entire agreement among the parties hereto with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and understandings, oral or written, with respect to such matters, except for the Confidentiality Agreements which will remain in full force and effect for the term provided for therein.

At the outset, it bears mentioning that, by making this argument, Morgan Stanley and its lawyers are revealing that they are not at all concerned with either the consistency or the integrity of their legal arguments. That is because the present argument is directly at odds with the complaint filed by Morgan Stanley sister company MSSF, by the very same lawyers, in which MSSF bases its entire case on alleged representations that are external to the Merger Agreement. MSSF's complaint, which CPH has answered, is based entirely on alleged representations concerning the so-called "synergies" that would result from a merger of Coleman and two other companies with Sunbeam — even though those supposed representations fall completely outside the Merger Agreement. Morgan Stanley never attempts to square its present argument with MSSF's complaint, of course, because they are directly inconsistent. In any event, Morgan Stanley's contention that CPH disclaimed reliance on Morgan Stanley's fraudulent statements through the integration clause in the Merger Agreement is baseless for several reasons.

First, a threshold problem with Morgan Stanley's reliance on the integration clause in the Merger Agreement is that Morgan Stanley is not a party to the agreement. The parties are Sunbeam, CPH, Laser Acquisition Corp., and CLN Holdings Inc. See MS Answer, Exh. A, p. 1. That is fatal because a person or entity that is not a party to a contract cannot invoke the clauses that it contains in order to escape liability for fraud. See Taylor Woodrow Homes Florida, Inc v. 4/46-A Corp., No. 5D01-15814, 2003 WL 158888, at *7 (Fla. 5th DCA Jan. 24, 2003) ("A person who is not a party to a contract may not sue for breach" unless he or she is a third-party beneficiary); Caretta Trucking, Inc. v. Cheoy Lee Shipyards, Ltd., 647 So. 2d 1028, 1030-31 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994) (same); Cohan v. Sicular, 625 N.Y.S.2d 278, 280 (N.Y. App. Div. 1995) (in refusing to dismiss fraud claim against brokers, court rejected brokers' invocation of integration clause in contract "since they were not parties to the real estate contract"); Diodato v. Eastchester Dev. Corp., 489 N.Y.S.2d 293, 294 (N.Y.

App. Div. 1985) (“the purported disclaimer would not inure to the benefit of defendant . . . as he was not a party to the contract.”).

Second, Morgan Stanley’s reliance argument does not withstand scrutiny because, on its face, the integration clause at issue merely says that there is no other agreement between the parties other than what they have put down in writing in their contract. The law is settled, in both Florida and New York, that such clauses do not immunize even the parties to the contract (which, again, Morgan Stanley was not) from claims of fraud or fraud in the inducement. See, e.g., MeterLogic, Inc. v. Copier Solutions, Inc., 126 F. Supp. 2d 1346, 1362-63 (S.D. Fla. 2000) (“Florida law is clear that if a party alleges that a contract was procured by fraud or misrepresentation as to a material fact, an integration clause will not make the contract incontestable, and the oral representations may be introduced into evidence to establish fraud”); Tinker v. De Maria Porsche Audi, Inc., 459 So. 2d 487, 490-92 (Fla. 3d DCA 1984) (reversing trial court’s ruling that a sales contract that disclaimed oral representations made with respect to the condition or fitness of the product property constituted a bar to an action for fraud or misrepresentation even when the misrepresentation was made for the purpose of inducing the sale: “a written disclaimer . . . is ineffective to negate a seller’s liability for fraud in the inducement”); Mejia v. Jurich, 781 So. 2d 1175, 1178 (Fla. 3d DCA 2001) (reversing dismissal order: “The existence of a merger or integration clause, which purports to make oral agreements not incorporated into the written contract unenforceable, does not affect oral representations which are alleged to have fraudulently induced a person to enter into the agreement”); Mfrs. Hanover Trust Co. v. Yanakas, 7 F.3d 310, 315 (2d Cir. 1993) (under New York law, “a general merger clause is ineffective, however, to preclude parol evidence that a party was induced to enter into the contract by means of fraud”); 60A N.Y. Jur. 2d, Fraud and Deceit § 227 (2001) (“It is well established that a general or ‘boiler plate’ merger clause in a written contract is ineffective to preclude judicial inquiry into specific allegations of fraud.”).

Third, Morgan Stanley’s attempt to find refuge in the integration clause is unavailing in any event, because parties cannot enter into contracts that would relieve a party of the consequences of its fraud. See Zuckerman-Vernon Corp. v. Rosen, 361 So. 2d 804, 806 (Fla. 4th DCA 1978) (“a party cannot contract against liability for his own fraud in order to exempt him from liability for an intentional tort”); L. Luria & Son, Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 460 So. 2d 521, 523 (Fla. 4th DCA 1984) (“Fraud is an intentional tort and thus not subject to the cathartic effect of the exculpatory clauses found in contracts”); Banks v. Pub. Storage Mgmt., Inc., 585 So. 2d 476, 476 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991) (same); Pearce v. Knepper, 53 N.Y.S. 2d 845, 846 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1945) (“no contract could ever be entered into which would relieve a party thereto from the consequences of his fraud or bad faith.”); see also AES Corp. v. Dow Chem. Co., 325 F.3d 174, 179 (3d Cir. 2003) (under federal law, a nonreliance clause can never bar a Rule 10b-5 claim as a matter of law).

Fourth, Morgan Stanley cannot escape responsibility for its fraud for one additional reason: the integration clause predates many of the misrepresentations for which Morgan Stanley is responsible. Specifically, the Merger Agreement is dated February 27, 1998, but CPH’s complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley’s fraudulent conduct continued through the end of March. See Complaint ¶¶ 45-72. Thus, regardless of the applicability of the integration clause here, it cannot possibly be read as a license to commit fraud in the future.

2. CPH’s fraud claim should proceed notwithstanding its supposed “failure” to inspect Sunbeam’s books and records.

Morgan Stanley next contends that CPH could not justifiably have relied on the misrepresentations because it supposedly failed to determine for itself whether it was being lied to by Morgan Stanley and others. See MS Mem. 21-23. Morgan Stanley’s contention is wrong for several reasons.

First, insofar as Morgan Stanley contends that CPH was required to allege that it took affirmative steps to find out whether Morgan Stanley was lying, Morgan Stanley grossly overstates CPH’s pleading obligations. Florida law recognizes no such requirement. See, e.g., Sheen v. Jenkins, 629 So. 2d 1033, 1035 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993) (“a recipient may rely on the truth of a representation, even though its falsity could have been ascertained had he made an investigation, unless he knows the representation to be false or its falsity is obvious to him”) (quoting Besett v. Basnett, 389 So. 2d 995, 998 (Fla. 1980)); see also Gilchrist Timber Co. v. ITT Rayonier, Inc., 696

So. 2d 334, 336-37 (Fla. 1997). That is dispositive, even if this Court determines that New York substantive law applies to CPH's claims, because Florida procedural law still applies to the question of what CPH need and need not plead in its complaint. See Aerovias Nacionales de Colombia, S.A. v. Tellez, 596 So. 2d 1193, 1195 (Fla. 3d DCA 1992) ("the law of the forum, i.e., Florida law, governs on procedural matters"); Strauss v. Sillin, 393 So. 2d 1205, 1206 (Fla. 2d DCA 1981) ("In conflict of law situations, matters of procedure are generally resolved by the law of the state in which the action has been instituted"); Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 127 (1971) ("The local law of the forum governs rules of pleading and the conduct of proceedings in court"); see also BDO Seidman, LLP v. British Car Auctions, Inc., 802 So. 2d 366, 369 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001) (Gross, J., concurring) ("A court usually applies its own local law rules prescribing how litigation shall be conducted even when it applies the local law rules of another state to resolve other issues in the case.").

Although the point is academic, it bears mentioning that New York law does not require a defrauded plaintiff to plead the affirmative steps it took to confirm the accuracy of the statements made to it. In Doehla v. Wathne Ltd., for example, the court refused to dismiss a fraud claim under New York law despite defendant's contention that plaintiff "was an experienced businessman" and that his "complaint [did] not contain any indication that he undertook to make an independent investigation of the [fraudulent] financial condition representations." See 1999 WL 566311, at *11. The court observed that "[t]he difficulty with defendants' position is that no authority to which I am directed requires a pleading to contain affirmative allegations detailing the investigative efforts of a claimant in the circumstances underlying this case." Id. at *12. Thus, the court concluded (id. at *13):

I do not believe the authorities require plaintiff to mount a preemptive strike against a potential challenge to the reasonableness of his reliance by detailing the efforts he undertook to uncover the truth, when no facts alleged suggest that his pleaded reliance on the statements, pertaining to confidential information within their possession alone . . . was unreasonable. Accordingly, . . . dismissal based on lack of reasonable reliance at this stage would be inappropriate.

The same conclusion is required here.

Second, the reasonableness of a party's reliance is a question for the trier of fact that generally is considered unsuited for disposition on a threshold motion such as this. See, e.g., Pinzl, 426 So. 2d at 66 (Florida law); Thor Bear, 648 So. 2d at 173 (Florida law); Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *10-11 (New York law); Country World, 589 N.Y.S.2d at 82 (New York law). That is true, notwithstanding Morgan Stanley's contention that CPH is supposedly "sophisticated," because even New York law (which Morgan Stanley obviously favors) has recognized that a plaintiff's level of "sophistication" and its access to information themselves are fact-bound issues. See Swersky v. Dreyer & Traub, 643 N.Y.S.2d 33, 37 (N.Y. App. Div. 1996) (reversing trial court's determination that reliance was unjustified because of plaintiff's "sophistication" and access to information: "[t]his issue should not have been resolved as a matter of law").

Third, Morgan Stanley's assertions about what Sunbeam's books would have revealed to CPH themselves raise factual questions that cannot be resolved in a motion such as the one at bar. As the Florida Supreme Court ruled recently, whether the facts supposedly were available to the victim involves a case-by-case factual inquiry, which "should not be resolved through a motion to dismiss and the use of a bright-line rule of preclusion" (M/I Schottenstein Homes, Inc. v. Azam, 813 So. 2d 91, 94-95 (Fla. 2002)):

[W]e hold that the question of whether a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation exists where the putatively misrepresented information is contained in the public record is one of fact that should not be resolved through a motion to dismiss and the use of a bright-line rule of preclusion. In pursuing this case-by-case consideration of the facts, courts should be mindful of the type of information that the purchaser asserts was fraudulently misrepresented. . . . Thus, this factual examination is indeed a consideration of the totality of the circumstances surrounding the type of information, the nature of the communication between the parties, and the relative positions of the parties.

The Florida Supreme Court's holding — that the question of whether a public record disclosed the truth could not be resolved through a motion to dismiss — applies with even greater force here given that Morgan Stanley argues CPH should have searched for information contained in Sunbeam's private records.

Fourth, Morgan Stanley's argument ignores that in this case, the truth was peculiarly within the knowledge of Morgan Stanley and the other defrauders. That is significant because "when the information is peculiarly within the possession of the defendants, then plaintiff may rely without prosecuting an investigation even where plaintiff could have determined the truth with relatively modest investigation.” Fid. Funding of California, Inc. v. Reinhold, 79 F. Supp. 2d 110, 121 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (holding defendants liable for fraud under New York law and rejecting defendants’ justifiable reliance argument); *see also Nomura, Sec. Int’l, Inc. v. E*Trade Sec., Inc.*, 280 F. Supp. 2d 184, 206 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (rejecting defendant’s argument that plaintiff “should have alleged that it had attempted to access” withheld information: “Where, as here, the defendant is alleged to have withheld facts about its own transactions, the plaintiff’s lack of ready access to that information is presumed”); Doehla, 1999 WL 566311, at *13 (“a plaintiff’s failure to investigate will not preclude a finding of reasonable reliance where the facts allegedly misrepresented ‘are peculiarly within the defendant’s knowledge [and plaintiff] had no independent means of ascertaining the truth’”) (citation omitted); Dimon Inc. v. Folium, Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d 359, 368 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (“The New York cases recognize that the peculiar knowledge exception applies not only where the facts allegedly misrepresented literally were within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant, but also where the truth theoretically might have been discovered, though only with extraordinary effort or great difficulty”); Primavera Familienstiftung v. Askin, 130 F. Supp. 2d 450, 495 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), amended in part on other grounds, 137 F. Supp. 2d 438 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (“even sophisticated investors may justifiably rely on facts that are ‘peculiarly within the other party’s knowledge’”) (citing Lazard Freres & Co. v. Protective Life Ins. Co., 108 F.3d 1531, 1542 (2d Cir. 1997)).

3. CPH has alleged that it relied on the misrepresentations identified in the complaint and has done so sufficiently.

Morgan Stanley next contends that CPH’s complaint should be dismissed because CPH has not alleged that it justifiably relied on the March 19, 1998 press release or the other misrepresentations by Morgan Stanley and others. See MS Mem. 23-24. In fact, however, CPH’s complaint does so.

First, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s contention, CPH’s complaint is replete with allegations that CPH relied on the representations set out in the complaint. The fraud count incorporates all of the prior allegations — including the misrepresentations made during the course of the Sunbeam fraud. See Complaint ¶ 78 (“CPH repeats and realleges the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 77 above as if set forth fully herein”). Then, after incorporating all of those misrepresentations, the fraud count expressly alleges that CPH relied on them. See Complaint ¶ 82 (“In agreeing to accept approximately 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock in connection with the sale of CPH’s interest in Coleman, CPH reasonably and justifiably relied upon Morgan Stanley’s representations concerning Sunbeam”). Thus, Morgan Stanley’s argument rests on a proposition that is demonstrably untrue.

Second, contrary to Morgan Stanley’s suggestion, the complaint also alleges that CPH relied on representations made directly by Morgan Stanley. For example, in paragraph 39, CPH’s complaint alleges:

Morgan Stanley knew that it had to persuade CPH not only to sell Coleman, but also to accept Sunbeam stock — ultimately, 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock — as a major part of the purchase price. . . . Together, in face-to-face discussions, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam assured CPH that (a) Sunbeam would meet or exceed its first quarter 1998 earnings estimates; (b) analysts’ 1998 earnings estimates for Sunbeam were correct; and (c) Sunbeam’s plan to earn $2.20 per share in 1998 was easily achievable and probably low. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam also falsely assured CPH that Sunbeam’s “early buy” sales program would not hurt Sunbeam’s future revenues. However, the “early buy” program was one of Sunbeam’s revenue acceleration programs — and the devastating effects of Sunbeam’s revenue program already had begun to materialize at Sunbeam. Sunbeam’s January and February 1998 sales were down drastically, although those results were not disclosed to CPH or to the public. To the contrary, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam together specifically advised CPH that Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 sales were “tracking fine” and running ahead of analysts’ estimates.

CPH’s complaint further alleges that “[b]efore the truth was revealed, Morgan Stanley persuaded CPH to sell its shares in Coleman to Sunbeam and to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration.” See Complaint ¶ 40.

Third, that leaves Morgan Stanley with its contention that the March 19, 1998 press release contained a provision entitled “Cautionary Statements” — applicable to “‘forward looking statements,’ as such term is defined in the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995” — which supposedly “warned readers not to rely on the forward-looking projections of Sunbeam’s future performance.” See MS Mem. 23. By relying on that general warning, Morgan Stanley apparently would have this Court believe that at least under federal law, such a warning is sufficient to immunize a party from liability for any false forward looking statements. Federal law, however, is directly to the contrary. See In re Unicapital Corp. Sec. Litig., 149 F. Supp. 2d 1353, 1375 (S.D. Fla. 2001) (forward looking statements in press releases not shielded from liability under the safe-harbor provision of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act because “the warnings contained in Unicapital’s press release contained little more than generic, boilerplate language”). Of course, CPH’s claims are not based on federal law (a point that further undermines Morgan Stanley’s reliance on the boilerplate warning language in the press release), but the language relied on by Morgan Stanley would have no effect on CPH’s claims even if they were.

In addition, CPH’s claims are not based on forward-looking statements. Instead, CPH’s claims are based on Morgan Stanley’s failure in connection with the press release to disclose then-existing facts, including the following facts set forth in the complaint (Complaint ¶¶ 61-62):

- As Morgan Stanley was fully aware, the March 19, 1998 press release was false, misleading, and failed to disclose material information. The March 19, 1998 press release failed to disclose Sunbeam’s actual January and February 1998 sales or the true reasons for the poor results.
- Morgan Stanley knew that the shortfall from analysts’ estimates was not caused by retailers’ deciding to defer purchases from the first quarter of 1998 to the second quarter, as the press release indicated. Rather, as Sunbeam’s outside auditors had advised Morgan Stanley in writing, the collapse in first quarter sales was caused by Sunbeam’s acceleration of 1998 sales into the fourth quarter of 1997.

Thus, the boilerplate language relied on by Morgan Stanley does not defeat CPH’s reliance on the representations alleged in the complaint, and Morgan Stanley does not cite a single case suggesting otherwise.

4. CPH’s allegations of scienter also are more than sufficient.

Morgan Stanley’s last attack on CPH’s fraud claim is that it insufficiently alleges intent or scienter because (a) the complaint supposedly alleges only that Morgan Stanley had the “ordinary economic interest” of receiving compensation for the work it was doing and (b) the idea that Morgan Stanley was attempting to engage in fraud defies “economic reason” because it would have “risked its own professional reputation, knowingly ripped off its most valued clients and institutional investors, knowingly permitted its affiliate to invest and lose hundreds of millions of dollars, and exposed itself to massive liability.” See MS Mem. 25-27. Those contentions are insufficient to support judgment as a matter of law.

First, once again, Morgan Stanley ignores that questions of intent are for the trier of fact and not to be resolved on a motion to dismiss. See, e.g., Cohen, 843 So. 2d at 991; First Investors, 592 N.Y.S.2d at 568. That established principle alone warrants rejection of Morgan Stanley’s argument.

Second, with respect to Morgan Stanley’s contention that all that it had to gain from its fraud was compensation for the services it was rendering, Morgan Stanley ignores the allegations of the complaint. The complaint, in addition to alleging that Morgan Stanley stood to reap tens of millions of dollars in fees from the fraudulent transactions, also alleges that Morgan Stanley wanted to work for Sunbeam into the future and was deeply concerned that it would be replaced if it did not participate in the fraud. See Complaint ¶ 31 (“Morgan Stanley also knew that Davis and Chase Securities were standing by — ready and willing to reclaim their position as Dunlap’s investment banker of choice”); id. ¶ 66 (“Morgan Stanley also knew that Sunbeam would promptly replace Morgan Stanley with another investment banking firm — such as the Chase Securities firm led by Mark Davis”). Those allegations, which Morgan Stanley ignores, render irrelevant the two cases cited by Morgan Stanley addressing the “mere” allegation that the defendant was in a position to receive normal compensation. See MS Mem. 25-26.

Third, as for Morgan Stanley’s assertion that CPH’s fraud claim defies economic reason, CPH certainly agrees that defrauding one’s customers is not a proper business strategy. But time and again businesses — including Morgan Stanley — do indeed cheat their own customers and others. The courts hold them accountable for their wrongdoing when they do.

As for Morgan Stanley’s contention that CPH’s theory makes no sense because Morgan Stanley’s sister company (MSSF) loaned and lost millions of dollars, the short answer is that it is an unfortunate matter of public record that banks do indeed lend money to companies that the banks know are misrepresenting their true financial conditions. Just recently, two of the nation’s largest banks — J.P. Morgan Chase and Citigroup — were the subject of criminal and regulatory charges due to their knowing participation in Enron's fraud on its shareholders. Despite the fact that both banks made massive loans to Enron, and ended up as two of the biggest creditors in the Enron bankruptcy, the SEC and the U.S. Attorney in Manhattan both accused the banks of assisting Enron in misrepresenting its true financial condition for years — and the banks ended up paying $300 million in fines and penalties to resolve the matter. See Kurt Eichenwald and Riva D. Atlas, 2 Banks Settle Accusations They Aided in Enron Fraud, N.Y. Times, July 29, 2003, at A1 (available at www.lexis.com); Floyd Norris, A Warning Shot to Banks on Role in Others' Fraud, N.Y. Times, July 29, 2003, at C1 (available at www.lexis.com). Thus, although it might not be wise or right for banks to lend money to corporations to assist in a fraud on shareholders, the reality is that banks do so readily and knowingly in order to earn massive fees.

Morgan Stanley's "makes no sense" argument also ignores that: (a) Morgan Stanley expected that MSSF would syndicate most or all of the loan promptly after completing the transaction, and in fact, MSSF did so; (b) MSSF enjoyed an economic cushion against the risk resulting from Sunbeam's fraud because Sunbeam issued $750 million of debentures (increased from the $500 million offering originally planned) that were subordinated to MSSF's loan; and (c) as a secured lender, MSSF had far less risk than the parties (such as CPH) that received Sunbeam's common stock. MSSF was playing with fire and ultimately got burned when the fraud was exposed faster than the defrauders anticipated, but it certainly does not follow from that fact that CPH's claims should be dismissed on the ground that they are nonsensical. The fact that MSSF lost money does not mean that CPH's fraud theory does not make sense; it only means that MSSF miscalculated the risk to the senior secured debt, which MSSF thought was insulated by billions of dollars in equity and an additional $750 million in subordinated debt.

In sum, notwithstanding Morgan Stanley's invitation to this Court to resolve the inherently fact-bound issues of reliance and intent as a matter of law, the applicable law and the relevant facts alleged in the complaint preclude that result.

B. CPH's Aiding-And-Abetting Count (Count II) States A Claim.

Morgan Stanley next contends that CPH's claim for aiding and abetting fraud must be dismissed because the complaint does not sufficiently allege "actual knowledge" of Sunbeam's fraud or "substantial assistance" in that fraud. See MS Mem. 27-31. In fact, however, the complaint adequately alleges both.

1. CPH's "knowledge" allegations are sufficient.

Morgan Stanley's knowledge need not be pleaded with particularity. The complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley "knew of Dunlap's fraudulent scheme and helped to conceal it" (see Complaint ¶ 86), which should be the end of the matter. Nonetheless, Morgan Stanley insists that this is not enough because Morgan Stanley's knowledge must be pleaded with particularity. See MS Mem. 27-28. That contention is baseless for multiple reasons.

First, Morgan Stanley's contention ignores that the law applicable to the procedural issue of the sufficiency of CPH's pleading is Florida law, and that is true even if another state's substantive law were to apply to CPH's claims. See Aerovias Nacionales, 596 So. 2d at 1195 ("the law of the forum, i.e., Florida law, governs on procedural matters"); Strauss, 393 So. 2d at 1206 ("In conflict of law situations, matters of procedure are generally resolved by the law of the state in which the action has been instituted"); Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 127 (1971) ("The local law of the forum governs rules of pleading and the conduct of proceedings in court").

Under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.120, matters such as intent and knowledge may be "averred generally," even in cases involving fraud. So even though Morgan Stanley includes a rare citation to Florida law in this particular argument, for the bland proposition that allegations in a pleading are insufficient if they are too general or vague, Morgan Stanley ignores the dispositive Florida procedural rule. Because Morgan Stanley's knowledge can be "averred generally," CPH's allegation is sufficient.

Second, although the point is academic, the same rule has been adopted under federal law — even though Morgan Stanley's citation to and primary reliance on a federal district court case appears to be designed to misguide this Court into assuming otherwise. The case cited by Morgan

Stanley, Filler v. Hanvit Bank, 247 F. Supp. 2d 425 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) — a decision that has since been vacated (see No. 01 CIV 9510 (MGC), 01 CIV 8251 (MGC), 2003 WL 21729978 (S.D.N.Y. July 25, 2003)) and therefore is no longer of any force or effect — does not even address a plaintiff's supposed failure to allege adequately a defendant's knowledge of fraud. Had the court addressed that question, it would have applied Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b), which like Rule 1.120 provides that allegations of fraud must be pleaded with particularity but that “[m]alice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.”

Third, even assuming for the sake of argument that New York law applies, the result would be the same because New York authorities do not require that knowledge be pleaded with particularity. See Houbigant, Inc. v. Deloitte & Touche LLP, 753 N.Y.S.2d 493, 498 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003). Instead, recognizing that knowledge of fraud is “the element most likely to be within the sole knowledge of the defendant and least amenable to direct proof,” New York law requires only “that the complaint contain[] some rational basis for inferring that the alleged misrepresentation was knowingly made.” Id.; see also Oxford Health Plans (N.Y.), Inc. v. Bettercare Health Care Pain Mgmt. & Rehab PC, 762 N.Y.S.2d 344, 346 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) (citing Houbigant with approval). “Indeed,” as the Appellate Court in Houbigant observed, “to require anything beyond that would be particularly undesirable at this time, when it has been widely acknowledged that our society is experiencing a proliferation of frauds perpetrated by officers of large corporations, for their own personal gain, unchecked by the ‘impartial’ auditors they hired.” Houbigant, 753 N.Y.S.2d at 498. Thus, even if New York law were to apply, CPH's complaint clearly satisfies that liberal pleading standard that Houbigant embraces as appropriate in cases like this.

In sum, Morgan Stanley's assertion that CPH's allegation of knowledge is insufficient is based on a studied ignorance of the applicable law, which establishes that CPH is permitted to aver Morgan Stanley's fraud generally.

Morgan Stanley's “equal access to books” argument is baseless. Morgan Stanley next argues that even if Morgan Stanley had actual knowledge of the fraud, CPH had actual knowledge too, “by virtue of the fact that it enjoyed exactly the same access to Sunbeam's books [and] records” as Morgan Stanley had. See MS Mem. 28. That argument is without merit because it is simply a rehash of the argument that CPH's fraud claim should be dismissed because CPH supposedly had access to Sunbeam books and records that would have disclosed Morgan Stanley's fraudulent conduct. As CPH demonstrated in Section IV.A.2 above, that argument is legally insufficient for the following reasons: (1) Morgan Stanley's argument rests on erroneous and grossly overstated assumptions about CPH's pleading obligations; (2) the reasonableness of CPH's reliance on Morgan Stanley is a question of fact for the jury; (3) Morgan Stanley's argument is based on assertions about what Sunbeam's books would have revealed, yet another issue of fact; and (4) the truth was peculiarly within the knowledge of Morgan Stanley and the other defrauders. See pages 43-46.

Morgan Stanley's constructive fraud argument is a nonissue. Notwithstanding Morgan Stanley's assertion about constructive knowledge (MS Mem. 29), that issue is moot because as shown above, the complaint alleges Morgan Stanley's actual knowledge of the fraud. See Complaint ¶ 86.

Economic motive also is not an issue. Morgan Stanley's contention that economic motive does not translate into actual knowledge or intent simply repeats its flawed argument. As shown in Section IV.A.4 above, the complaint alleges more than mere "ordinary" economic motives on the part of Morgan Stanley — including that Morgan Stanley, in addition to standing to reap tens of millions of dollars in fees, wanted to work for Sunbeam into the future and was concerned that it would be replaced if it did not participate in the fraud. See Complaint ¶¶ 31, 66; see also page 49.

2. CPH's "substantial assistance" allegations are sufficient.

Morgan Stanley begins this argument with the extravagant contention that CPH "does not — and indeed cannot — allege that [Morgan Stanley] provided 'substantial assistance' to Sunbeam's fraud." See MS Mem. 30. And yet, in the next two pages of its argument, Morgan Stanley identifies several such allegations in the complaint. Those allegations, by themselves, disprove the premise of Morgan Stanley's argument.

Nor is Morgan Stanley's attempt to downplay the significance of those allegations any more successful: Morgan Stanley's argument in that regard amounts to a reprise of failed arguments. With respect to the press release, Morgan Stanley states that "CPH does not allege that it relied on the press release" (MS Mem. 30), but CPH already has shown in Section IV.A.3 above that Morgan Stanley's assertion is wrong. CPH has alleged that it relied on the press release and the other misrepresentations that were made. With respect to Morgan Stanley's attack on CPH's complaint allegations relating to Morgan Stanley's assistance with the debenture offering (Complaint ¶¶ 72, 87), Morgan Stanley's attack is baseless because the complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley "closed the debenture offering" and that the closing "was needed to close the Coleman transaction." See Complaint ¶ 72. Clearly, Morgan Stanley's work on the debenture offering is further proof of Morgan Stanley's substantial assistance in the Sunbeam fraud. With respect to Morgan Stanley's provision to CPH of false financial and business information concerning Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley contends that "there is no allegation that [Morgan Stanley] knew that Sunbeam's financial and business information was false" (MS Mem. 31), but the error in that assertion is established by paragraph 86 of the complaint. That paragraph states that Morgan Stanley "knew of Dunlap's fraudulent scheme and helped to conceal it." See Complaint ¶ 86.

Equally fatal to its argument, Morgan Stanley has ignored other allegations demonstrating Morgan Stanley's substantial assistance in the Sunbeam fraud. In fact, the allegations cited by Morgan Stanley constitute just a small fraction of the germane allegations: the complaint devotes literally dozens of paragraphs to Morgan Stanley's work in assisting the Sunbeam fraud. See Complaint ¶ 38 ("Morgan Stanley, through Managing Directors Strong, James Stynes, and Robert Kitts, led the [Coleman acquisition] discussions with CPH on Sunbeam's behalf"); Complaint ¶ 39 ("During the course of negotiations, Morgan Stanley prepared and provided CPH with false financial and business information about Sunbeam," including "false 1996 and 1997 sales and revenue figures"); id. ("Together, in face to face discussions, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam" made numerous assurances about Sunbeam's performance and business practices to CPH); see also Complaint ¶¶ 29-37, 40-73. Those allegations, which must be accepted as true, further debunk Morgan Stanley's contention that the complaint's allegations of substantial assistance are insufficient.

C. CPH's Negligent Misrepresentation Count (Count IV) States A Claim.

Morgan Stanley next contends that CPH's negligent misrepresentation claim should be dismissed on two grounds: (1) the complaint does not sufficiently allege that there was a "special" or "near privity" relationship between Morgan Stanley and CPH (MS Mem. 32-33); and (2) the complaint does not sufficiently allege reasonable reliance (MS Mem. 34). Neither argument has merit.

1. Morgan Stanley's "special" or "near privity" relationship argument is baseless.

Morgan Stanley's "special" or "near privity" relationship argument is without merit for two reasons.

First, there is no such requirement under Florida law, and Morgan Stanley does not contend otherwise. Thus, if this Court concludes that Florida rather than New York applies to CPH's claims, that argument should be rejected without further inquiry.

Second, even under New York law, the complaint's allegations are sufficient because they show a near privity relationship between the parties. The highest court of the State of New York has set forth the following three-prong test for determining when a "near privity" relationship is present: (1) the defendant must have been aware that its representation would be used for a particular purpose; (2) the defendant must have intended that a known party or parties would rely thereon in furtherance of that purpose; and (3) there must have been some conduct on the part of the defendant linking it to that party or parties that evinces the defendant's understanding of that party or parties' reliance. See Credit Alliance Corp. v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 493 N.Y.S.2d 435, 443 (N.Y. 1985).

The complaint clearly satisfies all three of those elements:

- The complaint establishes that Morgan Stanley knew that its representations would be used for a particular purpose. The complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley made representations to CPH during face-to-face discussions for the purpose of persuading CPH to sell Coleman and accept Sunbeam stock as a major part of the purchase price. See Complaint ¶¶ 39, 94. Moreover, the complaint alleges that it was "Morgan Stanley [that] persuaded CPH to sell its shares in Coleman to Sunbeam and to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock as part of the consideration." See Complaint ¶ 41.
- The complaint establishes that Morgan Stanley intended that CPH rely on Morgan

Stanley's representations because, again, they were made in face-to-face discussions that were designed to induce CPH to take action. See Complaint ¶¶ 39, 94. Consequently, as the complaint alleges expressly, "Morgan Stanley intended for CPH to rely . . . on the information provided by Morgan Stanley." See Complaint ¶ 95.

- The complaint establishes that Morgan Stanley understood that CPH was relying upon the false information. The complaint alleges that Morgan Stanley provided inaccurate information — including information "concerning Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial performance, Sunbeam's business operations, the value of Sunbeam's stock, and Sunbeam's first-quarter 1998 performance" — during the course of direct negotiations with CPH that led to the transfer of CPH's 82% interest in Coleman to Sunbeam. See Complaint ¶ 94.

2. Morgan Stanley's reliance argument also is baseless.

Morgan Stanley's last attack on CPH's negligent misrepresentation claim is a reprise of an argument that it made in connection with the fraud claim — that CPH cannot have relied justifiably on Morgan Stanley's representations as a matter of law. As shown above in Section IV.A.2, that argument is baseless because: (1) it rests on erroneous and exaggerated assumptions about CPH's pleading obligations; (2) the reasonableness of CPH's reliance on Morgan Stanley is a jury question; (3) Morgan Stanley's argument is based on assertions about what Sunbeam's books would have shown that raise still more issues of fact for the jury; and (4) the truth was peculiarly within the knowledge of Morgan Stanley and the other defrauders. See pages 43-46.

D. CPH's Conspiracy Count (Count III), Which is Based On Its Underlying Fraud Count, States A Claim.

Morgan Stanley begins its attack on this claim by contending that "[n]either New York nor Florida recognize an independent tort for conspiracy" (MS Mem. 34), which misses the point. Although Morgan Stanley has addressed CPH's claims out of order so as to make it appear that CPH has alleged a disembodied conspiracy count, the fact is that the complaint pleads a count for conspiracy to commit fraud — which is why it follows the fraud (Count I) and aiding and abetting (Count II) counts. See Complaint ¶¶ 89-92. It is perfectly appropriate to plead a conspiracy count based on an underlying fraud claim, as Morgan Stanley concedes. See MS Mem. 34 n.22 (setting forth the elements for "a claim for conspiracy due to fraud" under New York law); see also Hoch v. Rissman, Weisberg, Barrett, 742 So. 2d 451, 460 (Fla. 5th DCA 1999) (confirming that conspiracy claim is derived from the underlying claim that forms its basis).

That leaves Morgan Stanley's contention — which is embedded in the very last of its numerous footnotes — that CPH has not pleaded an actionable, underlying tort or the elements of a derivative conspiracy claim. See MS Mem. 34 n.22. That argument is without merit. The elements of a civil conspiracy are (1) an agreement between two or more parties to achieve an illegal objective; and (2) an overt act in furtherance of that illegal objective. See Hoch, 742 So. 2d at 460; Nicholson v. Kellin, 481 So. 2d 931, 935 (Fla. 5th DCA 1985); Gabriel Capital, L.P. v. NatWest Fin., Inc., 94 F. Supp. 2d 491, 511 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (New York law). The complaint, the allegations of which must be accepted as true, alleges both elements.

Specifically, after detailing the extensive factual bases for the fraud, the complaint in paragraph 90 alleges based on the detailed factual allegations that precede it that “Morgan Stanley conspired with Dunlap and other senior Sunbeam executives to conceal the truth about Sunbeam’s financial performance and business operations.” The complaint then alleges, in paragraph 91, a number of specific “overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy” committed by Morgan Stanley:

- “concealing Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 sales collapse;”
- “assisting with the false March 19, 1998 press release;”
- “arranging road shows with prospective debenture purchasers at which Morgan Stanley, Dunlap and others made false statements concerning Sunbeam’s financial condition and business operations;”
- “preparing and disseminating the preliminary and final offering memoranda for the subordinated debenture offering, both of which contained false information concerning Sunbeam’s financial condition and business operations;”
- “providing CPH with false financial and business information concerning Sunbeam;”
- “scripting Dunlap’s false public statements concerning Sunbeam’s acquisition of Coleman;”
- “persuading CPH to sell its interest in Coleman and to accept 14.1 million shares of Sunbeam stock and other consideration;” and
- “underwriting the $750 convertible debenture offering, proceeds from which were used to fund Sunbeam’s purchase of Coleman.”

Those allegations are more than sufficient to state a claim and to withstand Morgan Stanley’s meritless motion for judgment on the pleadings.

Conclusion

Morgan Stanley's forum non conveniens motion is without merit. This action arises out of a Florida-based fraud that has led to the prosecution of no less than 24 lawsuits in Florida. Indeed, Morgan Stanley's own sister company chose to file its complaint here. That complaint, according to Morgan Stanley, arises from the same nucleus of operative facts as this case, and that complaint affirmatively asserts that the pertinent events occurred in Florida. As the complaints in both cases confirm, the factual ties to Florida abound. Moreover, many critical, non-party witnesses live in Florida and can be compelled to testify at trial only in Florida. Given Florida's close connection to this dispute, the lawsuit should remain here.

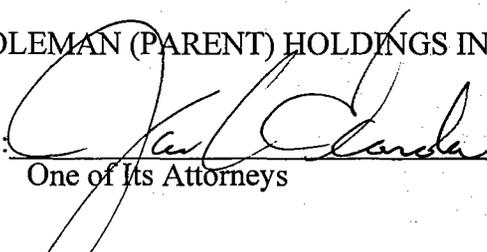

Morgan Stanley's motion for judgment on the pleadings likewise is without merit. CPH's complaint is far from bare bones: it alleges, in great detail, Morgan Stanley's deep and direct involvement in the massive fraud surrounding Sunbeam's demise. The complaint also alleges, in similar detail, the direct misrepresentations that Morgan Stanley made to CPH in furtherance of that fraud. Ignoring the allegations in the complaint, Morgan Stanley argues that it is incredible to believe that it would deceive its own clients or risk its reputation. At best, that is closing argument to the jury. Even more strained is Morgan Stanley's contention that because CPH was a "sophisticated" business player, Morgan Stanley could defraud CPH with impunity. The law, of course, protects all victims of deliberate fraud — even "sophisticated" ones — and requires wrongdoers like Morgan Stanley to answer in damages for the injuries that they cause. Under any conceivably applicable source of governing law, the detailed allegations in the complaint raise factual questions concerning Morgan Stanley's intent to deceive, CPH's reasonable reliance on Morgan Stanley's false statements, Morgan Stanley's knowledge concerning the fraud, and Morgan Stanley's active participation in the fraud. Those factual questions are for the jury to decide.

MOTION FOR ENTRY OF ORDER
UPON STIPULATION OF THE PARTIES

Plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., moves this Honorable Court to enter the proposed Order previously submitted to the Court on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel concerning Emails and in support thereof would show:

1. Plaintiff moved to compel discovery concerning emails (Motion to Compel was filed under seal);
2. At a duly noticed Uniform Motion Calendar hearing on November 6, 2003 (transcript attached), the parties placed a stipulation on the record resolving the referenced motion;
3. Plaintiff drafted a proposed Order accurately reflecting the stipulation of the parties and submitted it to opposing counsel for review and approval (correspondence and proposed Order attached);

1 and retrieval capabilities with regard to emails.
 2 They will also produce all documents that were
 3 submitted to federal regulators with regard to
 4 Morgan Stanley's email retention policies and
 5 retrieval capabilities.

6 THE COURT: I don't think I have that motion.
 7 The only one I have deals with the objections to
 8 production of the settlement agreement. Are you
 9 submitting a proposed agreed order on this?

10 MR. SCAROLA: We will submit a proposed
 11 agreed order.

12 THE COURT: You're just telling me stuff and
 13 hopefully I'll remember it when I see the order.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

15 We have agreed reciprocally that we will
 16 provide a corporate representative who will
 17 address the same issues on behalf of Coleman
 18 (Parent) Holdings, Incorporated.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: With regard to the second
 21 motion, that's the Defense's motion, so I'll allow
 22 them to go first.

23 THE COURT: That's the one. Do we really
 24 think we're going to get this done at an 8:45?

25 MR. CLARE: Judge, this is on Morgan

1 TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS, TAKEN BEFORE
 2 THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH MAASS IN COURTROOM 11B, PALM
 3 BEACH COUNTY COURTHOUSE, WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA, ON
 4 THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 2003, BEGINNING AT 8:55 A.M.

6 THE COURT: Do we really think we're going to
 7 do this this morning?

8 MR. SCAROLA: We are going to surprise Your
 9 Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay. How are we doing that?

11 MR. SCAROLA: We're going to surprise you by
 12 telling you first that with regard to the motion
 13 to compel production of emails, we have come to an 14 agreement.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. SCAROLA: And we will describe the terms
 17 of that agreement for the record.

18 For the record, my name is Jack Scarola. I'm
 19 hear on behalf of the Plaintiff Coleman (Parent)
 20 Holdings. There are two motions. First is motion
 21 to compel directed to the production of emails.
 22 The agreement that we have reached is that
 23 the Defendant Morgan Stanley will produce a
 24 witness who is knowledgeable with respect to the
 25 retention and retrieval -- the retention policies

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 Stanley's motion to compel the production of a
 2 single document, the settlement agreement between
 3 Coleman (Parent) and Arthur Andersen. And just
 4 briefly, I think it's fairly straightforward in
 5 terms of the history of this, that prior to
 6 initiating the lawsuit against Morgan Stanley,
 7 Coleman (Parent) brought a virtually identical
 8 lawsuit against Arthur Andersen, same allegations,
 9 same claim of damages, and now have settled.

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. This is the
 11 notebook you gave me for this, right?

12 MR. CLARE: That includes the cases that
 13 we've cited.

14 THE COURT: I can't do this on an 8:45.
 15 Please understand, 8:45's are things -- I can read
 16 everything. I can walk in and not know anything.
 17 I can read everything I've got to read, absorb
 18 everything I've got to, and I can do it in ten
 19 minutes. I can't even read your motion in ten
 20 minutes.

21 MR. CLARE: I have one case, City of
 22 Homestead case, that --

23 THE COURT: I'm happy to get the book and
 24 specially set. I'm happy to do it on an expedited
 25 basis. I cannot do this on an 8:45. If you

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 bothered to put together a notebook like this, I
 2 know I need more time with it, okay?
 3 Do you want me to get the book? Do you have
 4 access to your schedules?
 5 MR. CLARE: Sure.
 6 MR. SCAROLA: I don't, but can make a phone
 7 call to my office.
 8 THE COURT: Okay. That's great.
 9 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like me to get my
 10 office on the line, Your Honor?
 11 THE COURT: Sure.
 12 MR. CLARE: Just in the interest of
 13 completeness and while we're waiting for the
 14 schedule, Mr. Scarola described in broad outlines
 15 what the agreed upon order would be on this other
 16 motion. There is one caveat I explained to
 17 Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we will work it
 18 out between the parties before we submit an agreed
 19 upon order to Your Honor. I am not aware as I sit
 20 here right now what limitations there are right
 21 now without disclosing to Mr. Scarola's client
 22 information we provided to federal regulators. We
 23 agreed to provide whatever it is we can provide.
 24 THE COURT: Are you saying we might have a
 25 legal dispute later about what you're permitted to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: Who?
 2 MR. CLARE: Mr. John Tirey (ph) is coming
 3 from that the United Kingdom for a deposition that
 4 day.
 5 THE COURT: You have depositions in this
 6 case, so that's probably not a good day. Let's
 7 find a better time.
 8 We could try 4:30 on Tuesday, November 25.
 9 That's the Tuesday of Thanksgiving week, just so
 10 you-all are clear.
 11 MR. CLARE: That's fine with me, Your Honor.
 12 MR. IANNO: That's not a problem.
 13 MR. SCAROLA: That works, Your Honor.
 14 THE COURT: Is that okay? We will do it
 15 then. And I'll hold the stuff you gave me. If 16 you want me to look at anything else, send it to
 17 me a few days ahead of time so I have it.
 18 MR. CLARE: Thank you.
 19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
 20 THE COURT: Thank you.
 21 (Whereupon, at 9:03 a.m., the proceedings concluded.)

1 disclose?
 2 MR. CLARE: About what we're permitted to
 3 disclose, and I just don't know all the details
 4 without consulting with my client. We have an
 5 agreement in principle that whatever we can
 6 provide on this, we'll provide. I know there are
 7 materials we can provide, I just don't know the
 8 scope of it. And I don't want to represent to the
 9 court that we're waiving or even have the ability
 10 to waive protections that I'm not aware of right
 11 now.
 12 MR. SCAROLA: The only caveat to that is that
 13 there's a commitment that they will provide good
 14 faith cooperation in obtaining whatever
 15 information is necessary in order to make full
 16 disclosure.
 17 THE COURT: Okay.
 18 MR. CLARE: That's correct.
 19 THE COURT: We can try the 14th, which is a
 20 week from tomorrow at 4:30. Do you know if you're 21 available, sir?
 22 MR. CLARE: There was a deposition that was
 23 scheduled that day.
 24 THE COURT: In this case?
 25 MR. CLARE: In this case in New York.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated.
2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.
3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be April 1, 1997 through the date of service of this subpoena, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a. The connectives “and” and “or” shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “without limitation”; and
- c. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S RESPONSE TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF ORDER UPON STIPULATION OF THE PARTIES

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co."), by and through its undersigned attorneys, files its response to Plaintiff's Motion for Entry of Order Upon Stipulation of the Parties and states:

1. On November 6, 2003, Plaintiff had scheduled its Motion to Compel Concerning E-mails before this Court.
2. Prior to the hearing, counsel reached a tentative agreement to resolve the Motion without the Court's assistance. Counsel for the parties outlined the contours of their tentative agreement for the Court.¹

¹ A copy of the transcript from the November 6, 2003 hearing is attached hereto at Exhibit 1.

3. The parties described the “broad outlines” (Tr. 5) of their tentative agreement as follows:

- A. Counsel would “work it out between the parties” (Tr. 5) and submit an agreed order to the Court subsequent to the hearing. (Tr. 3, line 10).
- B. The parties would provide a corporate representative that would provide testimony concerning each party’s retention policies and retrieval capabilities concerning e-mails. (Tr. 2-3)
- C. Morgan Stanley would -- subject to the caveats expressly raised by Morgan Stanley’s counsel during the hearing -- provide all documents submitted to federal regulators concerning Morgan Stanley’s e-mail retention policies and retrieval capabilities. (Tr. 3, 5)
- D. Any agreement on this issue would be subject to counsel’s consultation with Morgan Stanley concerning what documents Morgan Stanley could provide. (Tr. 6, lines 6-11)
- E. Without consulting with Morgan Stanley, counsel was not waiving any protections of which counsel was unaware. (Tr. 6, lines 2-11).
- F. In the event that disclosure of certain documents was not permitted, Morgan Stanley would provide “good faith cooperation” in “obtaining whatever information is necessary” (Tr. 6, lines 12-16)

4. Subsequent to November 6, and as expressly contemplated during the hearing, counsel for Morgan Stanley consulted with their client. As a result of that consultation, counsel learned that the documents described at the November 6, 2003 hearing are the subject of a pending discovery motion in In re Initial Public Offering Securities Litigation, Case No. 21 MC

92 (SAS) in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. The Motion seeks to prevent the disclosure of the documents.

5. As it committed to do during the November 6 hearing, counsel for Morgan Stanley promptly notified counsel for Plaintiff -- Jenner & Block -- of this potential impediment to production. Moreover, Morgan Stanley offered to produce the documents promptly to Plaintiff if and when permitted by the Federal Court's ruling on the pending discovery motion. This offer has been continued to the present but has not been accepted by the Plaintiff.

6. Indeed, the Court expressly recognized the possibility that there may be a dispute between the parties regarding the scope of documents that Morgan Stanley would be able to produce pursuant to the tentative agreement. In response to remarks by Morgan Stanley's counsel, the Court inquired as follows:

12 MR. CLARE: Just in the interest of
13 completeness and while we're waiting for the
14 schedule, Mr. Scarola described in broad outlines
15 what the agreed upon order would be on this other
16 motion. There is one caveat I explained to
17 Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we will work it
18 out between the parties before we submit an agreed
19 upon order to Your Honor. I am not aware as I sit
20 here right now what limitations there are right
21 now without disclosing to Mr. Scarola's client
22 information we provided to federal regulators. We
23 agreed to provide whatever it is we can provide.

24 THE COURT: Are you saying we might have a
25 legal dispute later about what you're permitted to
1 disclose?

2 MR. CLARE: About what we're permitted to
3 disclose, and I just don't know all the details
4 without consulting with my client. We have an
5 agreement in principle that whatever we can
6 provide on this, we'll provide. I know there are
7 materials we can provide, I just don't know the
8 scope of it. And I don't want to represent to the

9 court that we're waiving or even have the ability
10 to waive protections that I'm not aware of right
11 now.

Tr. 5, line 12 through 6, line 11 (emphasis added).

7. Notwithstanding the fact that an agreement was not reached, counsel for Plaintiff submitted a unilateral order to the Court and has now filed a Motion for Entry of Order Upon Stipulation of the Parties..

8. Morgan Stanley respectfully submits that Plaintiff's Proposed Order does not properly reflect the agreement between the parties as reflected by the Transcript. Thus, Morgan Stanley has prepared an alternative order based on the transcript. A copy of the proposed order is attached hereto at Exhibit 2.

WHEREFORE, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that the Court enter the proposed order attached hereto together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

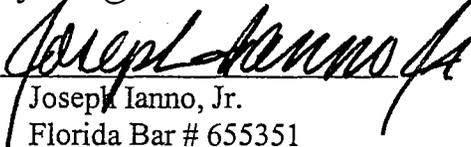

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing has been furnished by Federal Express and e-mail to all counsel of record on the attached service list on this 21st day of November, 2003.

1 TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS, TAKEN BEFORE
2 THE HONORABLE ELIZABETH MAASS IN COURTROOM 11B, PALM
3 BEACH COUNTY COURTHOUSE, WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA, ON
4 THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 2003, BEGINNING AT 8:55 A.M.

5 - - -
6 THE COURT: Do we really think we're going to
7 do this this morning?

8 MR. SCAROLA: We are going to surprise Your
9 Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay. How are we doing that?

11 MR. SCAROLA: We're going to surprise you by
12 telling you first that with regard to the motion
13 to compel production of emails, we have come to an 14 agreement.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. SCAROLA: And we will describe the terms
17 of that agreement for the record.

18 For the record, my name is Jack Scarola. I'm
19 hear on behalf of the Plaintiff Coleman (Parent)
20 Holdings. There are two motions. First is motion
21 to compel directed to the production of emails.

22 The agreement that we have reached is that
23 the Defendant Morgan Stanley will produce a
24 witness who is knowledgeable with respect to the
25 retention and retrieval -- the retention policies

1 and retrieval capabilities with regard to emails.
2 They will also produce all documents that were
3 submitted to federal regulators with regard to
4 Morgan Stanley's email retention policies and
5 retrieval capabilities.

6 THE COURT: I don't think I have that motion.
7 The only one I have deals with the objections to
8 production of the settlement agreement. Are you
9 submitting a proposed agreed order on this?

10 MR. SCAROLA: We will submit a proposed
11 agreed order.

12 THE COURT: You're just telling me stuff and
13 hopefully I'll remember it when I see the order.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

15 We have agreed reciprocally that we will
16 provide a corporate representative who will
17 address the same issues on behalf of Coleman
18 (Parent) Holdings, Incorporated.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: With regard to the second
21 motion, that's the Defense's motion, so I'll allow
22 them to go first.

23 THE COURT: That's the one. Do we really
24 think we're going to get this done at an 8:45?

25 MR. CLARE: Judge, this is on Morgan

1 Stanley's motion to compel the production of a
2 single document, the settlement agreement between
3 Coleman (Parent) and Arthur Andersen. And just
4 briefly, I think it's fairly straightforward in
5 terms of the history of this, that prior to
6 initiating the lawsuit against Morgan Stanley,
7 Coleman (Parent) brought a virtually identical
8 lawsuit against Arthur Andersen, same allegations,
9 same claim of damages, and now have settled.

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. This is the
11 notebook you gave me for this; right?

12 MR. CLARE: That includes the cases that
13 we've cited.

14 THE COURT: I can't do this on an 8:45.
15 Please understand, 8:45's are things -- I can read
16 everything. I can walk in and not know anything.
17 I can read everything I've got to read, absorb
18 everything I've got to, and I can do it in ten
19 minutes. I can't even read your motion in ten
20 minutes.

21 MR. CLARE: I have one case, City of
22 Homestead case, that --

23 THE COURT: I'm happy to get the book and
24 specially set. I'm happy to do it on an expedited
25 basis. I cannot do this on an 8:45. If you

1 bothered to put together a notebook like this, I
2 know I need more time with it, okay?

3 Do you want me to get the book? Do you have
4 access to your schedules?

5 MR. CLARE: Sure.

6 MR. SCAROLA: I don't, but can make a phone
7 call to my office.

8 THE COURT: Okay. That's great.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like me to get my
10 office on the line, Your Honor?

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. CLARE: Just in the interest of
13 completeness and while we're waiting for the
14 schedule, Mr. Scarola described in broad outlines
15 what the agreed upon order would be on this other
16 motion. There is one caveat I explained to
17 Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we will work it
18 out between the parties before we submit an agreed
19 upon order to Your Honor. I am not aware as I sit
20 here right now what limitations there are right
21 now without disclosing to Mr. Scarola's client
22 information we provided to federal regulators. We
23 agreed to provide whatever it is we can provide.

24 THE COURT: Are you saying we might have a
25 legal dispute later about what you're permitted to

1 disclose?

2 MR. CLARE: About what we're permitted to
3 disclose, and I just don't know all the details
4 without consulting with my client. We have an
5 agreement in principle that whatever we can
6 provide on this, we'll provide. I know there are
7 materials we can provide, I just don't know the
8 scope of it. And I don't want to represent to the
9 court that we're waiving or even have the ability
10 to waive protections that I'm not aware of right
11 now.

12 MR. SCAROLA: The only caveat to that is that
13 there's a commitment that they will provide good
14 faith cooperation in obtaining whatever
15 information is necessary in order to make full
16 disclosure.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

19 THE COURT: We can try the 14th, which is a
20 week from tomorrow at 4:30. Do you know if you're 21 available, sir?

22 MR. CLARE: There was a deposition that was
23 scheduled that day.

24 THE COURT: In this case?

25 MR. CLARE: In this case in New York.

1 THE COURT: Who?

2 MR. CLARE: Mr. John Tirey (ph) is coming
3 from that the United Kingdom for a deposition that
4 day.

5 THE COURT: You have depositions in this
6 case, so that's probably not a good day. Let's
7 find a better time.

8 We could try 4:30 on Tuesday, November 25.
9 That's the Tuesday of Thanksgiving week, just so
10 you-all are clear.

11 MR. CLARE: That's fine with me, Your Honor.

12 MR. IANNO: That's not a problem.

13 MR. SCAROLA: That works, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Is that okay? We will do it
15 then. And I'll hold the stuff you gave me. If 16 you want me to look at anything else, send it to
17 me a few days ahead of time so I have it.

18 MR. CLARE: Thank you.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Thank you.

21 (Whereupon, at 9:03 a.m., the proceedings concluded.)

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

Plaintiffs,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

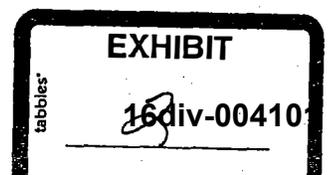

Defendant.

ORDER ON COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL CONCERNING E-MAILS

THIS CAUSE is before the Court upon Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s Motion to Compel Concerning E-mails, and the subsequent stipulation of the parties, upon consideration of which, it is hereby,

ORDERED and ADJUDGED:

1. The Defendant shall, within ten (10) days of the date of this order, produce all materials submitted to regulators regarding Morgan Stanley's e-mail retention policies and retrieval capabilities. To the extent that the discoverability of any of the materials described in this Paragraph is subject to a pending discovery motion in In re Initial Public Offering Securities Litigation, Case No. 21 MC 92 (SAS) in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, those materials shall not be produced until five (5) days after the entry of an order resolving the discovery motion in that case, and then only to the extent required or permitted by such order.

2. To the extent the Defendant is unable to comply with the provisions of Paragraph 1 of this Order, the Defendant shall provide good faith cooperation in obtaining whatever information is necessary in order to make full disclosure..
3. Within 15 days following the final production called for in Paragraph 1, each party shall produce a corporate representative to be deposed at a mutually agreeable time and place to testify pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.310, Fla.R. Civ. P. concerning that party's e-mail retention policies, practices and procedures at all times material to the claims asserted herein and also concerning the ability, procedure, time, labor and expense involved in retrieving e-mails generated during the relevant time period;

DONE AND ORDERED at West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida, this _____ day of _____, 2003.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, West Palm
4 Beach, Florida, on November 25, 2003, starting at
5 4:37 p.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted,
6 to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: This is Coleman and Morgan
9 Stanley. It's defendant's motion, I think, to
10 compel production of a settlement agreement.

11 MR. IANNO: That's correct.

12 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

13 THE COURT: You-all can have a seat.

14 The first motion I have though, and I
15 apologize, I didn't have time to go through the
16 files to try to find this, I see that defendant
17 has filed certain things under seal or has
18 tendered certain things under seal, and I hope
19 that none of them have been filed yet. Was there
20 an order entered that permitted that procedure?

21 MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor. Joe Ianno.
22 I believe that the confidentiality order that was
23 entered in this case provided for that.

24 THE COURT: You're going to have to tell me,
25 because I thought --

00004

1 MR. IANNO: I didn't bring the
2 confidentiality order with me.

3 THE COURT: Because, obviously, under the
4 Rules of Judicial Administration, things can't get
5 filed under seal --

6 MR. IANNO: Without notice to media.

7 THE COURT: And all that. And I thought when
8 I looked at the proposed order in this case,
9 either I struck through that stuff or I mailed it
10 back to you guys and said I can't sign this. And

16div-004105

11 if I haven't done that yet, that's why we need to
12 find that order.

13 I haven't looked at any of the stuff that was
14 given to me under seal. I need to just give it
15 back to you. It's not my policy to look at things
16 that can't be part of the court record absent a
17 clear order that permits me to do so.

18 It could be somehow I signed it and I forgot.

19 MR. IANNO: I don't believe that the motion
20 at issue though, Your Honor, was filed under seal.

21 THE COURT: No, just some of the stuff. I'll
22 give you guys -- Whoever gave me this stuff, I'm
23 just going to give it back.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I think what was filed under
25 seal was your reply memorandum.

1 MR. IANNO: It could be.

2 THE COURT: I have a couple things under
3 seal. I got this (indicating).

4 MR. IANNO: If I may, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: And then you gave me a copy of
6 it, which I don't want. And then I got this
7 (indicating). I don't know if that's all of it or
8 not.

9 MR. IANNO: Okay. This was not filed under
10 seal, Your Honor (indicating).

11 THE COURT: I thought it's telling me it's a
12 copy of what was filed under seal for me. No?

13 MR. IANNO: That must have been a mistake,
14 Your Honor, because that was not filed under seal.

15 THE COURT: You're comfortable it wasn't?
16 Do you want to show it to Mr. Scarola?

17 MR. IANNO: I think it may have been filed.
18 It is a response.

19 I think that was just a mistake, Your Honor,
20 on this one. That was our reply to Mr. Scarola's
21 opposition.

22 THE COURT: Okay. And have you seen this
23 (indicating)?

24 MR. SCAROLA: I have, yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Thanks.

1 MR. IANNO: These are other motions, Your
2 Honor, that are not at issue today.

3 THE COURT: So when it says confidential
4 under seal, it was a misnomer?

5 MR. IANNO: Yes. It was a mistake. That one
6 was not intended to be filed under seal.

7 THE COURT: Do we know if it was filed?

8 MR. IANNO: It may have been.

9 THE COURT: What if it wasn't? Do you want
10 me to do directions to the clerk saying --

11 MR. IANNO: You can file that.

12 THE COURT: The whole thing says

16div-004106

13 confidential.

14 MR. IANNO: That can be filed. That does not
15 need to be under seal.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

17 What did you want to say in support of your
18 motion?

19 MR. CLARE: Good morning, Your Honor.
20 Tom Clare from Kirkland and Ellis in Washington on 21 behalf of the defendant, Morgan Stanley. This is
22 our motion to compel the production of the
23 settlement agreement.

24 THE COURT: Right.

25 MR. CLARE: I think to understand the context

00007

1 of the motion, it's helpful to go back in time and
2 understand the events that led up to this lawsuit
3 and the litigations that came before this
4 settlement agreement is the subject of the motion.

5 In March of 1998, Mr. Scarola's client sold
6 its interest in the Coleman Company to Sunbeam.
7 My client, Morgan Stanley, was the financial
8 advisor to Sunbeam for part of that deal. Arthur
9 Andersen was the auditor to Sunbeam at the time.

10 After the acquisition was closed, there were
11 accounting problems discovered at Sunbeam,
12 management was fired, the auditors were changed
13 and litigation ensued.

14 Morgan Stanley was never sued by anybody
15 until Coleman Parent Holdings Company sued us
16 earlier this year, but all the other litigation
17 ensued, including claims that were brought or
18 threatened to be brought by the plaintiff in this
19 case against Sunbeam, and then a second suit
20 against Arthur Andersen. Both of those cases were 21 settled.

22 The settlement agreement between Coleman
23 Parent Holdings and Sunbeam was public, a matter
24 of public record, publicly filed with the SEC
25 filings. The settlement agreement between Coleman

00008

1 and Arthur Andersen was not.

2 Andersen has been identified as an important
3 critical witness in this case. There are partners
4 and former partners of Arthur Andersen who are
5 identified in the Complaint as providing a factual
6 basis for the fraud and negligent
7 misrepresentation counts that are brought against
8 us, and there's an issue of setoff. Very clearly
9 in the case, they were seeking to recover the same
10 damages from us as they've already recovered from
11 Arthur Andersen stating the same allegations of
12 reliance and the same damages allegations.

13 So we're entitled to know, under the City of 14 Homestead case in the Third District Court of

16div-004107

15 Appeals that came down, the position that was
16 recently re-affirmed by the Nester case that came
17 down a month ago in the Court of Appeals in
18 support of that. It's relevant.

19 As well, Your Honor, potentially to the forum
20 non conveniens and choice of law motion that we're
21 going to be back arguing before Your Honor on
22 December 12th, to the extent that --

23 THE COURT: How would it be relevant to
24 choice of law?

25 MR. CLARE: To the extent that Coleman
00009

1 Parent, which is headquartered in New York, and
2 its parent company, which is headquartered in
3 New York, agreed to settle this litigation and
4 enforce the settlement agreement in the courts of
5 New York or agreed to be bound by the choice of
6 law provision that specifies New York law should
7 apply, that's relevant to whether New York is an
8 inconvenient forum for them to litigate this case.

9 THE COURT: So it's not a choice of law, it's
10 just an inconvenient forum argument?

11 MR. CLARE: Well, there's both.

12 THE COURT: How is it choice of law, so I
13 understand?

14 MR. CLARE: On December 12th, we'll be
15 back --

16 THE COURT: Right.

17 MR. CLARE: -- to argue our motion to
18 dismiss, and it's our view that the substantive
19 law of the State of New York applies to their 20 claims.

21 THE COURT: Right, but how is -- I'm sorry.
22 I thought I understood you to say that potentially
23 the settlement agreement between Coleman and
24 Arthur Andersen will have some bearing on the
25 choice of law to be applied in this case.

1 MR. CLARE: I may have misspoken.

2 THE COURT: Maybe I misunderstood it.

3 MR. CLARE: We're not a party to that
4 agreement, so obviously, it doesn't bear directly
5 on it, but I do think it is relevant to their
6 expectation that events giving rise to this
7 controversy arising out of the Sunbeam transaction
8 will be governed at least in part by New York law.

9 So that's an additional reason why we think
10 it's relevant. But the primary reasons are the
11 setoff, the damages claims, we're going to need
12 our experts to prepare damages reports at some
13 point to submit our expert testimony on damages
14 and also to evaluate our position, our potential
15 liability exposure. Without knowing what the 16 setoff is, it's impossible for my client to --

16div-004108

17 THE COURT: So are you saying the only part
18 of the agreement you need access to is the dollar
19 amount?

20 MR. CLARE: No, actually, that's not correct.
21 Under the City of Homestead case, the Court said
22 the amount and the terms need to be disclosed.

23 I can't conjure up all of the reasons why it
24 might be relevant. Those are the reasons that
25 I've identified here. There may be a denial of

00011

1 liability by Arthur Andersen. There may be an
2 admission of liability by Arthur Andersen. There
3 may be a release of claims coming back the other
4 direction against Coleman Parent. I just don't
5 have any idea without seeing the agreement to
6 understand the relevance of it. And that's why
7 the procedures that Mr. Scarola has suggested,
8 which is to delay and defer production of this
9 settlement agreement until later in the case, is
10 not appropriate, nor is an in camera inspection to
11 review, because having access to the discovery,
12 wanting to take the depositions of Arthur Andersen
13 people, there's no way that we can tell from an in
14 camera review or by delaying months and months
15 until trial whether we'll be able to effectively
16 cross examine witnesses during depositions and the 17 like.

18 It would be a different case if they had not
19 identified Arthur Andersen as critical to the
20 establishment of their case.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Let me see what
22 plaintiff's position is. Thank you.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
24 Jack Scarola on behalf of Coleman Parent Holdings
25 Company.

1 If I may, let me present both the defense and
2 the Court with copies of some highlighted cases
3 that I would like to discuss, Your Honor, in the
4 course of our presentation.

5 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Let me begin, Your Honor, by
7 acknowledging that as the defendants themselves
8 have stated, Rule 1.280(b)(1) permits discovery of
9 all relevant evidence; that is, evidence relevant
10 to the subject matter of the case, but that
11 evidence must also be either admissible or
12 reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of 13 admissible evidence. And we must concede that the 14 principal case relied upon by the defense, the
15 City of Homestead, would require Your Honor to 16 compel disclosure of the amount of this
17 settlement.

18 There is language in the City of Homestead

16div-004109

19 case that has been accurately quoted in the
20 defendant's brief, and it is that the settlement
21 terms and amount must be disclosed.

22 But if Your Honor takes a look at that
23 opinion, and we're going to go through it together
24 if you'll indulge me for just a moment, you'll
25 find that the reference to terms is pure dicta.

00013

1 This is a case involving the wrongful death
2 of a seven-year-old, and there were two defendants
3 named in the lawsuit; an entity called
4 Meda-Therapy Institute and the City of Homestead.
5 The case, while pending, was settled with
6 Meda-Therapy Institute and proceeded against the
7 city. There was a confidential settlement
8 agreement -- excuse me. There was a settlement
9 agreement that was entered into, and the city,
10 according to the opinion, and this appears under
11 headnote 1, the last sentence in the paragraph,
12 quote, the city filed a motion to compel
13 disclosure of the settlement amount. The Court
14 denied the motion.

15 The opinion then goes on to say, the motion
16 to compel should have been granted, the settlement
17 terms and amount must be disclosed.

18 There was never even, according to the
19 opinion, a request for the terms, there was a
20 request for the amount. And the rationale in the 21 opinion was that the amount may be relevant to
22 setoff and the remaining defendant was entitled to
23 know what that amount was for that reason.

24 So the only issue before the Court was 25 whether the amount should be disclosed. There is

00014

1 no reference to any confidentiality provisions in
2 the settlement agreement, so the case is
3 distinguishable from the standpoint that there was
4 no contractual obligation imposed upon any party,
5 at least based upon the opinion, to keep the terms
6 of the settlement confidential.

7 And the Court also observed that a factor
8 that was taken into consideration in this case was
9 that the defendant seeking this discovery was a
10 public entity, and the Court found that to be a
11 relevant factor. In the last sentence of the
12 opinion, the Court says, the case for disclosure
13 is especially strong, whereas here the plaintiffs
14 are suing a public entity.

15 The precedent upon which this case is based,
16 the one cited authority is the case of Smith vs.
17 TIB Bank of The Keys, another Third DCA opinion.
18 And in that case, a plaintiff was seeking
19 certiorari review of an order compelling answers
20 during the course of a deposition. The plaintiff

16div-004110

21 had been involved in a prior unrelated lawsuit
22 arising out of the plaintiff's employment with an
23 entirely separate entity, and the plaintiff
24 settled that unrelated claim and entered into a
25 settlement agreement that did have contractual

00015

1 requirements that the terms of the settlement
2 remain confidential.

3 When the questions were asked during
4 deposition, the plaintiff declined to answer those
5 on the basis that answering the questions would
6 place the plaintiff in violation of the
7 confidentiality provisions in the earlier order.

8 The trial court entered an order which
9 recognized the obligation for the plaintiff to
10 decline to answer questions that were within the
11 scope of the confidentiality provision of the 12 order, and the trial court fashioned an order that
13 was expressly designed to give maximum effect to
14 the rights of privacy that arose out of the 15 confidentiality provision and at the same time
16 provide the defendant seeking the discovery with
17 relevant and material information.

18 So the Court basically said you must answer
19 these questions, you are within your rights to 20 decline to answer questions that fall within the
21 scope of the confidentiality provision.

22 And if you take a look at the opinion, you
23 will see that the Court has weighed the right of 24 privacy and the expectation of privacy arising out
25 of the confidentiality provisions in the 00016

1 settlement agreement and balanced those against
2 the rights for discovery, which we think is what
3 appropriately must be done.

4 We have also provided the Court with a Fourth
5 DCA case that recognizes a general principal that
6 materials sought to be discovered must properly be
7 related to the issues involved in the litigation.
8 That's a case that has been cited in our brief and
9 recognizes the fact that Rule 1.280(b)(1) is not
10 to be used simply for gathering information
11 regarding settlement possibilities.

12 And we have given the Court two federal cases
13 that interpret the identical provisions in the
14 federal rules and weigh the privacy rights against
15 the rights to disclosure and approve a procedure
16 whereby the Court has conducted an in camera
17 inspection to make a determination as to whether
18 any provisions in the settlement agreement must be
19 disclosed because they have the possibility of 20 providing grounds for impeachment of the settling
21 party.

22 We think that that's the appropriate

16div-004111

23 procedure for the Court to follow under these
24 circumstances.

25 There have been a number of arguments that 00017

1 have been made as to potential reasons for the
2 disclosure of information contained within the
3 settlement agreement. Those are contained within
4 the reply memo that Your Honor has not yet had an
5 opportunity to see, but if you turn to page 6,
6 there are individual bullet points that catalog
7 the bases --

8 THE COURT: I'm sorry, this is contained
9 where?

10 MR. SCAROLA: In the reply memo that was 11 filed by defendants. I'll just give Your Honor my 12 copy.

13 There are various bullet points at the top
14 that talk about things that reasonably might
15 appear within a settlement agreement and might
16 provide a basis for some argument that portions of
17 the settlement agreement are relevant or material.

18 We are prepared to provide the settlement
19 agreement to Your Honor for in camera inspection.
20 I have it with me today. It's relatively brief,
21 and you can look at it quickly. You're going to
22 find, to corroborate the representations we have
23 already made to the Court, there are no
24 cooperation provisions in the agreement, there are
25 no provisions that require Arthur Andersen to

00018

1 produce witnesses in a particular forum.

2 THE COURT: How many pages is it?

3 MR. SCAROLA: It's about four or five.

4 THE COURT: Any objection to my looking at it
5 now?

6 MR. CLARE: No, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 It's more than four or five.

9 MR. IANNO: Even with my eyes, Your Honor, it
10 looks single spaced.

11 THE COURT: I saw that.

12 MR. SCAROLA: It is single spaced.

13 I tried to tab the paragraphs that I thought
14 might be of particular concern to the Court, and 15 some of it you'll be able to see just by the 16 nature of the subject matter dealt with in the 17 paragraph.

18 THE COURT: Can you give me just one second
19 to look at it?

20 MR. SCAROLA: Sure.

21 THE COURT: Because I want to get a sense of 22 what we're talking about.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.

24 Your Honor, may I interrupt for just one

16div-004112

25 moment?

00019

1 THE COURT: Sure.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I would appreciate if Your
3 Honor would order me to produce that for in camera
4 inspection.

5 THE COURT: Oh, yes, I just did. I'm sorry.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. I thought that's
7 what you were doing.

8 THE COURT: That's what I was doing.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: To conclude, Your Honor, in
12 addition to those items that are listed in the
13 reply memo, there has, for the first time, been a
14 suggestion that if there were a choice of forum
15 provision contained within that agreement, that it
16 might have some relevance to the issues with
17 respect to forum non conveniens, and I think
18 Your Honor will see from a review of the document
19 that there is no stipulation with regard to an
20 appropriate forum for litigation concerning that
21 agreement.

22 So I think that upon review of the document,
23 there is only one provision in the document that
24 has any relevance or materiality with respect to 25 this litigation, and that is the issue of the

1 amount of the settlement which relates solely to
2 the issue of setoff, and upon court order, we are
3 prepared to make a confidential disclosure of the
4 amount of that settlement under the terms of the
5 confidentiality agreement previously entered. We
6 would designate that as confidential information
7 in order to restrict its proper use to this case
8 and make the disclosure with regard to that
9 amount.

10 THE COURT: Any objection to my making a
11 photocopy of it?

12 MR. SCAROLA: No, not at all.

13 THE COURT: Thanks.

14 Was the settlement consummated?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Under its terms?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 Do you accept that representation?

20 MR. CLARE: That it was consummated under its 21 terms?

22 THE COURT: Yeah.

23 MR. CLARE: I don't have any reason to
24 believe or not believe that that's incorrect.

25 I would say that this is a non-privileged

00021

1 contract that's no different than any other
2 contract, that I'd like the opportunity to examine
3 the document to understand and pressure test the
4 assertions that Mr. Scarola has made about the
5 document, the nuances associated with it that I
6 would like to explore.

7 And, you know, the Florida courts --

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry, before there's a
9 rebuttal --

10 THE COURT: I'm sorry, you weren't done.

11 MR. SCAROLA: There's just one last point
12 that I want to make.

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And that is that Florida does
15 have a constitutionally-recognized right to
16 privacy. This is private economic information.
17 There must be a balancing test between that right
18 to privacy and the defendant's rights in this
19 lawsuit, and that right to privacy needs to be
20 taken into careful consideration before any other
21 terms of this agreement were to be disclosed. And
22 I suggest that upon reading the agreement, it is
23 abundantly clear that none of the stated purposes
24 for which this discovery is sought would be served
25 by the disclosure of any other provision in that

00022

1 document at all.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

4 THE COURT: What did you want to respond,
5 sir?

6 MR. CLARE: Just on that last point, Your
7 Honor, there's --

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry. Just one last
9 thing.

10 Mr. Jackson has been rehearsing all day long
11 to be able to say with credibility I agree with 12 everything Mr. Scarola just said, so could we just 13 give him the opportunity to do that on behalf of 14 Arthur Andersen?

15 MR. JACKSON: Your Honor, Hank Jackson on
16 behalf of Arthur Andersen.

17 THE COURT: Okay. I'm glad to know that
18 you're here. I didn't realize you were here for
19 Arthur Andersen.

20 MR. JACKSON: I'm from Holland & Knight.
21 We represented Arthur Andersen in the previous
22 lawsuit and were part of the settlement
23 negotiations and the settlement.

24 I'd just like to reiterate that the
25 confidentiality provision was a material term of

00023

1 that agreement, and we believe that to the extent
2 permissible by law, that it should be enforced,

16div-004114

3 and it should only be breached or allowed to come
4 out in the open to the extent that it is clearly
5 established that it is relevant. And we believe
6 that the proper procedure is for the Court to look
7 at it in camera and to make that judgment, and
8 we'd ask that you do that.

9 THE COURT: What did you want to respond,
10 sir?

11 MR. CLARE: On Mr. Scarola's final point,
12 with the Court's permission, I'll hand to counsel
13 and to Your Honor just some citations to Florida
14 cases that are all cited in our brief that make
15 the point that a contractual confidentiality
16 provision cannot be used to subvert discovery.

17 There's a protective order in this case. We 18 will agree to be bound by the full extent of the
19 confidentiality order in terms of disclosing it.
20 We will go one step further and agree to make it
21 attorney's eyes only with the proviso that I be
22 able to show it to a limited number of in-house
23 attorneys at Morgan Stanley for the purposes of
24 evaluating it for the purposes that I've
25 identified for Your Honor.

1 So with the confidentiality order, the
2 balancing test that Mr. Scarola has already
3 identified has already been done. Those privacy
4 considerations that Arthur Andersen is worried
5 about about disclosure, nothing's going to be in
6 the open. This is all going to be treated as the
7 highest degree of confidentiality under the
8 protective order that Your Honor has already
9 signed, and we agree and are willing to accept
10 those restrictions on our use of it.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Let me take another
12 advisement, okay?

13 Thank you very much.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there is one
15 additional brief matter, if we could impose upon
16 the Court. We had actually set it for an 8:45
17 hearing this morning, and because of Your Honor's
18 crowded calendar, we hoped that we might just
19 bring it to you this afternoon.

20 THE COURT: Sure. What is that?

21 You can take this back, sir. Thanks.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, it relates to the
23 exchange of correspondence with which we barraged
24 you concerning the entry of an order --

25 THE COURT: Oh, yeah. Okay.

1 MR. SCAROLA: -- arising out of a stipulated
2 agreement between the parties.

3 If I could hand Your Honor the transcript of
4 the earlier hearing.

16div-004115

5 THE COURT: Okay. Is it your position there
6 was a stipulation?

7 MR. SCAROLA: It is absolutely my position
8 that there was an on-the-record stipulation, yes,
9 Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: This is the motion for entry of 12 an order upon stipulation of the parties, and I'll
13 pull Your Honor's attention to those specific and
14 brief provisions that indicate that there was
15 indeed a stipulation.

16 If we begin at page 2, I am addressing the
17 Court at line 13, "We have come to an agreement,
18 specifically with regard to the motion to compel
19 production of e-mails."

20 Going down to line 18, "For the record, my 21 name is Jack Scarola. I'm here on behalf of the 22 plaintiff, Coleman Parent Holdings. There are two
23 motions. The first is a motion to compel directed
24 to the production of e-mails. The agreement that
25 we have reached is that the defendant, Morgan

1 Stanley, will produce a witness who is
2 knowledgeable with respect to the retention and
3 retrieval -- the retention policies and retrieval
4 capabilities with regard to e-mails. They will
5 also produce all documents that were submitted to
6 federal regulators with regard to Morgan Stanley's
7 e-mail retention policies and retrieval
8 capabilities."

9 Morgan Stanley was sued by government
10 regulators and paid in excess of a million dollars
11 for violating document retention policies, and we
12 wanted to get the documents that the federal
13 government obtained in connection with that
14 proceeding. So there's an agreement that they're
15 going to produce a witness.

16 The next part of the agreement appears at
17 page 5.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Clare is speaking.

20 Mr. Clare addresses the Court at line 14. He
21 says, beginning at line 12, "Just in the interest
22 of completeness and while we're waiting for the 23 schedule," because there was another motion we
24 were discussing, "Mr. Scarola described in broad
25 outlines what the agreed-upon order would be on

00027

1 this other motion. There is one caveat I
2 explained to Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we
3 will work it out between the parties before we
4 submit an agreed-upon order to Your Honor. I am
5 not aware as I sit here right now what limitations
6 there are right now without disclosing to

7 Mr. Scarola's client information we provided to
8 federal regulators."

9 And I think that "without" is supposed to be
10 "about" disclosing, "there are right now about
11 disclosing."

12 THE COURT: You're saying if there were
13 regulations in place that would prohibit them from 14 disclosing them.

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's right.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: What Mr. Clare is saying is
18 there may be some restrictions and I don't know
19 what they are and I need --

20 THE COURT: We may not be able to do some of 21 this stuff.

22 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. So he is
23 saying that.

24 He says, "We agreed to provide whatever it is 25 we can provide."

00028

1 Okay? So he's saying, whatever documents
2 we're allowed to provide, we'll give to you.

3 He then goes on to say at line 6 on page 6,
4 "I know there are materials we can provide, I just
5 don't know the scope of it."

6 I then speak, and I say, "The only caveat to
7 that is that there's a commitment that they will
8 provide good faith cooperation in obtaining
9 whatever information is necessary in order to make
10 full disclosure."

11 And Mr. Clare says, "That's correct."

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Now, that was the agreement.
14 We're going to both provide witnesses that are
15 going to talk about e-mail retention procedures
16 and capabilities, and the second part is, they're
17 going to give us everything that they gave to the 18 federal government except to the extent that they
19 are prohibited from doing so. And if there are 20 prohibitions, they are going to provide good faith
21 cooperation in an effort to try to give us full
22 disclosure.

23 That's the order that I submitted to the
24 Court, and there has been an effort now to recede
25 from that agreement and to change it.

00029

1 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of your
2 proposed order?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, I do.
4 I provided the Court separately the original --

5 THE COURT: It's attached? Oh, this is it.
6 Okay.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Did I give it to Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: I assume so. Yeah. It's

16div-004117

9 attached to the transcript.
10 MR. SCAROLA: That's the one, yes.
11 THE COURT: Okay. That's fine. Let me just
12 look at it.
13 MR. SCAROLA: Sure.
14 THE COURT: Okay. And what's the objection?
15 MR. IANNO: Judge, Joe Ianno. This dispute
16 centers around one thing.
17 THE COURT: What's that?
18 MR. IANNO: The submission that Mr. Scarola
19 wants that was provided to the federal regulators
20 is right now the subject of a motion pending in 21 the Federal Court in the Southern District to
22 prevent its disclosure. By providing it to
23 Mr. Scarola, we would be violating or mooted that 24 motion that was filed by a co-defendant in that 25 case.

1 What we've told Mr. Scarola --
2 THE COURT: I'm sorry, tell me a little bit
3 more about what you're saying.
4 MR. IANNO: Okay. There is a motion right
5 now that is pending, an action in the Federal
6 District that we've cited in our response. It's
7 entitled --
8 THE COURT: I don't have your response. If
9 you have it, that would be great.
10 MR. IANNO: I do. Here's a copy of our
11 response, Your Honor.
12 THE COURT: Thank you. Okay.
13 MR. IANNO: And we've attached a proposed
14 alternate order to our response. And the case in
15 the federal court is styled In Re: Initial Public
16 Offering Securities Litigation, it's pending in
17 the Southern District of New York in Federal
18 Court. That motion is directed -- it's filed by a
19 co-defendant of Morgan Stanley's in that case --
20 to prevent the disclosure of what is called the
21 Wells Submission, which is the document that
22 Mr. Scarola is attempting to get.
23 THE COURT: I'm sorry, who is trying to
24 prevent the disclosure of this?
25 MR. IANNO: A co-defendant. There is another

00031

1 underwriting defendant.
2 THE COURT: A private party?
3 MR. IANNO: Another private party. They're
4 saying that this document is prohibited from
5 disclosure because it's settlement discussions.
6 It's the negotiations leading up to the settlement
7 with the SEC, and they're saying that settlement
8 discussions, not the final agreement, but the
9 settlement discussions leading up to the SEC
10 settlement are prohibited from being disclosed in

16div-004118

11 discovery.

12 That motion, to my understanding, has been
13 fully briefed and is awaiting ruling by Judge
14 Scheindlin in New York.

15 THE COURT: These are documents that your
16 client provided?

17 MR. IANNO: To the SEC, I believe that's
18 correct, yes, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. IANNO: And this underwriting defendant,
21 co-defendant, is saying these documents are not
22 discoverable in the federal court. We're
23 waiting --

24 THE COURT: Were they documents drafted for
25 the SEC or just documents provided to the SEC?

1 MR. IANNO: They were drafted for the SEC in
2 connection with the settlement discussions of the
3 SEC action that Mr. Scarola referenced in his
4 argument.

5 THE COURT: These are e-mails?

6 MR. IANNO: No. It's a document describing
7 Morgan Stanley's e-mail retrieval and retention.

8 THE COURT: Oh, I see.

9 MR. IANNO: It's discussing how e-mails are
10 stored, how they're backed up, how they're
11 retrieved, things of that nature. It's about a
12 40 or 50-page document is my understanding of that
13 document. And it's submitted in connection with
14 the SEC claims against Morgan Stanley and other
15 defendants, as I understand that.

16 What Mr. Clare said when we were here on
17 November 6th, and it's reflected in the
18 transcript, is he did not know, and he's here to 19 speak to that, but what was our ability to waive
20 at the time. And what Mr. Scarola didn't read
21 from the transcript is when Mr. Clare was here on
22 page 6 --

23 THE COURT: Let me get to that. Okay. What
24 line?

25 MR. IANNO: It's line 8. And it's where

00033

1 Mr. Scarola stopped. "And I don't want to
2 represent to the Court that we're waiving or even
3 have the ability to waive protections that I'm not
4 aware of right now."

5 Specifically, this case came up after we went
6 back and consulted with the client. If you look
7 just above that on line 4, Mr. Clare says he
8 doesn't know all the details without consulting
9 the client.

10 What we had agreed to do on November 6th is 11 go back and draft a proposed agreed order. That's 12 reflected back on page 2, I believe, where the

16div-004119

13 Court asks you, you expect me to remember this
14 when you submit a proposed agreed order. That's
15 what we were talking about.

16 What we've told Mr. Scarola repeatedly and
17 what we've said in our proposed order, once the
18 judge rules in New York, if we're permitted to 19 disclose it, we'll give it to you within five
20 days. That's the only dispute.

21 If the judge rules that it's not
22 discoverable, we can't produce it in this case
23 without violating that court order. And what
24 Mr. Scarola wants us to do, he says, well, I want
25 you to go in and waive that protection and waive

00034

1 the judge's ruling, because if the judge has ruled
2 today --

3 THE COURT: He's saying you already did.
4 Is that right?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.

6 MR. IANNO: But Mr. Clare when he was here
7 specifically told the Court, and we knew, and the
8 Court recognized indeed that there may be other
9 problems with the disclosure of this document.

10 THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this.

11 The way I read that transcript, you-all were
12 agreeing that unless some federal regulation
13 prohibits the disclosure, you'll make it, and if
14 it does, you'll apply, you know, to permit a
15 disclosure.

16 MR. IANNO: And we've waived confidentiality.
17 We have done the good faith cooperation and waived
18 the confidentiality. The only thing we can't
19 waive is this federal court proceeding at this
20 time.

21 THE COURT: Why not?

22 MR. IANNO: Because there's a --

23 THE COURT: Because you don't want to, or
24 because there's something else going on?

25 MR. IANNO: It's another defendant that

00035

1 brought the motion, Judge. We would be mooting
2 the co-defendant's motion at that point in time.
3 All the details, I'm not a party, I'm not a member
4 of the Bar in New York, I don't know all the
5 details going on in the New York case and why or
6 why not this document is being prohibited from
7 disclosure.

8 But, for instance, if this court rules that
9 we should disclose the Wells Submission to Scarola
10 and at the same time the federal court has ruled
11 that it can't be disclosed --

12 THE COURT: Can't be disclosed to whom?

13 MR. IANNO: To anyone.

14 As I understand the motion in New York, it's

16div-004120

15 to prohibit disclosure of this document in 16 discovery.

17 THE COURT: Well, but that's different than
18 saying it can't be disclosed to a non-party.

19 MR. IANNO: Well, I think it's saying you
20 can't disclose this document to anyone.

21 MR. CLARE: Your Honor --

22 MR. IANNO: And maybe Mr. Clare --

23 MR. CLARE: I only have a little bit better
24 of an understanding of this, because I'm also not
25 a party to this New York action.

1 The submission -- The basic gist of the
2 motion is to interpret the Wells Process in
3 dealing with the SEC. The SEC issues a notice
4 that says this group of people, underwriters, are
5 potentially liable for such and such, and in order
6 to settle those claims, we invite all of the
7 potential targets of this investigation to come
8 and make submissions.

9 THE COURT: Right. And this is the
10 submission that you-all made?

11 MR. CLARE: This is one of the submissions
12 that we and --

13 THE COURT: And at the time you made the
14 submission, for instance, would it have prohibited
15 your publishing it in the paper?

16 MR. CLARE: It was requested to be treated
17 under the Wells Submission Process as confidential
18 by the SEC and was not disclosed to anybody else.
19 So yes, Your Honor, absolutely.

20 THE COURT: What would have prohibited your
21 disclosing it to a third party at the time you
22 made it?

23 MR. CLARE: What would have prohibited us
24 from disclosing it to a third party? In order for 25 us to get the benefit of the confidentiality that

00037

1 we had requested in the Wells Process, which is an
2 enforcement action, that we had to maintain its
3 confidentiality.

4 THE COURT: As against whom; the world?

5 MR. CLARE: As against the world, sure.

6 And if we had produced it to the New York
7 Times or provided it to third parties, then we
8 were waiving this protection, this Wells
9 Regulatory Process that we had in place.

10 And so we're willing to waive that. Morgan
11 Stanley has said, for the good of this agreement,
12 we are more than happy to waive that request. The
13 only thing -- There's this judicial proceeding
14 that is determining what is this Wells Process
15 about. It is exactly the federal regulatory 16 enforcement process that's being interpreted by

16div-004121

17 Judge Scheindlin in New York, what is the Wells
18 Process.

19 When you get to a certain stage in the Wells
20 Process and the parties are contemplating a
21 settlement, do materials that are exchanged
22 between the SEC and the potential targets of an
23 investigation, do they take on the conduct of
24 settlement negotiations such that they're not
25 discoverable by third parties? That is the issue

00038

1 that's being --

2 THE COURT: What do you mean they're not
3 discoverable by third parties? If I enter into a
4 settlement agreement, while there may be limits or
5 there may be privileges attached as to what gets
6 said in the settlement, nothing prohibits me in
7 general from going and telling everybody else what
8 happened.

9 MR. CLARE: And the Wells Process, in order
10 to maintain that confidentiality, which is a
11 confidentiality in the Wells Process that
12 implicates enforcement considerations that it
13 might get us crosswise with the SEC if we were to 14 disclose during settlement discussions with the
15 SEC, if we were to go out and say here's what
16 we're talking about the SEC, here's the
17 enforcement proceedings that's underway, here's
18 what they're looking at, that would get my client
19 potentially crosswise with the SEC.

20 So there's a lot of issues at stake with the
21 integrity of the Wells Process.

22 THE COURT: But the SEC is not saying you
23 can't disclose this?

24 MR. CLARE: The SEC is not a party to the 25 pending action in New York.

00039

1 THE COURT: So there's no agency saying you
2 can't disclose this; you just don't want to do it
3 because --

4 MR. CLARE: Because at the time we entered
5 into this broad -- again, broad outlines of this
6 agreement, and I expressly said to Your Honor that
7 I don't want to be representing to the Court that
8 I'm waiving any protection, and there's no
9 discussion here about regulations or
10 confidentiality restriction, there's no discussion
11 of that. I said, I'm not waiving anything that I
12 don't know what exists.

13 I went back and I consulted with the client,
14 checked with the outside counsel that was handling
15 this and he said this is the subject of a pending
16 discovery motion.

17 THE COURT: What's the response?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, Mr. Clare says he's

16div-004122

19 not the attorney involved in the New York
20 proceeding, but it's my understanding that it's
21 Mr. Clare's law firm that represents the same
22 parties in the New York proceeding.

23 I also understand that the entity that is
24 filing this motion attempting to obtain an order
25 that would restrict disclosure is an entity that

00040

1 is somehow related to Morgan Stanley. It's a
2 Morgan Stanley subsidiary or affiliate.

3 Now, they can't come before Your Honor and
4 say we're going to provide you with good faith
5 cooperation to get all these documents while at 6 the same time through a subsidiary they're trying
7 to get a New York court to enter an order that
8 would prohibit us from getting the documents.

9 And the bottom line is, this proposed order
10 asks them to do nothing that would violate any
11 existing obligation of confidentiality, but if
12 there is no existing obligation of
13 confidentiality, they're required to turn over
14 everything that they have the authority to turn
15 over. If the authority exists today to turn it
16 over, we should get it. If it doesn't exist
17 today, we can't get it, but they're required to 18 provide good faith cooperation in helping us to 19 get it.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: That's all that we're asking.
22 That's what they agreed to.

23 THE COURT: Let me take another advisement.
24 It's his motion, he goes first and last.

25 MR. IANNO: I have an alternative order,

00041

1 Your Honor, on that motion.

2 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor. I
4 appreciate your extra time this afternoon. Happy
5 Thanksgiving.

6 MR. IANNO: And hopefully, this is your last
7 hearing before the holiday.

8 THE COURT: It is now.

9 Thanks. Thanks. Bye-bye.

10 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, West Palm
4 Beach, Florida, on November 25, 2003, starting at
5 4:37 p.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted,
6 to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: This is Coleman and Morgan
9 Stanley. It's defendant's motion, I think, to
10 compel production of a settlement agreement.

11 MR. IANNO: That's correct.

12 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

13 THE COURT: You-all can have a seat.

14 The first motion I have though, and I
15 apologize, I didn't have time to go through the
16 files to try to find this, I see that defendant
17 has filed certain things under seal or has
18 tendered certain things under seal, and I hope
19 that none of them have been filed yet. Was there
20 an order entered that permitted that procedure?

21 MR. IANNO: Yes, Your Honor. Joe Ianno.
22 I believe that the confidentiality order that was
23 entered in this case provided for that.

24 THE COURT: You're going to have to tell me,
25 because I thought --

00004

1 MR. IANNO: I didn't bring the
2 confidentiality order with me.

3 THE COURT: Because, obviously, under the
4 Rules of Judicial Administration, things can't get
5 filed under seal --

6 MR. IANNO: Without notice to media.

7 THE COURT: And all that. And I thought when
8 I looked at the proposed order in this case,
9 either I struck through that stuff or I mailed it
10 back to you guys and said I can't sign this. And

11 if I haven't done that yet, that's why we need to
12 find that order.

13 I haven't looked at any of the stuff that was
14 given to me under seal. I need to just give it
15 back to you. It's not my policy to look at things
16 that can't be part of the court record absent a
17 clear order that permits me to do so.

18 It could be somehow I signed it and I forgot.

19 MR. IANNO: I don't believe that the motion
20 at issue though, Your Honor, was filed under seal.

21 THE COURT: No, just some of the stuff. I'll
22 give you guys -- Whoever gave me this stuff, I'm
23 just going to give it back.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I think what was filed under
25 seal was your reply memorandum.

00005

1 MR. IANNO: It could be.

2 THE COURT: I have a couple things under
3 seal. I got this (indicating).

4 MR. IANNO: If I may, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: And then you gave me a copy of
6 it, which I don't want. And then I got this
7 (indicating). I don't know if that's all of it or
8 not.

9 MR. IANNO: Okay. This was not filed under
10 seal, Your Honor (indicating).

11 THE COURT: I thought it's telling me it's a
12 copy of what was filed under seal for me. No?

13 MR. IANNO: That must have been a mistake,
14 Your Honor, because that was not filed under seal.

15 THE COURT: You're comfortable it wasn't?
16 Do you want to show it to Mr. Scarola?

17 MR. IANNO: I think it may have been filed.
18 It is a response.

19 I think that was just a mistake, Your Honor,
20 on this one. That was our reply to Mr. Scarola's
21 opposition.

22 THE COURT: Okay. And have you seen this
23 (indicating)?

24 MR. SCAROLA: I have, yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Thanks.

00006

1 MR. IANNO: These are other motions, Your
2 Honor, that are not at issue today.

3 THE COURT: So when it says confidential
4 under seal, it was a misnomer?

5 MR. IANNO: Yes. It was a mistake. That one
6 was not intended to be filed under seal.

7 THE COURT: Do we know if it was filed?

8 MR. IANNO: It may have been.

9 THE COURT: What if it wasn't? Do you want
10 me to do directions to the clerk saying --

11 MR. IANNO: You can file that.

12 THE COURT: The whole thing says

13 confidential.

14 MR. IANNO: That can be filed. That does not
15 need to be under seal.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

17 What did you want to say in support of your
18 motion?

19 MR. CLARE: Good morning, Your Honor.
20 Tom Clare from Kirkland and Ellis in Washington on 21 behalf of the defendant, Morgan Stanley. This is
22 our motion to compel the production of the
23 settlement agreement.

24 THE COURT: Right.

25 MR. CLARE: I think to understand the context

00007

1 of the motion, it's helpful to go back in time and
2 understand the events that led up to this lawsuit
3 and the litigations that came before this
4 settlement agreement is the subject of the motion.

5 In March of 1998, Mr. Scarola's client sold
6 its interest in the Coleman Company to Sunbeam.
7 My client, Morgan Stanley, was the financial
8 advisor to Sunbeam for part of that deal. Arthur
9 Andersen was the auditor to Sunbeam at the time.

10 After the acquisition was closed, there were
11 accounting problems discovered at Sunbeam,
12 management was fired, the auditors were changed
13 and litigation ensued.

14 Morgan Stanley was never sued by anybody
15 until Coleman Parent Holdings Company sued us
16 earlier this year, but all the other litigation
17 ensued, including claims that were brought or
18 threatened to be brought by the plaintiff in this
19 case against Sunbeam, and then a second suit
20 against Arthur Andersen. Both of those cases were 21 settled.

22 The settlement agreement between Coleman
23 Parent Holdings and Sunbeam was public, a matter
24 of public record, publicly filed with the SEC
25 filings. The settlement agreement between Coleman

00008

1 and Arthur Andersen was not.

2 Andersen has been identified as an important
3 critical witness in this case. There are partners
4 and former partners of Arthur Andersen who are
5 identified in the Complaint as providing a factual
6 basis for the fraud and negligent
7 misrepresentation counts that are brought against
8 us, and there's an issue of setoff. Very clearly
9 in the case, they were seeking to recover the same
10 damages from us as they've already recovered from
11 Arthur Andersen stating the same allegations of
12 reliance and the same damages allegations.

13 So we're entitled to know, under the City of 14 Homestead case in the Third District Court of

15 Appeals that came down, the position that was
16 recently re-affirmed by the Nester case that came
17 down a month ago in the Court of Appeals in
18 support of that. It's relevant.

19 As well, Your Honor, potentially to the forum
20 non conveniens and choice of law motion that we're
21 going to be back arguing before Your Honor on 22 December 12th, to the extent that --

23 THE COURT: How would it be relevant to
24 choice of law?

25 MR. CLARE: To the extent that Coleman
00009

1 Parent, which is headquartered in New York, and
2 its parent company, which is headquartered in
3 New York, agreed to settle this litigation and
4 enforce the settlement agreement in the courts of
5 New York or agreed to be bound by the choice of
6 law provision that specifies New York law should
7 apply, that's relevant to whether New York is an
8 inconvenient forum for them to litigate this case.

9 THE COURT: So it's not a choice of law, it's
10 just an inconvenient forum argument?

11 MR. CLARE: Well, there's both.

12 THE COURT: How is it choice of law, so I
13 understand?

14 MR. CLARE: On December 12th, we'll be
15 back --

16 THE COURT: Right.

17 MR. CLARE: -- to argue our motion to
18 dismiss, and it's our view that the substantive
19 law of the State of New York applies to their
20 claims.

21 THE COURT: Right, but how is -- I'm sorry.
22 I thought I understood you to say that potentially
23 the settlement agreement between Coleman and
24 Arthur Andersen will have some bearing on the
25 choice of law to be applied in this case.

00010

1 MR. CLARE: I may have misspoken.

2 THE COURT: Maybe I misunderstood it.

3 MR. CLARE: We're not a party to that
4 agreement, so obviously, it doesn't bear directly
5 on it, but I do think it is relevant to their
6 expectation that events giving rise to this
7 controversy arising out of the Sunbeam transaction
8 will be governed at least in part by New York law.

9 So that's an additional reason why we think
10 it's relevant. But the primary reasons are the
11 setoff, the damages claims, we're going to need
12 our experts to prepare damages reports at some
13 point to submit our expert testimony on damages
14 and also to evaluate our position, our potential
15 liability exposure. Without knowing what the
16 setoff is, it's impossible for my client to --

17 THE COURT: So are you saying the only part
18 of the agreement you need access to is the dollar
19 amount?

20 MR. CLARE: No, actually, that's not correct.
21 Under the City of Homestead case, the Court said
22 the amount and the terms need to be disclosed.

23 I can't conjure up all of the reasons why it
24 might be relevant. Those are the reasons that
25 I've identified here. There may be a denial of

00011

1 liability by Arthur Andersen. There may be an
2 admission of liability by Arthur Andersen. There
3 may be a release of claims coming back the other
4 direction against Coleman Parent. I just don't
5 have any idea without seeing the agreement to
6 understand the relevance of it. And that's why
7 the procedures that Mr. Scarola has suggested,
8 which is to delay and defer production of this
9 settlement agreement until later in the case, is
10 not appropriate, nor is an in camera inspection to
11 review, because having access to the discovery,
12 wanting to take the depositions of Arthur Andersen
13 people, there's no way that we can tell from an in
14 camera review or by delaying months and months
15 until trial whether we'll be able to effectively
16 cross examine witnesses during depositions and the 17 like.

18 It would be a different case if they had not
19 identified Arthur Andersen as critical to the
20 establishment of their case.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Let me see what
22 plaintiff's position is. Thank you.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
24 Jack Scarola on behalf of Coleman Parent Holdings
25 Company.

1 If I may, let me present both the defense and
2 the Court with copies of some highlighted cases
3 that I would like to discuss, Your Honor, in the
4 course of our presentation.

5 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Let me begin, Your Honor, by
7 acknowledging that as the defendants themselves
8 have stated, Rule 1.280(b)(1) permits discovery of
9 all relevant evidence; that is, evidence relevant
10 to the subject matter of the case, but that
11 evidence must also be either admissible or
12 reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of 13 admissible evidence. And we must concede that the 14 principal case relied upon by the defense, the
15 City of Homestead, would require Your Honor to
16 compel disclosure of the amount of this
17 settlement.

18 There is language in the City of Homestead

19 case that has been accurately quoted in the
20 defendant's brief, and it is that the settlement
21 terms and amount must be disclosed.

22 But if Your Honor takes a look at that
23 opinion, and we're going to go through it together
24 if you'll indulge me for just a moment, you'll
25 find that the reference to terms is pure dicta.

00013

1 This is a case involving the wrongful death
2 of a seven-year-old, and there were two defendants
3 named in the lawsuit; an entity called
4 Meda-Therapy Institute and the City of Homestead.
5 The case, while pending, was settled with
6 Meda-Therapy Institute and proceeded against the
7 city. There was a confidential settlement
8 agreement -- excuse me. There was a settlement
9 agreement that was entered into, and the city,
10 according to the opinion, and this appears under
11 headnote 1, the last sentence in the paragraph,
12 quote, the city filed a motion to compel
13 disclosure of the settlement amount. The Court
14 denied the motion.

15 The opinion then goes on to say, the motion
16 to compel should have been granted, the settlement
17 terms and amount must be disclosed.

18 There was never even, according to the
19 opinion, a request for the terms, there was a
20 request for the amount. And the rationale in the 21 opinion was that the amount may be relevant to
22 setoff and the remaining defendant was entitled to
23 know what that amount was for that reason.

24 So the only issue before the Court was
25 whether the amount should be disclosed. There is

00014

1 no reference to any confidentiality provisions in
2 the settlement agreement, so the case is
3 distinguishable from the standpoint that there was
4 no contractual obligation imposed upon any party,
5 at least based upon the opinion, to keep the terms
6 of the settlement confidential.

7 And the Court also observed that a factor
8 that was taken into consideration in this case was
9 that the defendant seeking this discovery was a
10 public entity, and the Court found that to be a
11 relevant factor. In the last sentence of the
12 opinion, the Court says, the case for disclosure
13 is especially strong, whereas here the plaintiffs
14 are suing a public entity.

15 The precedent upon which this case is based,
16 the one cited authority is the case of Smith vs.
17 TIB Bank of The Keys, another Third DCA opinion.
18 And in that case, a plaintiff was seeking
19 certiorari review of an order compelling answers
20 during the course of a deposition. The plaintiff

21 had been involved in a prior unrelated lawsuit
22 arising out of the plaintiff's employment with an
23 entirely separate entity, and the plaintiff
24 settled that unrelated claim and entered into a
25 settlement agreement that did have contractual

00015

1 requirements that the terms of the settlement
2 remain confidential.

3 When the questions were asked during
4 deposition, the plaintiff declined to answer those
5 on the basis that answering the questions would
6 place the plaintiff in violation of the
7 confidentiality provisions in the earlier order.

8 The trial court entered an order which
9 recognized the obligation for the plaintiff to
10 decline to answer questions that were within the
11 scope of the confidentiality provision of the
12 order, and the trial court fashioned an order that
13 was expressly designed to give maximum effect to
14 the rights of privacy that arose out of the 15 confidentiality provision and at the same time
16 provide the defendant seeking the discovery with
17 relevant and material information.

18 So the Court basically said you must answer
19 these questions, you are within your rights to
20 decline to answer questions that fall within the
21 scope of the confidentiality provision.

22 And if you take a look at the opinion, you
23 will see that the Court has weighed the right of
24 privacy and the expectation of privacy arising out
25 of the confidentiality provisions in the

00016

1 settlement agreement and balanced those against
2 the rights for discovery, which we think is what
3 appropriately must be done.

4 We have also provided the Court with a Fourth
5 DCA case that recognizes a general principal that
6 materials sought to be discovered must properly be
7 related to the issues involved in the litigation.
8 That's a case that has been cited in our brief and
9 recognizes the fact that Rule 1.280(b)(1) is not
10 to be used simply for gathering information
11 regarding settlement possibilities.

12 And we have given the Court two federal cases
13 that interpret the identical provisions in the
14 federal rules and weigh the privacy rights against
15 the rights to disclosure and approve a procedure
16 whereby the Court has conducted an in camera
17 inspection to make a determination as to whether
18 any provisions in the settlement agreement must be
19 disclosed because they have the possibility of 20 providing grounds for impeachment of the settling
21 party.

22 We think that that's the appropriate

23 procedure for the Court to follow under these
24 circumstances.

25 There have been a number of arguments that

00017

1 have been made as to potential reasons for the
2 disclosure of information contained within the
3 settlement agreement. Those are contained within
4 the reply memo that Your Honor has not yet had an
5 opportunity to see, but if you turn to page 6,
6 there are individual bullet points that catalog
7 the bases --

8 THE COURT: I'm sorry, this is contained
9 where?

10 MR. SCAROLA: In the reply memo that was 11 filed by defendants. I'll just give Your Honor my 12 copy.

13 There are various bullet points at the top
14 that talk about things that reasonably might
15 appear within a settlement agreement and might
16 provide a basis for some argument that portions of
17 the settlement agreement are relevant or material.

18 We are prepared to provide the settlement
19 agreement to Your Honor for in camera inspection.
20 I have it with me today. It's relatively brief,
21 and you can look at it quickly. You're going to
22 find, to corroborate the representations we have
23 already made to the Court, there are no
24 cooperation provisions in the agreement, there are
25 no provisions that require Arthur Andersen to

00018

1 produce witnesses in a particular forum.

2 THE COURT: How many pages is it?

3 MR. SCAROLA: It's about four or five.

4 THE COURT: Any objection to my looking at it
5 now?

6 MR. CLARE: No, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 It's more than four or five.

9 MR. IANNO: Even with my eyes, Your Honor, it
10 looks single spaced.

11 THE COURT: I saw that.

12 MR. SCAROLA: It is single spaced.

13 I tried to tab the paragraphs that I thought
14 might be of particular concern to the Court, and 15 some of it you'll be able to see just by the 16 nature of the subject matter dealt with in the 17 paragraph.

18 THE COURT: Can you give me just one second
19 to look at it?

20 MR. SCAROLA: Sure.

21 THE COURT: Because I want to get a sense of 22 what we're talking about.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.

24 Your Honor, may I interrupt for just one

25 moment?

1 THE COURT: Sure.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I would appreciate if Your
3 Honor would order me to produce that for in camera
4 inspection.

5 THE COURT: Oh, yes, I just did. I'm sorry.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. I thought that's
7 what you were doing.

8 THE COURT: That's what I was doing.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: To conclude, Your Honor, in
12 addition to those items that are listed in the
13 reply memo, there has, for the first time, been a
14 suggestion that if there were a choice of forum
15 provision contained within that agreement, that it
16 might have some relevance to the issues with
17 respect to forum non conveniens, and I think
18 Your Honor will see from a review of the document
19 that there is no stipulation with regard to an
20 appropriate forum for litigation concerning that
21 agreement.

22 So I think that upon review of the document,
23 there is only one provision in the document that
24 has any relevance or materiality with respect to 25 this litigation, and that is the issue of the

00020

1 amount of the settlement which relates solely to
2 the issue of setoff, and upon court order, we are
3 prepared to make a confidential disclosure of the
4 amount of that settlement under the terms of the
5 confidentiality agreement previously entered. We
6 would designate that as confidential information
7 in order to restrict its proper use to this case
8 and make the disclosure with regard to that
9 amount.

10 THE COURT: Any objection to my making a
11 photocopy of it?

12 MR. SCAROLA: No, not at all.

13 THE COURT: Thanks.

14 Was the settlement consummated?

15 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Under its terms?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 Do you accept that representation?

20 MR. CLARE: That it was consummated under its 21 terms?

22 THE COURT: Yeah.

23 MR. CLARE: I don't have any reason to
24 believe or not believe that that's incorrect.

25 I would say that this is a non-privileged

00021

1 contract that's no different than any other
2 contract, that I'd like the opportunity to examine
3 the document to understand and pressure test the
4 assertions that Mr. Scarola has made about the
5 document, the nuances associated with it that I
6 would like to explore.

7 And, you know, the Florida courts --

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry, before there's a
9 rebuttal --

10 THE COURT: I'm sorry, you weren't done.

11 MR. SCAROLA: There's just one last point
12 that I want to make.

13 THE COURT: Sure.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And that is that Florida does
15 have a constitutionally-recognized right to
16 privacy. This is private economic information.
17 There must be a balancing test between that right
18 to privacy and the defendant's rights in this
19 lawsuit, and that right to privacy needs to be
20 taken into careful consideration before any other
21 terms of this agreement were to be disclosed. And
22 I suggest that upon reading the agreement, it is
23 abundantly clear that none of the stated purposes
24 for which this discovery is sought would be served
25 by the disclosure of any other provision in that

00022

1 document at all.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

4 THE COURT: What did you want to respond,
5 sir?

6 MR. CLARE: Just on that last point, Your
7 Honor, there's --

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm sorry. Just one last
9 thing.

10 Mr. Jackson has been rehearsing all day long
11 to be able to say with credibility I agree with 12 everything Mr. Scarola just said, so could we just 13 give him the opportunity to do that on behalf of 14 Arthur Andersen?

15 MR. JACKSON: Your Honor, Hank Jackson on
16 behalf of Arthur Andersen.

17 THE COURT: Okay. I'm glad to know that
18 you're here. I didn't realize you were here for
19 Arthur Andersen.

20 MR. JACKSON: I'm from Holland & Knight.
21 We represented Arthur Andersen in the previous
22 lawsuit and were part of the settlement
23 negotiations and the settlement.

24 I'd just like to reiterate that the
25 confidentiality provision was a material term of

00023

1 that agreement, and we believe that to the extent
2 permissible by law, that it should be enforced,

3 and it should only be breached or allowed to come
4 out in the open to the extent that it is clearly
5 established that it is relevant. And we believe
6 that the proper procedure is for the Court to look
7 at it in camera and to make that judgment, and
8 we'd ask that you do that.

9 THE COURT: What did you want to respond,
10 sir?

11 MR. CLARE: On Mr. Scarola's final point,
12 with the Court's permission, I'll hand to counsel
13 and to Your Honor just some citations to Florida
14 cases that are all cited in our brief that make
15 the point that a contractual confidentiality
16 provision cannot be used to subvert discovery.

17 There's a protective order in this case. We
18 will agree to be bound by the full extent of the
19 confidentiality order in terms of disclosing it.
20 We will go one step further and agree to make it
21 attorney's eyes only with the proviso that I be
22 able to show it to a limited number of in-house
23 attorneys at Morgan Stanley for the purposes of
24 evaluating it for the purposes that I've
25 identified for Your Honor.

00024

1 So with the confidentiality order, the
2 balancing test that Mr. Scarola has already
3 identified has already been done. Those privacy
4 considerations that Arthur Andersen is worried
5 about about disclosure, nothing's going to be in
6 the open. This is all going to be treated as the
7 highest degree of confidentiality under the
8 protective order that Your Honor has already
9 signed, and we agree and are willing to accept
10 those restrictions on our use of it.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Let me take another
12 advisement, okay?

13 Thank you very much.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, there is one
15 additional brief matter, if we could impose upon
16 the Court. We had actually set it for an 8:45
17 hearing this morning, and because of Your Honor's
18 crowded calendar, we hoped that we might just
19 bring it to you this afternoon.

20 THE COURT: Sure. What is that?

21 You can take this back, sir. Thanks.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, it relates to the
23 exchange of correspondence with which we barraged
24 you concerning the entry of an order --

25 THE COURT: Oh, yeah. Okay.

00025

1 MR. SCAROLA: -- arising out of a stipulated
2 agreement between the parties.

3 If I could hand Your Honor the transcript of
4 the earlier hearing.

5 THE COURT: Okay. Is it your position there
6 was a stipulation?

7 MR. SCAROLA: It is absolutely my position
8 that there was an on-the-record stipulation, yes,
9 Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: This is the motion for entry of 12 an order upon stipulation of the parties, and I'll
13 pull Your Honor's attention to those specific and
14 brief provisions that indicate that there was
15 indeed a stipulation.

16 If we begin at page 2, I am addressing the
17 Court at line 13, "We have come to an agreement,
18 specifically with regard to the motion to compel
19 production of e-mails."

20 Going down to line 18, "For the record, my 21 name is Jack Scarola. I'm here on behalf of the 22 plaintiff, Coleman Parent Holdings. There are two
23 motions. The first is a motion to compel directed
24 to the production of e-mails. The agreement that
25 we have reached is that the defendant, Morgan

00026

1 Stanley, will produce a witness who is
2 knowledgeable with respect to the retention and
3 retrieval -- the retention policies and retrieval
4 capabilities with regard to e-mails. They will
5 also produce all documents that were submitted to
6 federal regulators with regard to Morgan Stanley's
7 e-mail retention policies and retrieval
8 capabilities."

9 Morgan Stanley was sued by government
10 regulators and paid in excess of a million dollars
11 for violating document retention policies, and we
12 wanted to get the documents that the federal
13 government obtained in connection with that
14 proceeding. So there's an agreement that they're
15 going to produce a witness.

17 page 5.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Mr. Clare is speaking.

20 Mr. Clare addresses the Court at line 14. He
21 says, beginning at line 12, "Just in the interest
22 of completeness and while we're waiting for the
23 schedule," because there was another motion we
24 were discussing, "Mr. Scarola described in broad
25 outlines what the agreed-upon order would be on

00027

1 this other motion. There is one caveat I
2 explained to Mr. Scarola in the hallway, and we
3 will work it out between the parties before we
4 submit an agreed-upon order to Your Honor. I am
5 not aware as I sit here right now what limitations
6 there are right now without disclosing to

7 Mr. Scarola's client information we provided to
8 federal regulators."

9 And I think that "without" is supposed to be
10 "about" disclosing, "there are right now about
11 disclosing."

12 THE COURT: You're saying if there were
13 regulations in place that would prohibit them from
14 disclosing them.

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's right.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. SCAROLA: What Mr. Clare is saying is
18 there may be some restrictions and I don't know
19 what they are and I need --

20 THE COURT: We may not be able to do some of
21 this stuff.

22 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct. So he is
23 saying that.

24 He says, "We agreed to provide whatever it is 25 we can provide."

00028

1 Okay? So he's saying, whatever documents
2 we're allowed to provide, we'll give to you.

3 He then goes on to say at line 6 on page 6,
4 "I know there are materials we can provide, I just
5 don't know the scope of it."

6 I then speak, and I say, "The only caveat to
7 that is that there's a commitment that they will
8 provide good faith cooperation in obtaining
9 whatever information is necessary in order to make
10 full disclosure."

11 And Mr. Clare says, "That's correct."

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. SCAROLA: Now, that was the agreement.
14 We're going to both provide witnesses that are
15 going to talk about e-mail retention procedures
16 and capabilities, and the second part is, they're
17 going to give us everything that they gave to the 18 federal government except to the extent that they
19 are prohibited from doing so. And if there are 20 prohibitions, they are going to provide good faith
21 cooperation in an effort to try to give us full
22 disclosure.

23 That's the order that I submitted to the
24 Court, and there has been an effort now to recede
25 from that agreement and to change it.

00029

1 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of your
2 proposed order?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, I do.
4 I provided the Court separately the original --

5 THE COURT: It's attached? Oh, this is it.
6 Okay.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Did I give it to Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: I assume so. Yeah. It's

9 attached to the transcript.
10 MR. SCAROLA: That's the one, yes.
11 THE COURT: Okay. That's fine. Let me just
12 look at it.
13 MR. SCAROLA: Sure.
14 THE COURT: Okay. And what's the objection?
15 MR. IANNO: Judge, Joe Ianno. This dispute
16 centers around one thing.
17 THE COURT: What's that?
18 MR. IANNO: The submission that Mr. Scarola
19 wants that was provided to the federal regulators
20 is right now the subject of a motion pending in
21 the Federal Court in the Southern District to
22 prevent its disclosure. By providing it to
23 Mr. Scarola, we would be violating or mooted that
24 motion that was filed by a co-defendant in that
25 case.

00030

1 What we've told Mr. Scarola --
2 THE COURT: I'm sorry, tell me a little bit
3 more about what you're saying.
4 MR. IANNO: Okay. There is a motion right
5 now that is pending, an action in the Federal
6 District that we've cited in our response. It's
7 entitled --
8 THE COURT: I don't have your response. If
9 you have it, that would be great.
10 MR. IANNO: I do. Here's a copy of our
11 response, Your Honor.
12 THE COURT: Thank you. Okay.
13 MR. IANNO: And we've attached a proposed
14 alternate order to our response. And the case in
15 the federal court is styled In Re: Initial Public
16 Offering Securities Litigation, it's pending in
17 the Southern District of New York in Federal
18 Court. That motion is directed -- it's filed by a
19 co-defendant of Morgan Stanley's in that case --
20 to prevent the disclosure of what is called the
21 Wells Submission, which is the document that
22 Mr. Scarola is attempting to get.
23 THE COURT: I'm sorry, who is trying to
24 prevent the disclosure of this?
25 MR. IANNO: A co-defendant. There is another

00031

1 underwriting defendant.
2 THE COURT: A private party?
3 MR. IANNO: Another private party. They're
4 saying that this document is prohibited from
5 disclosure because it's settlement discussions.
6 It's the negotiations leading up to the settlement
7 with the SEC, and they're saying that settlement
8 discussions, not the final agreement, but the
9 settlement discussions leading up to the SEC
10 settlement are prohibited from being disclosed in

11 discovery.

12 That motion, to my understanding, has been
13 fully briefed and is awaiting ruling by Judge
14 Scheindlin in New York.

15 THE COURT: These are documents that your
16 client provided?

17 MR. IANNO: To the SEC, I believe that's
18 correct, yes, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. IANNO: And this underwriting defendant,
21 co-defendant, is saying these documents are not
22 discoverable in the federal court. We're
23 waiting --

24 THE COURT: Were they documents drafted for
25 the SEC or just documents provided to the SEC?

00032

1 MR. IANNO: They were drafted for the SEC in
2 connection with the settlement discussions of the
3 SEC action that Mr. Scarola referenced in his
4 argument.

5 THE COURT: These are e-mails?

6 MR. IANNO: No. It's a document describing
7 Morgan Stanley's e-mail retrieval and retention.

8 THE COURT: Oh, I see.

9 MR. IANNO: It's discussing how e-mails are
10 stored, how they're backed up, how they're
11 retrieved, things of that nature. It's about a
12 40 or 50-page document is my understanding of that
13 document. And it's submitted in connection with
14 the SEC claims against Morgan Stanley and other
15 defendants, as I understand that.

16 What Mr. Clare said when we were here on
17 November 6th, and it's reflected in the
18 transcript, is he did not know, and he's here to
19 speak to that, but what was our ability to waive
20 at the time. And what Mr. Scarola didn't read
21 from the transcript is when Mr. Clare was here on
22 page 6 --

23 THE COURT: Let me get to that. Okay. What
24 line?

25 MR. IANNO: It's line 8. And it's where

00033

1 Mr. Scarola stopped. "And I don't want to
2 represent to the Court that we're waiving or even
3 have the ability to waive protections that I'm not
4 aware of right now."

5 Specifically, this case came up after we went
6 back and consulted with the client. If you look
7 just above that on line 4, Mr. Clare says he
8 doesn't know all the details without consulting
9 the client.

10 What we had agreed to do on November 6th is 11 go back and draft a proposed agreed order. That's 12 reflected back on page 2, I believe, where the

13 Court asks you, you expect me to remember this
14 when you submit a proposed agreed order. That's
15 what we were talking about.

16 What we've told Mr. Scarola repeatedly and
17 what we've said in our proposed order, once the
18 judge rules in New York, if we're permitted to
19 disclose it, we'll give it to you within five
20 days. That's the only dispute.

21 If the judge rules that it's not
22 discoverable, we can't produce it in this case
23 without violating that court order. And what
24 Mr. Scarola wants us to do, he says, well, I want
25 you to go in and waive that protection and waive

00034

1 the judge's ruling, because if the judge has ruled
2 today --

3 THE COURT: He's saying you already did.
4 Is that right?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.

6 MR. IANNO: But Mr. Clare when he was here
7 specifically told the Court, and we knew, and the
8 Court recognized indeed that there may be other
9 problems with the disclosure of this document.

10 THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this.

11 The way I read that transcript, you-all were
12 agreeing that unless some federal regulation
13 prohibits the disclosure, you'll make it, and if
14 it does, you'll apply, you know, to permit a
15 disclosure.

16 MR. IANNO: And we've waived confidentiality.
17 We have done the good faith cooperation and waived
18 the confidentiality. The only thing we can't
19 waive is this federal court proceeding at this
20 time.

21 THE COURT: Why not?

22 MR. IANNO: Because there's a --

23 THE COURT: Because you don't want to, or
24 because there's something else going on?

25 MR. IANNO: It's another defendant that

00035

1 brought the motion, Judge. We would be mooting
2 the co-defendant's motion at that point in time.
3 All the details, I'm not a party, I'm not a member
4 of the Bar in New York, I don't know all the
5 details going on in the New York case and why or
6 why not this document is being prohibited from
7 disclosure.

8 But, for instance, if this court rules that
9 we should disclose the Wells Submission to Scarola
10 and at the same time the federal court has ruled
11 that it can't be disclosed --

12 THE COURT: Can't be disclosed to whom?

13 MR. IANNO: To anyone.

14 As I understand the motion in New York, it's

15 to prohibit disclosure of this document in 16 discovery.

17 THE COURT: Well, but that's different than
18 saying it can't be disclosed to a non-party.

19 MR. IANNO: Well, I think it's saying you
20 can't disclose this document to anyone.

21 MR. CLARE: Your Honor --

22 MR. IANNO: And maybe Mr. Clare --

23 MR. CLARE: I only have a little bit better
24 of an understanding of this, because I'm also not
25 a party to this New York action.

1 The submission -- The basic gist of the
2 motion is to interpret the Wells Process in
3 dealing with the SEC. The SEC issues a notice
4 that says this group of people, underwriters, are
5 potentially liable for such and such, and in order
6 to settle those claims, we invite all of the
7 potential targets of this investigation to come
8 and make submissions.

9 THE COURT: Right. And this is the
10 submission that you-all made?

11 MR. CLARE: This is one of the submissions
12 that we and --

13 THE COURT: And at the time you made the
14 submission, for instance, would it have prohibited
15 your publishing it in the paper?

16 MR. CLARE: It was requested to be treated
17 under the Wells Submission Process as confidential
18 by the SEC and was not disclosed to anybody else.
19 So yes, Your Honor, absolutely.

20 THE COURT: What would have prohibited your
21 disclosing it to a third party at the time you
22 made it?

23 MR. CLARE: What would have prohibited us
24 from disclosing it to a third party? In order for 25 us to get the benefit of the confidentiality that

00037

1 we had requested in the Wells Process, which is an
2 enforcement action, that we had to maintain its
3 confidentiality.

4 THE COURT: As against whom; the world?

5 MR. CLARE: As against the world, sure.

6 And if we had produced it to the New York
7 Times or provided it to third parties, then we
8 were waiving this protection, this Wells
9 Regulatory Process that we had in place.

10 And so we're willing to waive that. Morgan
11 Stanley has said, for the good of this agreement,
12 we are more than happy to waive that request. The
13 only thing -- There's this judicial proceeding
14 that is determining what is this Wells Process
15 about. It is exactly the federal regulatory
16 enforcement process that's being interpreted by

17 Judge Scheindlin in New York, what is the Wells
18 Process.

19 When you get to a certain stage in the Wells
20 Process and the parties are contemplating a
21 settlement, do materials that are exchanged
22 between the SEC and the potential targets of an
23 investigation, do they take on the conduct of
24 settlement negotiations such that they're not
25 discoverable by third parties? That is the issue

00038

1 that's being --

2 THE COURT: What do you mean they're not
3 discoverable by third parties? If I enter into a
4 settlement agreement, while there may be limits or
5 there may be privileges attached as to what gets
6 said in the settlement, nothing prohibits me in
7 general from going and telling everybody else what
8 happened.

9 MR. CLARE: And the Wells Process, in order
10 to maintain that confidentiality, which is a
11 confidentiality in the Wells Process that
12 implicates enforcement considerations that it
13 might get us crosswise with the SEC if we were to
14 disclose during settlement discussions with the
15 SEC, if we were to go out and say here's what
16 we're talking about the SEC, here's the
17 enforcement proceedings that's underway, here's
18 what they're looking at, that would get my client
19 potentially crosswise with the SEC.

20 So there's a lot of issues at stake with the
21 integrity of the Wells Process.

22 THE COURT: But the SEC is not saying you
23 can't disclose this?

24 MR. CLARE: The SEC is not a party to the
25 pending action in New York.

00039

1 THE COURT: So there's no agency saying you
2 can't disclose this; you just don't want to do it
3 because --

4 MR. CLARE: Because at the time we entered
5 into this broad -- again, broad outlines of this
6 agreement, and I expressly said to Your Honor that
7 I don't want to be representing to the Court that
8 I'm waiving any protection, and there's no
9 discussion here about regulations or
10 confidentiality restriction, there's no discussion
11 of that. I said, I'm not waiving anything that I
12 don't know what exists.

13 I went back and I consulted with the client,
14 checked with the outside counsel that was handling
15 this and he said this is the subject of a pending
16 discovery motion.

17 THE COURT: What's the response?

18 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, Mr. Clare says he's

19 not the attorney involved in the New York
20 proceeding, but it's my understanding that it's
21 Mr. Clare's law firm that represents the same
22 parties in the New York proceeding.

23 I also understand that the entity that is
24 filing this motion attempting to obtain an order
25 that would restrict disclosure is an entity that

00040

1 is somehow related to Morgan Stanley. It's a
2 Morgan Stanley subsidiary or affiliate.

3 Now, they can't come before Your Honor and
4 say we're going to provide you with good faith
5 cooperation to get all these documents while at
6 the same time through a subsidiary they're trying
7 to get a New York court to enter an order that
8 would prohibit us from getting the documents.

9 And the bottom line is, this proposed order
10 asks them to do nothing that would violate any
11 existing obligation of confidentiality, but if
12 there is no existing obligation of
13 confidentiality, they're required to turn over
14 everything that they have the authority to turn
15 over. If the authority exists today to turn it
16 over, we should get it. If it doesn't exist
17 today, we can't get it, but they're required to 18 provide good faith cooperation in helping us to 19 get it.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: That's all that we're asking.
22 That's what they agreed to.

23 THE COURT: Let me take another advisement.
24 It's his motion, he goes first and last.

25 MR. IANNO: I have an alternative order,

00041

1 Your Honor, on that motion.

2 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor. I
4 appreciate your extra time this afternoon. Happy
5 Thanksgiving.

6 MR. IANNO: And hopefully, this is your last
7 hearing before the holiday.

8 THE COURT: It is now.

9 Thanks. Thanks. Bye-bye.

10 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Judge.

In accordance with this Court's Order of December 1, 2003 denying enforcement of the stipulation of the parties concerning production of emails, but specifically permitting Plaintiff to renew its Motion to Compel, and pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.380(a)(1), Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully requests that the Court direct Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley"): (1) to produce all materials submitted to regulators, received from regulators, or reflecting communications with regulators, in connection with any investigation of Morgan Stanley's e-mail retention policy; (2) to cooperate in good faith with CPH to obtain all such materials, to the extent that there are any restrictions imposed by regulators that might limit the right of Morgan Stanley to make full disclosure; and (3) to provide, within 15 days of the foregoing production, a corporate representative to testify pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.310 concerning Morgan Stanley's e-mail retention policies, practices, and procedures, and concerning Morgan Stanley's ability (including the procedures, time, labor, and expense involved) to retrieve e-mails. In support of this motion, CPH states as follows:

1. This motion has been necessitated by Morgan Stanley's failure to produce e-mail messages responsive to CPH's document requests. In the more than 80,000 pages of documents

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley
Case No 2003 CA 005045 AI

produced by Morgan Stanley, so far, CPH has been able to locate only a small handful of e-mails.

2. It is a matter of public record that Morgan Stanley, as a regulated entity, was fined heavily by federal regulators for failing to retain e-mails in the form and for the amount of time required by federal law. Until January 2001, pursuant to Morgan Stanley's internal policy of scrubbing its files, Morgan Stanley retained back up for e-mail messages for only one year, even though Morgan Stanley had a legal obligation to maintain e-mails in a readily accessible manner for a period of three years. As a result of Morgan Stanley's e-mail scrubbing policy, Morgan Stanley was the target of an investigation by the SEC, NASD, and the New York Stock Exchange. In late 2002, Morgan Stanley paid a $1.65 million fine and began retaining e-mails on optical discs for three years. See Exh. A, 12/5/02 SEC Order, Findings, and Penalties.

3. Despite Morgan Stanley's internal policy of purging its files of e-mails in the period prior to January 2001 — a policy that was contrary to federal law — Morgan Stanley started saving documents relevant to the litigation involving the Sunbeam fraud beginning in February 1999. But as for e-mails, Morgan Stanley so far has produced precious few — even though Morgan Stanley admittedly may still have e-mails preserved on magnetic tape, hard drives, or other forms of back up. Morgan Stanley, however, has not searched any of those back-up sources.^{1/}

^{1/} The facts in this paragraph were confirmed by a Morgan Stanley Rule 1.310 representative at a deposition that, for some reason, Morgan Stanley designated as subject to the confidentiality provisions of the protective order entered in this case. CPH attached the relevant transcript excerpts to its original e-mail motion, and if the Court so desires, CPH can provide those excerpts again.

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley
Case No. 2003 CA 005045 AI

4. Morgan Stanley opposed production of e-mails complaining of the supposedly enormous effort that would be involved. CPH, however, should not be required to accept Morgan Stanley's assertions at face value.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff CPH respectfully requests that this Court direct Morgan Stanley: (1) to produce all materials submitted to regulators, received from regulators, or reflecting communications with regulators, in connection with any investigation of Morgan Stanley's e-mail retention policy; (2) to cooperate in good faith with CPH to obtain all such materials, to the extent that there are any restrictions imposed by regulators that might limit the right of Morgan Stanley to make full disclosure; and (3) to provide, within 15 days of the foregoing production, a corporate representative to testify pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.310 concerning Morgan Stanley's e-mail retention policies, practices, and procedures, and concerning Morgan Stanley's ability (including the procedures, time, labor, and expense involved) to retrieve e-mails.

THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat. I
4 apologize for keeping you waiting.

5

This is Coleman & Morgan and it's

6

Plaintiffs' motion to compel concerning the 7

8

MR. SCAROLA: It is, in fact, Plaintiff's

amended motion to compel concerning E-mails.

10 THE COURT: I thought it was Plaintiff's
11 motion to compel.

12 MR. IANNO: And I had the same confusion,
13 Your Honor, yesterday. And Mr. Scarola and I
14 exchanged E-mails, I don't know if we spoke on
15 the phone, but we definitely exchanged
16 E-mails. I believe that it was the original
17 motion.

18 THE COURT: Yeah, I looked at my notice of
19 hearing.

20 MR. IANNO: I have the transcript, Your
21 Honor. Apparently -- and Mr. Scarola can
22 correct me -- it's the underlying motion, but
23 the relief that's being sought is an order
24 compelling us to produce the documents that
25 were submitted to the SCC and to produce a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

0003

1 corporate representative. It's not the actual
2 production of the E-mails or testimony
3 regarding the burden, expense of going through
4 and restoring the E-mails from the magnetic
5 tapes. I believe that's what we're going to
6 argue this morning.

7 MR. SCAROLA: If I could just have a
8 moment to walk the Court through this, I think
9 it will become apparent what it is we're doing
10 here.

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. SCAROLA: This is Plaintiffs' first
13 request for production.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I would call the Court's
16 attention initially to the definition of terms,
17 paragraph 7; documents means E-mails or any
18 other electronic form of communication.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: If Your Honor will then turn
21 to Request No. 48, and you can read it faster
22 than I can read it to you.

23 THE COURT: I'll see what it says.
24 Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Forty-nine, 50 and 51.
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0004

1 THE COURT: Okay.

2 MR. SCAROLA: All right. I think there is
3 little doubt, having read through the
4 definition in those sections, that we are
5 looking for all relevant E-mails concerning
6 these issues. And Your Honor will recall the
7 presentations that were made to you last week

8 concerning the underlying allegations in this
9 complaint, that clearly a very significant
10 issue in this claim for fraud against Morgan
11 Stanley is what Morgan Stanley knew and when
12 Morgan Stanley knew it. We have a burden to 13 prove that there were knowingly false
14 misrepresentations that were made and that
15 Morgan Stanley was participating in aiding and
16 abetting conspiring with Sunbeam in its knowing
17 false misrepresentations.

18 So obviously a significant source of
19 information concerning what Morgan Stanley knew
20 would be Morgan Stanley's internal
21 communications regarding all issues relating to
22 Sunbeam. And we filed a request to produce
23 which clearly encompasses that sort of document
24 reading electronic information.

25 What we received in response was a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 substantial production that contained very,
2 very few E-mail communications. And we also
3 learned that Morgan Stanley had been sanctioned
4 by the SCC for failing to comply with Federal
5 regulations regarding the preservation,
6 specifically, of E-mail communications.

7 We noticed the deposition under Rule 1.310
8 of a corporate representative -- and if Your
9 Honor will take a look at paragraphs 2 and 3 of 10 the description of the information that we were
11 seeking -- we sought specifically, in paragraph
12 2, policies and procedures for maintaining and
13 preserving electronic or hard copy documents
14 and/or files of Morgan Stanley & Co.,
15 Incorporated and the location and/or procedure
16 for the collection of documents responsive to
17 Coleman (parents) previously served request for
18 production of documents. So we wanted to get
19 behind the production to make a determination
20 as to what efforts were made to attempt to find
21 E-mails and what potential existed for the
22 recovery of E-mails.

23 We took the deposition of the corporate
24 representative. And if Your Honor will take a
25 look at Exhibit B to the amended motion to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 compel -- do you have that handy?

2 THE COURT: I know I looked at it
3 yesterday. Whether I have it handy now, I
4 don't know.

5 MR. IANNO: Let me provide the Court with

16div-004189

6 a copy of that.

7 THE COURT: This is the transcript or a
8 portion of the transcript of the deposition?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, we provided
10 you with portions of the copy of the transcript
11 of the deposition. I don't have the exhibit
12 here. I apologize for that.

13 THE COURT: I know I read it. 126 or 127
14 something.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Let me give you my copy.

16 Following the corporate representative's
17 deposition, we communicated in writing with
18 Morgan Stanley and specifically identified
19 deficiencies in the corporate representative's
20 ability to respond within those areas
21 designated in the notice of deposition and made
22 specific transcript references to where the
23 corporate representative acknowledged his
24 inability to provide information that was
25 clearly relevant and material. We then filed

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 our initial motion to compel.

2 THE COURT: That I do have. Actually,
3 that's what I had looked at, I guess, that had
4 copies of the transcripts attached.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Well, then, Your Honor is
6 aware that what we were seeking in that motion
7 were three things.

8 First, that Morgan Stanley be compelled to
9 undertake a full investigation of the
10 information in its possession, including
11 magnetic tapes and hard drives for E-mail
12 messages responsive to Coleman (parent)
13 Holdings document request.

14 Now, once we request the documents, the
15 law imposes an obligation on them to conduct a
16 reasonable, thorough investigation within the
17 corporation to make the determination as to
18 what exists. We're simply asking the Court, at 19 that point, to compel them to do that which is 20 inherent in the obligation to respond to the
21 request to produce.

22 The second request was to produce within
23 10 days any E-mails that are located, which 24 obviously they would be obliged to do under the
25 terms of the previously served request to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 produce.

2 THE COURT: Your initial response to the
3 request to produce, did it say that there were

16div-004190

4 items within their possession, custody or
5 control that weren't produced because the cost
6 inherent in it?

7 MR. SCAROLA: That came in the very
8 substantial response they filed to the motion
9 to produce.

10 Now, at no time in this response did they
11 ever raise an issue that Coleman (parent) was 12 seeking to compel something that had not been
13 requested. Their response asserted four
14 objections. They said what we were asking in 15 our motion to compel -- and I didn't finish
16 with the third thing.

17 The third thing was to comply with their
18 obligation to produce a corporate
19 representative that had knowledge with regard
20 to these matters. What they said was that the 21 tasks we were asking be performed were overly
22 burdensome, that it was harassing, that it was
23 unlikely to lead to the discovery of admissible
24 evidence because -- well, they'll have to
25 explain that to you because I really don't

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 understand what their argument is in support of
2 that contention. But the fourth and final
3 argument they made was that Morgan Stanley was
4 somehow not entitled to this discovery because
5 Morgan Stanley had unclean hands because Morgan
6 Stanley, Sr. funded hadn't preserved all of its
7 E-mails, so it was not right for
8 Morgan Stanley -- excuse me -- that MAFCO, our
9 parent corporation, had not preserved all of
10 its E-mails.

11 Well, I hope that we don't need to deal
12 with that issue, but I want to respond to it
13 very quickly. And that is, there is a
14 difference between the obligations imposed
15 and --

16 THE COURT: Let me stop you there. To me,
17 that's -- and can you respond -- it's sort of a
18 red herring issue, because it's apples and
19 oranges. If they had some sort of destruction
20 of evidence, we can address that separately
21 when it's properly framed by the pleadings and
22 talk about the appropriate sanctions. But I
23 know what the appropriate sanction is, if I
24 don't look at the motion currently in front of
25 me and make a sanction going to that motion.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0010

1 MR. IANNO: I didn't want to interrupt Mr.

16div-004191

2 Scarola, but I don't know if we're arguing the
3 amended motion now or if we're back to the
4 original motion.

5 If we're back to the original, I have some
6 problems with arguing that to the Court today.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We're not back to the
8 original motion. Your Honor needs to
9 understand this background to understand the
10 relief that we're currently requesting.

11 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of the
12 amended motion? I thought we were doing the 13 original motion. That's the one I have a copy
14 of. Do you have an extra copy?

15 MR. IANNO: I do.

16 THE COURT: Thank you. Let me -- I'm
17 trying to figure where we're going. And I
18 apologize for interrupting your argument.

19 But realistically, are you seeking
20 anything today other than having a competent
21 corporate representative testify as to both
22 their retention policy and what efforts they
23 have made to locate this stuff and copies of
24 the documents they gave to the SCC?

25 MR. SCAROLA: No. That's all we are
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 asking for.

2 THE COURT: That's all you want?

3 MR. SCAROLA: That's all we want.

4 THE COURT: So what you're saying is sort
5 of twofold. One is, produce the corporate rep
6 like we originally asked who can answer all
7 these questions and then we can figure out if
8 your answers are taken in good faith.

9 MR. SCAROLA: That's precisely right.
10 They raised a burdensome objection and we're
11 entitled to explore that. We're not obliged to 12 accept on its face their assertion without any
13 particulars whatsoever, if it's going to take a
14 lot of time and cost us a lot of money and it's
15 not going to lead to anything productive. We
16 want sworn testimony that allows us to assess
17 those contentions. If they are right, we may 18 abandon our efforts to get E-mails. If they
19 are wrong, we have placed ourselves in a
20 position to come back before Your Honor on the 21 original motion to get them to do that which we
22 originally requested that they do.

23 THE COURT: What did you want to say in
24 support of the contention that they should
25 produce the documents produced to the SCC?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0012

1 That's the other prong of what we're looking
2 for today.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, that's correct.

4 The other prong of what we're looking at
5 is production of the documents that were sent
6 to the SCC.

7 THE COURT: First of all, can we agree you
8 guys should produce somebody who's competent to
9 testify to these matters?

10 MR. IANNO: Under a proper 1.310 notice,
11 yes. That's where we have our disagreement, is 12 the testimony that Mr. Scarola is asking for is 13 not contained with the original deposition
14 notice.

15 What we said is, let's both mutually
16 produce our corporate representatives on an
17 agreed upon list of topics for the expense, the
18 procedures for restoring back-up tapes.

19 THE COURT: I'm looking at the notice of
20 taking deposition that was served August 22nd.

21 In items 2 and 3, is it your position you
22 produced somebody competent to testify to those
23 matters?

24 MR. IANNO: Mr. Plotnick was produced on
25 September 9th.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0013

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: And he had rendered 160 pages
3 of deposition testimony on those three topics.

4 Now, if the Court -- if Mr. Scarola says
5 he didn't testify on the topics that were in
6 this deposition notice that you're looking at,
7 I think you have to look at all 160 pages to
8 see that he did testify on the policies and
9 procedures of document retention at Morgan
10 Stanley.

11 THE COURT: I thought he said he didn't
12 know anything about pre 2000.

13 MR. IANNO: You could, Your Honor, read
14 the 160 pages. But I think that the solution
15 here on this is to have an agreed upon list of 16 topics that Mr. Scarola's client and our client
17 want mutual corporate representatives to
18 testify to here. The point here is not the 19 retention policy, it's what it would take to
20 restore back-up tapes.

21 THE COURT: It's sort of a little bit of
22 both I would imagine.

23 Let me ask you this: I think the proposal
24 on the table, as I understand it, sort of mixes
25 these two things again and says, if you produce

16div-004193

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 somebody to testify about your policy, we'll
2 produce somebody to testify about our
3 policies.

4 Are you willing to accept that offer or
5 not?

6 MR. SCAROLA: We have always been willing
7 to produce a corporate representative to
8 testify about our policies. That was part of
9 the stipulation that we entered on the record
10 before the Court. We are still prepared to do
11 that, although there is no motion to require us
12 to do it. We're willing to do that. That's 13 discovery that they're entitled to.

14 The contention that we have failed to
15 identify specifically what it is we need is
16 just false. If you look at the letter of
17 September 18, we could not have been more
18 specific about the deficiencies in Mr.
19 Plotnick's deposition. We identify precisely
20 the information that we need and we identify
21 the page and line references where Mr. Plotnick
22 was unable to provide that information. I
23 don't know what more we could do than that.
24 That is our specific list of everything that we
25 need from this defendant.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: So I'm clear, are you saying
2 you will accept their stipulation and we need
3 to sit down right now and make a list of things
4 this person is going to testify to --

5 MR. IANNO: Apparently so.

6 THE COURT: -- or are we going back to the
7 motion?

8 MR. IANNO: I have the SCC filings. There
9 is a separate and totally distinct argument on
10 that.

11 THE COURT: I understand that. We're not
12 doing that now. We'll do it today. We're not
13 doing it at this moment.

14 I took your copy of the September 18
15 letter, right?

16 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. That is
17 attached as an exhibit to the amended --

18 MR. IANNO: It's attached as Exhibit C to
19 the original motion.

20 MR. SCAROLA: The original motion. So you
21 do have a copy of it.

22 THE COURT: I do have it someplace.

23 MR. SCAROLA: There are numerous letters

16div-004194

24 going back and forth between the parties. I
25 don't have all the letters that were sent by
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Morgan Stanley.

2 THE COURT: No, I don't think that we're
3 going to be able to use it as a prompt for what
4 it is we want the person to be competent to
5 testify to, right?

6 MR. SCAROLA: That's our list.

7 THE COURT: Okay. He will be right back
8 then.

9 So, if we were going to make a global
10 stipulation, it will be, I assume, somebody
11 competent to testify as to the policies and
12 procedures for maintaining, preserving
13 electronic or photocopied documents and/or
14 files of the party, right, that would be Number
15 2?

16 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

17 THE COURT: Number 3 would be the location
18 and/or procedure, the collection of documents
19 -- here's your copy back.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much.

21 THE COURT: You dictate to me the list,
22 what you want this person -- you think this
23 person should be competent to testify about.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I think we could very easily
25 simply state that the defendants shall produce
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 a corporate representative --

2 THE COURT: Well, each party.

3 MR. SCAROLA: -- each party shall produce
4 a corporate representative who can address all
5 matters identified in the letter of September
6 18, 2003, attached hereto.

7 THE COURT: But that's sort of one-sided.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm agreeing to make it
9 reciprocal.

10 THE COURT: So addressing the types of
11 issues addressed?

12 MR. IANNO: That's why we wanted a new
13 notice that said, we want a corporate
14 representative to testify about A, B, C, D, so
15 we wouldn't have this disagreement, because we
16 believe we already complied with what's in the 17 September 18th letter. We can get Mr. Clare on 18 the phone and he can address it. I haven't had
19 the time to prepare and go through line by line
20 Mr. Plotnick's deposition testimony to address
21 this specific issue. But the parties, three

16div-004195

22 months ago, exchanged correspondence. They
23 responded to these, and we said we have
24 prepared, is my understanding, and he was
25 adequately prepared.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 My understanding is, the purpose of
2 today's hearing was simply to tell -- bring a
3 corporate representative to say this is what it
4 would take to restore the E-mails to support
5 our objection, not to whether or not we
6 retained them, not whether or not the retention
7 policies were, because that's what I thought
8 Mr. Scarola was getting at.

9 We believe Mr. Plotnick already testified
10 to the three areas here. But if they want to 11 have a reciprocal witness that says it would
12 cost millions of dollars and months and months
13 of work to restore the magnetic tapes that are
14 available on back up --

15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, this is -- I'm
16 sorry.

17 MR. IANNO: -- we would produce somebody
18 like that the first two weeks of January.

19 MR. SCAROLA: This is the language
20 included in the amended motion to compel: To
21 provide within 15 days of the production that
22 we are requesting a corporate representative to
23 testify, pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil
24 Procedure 1.310, concerning Morgan Stanley's
25 E-mail retention policies, practices and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 procedures and concerning Morgan Stanley's
2 ability, including the procedures, time, labor
3 and expense involved to retrieve E-mails.

4 THE COURT: Now, can you live with that?

5 MR. IANNO: The second phrase of it, yes,
6 Your Honor, because we believe on the first
7 phrase of it, the policies and procedures, Mr.
8 Plotnick testified to that.

9 THE COURT: I can go back and look at it.
10 Maybe I'm thinking of something else. I
11 thought he was vague about what it was about
12 from '99 to 2000.

13 MR. IANNO: Well, there is a reason for
14 that. I believe it was explained and it can be 15 explained further if necessary. But the
16 deposition lasted 160 pages and the Court was
17 only provided with excerpts of it. And I think
18 if the Court -- if the Court will indulge me
19 for a minute, Mr. Scarola said he didn't

16div-004196

20 understand our relevance objection. And the
21 Court may or may not recall Mr. Scarola's
22 motion to compel on Scott Paper documents, that
23 the Court ruled on anything pre, I believe,
24 2000 should be produced, but anything post 2000
25 should not be produced.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: The problem is, there is no
3 E-mails that predate 2000. That was the basis
4 for the relevance objection. And I believe
5 somebody will testify to that on the second
6 phrase of Mr. Scarola's wherefor clause
7 concerning the ability, including the
8 procedures, time and labor expenses involved to
9 retrieve E-mails. And that will explain that.
10 I think that's what he needs to do.

11 But the point that we've always made and
12 the point I made yesterday at the Uniform
13 Motion Calendar is, there is no deposition
14 notice that asked for that second phrase.
15 We're trying to agree that we will produce a
16 corporate representative on that second phrase
17 of the wherefor clause. But to say motion to 18 compel --

19 THE COURT: Let me stop you. Give me an
20 example from the September 18th letter, for
21 instance, that you think requests information
22 that either Mr. Plotnick did provide, but was
23 not included in the ambient of the taking of 24 the deposition.

25 MR. IANNO: I would love to, but I have to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 be honest with the Court, in the 24 hours, I
2 have not had a chance to go through Mr.
3 Plotnick's deposition. As this Court knows, I
4 wasn't in the office yesterday afternoon. We
5 haven't had sufficient time to prepare a
6 response to that. But there are letters that I
7 could have sent over to the Court that respond
8 specifically to Mr. Scarola's September 18th
9 letter. That's a problem with having the
10 hearing today. I did my best to get everything
11 together on this and I just couldn't get
12 everything together in the 24 hours to put in a
13 package to the Court to show how we responded
14 to Mr. -- I guess it's Jenner & Block's
15 September 18th letter.

16 MR. SCAROLA: It really is unfair to
17 represent that they have had 24 hours to

16div-004197

18 respond to these issues. Your Honor is well
19 aware that these matters have been before the
20 Court now for a long time and there is no
21 reason to delay resolution of these issues
22 beyond today. They've had this letter
23 identifying deficiencies since September 18.
24 And the second part of the letter --

25 THE COURT: Let me ask you this --
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

2 THE COURT: -- are you -- if we pick up
3 the language from the wherefor clause of your
4 motion, asking for somebody competent to
5 testify concerning the E-mail retention
6 policies and practices and the procedures to
7 retrieve the E-mails and the costs, if they
8 produce somebody other than Plotnick, are you
9 happy? Because obviously --

10 MR. SCAROLA: I don't care who the person
11 is. It's the information that we want.

12 THE COURT: I don't know that there was an
13 obligation for him to go do some independent
14 investigation before he was deposed.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor,
16 that's exactly what the law says. When we
17 issue 30 -- a Rule 1.310 notice of deposition
18 of a corporate representative, they are
19 obliged -- the corporate representative is 20 obliged to educate himself with respect to the 21 knowledge that the corporation has. We didn't
22 notice the deposition to Mr. Plotnick.

23 THE COURT: I understand that.

24 MR. SCAROLA: And, I'm sorry, I don't have
25 that case law at hand.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: I thought they had to produce
2 the person most knowledgeable on that topic.

3 MR. SCAROLA: I hope Mr. Ianno will agree
4 to this without having to get into a legal
5 argument. The case law is very clear, that
6 there is an obligation imposed upon the
7 corporation to educate itself with respect to
8 what knowledge exists within the corporation,
9 so they are producing an individual who is
10 capable of speaking on behalf of the
11 corporation with regard to these topics to
12 disclose the full corporate knowledge on those
13 topics. And if it takes 10 people to respond,
14 they're obliged to produce as many people as 15 necessary to address those topics on the

16div-004198

16 corporation's behalf. That's the whole purpose
17 of that rule. And it is very clear from case
18 law with respect to that rule, that there is an
19 obligation to conduct a good faith
20 investigation in advance in order to be able to
21 respond on behalf of the corporation.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Do you agree with that
23 statement?

24 MR. IANNO: Briefly, Your Honor. This
25 wasn't my motion to argue. This was Mr.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Clair's motion. I'm not fully aware of all of
2 the facts. I'm not prepared -- I'm not
3 prepared. Mr. Clare was home with a 104 fever
4 yesterday.

5 With respect to the 301(b)6 notice, my
6 interpretation and understanding of the rule is
7 very consistent with Mr. Scarola's. It's not
8 the person most knowledgable. It's the
9 corporation has an obligation to produce a
10 representative to testify on these areas and
11 the noticing party takes it at their risk if
12 their areas are not specific and they're vague,
13 like they are in this case. It's subject to
14 interpretation, policies and procedures.

15 We produced a corporate representative
16 that testified as to what Morgan Stanley's
17 policies and procedures were with respect to
18 retention. He was educated.

19 THE COURT: That's where we were then.
20 What you're now telling me is that we're not
21 going to reach an agreement on this point.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I'm prepared to stipulate --

23 THE COURT: You want a stipulation that
24 they both have to produce somebody knowledgable
25 about their E-mail retention policy and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0025

1 somebody knowledgable about the cost retrieving
2 the E-mails? You're not willing to do the
3 former?

4 MR. IANNO: We're willing to produce
5 someone to support our cost and burdensome
6 objection on the first two weeks of January,
7 Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: You're not willing to do the
9 former?

10 MR. IANNO: We believe --

11 THE COURT: That's not my question. We're
12 not going to get this done in the time we
13 have. We're back to arguing the motion.

16div-004199

14 What did you want to say in support?
15 MR. SCAROLA: Are we doing it in two parts
16 still?
17 THE COURT: I think we're still on two
18 parts. I think I have your argument on part
19 one. Let them respond and we'll come back to
20 the SCC argument.
21 MR. SCAROLA: I'm happy to do that.
22 THE COURT: What did you want to say?
23 MR. IANNO: I'm not sure I can add
24 anything else.
25 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Plotnick's deposition for me?
2 MR. IANNO: I do. This is the entire
3 deposition, together with exhibits.
4 THE COURT: Thank you.
5 So it's your position that all --
6 MR. IANNO: That what is sought -- it's my
7 understanding what was sought here and what the
8 discussion has been since the Uniform Motion
9 Calendar about three weeks ago has been,
10 produce someone to testify as to the costs and
11 the expense and the time and the burden that
12 will be involved in going through the thousands
13 of magnetic back-up tapes that Morgan Stanley
14 has for a certain time period that exists, and
15 we are willing to produce that person.
16 We believe we have produced the corporate
17 representative that was appropriately
18 identified in the corporate representative
19 deposition topics 1 through 3 of the 310(b)6
20 deposition notice.
21 As I explained to the Court, I did my best
22 to get fully up to speed on this issue.
23 Unfortunately, I did not have the time to go
24 through Mr. Plotnick's entire deposition last
25 night. I downloaded it to go through that. I
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 could send over to the Court this afternoon our
2 response letters that go through in detail what
3 Mr. Plotnick testified to, but it was my
4 understanding what we were going to argue today
5 was simply whether or not we would produce the
6 corporate representative on the E-mail burden.
7 And the other thing, Your Honor, is, Mr.
8 Scarola's client waited three months, the
9 September 18 letter, before they brought this
10 to the Court's attention and we had to wait
11 months for our motion to dismiss hearing. If

16div-004200

12 we could have some additional time, I'm sure
13 Mr. Clare will be fully prepared to address
14 each and every one of the questions the Court
15 has requested of Mr. Plotnick's deposition that
16 I'm not able to do.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Let's do the SCC
18 documents.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

20 I have called the Court's attention to the 21 broad scope of our request to produce, the
22 specific paragraphs in that prior request that
23 impose a burden to produce all communications
24 regarding E-mails, as well as all E-mails,
25 specifically communications with the SCC are
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 referenced. And the only objection that we
2 have had to the production of the SCC documents
3 has been that an order may be entered in
4 response to somebody's motion in a New York
5 court that might preclude the disclosure of
6 these documents at sometime in the future.

7 Our efforts to determine who filed the
8 motion, what the motion is seeking to do, have
9 been ignored. They don't chose to tell us.

10 And the potential for some court sometime in
11 the future to restrict the Defendant's ability
12 to make disclosure sometime in the future ought
13 not in any way to impact upon this Court's
14 ordering production of that which has been
15 requested in the past.

16 So as we stand right now, there is no
17 assertion of any inability to produce documents
18 that have been requested. And, again, all we
19 are seeking is predicate information to
20 determine the validity of the objections that
21 have been raised.

22 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of what
23 their response was on this issue?

24 MR. SCAROLA: The only response on this
25 issue has been the response that was filed to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 our original motion to compel, which alleges
2 that this is burdensome, harassing and not
3 likely to lead to the discovery of admissible
4 evidence.

5 THE COURT: So how do you --

6 MR. SCAROLA: The argument about the New
7 York --

8 THE COURT: Right.

9 MR. SCAROLA: -- the New York court,

16div-004201

10 that's argument that was made before Your Honor
11 in open court. That's never been reduced to
12 writing. No, that's simply the verbal
13 representations made to Your Honor in response
14 to -- in the context of our motion to enforce
15 the in-court stipulation. You remember --

16 THE COURT: Right.

17 MR. SCAROLA: -- that's a piece I left out
18 in the middle. But in the middle of all of 19 this, we thought we had an agreement. We
20 obviously, in the Court's opinion, didn't have
21 an agreement.

22 But during the course of those arguments,
23 they told Your Honor, we don't want you to
24 order us to do this yet because a New York
25 court may sometime enter a response to some

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

0030

1 motion, which they couldn't tell us anything
2 about and refuse to tell us anything about.

3 THE COURT: So I'm clear, what we're
4 talking about doesn't have anything to do with
5 E-mail retention policies or anything else?

6 MR. SCAROLA: No. It specifically relates
7 to E-mail retention policies.

8 THE COURT: The action before the SCC on
9 that point, we're not talking about trying to
10 discover E-mails, we're trying to get hard
11 copies, presumably, of documents provided to
12 the SCC?

13 MR. SCAROLA: Regarding E-mail retention
14 policies and E-mail destruction, so that we can
15 find out what is in fact available and how
16 readily available it is or is not, at least
17 according to what they told the SCC, correct.

18 THE COURT: And where in any response --
19 how did Morgan Stanley place the Plaintiff on 20 notice that these documents were retained and
21 not produced?

22 MR. IANNO: Well, that's the heart of this
23 matter, Your Honor. It's not that they were
24 not produced, it's that they were not
25 responsive. They were only offered to the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 Plaintiff as a possible resolution to the
2 motion to compel.

3 I can walk the Court through why this
4 document is not responsive.

5 THE COURT: You're telling me it's not
6 included in the Plaintiffs' first request for
7 production?

16div-004202

8 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely not.
9 THE COURT: Tell me why not.
10 MR. SCAROLA: This is a document that was
11 produced by attorneys.
12 THE COURT: Is it a single document?
13 MR. IANNO: Yes, produced in response to
14 the SCC by attorneys. It is not a Morgan
15 Stanley policy. It is not a Morgan Stanley
16 procedure. It is more akin to a pleading that 17 was produced -- and this is the key point, Your
18 Honor, that Mr. Scarola omitted from his
19 argument -- that it is produced in a separate
20 IPO allocation proceeding. It has absolutely
21 nothing to do with Sunbeam. It has absolutely
22 nothing to do with the facts of this case. And
23 if the Court looks at Definition No. 12 in the 24 first request for production, they went through
25 great pains to define terms. SCC
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 administrative proceeding means, in the matter
2 of Sunbeam Corp, and it lists the proceeding
3 number, and in the matter of David C. Fannin,
4 F-A-N-N-I-N, and it lists an administrative
5 proceeding. This document was not submitted in
6 connection with either of those proceedings.
7 It was not submitted in connection with
8 arbitration concerning Mr. Dunlop or in
9 connection with any of the litigations, which
10 are all defined terms in this request for
11 production.

12 If the Court goes through Request No. 48
13 through 51, which are the only ones Mr. Scarola
14 identified, all of the documents requested
15 there are limited to those three definitions.
16 This document --

17 THE COURT: Tell me again what proceeding
18 it was produced, the SCC in connection with?

19 MR. IANNO: It's called an IPO allocation
20 proceeding, which involved numerous securities
21 firms, investment bankers, Your Honor. It had
22 nothing to do with Sunbeam.

23 And the reason -- the only reason that Mr.
24 Scarola knows about it, is because it was
25 widely reported. And in an effort to resolve
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the motion to compel originally, the one that
2 we had the failed stipulation on, we offered to
3 produce it if we could. That's the only reason
4 the New York court comes into play.
5 The procedure that's being utilized today

16div-004203

6 on the motion to compel is improper, because
7 this document was never requested. If the
8 Plaintiff wants these documents, they can file
9 a request for production. We will respond to 10 it in due course. We can argue about whether
11 or not it's admissible.

12 THE COURT: So they just need to do, what
13 you're telling me, a request using this
14 administrative proceeding number?

15 MR. IANNO: Not this --

16 THE COURT: Well, the 3-10597. That's the
17 one where they did the order dealing with
18 retention?

19 MR. IANNO: I don't have the number in
20 front of me.

21 MR. SCAROLA: It is attached as an
22 exhibit.

23 THE COURT: Right.

24 So you're saying they amend their --

25 MR. IANNO: Well, they need to do a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 request before they do a motion to compel.

2 THE COURT: No, I understand.

3 What's the response to that argument, that
4 this is in a separate proceeding and it's just
5 within the ambit of this request?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Well, it isn't within the
7 ambit of the defined SCC proceeding.

8 The requests include paragraph 50, all
9 documents you have provided to the SCC, the
10 Attorney General of New York, or any other
11 governmental or regulatory body concerning
12 Sunbeam.

13 THE COURT: They say this doesn't concern
14 Sunbeam.

15 MR. SCAROLA: It does concern Sunbeam,
16 from the perspective it concerns all of their
17 E-mail communications, Sunbeam and others.

18 THE COURT: That's a nice argument.
19 Assume I'm not going to accept that one.

20 MR. SCAROLA: If you're not going to
21 accept that argument and the sole objection
22 that they are making is that this has not been
23 specifically requested, I go back to my office,
24 I file that request.

25 What I don't want to happen is, what we
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 get are objections that bring us right back to
2 this same point all over again. If what
3 they're saying is they are willing to produce

16div-004204

4 it as specifically requested, that's fine.
5 We'll specifically request it. But we ought
6 not -- we ought not to play the game for the
7 first time in this hearing, raising the
8 objection that this was not specifically
9 requested because that objection has never
10 previously been raised, to raise that objection
11 now, to have us make this specific request and
12 then to file some sort of new objections to the 13 production after we spent as much time as we
14 have trying to reach this point.

15 THE COURT: I understand your concern. I
16 also understand, if it wasn't originally
17 requested, they didn't have an obligation to
18 file objection to something that wasn't
19 requested.

20 My hope is that you go back and request
21 it. You will have either it will be produced
22 or have something that frames the legal issues
23 presumably along the lines we discussed. At
24 least I will need less education next time to
25 get to the point that we're at now.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Will the Court entertain an
2 Ore Tenus motion to require a response to that
3 request to produce within 10 days?

4 MR. IANNO: Ten days is over the
5 Holidays. I will do a shortened time.
6 Probably right after the first of the year.

7 THE COURT: Can you do?

8 MR. IANNO: January 5th.

9 THE COURT: It's a Monday.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I think it's a Friday.

11 THE COURT: I think January 5th is a
12 Monday.

13 MR. SCAROLA: It's difficult for me to
14 imagine, with this issue having been discussed
15 as much as it's been discussed, if there is an
16 objection to be raised. I'm not talking about
17 producing the documents within that period of
18 time. But if there is an objection to be
19 raised, let's get it on the table, get it on
20 the table now. Ten days should be more than 21 adequate time. I would think that 48 hours is
22 enough time. So I would request, I persist in
23 my request that a 10-day time limit be set.

24 MR. IANNO: Can we have the Socii (ph)
25 Rule in affect, Your Honor? Whenever we need

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0037

1 something quickly, we can't get it; whenever

16div-004205

2 the Plaintiff wants something quickly, they get
3 it.

4 I'd love to, but this is December 17;
5 Christmas is in a week, the New Year holiday.
6 Mr. Scarola's office is closed for a week. I
7 mean, I'm willing to do it in a shorter time,
8 maybe even earlier than that. I hate to be
9 burdened. If the Court wants, the 2nd is a
10 Friday.

11 THE COURT: I'll tell you what, I'll do it
12 15 days. I'm not sure the request --

13 MR. SCAROLA: Fifteen days from the filing
14 of the request?

15 THE COURT: Fifteen days from service of
16 the request, including five days in the mail.

17 MR. SCAROLA: It will be faxed today.

18 MR. IANNO: Just on side, the parties have
19 an agreement that all service is either by fax,
20 E-mail and Federal Express. We're trying to
21 get everybody -- because of the lawyers
22 involved, we're trying to serve everybody by
23 E-mails or fax and everything goes by Federal
24 Express.

25 THE COURT: I appreciate that. What I'm
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 looking for real quick, I need to get an order
2 on this. Obviously I lost it. Was the number
3 for the proceedings we are talking about.
4 Obviously we were only talking about shortening
5 the time to respond to the request to produce.
6 My documents deal with that proceeding.

7 MR. IANNO: I believe it's addressed as
8 Exhibit B, Your Honor. I think this is -- I
9 want to say that it's this one.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Administrative proceeding
11 File No. 3-10597.

12 THE COURT: Seeking documents provided to
13 the SCC.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And received from the SCC in
15 connection with that matter.

16 THE COURT: Okay. I'll take the first one
17 under advisement and you will get an order.

18 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. And we are
20 closed next week. Merry Christmas, Your
21 Honor.

22 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, just, if that's
23 the wrong proceeding number, I'd be happy to
24 advise the Court. I'll just call your JA. I
25 assume it's the right one. I want to make

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0039

1 sure. I'll check and make sure. I don't want
2 the Plaintiff to request the wrong documents
3 either.

4 THE COURT: Advise us in writing. Let Mr.
5 Scarola know.

6 MR. IANNO: I will.

7 THE COURT: I assume, Mr. Scarola, if we
8 get something from Mr. Ianno saying that's the
9 wrong number, we can put in the right number?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Yeah. I don't know how it
11 could be the wrong number when that's the
12 proceeding in which they were fined over a
13 million dollars.

14 If Mr. Ianno informs you of a different
15 number, I assume he will be doing so in good
16 faith, Your Honor can substitute that different
17 number. If it turns out there is a problem,
18 we'll be back to see you.

19 THE COURT: He's done it at his own peril,
20 so I have no doubt he would not intentionally
21 advise the Court.

22 MR. IANNO: If you don't hear from me,
23 that is the number.

24 THE COURT: I appreciate that.
25 (At 10:45 a.m. the hearing was adjourned.)

THE COURT: Good morning. Have a seat. I
4 apologize for keeping you waiting.

5 This is Coleman & Morgan and it's
6 Plaintiffs' motion to compel concerning the 7 E-mails.

8

8 MR. SCAROLA: It is, in fact, Plaintiff's
9 amended motion to compel concerning E-mails.

10 THE COURT: I thought it was Plaintiff's
11 motion to compel.

12 MR. IANNO: And I had the same confusion,
13 Your Honor, yesterday. And Mr. Scarola and I
14 exchanged E-mails, I don't know if we spoke on
15 the phone, but we definitely exchanged
16 E-mails. I believe that it was the original
17 motion.

18 THE COURT: Yeah, I looked at my notice of
19 hearing.

20 MR. IANNO: I have the transcript, Your
21 Honor. Apparently -- and Mr. Scarola can
22 correct me -- it's the underlying motion, but
23 the relief that's being sought is an order
24 compelling us to produce the documents that
25 were submitted to the SCC and to produce a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 corporate representative. It's not the actual
2 production of the E-mails or testimony
3 regarding the burden, expense of going through
4 and restoring the E-mails from the magnetic
5 tapes. I believe that's what we're going to
6 argue this morning.

7 MR. SCAROLA: If I could just have a
8 moment to walk the Court through this, I think
9 it will become apparent what it is we're doing
10 here.

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. SCAROLA: This is Plaintiffs' first
13 request for production.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. SCAROLA: I would call the Court's
16 attention initially to the definition of terms,
17 paragraph 7; documents means E-mails or any
18 other electronic form of communication.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. SCAROLA: If Your Honor will then turn
21 to Request No. 48, and you can read it faster
22 than I can read it to you.

23 THE COURT: I'll see what it says.
24 Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Forty-nine, 50 and 51.
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

0004

1 THE COURT: Okay.

2 MR. SCAROLA: All right. I think there is
3 little doubt, having read through the
4 definition in those sections, that we are
5 looking for all relevant E-mails concerning
6 these issues. And Your Honor will recall the
7 presentations that were made to you last week

8 concerning the underlying allegations in this
9 complaint, that clearly a very significant
10 issue in this claim for fraud against Morgan
11 Stanley is what Morgan Stanley knew and when
12 Morgan Stanley knew it. We have a burden to
13 prove that there were knowingly false
14 misrepresentations that were made and that
15 Morgan Stanley was participating in aiding and
16 abetting conspiring with Sunbeam in its knowing
17 false misrepresentations.

18 So obviously a significant source of
19 information concerning what Morgan Stanley knew
20 would be Morgan Stanley's internal
21 communications regarding all issues relating to
22 Sunbeam. And we filed a request to produce
23 which clearly encompasses that sort of document
24 reading electronic information.

25 What we received in response was a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 substantial production that contained very,
2 very few E-mail communications. And we also
3 learned that Morgan Stanley had been sanctioned
4 by the SCC for failing to comply with Federal
5 regulations regarding the preservation,
6 specifically, of E-mail communications.

7 We noticed the deposition under Rule 1.310
8 of a corporate representative -- and if Your
9 Honor will take a look at paragraphs 2 and 3 of
10 the description of the information that we were
11 seeking -- we sought specifically, in paragraph
12 2, policies and procedures for maintaining and
13 preserving electronic or hard copy documents
14 and/or files of Morgan Stanley & Co.,
15 Incorporated and the location and/or procedure
16 for the collection of documents responsive to
17 Coleman (parents) previously served request for
18 production of documents. So we wanted to get
19 behind the production to make a determination
20 as to what efforts were made to attempt to find
21 E-mails and what potential existed for the
22 recovery of E-mails.

23 We took the deposition of the corporate
24 representative. And if Your Honor will take a
25 look at Exhibit B to the amended motion to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

1 compel -- do you have that handy?

2 THE COURT: I know I looked at it
3 yesterday. Whether I have it handy now, I
4 don't know.

5 MR. IANNO: Let me provide the Court with

6 a copy of that.

7 THE COURT: This is the transcript or a
8 portion of the transcript of the deposition?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, we provided
10 you with portions of the copy of the transcript
11 of the deposition. I don't have the exhibit
12 here. I apologize for that.

13 THE COURT: I know I read it. 126 or 127
14 something.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Let me give you my copy.

16 Following the corporate representative's
17 deposition, we communicated in writing with
18 Morgan Stanley and specifically identified
19 deficiencies in the corporate representative's
20 ability to respond within those areas
21 designated in the notice of deposition and made
22 specific transcript references to where the
23 corporate representative acknowledged his
24 inability to provide information that was
25 clearly relevant and material. We then filed

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 our initial motion to compel.

2 THE COURT: That I do have. Actually,
3 that's what I had looked at, I guess, that had
4 copies of the transcripts attached.

5 MR. SCAROLA: Well, then, Your Honor is
6 aware that what we were seeking in that motion
7 were three things.

8 First, that Morgan Stanley be compelled to
9 undertake a full investigation of the
10 information in its possession, including
11 magnetic tapes and hard drives for E-mail
12 messages responsive to Coleman (parent)
13 Holdings document request.

14 Now, once we request the documents, the
15 law imposes an obligation on them to conduct a
16 reasonable, thorough investigation within the
17 corporation to make the determination as to
18 what exists. We're simply asking the Court, at
19 that point, to compel them to do that which is 20 inherent in the obligation to respond to the
21 request to produce.

22 The second request was to produce within
23 10 days any E-mails that are located, which
24 obviously they would be obliged to do under the
25 terms of the previously served request to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 produce.

2 THE COURT: Your initial response to the
3 request to produce, did it say that there were

4 items within their possession, custody or
5 control that weren't produced because the cost
6 inherent in it?

7 MR. SCAROLA: That came in the very
8 substantial response they filed to the motion
9 to produce.

10 Now, at no time in this response did they
11 ever raise an issue that Coleman (parent) was
12 seeking to compel something that had not been
13 requested. Their response asserted four
14 objections. They said what we were asking in
15 our motion to compel -- and I didn't finish
16 with the third thing.

17 The third thing was to comply with their
18 obligation to produce a corporate
19 representative that had knowledge with regard
20 to these matters. What they said was that the 21 tasks we were asking be performed were overly
22 burdensome, that it was harassing, that it was
23 unlikely to lead to the discovery of admissible
24 evidence because -- well, they'll have to
25 explain that to you because I really don't

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 understand what their argument is in support of
2 that contention. But the fourth and final
3 argument they made was that Morgan Stanley was
4 somehow not entitled to this discovery because
5 Morgan Stanley had unclean hands because Morgan
6 Stanley, Sr. funded hadn't preserved all of its
7 E-mails, so it was not right for
8 Morgan Stanley -- excuse me -- that MAFCO, our
9 parent corporation, had not preserved all of
10 its E-mails.

11 Well, I hope that we don't need to deal
12 with that issue, but I want to respond to it
13 very quickly. And that is, there is a
14 difference between the obligations imposed
15 and --

16 THE COURT: Let me stop you there. To me,
17 that's -- and can you respond -- it's sort of a
18 red herring issue, because it's apples and
19 oranges. If they had some sort of destruction
20 of evidence, we can address that separately
21 when it's properly framed by the pleadings and
22 talk about the appropriate sanctions. But I
23 know what the appropriate sanction is, if I
24 don't look at the motion currently in front of
25 me and make a sanction going to that motion.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. IANNO: I didn't want to interrupt Mr.

2 Scarola, but I don't know if we're arguing the
3 amended motion now or if we're back to the
4 original motion.

5 If we're back to the original, I have some
6 problems with arguing that to the Court today.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We're not back to the
8 original motion. Your Honor needs to
9 understand this background to understand the
10 relief that we're currently requesting.

11 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of the
12 amended motion? I thought we were doing the
13 original motion. That's the one I have a copy
14 of. Do you have an extra copy?

15 MR. IANNO: I do.

16 THE COURT: Thank you. Let me -- I'm
17 trying to figure where we're going. And I
18 apologize for interrupting your argument.

19 But realistically, are you seeking
20 anything today other than having a competent
21 corporate representative testify as to both
22 their retention policy and what efforts they
23 have made to locate this stuff and copies of
24 the documents they gave to the SCC?

25 MR. SCAROLA: No. That's all we are
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 asking for.

2 THE COURT: That's all you want?

3 MR. SCAROLA: That's all we want.

4 THE COURT: So what you're saying is sort
5 of twofold. One is, produce the corporate rep
6 like we originally asked who can answer all
7 these questions and then we can figure out if
8 your answers are taken in good faith.

9 MR. SCAROLA: That's precisely right.
10 They raised a burdensome objection and we're
11 entitled to explore that. We're not obliged to
12 accept on its face their assertion without any
13 particulars whatsoever, if it's going to take a
14 lot of time and cost us a lot of money and it's
15 not going to lead to anything productive. We
16 want sworn testimony that allows us to assess
17 those contentions. If they are right, we may
18 abandon our efforts to get E-mails. If they
19 are wrong, we have placed ourselves in a
20 position to come back before Your Honor on the
21 original motion to get them to do that which we
22 originally requested that they do.

23 THE COURT: What did you want to say in
24 support of the contention that they should
25 produce the documents produced to the SCC?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 That's the other prong of what we're looking
2 for today.

3 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, that's correct.

4 The other prong of what we're looking at
5 is production of the documents that were sent
6 to the SCC.

7 THE COURT: First of all, can we agree you
8 guys should produce somebody who's competent to
9 testify to these matters?

10 MR. IANNO: Under a proper 1.310 notice,
11 yes. That's where we have our disagreement, is
12 the testimony that Mr. Scarola is asking for is 13 not contained with the original deposition
14 notice.

15 What we said is, let's both mutually
16 produce our corporate representatives on an
17 agreed upon list of topics for the expense, the
18 procedures for restoring back-up tapes.

19 THE COURT: I'm looking at the notice of
20 taking deposition that was served August 22nd.

21 In items 2 and 3, is it your position you
22 produced somebody competent to testify to those
23 matters?

24 MR. IANNO: Mr. Plotnick was produced on
25 September 9th.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0013

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: And he had rendered 160 pages
3 of deposition testimony on those three topics.

4 Now, if the Court -- if Mr. Scarola says
5 he didn't testify on the topics that were in
6 this deposition notice that you're looking at,
7 I think you have to look at all 160 pages to
8 see that he did testify on the policies and
9 procedures of document retention at Morgan
10 Stanley.

11 THE COURT: I thought he said he didn't
12 know anything about pre 2000.

13 MR. IANNO: You could, Your Honor, read
14 the 160 pages. But I think that the solution
15 here on this is to have an agreed upon list of
16 topics that Mr. Scarola's client and our client
17 want mutual corporate representatives to
18 testify to here. The point here is not the 19 retention policy, it's what it would take to
20 restore back-up tapes.

21 THE COURT: It's sort of a little bit of
22 both I would imagine.

23 Let me ask you this: I think the proposal
24 on the table, as I understand it, sort of mixes
25 these two things again and says, if you produce

16div-004215

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 somebody to testify about your policy, we'll
2 produce somebody to testify about our
3 policies.

4 Are you willing to accept that offer or
5 not?

6 MR. SCAROLA: We have always been willing
7 to produce a corporate representative to
8 testify about our policies. That was part of
9 the stipulation that we entered on the record
10 before the Court. We are still prepared to do
11 that, although there is no motion to require us
12 to do it. We're willing to do that. That's 13 discovery that they're entitled to.

14 The contention that we have failed to
15 identify specifically what it is we need is
16 just false. If you look at the letter of
17 September 18, we could not have been more
18 specific about the deficiencies in Mr.
19 Plotnick's deposition. We identify precisely
20 the information that we need and we identify
21 the page and line references where Mr. Plotnick
22 was unable to provide that information. I
23 don't know what more we could do than that.
24 That is our specific list of everything that we
25 need from this defendant.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: So I'm clear, are you saying
2 you will accept their stipulation and we need
3 to sit down right now and make a list of things
4 this person is going to testify to --

5 MR. IANNO: Apparently so.

6 THE COURT: -- or are we going back to the
7 motion?

8 MR. IANNO: I have the SCC filings. There
9 is a separate and totally distinct argument on
10 that.

11 THE COURT: I understand that. We're not
12 doing that now. We'll do it today. We're not
13 doing it at this moment.

14 I took your copy of the September 18
15 letter, right?

16 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. That is
17 attached as an exhibit to the amended --

18 MR. IANNO: It's attached as Exhibit C to
19 the original motion.

20 MR. SCAROLA: The original motion. So you
21 do have a copy of it.

22 THE COURT: I do have it someplace.

23 MR. SCAROLA: There are numerous letters

24 going back and forth between the parties. I
25 don't have all the letters that were sent by
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Morgan Stanley.

2 THE COURT: No, I don't think that we're
3 going to be able to use it as a prompt for what
4 it is we want the person to be competent to
5 testify to, right?

6 MR. SCAROLA: That's our list.

7 THE COURT: Okay. He will be right back
8 then.

9 So, if we were going to make a global
10 stipulation, it will be, I assume, somebody
11 competent to testify as to the policies and
12 procedures for maintaining, preserving
13 electronic or photocopied documents and/or
14 files of the party, right, that would be Number
15 2?

16 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

17 THE COURT: Number 3 would be the location
18 and/or procedure, the collection of documents
19 -- here's your copy back.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much.

21 THE COURT: You dictate to me the list,
22 what you want this person -- you think this
23 person should be competent to testify about.

24 MR. SCAROLA: I think we could very easily
25 simply state that the defendants shall produce
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 a corporate representative --

2 THE COURT: Well, each party.

3 MR. SCAROLA: -- each party shall produce
4 a corporate representative who can address all
5 matters identified in the letter of September
6 18, 2003, attached hereto.

7 THE COURT: But that's sort of one-sided.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm agreeing to make it
9 reciprocal.

10 THE COURT: So addressing the types of
11 issues addressed?

12 MR. IANNO: That's why we wanted a new
13 notice that said, we want a corporate
14 representative to testify about A, B, C, D, so
15 we wouldn't have this disagreement, because we
16 believe we already complied with what's in the 17 September 18th letter. We can get Mr. Clare on 18 the phone and he can address it. I haven't had
19 the time to prepare and go through line by line
20 Mr. Plotnick's deposition testimony to address
21 this specific issue. But the parties, three

22 months ago, exchanged correspondence. They
23 responded to these, and we said we have
24 prepared, is my understanding, and he was
25 adequately prepared.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 My understanding is, the purpose of
2 today's hearing was simply to tell -- bring a
3 corporate representative to say this is what it
4 would take to restore the E-mails to support
5 our objection, not to whether or not we
6 retained them, not whether or not the retention
7 policies were, because that's what I thought
8 Mr. Scarola was getting at.

9 We believe Mr. Plotnick already testified
10 to the three areas here. But if they want to 11 have a reciprocal witness that says it would
12 cost millions of dollars and months and months
13 of work to restore the magnetic tapes that are
14 available on back up --

15 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, this is -- I'm
16 sorry.

17 MR. IANNO: -- we would produce somebody
18 like that the first two weeks of January.

19 MR. SCAROLA: This is the language
20 included in the amended motion to compel: To
21 provide within 15 days of the production that
22 we are requesting a corporate representative to
23 testify, pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil
24 Procedure 1.310, concerning Morgan Stanley's
25 E-mail retention policies, practices and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 procedures and concerning Morgan Stanley's
2 ability, including the procedures, time, labor
3 and expense involved to retrieve E-mails.

4 THE COURT: Now, can you live with that?

5 MR. IANNO: The second phrase of it, yes,
6 Your Honor, because we believe on the first
7 phrase of it, the policies and procedures, Mr.
8 Plotnick testified to that.

9 THE COURT: I can go back and look at it.
10 Maybe I'm thinking of something else. I
11 thought he was vague about what it was about
12 from '99 to 2000.

13 MR. IANNO: Well, there is a reason for
14 that. I believe it was explained and it can be
15 explained further if necessary. But the
16 deposition lasted 160 pages and the Court was
17 only provided with excerpts of it. And I think
18 if the Court -- if the Court will indulge me
19 for a minute, Mr. Scarola said he didn't

20 understand our relevance objection. And the
21 Court may or may not recall Mr. Scarola's
22 motion to compel on Scott Paper documents, that
23 the Court ruled on anything pre, I believe,
24 2000 should be produced, but anything post 2000
25 should not be produced.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: The problem is, there is no
3 E-mails that predate 2000. That was the basis
4 for the relevance objection. And I believe
5 somebody will testify to that on the second
6 phrase of Mr. Scarola's wherefor clause
7 concerning the ability, including the
8 procedures, time and labor expenses involved to
9 retrieve E-mails. And that will explain that.
10 I think that's what he needs to do.

11 But the point that we've always made and
12 the point I made yesterday at the Uniform
13 Motion Calendar is, there is no deposition
14 notice that asked for that second phrase.
15 We're trying to agree that we will produce a
16 corporate representative on that second phrase
17 of the wherefor clause. But to say motion to
18 compel --

19 THE COURT: Let me stop you. Give me an
20 example from the September 18th letter, for
21 instance, that you think requests information
22 that either Mr. Plotnick did provide, but was
23 not included in the ambient of the taking of 24 the deposition.

25 MR. IANNO: I would love to, but I have to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 be honest with the Court, in the 24 hours, I
2 have not had a chance to go through Mr.
3 Plotnick's deposition. As this Court knows, I
4 wasn't in the office yesterday afternoon. We
5 haven't had sufficient time to prepare a
6 response to that. But there are letters that I
7 could have sent over to the Court that respond
8 specifically to Mr. Scarola's September 18th
9 letter. That's a problem with having the
10 hearing today. I did my best to get everything
11 together on this and I just couldn't get
12 everything together in the 24 hours to put in a
13 package to the Court to show how we responded
14 to Mr. -- I guess it's Jenner & Block's
15 September 18th letter.

16 MR. SCAROLA: It really is unfair to
17 represent that they have had 24 hours to

18 respond to these issues. Your Honor is well
19 aware that these matters have been before the
20 Court now for a long time and there is no
21 reason to delay resolution of these issues
22 beyond today. They've had this letter
23 identifying deficiencies since September 18.
24 And the second part of the letter --

25 THE COURT: Let me ask you this --
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

2 THE COURT: -- are you -- if we pick up
3 the language from the wherefor clause of your
4 motion, asking for somebody competent to
5 testify concerning the E-mail retention
6 policies and practices and the procedures to
7 retrieve the E-mails and the costs, if they
8 produce somebody other than Plotnick, are you
9 happy? Because obviously --

10 MR. SCAROLA: I don't care who the person
11 is. It's the information that we want.

12 THE COURT: I don't know that there was an
13 obligation for him to go do some independent
14 investigation before he was deposed.

15 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor,
16 that's exactly what the law says. When we
17 issue 30 -- a Rule 1.310 notice of deposition
18 of a corporate representative, they are
19 obliged -- the corporate representative is
20 obliged to educate himself with respect to the
21 knowledge that the corporation has. We didn't
22 notice the deposition to Mr. Plotnick.

23 THE COURT: I understand that.

24 MR. SCAROLA: And, I'm sorry, I don't have
25 that case law at hand.

1 THE COURT: I thought they had to produce
2 the person most knowledgeable on that topic.

3 MR. SCAROLA: I hope Mr. Ianno will agree
4 to this without having to get into a legal
5 argument. The case law is very clear, that
6 there is an obligation imposed upon the
7 corporation to educate itself with respect to
8 what knowledge exists within the corporation,
9 so they are producing an individual who is
10 capable of speaking on behalf of the
11 corporation with regard to these topics to
12 disclose the full corporate knowledge on those
13 topics. And if it takes 10 people to respond,
14 they're obliged to produce as many people as
15 necessary to address those topics on the

16 corporation's behalf. That's the whole purpose
17 of that rule. And it is very clear from case
18 law with respect to that rule, that there is an
19 obligation to conduct a good faith
20 investigation in advance in order to be able to
21 respond on behalf of the corporation.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Do you agree with that
23 statement?

24 MR. IANNO: Briefly, Your Honor. This
25 wasn't my motion to argue. This was Mr.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Clair's motion. I'm not fully aware of all of
2 the facts. I'm not prepared -- I'm not
3 prepared. Mr. Clare was home with a 104 fever
4 yesterday.

5 With respect to the 301(b)6 notice, my
6 interpretation and understanding of the rule is
7 very consistent with Mr. Scarola's. It's not
8 the person most knowledgable. It's the
9 corporation has an obligation to produce a
10 representative to testify on these areas and
11 the noticing party takes it at their risk if
12 their areas are not specific and they're vague,
13 like they are in this case. It's subject to
14 interpretation, policies and procedures.

15 We produced a corporate representative
16 that testified as to what Morgan Stanley's
17 policies and procedures were with respect to
18 retention. He was educated.

19 THE COURT: That's where we were then.
20 What you're now telling me is that we're not
21 going to reach an agreement on this point.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I'm prepared to stipulate --

23 THE COURT: You want a stipulation that
24 they both have to produce somebody knowledgable
25 about their E-mail retention policy and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

0025

1 somebody knowledgable about the cost retrieving
2 the E-mails? You're not willing to do the
3 former?

4 MR. IANNO: We're willing to produce
5 someone to support our cost and burdensome
6 objection on the first two weeks of January,
7 Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: You're not willing to do the
9 former?

10 MR. IANNO: We believe --

11 THE COURT: That's not my question. We're
12 not going to get this done in the time we
13 have. We're back to arguing the motion.

14 What did you want to say in support?
15 MR. SCAROLA: Are we doing it in two parts
16 still?
17 THE COURT: I think we're still on two
18 parts. I think I have your argument on part
19 one. Let them respond and we'll come back to
20 the SCC argument.
21 MR. SCAROLA: I'm happy to do that.
22 THE COURT: What did you want to say?
23 MR. IANNO: I'm not sure I can add
24 anything else.
25 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

0026

1 Plotnick's deposition for me?
2 MR. IANNO: I do. This is the entire
3 deposition, together with exhibits.
4 THE COURT: Thank you.
5 So it's your position that all --
6 MR. IANNO: That what is sought -- it's my
7 understanding what was sought here and what the
8 discussion has been since the Uniform Motion
9 Calendar about three weeks ago has been,
10 produce someone to testify as to the costs and
11 the expense and the time and the burden that
12 will be involved in going through the thousands
13 of magnetic back-up tapes that Morgan Stanley
14 has for a certain time period that exists, and
15 we are willing to produce that person.
16 We believe we have produced the corporate
17 representative that was appropriately
18 identified in the corporate representative
19 deposition topics 1 through 3 of the 310(b)6
20 deposition notice.
21 As I explained to the Court, I did my best
22 to get fully up to speed on this issue.
23 Unfortunately, I did not have the time to go
24 through Mr. Plotnick's entire deposition last
25 night. I downloaded it to go through that. I
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 could send over to the Court this afternoon our
2 response letters that go through in detail what
3 Mr. Plotnick testified to, but it was my
4 understanding what we were going to argue today
5 was simply whether or not we would produce the
6 corporate representative on the E-mail burden.
7 And the other thing, Your Honor, is, Mr.
8 Scarola's client waited three months, the
9 September 18 letter, before they brought this
10 to the Court's attention and we had to wait
11 months for our motion to dismiss hearing. If

12 we could have some additional time, I'm sure
13 Mr. Clare will be fully prepared to address
14 each and every one of the questions the Court
15 has requested of Mr. Plotnick's deposition that
16 I'm not able to do.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Let's do the SCC
18 documents.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

20 I have called the Court's attention to the
21 broad scope of our request to produce, the
22 specific paragraphs in that prior request that
23 impose a burden to produce all communications
24 regarding E-mails, as well as all E-mails,
25 specifically communications with the SCC are
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 referenced. And the only objection that we
2 have had to the production of the SCC documents
3 has been that an order may be entered in
4 response to somebody's motion in a New York
5 court that might preclude the disclosure of
6 these documents at sometime in the future.

7 Our efforts to determine who filed the
8 motion, what the motion is seeking to do, have
9 been ignored. They don't chose to tell us.

10 And the potential for some court sometime in
11 the future to restrict the Defendant's ability
12 to make disclosure sometime in the future ought
13 not in any way to impact upon this Court's
14 ordering production of that which has been
15 requested in the past.

16 So as we stand right now, there is no
17 assertion of any inability to produce documents
18 that have been requested. And, again, all we
19 are seeking is predicate information to
20 determine the validity of the objections that
21 have been raised.

22 THE COURT: Do you have a copy of what
23 their response was on this issue?

24 MR. SCAROLA: The only response on this
25 issue has been the response that was filed to
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 our original motion to compel, which alleges
2 that this is burdensome, harassing and not
3 likely to lead to the discovery of admissible
4 evidence.

5 THE COURT: So how do you --

6 MR. SCAROLA: The argument about the New
7 York --

8 THE COURT: Right.

9 MR. SCAROLA: -- the New York court,

10 that's argument that was made before Your Honor
11 in open court. That's never been reduced to
12 writing. No, that's simply the verbal
13 representations made to Your Honor in response
14 to -- in the context of our motion to enforce
15 the in-court stipulation. You remember --

16 THE COURT: Right.

17 MR. SCAROLA: -- that's a piece I left out
18 in the middle. But in the middle of all of 19 this, we thought we had an agreement. We
20 obviously, in the Court's opinion, didn't have
21 an agreement.

22 But during the course of those arguments,
23 they told Your Honor, we don't want you to
24 order us to do this yet because a New York
25 court may sometime enter a response to some

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

0030

1 motion, which they couldn't tell us anything
2 about and refuse to tell us anything about.

3 THE COURT: So I'm clear, what we're
4 talking about doesn't have anything to do with
5 E-mail retention policies or anything else?

6 MR. SCAROLA: No. It specifically relates
7 to E-mail retention policies.

8 THE COURT: The action before the SCC on
9 that point, we're not talking about trying to
10 discover E-mails, we're trying to get hard
11 copies, presumably, of documents provided to
12 the SCC?

13 MR. SCAROLA: Regarding E-mail retention
14 policies and E-mail destruction, so that we can
15 find out what is in fact available and how
16 readily available it is or is not, at least
17 according to what they told the SCC, correct.

18 THE COURT: And where in any response --
19 how did Morgan Stanley place the Plaintiff on
20 notice that these documents were retained and
21 not produced?

22 MR. IANNO: Well, that's the heart of this
23 matter, Your Honor. It's not that they were
24 not produced, it's that they were not
25 responsive. They were only offered to the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

(561) 820-9066

1 Plaintiff as a possible resolution to the
2 motion to compel.

3 I can walk the Court through why this
4 document is not responsive.

5 THE COURT: You're telling me it's not
6 included in the Plaintiffs' first request for
7 production?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely not.
9 THE COURT: Tell me why not.
10 MR. SCAROLA: This is a document that was
11 produced by attorneys.
12 THE COURT: Is it a single document?
13 MR. IANNO: Yes, produced in response to
14 the SCC by attorneys. It is not a Morgan
15 Stanley policy. It is not a Morgan Stanley
16 procedure. It is more akin to a pleading that
17 was produced -- and this is the key point, Your
18 Honor, that Mr. Scarola omitted from his
19 argument -- that it is produced in a separate
20 IPO allocation proceeding. It has absolutely
21 nothing to do with Sunbeam. It has absolutely
22 nothing to do with the facts of this case. And
23 if the Court looks at Definition No. 12 in the 24 first request for production, they went through
25 great pains to define terms. SCC
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 administrative proceeding means, in the matter
2 of Sunbeam Corp, and it lists the proceeding
3 number, and in the matter of David C. Fannin,
4 F-A-N-N-I-N, and it lists an administrative
5 proceeding. This document was not submitted in
6 connection with either of those proceedings.
7 It was not submitted in connection with
8 arbitration concerning Mr. Dunlop or in
9 connection with any of the litigations, which
10 are all defined terms in this request for
11 production.
12 If the Court goes through Request No. 48
13 through 51, which are the only ones Mr. Scarola
14 identified, all of the documents requested
15 there are limited to those three definitions.
16 This document --
17 THE COURT: Tell me again what proceeding
18 it was produced, the SCC in connection with?
19 MR. IANNO: It's called an IPO allocation
20 proceeding, which involved numerous securities
21 firms, investment bankers, Your Honor. It had
22 nothing to do with Sunbeam.
23 And the reason -- the only reason that Mr.
24 Scarola knows about it, is because it was
25 widely reported. And in an effort to resolve
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the motion to compel originally, the one that
2 we had the failed stipulation on, we offered to
3 produce it if we could. That's the only reason
4 the New York court comes into play.
5 The procedure that's being utilized today

6 on the motion to compel is improper, because
7 this document was never requested. If the
8 Plaintiff wants these documents, they can file
9 a request for production. We will respond to 10 it in due course. We can argue about whether
11 or not it's admissible.

12 THE COURT: So they just need to do, what
13 you're telling me, a request using this
14 administrative proceeding number?

15 MR. IANNO: Not this --

16 THE COURT: Well, the 3-10597. That's the
17 one where they did the order dealing with
18 retention?

19 MR. IANNO: I don't have the number in
20 front of me.

21 MR. SCAROLA: It is attached as an
22 exhibit.

23 THE COURT: Right.

24 So you're saying they amend their --

25 MR. IANNO: Well, they need to do a
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 request before they do a motion to compel.

2 THE COURT: No, I understand.

3 What's the response to that argument, that
4 this is in a separate proceeding and it's just
5 within the ambit of this request?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Well, it isn't within the
7 ambit of the defined SCC proceeding.

8 The requests include paragraph 50, all
9 documents you have provided to the SCC, the
10 Attorney General of New York, or any other
11 governmental or regulatory body concerning
12 Sunbeam.

13 THE COURT: They say this doesn't concern
14 Sunbeam.

15 MR. SCAROLA: It does concern Sunbeam,
16 from the perspective it concerns all of their
17 E-mail communications, Sunbeam and others.

18 THE COURT: That's a nice argument.
19 Assume I'm not going to accept that one.

20 MR. SCAROLA: If you're not going to
21 accept that argument and the sole objection
22 that they are making is that this has not been
23 specifically requested, I go back to my office,
24 I file that request.

25 What I don't want to happen is, what we
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 get are objections that bring us right back to
2 this same point all over again. If what
3 they're saying is they are willing to produce

4 it as specifically requested, that's fine.
5 We'll specifically request it. But we ought
6 not -- we ought not to play the game for the
7 first time in this hearing, raising the
8 objection that this was not specifically
9 requested because that objection has never
10 previously been raised, to raise that objection
11 now, to have us make this specific request and
12 then to file some sort of new objections to the 13 production after we spent as much time as we
14 have trying to reach this point.

15 THE COURT: I understand your concern. I
16 also understand, if it wasn't originally
17 requested, they didn't have an obligation to
18 file objection to something that wasn't
19 requested.

20 My hope is that you go back and request
21 it. You will have either it will be produced
22 or have something that frames the legal issues
23 presumably along the lines we discussed. At
24 least I will need less education next time to
25 get to the point that we're at now.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Will the Court entertain an
2 Ore Tenus motion to require a response to that
3 request to produce within 10 days?

4 MR. IANNO: Ten days is over the
5 Holidays. I will do a shortened time.
6 Probably right after the first of the year.

7 THE COURT: Can you do?

8 MR. IANNO: January 5th.

9 THE COURT: It's a Monday.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I think it's a Friday.

11 THE COURT: I think January 5th is a
12 Monday.

13 MR. SCAROLA: It's difficult for me to
14 imagine, with this issue having been discussed
15 as much as it's been discussed, if there is an
16 objection to be raised. I'm not talking about
17 producing the documents within that period of
18 time. But if there is an objection to be
19 raised, let's get it on the table, get it on
20 the table now. Ten days should be more than 21 adequate time. I would think that 48 hours is
22 enough time. So I would request, I persist in
23 my request that a 10-day time limit be set.

24 MR. IANNO: Can we have the Socii (ph)
25 Rule in affect, Your Honor? Whenever we need

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 something quickly, we can't get it; whenever

2 the Plaintiff wants something quickly, they get
3 it.

4 I'd love to, but this is December 17;
5 Christmas is in a week, the New Year holiday.
6 Mr. Scarola's office is closed for a week. I
7 mean, I'm willing to do it in a shorter time,
8 maybe even earlier than that. I hate to be
9 burdened. If the Court wants, the 2nd is a
10 Friday.

11 THE COURT: I'll tell you what, I'll do it
12 15 days. I'm not sure the request --

13 MR. SCAROLA: Fifteen days from the filing
14 of the request?

15 THE COURT: Fifteen days from service of
16 the request, including five days in the mail.

17 MR. SCAROLA: It will be faxed today.

18 MR. IANNO: Just on side, the parties have
19 an agreement that all service is either by fax,
20 E-mail and Federal Express. We're trying to
21 get everybody -- because of the lawyers
22 involved, we're trying to serve everybody by
23 E-mails or fax and everything goes by Federal
24 Express.

25 THE COURT: I appreciate that. What I'm
PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 looking for real quick, I need to get an order
2 on this. Obviously I lost it. Was the number
3 for the proceedings we are talking about.
4 Obviously we were only talking about shortening
5 the time to respond to the request to produce.
6 My documents deal with that proceeding.

7 MR. IANNO: I believe it's addressed as
8 Exhibit B, Your Honor. I think this is -- I
9 want to say that it's this one.

10 MR. SCAROLA: Administrative proceeding
11 File No. 3-10597.

12 THE COURT: Seeking documents provided to
13 the SCC.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And received from the SCC in
15 connection with that matter.

16 THE COURT: Okay. I'll take the first one
17 under advisement and you will get an order.

18 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

19 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you. And we are
20 closed next week. Merry Christmas, Your
21 Honor.

22 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, just, if that's
23 the wrong proceeding number, I'd be happy to
24 advise the Court. I'll just call your JA. I
25 assume it's the right one. I want to make

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 sure. I'll check and make sure. I don't want
2 the Plaintiff to request the wrong documents
3 either.

4 THE COURT: Advise us in writing. Let Mr.
5 Scarola know.

6 MR. IANNO: I will.

7 THE COURT: I assume, Mr. Scarola, if we
8 get something from Mr. Ianno saying that's the
9 wrong number, we can put in the right number?

10 MR. SCAROLA: Yeah. I don't know how it
11 could be the wrong number when that's the
12 proceeding in which they were fined over a
13 million dollars.

14 If Mr. Ianno informs you of a different
15 number, I assume he will be doing so in good
16 faith, Your Honor can substitute that different
17 number. If it turns out there is a problem,
18 we'll be back to see you.

19 THE COURT: He's done it at his own peril,
20 so I have no doubt he would not intentionally
21 advise the Court.

22 MR. IANNO: If you don't hear from me,
23 that is the number.

24 THE COURT: I appreciate that.
25 (At 10:45 a.m. the hearing was adjourned.)

B. SUMMARY

This action concerns Respondents' violations of the record-keeping requirements of Section 17(a) of the Exchange Act and Rule 17a-4 thereunder during the period from 1999 to at least 2001 (the "relevant period"). During all or part of the relevant period, each Respondent failed to preserve for three years, and/or to preserve in an accessible place for two years, electronic mail communications (including inter-office memoranda and communications) received and sent by its agents and employees that related to its business as a member of an exchange, broker or dealer. Each Respondent lacked adequate systems or procedures for the preservation of electronic mail communications.

C. FACTS

The facts specific to these proceedings are set forth below:

1. The employees of each Respondent used electronic mail communications in part to conduct the Respondent's business as a broker, dealer and member of an exchange.
2. Respondents failed to preserve copies of electronic mail communications for three years, and/or maintain electronic mail communications for the first two years in an accessible place. Respondents did not have adequate systems or procedures in place during all or part of the relevant period to retain and/or make accessible electronic mail communications. Each Respondent's failure to preserve electronic mail communications and/or to maintain them in an accessible place was discovered during investigations being conducted jointly and separately by the Commission, the New York Stock Exchange, and NASD. The deficiencies in Respondent's systems and procedures for the preservation of electronic mail communications predated these investigations.
3. Some Respondents backed up electronic mail communications on tape or other media that Respondents represent was part of a process designed as a disaster recovery or business continuity measure, or for another business purpose. While some Respondents relied on these backups to preserve electronic mail communications during the relevant period, Respondents had inadequate systems or procedures to ensure the retention of such back-ups for three years and/or to maintain such data in a readily accessible manner for two years. These Respondents discarded, or recycled and overwrote their back-up tapes and other media, often a year or less after back-up occurred. In those instances in which Respondents did retain electronic mail communications, these electronic mail communications were often stored in an unorganized fashion on backup tapes, other media, or on the hard drives of computers used by individual employees of Respondents. Before the filing of these proceedings, one or more Respondents took steps to develop new database systems for the retention of electronic mail communications.
4. While some Respondents relied upon employees to preserve copies of their electronic mail communications on the hard drives of their individual personal computers or elsewhere, and many e-mails were preserved, there were inadequate systems or procedures to ensure that employees did so for the requisite record-keeping period. In some instances, hard drives of computers were erased when individuals left the employment of the Respondent.

D. LEGAL DISCUSSION

Section 17(a)(1) of the Exchange Act provides that each member of a national securities exchange, broker, or dealer "shall make and keep for prescribed periods such records, furnish copies thereof, and make and disseminate such reports as the Commission, by rule, prescribes as necessary or appropriate in the public interest, for the protection of investors, or otherwise in furtherance of the purposes of this title."

The Commission has emphasized the importance of the records required by the rules as "the basic source documents" of a broker-dealer. Statement Regarding the Maintenance of Current Books and Records by Brokers and Dealers, 4 SEC Doctet 195 (April 6, 1974). The record keeping rules are "a keystone of the surveillance of broker and dealers by [Commission] staff and by the securities industry's self-regulatory bodies." Edward J. Mawod & Co., 46 S.E.C. 865, 873 n.39 (1977) (citation omitted), aff'd sub nom. Mawod & Co. v. SEC, 591 F.2d 588 (10th Cir. 1979).

Pursuant to its authority under Section 17(a)(1) of the Exchange Act, the Commission promulgated Rule 17a-4. Rule 17a-4(b)(4) in turn requires each Respondent to "preserve for a period of not less than 3 years, the first two years in an accessible place... [o]riginals of all communications received and copies of all communications sent by such member, broker or dealer (including inter-office memoranda and communications) relating to his business as such." Rule 17a-4 is not by its terms limited to physical documents. The Commission has stated that "internal electronic mail communications relating to a broker-dealer's 'business as such' fall within the purview of Rule 17a-4 and that, for the purposes of Rule 17a-4, 'the content of the electronic communication is determinative' as to whether that communication is required to be retained and accessible. Reporting Requirements for Brokers or Dealers under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Rel. No. 34-38245 (Feb. 5, 1997).

Based on the foregoing and Respondents' Offers of Settlement, the Commission finds that with respect to electronic mail communications during the relevant period, each Respondent willfully violated Section 17(a) of the Exchange Act and Rule 17a-4 promulgated thereunder by failing to preserve electronic mail communications for three years, and/or by failing to preserve electronic mail communications for the first two years in an accessible place.¹

IV.

Each Respondent has undertaken to review its procedures regarding the preservation of electronic mail communications for compliance with the federal securities laws and regulations, and the rules of NASD and New York Stock Exchange. Within 90 days of the issuance of this Order, unless otherwise extended by the staff of the Commission for good cause shown, each Respondent undertakes and agrees to inform the Commission in writing that it has completed its review and that it has established systems and procedures reasonably designed to achieve compliance with those laws, regulations, and rules concerning the preservation of electronic mail communications.

V.

In view of the foregoing, the Commission deems it appropriate and in the public interest to impose the sanctions specified in Respondents' Offers.

ACCORDINGLY, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER TO BAR CERTAIN NON-PARTY DISCOVERY

Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(c), Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") hereby requests a protective order barring Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") from obtaining certain discovery that it has sought from non-parties by way of subpoena. In support of this motion, CPH states as follows:

1. This motion has been necessitated by Morgan Stanley's recent service in the State of New York of subpoenas on two non-parties that provided services in connection with transactions involving CPH and its parent, MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MAFCO"), in the past — the law firm of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz ("Wachtell Lipton") and the investment banking firm of Credit Suisse First Boston ("Credit Suisse"). Specifically, the subpoenas seek a wide array of documents from Wachtell Lipton and Credit Suisse that pertain to services that these firms may have provided in connection with a number of non-Sunbeam/Coleman transactions involving CPH and MAFCO, even though these documents have nothing to do with the transaction by which Sunbeam acquired CPH's 82% stock interest in Coleman and cannot possibly lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The objectionable document requests in the subpoenas are as follows:

A. Wachtell Lipton Subpoena ¶ 10, Credit Suisse Subpoena ¶ 7.

2. These document requests call for "[a]ll documents reflecting, referring, or relating to due diligence performed by [Wachtell Lipton or Credit Suisse] in connection with the sale of any company in which CPH or MAFCO received stock as part of the consideration for sale, including, but not limited to the transactions listed in Attachment B.” See Exh. A, Wachtell Lipton Subpoena ¶ 10; Exh. B, Credit Suisse Subpoena ¶ 7 (emphasis added). Attachment B to the subpoenas lists a number of transactions, including transactions involving Revlon and Panavision, that have nothing to do with the Sunbeam transaction. Because Morgan Stanley’s document requests are overbroad, and cannot possibly lead to the discovery of admissible evidence concerning the only transaction at issue in this case, they should be barred.

B. Wachtell, Lipton Request No. 33, Credit Suisse Request No. 30.

3. These document requests call for “[d]ocuments sufficient to identify any work or services you performed for or on behalf of CPH or MAFCO in 1997 or 1998, regardless of whether you were compensated for that work.” See Exh. A, Wachtell Lipton Subpoena ¶ 33; Exh. B, Credit Suisse Subpoena ¶ 30. These requests also seek documents that have nothing to do with Sunbeam or any issue relevant to this case, and as a result, the requests are overbroad and cannot possibly lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

C. Credit Suisse Requests Nos. 18, 35.

4. CPH does not object to the portion of Request No. 18 that seeks “documents concerning your efforts to have CPH or MAFCO retain or maintain your services in connection with the Coleman Transaction,” but CPH objects to the additional portion demanding the production of documents “in connection with any other proposed engagement involving the performance of due diligence,” because that request for documents concerning other engagements is not likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. See Exh. B, Credit Suisse Subpoena ¶ 18. Similarly, Request No. 35 is not limited to the Sunbeam transaction at issue in this case. Instead, the request calls for “[a]ll documents concerning employment contracts, performance evaluations, and/or personnel files of all [Credit Suisse] personnel who performed services for or on behalf of CPH or MAFCO in 1997 or 1998, to the extent that those documents also relate to due diligence performed on engagements for CPH or MAFCO.” See id. ¶ 35. To the extent this request calls for documents relating to services or transactions unrelated to the Sunbeam transaction, the request is overbroad and cannot possibly lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. There is no issue in this case concerning whether Credit Suisse should have praised or punished its personnel for their performance on any transaction, whether or not Sunbeam-related.

5. All of the non-objectionable portions of the foregoing document requests are duplicative of other requests to these non-parties that are not at issue in this motion. See, e.g., Exh. A, Wachtell Lipton Subpoena ¶ 2 (requesting “[a]ll documents referring to the Coleman Transaction”); Exh. B, Credit Suisse Subpoena ¶ 2 (same). Thus, this Court need not try to cut back these requests in any way to save non-objectionable portions.

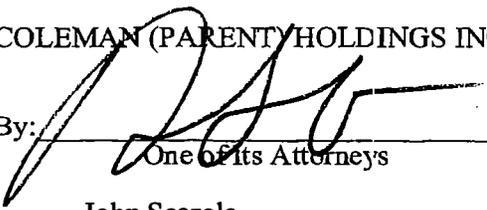

6. Counsel for CPH wrote counsel for Morgan Stanley on December 17, 2003, inviting Morgan Stanley to reconsider the foregoing discovery requests and to confer in an attempt to resolve this dispute. CPH’s efforts were not successful.

WHEREFORE, CPH requests a protective order barring Morgan Stanley from obtaining any documents responsive to Requests Nos. 10 and 33 of the Wachtell Lipton subpoena, and to Requests Nos. 7, 18, 30, and 35 of the Credit Suisse subpoena.

ATTACHMENT AINSTRUCTIONS

1 The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.

2 The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

3 Documents requested and to be produced include all Documents in the possession, custody or control of the plaintiff including, but not limited to, any agents, employees, contractors, attorneys, and consultants or experts working for or in favor of the plaintiff or its attorneys.

4 If, in responding to this Subpoena, you encounter any ambiguities when construing a request or definition, the response shall set forth the matter deemed ambiguous and the construction used in responding.

5 Whenever in this Subpoena you are asked to identify or produce a document which is deemed by you to be properly withheld from production for inspection or copying under claim of privilege (including, but not limited to, the work product doctrine), provide a privilege log that includes: the type of document, the general subject matter of the document, the date of the document, and such other information as is sufficient to identify the document, including, where appropriate, the author, addressee, custodian, and any other recipient of the document, and where not apparent, the relationship of the author, the addressee, custodian, and any other recipient to each other, in a manner that, without revealing the information claimed to be protected, will enable this party to assess the applicability of the privilege protection claimed by you. The privilege log shall be provided within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order.

6. If production of any requested document(s) is objected to on the grounds that production is unduly burdensome, describe the burden or expense of the proposed discovery.

7. When a document contains both privileged and non-privileged material, the non-privileged material must be disclosed to the fullest extent possible without disclosing the privileged material. If a privilege is asserted with regard to part of the material contained in a document, the party claiming the privilege must clearly indicate the portions as to which the privilege is claimed. When a document has been redacted or altered in any fashion, identify as to each document the reason for the redaction or alteration. Any redaction must be clearly visible on the redacted document.

8. If a responsive document exists but is no longer in your possession, custody, or control, state: its date, author(s), recipient(s), subject matter, what disposition was made of the document, and the person or entity, if any, now in possession, custody, or control of the document. If a responsive document has been destroyed, identify the date of destruction, the person who destroyed the document and the person who directed that the document be destroyed and state the reason for its destruction.

9. Produce all of the documents responsive to the numbered requests below either as they are kept in the usual course of business or by custodian.

10. If any of these documents cannot be produced in full, you are requested to produce them to the fullest extent possible, specifying clearly the reasons for your inability to produce the remainder and stating any information, knowledge, or belief you have concerning the unproduced portion.

11. If the requested documents are maintained in a file, the file folder is included in the request for production of those documents.

12. The terms "any," "all" and "each" shall be construed to mean "any," "all," or "each."

13. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "including but not limited to."

14. The present tense shall be construed to include the past and future tenses.

15. The specificity of any request herein shall not be construed to limit the generality or reach of any other request herein.

16. Unless otherwise specified, this Request calls for the production of documents created, delivered, distributed, sent, received, accessed, or modified up to the date of your response to this Request.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY

Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.380(a), Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") respectfully moves this Court for an order compelling Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") to respond to discovery pertaining to the identities, experience and competence of in-house CPH and MAFCO employees to conduct due diligence in acquisition transactions of the type at issue here, and in particular to respond to Morgan Stanley's Third Set of Interrogatories, Interrogatory No. 2.

As grounds for this motion, Morgan Stanley states:

1. CPH has refused to respond to the following interrogatory designed to identify the CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes ("MAFCO") employees responsible for conducting due diligence in acquisition transactions in 1997 through 1998:

Identify all persons at CPH or MAFCO whose job responsibilities included, in 1997 and 1998, due diligence or financial review of proposed mergers and acquisitions, including a description of each person's educational employment history, a description of any accounting or financial certifications or licenses held by such persons, and a description of any financial or business training they have had.

(Oct. 13, 2003 MS 3d Set of Interrogs. to Plf. CPH, Irrog. 2. (Ex. 1).)

2. CPH objected to this request “insofar as it seeks information related to MAFCO, a non-party to this lawsuit;” because it is “vague, ambiguous and overbroad insofar as it fails to define the term ‘due diligence;’” and because it is “not limited to individuals who performed due diligence concerning the [Coleman] transaction.” (Nov. 12, 2003 CPH Resp. & Objs. to Def. MS 3d Set of Interrogs, Resp. 2 (Ex. 2).) These objections are wholly without merit.

3. As an initial matter, CPH cannot shield MAFCO and its employees from discovery. CPH is an empty-shell holding company that, according to CPH’s Rule 1.310 deposition witness (himself a MAFCO employee), has no employees of its own. All negotiations and decisions were handled by MAFCO employees. Indeed, CPH’s lawsuit against Morgan Stanley is premised on an acquisition transaction in which MAFCO, CPH’s parent company, played a larger role in the transaction than CPH itself. If Morgan Stanley is unable to get discovery from MAFCO (whose employees negotiated the acquisition and exercised complete control over the actions of CPH with regard to the decision to sell its interest in Coleman), Morgan Stanley will not have access to important discoverable information about the claims alleged against it. CPH, as the plaintiff, cannot employ the resources of MAFCO to bring this litigation to bear, but then hide behind corporate formalities to deprive Morgan Stanley of plainly discoverable information that is clearly relevant to the case.

4. There is no dispute that MAFCO employees have pertinent discoverable information. CPH’s own interrogatory response lists fourteen (14) MAFCO employees as having discoverable information relating to CPH’s Complaint – but not a single CPH employee. (See Sept. 2, 2003 CPH Resp. to MS 1st Set Interrogs., Resp. 1, served Sept. 2, 2003 and filed under seal) In addition, CPH identified at least six (6) instances in which MAFCO representatives personally met with Morgan Stanley representatives to discuss or negotiate the Coleman Transaction, see Oct. 13, 2003 CPH Resp. to MS 2d Set of Interrogs. & 2nd Req. for Prod. of Docs., Resp. 1, served Oct. 13, 2003 and filed under seal, and at least eleven (11) instances in which MAFCO representatives discussed the transaction with Morgan Stanley, see id. at Resp. 3. None of these discovery responses refer to any action by a CPH employee. In light of MAFCO's important role in the acquisition transaction and CPH's own admission that MAFCO personnel have discoverable information, CPH's refusal to respond to MAFCO-related discovery on the grounds that MAFCO and its employees are non-parties in this instance is groundless. Further, given the close relationship between CPH and MAFCO, there can be no question that information that is available to MAFCO is also available to CPH. Pursuant to Rule 1.340, CPH is obligated to "furnish the information available to that party."

5. CPH's objection to responding to this Interrogatory because it fails to define the term "due diligence" is nonsensical. Given that CPH's claims against Morgan Stanley are premised on (legally and factually defective) allegations that Morgan Stanley did not conduct proper due diligence of Sunbeam, and the fact that CPH has used the term "due diligence" repeatedly in its own discovery requests and responses, CPH cannot seriously now contend that it does not know what "activities might be encompassed" by that term.¹ CPH cannot be permitted to base its Complaint in part upon allegations of faulty "due diligence" and at the same time shield itself from “due diligence”-related discovery on the grounds that the term is “vague and ambiguous.”

6. Nor can CPH limit discovery to the identities of the MAFCO employees who conducted due diligence for the Coleman acquisition. Given the nature of CPH’s claims and allegations – i.e. that CPH relied on a financial advisor to its counterparty in arm’s length negotiation in deciding to proceed with the acquisition – Morgan Stanley is entitled to discover the identities and qualifications of the sophisticated in-house advisors that were available to CPH to perform the same functions for which it supposedly relied upon Morgan Stanley. Such discovery will enable Morgan Stanley to determine, for example, whether CPH and MAFCO made any attempts to verify the representations that CPH alleges supports its claim against Morgan Stanley, and will in turn show that CPH and MAFCO had absolutely no basis for relying upon representations made by their counterparty’s underwriter.

7. Limiting discovery to the individuals involved in the Coleman acquisition, moreover, would acutely impair Morgan Stanley from defending CPH’s allegations. CPH and MAFCO are highly sophisticated parties who (according to their own prior interrogatory responses) have entered into a spate of acquisition transactions – precisely like the Coleman Transaction – in which they received stock as part of the consideration. Morgan Stanley is entitled to explore whether CPH and MAFCO performed the same types and degree of due diligence and financial analysis for the Coleman transaction as it did for these other sales, and whether CPH and MAFCO availed themselves of the same in-house resources and expertise in deciding whether to proceed with those transactions.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, Morgan Stanley respectfully requests an order compelling CPH to respond to Morgan Stanley’s Third Set of Interrogatories, Interrogatory No. 2.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

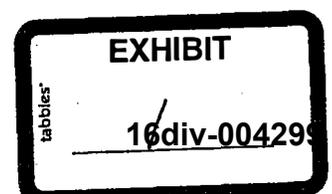

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S THIRD SET OF INTERROGATORIES TO PLAINTIFF COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.

Pursuant to the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") hereby requests that Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") answer the following interrogatories and otherwise specify objections, if any, in accordance with the definitions and instructions contained herein.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.
2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.
3. Each interrogatory should be answered separately and fully, unless it is objected to, in which event the reasons for the objections should be stated with specificity. The answers are to be signed by plaintiffs and the objections, if any, are to be signed by the attorney(s).

making them. Where a complete answer to a particular interrogatory is not possible, the interrogatory should be answered to the extent possible and a statement should be made indicating why only a partial answer is given, the efforts made by you to obtain the information and the source from which all responsive information may be obtained, to the best of your knowledge or belief.

4. If it is claimed that information responsive to any interrogatory is privileged, work product, or otherwise protected from disclosure, state the nature and basis for any such claim of privilege, work product, or other ground for nondisclosure and identify: (a) the subject matter of any such information; (b) if the information is embodied in a document, the author of the document and each person to whom the original or a copy of the document was sent; (c) if the information was communicated orally, the person making the communication and all persons present at or participating in the communication; (d) the date of the document or oral communication; and (e) the general subject matter of the document or oral communication, within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order. Any part of an answer to which you do not claim privilege or work product should be given in full.

5. The term "identify" (with respect to documents) means to give, to the extent known, the (i) type of document; (ii) general subject matter; (iii) date of the document; and (iv) author(s), addressee(s) and recipient(s).

6. The term "identify" (with respect to persons) means to give, to the extent known, the person's full name, present or last known address, and when referring to a natural person, additionally, the present or last known place of employment. Once a person has been identified in accordance with this subparagraph, only the name of that person need be listed in response to subsequent discovery requesting the identification of that person.

7. When used in reference to a person other than a natural person, "identify" means: (a) to state its name; (b) to describe its nature (e.g., corporation, partnership, etc.); (c) to state the location of its principal place of business; and (d) to identify the person or persons employed by such entity whose actions on behalf of the entity are responsive to the interrogatory.

8. When used with respect to the identification of facts, acts, events, occurrences, meetings, telephone conferences or communications, "identify" means to describe with specificity the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference, or communication in question, including, but not limited to: (a) identifying all participants in the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication; (b) stating the date(s) on which the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication took place; (c) stating the location(s) at which the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication took place; and (d) providing a description of the substance of the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication.

9. The terms "any," "all" and "each" shall be construed to mean "any," "all," or "each."

10. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "including but not limited to."

11. The present tense shall be construed to include the past and future tenses.

12. Unless otherwise indicated, these interrogatories request information for the period beginning January 1, 1996.

DEFINITIONS

1. "CPH" means Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

2. "MAFCO" means MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

3. "MS & Co." means Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

4. The term "person" is defined as any natural person or any business, legal or governmental entity or association.

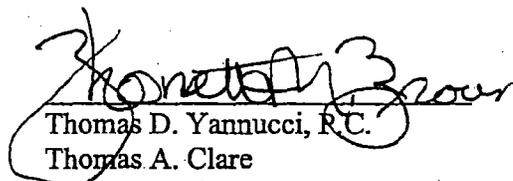

5. The terms "you" or "your" means "CPH" as defined in Definition 16.

INTERROGATORIES

1. State with particularity the 1997 and 1998 net worth, income, revenue and global holdings (including non-MAFCO holdings) of MAFCO, CPH, Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, and any other MAFCO or CPH employee who participated in the due diligence or financial review of Sunbeam's acquisition of the Coleman Company.

2. Identify all persons at CPH or MAFCO whose job responsibilities included, in 1997 or 1998, due diligence or financial review of proposed mergers and acquisitions, including a description of each person's educational and employment history, a description of any accounting or financial certifications or licenses held by such persons, and a description of any financial or business training they have had.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO DEFENDANT MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S
THIRD SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), by its attorneys, and pursuant to Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280, 1.340 and 1.350, hereby responds and objects to Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's ("Morgan Stanley") Third Set of Interrogatories ("Interrogatories") dated October 13, 2003 as follows:

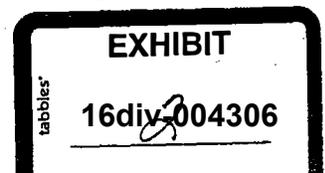

INITIAL OBJECTIONS

1. CPH incorporates by reference the Initial Objections set forth in its written response to Morgan Stanley's first set of interrogatories.

INTERROGATORY RESPONSES AND FURTHER OBJECTIONS

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: State with particularity the 1997 and 1998 net worth, income, revenue and global holdings (including non-MAFCO holdings) of MAFCO, CPH, Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, and any other MAFCO or CPH employee who participated in the due diligence or financial review of Sunbeam's acquisition of the Coleman Company.

RESPONSE: CPH notes that Interrogatory No. 1 constitutes multiple separate interrogatories. CPH objects to Interrogatory No. 1 as overbroad and not relevant to the litigation nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. CPH further objects to Interrogatory No. 1 because it seeks personal information about entities and individuals not party to this lawsuit, including Mafco, Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, and other individuals employed by Mafco or CPH.

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify all persons at CPH or MAFCO whose job responsibilities included, in 1997 or 1998, due diligence or financial review of proposed mergers and acquisitions, including a description of each person's educational and employment history, a description of any accounting or financial certifications or licenses held by such persons, and a description of any financial or business training they have had.

RESPONSE: CPH notes that Interrogatory No. 2 constitutes multiple separate interrogatories. CPH objects to Interrogatory No. 2 insofar as it seeks information related to Mafco, a non-party to this lawsuit. CPH further objects to Interrogatory No. 2 as overbroad and as seeking information not relevant to the litigation nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence because Interrogatory No. 2 is not limited to individuals who performed due diligence concerning the transaction by which Sunbeam acquired CPH's interest in The Coleman Company, Inc. CPH further objects to Interrogatory No. 2 on the ground that it is vague, ambiguous, and overbroad insofar as it fails to define the term "due diligence" or otherwise identify with sufficient particularity the activities that might be encompassed by that term.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations, Arbitrations, and/or SEC Administrative Proceedings with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1997 through the date of trial of this matter, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- a) The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- b) The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation";
and
- c) The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

VERIFIED MOTION TO ADMIT
MICHAEL C. OCCHUIZZO, PRO HAC VICE

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., pursuant Fla. R. Jud. Adm. 2.061, requests this Court to admit attorney Michael C. Occhuizzo, pro hac vice, and in support of this Motion, states the following:

1. Defendant requests that this Court permit Michael C. Occhuizzo, an attorney with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis LLP whose address is 655 15th Street, N.W. – 12th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, to appear pro hac vice and participate fully in this action as additional counsel on behalf of Defendant.

2. Mr. Occhuizzo has been admitted to practice before all courts in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania since November 7, 2002, and all courts in the District of Columbia since December 8, 2003. Mr. Occhuizzo also has been admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and the United States District Court for the District of Western Pennsylvania. Mr. Occhuizzo is a member of the State Bar of Pennsylvania and the Bar of the District of Columbia and is in good standing with respect to such memberships. Mr. Occhuzzo has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Occhuzzo has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Mr. Occhuzzo has not filed a motion for permission to appear in Florida state courts in the preceding five years. The representation of Defendant in this matter commenced on May 8, 2003.

7. Mr. Occhuzzo will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Plaintiff has been consulted regarding this motion and has no objection.

WHEREFORE, Defendant respectfully requests that this Court enter an order admitting Michael C. Occhuzzo, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing Defendant as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that he has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

ORDER SETTING JURY TRIAL AND DIRECTING PRETRIAL AND MEDIATION PROCEDURES

I. SCHEDULING

This action is set for jury trial on the calendar beginning March 22, 2004 through April 23, 2004 at 9:45 o'clock a.m. YOU MUST APPEAR AT 9:00 O'CLOCK A.M. ON Friday, March 12, 2004, IN COURTROOM 11B, Palm Beach County Courthouse, 205 N. Dixie Hwy, West Palm Beach, FLORIDA FOR THE JURY CALENDAR CALL. (15 days reserved).

The trial will be scheduled sometime during the calendar beginning March 22, 2004 through April 23, 2004, at a date and time to be provided at the calendar call, subject to the court's ordering a later case setting.

II. UNIFORM PRETRIAL PROCEDURE

A. On the last business day no later than 60 days prior to calendar call, the parties shall exchange lists of all trial exhibits, names and addresses of all trial witnesses, and names and addresses of all expert witnesses.

B. On the last business day no later than 50 days prior to calendar call, the parties shall exchange lists of names and addresses of all rebuttal witnesses.

C. In addition to the names and addresses of each expert retained to formulate an expert opinion with regard to this cause, both on the initial listing and on rebuttal, the parties shall provide:

1. the subject matter about which the expert is expected to testify;
2. the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testified;
3. a summary of the grounds for each opinion;
4. a copy of any written reports issued by the expert regarding this case; and
5. a copy of the expert's curriculum vitae.

D. On the last business day no later than thirty (30) days prior to calendar call the parties shall confer and:

1. discuss settlement;
2. simplify the issues and stipulate, in writing, to as many facts and issues as possible;
3. prepare a Pre-trial Stipulation in accordance with paragraph E; and
4. list all objections to trial exhibits.

E. PRETRIAL STIPULATIONS MUST BE FILED. It shall be the duty of counsel for the Plaintiff to see that the Pre-trial Stipulation is drawn, executed by counsel for all parties, and filed with the Clerk no later than twenty (20) days prior to calendar call. UNILATERAL PRETRIAL STATEMENTS ARE DISALLOWED, UNLESS APPROVED BY THE COURT, AFTER NOTICE AND HEARING SHOWING GOOD CAUSE. Counsel for all parties are charged with good faith cooperation in this regard. The Pre-trial Stipulation shall contain in separately numbered paragraphs:

1. a list of all pending motions requiring action by the Court and the dates those motions are set for hearing;
2. stipulated facts which require no proof at trial which may be read to the trier of fact;
3. a statement of all issues of fact for determination at trial;
4. each party's numbered list of trial exhibits with specific objections, if any, to schedules attached to the Stipulation;
5. each party's numbered list of trial witnesses with addresses (including all known rebuttal witnesses); the list of witnesses shall be on separate schedules attached to the Stipulation;
6. a statement of estimated trial time;
7. names of attorneys to try case; and
8. number of peremptory challenges per party.

F. FILING OF PRE-TRIAL STIPULATION. Failure to file the Pre-trial Stipulation or a Court Approved Unilateral Stipulation as above provided may result in the case's being stricken from the Court's calendar at its sounding or other sanctions.

G. ADDITIONAL, EXHIBITS, WITNESSES OR OBJECTIONS. At trial, the parties shall be strictly limited to exhibits and witnesses disclosed and objections reserved on the schedules attached to the Pre-trial Stipulation prepared in accordance with Paragraphs D and E, absent agreement specifically state in the Pre-trial Stipulation or order of the Court upon good cause shown. Failure to reserve objections constitutes a waiver. A party desiring to use an exhibit or witness discovered after counsel have conferred pursuant to paragraph D shall immediately furnish the Court and other counsel with a description of the exhibit or with the witness' name and address and the expected subject matter of the witness' testimony, together with the reason for the late discovery of the exhibit or witness. Use of the exhibit or witness may be allowed by the Court for good cause shown or to prevent manifest injustice.

H. DISCOVERY. Unless otherwise agreed in the Pre-trial Stipulation, all discovery must be completed no later than ten (10) days before the date set for calendar call, absent agreement for later discovery specifically stated in the Pre-trial Stipulation or for other good cause shown.

I. PRE-TRIAL CONFERENCE. No pre-trial conference pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.200 is set by the Court on its own motion. If a pre-trial conference is set upon motion of a party, counsel shall meet and prepare a stipulation pursuant to Paragraphs D and E and file the stipulation no later than five (5) days before the conference. Failure to request a pre-trial conference in a timely fashion constitutes a waiver of the notice of requirement of Rule 1.200. Motions for Summary Judgment will not be heard at any pre-trial conference.

J. UNIQUE QUESTIONS OF LAW. On the date of trial, counsel for the parties are directed to submit to the Court appropriate memoranda with citations to legal authority in support of any unique legal questions which may reasonably be anticipated to arise during the trial.

K. MODIFICATION TO UNIFORM PRE-TRIAL PROCEDURE. Upon written stipulation of the parties filed with the Court, the Pre-trial Procedure, except for items II D-F, inclusive, may be modified in accordance with the parties' stipulation, except to the extent that the stipulation may interfere with the Court's scheduling of the this matter for trial or hinder the orderly progress of the trial.

L. PREMARKING EXHIBITS. Prior to trial, each party shall meet with and assist the clerk in marking for identification all exhibits, as directed by the clerk.

M. DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS. No later than 45 days prior to calendar call, each party shall serve his, her, or its designation of depositions, or portions of depositions, each intends to offer as testimony in his, her, or its case in chief. No later than 35 days prior to calendar call, each opposing party shall serve his, her, or its counter (or "fairness") designations to portions of depositions designated, together with objections to the depositions, or portions thereof, originally designated. No later than 25 days prior to calendar call, each party shall serve his, her, or its objections to counter designations served by an opposing party. It shall be the obligation of the objecting party's counsel to secure sufficient hearing time for the Court to hear and rule on the objections prior calendar call.

III. MEDIATION

A. All parties are required to participate in mediation.

1. The appearance of counsel who will try the case and representatives of each party with full authority to enter into a complete compromise and settlement is mandatory. If insurance is involved, an adjuster with authority up to the policy limits or the most recent demand, whichever is lower, shall attend.

2. At least one week before the conference, all parties shall file with the mediator a brief, written summary of the case containing a list of issues as to each party. If an attorney or party filing the summary wishes its content to remain confidential, he/she must advise the mediator in writing when the report is filed.

3. All discussions, representations, and statements made at the mediation conference shall be privileged consistent with Florida Statutes sections 44.102 and 90.408.

4. The mediator has no power to compel or enforce a settlement agreement. If a settlement is reached, it shall be the responsibility of the attorneys or parties to reduce the agreement to writing and to comply with Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.730(b), unless waived.

B. The Plaintiff's attorney shall be responsible for scheduling mediation. The parties should agree on a mediator. If they are unable to agree, any party may apply to the Court for appointment of a mediator in conformity with Rule 1.720 (f), Fla. R. Civ. P. The lead attorney or party shall file and serve on all parties and the mediator a Notice of Mediation giving the time, place, and date of the mediation and the mediator's name. The mediator shall be paid $175.00 per hour, unless otherwise agreed by the parties.

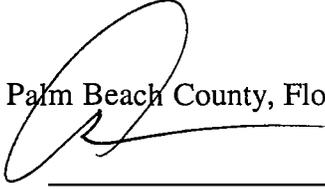

C. Completion of mediation is a prerequisite to trial. If mediation is not conducted, or if a party fails to participate in mediation, the case may be stricken from the trial calendar, pleadings may be stricken, and other sanctions may be imposed.

D. Any party opposing mediation may proceed under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.700(b).

IV. NONCOMPLIANCE

NONCOMPLIANCE WITH ANY PORTION OF THIS ORDER MAY RESULT IN THE STRIKING OF THE CASE, WITNESSES, OR EXHIBITS, OR IMPOSITION OF SUCH OTHER SANCTIONS AS ARE JUST.

DONE AND ORDERED in West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida, this 6 day of January, 2004.

2 The hearing before the Hon. Elizabeth T. Maass was
3 taken before me, Susan Fannon, Certified Shorthand Reporter,
4 Notary Public, State of Florida at Large, at the Palm Beach
5 County Courthouse, 250 South Dixie Highway, West Palm Beach,
6 Florida, beginning at the hour of 12:30 p.m. on Thursday,
7 January 8, 2004 pursuant to the Notice filed herein, in the
8 above-entitled cause pending before the above-named Court.

9 - - - -

10 MR. SCAROLA: We thank you for accommodating
11 us, your Honor.

12 MS. BROWN: Yes, thank you.

13 THE COURT: That's okay. Coleman (Parent)
14 and Morgan. This is Plaintiff's motion for protective order
15 as to certain non-party discovery. What did you want to say
16 in support of it?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, your Honor. Your
18 Honor, I have provided some outlines that were helpful in my 19 own analysis of these issues, and I hope they will be of 20 some assistance to the Court as well.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I am handing them to you in the 23 order in which it is likely that I will reference them.

24 THE COURT: Thank you.

25 MR. SCAROLA: It's probably helpful to begin

00004

1 by just reminding your Honor that this is a case involving a
2 purchase and sale concerning Sunbeam Corporation. Sunbeam
3 Corporation, it is basically acknowledged by both sides,
4 engaged in fraudulent accounting practices which had an
5 enormous impact on its stock price.

6 Those fraudulent accounting practices became
7 publicly disclosed subsequent to the transaction engaged in
8 in which Coleman (Parent) Holding Company, a major holder of
9 Sunbeam stock, excuse me, in which Coleman (Parent) Holding
10 Company transferred an interest that it had in the Coleman
11 Company in exchange for, among other consideration, a
12 significant amount of Sunbeam stock.

13 Morgan Stanley was involved in that transaction
14 as a financial advisor and provided information to Coleman

16div-004359

15 (Parent) Holding which we allege we relied upon. And
16 there are basically two claims. There are fraudulent
17 misrepresentation claims and there are negligent
18 misrepresentation claims.

19 With regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation
20 claims, obviously we are alleging that there was actual
21 knowledge on the part of Morgan Stanley with respect to the
22 fraudulent practices of Sunbeam, which actual knowledge was
23 concealed from Coleman (Parent) Holding Company.

24 The negligent misrepresentation claim is that --
25 really one of two things, either Morgan Stanley knew of the 00005

1 fraudulent practices and negligently failed to disclose what
2 they knew or negligently failed to have learned of the
3 fraudulent practices.

4 And I think it is important to understand those
5 issues so that we can understand whether there is any
6 possible relevance to the discovery that is presently being
7 sought. And basically the discovery that is presently being
8 sought is discovery of both a law firm and an investment
9 banking firm that provided services to Coleman (Parent)
10 Holding and MAFCO its parent company in connection with the 11 Sunbeam transaction, but also have provided services to
12 Coleman (Parent) Holding and/or MAFCO in connection with
13 completely unrelated purchases and sales in which a transfer
14 of stock also was involved in one respect or another.

15 Now, clearly with regard to the fraudulent
16 misrepresentation claim, I suggest that there is no possible
17 theory of relevance concerning the discovery that is being
18 sought from those third parties. What we are told by Morgan
19 Stanley is that they want to fully explore -- and this is a
20 quote from their responsive memorandum, and it is contained
21 under the section MS contentions -- they are entitled to
22 fully explore the competence and sophistication of Coleman
23 (Parent) Holdings own paid legal and financial advisers.

24 Now, the competence and sophistication of some
25 third party with regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation
00006

1 claim could not possibly have any bearing. If any argument
2 is to be made with regard to the relevance and materiality
3 of this information, it would seem to me that it needs to be
4 made with respect to the negligent misrepresentation claims.
5 And those are the claims that I've sort of briefly outlined
6 the issues on in this first page.

7 The issue on the claim that we have made is was
8 Morgan Stanley negligent in misrepresenting Sunbeam's
9 financial condition to Coleman (Parent) Holding; and we
10 prove our case in that regard by establishing that they knew
11 about Sunbeam's fraudulent accounting and negligently failed
12 to disclose it or they negligently failed to discover the 13 fraud.

14 What these third parties knew or were capable of 15 knowing couldn't have any bearing on that issue. So it
16 seems that the only potential bearing has to be on the

17 defense side of this case, the comparative negligence claim
18 that has been made against us.

19 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. And I
20 apologize, I didn't have that long to look at what the 21 parties filed, but it strikes me that one of the things
22 Morgan Stanley is saying is that this is potentially
23 relevant to whether your client relied on the misstatements
24 whether they were fraudulently or negligently made; and, if
25 so, whether the reliance was reasonable. And one way you

00007

1 could determine that is if in similar deals they did
2 tremendous due diligence and in this deal they only did a
3 little due diligence, it may be more likely that in this
4 deal they relied on the representations. Whereas if they
5 always did tremendous due diligence, maybe it is less
6 likely.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Okay, and I think that I
8 understood that that is what they were getting at also;
9 however, this is what they also say in their memo.

10 Page 2, "It is evident that Coleman (Parent)
11 Holding and its advisors conducted little or no due
12 diligence on their own," and that's the little or no due
13 diligence on their own is their emphasis, "prior to closing
14 the acquisition transaction with Sunbeam."

15 In fact, the defense contention is that our 16 negligence was not in the manner in which we conducted our 17 own due diligence but in choosing to rely upon an advisor to
18 our opposite party in the transaction.

19 There is no issue in this case about whether
20 Wachtell Lipton, if Wachtell Lipton was given the chore in
21 connection with this transaction of conducting a thorough
22 due diligence investigation, would have discovered the
23 fraud. It certainly isn't going to be our position that if 24 a thorough due diligence investigation was conducted by
25 Wachtell Lipton, they wouldn't have found it because we're

00008

1 arguing that a thorough due diligence investigation not only
2 would have but in fact did disclose these fraudulent
3 transactions.

4 We certainly wouldn't be contending that a
5 thorough due diligence investigation by Wachtell Lipton
6 could not have discovered this fraud. In the same respect
7 we would not be arguing that a thorough due diligence
8 investigation by Credit Suisse would have failed to disclose
9 the fraudulent transaction.

10 THE COURT: Is that the same as stipulating
11 that neither Wachtell Lipton or Credit Suisse did sufficient
12 due diligence?

13 MR. SCAROLA: It is stipulating that neither
14 Wachtell Lipton nor Credit Suisse did the kind of due
15 diligence that would have disclosed these fraudulent
16 transactions because they didn't disclose the fraudulent
17 transactions. And they are not alleging that they did.
18 That's simply not a contention. We acknowledge that

16div-004361

19 these companies had the capacity, had they been given
20 the assignment, to uncover these fraudulent
21 transactions.

22 THE COURT: Do you agree your client did not
23 give them that assignment?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, yes, we agree that they
25 were not given the assignment to conduct the kind of due
00009

1 diligence investigation that would have uncovered these
2 fraudulent transactions. We in fact did rely and
3 acknowledge that we relied, and it is inherent in our case
4 to contend that we relied not upon Credit Suisse or upon
5 Wachtell Lipton, but rather our allegation is we relied upon
6 Morgan Stanley.

7 So if we're coming before the Court saying we
8 relied upon Morgan Stanley, what possible relevance could
9 there be to establishing the degree of expertise of any
10 third party?

11 Whether the due diligence investigation conducted
12 by Morgan Stanley did or did not meet the generally accepted
13 standard of care for the conduct of due diligence under
14 these particular circumstances cannot be proven by proving
15 what Wachtell Lipton did in some other case or what anyone,
16 any one individual did in any particular case.

17 THE COURT: But couldn't there be some
18 potential relevancy then to what your client directed them
19 to do in other cases? I mean, if in other similar
20 transactions your client gave them directions to do full due
21 diligence, the kind that would have turned up this kind of 22 massive fraud; and in this one case did not give them such
23 directions, it strikes me that is a ripe avenue of 24 cross-examination.

25 MR. SCAROLA: But that is not a contested
00010

1 issue. That's my point.

2 THE COURT: But you're agreeing your client
3 was negligent in the type of direction it gave its own
4 advisor?

5 MR. SCAROLA: No, no, the issue becomes was
6 it negligent for my client to rely upon Morgan Stanley and
7 not to have retained an independent due diligence
8 third-party investigator in light of all the surrounding 9 circumstances of this particular case. And that issue has
10 no light shed upon it by what happened in unrelated
11 transactions. And to emphasize that, I put together -- and 12 this is really right off the top of my head --

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: -- a list of possible factors
15 influencing a stock purchaser's due diligence. And before
16 they could begin to demonstrate that there is any possible
17 probative value in looking to see what these companies did
18 in other transactions, they would need to demonstrate that
19 these were the same circumstances.

20 It's no different than if we were talking about

21 an automobile accident case. You can't prove that the 22 driver was negligent in this case by bringing in five other
23 people to say I saw other cars driving at the same rate of 24 speed. I saw other cars who also didn't come to a full stop
25 at that intersection. The fact that a majority of people

00011

1 speed on I-95 through the construction zones that exist on
2 that roadway today does not prove that a reasonably prudent
3 person would speed through those construction zones. And
4 the fact that any one person was speeding doesn't prove that
5 this driver was not negligent in speeding through the
6 construction zone on this particular occasion at this
7 particular time.

8 But to begin to even suggest that it's probative,
9 you need to prove that all of the circumstances were the
10 same. You need to prove that it's publicly traded and not
11 privately held, the value of the stock relative to the total
12 transaction, the nature of the company, warranties that are
13 made in connection with the transaction, the security that
14 is offered for those warranties, the competence, reputation
15 and integrity of people and entities on the other side of 16 the transaction. Is it reasonable for me to rely upon what
17 you say?

18 Well, whether it is reasonable for me to rely
19 upon what you say about the value of this stock depends upon
20 what kind of reputation you have with respect to honesty and
21 truthfulness. What I know about your expertise in judging
22 the value of the stock, your competence with regard to these
23 particular matters. And then I need to take a look at the 24 quality and quantity of the information available from 25 competent and trustworthy third parties independent of this

00012

1 source.

2 The kind of investigation I need to do depends at
3 least upon those kinds of factors. And our contention in
4 this case is it was reasonable for us to have relied upon
5 Morgan Stanley.

6 They may bring in expert witnesses who say that
7 reliance was unreasonable under these circumstances and they
8 should have hired Wachtell Lipton and given them a broader
9 mission than what they were given in this case.

10 They can fully discover, and we have offered them
11 all of the discovery with regard to what Wachtell Lipton did
12 with respect to this transaction, what was done by Credit
13 Suisse with regard to this transaction, and at the very 14 least before they should be able to come in and begin to 15 request information concerning what was done in other
16 transactions, first they should examine what was done in
17 this transaction and the assignment that was given to them,
18 which they have not yet done. And, secondly, they need to 19 establish some parallel between other transactions they want
20 to look at and this transaction. If there is no parallel in 21 the transactions, if the only thing they had in common was
22 they both involved some transfer of stock and that is all

16div-004363

23 they are able to show, it could not possibly have any
24 probative value whatsoever in terms of establishing any of 25 the contested issues in this lawsuit.

00013

1 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. You're
2 characterizing sort of a comparative negligence as to
3 whether your client was negligent relying on the
4 representations from Morgan Stanley; but I sort of thought
5 some of the negligence or comparative negligence alleged
6 would have been that your client was negligent in not
7 performing its own due diligence.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I think that's really part and
9 parcel.

10 THE COURT: I don't think that's the same
11 thing. If you sort of have your traffic analogy, I may be
12 negligent if I'm in the intersection and I don't have the
13 right of way and somebody says come on (indicating) and I
14 don't check it, I just go and get an accident whereas I may
15 be negligent by relying on that, but I also may be negligent
16 by not looking myself and seeing if there was other traffic.

17 MR. SCAROLA: I agree.

18 THE COURT: And I think what they are
19 accusing you of is not having looked at the other traffic.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Then they are entitled to
21 absolutely, fully and completely explore what we did in this
22 transaction.

23 THE COURT: How would it not be relevant that
24 every other time you bothered to turn your head and look?

25 MR. SCAROLA: The same way it would be

00014

1 irrelevant in the auto negligence case to which we are
2 analogizing this to bring witnesses to come in and say that
3 I always stopped at that stop sign before.

4 THE COURT: You're talking about you, not
5 third parties.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, me, me. I always stopped
7 at that stop sign before. Whether I always stopped at that
8 stop sign before or I never stopped at that stop sign before
9 does not determine whether I was negligent in failing to
10 stop on that occasion.

11 It may be that in every other transaction I have
12 conducted -- I meaning Coleman (Parent) Holding -- in every
13 other transaction I've conducted I chose, not that I needed
14 to, not that the generally accepted standard of care
15 required me to, but I chose to retain Wachtell Lipton and
16 Credit Suisse both to conduct the most thorough due
17 diligence investigation in the world, to conduct them
18 independently of one another, to make sure that their 19 results corroborated and maybe even to hire a third party as 20 well.

21 But the fact that I triple checked Transaction A
22 does not mean that in order to meet the generally accepted
23 standard of care I was required to triple check other
24 transactions.

16div-004364

25 It just doesn't have any probative value, first

00015

1 of all, because you haven't established that these other
2 transactions in fact presented the same set of
3 circumstances. But even if they did, my choice to use
4 extraordinary care in other circumstances does not mean that
5 I was negligent in failing to use extraordinary care in this
6 circumstance.

7 THE COURT: Let me ask you this, and I
8 apologize my thinking is not very mature on this issue.
9 Assume at trial we would require expert testimony as to what
10 is the level of due diligence that's required in this type
11 of transaction.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe that that is a
13 matter of common knowledge to a jury. I think it clearly
14 will require expert testimony. Somebody is going to have to 15 come in and say the generally accepted standard of care for 16 due diligence under these circumstances is this.

17 THE COURT: And presumably somebody other
18 than your client?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Presumably somebody other than
20 my client, sure.

21 THE COURT: And I assume what you're telling
22 me is that somebody other than your client, which your
23 client has chosen to do on past occasions, isn't going to
24 effect what is the standard of appropriate care?

25 MR. SCAROLA: No, ma'am. The generally
00016

1 accepted standard of care is not a matter of majority rule.
2 It is not a matter of consensus. It is what a reasonably
3 prudent business person would do under the same or similar
4 circumstances.

5 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Are you
6 willing to agree now that no sort of affiliate or employee
7 of your client will offer testimony at trial as to standard
8 of care?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes --

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: -- I am because I really don't
12 believe that we would have a credible expert witness if that
13 expert witness were an affiliate of my client. We're going
14 to choose someone of independence to offer that testimony.
15 We're not going to choose somebody in-house to offer that
16 standard of care testimony.

17 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

18 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, first, to start, I
19 want to thank you again for accommodating my schedule.

20 THE COURT: Sure. I'm sorry you missed the
21 first flight back.

22 MS. BROWN: I do want to start with a little
23 bit of context myself. It is interesting the
24 characterization that the Plaintiff has presented of what
25 this case is about because the standard or the principal

00017

16div-004365

1 that they wish to apply here is that the only transaction
2 that is relevant is their transfer of 82 percent of their
3 interest in Coleman to Sunbeam; but I will tell you -- and
4 as you know from the motions coming before -- that is not a
5 standard they've applied to their own discovery.

6 You can go back and look at the document requests
7 they served in May on our counsel, Davis Polk, and they were
8 before your Honor on a motion to compel documents related to 9 Scott Paper and Kimberly Clark, if you'll recall. So this
10 principal is a new found principal that they're asserting
11 for your Honor that they have not held themselves to.

12 In addition, your Honor, they claim, as
13 Mr. Scarola noted, to rely upon Morgan Stanley. The issue
14 in this case is not simply whether they were negligent. It
15 is whether they in fact did rely on Morgan Stanley. We are 16 entitled, your Honor, to find and assert proof that would
17 show in fact they did not rely --

18 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind of 19 things you think this discovery would develop that would
20 give you evidence on that point.

21 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, I think, as you have
22 noted, there's a difference between what they relied upon
23 and how they relied upon these particular parties, CSFB and
24 Wachtell, we're not going into other parties, how they have
25 relied upon these parties in these types of actions.

00018

1 And I think we have been very, very careful to
2 narrow it. We're only asking generally about due diligence.
3 We're only asking about matters related to CSFB, to Coleman
4 (Parent) and to MAFCO, and we're only asking about
5 transactions in which they took back stock.

6 MAFCO and CPH are very sophisticated parties,
7 your Honor. They engage in a multitude of types of
8 transactions. They are doing deals daily.

9 We are limiting ourselves to a very narrow scope.
10 And after things went awry in 1998, there was press
11 expressing surprise at the perfunctory due diligence that
12 CPH performed. We're entitled to discovery that would not
13 only show that indeed it was perfunctory by a general
14 standard but by their own standard and that may reveal why,
15 what motivation --

16 THE COURT: Why do you think you could put
17 evidence before the jury that was perfunctory by their own
18 standard if they are not offering expert testimony as to the 19 standard of care?

20 MS. BROWN: I see this, your Honor -- and I
21 think you alluded to this earlier -- as similar to what one
22 might do with an expert.

23 While their own witnesses may not seek to have
24 themselves recognized as experts, MAFCO and CPH, mostly
25 MAFCO, holds itself out to be supreme deal masters, if you

00019

1 will. One way, the most effective way sometimes to
2 cross-examine someone who is akin to an expert is not to ask

16div-004366

3 them what they did, but to establish what it is that could
4 have been done.

5 For instance, if this were an expert deposition
6 or testimony, you would obtain information about that
7 expert's prior testimony, about other testing or whatever
8 that they did in similar situations and inquire of them why
9 they didn't do that in this particular case.

10 THE COURT: But if they are not being offered
11 as an expert as to the standard of care, that wouldn't be
12 relevant, would it?

13 MS. BROWN: I believe, your Honor, that it
14 would be relevant to show again it's not only the standard
15 of care it's the motivation. Was there a reason, whether it
16 was strategic or otherwise, that they did not perform the
17 type of due diligence that they performed in other cases.

18 We believe that their motivation will be shown in 19 part by what they did. In other words, your Honor, we
20 believe there may have been reasons why the due diligence
21 they performed in this case is not as extensive, the
22 assignments were not as extensive as they were in other
23 cases. We want to show that. And then we want to show the 24 reasons or potential reasons why.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

00020

1 MS. BROWN: Also, your Honor, I believe that
2 the competence of their advisors is relevant, again, to
3 establish whether or not they relied upon Morgan Stanley.
4 Is that a credible assertion? In order to establish whether
5 that's a credible assertion, we can establish their own
6 sophistication, the sophistication of these particular
7 advisors they historically relied upon and how they have
8 used these advisors as tools to perform due diligence; and,
9 again, we have been very careful to craft our request so
10 that they are limited to CPH and MAFCO, limited to other
11 similar structural deals where they took stock back and
12 limited to due diligence.

13 The other thing that I would note about these
14 requests, your Honor, which I alluded to before is the fact
15 that it's ironic that they are before you seeking to bar
16 this sort of discovery when Morgan Stanley is seeking to
17 disprove their assertions and also to prove our defenses
18 when they, themselves, have sought this discovery from us
19 and from our advisors.

20 For instance, with regard to the due diligence
21 that they performed, that CSFB and Wachtell performed on
22 other transactions, CPH asked for and we produced documents,
23 Morgan Stanley produced documents related to general due
24 diligence, not limited to this transaction, as CPH now seeks 25 to limit discovery. In each one of the requests that they

00021

1 seek to bar, your Honor, there is a similar request CPH has
2 asserted and has received documents or other discovery
3 related to that request that is not limited to the deal at
4 issue.

16div-004367

5 THE COURT: Well, except it is a little bit
6 different. I mean, your client is in a different position
7 than the Plaintiff is, and you're alleging to have done
8 things. You're alleged to be sort of the expert here. So I
9 can imagine there would be certain discovery that would be
10 properly promulgated on your client that may not be on the
11 Plaintiff.

12 MS. BROWN: I am not sure that we're alleged
13 to be anymore of an expert than CSFB. We were on the 14 opposite side of the table of MAFCO. We were financial 15 advisor to Sunbeam. CSFB was on the opposite side of the 16 table of Sunbeam and they were a financial advisor to CPH
17 and MAFCO. They are similarly situated. We're no more
18 experts, to use that term, than they are.

19 And I can go through again each one of the 20 requests. Mr. Scarola didn't go through the particular
21 requests. But for example, where we think due diligence
22 related to other stock deals, we would like to establish the 23 universe of possible, reasonable due diligence, establish
24 how CPH and MAFCO used their advisors for due diligence more
25 than they did here. And then in other cases they have

00022

1 availed themselves of the rights and abilities to inspect
2 the records and inspect documents of the other side under a
3 confidentiality agreement.

4 I would note as well, your Honor, that the
5 transactions that we are asking CPH and CSFB and Wachtell
6 about are transactions that came from discovery requests
7 that we promulgated to CPH and MAFCO. We asked them,
8 identify similarly structured deals. And when they answered
9 that discovery request, they didn't assert the relevance
10 argument that they have newly asserted here.

11 So I don't think that it's prudent or fair at 12 this point to establish a new principal for discovery that
13 they have not held themselves to, to allow them to conduct a
14 wealth of discovery relating to deals other than the deal at
15 issue here, for whatever purposes, and then to seek to limit
16 us to the transfer of the 82 percent interest from Coleman
17 to Sunbeam.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Any other argument?

19 MS. BROWN: No, your Honor. If you're
20 interested, I do have the reciprocal discovery request, I
21 can point out to you --

22 THE COURT: That sort of doesn't go to
23 whether this discovery request is appropriate, which is
24 really all I am looking at today. Okay. Thank you.

25 Did you want to respond?

00023

1 MR. SCAROLA: Briefly, your Honor. Thank
2 you. Your Honor, the Evidence Code does specifically
3 recognize circumstances where evidence of routine practice
4 is admissible. It is section 90.406. And what it says is,
5 "Evidence of the routine practice of an organization,
6 whether corroborated or not and regardless of the presence

16div-004368

7 eye witnesses, is admissible to prove that the conduct of
8 the organization on a particular occasion was in conformity
9 with the routine practice."

10 So it specifically tells us when a business
11 should be subjected to discovery with regard to what its 12 routine practices are.

13 And counsel is right, we have requested
14 information from Morgan Stanley with regard to its routine
15 practices. We have asked them to produce any manual,
16 memorandum or other document describing its routine
17 requirements for due diligence because it is our burden to
18 establish what this business did in this transaction.

19 And one of the ways in which we prove what Morgan
20 Stanley did in this transaction is to prove what its routine
21 practices were. We have not sought discovery, and Morgan
22 Stanley has declined to provide discovery with regard to any
23 other particular transaction.

24 We want their policies, practices and procedures
25 at this point in time but we have not sought -- at least as 00024

1 of now -- to go beyond what their documents say their
2 policies, practices and procedure are.

3 MS. BROWN: Your Honor --

4 THE COURT: Hold on.

5 MR. SCAROLA: They, rather than attempting to
6 prove through evidence of the routine practice of an
7 organization that what we did was in conformity with the
8 routine practice, they are telling you that their contention
9 is that what we did was not in conformity with our routine
10 practice. And we acknowledge that it was not in conformity
11 with what we did in particular other circumstances because
12 this was a different transaction.

13 So the justification for the discovery simply 14 doesn't exist under the Evidence Code. Thank you, your
15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: Let me take it under
17 advisement. I need to spend a little time with the 18 requests themselves.

19 MS. BROWN: May I respond briefly?

20 THE COURT: No, because he goes first and
21 last. It's his motion. I know it is frustrating.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, your
23 Honor.

24 MS. BROWN: Thank you.

25 THE COURT: Thank you. Bye, bye. Have a 00025

1 good trip back.

2 (Thereupon, at 1 p.m. the proceedings
3 concluded.)

2 The hearing before the Hon. Elizabeth T. Maass was
3 taken before me, Susan Fannon, Certified Shorthand Reporter,
4 Notary Public, State of Florida at Large, at the Palm Beach
5 County Courthouse, 250 South Dixie Highway, West Palm Beach,
6 Florida, beginning at the hour of 12:30 p.m. on Thursday,
7 January 8, 2004 pursuant to the Notice filed herein, in the
8 above-entitled cause pending before the above-named Court.

9 - - - -

10 MR. SCAROLA: We thank you for accommodating
11 us, your Honor.

12 MS. BROWN: Yes, thank you.

13 THE COURT: That's okay. Coleman (Parent)
14 and Morgan. This is Plaintiff's motion for protective order
15 as to certain non-party discovery. What did you want to say
16 in support of it?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, your Honor. Your
18 Honor, I have provided some outlines that were helpful in my
19 own analysis of these issues, and I hope they will be of 20 some assistance to the Court as well.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I am handing them to you in the 23 order in which it is likely that I will reference them.

24 THE COURT: Thank you.

25 MR. SCAROLA: It's probably helpful to begin

00004

1 by just reminding your Honor that this is a case involving a
2 purchase and sale concerning Sunbeam Corporation. Sunbeam
3 Corporation, it is basically acknowledged by both sides,
4 engaged in fraudulent accounting practices which had an
5 enormous impact on its stock price.

6 Those fraudulent accounting practices became
7 publicly disclosed subsequent to the transaction engaged in
8 in which Coleman (Parent) Holding Company, a major holder of
9 Sunbeam stock, excuse me, in which Coleman (Parent) Holding
10 Company transferred an interest that it had in the Coleman
11 Company in exchange for, among other consideration, a
12 significant amount of Sunbeam stock.

13 Morgan Stanley was involved in that transaction
14 as a financial advisor and provided information to Coleman

15 (Parent) Holding which we allege we relied upon. And
16 there are basically two claims. There are fraudulent
17 misrepresentation claims and there are negligent
18 misrepresentation claims.

19 With regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation
20 claims, obviously we are alleging that there was actual
21 knowledge on the part of Morgan Stanley with respect to the
22 fraudulent practices of Sunbeam, which actual knowledge was
23 concealed from Coleman (Parent) Holding Company.

24 The negligent misrepresentation claim is that --
25 really one of two things, either Morgan Stanley knew of the 00005

1 fraudulent practices and negligently failed to disclose what
2 they knew or negligently failed to have learned of the
3 fraudulent practices.

4 And I think it is important to understand those
5 issues so that we can understand whether there is any
6 possible relevance to the discovery that is presently being
7 sought. And basically the discovery that is presently being
8 sought is discovery of both a law firm and an investment
9 banking firm that provided services to Coleman (Parent)
10 Holding and MAFCO its parent company in connection with the
11 Sunbeam transaction, but also have provided services to
12 Coleman (Parent) Holding and/or MAFCO in connection with
13 completely unrelated purchases and sales in which a transfer
14 of stock also was involved in one respect or another.

15 Now, clearly with regard to the fraudulent
16 misrepresentation claim, I suggest that there is no possible
17 theory of relevance concerning the discovery that is being
18 sought from those third parties. What we are told by Morgan
19 Stanley is that they want to fully explore -- and this is a
20 quote from their responsive memorandum, and it is contained
21 under the section MS contentions -- they are entitled to
22 fully explore the competence and sophistication of Coleman
23 (Parent) Holdings own paid legal and financial advisers.

24 Now, the competence and sophistication of some
25 third party with regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation
00006

1 claim could not possibly have any bearing. If any argument
2 is to be made with regard to the relevance and materiality
3 of this information, it would seem to me that it needs to be
4 made with respect to the negligent misrepresentation claims.
5 And those are the claims that I've sort of briefly outlined
6 the issues on in this first page.

7 The issue on the claim that we have made is was
8 Morgan Stanley negligent in misrepresenting Sunbeam's
9 financial condition to Coleman (Parent) Holding; and we
10 prove our case in that regard by establishing that they knew
11 about Sunbeam's fraudulent accounting and negligently failed
12 to disclose it or they negligently failed to discover the 13 fraud.

14 What these third parties knew or were capable of 15 knowing couldn't have any bearing on that issue. So it
16 seems that the only potential bearing has to be on the

17 defense side of this case, the comparative negligence claim
18 that has been made against us.

19 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. And I
20 apologize, I didn't have that long to look at what the
21 parties filed, but it strikes me that one of the things
22 Morgan Stanley is saying is that this is potentially
23 relevant to whether your client relied on the misstatements
24 whether they were fraudulently or negligently made; and, if
25 so, whether the reliance was reasonable. And one way you

00007

1 could determine that is if in similar deals they did
2 tremendous due diligence and in this deal they only did a
3 little due diligence, it may be more likely that in this
4 deal they relied on the representations. Whereas if they
5 always did tremendous due diligence, maybe it is less
6 likely.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Okay, and I think that I
8 understood that that is what they were getting at also;
9 however, this is what they also say in their memo.

10 Page 2, "It is evident that Coleman (Parent)
11 Holding and its advisors conducted little or no due
12 diligence on their own," and that's the little or no due
13 diligence on their own is their emphasis, "prior to closing
14 the acquisition transaction with Sunbeam."

15 In fact, the defense contention is that our
16 negligence was not in the manner in which we conducted our
17 own due diligence but in choosing to rely upon an advisor to
18 our opposite party in the transaction.

19 There is no issue in this case about whether
20 Wachtell Lipton, if Wachtell Lipton was given the chore in
21 connection with this transaction of conducting a thorough
22 due diligence investigation, would have discovered the
23 fraud. It certainly isn't going to be our position that if
24 a thorough due diligence investigation was conducted by
25 Wachtell Lipton, they wouldn't have found it because we're

00008

1 arguing that a thorough due diligence investigation not only
2 would have but in fact did disclose these fraudulent
3 transactions.

4 We certainly wouldn't be contending that a
5 thorough due diligence investigation by Wachtell Lipton
6 could not have discovered this fraud. In the same respect
7 we would not be arguing that a thorough due diligence
8 investigation by Credit Suisse would have failed to disclose
9 the fraudulent transaction.

10 THE COURT: Is that the same as stipulating
11 that neither Wachtell Lipton or Credit Suisse did sufficient
12 due diligence?

13 MR. SCAROLA: It is stipulating that neither
14 Wachtell Lipton nor Credit Suisse did the kind of due
15 diligence that would have disclosed these fraudulent
16 transactions because they didn't disclose the fraudulent
17 transactions. And they are not alleging that they did.
18 That's simply not a contention. We acknowledge that

19 these companies had the capacity, had they been given
20 the assignment, to uncover these fraudulent
21 transactions.

22 THE COURT: Do you agree your client did not
23 give them that assignment?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, yes, we agree that they
25 were not given the assignment to conduct the kind of due
00009

1 diligence investigation that would have uncovered these
2 fraudulent transactions. We in fact did rely and
3 acknowledge that we relied, and it is inherent in our case
4 to contend that we relied not upon Credit Suisse or upon
5 Wachtell Lipton, but rather our allegation is we relied upon
6 Morgan Stanley.

7 So if we're coming before the Court saying we
8 relied upon Morgan Stanley, what possible relevance could
9 there be to establishing the degree of expertise of any
10 third party?

11 Whether the due diligence investigation conducted
12 by Morgan Stanley did or did not meet the generally accepted
13 standard of care for the conduct of due diligence under
14 these particular circumstances cannot be proven by proving
15 what Wachtell Lipton did in some other case or what anyone,
16 any one individual did in any particular case.

17 THE COURT: But couldn't there be some
18 potential relevancy then to what your client directed them
19 to do in other cases? I mean, if in other similar
20 transactions your client gave them directions to do full due
21 diligence, the kind that would have turned up this kind of 22 massive fraud; and in this one case did not give them such
23 directions, it strikes me that is a ripe avenue of 24 cross-examination.

25 MR. SCAROLA: But that is not a contested
00010

1 issue. That's my point.

2 THE COURT: But you're agreeing your client
3 was negligent in the type of direction it gave its own
4 advisor?

5 MR. SCAROLA: No, no, the issue becomes was
6 it negligent for my client to rely upon Morgan Stanley and
7 not to have retained an independent due diligence
8 third-party investigator in light of all the surrounding
9 circumstances of this particular case. And that issue has
10 no light shed upon it by what happened in unrelated
11 transactions. And to emphasize that, I put together -- and 12 this is really right off the top of my head --

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: -- a list of possible factors
15 influencing a stock purchaser's due diligence. And before
16 they could begin to demonstrate that there is any possible
17 probative value in looking to see what these companies did
18 in other transactions, they would need to demonstrate that
19 these were the same circumstances.

20 It's no different than if we were talking about

21 an automobile accident case. You can't prove that the
22 driver was negligent in this case by bringing in five other
23 people to say I saw other cars driving at the same rate of 24 speed. I saw other cars who also didn't come to a full stop
25 at that intersection. The fact that a majority of people

00011

1 speed on I-95 through the construction zones that exist on
2 that roadway today does not prove that a reasonably prudent
3 person would speed through those construction zones. And
4 the fact that any one person was speeding doesn't prove that
5 this driver was not negligent in speeding through the
6 construction zone on this particular occasion at this
7 particular time.

8 But to begin to even suggest that it's probative,
9 you need to prove that all of the circumstances were the
10 same. You need to prove that it's publicly traded and not
11 privately held, the value of the stock relative to the total
12 transaction, the nature of the company, warranties that are
13 made in connection with the transaction, the security that
14 is offered for those warranties, the competence, reputation
15 and integrity of people and entities on the other side of 16 the transaction. Is it reasonable for me to rely upon what
17 you say?

18 Well, whether it is reasonable for me to rely
19 upon what you say about the value of this stock depends upon
20 what kind of reputation you have with respect to honesty and
21 truthfulness. What I know about your expertise in judging
22 the value of the stock, your competence with regard to these
23 particular matters. And then I need to take a look at the 24 quality and quantity of the information available from 25 competent and trustworthy third parties independent of this

00012

1 source.

2 The kind of investigation I need to do depends at
3 least upon those kinds of factors. And our contention in
4 this case is it was reasonable for us to have relied upon
5 Morgan Stanley.

6 They may bring in expert witnesses who say that
7 reliance was unreasonable under these circumstances and they
8 should have hired Wachtell Lipton and given them a broader
9 mission than what they were given in this case.

10 They can fully discover, and we have offered them
11 all of the discovery with regard to what Wachtell Lipton did
12 with respect to this transaction, what was done by Credit
13 Suisse with regard to this transaction, and at the very
14 least before they should be able to come in and begin to
15 request information concerning what was done in other
16 transactions, first they should examine what was done in
17 this transaction and the assignment that was given to them,
18 which they have not yet done. And, secondly, they need to
19 establish some parallel between other transactions they want
20 to look at and this transaction. If there is no parallel in 21 the transactions, if the only thing they had in common was
22 they both involved some transfer of stock and that is all

23 they are able to show, it could not possibly have any
24 probative value whatsoever in terms of establishing any of 25 the contested issues in this lawsuit.

00013

1 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. You're
2 characterizing sort of a comparative negligence as to
3 whether your client was negligent relying on the
4 representations from Morgan Stanley; but I sort of thought
5 some of the negligence or comparative negligence alleged
6 would have been that your client was negligent in not
7 performing its own due diligence.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I think that's really part and
9 parcel.

10 THE COURT: I don't think that's the same
11 thing. If you sort of have your traffic analogy, I may be
12 negligent if I'm in the intersection and I don't have the
13 right of way and somebody says come on (indicating) and I
14 don't check it, I just go and get an accident whereas I may
15 be negligent by relying on that, but I also may be negligent
16 by not looking myself and seeing if there was other traffic.

17 MR. SCAROLA: I agree.

18 THE COURT: And I think what they are
19 accusing you of is not having looked at the other traffic.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Then they are entitled to
21 absolutely, fully and completely explore what we did in this
22 transaction.

23 THE COURT: How would it not be relevant that
24 every other time you bothered to turn your head and look?

25 MR. SCAROLA: The same way it would be

00014

1 irrelevant in the auto negligence case to which we are
2 analogizing this to bring witnesses to come in and say that
3 I always stopped at that stop sign before.

4 THE COURT: You're talking about you, not
5 third parties.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, me, me. I always stopped
7 at that stop sign before. Whether I always stopped at that
8 stop sign before or I never stopped at that stop sign before
9 does not determine whether I was negligent in failing to
10 stop on that occasion.

11 It may be that in every other transaction I have
12 conducted -- I meaning Coleman (Parent) Holding -- in every
13 other transaction I've conducted I chose, not that I needed
14 to, not that the generally accepted standard of care
15 required me to, but I chose to retain Wachtell Lipton and
16 Credit Suisse both to conduct the most thorough due
17 diligence investigation in the world, to conduct them
18 independently of one another, to make sure that their 19 results corroborated and maybe even to hire a third party as 20 well.

21 But the fact that I triple checked Transaction A
22 does not mean that in order to meet the generally accepted
23 standard of care I was required to triple check other
24 transactions.

25 It just doesn't have any probative value, first

00015

1 of all, because you haven't established that these other
2 transactions in fact presented the same set of
3 circumstances. But even if they did, my choice to use
4 extraordinary care in other circumstances does not mean that
5 I was negligent in failing to use extraordinary care in this
6 circumstance.

7 THE COURT: Let me ask you this, and I
8 apologize my thinking is not very mature on this issue.
9 Assume at trial we would require expert testimony as to what
10 is the level of due diligence that's required in this type
11 of transaction.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe that that is a
13 matter of common knowledge to a jury. I think it clearly
14 will require expert testimony. Somebody is going to have to 15 come in and say the generally accepted standard of care for
16 due diligence under these circumstances is this.

17 THE COURT: And presumably somebody other
18 than your client?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Presumably somebody other than
20 my client, sure.

21 THE COURT: And I assume what you're telling
22 me is that somebody other than your client, which your
23 client has chosen to do on past occasions, isn't going to
24 effect what is the standard of appropriate care?

25 MR. SCAROLA: No, ma'am. The generally

00016

1 accepted standard of care is not a matter of majority rule.
2 It is not a matter of consensus. It is what a reasonably
3 prudent business person would do under the same or similar
4 circumstances.

5 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Are you
6 willing to agree now that no sort of affiliate or employee
7 of your client will offer testimony at trial as to standard
8 of care?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes --

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: -- I am because I really don't
12 believe that we would have a credible expert witness if that
13 expert witness were an affiliate of my client. We're going
14 to choose someone of independence to offer that testimony.
15 We're not going to choose somebody in-house to offer that
16 standard of care testimony.

17 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

18 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, first, to start, I
19 want to thank you again for accommodating my schedule.

20 THE COURT: Sure. I'm sorry you missed the
21 first flight back.

22 MS. BROWN: I do want to start with a little
23 bit of context myself. It is interesting the
24 characterization that the Plaintiff has presented of what
25 this case is about because the standard or the principal

00017

1 that they wish to apply here is that the only transaction
2 that is relevant is their transfer of 82 percent of their
3 interest in Coleman to Sunbeam; but I will tell you -- and
4 as you know from the motions coming before -- that is not a
5 standard they've applied to their own discovery.

6 You can go back and look at the document requests
7 they served in May on our counsel, Davis Polk, and they were
8 before your Honor on a motion to compel documents related to
9 Scott Paper and Kimberly Clark, if you'll recall. So this
10 principal is a new found principal that they're asserting
11 for your Honor that they have not held themselves to.

12 In addition, your Honor, they claim, as
13 Mr. Scarola noted, to rely upon Morgan Stanley. The issue
14 in this case is not simply whether they were negligent. It
15 is whether they in fact did rely on Morgan Stanley. We are
16 entitled, your Honor, to find and assert proof that would
17 show in fact they did not rely --

18 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind of
19 things you think this discovery would develop that would
20 give you evidence on that point.

21 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, I think, as you have
22 noted, there's a difference between what they relied upon
23 and how they relied upon these particular parties, CSFB and
24 Wachtell, we're not going into other parties, how they have
25 relied upon these parties in these types of actions.

00018

1 And I think we have been very, very careful to
2 narrow it. We're only asking generally about due diligence.
3 We're only asking about matters related to CSFB, to Coleman
4 (Parent) and to MAFCO, and we're only asking about
5 transactions in which they took back stock.

6 MAFCO and CPH are very sophisticated parties,
7 your Honor. They engage in a multitude of types of
8 transactions. They are doing deals daily.

9 We are limiting ourselves to a very narrow scope.
10 And after things went awry in 1998, there was press
11 expressing surprise at the perfunctory due diligence that
12 CPH performed. We're entitled to discovery that would not
13 only show that indeed it was perfunctory by a general
14 standard but by their own standard and that may reveal why,
15 what motivation --

16 THE COURT: Why do you think you could put
17 evidence before the jury that was perfunctory by their own
18 standard if they are not offering expert testimony as to the 19 standard of care?

20 MS. BROWN: I see this, your Honor -- and I
21 think you alluded to this earlier -- as similar to what one
22 might do with an expert.

23 While their own witnesses may not seek to have
24 themselves recognized as experts, MAFCO and CPH, mostly
25 MAFCO, holds itself out to be supreme deal masters, if you

00019

1 will. One way, the most effective way sometimes to
2 cross-examine someone who is akin to an expert is not to ask

3 them what they did, but to establish what it is that could
4 have been done.

5 For instance, if this were an expert deposition
6 or testimony, you would obtain information about that
7 expert's prior testimony, about other testing or whatever
8 that they did in similar situations and inquire of them why
9 they didn't do that in this particular case.

10 THE COURT: But if they are not being offered
11 as an expert as to the standard of care, that wouldn't be
12 relevant, would it?

13 MS. BROWN: I believe, your Honor, that it
14 would be relevant to show again it's not only the standard
15 of care it's the motivation. Was there a reason, whether it
16 was strategic or otherwise, that they did not perform the
17 type of due diligence that they performed in other cases.

18 We believe that their motivation will be shown in 19 part by what they did. In other words, your Honor, we
20 believe there may have been reasons why the due diligence
21 they performed in this case is not as extensive, the
22 assignments were not as extensive as they were in other
23 cases. We want to show that. And then we want to show the 24 reasons or potential reasons why.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

00020

1 MS. BROWN: Also, your Honor, I believe that
2 the competence of their advisors is relevant, again, to
3 establish whether or not they relied upon Morgan Stanley.
4 Is that a credible assertion? In order to establish whether
5 that's a credible assertion, we can establish their own
6 sophistication, the sophistication of these particular
7 advisors they historically relied upon and how they have
8 used these advisors as tools to perform due diligence; and,
9 again, we have been very careful to craft our request so
10 that they are limited to CPH and MAFCO, limited to other
11 similar structural deals where they took stock back and
12 limited to due diligence.

13 The other thing that I would note about these
14 requests, your Honor, which I alluded to before is the fact
15 that it's ironic that they are before you seeking to bar
16 this sort of discovery when Morgan Stanley is seeking to
17 disprove their assertions and also to prove our defenses
18 when they, themselves, have sought this discovery from us
19 and from our advisors.

20 For instance, with regard to the due diligence
21 that they performed, that CSFB and Wachtell performed on
22 other transactions, CPH asked for and we produced documents,
23 Morgan Stanley produced documents related to general due
24 diligence, not limited to this transaction, as CPH now seeks 25 to limit discovery. In each one of the requests that they

00021

1 seek to bar, your Honor, there is a similar request CPH has
2 asserted and has received documents or other discovery
3 related to that request that is not limited to the deal at
4 issue.

5 THE COURT: Well, except it is a little bit
6 different. I mean, your client is in a different position
7 than the Plaintiff is, and you're alleging to have done
8 things. You're alleged to be sort of the expert here. So I
9 can imagine there would be certain discovery that would be
10 properly promulgated on your client that may not be on the
11 Plaintiff.

12 MS. BROWN: I am not sure that we're alleged
13 to be anymore of an expert than CSFB. We were on the 14 opposite side of the table of MAFCO. We were financial 15 advisor to Sunbeam. CSFB was on the opposite side of the
16 table of Sunbeam and they were a financial advisor to CPH
17 and MAFCO. They are similarly situated. We're no more
18 experts, to use that term, than they are.

19 And I can go through again each one of the 20 requests. Mr. Scarola didn't go through the particular
21 requests. But for example, where we think due diligence
22 related to other stock deals, we would like to establish the
23 universe of possible, reasonable due diligence, establish
24 how CPH and MAFCO used their advisors for due diligence more
25 than they did here. And then in other cases they have

00022

1 availed themselves of the rights and abilities to inspect
2 the records and inspect documents of the other side under a
3 confidentiality agreement.

4 I would note as well, your Honor, that the
5 transactions that we are asking CPH and CSFB and Wachtell
6 about are transactions that came from discovery requests
7 that we promulgated to CPH and MAFCO. We asked them,
8 identify similarly structured deals. And when they answered
9 that discovery request, they didn't assert the relevance
10 argument that they have newly asserted here.

11 So I don't think that it's prudent or fair at 12 this point to establish a new principal for discovery that
13 they have not held themselves to, to allow them to conduct a
14 wealth of discovery relating to deals other than the deal at
15 issue here, for whatever purposes, and then to seek to limit
16 us to the transfer of the 82 percent interest from Coleman
17 to Sunbeam.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Any other argument?

19 MS. BROWN: No, your Honor. If you're
20 interested, I do have the reciprocal discovery request, I
21 can point out to you --

22 THE COURT: That sort of doesn't go to
23 whether this discovery request is appropriate, which is
24 really all I am looking at today. Okay. Thank you.

25 Did you want to respond?

00023

1 MR. SCAROLA: Briefly, your Honor. Thank
2 you. Your Honor, the Evidence Code does specifically
3 recognize circumstances where evidence of routine practice
4 is admissible. It is section 90.406. And what it says is,
5 "Evidence of the routine practice of an organization,
6 whether corroborated or not and regardless of the presence

7 eye witnesses, is admissible to prove that the conduct of
8 the organization on a particular occasion was in conformity
9 with the routine practice."

10 So it specifically tells us when a business
11 should be subjected to discovery with regard to what its 12 routine practices are.

13 And counsel is right, we have requested
14 information from Morgan Stanley with regard to its routine
15 practices. We have asked them to produce any manual,
16 memorandum or other document describing its routine
17 requirements for due diligence because it is our burden to
18 establish what this business did in this transaction.

19 And one of the ways in which we prove what Morgan
20 Stanley did in this transaction is to prove what its routine
21 practices were. We have not sought discovery, and Morgan
22 Stanley has declined to provide discovery with regard to any
23 other particular transaction.

24 We want their policies, practices and procedures
25 at this point in time but we have not sought -- at least as 00024

1 of now -- to go beyond what their documents say their
2 policies, practices and procedure are.

3 MS. BROWN: Your Honor --

4 THE COURT: Hold on.

5 MR. SCAROLA: They, rather than attempting to
6 prove through evidence of the routine practice of an
7 organization that what we did was in conformity with the
8 routine practice, they are telling you that their contention
9 is that what we did was not in conformity with our routine
10 practice. And we acknowledge that it was not in conformity
11 with what we did in particular other circumstances because
12 this was a different transaction.

13 So the justification for the discovery simply 14 doesn't exist under the Evidence Code. Thank you, your
15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: Let me take it under
17 advisement. I need to spend a little time with the 18 requests themselves.

19 MS. BROWN: May I respond briefly?

20 THE COURT: No, because he goes first and
21 last. It's his motion. I know it is frustrating.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, your
23 Honor.

24 MS. BROWN: Thank you.

25 THE COURT: Thank you. Bye, bye. Have a 00025

1 good trip back.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

v.

Judge Elizabeth T. Maass

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY

Morgan Stanley has moved to compel CPH to provide information concerning the “1997-1998 net worth, income, revenue and global holdings (including non-MAFCO holdings) of MAFCO, CPH, Ronald Perelman, Howard Gittis, and any other MAFCO or CPH employee who participated in the due diligence or financial review of Sunbeam’s acquisition of the Coleman Company,” purportedly on the ground that this financial information is relevant to CPH’s “sophistication” in business affairs. As shown below, CPH does not dispute that it is sophisticated. Morgan Stanley, therefore, has no need for the private financial information it seeks.

The law is clear that, due to the private nature of the kind of financial information that Morgan Stanley is requesting, such information is not discoverable on demand. See, e.g., Berkeley v. Eisen, 699 So. 2d 789, 790 (Fla. 4th DCA 1997) (“the law in the state of Florida recognizes an individual’s legitimate expectation of privacy in financial institution records”) (citation omitted); Mogul v. Mogul, 730 So. 2d 1287, 1290 (Fla. 5th DCA 1999) (“financial information of private persons is entitled to protection by this State’s constitutional right of privacy, if there is no relevant or compelling reason to compel disclosure”). An exception exists where the financial information requested has direct relevance to an issue or claim — such as where finances are germane to the calculation of compensatory or punitive damages. See, e.g., Florida Gaming Corp. of Delaware v. American Jai-Alai, Inc., 673 So. 2d 523, 524 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996), review denied, 682 So. 2d 1099 (Fla. 1996); Key West Convalescent Center, Inc. v. Doherty, 619 So. 2d 367, 368-69 (Fla. 3d DCA 1993).

Morgan Stanley, as its motion reveals, can make no such claim of relevance. As a result, Morgan Stanley bases its discovery demand on a theory that no Florida decision of which we are aware has recognized: to show CPH's "sophistication" in business affairs. CPH's business sophistication, however, is not in dispute. CPH, as its complaint and the discovery record demonstrate, acknowledges that it is experienced in complex business transactions. The transaction that lies at the heart of this lawsuit — whereby CPH conveyed its 82% interest in The Coleman Company to Sunbeam in exchange for Sunbeam stock and other consideration — is itself an example of a major financial transaction. In addition, as our discovery answers show, CPH, MAFCO, and their affiliates have been involved in other significant transactions. See, e.g., CPH's Response to Interrogatory No. 5 in Morgan Stanley's First Set of Interrogatories (listing 40 transactions by MAFCO, by companies controlled by MAFCO, and by affiliates of CPH and MAFCO); cf. Gruman v. Bankers Trust Co., 379 So. 2d 658, 659 (Fla. 3d DCA 1980) (Appellate Court quashing order requiring disclosure of information about a party's bank accounts where party already had stipulated to the only issue to which his finances were relevant).

Moreover, even if discovery of financial information concerning CPH or MAFCO were proper, discovery of the personal finances of executives and employees is not. The interrogatory at issue demands, as to anyone at MAFCO and CPH who had any involvement with the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, detailed information concerning how much money those individuals have and what they own. That information has nothing to do with whether CPH is sophisticated in business matters. Thus, especially as Morgan Stanley's discovery demand relates to individual MAFCO and CPH officers and employees, that demand should be rejected. See Frank Medina Trading Co. v. Blanco, 553 So. 2d 285, 285 (Fla. 3d DCA 1989) (although corporate tax returns were discoverable, because they were relevant to issues in dispute, the personal tax returns of corporate officers were not discoverable).

In sum, although Morgan Stanley contends that it needs to discover the finances of CPH,

MAFCO, and their officers and employees to prove CPH's business sophistication, the information Morgan Stanley seeks is unnecessary to show CPH's sophistication and impermissibly seeks disclosure of private financial information. CPH's sophistication is not in dispute.

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S MOTION TO CLARIFY AND ENFORCE STIPULATIONS MADE BY
COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING AT THE JANUARY 8, 2004 HEARING

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, respectfully submits this Motion to Clarify and Enforce Stipulations made by Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") during the January 8, 2004 hearing and states in support:

1. On December 19, 2003, CPH filed a Motion for Protective Order seeking to prevent Morgan Stanley from obtaining, among other things, evidence concerning the due diligence work performed by CPH's financial and legal advisors on transactions other than Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. In support of its Motion, during the January 8, 2004 hearing, CPH argued and stipulated to certain facts concerning the competence and capability of its advisors:

- CSFB and Wachtell “had the capacity, had they been given the assignment, to uncover these fraudulent transactions” at Sunbeam (Jan. 8, 2004 Hr. Tr. at 8 (Ex. 1));
- “any reasonably prudent due diligence” by CSFB or Wachtell “would have detected the fraud” at Sunbeam (“Negligent Misrepresentation” exhibit provided by CPH counsel at hearing (Ex. 2));
- “neither Wachtell Lipton nor Credit Suisse did the kind of due diligence that would have disclosed these fraudulent transactions” (Hr. Tr. at 8); and
- CSFB and Wachtell were not asked by CPH, Coleman or MAFCO (or any affiliate) “to conduct the kind of [reasonably prudent] due diligence investigation that would have uncovered these fraudulent transactions” at Sunbeam (Hr. Tr. at 8 -9).

2. Based in part on these arguments and stipulations, the Court issued an Order on January 9, 2004 narrowing the scope of documents that CSFB and Wachtell will be required to produce. Morgan Stanley contends that, having stipulated to these facts and thereby prevailed in large part on its motion to limit discovery, CPH should be held to its in-Court stipulations. While the Court’s January 9, 2004 Order memorializes one stipulation made by CPH at the hearing, the cited stipulation reflects only one of the reasons Morgan Stanley sought the requested discovery from Wachtell and CSFB. CPH knows this as well, which is why it tendered all of the above stipulations during the January 8, 2004 hearing. These representations are fundamental to the Court’s Order limiting discovery, and should be deemed to be admitted for all purposes going forward in this litigation, including the instructions to be presented to the jury. Moreover, the additional stipulations noted above may serve to narrow the scope of discovery and prevent future discovery disputes.

WHEREFORE, Defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. requests this Court to enter an Order clarifying and enforcing all of the above-referenced stipulations made by CPH at the January 8, 2004 hearing.

2 The hearing before the Hon. Elizabeth T. Maass was

4 Notary Public, State of Florida at Large, at the Palm Beach
5 County Courthouse, 250 South Dixie Highway, West Palm Beach,
6 Florida, beginning at the hour of 12:30 p.m. on Thursday,
7 January 8, 2004 pursuant to the Notice filed herein, in the
8 above-entitled cause pending before the above-named Court.

9 - - - -

10 MR. SCAROLA: We thank you for accommodating
11 us, your Honor.

12 MS. BROWN: Yes, thank you.

13 THE COURT: That's okay. Coleman (Parent)
14 and Morgan. This is Plaintiff's motion for protective order
15 as to certain non-party discovery. What did you want to say
16 in support of it?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, your Honor. Your
18 Honor, I have provided some outlines that were helpful in my
19 own analysis of these issues, and I hope they will be of 20 some assistance to the Court as well.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SCAROLA: I am handing them to you in the 23 order in which it is likely that I will reference them.

24 THE COURT: Thank you.

25 MR. SCAROLA: It's probably helpful to begin

1 by just reminding your Honor that this is a case involving a
2 purchase and sale concerning Sunbeam Corporation. Sunbeam
3 Corporation, it is basically acknowledged by both sides,
4 engaged in fraudulent accounting practices which had an
5 enormous impact on its stock price.

6 Those fraudulent accounting practices became
7 publicly disclosed subsequent to the transaction engaged in
8 in which Coleman (Parent) Holding Company, a major holder of
9 Sunbeam stock, excuse me, in which Coleman (Parent) Holding
10 Company transferred an interest that it had in the Coleman
11 Company in exchange for, among other consideration, a
12 significant amount of Sunbeam stock.

13 Morgan Stanley was involved in that transaction
14 as a financial advisor and provided information to Coleman
15 (Parent) Holding which we allege we relied upon. And
16 there are basically two claims. There are fraudulent
17 misrepresentation claims and there are negligent
18 misrepresentation claims.

19 With regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation
20 claims, obviously we are alleging that there was actual
21 knowledge on the part of Morgan Stanley with respect to the
22 fraudulent practices of Sunbeam, which actual knowledge was
23 concealed from Coleman (Parent) Holding Company.

24 The negligent misrepresentation claim is that --
25 really one of two things, either Morgan Stanley knew of the

1 fraudulent practices and negligently failed to disclose what
2 they knew or negligently failed to have learned of the
3 fraudulent practices.

4 And I think it is important to understand those
5 issues so that we can understand whether there is any
6 possible relevance to the discovery that is presently being
7 sought. And basically the discovery that is presently being
8 sought is discovery of both a law firm and an investment
9 banking firm that provided services to Coleman (Parent)
10 Holding and MAFCO its parent company in connection with the
11 Sunbeam transaction, but also have provided services to
12 Coleman (Parent) Holding and/or MAFCO in connection with
13 completely unrelated purchases and sales in which a transfer
14 of stock also was involved in one respect or another.

15 Now, clearly with regard to the fraudulent
16 misrepresentation claim, I suggest that there is no possible
17 theory of relevance concerning the discovery that is being
18 sought from those third parties. What we are told by Morgan
19 Stanley is that they want to fully explore -- and this is a
20 quote from their responsive memorandum, and it is contained
21 under the section MS contentions -- they are entitled to
22 fully explore the competence and sophistication of Coleman
23 (Parent) Holdings own paid legal and financial advisers.

24 Now, the competence and sophistication of some
25 third party with regard to the fraudulent misrepresentation

1 claim could not possibly have any bearing. If any argument
2 is to be made with regard to the relevance and materiality
3 of this information, it would seem to me that it needs to be
4 made with respect to the negligent misrepresentation claims.
5 And those are the claims that I've sort of briefly outlined
6 the issues on in this first page.

7 The issue on the claim that we have made is was
8 Morgan Stanley negligent in misrepresenting Sunbeam's
9 financial condition to Coleman (Parent) Holding; and we
10 prove our case in that regard by establishing that they knew
11 about Sunbeam's fraudulent accounting and negligently failed
12 to disclose it or they negligently failed to discover the 13 fraud.

14 What these third parties knew or were capable of 15 knowing couldn't have any bearing on that issue. So it
16 seems that the only potential bearing has to be on the
17 defense side of this case, the comparative negligence claim
18 that has been made against us.

19 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. And I
20 apologize, I didn't have that long to look at what the
21 parties filed, but it strikes me that one of the things
22 Morgan Stanley is saying is that this is potentially
23 relevant to whether your client relied on the misstatements
24 whether they were fraudulently or negligently made; and, if
25 so, whether the reliance was reasonable. And one way you

1 could determine that is if in similar deals they did
2 tremendous due diligence and in this deal they only did a
3 little due diligence, it may be more likely that in this
4 deal they relied on the representations. Whereas if they
5 always did tremendous due diligence, maybe it is less
6 likely.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Okay, and I think that I
8 understood that that is what they were getting at also;
9 however, this is what they also say in their memo.

10 Page 2, "It is evident that Coleman (Parent)
11 Holding and its advisors conducted little or no due
12 diligence on their own," and that's the little or no due
13 diligence on their own is their emphasis, "prior to closing
14 the acquisition transaction with Sunbeam."

15 In fact, the defense contention is that our
16 negligence was not in the manner in which we conducted our
17 own due diligence but in choosing to rely upon an advisor to
18 our opposite party in the transaction.

19 There is no issue in this case about whether
20 Wachtell Lipton, if Wachtell Lipton was given the chore in
21 connection with this transaction of conducting a thorough
22 due diligence investigation, would have discovered the
23 fraud. It certainly isn't going to be our position that if
24 a thorough due diligence investigation was conducted by
25 Wachtell Lipton, they wouldn't have found it because we're

1 arguing that a thorough due diligence investigation not only
2 would have but in fact did disclose these fraudulent
3 transactions.

4 We certainly wouldn't be contending that a
5 thorough due diligence investigation by Wachtell Lipton
6 could not have discovered this fraud. In the same respect
7 we would not be arguing that a thorough due diligence
8 investigation by Credit Suisse would have failed to disclose
9 the fraudulent transaction.

10 THE COURT: Is that the same as stipulating
11 that neither Wachtell Lipton or Credit Suisse did sufficient
12 due diligence?

13 MR. SCAROLA: It is stipulating that neither
14 Wachtell Lipton nor Credit Suisse did the kind of due
15 diligence that would have disclosed these fraudulent
16 transactions because they didn't disclose the fraudulent
17 transactions. And they are not alleging that they did.
18 That's simply not a contention. We acknowledge that
19 these companies had the capacity, had they been given
20 the assignment, to uncover these fraudulent
21 transactions.

22 THE COURT: Do you agree your client did not
23 give them that assignment?

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, yes, we agree that they
25 were not given the assignment to conduct the kind of due

1 diligence investigation that would have uncovered these
2 fraudulent transactions. We in fact did rely and
3 acknowledge that we relied, and it is inherent in our case
4 to contend that we relied not upon Credit Suisse or upon
5 Wachtell Lipton, but rather our allegation is we relied upon
6 Morgan Stanley.

7 So if we're coming before the Court saying we
8 relied upon Morgan Stanley, what possible relevance could
9 there be to establishing the degree of expertise of any
10 third party?

11 Whether the due diligence investigation conducted
12 by Morgan Stanley did or did not meet the generally accepted
13 standard of care for the conduct of due diligence under
14 these particular circumstances cannot be proven by proving
15 what Wachtell Lipton did in some other case or what anyone,
16 any one individual did in any particular case.

17 THE COURT: But couldn't there be some
18 potential relevancy then to what your client directed them
19 to do in other cases? I mean, if in other similar
20 transactions your client gave them directions to do full due
21 diligence, the kind that would have turned up this kind of 22 massive fraud; and in this one case did not give them such
23 directions, it strikes me that is a ripe avenue of 24 cross-examination.

25 MR. SCAROLA: But that is not a contested

1 issue. That's my point.

2 THE COURT: But you're agreeing your client
3 was negligent in the type of direction it gave its own
4 advisor?

5 MR. SCAROLA: No, no, the issue becomes was
6 it negligent for my client to rely upon Morgan Stanley and
7 not to have retained an independent due diligence
8 third-party investigator in light of all the surrounding
9 circumstances of this particular case. And that issue has
10 no light shed upon it by what happened in unrelated
11 transactions. And to emphasize that, I put together -- and 12 this is really right off the top of my head --

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: -- a list of possible factors
15 influencing a stock purchaser's due diligence. And before
16 they could begin to demonstrate that there is any possible
17 probative value in looking to see what these companies did
18 in other transactions, they would need to demonstrate that
19 these were the same circumstances.

20 It's no different than if we were talking about
21 an automobile accident case. You can't prove that the
22 driver was negligent in this case by bringing in five other
23 people to say I saw other cars driving at the same rate of 24 speed. I saw other cars who also didn't come to a full stop
25 at that intersection. The fact that a majority of people

1 speed on I-95 through the construction zones that exist on
2 that roadway today does not prove that a reasonably prudent
3 person would speed through those construction zones. And
4 the fact that any one person was speeding doesn't prove that
5 this driver was not negligent in speeding through the
6 construction zone on this particular occasion at this
7 particular time.

8 But to begin to even suggest that it's probative,
9 you need to prove that all of the circumstances were the
10 same. You need to prove that it's publicly traded and not
11 privately held, the value of the stock relative to the total
12 transaction, the nature of the company, warranties that are
13 made in connection with the transaction, the security that
14 is offered for those warranties, the competence, reputation
15 and integrity of people and entities on the other side of 16 the transaction. Is it reasonable for me to rely upon what
17 you say?

18 Well, whether it is reasonable for me to rely
19 upon what you say about the value of this stock depends upon
20 what kind of reputation you have with respect to honesty and
21 truthfulness. What I know about your expertise in judging
22 the value of the stock, your competence with regard to these
23 particular matters. And then I need to take a look at the 24 quality and quantity of the information available from
25 competent and trustworthy third parties independent of this

1 source.

2 The kind of investigation I need to do depends at
3 least upon those kinds of factors. And our contention in
4 this case is it was reasonable for us to have relied upon
5 Morgan Stanley.

6 They may bring in expert witnesses who say that
7 reliance was unreasonable under these circumstances and they
8 should have hired Wachtell Lipton and given them a broader
9 mission than what they were given in this case.

10 They can fully discover, and we have offered them
11 all of the discovery with regard to what Wachtell Lipton did
12 with respect to this transaction, what was done by Credit
13 Suisse with regard to this transaction, and at the very
14 least before they should be able to come in and begin to
15 request information concerning what was done in other
16 transactions, first they should examine what was done in
17 this transaction and the assignment that was given to them,
18 which they have not yet done. And, secondly, they need to
19 establish some parallel between other transactions they want
20 to look at and this transaction. If there is no parallel in 21 the transactions, if the only thing they had in common was
22 they both involved some transfer of stock and that is all
23 they are able to show, it could not possibly have any
24 probative value whatsoever in terms of establishing any of
25 the contested issues in this lawsuit.

1 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. You're
2 characterizing sort of a comparative negligence as to
3 whether your client was negligent relying on the
4 representations from Morgan Stanley; but I sort of thought
5 some of the negligence or comparative negligence alleged
6 would have been that your client was negligent in not
7 performing its own due diligence.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I think that's really part and
9 parcel.

10 THE COURT: I don't think that's the same
11 thing. If you sort of have your traffic analogy, I may be
12 negligent if I'm in the intersection and I don't have the
13 right of way and somebody says come on (indicating) and I
14 don't check it, I just go and get an accident whereas I may
15 be negligent by relying on that, but I also may be negligent
16 by not looking myself and seeing if there was other traffic.

17 MR. SCAROLA: I agree.

18 THE COURT: And I think what they are
19 accusing you of is not having looked at the other traffic.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Then they are entitled to
21 absolutely, fully and completely explore what we did in this
22 transaction.

23 THE COURT: How would it not be relevant that
24 every other time you bothered to turn your head and look?

25 MR. SCAROLA: The same way it would be

1 irrelevant in the auto negligence case to which we are
2 analogizing this to bring witnesses to come in and say that
3 I always stopped at that stop sign before.

4 THE COURT: You're talking about you, not
5 third parties.

6 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, me, me. I always stopped
7 at that stop sign before. Whether I always stopped at that
8 stop sign before or I never stopped at that stop sign before
9 does not determine whether I was negligent in failing to
10 stop on that occasion.

11 It may be that in every other transaction I have
12 conducted -- I meaning Coleman (Parent) Holding -- in every
13 other transaction I've conducted I chose, not that I needed
14 to, not that the generally accepted standard of care
15 required me to, but I chose to retain Wachtell Lipton and
16 Credit Suisse both to conduct the most thorough due
17 diligence investigation in the world, to conduct them
18 independently of one another, to make sure that their 19 results corroborated and maybe even to hire a third party as 20 well.

21 But the fact that I triple checked Transaction A
22 does not mean that in order to meet the generally accepted
23 standard of care I was required to triple check other
24 transactions.

25 It just doesn't have any probative value, first

1 of all, because you haven't established that these other
2 transactions in fact presented the same set of
3 circumstances. But even if they did, my choice to use
4 extraordinary care in other circumstances does not mean that
5 I was negligent in failing to use extraordinary care in this
6 circumstance.

7 THE COURT: Let me ask you this, and I
8 apologize my thinking is not very mature on this issue.
9 Assume at trial we would require expert testimony as to what
10 is the level of due diligence that's required in this type
11 of transaction.

12 MR. SCAROLA: I don't believe that that is a
13 matter of common knowledge to a jury. I think it clearly
14 will require expert testimony. Somebody is going to have to 15 come in and say the generally accepted standard of care for
16 due diligence under these circumstances is this.

17 THE COURT: And presumably somebody other
18 than your client?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Presumably somebody other than
20 my client, sure.

21 THE COURT: And I assume what you're telling
22 me is that somebody other than your client, which your
23 client has chosen to do on past occasions, isn't going to
24 effect what is the standard of appropriate care?

25 MR. SCAROLA: No, ma'am. The generally

1 accepted standard of care is not a matter of majority rule.
2 It is not a matter of consensus. It is what a reasonably
3 prudent business person would do under the same or similar
4 circumstances.

5 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Are you
6 willing to agree now that no sort of affiliate or employee
7 of your client will offer testimony at trial as to standard
8 of care?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes --

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. SCAROLA: -- I am because I really don't
12 believe that we would have a credible expert witness if that
13 expert witness were an affiliate of my client. We're going
14 to choose someone of independence to offer that testimony.
15 We're not going to choose somebody in-house to offer that
16 standard of care testimony.

17 THE COURT: Okay. What's the response?

18 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, first, to start, I
19 want to thank you again for accommodating my schedule.

20 THE COURT: Sure. I'm sorry you missed the
21 first flight back.

22 MS. BROWN: I do want to start with a little
23 bit of context myself. It is interesting the
24 characterization that the Plaintiff has presented of what
25 this case is about because the standard or the principal

1 that they wish to apply here is that the only transaction
2 that is relevant is their transfer of 82 percent of their
3 interest in Coleman to Sunbeam; but I will tell you -- and
4 as you know from the motions coming before -- that is not a
5 standard they've applied to their own discovery.

6 You can go back and look at the document requests
7 they served in May on our counsel, Davis Polk, and they were
8 before your Honor on a motion to compel documents related to
9 Scott Paper and Kimberly Clark, if you'll recall. So this
10 principal is a new found principal that they're asserting
11 for your Honor that they have not held themselves to.

12 In addition, your Honor, they claim, as
13 Mr. Scarola noted, to rely upon Morgan Stanley. The issue
14 in this case is not simply whether they were negligent. It
15 is whether they in fact did rely on Morgan Stanley. We are
16 entitled, your Honor, to find and assert proof that would
17 show in fact they did not rely --

18 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind of
19 things you think this discovery would develop that would
20 give you evidence on that point.

21 MS. BROWN: Your Honor, I think, as you have
22 noted, there's a difference between what they relied upon
23 and how they relied upon these particular parties, CSFB and
24 Wachtell, we're not going into other parties, how they have
25 relied upon these parties in these types of actions.

1 And I think we have been very, very careful to
2 narrow it. We're only asking generally about due diligence.
3 We're only asking about matters related to CSFB, to Coleman
4 (Parent) and to MAFCO, and we're only asking about
5 transactions in which they took back stock.

6 MAFCO and CPH are very sophisticated parties,
7 your Honor. They engage in a multitude of types of
8 transactions. They are doing deals daily.

9 We are limiting ourselves to a very narrow scope.
10 And after things went awry in 1998, there was press
11 expressing surprise at the perfunctory due diligence that
12 CPH performed. We're entitled to discovery that would not
13 only show that indeed it was perfunctory by a general
14 standard but by their own standard and that may reveal why,
15 what motivation --

16 THE COURT: Why do you think you could put
17 evidence before the jury that was perfunctory by their own
18 standard if they are not offering expert testimony as to the 19 standard of care?

20 MS. BROWN: I see this, your Honor -- and I
21 think you alluded to this earlier -- as similar to what one
22 might do with an expert.

23 While their own witnesses may not seek to have
24 themselves recognized as experts, MAFCO and CPH, mostly
25 MAFCO, holds itself out to be supreme deal masters, if you

1 will. One way, the most effective way sometimes to
2 cross-examine someone who is akin to an expert is not to ask
3 them what they did, but to establish what it is that could
4 have been done.

5 For instance, if this were an expert deposition
6 or testimony, you would obtain information about that
7 expert's prior testimony, about other testing or whatever
8 that they did in similar situations and inquire of them why
9 they didn't do that in this particular case.

10 THE COURT: But if they are not being offered
11 as an expert as to the standard of care, that wouldn't be
12 relevant, would it?

13 MS. BROWN: I believe, your Honor, that it
14 would be relevant to show again it's not only the standard
15 of care it's the motivation. Was there a reason, whether it
16 was strategic or otherwise, that they did not perform the
17 type of due diligence that they performed in other cases.

18 We believe that their motivation will be shown in 19 part by what they did. In other words, your Honor, we
20 believe there may have been reasons why the due diligence
21 they performed in this case is not as extensive, the
22 assignments were not as extensive as they were in other
23 cases. We want to show that. And then we want to show the 24 reasons or potential reasons why.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

1 MS. BROWN: Also, your Honor, I believe that
2 the competence of their advisors is relevant, again, to
3 establish whether or not they relied upon Morgan Stanley.
4 Is that a credible assertion? In order to establish whether
5 that's a credible assertion, we can establish their own
6 sophistication, the sophistication of these particular
7 advisors they historically relied upon and how they have
8 used these advisors as tools to perform due diligence; and,
9 again, we have been very careful to craft our request so
10 that they are limited to CPH and MAFCO, limited to other
11 similar structural deals where they took stock back and
12 limited to due diligence.

13 The other thing that I would note about these
14 requests, your Honor, which I alluded to before is the fact
15 that it's ironic that they are before you seeking to bar
16 this sort of discovery when Morgan Stanley is seeking to
17 disprove their assertions and also to prove our defenses
18 when they, themselves, have sought this discovery from us
19 and from our advisors.

20 For instance, with regard to the due diligence
21 that they performed, that CSFB and Wachtell performed on
22 other transactions, CPH asked for and we produced documents,
23 Morgan Stanley produced documents related to general due
24 diligence, not limited to this transaction, as CPH now seeks
25 to limit discovery. In each one of the requests that they

1 seek to bar, your Honor, there is a similar request CPH has
2 asserted and has received documents or other discovery
3 related to that request that is not limited to the deal at
4 issue.

5 THE COURT: Well, except it is a little bit
6 different. I mean, your client is in a different position
7 than the Plaintiff is, and you're alleging to have done
8 things. You're alleged to be sort of the expert here. So I
9 can imagine there would be certain discovery that would be
10 properly promulgated on your client that may not be on the
11 Plaintiff.

12 MS. BROWN: I am not sure that we're alleged
13 to be anymore of an expert than CSFB. We were on the 14 opposite side of the table of MAFCO. We were financial 15 advisor to Sunbeam. CSFB was on the opposite side of the
16 table of Sunbeam and they were a financial advisor to CPH
17 and MAFCO. They are similarly situated. We're no more
18 experts, to use that term, than they are.

19 And I can go through again each one of the 20 requests. Mr. Scarola didn't go through the particular
21 requests. But for example, where we think due diligence
22 related to other stock deals, we would like to establish the
23 universe of possible, reasonable due diligence, establish
24 how CPH and MAFCO used their advisors for due diligence more
25 than they did here. And then in other cases they have

1 availed themselves of the rights and abilities to inspect
2 the records and inspect documents of the other side under a
3 confidentiality agreement.

4 I would note as well, your Honor, that the
5 transactions that we are asking CPH and CSFB and Wachtell
6 about are transactions that came from discovery requests
7 that we promulgated to CPH and MAFCO. We asked them,
8 identify similarly structured deals. And when they answered
9 that discovery request, they didn't assert the relevance
10 argument that they have newly asserted here.

11 So I don't think that it's prudent or fair at 12 this point to establish a new principal for discovery that
13 they have not held themselves to, to allow them to conduct a
14 wealth of discovery relating to deals other than the deal at
15 issue here, for whatever purposes, and then to seek to limit
16 us to the transfer of the 82 percent interest from Coleman
17 to Sunbeam.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Any other argument?

19 MS. BROWN: No, your Honor. If you're
20 interested, I do have the reciprocal discovery request, I
21 can point out to you --

22 THE COURT: That sort of doesn't go to
23 whether this discovery request is appropriate, which is
24 really all I am looking at today. Okay. Thank you.

25 Did you want to respond?

1 MR. SCAROLA: Briefly, your Honor. Thank
2 you. Your Honor, the Evidence Code does specifically
3 recognize circumstances where evidence of routine practice
4 is admissible. It is section 90.406. And what it says is,
5 "Evidence of the routine practice of an organization,
6 whether corroborated or not and regardless of the presence
7 eye witnesses, is admissible to prove that the conduct of
8 the organization on a particular occasion was in conformity
9 with the routine practice."

10 So it specifically tells us when a business
11 should be subjected to discovery with regard to what its 12 routine practices are.

13 And counsel is right, we have requested
14 information from Morgan Stanley with regard to its routine
15 practices. We have asked them to produce any manual,
16 memorandum or other document describing its routine
17 requirements for due diligence because it is our burden to
18 establish what this business did in this transaction.

19 And one of the ways in which we prove what Morgan
20 Stanley did in this transaction is to prove what its routine
21 practices were. We have not sought discovery, and Morgan
22 Stanley has declined to provide discovery with regard to any
23 other particular transaction.

24 We want their policies, practices and procedures
25 at this point in time but we have not sought -- at least as

1 of now -- to go beyond what their documents say their
2 policies, practices and procedure are.

3 MS. BROWN: Your Honor --

4 THE COURT: Hold on.

5 MR. SCAROLA: They, rather than attempting to
6 prove through evidence of the routine practice of an
7 organization that what we did was in conformity with the
8 routine practice, they are telling you that their contention
9 is that what we did was not in conformity with our routine
10 practice. And we acknowledge that it was not in conformity
11 with what we did in particular other circumstances because
12 this was a different transaction.

13 So the justification for the discovery simply 14 doesn't exist under the Evidence Code. Thank you, your
15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: Let me take it under
17 advisement. I need to spend a little time with the 18 requests themselves.

19 MS. BROWN: May I respond briefly?

20 THE COURT: No, because he goes first and
21 last. It's his motion. I know it is frustrating.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, your
23 Honor.

24 MS. BROWN: Thank you.

25 THE COURT: Thank you. Bye, bye. Have a

1 good trip back.

2 (Thereupon, at 1 p.m. the proceedings
3 concluded.)

NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION

Issue: Was MS negligent in misrepresenting Sunbeam's financial condition to CPH

CPH proves its case only by establishing:

1. MS actually knew about Sunbeam's fraudulent accounting and negligently failed to disclose what it new

OR

2. MS negligently failed to discover the fraud

COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE

Issue: Was CPH negligent

1. In choosing to rely on MS without conducting its own due diligence

OR

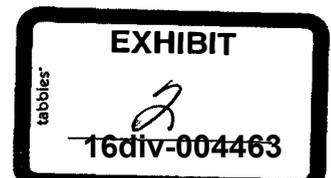

2. In conducting an inadequate due diligence investigation

MS' CONTENTION

- "Entitled to fully explore the competence and sophistication of CPH's own paid legal and financial advisors"

Issue is not what CPH and its advisors had the capacity to do BUT WHAT THEY IN FACT DID.

MS Memo Page 2: "It is evident that CPH and its advisors conducted little or no due diligence of their own prior to closing the acquisition transaction with Sunbeam" (Defendant's emphasis)

CONFIRMS DEFENDANTS ARE NOT QUESTIONING OUR CAPACITY TO CONDUCT DUE DILIGENCE BUT RATHER OUR CHOICE TO RELY ON THEIR REPRESENTATIONS BASED ON THEIR DUE DILIGENCE.

It would be logically absurd for Plaintiff to argue that Wachtel Lipton or Credit Suisse were incapable of discovering fraud but MS could.

Our position must be that any reasonably prudent due diligence investigation would have detected the fraud and we reasonably relied upon MS to have conducted such an investigation.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

CASE NO: 2003 CA 005045 AI

v.

Judge Elizabeth T. Maass

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS
RELATING TO EMPLOYEE PERFORMANCE

Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.380(a)(1), Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully requests that the Court direct Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") to produce the following documents requested in CPH's first request for production.

1. The three document requests at issue in this motion relate to a narrow category of Sunbeam-related personnel files (Exh. A):

Request No. 44: All documents concerning employment contracts, performance evaluations, and/or personnel files (including without limitation any documents that describe or discuss the training, experience, competence, and accomplishments) of all Morgan Stanley personnel who performed services for or on behalf of Sunbeam in 1997 or 1998.

Request No. 45: All documents concerning Morgan Stanley's performance evaluation criteria or guidelines in effect from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

Request No. 46: All documents concerning Morgan Stanley's compensation criteria or guidelines in effect from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

2. In its written response, Morgan Stanley objected to each of those document requests on the ground that they supposedly seek documents that are neither relevant nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In addition, with respect to Request No. 44, Morgan Stanley further objected that it "would unnecessarily infringe on the privacy interests of those employees" who worked on Sunbeam matters. See Exh. A ¶¶ 44-46.

3. Morgan Stanley has no basis for withholding any of the documents that are responsive to Request Nos. 44, 45, and 46. Morgan Stanley, for the most part, has offered nothing but boilerplate objections such as that the document requests involved are “not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.” As the Appellate Court has held, however, unsubstantiated objections like those are “patently without merit” and “constitute discovery abuse” (First Healthcare Corp. v. Hamilton, 740 So. 2d 1189, 1193 n.1 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999), review dismissed, 743 So. 2d 12 (Fla. 1999)):

Each of these objections, stated baldly and without particulars, is patently without merit as the court found following the hearing on plaintiff's motion to compel. Such “stonewalling tactics,” designed to delay making a timely response to valid discovery requests, constitute discovery abuse and should not be condoned.

4. The only arguable exception to Morgan Stanley's boilerplate objections is its assertion that providing documents responsive to Request No. 44 might implicate some unspecified privacy concerns. The Florida Supreme Court, however, concluded that non-public employers like Morgan Stanley lack standing to assert the privacy rights of their employees and can object only on the ground of relevance — a ground that has no merit here. See Alterra Healthcare Corp. v. Estate of Sielly, 827 So. 2d 936, 944-45 (Fla. 2002).

5. Even if it were appropriate to weigh privacy concerns in determining whether to allow discovery (see id.), those concerns are at best negligible given that this Court has entered a Protective Order in this case that can be used to ensure confidentiality. Moreover, as CPH advised Morgan Stanley (Exhs. B, C), CPH is willing at this point (without prejudice to its right to request further information later if circumstances warrant) to limit Request No. 44 to the following documents:

- A. Documents that mention Sunbeam by name. Documents in the personnel files of the individuals who worked on the Sunbeam matter that actually mention “Sunbeam” plainly are both relevant and easily identified and produced.
- B. Documents relating to fee generation. Documents that address the extent to which an employee who worked on the Sunbeam matter was successful in generating fees for Morgan Stanley (from any client during the relevant time period), or unsuccessful in doing so, are discoverable because they would shed light on the financial incentives surrounding Morgan Stanley's determination to do work for Sunbeam and assist in the fraud.

C. Documents concerning criticisms or reprimands. Documents reflecting that the employees who worked on Sunbeam were criticized or reprimanded for their performance — and documents reflecting criticisms or reprimands of the same employees in connection with similar types of work for other clients, whether mentioning Sunbeam or not — would be relevant to CPH's claims in this case. Among other things, CPH has asserted a negligence claim, and the kinds of documents sought here are tailored to lead to discoverable information relevant to that claim.

6. Morgan Stanley has rejected this compromise concerning Request No. 44. Morgan Stanley has offered instead to produce documents covered by categories A and B, but as to category C, Morgan Stanley would produce only those criticism or reprimand related documents that refer "to the employee's performance of due diligence activities." See Exh. D.

7. Morgan Stanley's limitations on Request No. 44 are unacceptable because they would prevent CPH from obtaining relevant information concerning the Morgan Stanley employees whose conduct is at the heart of this case. As Morgan Stanley would have it, Morgan Stanley could withhold documents reflecting concerns about the competence or honesty of the employees who worked on the Sunbeam matter unless those documents happen to deal with the subject of due diligence. That is insufficient. CPH is entitled to all documents in which employees who worked on the Sunbeam matter were reprimanded or criticized for their work — regardless of whether or not that work related to due diligence activities. In addition, CPH is entitled to all the documents called for by Request Nos. 45 and 46, which Morgan Stanley's counterproposal ignores entirely.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff CPH respectfully requests that this Court direct Morgan Stanley to produce within 10 days of the Court's order the documents responsive to Request Nos. 44 (that is, the documents that mention Sunbeam by name, relate to fee generation, or concern criticisms or reprimands), 45, and 46 of CPH's first set of document requests.

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL
OBJECTIONS TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC. FIRST REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, defendant, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") hereby interposes the following second supplemental objections to plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.'s ("CPH") First Request for Production of Documents ("Request for Production").

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following general objections apply to all specifications of CPH's Request for Production. Each General Objection is hereby incorporated in the response to each specific request as if fully set forth therein:

1. MS & Co. objects to the entire Request for Production as over broad and unduly burdensome. CPH has requested the production of impermissibly broad categories of documents that, if read literally and in combination with the equally overbroad Definitions, would require MS & Co. to collect, review and produce potentially hundreds of thousands of pages of

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request to the extent that it is vague, ambiguous, over broad and unduly burdensome. To the extent that it seeks documents concerning due diligence other than that due diligence performed in the course of MS & Co.'s engagement for Sunbeam, the request is requesting documents which are irrelevant to this litigation and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, MS & Co. will produce non-privileged documents, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control, relating to the due diligence performed by MS & Co. in the course of its engagement with Sunbeam Corporation or relating to the Coleman Transaction, and any general due diligence materials responsive to this request. MS & Co. will not produce documents that relate to other transactions not relevant to this lawsuit.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 44

All documents concerning employment contracts, performance evaluations, and/or personnel files (including without limitation any documents that describe or discuss the training, experience, competence, and accomplishments) of all Morgan Stanley personnel who performed services for or on behalf of Sunbeam in 1997 or 1998.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request to the extent that it seeks documents which are protected by the attorney-client, attorney work product, other common law or statutory privileges, or which are otherwise immune from discovery. MS & Co. expressly reserves the right to assert any and all common law or statutory privileges to which MS & Co. and its attorneys are entitled under applicable law.

This request seeks to compel production of personnel files and performance evaluations of individual MS & Co. employees that are neither relevant to CPH's claims nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence and, in addition, would unnecessarily infringe on the privacy interests of those employees.

MS & Co. will not produce documents responsive to this request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 45

All documents concerning Morgan Stanley's performance evaluation criteria or guidelines in effect from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request to the extent that it seeks documents which are protected by the attorney-client, attorney work product, other common law or statutory privileges, or which are otherwise immune from discovery. MS & Co. expressly reserves the right to assert any and all common law or statutory privileges to which MS & Co. and its attorneys are entitled under applicable law.

MS & Co. objects to this request in that it seeks the production of documents which are irrelevant to this litigation and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. MS & Co. will not produce documents responsive to this request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 46

All documents concerning Morgan Stanley's compensation criteria or guidelines in effect from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request to the extent that it seeks documents which are protected by the attorney-client, attorney work product, other common law or statutory privileges, or which are otherwise immune from discovery. MS & Co. expressly reserves the right to assert any and all common law or statutory privileges to which MS & Co. and its attorneys are entitled under applicable law.

MS & Co. objects to this request in that it seeks the production of documents which are irrelevant to this litigation and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. MS & Co. will not produce documents responsive to this request.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 47

All marketing or other promotional material prepared or used by, or on behalf of, Morgan Stanley concerning investment banking or securities underwriting services that were created or used at any time from and including January 1, 1997 through and including December 31, 1998.

MS & Co.'s Objections:

MS & Co. objects to this request for "all marketing or promotional material...concerning investment banking or securities underwriting services" as overbroad, unduly burdensome and inadequately tailored. Requiring MS & Co. to produce all documents sought in this request would necessitate the production of all of MS & Co.'s promotional materials, in their entirety, which would result in the production of documents irrelevant to this litigation and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Subject to and without waiving its general and specific objections, MS & Co. will produce any general marketing or promotional materials responsive to this request, and any marketing or promotional material provided or presented to Sunbeam, CPH, or MAFCO, responsive to this request, located after a good-faith search of documents in its possession, custody, or control.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 48

All of your document retention or document destruction policies or procedures or similar procedures for the back-up or deletion of electronic or hard copy documents of any kind for any time during 1997 through the present, including without limitation any amendments to any such policies or procedures, schedules or related documents, and any memoranda or other instructions communicated to your employees concerning the obligation and procedures to be utilized to preserve all relevant documents, including without limitation evidence concerning the Litigations, the Arbitrations, and the SEC Administrative Proceedings.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Tom:

I write in an attempt to reach agreement on one outstanding discovery issue. In discovery requests to Morgan Stanley ("MS & Co.") and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF"), CPH sought personnel and compensation documents relating to the individuals who worked on the Sunbeam transactions. MS & Co. and MSSF objected to these requests.

In an attempt to avoid bringing this matter to the Court, and without prejudice to later renewing our requests for the full scope of documents encompassed by our requests, we propose to limit Request 44 served upon MS & Co. and Request 69 served upon MSSF to those documents that are responsive to these requests and mention Sunbeam by name, relate to fee generation (or the lack of it), or contain or concern criticisms or reprimands for work done by the relevant employees. We continue to seek all documents responsive to Requests 45 and 46 upon MS & Co. and Requests 71 and 72 upon MSSF, which are more general in nature.

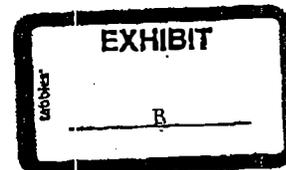

Please reconsider your objections. If you do not do so by September 3, 2003, we will bring this to the attention of the Court.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

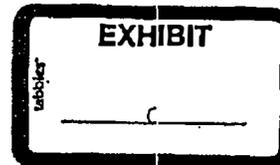

Dear Tom:

I reviewed the blank personnel evaluation forms that Larissa Paule-Carres forwarded to me. Based on my review of those documents, I renew our request that Morgan Stanley and MSSF produce the documents I described in my offer to compromise dated August 28, 2003.

The evaluative categories contained in the personnel evaluation forms are sufficiently general that relevant comments or ratings can appear in nearly any category. Because of the generality of the categories, and the manner in which they overlap, we are not able to limit our inquiry to particular categories. I renew our request that Morgan Stanley and MSSF produce the evaluation forms, consistent with the requests contained in my letter of August 28, 2003. If Morgan Stanley or MSSF personnel who worked on Sunbeam matters are evaluated in a different manner – that is, if particular employees are not evaluated using the forms you provided – we also request that you produce those evaluation materials.

You have raised concerns about the personal privacy of the Morgan Stanley and MSSF employees. We have a protective order in place, which should address those concerns.

Finally, the forms you provided refer to other Morgan Stanley and/or MSSF documents that are plainly responsive to the request discussed in my letter of August 28. For example, the forms you provided refer to performance criteria contained in the "PE Guide" for the relevant year. The form states that such information can also be obtained on the "OOD PE home page on MS

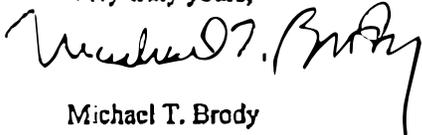

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.
September 18, 2003

Today." The forms refer to a Performance Criteria Matrix that can be found in the PE Guide. The forms also refer to self evaluations completed by the employee. All of these documents, and any other performance criteria or evaluations pertaining to the employees in question, contain information responsive to our requests. Consistent with my letter of August 28, we request that you produce these documents.

Please produce these documents before September 29, 2003, or we will present this issue to the Court.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
MSSF v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. et al.

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your September 18 letter regarding employee personnel files. Because of Hurricane Isabel and the closure of our D.C. office, I did not receive your letter until the office reopened on September 22.

CPH's document requests on these issues (even as narrowed in your August 28, 2003 letter) are overbroad and seek sensitive personal information that is neither relevant to the subject matter of the litigation nor reasonably likely to lead to the discovery of relevant information. Even with the protective order in place, the blunderbuss approach suggested by your letter would result in the disclosure of broad categories of irrelevant personal information -- and an unwarranted invasion of the privacy of the employees involved.

With regard to employee personnel files, we are willing to produce, with respect to employees directly involved in Sunbeam related engagements, redacted copies of the personnel files that will allow you to see: (1) all references (positive or negative) to work performed by the employee on Sunbeam-related engagements; (2) all references (positive or negative) to the employee's performance in fee generation; and (3) all references (positive or negative) to the employee's performance of due diligence activities. If this compromise approach is acceptable, we will begin to prepare the documents for production.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY'S STATEMENT OF UNRESOLVED LEGAL ISSUES

Pursuant to the Court's Order of January 13, 2004, Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") hereby submits the following statement of unresolved legal issues. For additional information about the status of the litigation, Morgan Stanley refers the Court to the Joint Submission of the Parties For February 20, 2004 Case Management Conference (the "Joint Submission"), which is being filed simultaneously herewith.

I. Statement Of Unresolved Legal Issues

A. Choice-Of-Law

Before a trial can be held in this matter, the Court must determine an important unresolved issue — the substantive law to be applied to Plaintiff's claims. During the December 12, 2003 hearing on Morgan Stanley's Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings, the Court declined to rule on the question of which state's substantive law (New York or Florida) will apply to Plaintiff's claims. Instead, the Court stated that it would address this fact-intensive choice-of-law issue in connection with a separately-filed motion — and invited the parties to make detailed factual submissions addressing this issue.

Given the importance of this threshold choice-of-law determination to the parties' summary judgment motions and many other pretrial procedures, Morgan Stanley has proposed a briefing and argument schedule that will allow the Court an opportunity to consider and determine the choice-of-law issue in accordance with the procedures suggested by the Court during the December 12, 2003 hearing. Morgan Stanley's proposed schedule is attached to the Joint Submission as Exhibit 2.

B. Whether CPH Has Stated A Legally Cognizable Claim

On June 25, 2003, Morgan Stanley filed its Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.061 Or, In The Alternative, For Judgment On the Pleadings. The Court held a hearing on both of these motions on December 12, 2003. With regard to Morgan Stanley's Motion For Judgment On The Pleadings, the Court declined to reach the question of whether CPH has stated a legally cognizable claim against Morgan Stanley, reasoning that the Court could not look beyond the pleadings to resolve the parties' dispute regarding which state's substantive law (Florida or New York) should be applied

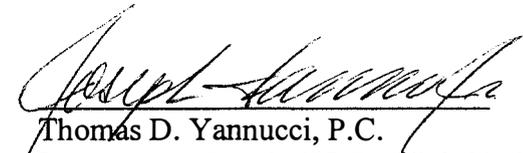

Once the Court has determined which state's substantive law will apply, the legal sufficiency of CPH's claims will once again be ripe for determination by the Court, either in the context of a renewed motion for judgment on the pleadings or a motion for summary judgment. Issues for determination by the Court may include, among other issues (1) whether CPH's misrepresentation claims are barred by various provisions of the written Merger Agreement, which explicitly disclaims reliance on pre-agreement negotiations and representations; (2) whether CPH can plead a valid misrepresentation claim since it had the same access to Sunbeam's books and records, yet failed to take any steps to verify or investigate the representations it now claims were fraudulent; (3) whether CPH has adequately alleged and established a legally cognizable theory of intent to defraud; (4) whether CPH has adequately alleged and established that CPH enjoyed the requisite "relationship" with Morgan Stanley sufficient to support a claim for negligent misrepresentation; and (5) whether CPH has alleged and established that Morgan Stanley knew of the alleged fraud at Sunbeam and knowingly facilitated it sufficient to state a claim for conspiracy or aiding and abetting fraud.

II. Unresolved Motions And Other Requests For Action

There are no unresolved motions or other outstanding requests for action filed by Morgan Stanley at the time of this submission.

Dear Tom:

I attach a deposition notice for eight current and former Morgan Stanley employees. Please let us know whether you will represent the former Morgan Stanley employees. By informing us now of your intention to represent these individuals, you will eliminate the delay we have experienced with prior depositions resulting from the need to procure commissions and serve subpoenas. Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MOTION TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS
PURSUANT TO THE PARTIES' WRITTEN AGREEMENT

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Company Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, respectfully submits this Motion To Compel The Production Of Documents Pursuant To The Parties' Written Agreement, and states in support:

1. Both Parties Have Responsive Documents That Exist In Electronic Form. It is undisputed that both Morgan Stanley and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") possess certain documents that exist in electronic form, including word processing files, spreadsheets and electronic presentation material. (Jan. 29, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to L. Paule-Carres (Ex. A).) Similarly, there is no dispute that such documents are responsive to both parties' requests for production. This motion addresses the form in which such electronic documents are to be produced: electronic (as CPH previously requested and the parties previously agreed) or hard-copy paper form.

2. CPH Insisted That Morgan Stanley Produce Electronic Documents In Electronic Form. The issue of how electronic documents would be produced first arose last summer, shortly after Morgan Stanley made its initial production of documents to CPH. Morgan Stanley produced its documents in hard-copy form, including hard-copy printouts of electronic documents that resided on Morgan Stanley computers and electronic servers. During meet-and-confer sessions and again in written correspondence, CPH insisted that Morgan Stanley produce electronic documents in electronic form. Specifically, CPH wrote “[W]e would like an electronic copy of the documents that were printed from your clients’ computers.” (Aug. 1, 2003 Letter from D. Connell to T. Clare at 3 (Ex. B).)¹ After receiving assurances that this agreement would be reciprocal, Morgan Stanley complied with CPH’s request and produced the electronic documents from its prior production in electronic form.

3. CPH and Morgan Stanley Enter Into A Written Agreement Regarding The Production of Electronic Documents. Morgan Stanley and CPH negotiated and executed a letter agreement addressing the production protocols and cost sharing mechanisms to be implemented. With regard to electronic documents, this agreement states that “[t]he parties have produced and will produce to each other various [electronic] documents that exist in electronic form.” (Aug. 19, 2003 Letter from M. Brody to Z. Brown at 2 (Ex. C).)² There can be no mistake that this letter agreement provided for the exchange of electronic documents in an electronic medium, as opposed to a hard-copy, i.e., paper, form. CPH's attorneys drafted this written agreement, which was countersigned by counsel for Morgan Stanley.

² This agreement further contemplates the use of such electronic form productions by stipulating that prior to use of the electronic-form documents, the parties will “assign production numbers to the electronic document consisting of the number assigned to the electronic medium followed by the file name of the document as found in the electronic medium.” (Id.)

4. Morgan Stanley Has Complied With The Parties' Written Agreement. Morgan Stanley has complied with the parties' agreement by producing electronic documents "in electronic form." Despite additional burden, time, and expense, Morgan Stanley, obtained and produced "in electronic form" documents that had already been produced in hard copy as part of its initial production; on August 8, 2003, Morgan Stanley produced to CPH three CDs of electronic documents which corresponded to its initial hard-copy production of documents. In subsequent productions as well, Morgan Stanley has produced electronic documents in electronic form. Specifically, on October 1, November 10, and November 25, 2003, Morgan Stanley produced one, two and one CD of electronic documents "in electronic form" respectively. In total, Morgan Stanley has produced seven CDs of electronic files, representing 825 files and 185.57 MB of electronic data.

5. CPH Has Failed And Refused To Comply With The Parties' Agreement. CPH has not produced a single electronic document from its own files, or the files of its parent company, MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings. (Oct. 6, 2003 Letter from M. Brody to Z. Brown at 2 (Ex. D).)³ While CPH has produced some documents electronically, a closer inspection of the

³ Given the parties' letter agreement, coupled with the testimony Andrew Fasman, Morgan Stanley understood CPH's October 6, 2003 letter to mean that they did not have any electronic documents -- not that they were not producing them electronically. In relevant part, Mr. Fasman testified that electronic documents were not collected or searched for, nor were employees given instructions to search for electronic documents, at any point prior to 2001. In response to questioning about post-2001, when CPH did search for electronic documents, Mr. Fasman could not recall whether any documents in fact remained:

Q. Were any electronic documents produced in that litigation, in CPH's suit against Arthur Andersen?

A. I believe electronic media were produced. I don't know whether they were simply copies of other

Bates numbers on these documents and the correspondence from prior Sunbeam-related litigation reveals that those documents did not originate from CPH's own files, but rather were documents that were produced to CPH in "electronic form" by various third parties.

6. CPH Has Exploited Morgan Stanley's Production Of Electronic Documents In Electronic Form. CPH's refusal to comply with the parties' agreement has led to disparities in the information available to the parties, and has led to inequities and prejudicial harm to Morgan Stanley during the course of discovery. It is fundamentally unfair, from both a financial and access-to-information standpoint, to allow one party to shirk its contractual obligation by producing documents solely in paper format, while the other party compliantly provides electronic documents in electronic form.

Further, the complying party – in this case, Morgan Stanley – as a result of its electronic production, has ultimately provided CPH with information and data that would not be available absent the electronic production. This phenomenon was highlighted most recently during the January 8, 2004 deposition of Tyrone Chang, in which Mr. Chang was repeatedly questioned regarding the "metadata" contained in some of the electronic files that were produced to CPH, and subsequently used as CPH Exhibits 81A, 83, 84A, 91, 93, 94 and 99.⁴ As many of those electronic media or images of hard copy documents, or it may have been that electronic documents were only produced by printing them out and providing the hard copies. Whatever there was was produced.

Q. But you don't know whether in fact there was any remaining electronic documents in 2001?

A. I only know that whatever there was was produced.

(Sept. 15, 2003 Fasman Dep. at 99 (Ex. E); see also id. at 107-110)

⁴ It is curious to note that in utilizing the electronic versions of Morgan Stanley's production, CPH failed to adhere to the protocol established by the August 19 letter agreement with regard to the labeling of electronic documents prior to their use. Pursuant to that agreement, Morgan Stanley and CPH were to follow the convention of documents were in fact produced initially in paper form, such material and information would not have been available to CPH absent Morgan Stanley's production of electronic documents in the agreed upon electronic form.⁵

7. CPH's Excuses For Refusing To Produce Documents "In Electronic Form" Are Unavailing. CPH has tried to hide behind weak claims to support its position – most notably, that the August 19, 2003 letter agreement “does not require CPH to produce every document in two separate media.” (Feb. 6, 2004 Letter from M. Brody to L. Paule-Carres (Ex. F).) But CPH cannot avoid complying with the agreement using their failure comply with the agreement (by producing in hard copy) as an excuse. Nor is Morgan Stanley suggesting that CPH is obligated to “produce every document in two separate media.” CPH is, however, obligated to produce electronic documents in the agreed-upon medium: in electronic form. Nowhere in that letter agreement (which was drafted by CPH) is there any limiting factor – either by subject matter, or timing of production – which would provide for electronic documents to be produced in any other format.

⁵ For example, CPH Exhibits 81A, 83, 84A and 91 were produced initially in paper form, and were only produced electronically after CPH insisted as much. The metadata information would not have been available for CPH's use and analysis had Morgan Stanley not made such electronic documents available in electronic form.

CONCLUSION

CPH must not be rewarded for its discovery gamesmanship. Morgan Stanley requests the Court to enter an order directing CPH to produce "in electronic form" all electronic documents responsive to Morgan Stanley's document requests, including those previously produced in hard-copy form.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Larissa:

I write in response to your January 23, 2004 letter concerning CPH's January 16 document production.

First, we have reviewed the original Bates labeled documents and found no instance where we produced additional documents on January 20 that had not been produced on January 16. Specifically, the range you provided, CPH 2005804-2005815, was produced on January 16 bearing Bates labels CPH 2005523-2005534. With respect to CPH 2005769 and CPH 2005792, I enclose additional copies of those documents in response to your concern that the documents were not photocopied in their entirety.

Second, with respect to your concern about missing pages, your assertion that the documents were produced without any stapling, clipping or other form of separation of documents is incorrect. While some documents, including CPH 2005763-2005765, may have been produced as they were maintained in the files (without staples or paper clips), many of the produced documents were in fact stapled or paper clipped. Furthermore, several of the documents appear to be single pages of multi-page documents that were maintained in the files separate from the complete document. After conducting a reasonable search for responsive documents, we believe that all responsive pages have been produced.

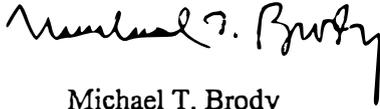

Finally, I did not represent that Mafco had no extant electronic documents. As you know from Mr. Fasman's deposition, certain documents remain in electronic form. The documents we produced on January 16 are hard copy versions of electronic documents. Producing documents to you in hard copy form fulfills our obligations under the rules. You provide no reason why we are obligated to produce the documents in two media. Given that we have fulfilled our obligation by producing the documents, we are not obligated to expend additional time and resources in an effort to search for and produce individual electronic files that already were provided to you in hard copy form.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
MSSF v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. et al.

Dear Tom:

I write to follow up on the conversation you, Jerry Solovy, and I had yesterday afternoon on several discovery topics.

1. Deposition Scheduling. We agreed upon the following: (a) fact depositions will begin on September 15, 2003 with John Tyree; (b) Morgan Stanley will produce Mr. Tyree for his deposition in Florida without the need for letters rogatory; (c) you will propose dates for early September for the Rule 1.310 deposition we noticed on July 17, 2003; (d) we will withdraw the Rule 1.310 deposition we noticed on the topics relating to Morgan Stanley's control over Mr. Tyree; and (e) we will propose dates for early September for the Rule 1.310 deposition MSSF noticed. With respect to MSSF's deposition notice, you agreed that we need not produce documents at the time of the deposition. In addition, you indicated that you would consult with Mr. Ianno, but that it was likely that you would withdraw Topic No. 3 of MSSF's notice. In addition, we agreed to cooperate in scheduling the depositions of our clients and third party witnesses.

2. CPH Document Production. We advised you that CPH would begin its document production on August 14, 2003, which is the same date on which CPH's written responses to your document requests are due. As we explained, we will make CPH's documents available for your inspection at our offices in Chicago. We will afford Morgan Stanley and MSSF the opportunity to designate the documents they wish to have copied. Alternatively, if Morgan Stanley and MSSF wish to designate all documents for copying, please advise us of the name of the copy service you engage.

JENNER & BLOCK

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.
August 1, 2003

We advised you that the requests served by Morgan Stanley and MSSF seek the production of a substantial quantity of documents, many of which we believe are not pertinent to the claims asserted in the pending cases. As we explained, although we still are in the process of compiling those documents, we estimate that the production will be in excess of 350 boxes. We discussed that the bulk of the document production will consist of documents and other materials that we received from Andersen or the SEC in connection with the CPH v. Andersen litigation. Thus, as we explained, the date on which we will be able to produce those documents is dependent on the date that our motion on the Andersen confidentiality order is resolved by the Court. That motion has been set for hearing on August 12.

3. Morgan Stanley's 7/25/03 "Supplemental" Written Responses to CPH's Document Requests. You confirmed that we are at issue with respect to Request Nos. 43 (due diligence materials), 44 (personnel files), 45 (performance criteria), and 46 (compensation criteria). With respect to Request No. 38, which seeks the production of documents relating to Scott Paper, you will confirm that Morgan Stanley is producing those documents in response to other requests. In addition, we asked you to clarify the limitations Morgan Stanley placed on its responses to Request Nos. 13, 15, 25, 27, 39, 40, 42, and 48. You agreed to advise us whether Morgan Stanley was withholding any documents responsive to those requests on the basis of those limitations.

We also discussed Morgan Stanley's objection to the definition of "Morgan Stanley" and "You." In its objection, Morgan Stanley narrows the definition in a way that appears to exclude Morgan Stanley's subsidiaries, divisions, attorneys, accountants, and advisors. You agreed to advise us whether that was intentional and whether Morgan Stanley is withholding any responsive documents on that basis. With respect to electronic documents, you advised us that Morgan Stanley has or will search the email, hard drives, and network files of "custodians," but that Morgan Stanley will not review any electronic back-up or archives to search for responsive documents. You further explained that "custodians" are those Morgan Stanley employees who had access to responsive documents. We asked you to share with us your list of "custodians" and you agreed to do so at "an appropriate time." You also suggested that this issue would be an appropriate area of inquiry at the Rule 1.310 deposition noticed by CPH.

4. MSSF's Written Responses to CPH's Document Requests. We asked when we could expect to receive MSSF's response to the issues we discussed during our July 23, 2003 meet and confer teleconference. You indicated that you would send MSSF's response "promptly."

5. Morgan Stanley's and MSSF's July 25, 2003 Document Production. We discussed the fact that Morgan Stanley and MSSF have combined their document productions in such a way that it is not possible for us to determine whether any particular document came

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.
August 1, 2003

from the files of Morgan Stanley, MSSF, or both. We understand that Morgan Stanley will attempt to provide source information for the documents in its production. If, however, Morgan Stanley and MSSF is unable to provide us with that source information, this will constitute an acknowledgment by your clients that the documents came from the files of both companies.

In addition, we raised with you certain concerns that we have identified thus far with the document production made on July 25. First, many of the documents in Boxes 13 and 14 bear a date code of July 23, 2003, which apparently is the date on which the documents were printed out. Obviously, those documents were created on dates prior to July 22, 2003. We asked you to provide information concerning the dates on which the documents were created. You will determine what information is available in that regard. As you may already know, many applications programs embed in their files a date of creation and/or date of last modification field that can be accessed from the "open" command of those programs. In addition, we would like an electronic copy of the documents that were printed from your clients' computers. Second, a number of documents in Box 13 are illegible and incomprehensible, perhaps due to formatting issues. We will provide you with a list of bates numbers of those documents so that you will be able to determine whether better copies of the documents are available. Third, it appears that Morgan Stanley has redacted a number of documents. You assured us that the basis of those redactions will be reflected in Morgan Stanley's privilege log. Fourth, we understand that Jack Scarola and Joe Ianno are working toward an agreement concerning privilege logs that will provide us with a concrete timetable for the exchange of privilege logs. We will advise you when we discover additional issues as we continue our review of your July 25 document production.

6. Coordination of Hearing and Deposition Dates. We agreed that, for purposes of scheduling hearings or depositions, Jack Scarola's office would coordinate dates with us and Joe Ianno's office would coordinate dates with you. Thus, it will be sufficient if our side contacts either of the firms on your side to schedule matters and vice versa.

We will respond separately to your July 29, 2003 letter.

Very truly yours,

Deirdre E. Connell

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Zhonette:

As we discussed, we propose that Morgan Stanley & Company and CPH share certain costs involved in the production of documents in Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc., v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., No. CA 03-005045 AI (Fla. 15th Jud. Cir.), and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc., No. 03 CA-005165 AG (Fla. 15th Jud. Cir.). We propose the following:

1. Documents produced by Jenner & Block, LLC in paper form only.

Compulit, under a joint contract with (1) Morgan Stanley & Co.; and (2) Jenner & Block, LLC ("J&B") or Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. will pick up the documents J&B has produced in paper form, assign a production number and confidential designation, and image the documents. Compulit will produce two identical sets of copies of the images and will provide one set of images to Kirkland & Ellis LLP ("K&E") in Washington, D.C., and a second set of images to J&B in Chicago, Illinois simultaneously. Compulit will reassemble the original documents in the manner in which they were produced and will return the documents to J&B in the same files and boxes in which they were produced. The parties will enter into a separate contract with Compulit, which contract will more fully describe the services Compulit will perform. Compulit will perform its services on a schedule that is acceptable to the parties. Compulit will issue separate bills to J&B and Morgan Stanley. With the exception of delivery and pickup charges, the costs of Compulit's services will be split equally.

2. Documents that have been imaged.

J&B production. J&B has produced documents to K&E that have already been imaged. K&E wishes to obtain copies of those images, which J&B agrees to provide. For those documents that K&E obtains in image form, Morgan Stanley will pay J&B $0.08 per page. The payment will be made within 15 days of delivery of the images. Morgan Stanley may set-off against this cost any amount due Morgan Stanley as a result of providing imaged documents to J&B or CPH. In addition, Morgan Stanley will pay the costs associated with duplicating any media containing document images.

K&E production. K&E has produced documents to J&B in paper form that have been imaged. J&B wishes to obtain copies of those images, which K&E agrees to provide. For those documents that J&B obtains in image form, J&B or CPH will pay K&E $0.08 per page. The payment will be made within 15 days of delivery of the images. J&B or CPH may set-off this cost against the amount due J&B as a result of providing imaged documents to K&E. In addition, J&B or CPH will pay the costs associated with duplicating any media containing document images.

Each party will simultaneously provide to the other party disks containing the images described in this section. The parties agree that if the disks or other media are duplicated by one of the law firms, the cost charged for that law firm's duplication of the disks or other media will not exceed the cost of performing that service as charged by a vendor selected by the receiving party.

3. Electronic documents.

The parties have produced and will produce to each other various documents that exist in electronic form. Before using any of these electronic documents in this litigation, other than for purposes that are purely internal to the parties, the parties agree that they will assign production numbers to the electronic document consisting of the number assigned to the electronic medium followed by the file name of the document as found on the electronic medium.

Please indicate your agreement to this proposal by signing and returning this document to me.

Sincerely,

Michael T. Brody

Agreed to:

Re: *Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Zhonette:

I write in response to your letter of October 1, 2003.

Your statement that "persons responsible for the document collection on behalf of CPH and Mafco did not contact that Mafco employees who were most significantly involved" with the transaction is reckless. As you know from the deposition of Steven Fasman, Mafco and CPH thoroughly searched their files well before the filing of this litigation and collected all documents that relate to the transaction at issue. As you know from Mr. Fasman's description of that search, CPH and Mafco contacted those employees who are most significantly involved with the transaction, including individuals who were no longer employed by CPH or Mafco at the time of the document production. These current and former employees were asked to identify others who might have responsive documents. Responsive documents were collected and produced in prior litigation. Those documents have now been produced to you. Having already collected responsive documents from those current and former employees who worked on the transaction, CPH and Mafco did not return to those employees to request them to produce the documents they had already produced. Instead, CPH and Mafco identified those few instances in which Morgan Stanley's document requests might call for the production of additional documents not previously collected. CPH and Mafco identified those documents and produced them to you. Thus, it is not correct to state that those individuals most significantly involved with the transaction have not been asked to produce their documents.

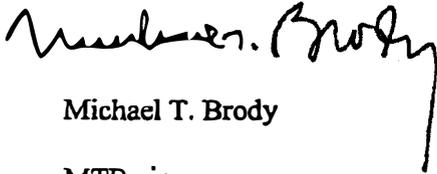

Next, you state that our response to Morgan Stanley's requests for admission "implies that the key personnel having knowledge relating to the requests were not contacted or questioned." We reject your assertion that our inquiry was insufficient to meet our discovery obligations. CPH made a good faith investigation and answered these lengthy requests appropriately. Furthermore, with respect to your specific complaint that "CPH's response to Request 230, 232, 234, and 235 seem to indicate that the involved personnel were not consulted," we note that those particular requests do not identify specific people, but rather refer only to entities.

JENNER & BLOCK

Finally, you state that there have been some errors in the production of electronic documents although you fail to identify either the documents or the errors. As we advised you during the document production, neither CPH nor Mafo produced documents in electronic form. The electronic documents that we produced, as we advised you, were electronic documents we obtained from other individuals. Furthermore, we advised you that we were unable to open a number of those electronic documents. I suspect that your experience has been similar.

Very truly yours,

1 that the subpoena contained were provided.

2 Q. Do you know which among those three you
3 listed was actually provided as guidance?

4 A. It depends on the individual.

5 Q. In Mr. Golden's collection of documents for 6 the securities litigation did he collect from anyone
7 any electronic documents?

8 A. No.

9 Q. Did Mr. Golden collect from anyone any 10 e-mail in soft copy or hard copy?

11 A. I believe, yes.

12 Q. From whom did he collect e-mail?

13 A. I don't know.

14 Q. Why do you believe that he collected
15 e-mail?

16 A. Because I believe e-mails were produced and 17 hard copies of e-mails were produced in connection
18 with that litigation.

19 Q. Were the assistants and secretaries of the 20 individuals that you referred to who Mr. Golden
21 contacted also contacted and instructed to review
22 files?

1 A. To the extent that they were ever taken
2 from the original providers? I don't know.

3 Q. Did CPH or MAFCO retain any sort of record
4 or index of the documents that it provided to 5 Wachtell?

6 A. I think there were some notes kept, yes.

7 Q. Kept by whom?

8 A. Well, I'm thinking of Mr. Golden, but it
9 certainly wouldn't surprise me if in some instances at 10 least the individuals who provided documents would 11 have made some notes of what was given away.

12 Q. Were the people who Mr. Golden contacted in 13 that instance instructed to provide electronic 14 documents?

15 A. No.

16 Q. Were they instructed to search for
17 electronic documents?

18 A. No.

19 Q. Between 1997 and when Mr. Golden searched
20 for documents for the securities litigation, had MAFCO
21 or CPH changed servers?

22 A. I don't know.

1 Q. Would the outside vending company to which
2 you referred have been responsible for any change in
3 servers at MAFCO?

4 A. They would have changed them if there was a
5 change.

6 Q. Did Mr. Golden undertake any search of the 7 servers in response to the document production or 8 collection in 1999 or 2000 for the securities
9 litigation?

10 A. No.

11 Q. Do you know why not?

12 A. Wachtell, Lipton, on behalf of the company,
13 objected to producing anything electronic. That 14 objection was neither challenged nor overruled.

15 Q. At any point between 1997 and today has 16 there been any effort by MAFCO to collect and retain
17 electronic documents related to the Sunbeam
18 acquisition of Coleman?

19 A. Yes.-

20 Q. When was that?

21 A. The first time?

22 Q. Yes.

1 A. 2001.

2 Q. Related to the CPH suit against Arthur
3 Andersen?

4 A. Yes.

5 Q. When MAFCO and CPH undertook to locate any
6 electronic documents related to the Sunbeam
7 acquisition of Coleman, were there any electronic 8 documents remaining?

9 A. I don't know.

10 Q. Who would know that?

11 A. I don't know if anybody would know at this 12 point.

13 Q. Who conducted the search for electronic 14 documents in 2001?

15 A. Various people.

16 Q. Who are all the people that you recall
17 conducting a search for electronic documents in 2001?

18 A. Everybody that was asked for documents was 19 asked for their electronic documents as well as their 20 hard copy documents.

21 Q. Were any electronic documents produced in 22 that litigation, in CPH's suit against Arthur

1 Andersen?

2 A. I believe electronic media were produced.
3 I don't know whether they were simply copies of other
4 electronic media or images of hard copy documents, or 5 it may have been that electronic documents were only
6 produced by printing them out and providing the hard
7 copies. Whatever there was was produced.

8 Q. But you don't know whether in fact there
9 was any remaining electronic documents in 2001?

10 A. I only know that whatever there was was 11 produced.

12 Q. What was the next instance in which CPH or 13 MAFCO collected documents for litigation related to 14 the Sunbeam acquisition of Coleman?

15 A. In connection with this matter.

16 Q. Well, I'm referring to next after the 1999
17 or 2001 one in which they collected it for the 18 securities litigation.

19 A. Yes. I was answering your question. I
20 wasn't clarifying it.

21 Q. Was there no separate collection effort for 22 the lawsuit against Arthur Andersen?

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Larissa:

I write in response to your February 4, 2004 letter regarding our most recent document production in which you demand a response by today.

You claim that the parties have agreed to produce documents in both electronic and hard copy form, but we are not aware of any such agreement. The three items you reference as evidence of that supposed agreement are inapposite:

- First, the August 1, 2003 letter concerned a situation in which Morgan Stanley produced documents that were incomprehensible in hard copy form. We then asked you to produce those documents in electronic form, and you agreed to do so. That was not an agreement to produce every document in both hard copy and electronic form for the duration of the case;
- Second, the August 19, 2003 letter agreement you reference simply related to logistical procedures for producing documents in hard copy form and in electronic form. Again, that agreement does not require CPH to produce every document in two separate media; and
- Third, you cite an August 28, 2003 letter relating to Morgan Stanley's refusal to pay imaging costs. That letter has nothing to do with a supposed agreement to produce multiple copies of the same documents in varying forms.

Larissa L. Paule-Carres, Esq.

You have not responded to my letter of January 23, 2004. Please explain why you believe it is necessary or appropriate for CPH to incur the burden and expense of producing the identical documents twice.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Does Your Honor have a
10 motion?

11 THE COURT: I have a copy.

12 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, Joe Ianno and Tom
13 Clare on behalf of Morgan Stanley. You should
14 have our opposition which we delivered over to 15 the Court I think Tuesday morning.

16 THE COURT: Yes.

17 MR. SCAROLA: This is the blank order,
18 Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Would Your Honor like to
21 take a moment?

22 THE COURT: Give me a second to look at
23 it.

24 Are you just trying to figure out if they

25 think their employees did a bad job on the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

561-820-9066

1 Sunbeam deal or a good job?

2 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. That

3 clearly is one objective of the discovery.

4 That is, to make a determination as to whether

5 there were internal evaluations which amount to

6 an acknowledgement of some negligence on the

7 part of the employees by the corporation

8 itself, by Morgan Stanley itself, acknowledging

9 that its own employees did not do a good job.

10 But that's only a piece of it.

11 THE COURT: What's the other piece?

12 MR. SCAROLA: There is a negligent

13 misrepresentation claim. And that evidence

14 would be obviously relevant to the negligent

15 misrepresentation claim.

16 We have also reserved the right to assert

17 a punitive damage claim and under the Mercury

18 Motors standard, if we are able to demonstrate

19 some negligence on the part of the corporate

20 defendant, we establish vicarious liability for

21 the intentional wrongdoing of Morgan Stanley

22 employees. Some negligence on the part of the

23 corporate defendant would include the negligent

24 hiring or negligent retention of employees

16div-004539

25 involved in misconduct. So we're also seeking,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 as the statute allows us to, in advance of the
2 actual assertion of the punitive damage claim
3 discovery relating to the punitive damage claim
4 and that aspect of punitive damages. We want
5 to know what Morgan Stanley's assessment of its
6 own employees was.

7 For example, it may turn out that there is
8 a pattern of negligence evident from the
9 evaluations that Morgan Stanley has done of its
10 own employees. They know that this employee
11 over the course of time has not done what that
12 employee should be doing with respect to due
13 diligence responsibilities assigned to that
14 employee. Clearly, that would be relevant and 15 material on both the negligence claims and the
16 punitive damage claim.

17 Now, there has been substantial agreement
18 with regard to some of these matters and I
19 should let the Court know what that agreement
20 is. With regard to number 46, there is an 21 agreement that there will be production of the 22 compensation criteria and guidelines that are
23 requested in number 46. That agreement came in

24 response to our motion, although this request
25 was filed back in May of last year and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 substantial negotiations have gone on. We do
2 have that agreement. I have agreed this
3 morning that they can have 20 days in which to
4 produce that information. And so 46 is taken
5 care of.

6 Number 45 is also taken care of. They
7 have agreed that -- actually, what they have
8 said is that they have already produced some
9 documents that are responsive to that request.

10 All we want with regard to 45 is a
11 representation either that all documents have
12 been produced or the production of such
13 additional documents as may exist. So that's
14 narrowed the scope of the request with regard
15 to number 45.

16 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Looking
17 at their response, there are three categories
18 that they have offered to produce, or three
19 subcategories of documents they have offered to
20 produce from the personnel files. Give me an
21 example of what you are looking for that would
22 not be included in those three subcategories.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I believe, Your Honor, that

16div-004541

24 the only issue currently with regard to number

25 44 is the scope, the temporal scope of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

561-820-9066

1 production.

2 THE COURT: So we're agreeing to limiting

3 it to the categories they have said --

4 MR. SCAROLA: Documents that mention

5 Sunbeam by name, documents relating to fee

6 generation. And the third category, if we're

7 communicating accurately, is criticisms or

8 reprimands of employees who worked on the

9 Sunbeam matter.

10 THE COURT: I thought it was any due

11 diligence.

12 MR. CLARE: It's actually a little bit

13 different than I think Mr. Scarola is stating.

14 That's where we have the area of dispute.

15 We're more than happy to produce references,

16 positive or negative, to employees' performance

17 of due diligence functions and that I believe

18 should take care of --

19 THE COURT: Global, not just Sunbeam, but

20 any due diligence.

21 MR. CLARE: Not just Sunbeam, any other

22 deal which is, quite frankly, broader than I

23 think we need to go, but we're willing to do
24 that to accommodate what Mr. Scarola wants to
25 accomplish here. What we don't want is a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 frolic and detour through these confidential
2 personnel employee files.

3 THE COURT: Let me ask you that. With
4 that representation, is that sufficient for
5 your client's purposes?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not sure what Mr. Clare
7 means by no frolic and detour into personnel
8 files.

9 THE COURT: Setting that aside, and I
10 don't even want to go there, is it sufficient
11 if they produce all documents that either
12 relate to work performed on any Sunbeam-related
13 items relating to performance and fee
14 generation and relating to all performance in
15 due diligence activities for any clients?

16 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. We are not
17 prepared to agree to limit it only to due
18 diligence.

19 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind
20 of things you think would be omitted by that
21 that you would be entitled to see.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. Criticisms or

16div-004543

23 reprimands for not heeding the warnings of
24 accountants. If accountants are communicating
25 to Morgan Stanley even outside the area of due

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 diligence and some employee disregards the
2 accountant's warning inappropriately and Morgan
3 Stanley acknowledges that this employee is not
4 heeding the accountant's warnings, that clearly
5 would have a bearing upon the kinds of things
6 that we believe occurred here. Criticisms or
7 reprimands for not being thorough in
8 questioning representations made by third
9 parties.

10 THE COURT: That wouldn't be part of due
11 diligence.

12 MR. SCAROLA: Well, not necessarily. It
13 does not have to occur in the context of the 14 due diligence investigation. It could occur in 15 the context of an audit. It could occur in the 16 context of a lot of different things. It
17 wouldn't necessarily have to be due diligence.
18 So by limiting the scope only to due diligence
19 responsibilities, we think that we may be
20 missing clearly relevant and material
21 information.

22 THE COURT: What's the response to the
23 contention that it should be somewhat broader
24 than due diligence?

25 MR. CLARE: I'm really not sure what other

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 activities would fall into either of those two
2 categories that Morgan Stanley performed.
3 Morgan Stanley is not an auditor, it's not an
4 accounting firm. And the only scenarios that
5 I'm aware of that Morgan Stanley would be
6 interacting with accountants are in the context
7 of either a merger and acquisition due
8 diligence, which would be covered by the
9 umbrella of due diligence, or in the context of 10 the underwriting the securities offering, which
11 again would be under the context of due
12 diligence. So as to both of those two
13 categories, I don't see a broadening of what it
14 is that we're willing to do.

15 What we're trying to avoid by having a
16 global production of, quote, criticisms are
17 having to produce unrelated, completely
18 unrelated statements of weaknesses or areas of
19 development for employees. Because
20 effectively, that will bring open the entire
21 personnel file of these employees. For

16div-004545

22 example, things like organizational skills
23 might be considered to be a criticism or
24 weakness or public speaking might be identified
25 to be a weakness. These are things that are

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 totally unrelated to the issues in this case.
2 And by narrowing it to due diligence, which is
3 really the negligence claim that is asserted
4 against Morgan Stanley, and that performance,
5 we think that would cover all the things that
6 Mr. Scarola is talking about.

7 MR. SCAROLA: What if we have an employee
8 that is simply caught lying and stealing and
9 outside the context of the due diligence
10 investigation, if there's an indication of
11 moral turpitude on the part of this individual,
12 it would seem to me that's relevant and
13 material. What counsel is saying is all we do
14 is due diligence. Then clearly, any function
15 performed by that employee relates to due
16 diligence because that's his job. I'm not sure
17 what it is they're trying to exclude. If their 18 representation is the only thing we do at
19 Morgan Stanley is due diligence --

20 MR. CLARE: That's not what I'm saying.

21 But Mr. Scarola's question about the
22 truthfulness and veracity and moral turpitude
23 and the like is another category that we have
24 offered to produce. All references, positive
25 or negative, to an employee's truthfulness or

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 veracity.

2 THE COURT: Where is that? Because I'm
3 looking at your memo, I didn't see that.

4 MR. CLARE: In response to the
5 opposition -- let me cite you to the page
6 there, Your Honor. It is page --

7 MR. SCAROLA: I'm just trying to figure
8 out what it is they don't want to give us. I'm 9 really not concerned if some employee has been
10 criticized because they got in late one morning
11 or left early. But it is difficult for me to 12 be able to frame a request to produce that
13 eliminates categories of criticism that would
14 be irrelevant without encompassing in that
15 definition relevant criticisms. I don't know
16 what harm exists in giving us the broader
17 category of information. If we find out
18 somebody was late for work, what difference
19 does it make?

20 THE COURT: That's suggesting that we

16div-004547

21 should just ignore objections based on
22 relevancy.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not suggesting that.
24 And if there is a way in which we could define
25 exceptions so that they don't have the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 reasonable possibility of excluding relevant
2 and material information, I'm prepared to do
3 that.

4 THE COURT: It would strike me what we
5 need to do is limit it to sort of the three
6 categories that are listed at the bottom of
7 page two and top of page three of Morgan
8 Stanley, Incorporated's opposition to Coleman's
9 motion to compel together with -- and I know
10 you told me it's in there someplace, I'm sure
11 it is -- information that goes to the
12 truthfulness and veracity of its employees.

13 MR. CLARE: It's on page five over to six.

14 THE COURT: So the references are positive
15 or negative. I would define it as employees'
16 gathering or synthesizing of information from
17 third parties, including clients, just so it --
18 to the extent there may be something broader
19 than due diligence. If we're talking about a

20 shortcoming of an employee or particular talent
21 for gathering stuff or doing something with it,
22 I think that should be disclosed.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Truthfulness, veracity,
24 moral turpitude and competence.

25 MR. CLARE: Now we're getting very general

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 and broad. Your Honor's formulation of the
2 information gathering and synthesizing
3 activities is something that is acceptable.

4 THE COURT: Did you have a proposed order
5 or are we writing it?

6 MR. SCAROLA: All I have is a blank, Your
7 Honor.

8 MR. CLARE: I have a proposed order that
9 memorializes, I believe. If I can hand it up,
10 maybe use it as a starting point.

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. SCAROLA: The one other issue that we
13 had, Your Honor, was the temporal scope of the 14 records to be produced.

15 THE COURT: What was the issue with that?

16 MR. SCAROLA: What I have suggested is
17 that we are willing to start with a ten-year
18 time frame without prejudice to extend
19 backwards if there is an indication of some

20 pattern of wrongdoing during that ten-year time
21 frame.

22 THE COURT: Well, I assume we're talking
23 about a ten-year time frame -- we've already
24 limited it only to employees who worked on
25 Sunbeam.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

15

1 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

2 THE COURT: The ten years starts or ends
3 where?

4 MR. SCAROLA: The ten years ends with the
5 completion of any activities relating to the
6 Sunbeam transaction.

7 MR. CLARE: Mr. Scarola has made my point
8 of an example of frolic and detour. These
9 transactions took place in 1997 and 1998.
10 We've offered to produce the 1997 and 1998
11 evaluations and are willing to go back a
12 reasonable amount in these same categories in
13 order to determine if -- whether there's
14 anything there that would give rise to an
15 inference of a pattern or anything else that
16 would warrant further follow-up discovery. I
17 think ten years is way too broad given the 18 issues.

19 Last month we were here, Your Honor,
20 seeking information about Coleman Parent's own
21 negligence in conducting their own due
22 diligence on this deal and we were told by
23 Mr. Scarola that other deals what were done at 24 prior occasions, and there was this complicated
25 analogy to a traffic situation and a stop sign

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 that have no bearing, no probative value and no
2 relevancy here. So to the extent we're now
3 going back ten years and talking about
4 ten years' worth of prior deals and prior
5 information gathering, I think we're now
6 completely far afield from the issues that are
7 involved here.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not talking about ten
9 years of prior deals. I'm talking about ten
10 years of criticisms to determine whether there
11 is a pattern of --

12 THE COURT: It would strike me five years
13 before the deal in question is reasonable,
14 which would put us back in '92; is that right?

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

16 MR. CLARE: Yes. We're talking about over
17 50 employees, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Yes.

16div-004551

19 MR. CLARE: The other important point that
20 I would like to make here with regard to the 21 scope of what it is that we're producing, there
22 are these documents that are the
23 memorialization of criticisms and reprimands
24 that are the culmination of the review process.
25 It is the document that is signed off by the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 employees and the review committee and provided
2 to them. It's called the evaluation and
3 development summary. It is the
4 memorialization. I have a blank copy if you
5 would like to see what it looks like. It is
6 those documents that we would be producing for
7 each of these employees for each of these
8 years.

9 THE COURT: There's no back-up documents
10 that's in the personnel file?

11 MR. CLARE: Well, Morgan Stanley has a
12 360-degree review process in which personnel --

13 THE COURT: I'll tell you what, I got
14 other folks waiting on for 8:45's. Sit in the 15 box and come up with an order that memorializes
16 what we have already done. Going to start from 17 any document created from '92 forward, not just

18 from a summary document you guys produce once
19 review is completed, but the underlying
20 documentation, as well. And then what we need
21 to discuss is whether we want to set up an hour
22 hearing every month from now on so you guys
23 aren't always coming in on 8:45's and taking
24 more than your ten minutes.

25 MR. SCAROLA: We have a case management

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 conference before Your Honor tomorrow.

2 THE COURT: Can we discuss that then?

3 Because we need to carve out time where we're
4 going to come and talk about this case and not
5 subject everybody else in the courthouse. Sit
6 and talk about this and we will come back.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like us to get out
8 of your earshot?

9 THE COURT: I don't care where you do it.
10 Come back and visit me before you leave. Okay.

11 Do you want this back, Mr. Scarola? It's
12 the form order you gave me.

13 MR. SCAROLA: I'll conserve my envelopes.

14 (Off the record.)

15 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, I think we have
16 made some progress with one fairly significant
17 exception.

16div-004553

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. CLARE: That relates to how we are
20 going to treat the categories of information
21 that fall outside of the categories that we
22 have identified that we are going to produce.

23 Our position and our view is that to the 24 extent a document contains information within
25 the category, we will produce it and we will

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 redact the rest of the information that falls
2 outside of those enumerated categories.
3 Mr. Scarola takes a different view that the
4 documents must be produced in its entirety with
5 the pertinent and non-pertinent information.
6 We believe that completely vitiates the
7 limitation. If we are going to carve out these
8 categories that are very, very broad and
9 produce them, then the impertinent material
10 that happens to be on the same page or the same
11 document gets produced, then that completely
12 vitiates the relevancy limitations that we put
13 on the documents.

14 THE COURT: What's the response?

15 MR. SCAROLA: The purpose of redaction is
16 to protect privileged information, not to leave

17 in the discretion of the opposing party a
18 determination with regard to what's relevant
19 and not relevant in a document that is
20 admittedly relevant. If the document contains
21 relevant information, we ought to get the
22 entire document unless there's something that's
23 privileged included within that document. And
24 privileged material appropriately should be
25 redacted. I think it's inappropriate if the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 document itself contains relevant information
2 to have Morgan Stanley going through and
3 deleting portions of the relevant document.

4 MR. CLARE: Then, number one, again I go
5 back to my point that it completely vitiates
6 the whole concept of identifying relevant
7 categories because if it's an end run around
8 those categories --

9 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind
10 of document where you think there would be
11 redaction.

12 MR. CLARE: If there is a document that
13 says, for example, and this is purely
14 hypothetical, if there is a document that
15 mentions performance on a Sunbeam engagement
16 and there's three sentences that talk about the

16div-004555

17 employee's performance on Sunbeam and the
18 three additional pages talk about the fact that
19 he's late for meetings or the fact he dresses
20 sloppy.

21 THE COURT: Wouldn't that be unlikely that
22 that would be in a single document?

23 MR. CLARE: No, Your Honor. Actually,
24 that's exactly the point, is that this
25 information is contained in a single document.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 The way that the evaluation forms are
2 filled out, it is a number of categories upon
3 which employees are evaluated, including things
4 like fee generation is one section and then
5 there are other sections that have nothing to
6 do with the categories that we have identified.

7 THE COURT: How often are these summaries
8 done?

9 MR. CLARE: Once a year.

10 THE COURT: So it would only be in the
11 annual summaries we're talking about?

12 MR. CLARE: That's correct. And if we're
13 talking about the annual summaries, then I have
14 less of a problem. But we're not. And we want
15 to produce the annual summaries, at least as a

16 starting point, so we can determine if there's
17 anything there. But Mr. Scarola says that he
18 doesn't want the summaries, he wants all the
19 back-up documents.

20 THE COURT: Right. That's what I said.
21 They get the back-up documents.

22 MR. CLARE: Now we're talking about --

23 THE COURT: Would you agree to redaction
24 of the annual summaries only?

25 MR. CLARE: Actually, that's opposite of

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 the concern that we have. The annual summaries
2 are the least voluminous part. It's the
3 back-up documentation. Each person that fills
4 out a review for a person fills out a review in
5 these broad categories.

6 If it would help to illustrate the point,
7 I can show you a blank copy of what these
8 summaries look like so you can see it might
9 contain both relevant as we've identified --

10 THE COURT: That's why it strikes me the
11 annual summaries would be redacted, but I don't
12 see the point redacting the back-up
13 information. It's much more likely to deal
14 with just a single issue.

15 MR. CLARE: Actually, that's not correct.

16div-004557

16 The back-up documentation, the back-up forms
17 are exactly the same. The same categories of 18 information that are on the summary are on the 19 evaluation forms. I can also show you one of 20 those forms.

21 THE COURT: They don't have the general
22 notes from supervisors? If somebody has a
23 concern about an employee, they don't sometimes
24 simply put -- for instance, it would strike me
25 if they're criticizing for somebody doing

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 insufficient due diligence, there might have
2 been an exchange of memos between the employee
3 and supervisor before then talking about the
4 deficiencies. And it would strike me that
5 those e-mails might eventually find its way
6 into the employee file.

7 MR. CLARE: Sure. And they would get
8 that, they would get that exchange of e-mails.

9 THE COURT: What you're suggesting is that
10 you want to redact from those items, not from 11 the summaries. It strikes me the summaries
12 would be much more likely to have things that
13 should be included.

14 MR. CLARE: We're not talking about

15 redacting entire documents. To the extent that
16 that same e-mail that you referenced and that
17 same exchange of memos talks about due
18 diligence in paragraph one and sloppy dressing
19 in paragraph two, paragraph one gets produced,
20 paragraph two is redacted. It protects the
21 legitimate interest that we have carved out
22 with these relevancy objections.

23 All I'm talking about is excising
24 individual references that fall outside of the
25 references that we have agreed to produce.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 THE COURT: It would strike me that if the
2 document has relevant information and there's
3 other information in there that you think is
4 not relevant but also not privileged, you need
5 to produce the document. Otherwise, I think,
6 in all honestly, I think we're investing too
7 much discretion in Morgan Stanley simply to sit
8 and take out parts of the document that may be
9 necessary to understand the evident information
10 in context. I understand you disagree.

11 Do you want to make that change on this
12 order?

13 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Then we still get to see each

16div-004559

15 other tomorrow, and try to carve out a little

16 time.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We are. Thank you.

18 MR. CLARE: Judge, in connection with the

19 status conference tomorrow, we submitted joint

20 submissions I think on Tuesday, as well. I

21 want to make sure the Court has those.

22 THE COURT: I haven't seen those, but I

23 would imagine we have it.

24 MR. CLARE: If there's any problem, let my

25 office know. We can send over another copy.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the following
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, Judge in the above-named Court, at 205 North
4 Dixie Highway, in the City of West Palm Beach,
5 County of Palm Beach, State of Florida, on 19th, the
6 day of February, 2004, beginning at the hour of 8:30

9 MR. SCAROLA: Does Your Honor have a
10 motion?

11 THE COURT: I have a copy.

12 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, Joe Ianno and Tom
13 Clare on behalf of Morgan Stanley. You should
14 have our opposition which we delivered over to 15 the Court I think Tuesday morning.

16 THE COURT: Yes.

17 MR. SCAROLA: This is the blank order,
18 Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Would Your Honor like to
21 take a moment?

22 THE COURT: Give me a second to look at
23 it.

24 Are you just trying to figure out if they

25 think their employees did a bad job on the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

561-820-9066

1 Sunbeam deal or a good job?

2 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. That

3 clearly is one objective of the discovery.

4 That is, to make a determination as to whether

5 there were internal evaluations which amount to

6 an acknowledgement of some negligence on the

7 part of the employees by the corporation

8 itself, by Morgan Stanley itself, acknowledging

9 that its own employees did not do a good job.

10 But that's only a piece of it.

11 THE COURT: What's the other piece?

12 MR. SCAROLA: There is a negligent

13 misrepresentation claim. And that evidence

14 would be obviously relevant to the negligent

15 misrepresentation claim.

16 We have also reserved the right to assert

17 a punitive damage claim and under the Mercury

18 Motors standard, if we are able to demonstrate

19 some negligence on the part of the corporate

20 defendant, we establish vicarious liability for

21 the intentional wrongdoing of Morgan Stanley

22 employees. Some negligence on the part of the

23 corporate defendant would include the negligent

24 hiring or negligent retention of employees

25 involved in misconduct. So we're also seeking,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 as the statute allows us to, in advance of the
2 actual assertion of the punitive damage claim
3 discovery relating to the punitive damage claim
4 and that aspect of punitive damages. We want
5 to know what Morgan Stanley's assessment of its
6 own employees was.

7 For example, it may turn out that there is
8 a pattern of negligence evident from the
9 evaluations that Morgan Stanley has done of its
10 own employees. They know that this employee
11 over the course of time has not done what that
12 employee should be doing with respect to due
13 diligence responsibilities assigned to that
14 employee. Clearly, that would be relevant and
15 material on both the negligence claims and the
16 punitive damage claim.

17 Now, there has been substantial agreement
18 with regard to some of these matters and I
19 should let the Court know what that agreement
20 is. With regard to number 46, there is an
21 agreement that there will be production of the
22 compensation criteria and guidelines that are
23 requested in number 46. That agreement came in

24 response to our motion, although this request
25 was filed back in May of last year and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 substantial negotiations have gone on. We do
2 have that agreement. I have agreed this
3 morning that they can have 20 days in which to
4 produce that information. And so 46 is taken
5 care of.

6 Number 45 is also taken care of. They
7 have agreed that -- actually, what they have
8 said is that they have already produced some
9 documents that are responsive to that request.

10 All we want with regard to 45 is a
11 representation either that all documents have
12 been produced or the production of such
13 additional documents as may exist. So that's
14 narrowed the scope of the request with regard
15 to number 45.

16 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Looking
17 at their response, there are three categories
18 that they have offered to produce, or three
19 subcategories of documents they have offered to
20 produce from the personnel files. Give me an
21 example of what you are looking for that would
22 not be included in those three subcategories.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I believe, Your Honor, that

24 the only issue currently with regard to number

25 44 is the scope, the temporal scope of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

561-820-9066

1 production.

2 THE COURT: So we're agreeing to limiting

3 it to the categories they have said --

4 MR. SCAROLA: Documents that mention

5 Sunbeam by name, documents relating to fee

6 generation. And the third category, if we're

7 communicating accurately, is criticisms or

8 reprimands of employees who worked on the

9 Sunbeam matter.

10 THE COURT: I thought it was any due

11 diligence.

12 MR. CLARE: It's actually a little bit

13 different than I think Mr. Scarola is stating.

14 That's where we have the area of dispute.

15 We're more than happy to produce references,

16 positive or negative, to employees' performance

17 of due diligence functions and that I believe

18 should take care of --

19 THE COURT: Global, not just Sunbeam, but

20 any due diligence.

21 MR. CLARE: Not just Sunbeam, any other

22 deal which is, quite frankly, broader than I

23 think we need to go, but we're willing to do
24 that to accommodate what Mr. Scarola wants to
25 accomplish here. What we don't want is a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 frolic and detour through these confidential
2 personnel employee files.

3 THE COURT: Let me ask you that. With
4 that representation, is that sufficient for
5 your client's purposes?

6 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not sure what Mr. Clare
7 means by no frolic and detour into personnel
8 files.

9 THE COURT: Setting that aside, and I
10 don't even want to go there, is it sufficient
11 if they produce all documents that either
12 relate to work performed on any Sunbeam-related
13 items relating to performance and fee
14 generation and relating to all performance in
15 due diligence activities for any clients?

16 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. We are not
17 prepared to agree to limit it only to due
18 diligence.

19 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind
20 of things you think would be omitted by that
21 that you would be entitled to see.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. Criticisms or

23 reprimands for not heeding the warnings of
24 accountants. If accountants are communicating
25 to Morgan Stanley even outside the area of due

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 diligence and some employee disregards the
2 accountant's warning inappropriately and Morgan
3 Stanley acknowledges that this employee is not
4 heeding the accountant's warnings, that clearly
5 would have a bearing upon the kinds of things
6 that we believe occurred here. Criticisms or
7 reprimands for not being thorough in
8 questioning representations made by third
9 parties.

10 THE COURT: That wouldn't be part of due
11 diligence.

12 MR. SCAROLA: Well, not necessarily. It
13 does not have to occur in the context of the 14 due diligence investigation. It could occur in
15 the context of an audit. It could occur in the
16 context of a lot of different things. It
17 wouldn't necessarily have to be due diligence.
18 So by limiting the scope only to due diligence
19 responsibilities, we think that we may be
20 missing clearly relevant and material
21 information.

22 THE COURT: What's the response to the
23 contention that it should be somewhat broader
24 than due diligence?

25 MR. CLARE: I'm really not sure what other

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 activities would fall into either of those two
2 categories that Morgan Stanley performed.
3 Morgan Stanley is not an auditor, it's not an
4 accounting firm. And the only scenarios that
5 I'm aware of that Morgan Stanley would be
6 interacting with accountants are in the context
7 of either a merger and acquisition due
8 diligence, which would be covered by the
9 umbrella of due diligence, or in the context of
10 the underwriting the securities offering, which
11 again would be under the context of due
12 diligence. So as to both of those two
13 categories, I don't see a broadening of what it
14 is that we're willing to do.

15 What we're trying to avoid by having a
16 global production of, quote, criticisms are
17 having to produce unrelated, completely
18 unrelated statements of weaknesses or areas of
19 development for employees. Because
20 effectively, that will bring open the entire
21 personnel file of these employees. For

22 example, things like organizational skills
23 might be considered to be a criticism or
24 weakness or public speaking might be identified
25 to be a weakness. These are things that are

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 totally unrelated to the issues in this case.
2 And by narrowing it to due diligence, which is
3 really the negligence claim that is asserted
4 against Morgan Stanley, and that performance,
5 we think that would cover all the things that
6 Mr. Scarola is talking about.

7 MR. SCAROLA: What if we have an employee
8 that is simply caught lying and stealing and
9 outside the context of the due diligence
10 investigation, if there's an indication of
11 moral turpitude on the part of this individual,
12 it would seem to me that's relevant and
13 material. What counsel is saying is all we do
14 is due diligence. Then clearly, any function
15 performed by that employee relates to due
16 diligence because that's his job. I'm not sure
17 what it is they're trying to exclude. If their
18 representation is the only thing we do at
19 Morgan Stanley is due diligence --

20 MR. CLARE: That's not what I'm saying.

21 But Mr. Scarola's question about the
22 truthfulness and veracity and moral turpitude
23 and the like is another category that we have
24 offered to produce. All references, positive
25 or negative, to an employee's truthfulness or

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 veracity.

2 THE COURT: Where is that? Because I'm
3 looking at your memo, I didn't see that.

4 MR. CLARE: In response to the
5 opposition -- let me cite you to the page
6 there, Your Honor. It is page --

7 MR. SCAROLA: I'm just trying to figure
8 out what it is they don't want to give us. I'm 9 really not concerned if some employee has been
10 criticized because they got in late one morning
11 or left early. But it is difficult for me to 12 be able to frame a request to produce that
13 eliminates categories of criticism that would
14 be irrelevant without encompassing in that
15 definition relevant criticisms. I don't know
16 what harm exists in giving us the broader
17 category of information. If we find out
18 somebody was late for work, what difference
19 does it make?

20 THE COURT: That's suggesting that we

21 should just ignore objections based on
22 relevancy.

23 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not suggesting that.

24 And if there is a way in which we could define
25 exceptions so that they don't have the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 reasonable possibility of excluding relevant
2 and material information, I'm prepared to do
3 that.

4 THE COURT: It would strike me what we
5 need to do is limit it to sort of the three
6 categories that are listed at the bottom of
7 page two and top of page three of Morgan
8 Stanley, Incorporated's opposition to Coleman's
9 motion to compel together with -- and I know
10 you told me it's in there someplace, I'm sure
11 it is -- information that goes to the
12 truthfulness and veracity of its employees.

13 MR. CLARE: It's on page five over to six.

14 THE COURT: So the references are positive
15 or negative. I would define it as employees'
16 gathering or synthesizing of information from
17 third parties, including clients, just so it --
18 to the extent there may be something broader
19 than due diligence. If we're talking about a

20 shortcoming of an employee or particular talent
21 for gathering stuff or doing something with it,
22 I think that should be disclosed.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Truthfulness, veracity,
24 moral turpitude and competence.

25 MR. CLARE: Now we're getting very general

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 and broad. Your Honor's formulation of the
2 information gathering and synthesizing
3 activities is something that is acceptable.

4 THE COURT: Did you have a proposed order
5 or are we writing it?

6 MR. SCAROLA: All I have is a blank, Your
7 Honor.

8 MR. CLARE: I have a proposed order that
9 memorializes, I believe. If I can hand it up,
10 maybe use it as a starting point.

11 THE COURT: Sure.

12 MR. SCAROLA: The one other issue that we
13 had, Your Honor, was the temporal scope of the 14 records to be produced.

15 THE COURT: What was the issue with that?

16 MR. SCAROLA: What I have suggested is
17 that we are willing to start with a ten-year
18 time frame without prejudice to extend
19 backwards if there is an indication of some

20 pattern of wrongdoing during that ten-year time
21 frame.

22 THE COURT: Well, I assume we're talking
23 about a ten-year time frame -- we've already
24 limited it only to employees who worked on
25 Sunbeam.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

15

1 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

2 THE COURT: The ten years starts or ends
3 where?

4 MR. SCAROLA: The ten years ends with the
5 completion of any activities relating to the
6 Sunbeam transaction.

7 MR. CLARE: Mr. Scarola has made my point
8 of an example of frolic and detour. These
9 transactions took place in 1997 and 1998.
10 We've offered to produce the 1997 and 1998
11 evaluations and are willing to go back a
12 reasonable amount in these same categories in
13 order to determine if -- whether there's
14 anything there that would give rise to an
15 inference of a pattern or anything else that
16 would warrant further follow-up discovery. I
17 think ten years is way too broad given the
18 issues.

19 Last month we were here, Your Honor,
20 seeking information about Coleman Parent's own
21 negligence in conducting their own due
22 diligence on this deal and we were told by
23 Mr. Scarola that other deals what were done at
24 prior occasions, and there was this complicated
25 analogy to a traffic situation and a stop sign

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 that have no bearing, no probative value and no
2 relevancy here. So to the extent we're now
3 going back ten years and talking about
4 ten years' worth of prior deals and prior
5 information gathering, I think we're now
6 completely far afield from the issues that are
7 involved here.

8 MR. SCAROLA: I'm not talking about ten
9 years of prior deals. I'm talking about ten
10 years of criticisms to determine whether there
11 is a pattern of --

12 THE COURT: It would strike me five years
13 before the deal in question is reasonable,
14 which would put us back in '92; is that right?

15 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

16 MR. CLARE: Yes. We're talking about over
17 50 employees, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Yes.

19 MR. CLARE: The other important point that
20 I would like to make here with regard to the
21 scope of what it is that we're producing, there
22 are these documents that are the
23 memorialization of criticisms and reprimands
24 that are the culmination of the review process.
25 It is the document that is signed off by the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 employees and the review committee and provided
2 to them. It's called the evaluation and
3 development summary. It is the
4 memorialization. I have a blank copy if you
5 would like to see what it looks like. It is
6 those documents that we would be producing for
7 each of these employees for each of these
8 years.

9 THE COURT: There's no back-up documents
10 that's in the personnel file?

11 MR. CLARE: Well, Morgan Stanley has a
12 360-degree review process in which personnel --

13 THE COURT: I'll tell you what, I got
14 other folks waiting on for 8:45's. Sit in the 15 box and come up with an order that memorializes
16 what we have already done. Going to start from 17 any document created from '92 forward, not just

18 from a summary document you guys produce once
19 review is completed, but the underlying
20 documentation, as well. And then what we need
21 to discuss is whether we want to set up an hour
22 hearing every month from now on so you guys
23 aren't always coming in on 8:45's and taking
24 more than your ten minutes.

25 MR. SCAROLA: We have a case management

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 conference before Your Honor tomorrow.

2 THE COURT: Can we discuss that then?

3 Because we need to carve out time where we're
4 going to come and talk about this case and not
5 subject everybody else in the courthouse. Sit
6 and talk about this and we will come back.

7 MR. SCAROLA: Would you like us to get out
8 of your earshot?

9 THE COURT: I don't care where you do it.
10 Come back and visit me before you leave. Okay.

11 Do you want this back, Mr. Scarola? It's
12 the form order you gave me.

13 MR. SCAROLA: I'll conserve my envelopes.

14 (Off the record.)

15 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, I think we have
16 made some progress with one fairly significant
17 exception.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. CLARE: That relates to how we are
20 going to treat the categories of information
21 that fall outside of the categories that we
22 have identified that we are going to produce.

23 Our position and our view is that to the
24 extent a document contains information within
25 the category, we will produce it and we will

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 redact the rest of the information that falls
2 outside of those enumerated categories.
3 Mr. Scarola takes a different view that the
4 documents must be produced in its entirety with
5 the pertinent and non-pertinent information.
6 We believe that completely vitiates the
7 limitation. If we are going to carve out these
8 categories that are very, very broad and
9 produce them, then the impertinent material
10 that happens to be on the same page or the same
11 document gets produced, then that completely
12 vitiates the relevancy limitations that we put
13 on the documents.

14 THE COURT: What's the response?

15 MR. SCAROLA: The purpose of redaction is
16 to protect privileged information, not to leave

17 in the discretion of the opposing party a
18 determination with regard to what's relevant
19 and not relevant in a document that is
20 admittedly relevant. If the document contains
21 relevant information, we ought to get the
22 entire document unless there's something that's
23 privileged included within that document. And
24 privileged material appropriately should be
25 redacted. I think it's inappropriate if the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 document itself contains relevant information
2 to have Morgan Stanley going through and
3 deleting portions of the relevant document.

4 MR. CLARE: Then, number one, again I go
5 back to my point that it completely vitiates
6 the whole concept of identifying relevant
7 categories because if it's an end run around
8 those categories --

9 THE COURT: Give me an example of the kind
10 of document where you think there would be
11 redaction.

12 MR. CLARE: If there is a document that
13 says, for example, and this is purely
14 hypothetical, if there is a document that
15 mentions performance on a Sunbeam engagement
16 and there's three sentences that talk about the

17 employee's performance on Sunbeam and the
18 three additional pages talk about the fact that
19 he's late for meetings or the fact he dresses
20 sloppy.

21 THE COURT: Wouldn't that be unlikely that
22 that would be in a single document?

23 MR. CLARE: No, Your Honor. Actually,
24 that's exactly the point, is that this
25 information is contained in a single document.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 The way that the evaluation forms are
2 filled out, it is a number of categories upon
3 which employees are evaluated, including things
4 like fee generation is one section and then
5 there are other sections that have nothing to
6 do with the categories that we have identified.

7 THE COURT: How often are these summaries
8 done?

9 MR. CLARE: Once a year.

10 THE COURT: So it would only be in the
11 annual summaries we're talking about?

12 MR. CLARE: That's correct. And if we're
13 talking about the annual summaries, then I have
14 less of a problem. But we're not. And we want
15 to produce the annual summaries, at least as a

16 starting point, so we can determine if there's
17 anything there. But Mr. Scarola says that he
18 doesn't want the summaries, he wants all the
19 back-up documents.

20 THE COURT: Right. That's what I said.
21 They get the back-up documents.

22 MR. CLARE: Now we're talking about --

23 THE COURT: Would you agree to redaction
24 of the annual summaries only?

25 MR. CLARE: Actually, that's opposite of

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 the concern that we have. The annual summaries
2 are the least voluminous part. It's the
3 back-up documentation. Each person that fills
4 out a review for a person fills out a review in
5 these broad categories.

6 If it would help to illustrate the point,
7 I can show you a blank copy of what these
8 summaries look like so you can see it might
9 contain both relevant as we've identified --

10 THE COURT: That's why it strikes me the
11 annual summaries would be redacted, but I don't
12 see the point redacting the back-up
13 information. It's much more likely to deal
14 with just a single issue.

15 MR. CLARE: Actually, that's not correct.

16 The back-up documentation, the back-up forms
17 are exactly the same. The same categories of
18 information that are on the summary are on the 19 evaluation forms. I can also show you one of 20 those forms.

21 THE COURT: They don't have the general
22 notes from supervisors? If somebody has a
23 concern about an employee, they don't sometimes
24 simply put -- for instance, it would strike me
25 if they're criticizing for somebody doing

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 insufficient due diligence, there might have
2 been an exchange of memos between the employee
3 and supervisor before then talking about the
4 deficiencies. And it would strike me that
5 those e-mails might eventually find its way
6 into the employee file.

7 MR. CLARE: Sure. And they would get
8 that, they would get that exchange of e-mails.

9 THE COURT: What you're suggesting is that
10 you want to redact from those items, not from 11 the summaries. It strikes me the summaries
12 would be much more likely to have things that
13 should be included.

14 MR. CLARE: We're not talking about

15 redacting entire documents. To the extent that
16 that same e-mail that you referenced and that
17 same exchange of memos talks about due
18 diligence in paragraph one and sloppy dressing
19 in paragraph two, paragraph one gets produced,
20 paragraph two is redacted. It protects the
21 legitimate interest that we have carved out
22 with these relevancy objections.

23 All I'm talking about is excising
24 individual references that fall outside of the
25 references that we have agreed to produce.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
561-820-9066

1 THE COURT: It would strike me that if the
2 document has relevant information and there's
3 other information in there that you think is
4 not relevant but also not privileged, you need
5 to produce the document. Otherwise, I think,
6 in all honestly, I think we're investing too
7 much discretion in Morgan Stanley simply to sit
8 and take out parts of the document that may be
9 necessary to understand the evident information
10 in context. I understand you disagree.

11 Do you want to make that change on this
12 order?

13 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Then we still get to see each

15 other tomorrow, and try to carve out a little

16 time.

17 MR. SCAROLA: We are. Thank you.

18 MR. CLARE: Judge, in connection with the

19 status conference tomorrow, we submitted joint

20 submissions I think on Tuesday, as well. I

21 want to make sure the Court has those.

22 THE COURT: I haven't seen those, but I

23 would imagine we have it.

24 MR. CLARE: If there's any problem, let my

25 office know. We can send over another copy.

2 - - -

3 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Have a seat.

4 This is Coleman and Morgan Stanley. Where do we
5 want to start?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, Jack Scarola on
7 behalf of Coleman Parent. With me is Mr. Jerry
8 Solovy, Mr. Ron Marmer, and this is Steve Fasman,
9 our corporate representative.

10 And I think that we are probably in
11 agreement that the first issue to be dealt with,
12 which can be dealt with rather easily, is a
13 determination as to the consolidation of the two
14 related pending cases. And I think that both
15 parties are in agreement that it is appropriate,
16 both for purposes of discovery and trial, to
17 consolidate these related matters.

18 THE COURT: Is that accurate?

19 MR. BEMIS: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
20 Lawrence Bemis with Kirkland & Ellis on behalf of 21 Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior

16div-004594

22 Funding.

23 The answer is, yes, I think we all agree to
24 that.

25 THE COURT: I'm just trying to think,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 mechanically, how do we want to do that?

2 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, there is no separate
3 order on that. We did submit a proposed order
4 which was based on what we understood was a
5 sample pretrial compliance order for case
6 management conference Your Honor had entered, but
7 the consolidation issue, for reasons which escape
8 me, was not put in there, so we will need a
9 separate order ordering consolidation.

10 THE COURT: Right. But I'm just trying to
11 figure out mechanically what we want the clerk to 12 do with the files and how we would like to
13 proceed with the pleadings.

14 MR. BEMIS: I think the way it's done is we 15 put both case captions on each and file them
16 accordingly.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Either that or Your Honor's
18 order can simply direct us to file all pleadings
19 under the lower case number and we'll just style

16div-004595

20 everything under the lower case number. I think
21 what otherwise happens is that the clerk requires
22 us to file duplicates.

23 THE COURT: We don't want to do that. I
24 want to have one place where we look for
25 everything.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. BEMIS: What I would like, Your Honor,
2 is not to have the single number on the cases,
3 but that both numbers appear, for reasons I'm
4 going to explain. There may be additional
5 counsel in this case who will be only in one of
6 the cases and not the other.

7 THE COURT: So are we agreeing we're
8 consolidating for all purposes?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, both
10 discovery and trial.

11 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: For discovery and trial. Okay.
13 So we will use a joint caption, but with the 14 lower number listed first, and you'll direct the 15 clerk to place everything from now on in the 16 lower-numbered case?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I think that works.

16div-004596

18 MR. BEMIS: That's fine, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Okay. Is there a written motion
20 to consolidate? If so, who filed it?

21 MR. BEMIS: It is not, Your Honor. But it
22 would normally be something that under Rule 1.200
23 we would take up at this time.

24 THE COURT: No, no. I'm just trying to
25 think. I'm writing my notes so I can do the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 order and whether I had to say it was a joint or
2 was it written or oral --

3 MR. SCAROLA: Pursuant to oral stipulation
4 of the parties.

5 THE COURT: So we agree it is a joint ore
6 tenus motion to consolidate?

7 MR. BEMIS: Actually, it's in our joint
8 written statement to the Court, as you ordered,
9 that we agreed to it, so it's actually pursuant
10 to a written statement.

11 THE COURT: Okay. What next?

12 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I think that the
13 next matter appropriately addressed is the issue
14 of the trial date. I think that once Your Honor
15 has made a determination as to when this case

16div-004597

16 will be tried, then the parties are going to be
17 able to come to an agreement with regard to 18 establishing other related deadlines based upon
19 that trial date.

20 And Your Honor may recall from a review of
21 our submissions, that not surprisingly on this
22 side of the courtroom we have requested an August
23 trial date and on that side of the courtroom they
24 have suggested a February 2005 trial date.

25 I will tell Your Honor, that from the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Plaintiff's perspective, we are prepared to split
2 the difference with the defense and choose a date
3 between the August and February date, taking into
4 account these considerations; the Jewish Holidays
5 are in September and it would be difficult for us
6 to select a date that was either during or very
7 close to the September Jewish Holidays, and,
8 obviously I think that all parties would be
9 concerned in terms of our ability to select a
10 jury if we start bumping up against Thanksgiving,
11 Christmas and the New Year. What that means,
12 since we anticipate 15 trial days, three weeks of 13 trial, is that a date approximately the middle of

16div-004598

14 October would be far enough away from the
15 September holidays and also far enough away from
16 Thanksgiving that we would be able to comfortably
17 complete the trial in that period. So our
18 suggestion, in light of the requests that have
19 been made on both sides, if it fits in with Your
20 Honor's calendar, we are suggesting that a date
21 be selected in the beginning, approximately mid
22 October.

23 THE COURT: I guess a more fundamental
24 preliminary question, are we at issue yet?

25 MR. BEMIS: We are in --

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: We are currently at issue.

2 THE COURT: Although you still plan to file
3 a motion to amend punitive damages?

4 MR. SCAROLA: That is correct, we are
5 anticipating filing a motion to amend to add
6 punitive damages.

7 I will tell Your Honor that it is our
8 position that that motion does not, because it
9 only goes to the relief sought, place the case in
10 a position where this matter is not at issue and
11 could not be set for trial.

16div-004599

12 THE COURT: Your suggestion is this be set
13 for trial in mid October?

14 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

15 THE COURT: That strikes me, quit honestly,
16 as pretty ambitious for a case this size.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Well, Your Honor, we have been
18 proceeding very quickly with regard to the
19 discovery in this matter. As Your Honor is well
20 aware, this is not the first litigation that
21 arises out of these related circumstances, so
22 discovery has been expedited by virtue of the
23 fact that we have been able to exchange documents
24 previously compiled in relation to other
25 litigation and rely upon prior deposition

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 testimony taken in connection with other
2 litigation. And while this certainly is a
3 matter of substantial magnitude, we feel very
4 comfortable about our ability to be ready for
5 trial in early August and certainly anticipate no
6 problem whatsoever in being ready to go to trial
7 in October. So I don't think it is as ambitious
8 as might appear at first blush.

9 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, may I use the

16div-004600

10 podium?

11 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable
12 is fine.

13 MR. BEMIS: I'm used to a podium.

14 Your Honor, as you're aware, there are two
15 calendars. And I won't go in the intermediate
16 base because I do agree with Mr. Scarola, that
17 once we have a trial date, we can work
18 backwards. And whatever date you select, we'll
19 deal with that offline and not take the Court's
20 time.

21 I didn't know until just now that they're in
22 agreement that it's a three-week trial. So it's
23 a jury trial.

24 THE COURT: Well, the only thing I will
25 point out is we're not in trial on Fridays. So

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 if we're talking about 15 trial days, it's really
2 a four-week trial.

3 MR. BEMIS: So it's a four-week trial, Your
4 Honor.

5 Based on the original schedule, we proposed
6 a date approximately 12 months forward. And I
7 thought that was a very aggressive schedule, for

16div-004601

8 reasons I'm going to tell you, and I question
9 whether we can meet it. And the reason is,
10 overall, while they say this has been done
11 before, it is true that they have done it before,
12 as I'm going to explain, but Morgan Stanley and
13 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding haven't been a
14 party to any of the other litigation and we
15 haven't gone through all of this before, so they
16 had a huge head start in terms of their
17 preparation for the case.

18 Even an October schedule, Your Honor, I
19 think is extraordinarily unrealistic for a number
20 of reasons. First of all, it is a huge case and 21 it's not old. I mean, these cases were filed in 22 May of 2003. It was on the very eve of the 23 running of the statute of limitations, which had
24 already been extended by --

25 THE COURT: That's not relevant to what

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 we're looking at, but go ahead, sir.

2 MR. BEMIS: But the point of it is that
3 there are no equities in this case that require
4 us to go on a crazy track of double tracking
5 depositions and creating all kinds of logistical

16div-004602

6 difficulties when a pace of one year to get this
7 case finished is not unreasonable, given its
8 size. We have $2 billion of damages asserted on
9 one side; $680 million on our side. You have 10 five sets of parties to this case: You have the 11 parties to the acquisition, we have the
12 accountants, we have the law firm, investment
13 bankers, financial advisors. There are three
14 sets of either litigation or proposed litigation
15 that were massive that preceded this. There was
16 the Coleman claims against Sunbeam, which did not
17 result in litigation, but there was a lot of 18 paperwork generated there. Coleman sued Arthur
19 Anderson. There was a big settlement there.
20 You're familiar with that because we had an issue
21 over the production of the settlement agreement.
22 There was a shareholder suit for Sunbeam. SEC
23 investigation. We received in August 400 boxes
24 of documents in the case. There have been 210
25 witnesses who have given testimony in these cases

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 over 400 plus days. And we have had eight
2 months at this point to try to work ourself
3 through that.

16div-004603

4 Now the parties have been moving quickly.
5 I've been on the case only three or four weeks.
6 And I was brought in because it has been moving
7 quickly and because I've also -- I practiced in
8 Florida for 18 years. This case -- in nine
9 months we have accomplished an extraordinary
10 amount of written discovery. I could go through
11 it, but I think you're aware of it. We have many 12 document requests, hundreds of requests for
13 admissions, interrogatories. And that's on both
14 cases. We've been doing both cases
15 simultaneously. We've had 18 depositions taken
16 already. There are 28 deposition notices or
17 commissions pending today. Twenty-eight. Now
18 in terms of motion practice, you're well familiar
19 with that. And on top of what we've
20 accomplished, we have the pending appeal on the 21 venue issue. Now Your Honor's ruled on that
22 issue on December 15th. The first appellant
23 brief, Your Honor, is due February 25th. And if
24 we assume the 40/40 -- or excuse me -- 20/20 plus
25 extensions, if any are requested, we still have

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 requesting. I frankly -- my experience in the
3 Fourth DCA is that we probably won't have a
4 decision by either August or October. Now I
5 could be wrong on that. But the last case I had,
6 which the decision came down in October of last
7 year, it took 18 months from oral argument to get
8 an opinion and it's now on rehearing. So I
9 think we're kidding ourselves that we're going to
10 get that issue resolved. Now why is that
11 important? Two reasons. One is, you can't enter
12 a final judgement in the case, even if you triad
13 (ph) the verdict, for either party. You'd have 14 to stay entry of the judgement. If the court of 15 appeals were to disagree with Your Honor -- and
16 respectfully that is a possibility --

17 THE COURT: Sure.

18 MR. BEMIS: -- the entire trial is a nullity,
19 under the Supreme Court's decision in Leroy
20 versus Great Western United at 443 U.S. 173. It
21 was a case under the Williams Act. I don't
22 believe there's any Florida case directly on
23 point, but I know that's Federal law and I
24 believe that would be the law in Florida.

25 Also, Your Honor, there's going to be an

1 additional party requested to be added. Morgan
2 Stanley Senior Funding intends to add Arthur
3 Anderson as a defendant to the case in the Morgan
4 Stanley Senior Funding case. The claims there
5 will be essentially duplicative, in the sense
6 that they will mirror the claims that Coleman
7 filed against Arthur Anderson and resulted in the
8 settlement agreement that you reviewed. We have
9 proposed a date of April 16th to get that
10 resolved.

11 One of the reasons why we need additional
12 time is that Kirkland & Ellis cannot represent
13 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in that action.
14 We have a conflict. And so Morgan Stanley Senior
15 Funding is reviewing counsel now and they're
16 going to have to handle that matter. The
17 significance of this I think Your Honor would be
18 aware of, having reviewed the settlement
19 agreement, which is subject to a protective order
20 so I don't want to go into the terms of it
21 because it would, I think, violate the terms of
22 it, unless we did an in camera in chambers, but I
23 think Your Honor would know the reason we would
24 bring them in now that we have the settlement
25 agreement, which we didn't get, by the way, until

1 December, so it's a fairly recent development in
2 the case.

3 Another reason, Your Honor, about what is
4 going to happen in terms of scheduling, is just
5 the sheer number of depositions in this case. I
6 did say there have been 18 taken to date. There
7 are now requested, and that means notices are out
8 or commissions have been requested, so we're
9 manipulating dates and witness availability --
10 and, by the way, these have been set without
11 witnesses being asked whether they're available,
12 28 of them in 10 states. We intend to request a
13 total of 42 more depositions and they're located
14 all over the United States. In summary, we've
15 got 28 pending, most of which are by the
16 Plaintiffs. There are some that we have
17 commissions for and we're going to request a
18 total of 42. That's 70 depositions. It's not
19 possible to take 70 depositions in the time that
20 was originally proposed, August 2nd, for trial.
21 That would be one deposition a day, because
22 there's only 70 days left until their proposed
23 discovery cutoff. It's not going to happen. And
24 even extending the discovery cutoff on fact

25 discovery, it is a maniacal schedule that is not

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 conducive to justice in the case. It just isn't
2 necessary when there are no equities to
3 advancement.

4 There are issues you're going to have to
5 resolve, whether it be by summary judgement,
6 which is likely on somebody's part on some of the
7 claims, and we are going to respectfully renew
8 our request that the choice of law issue be
9 resolved prior --

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you all this: I
11 mean, in all honesty, I think October is two 12 ambitious of a date realistically. What I would
13 like to do is, I'm looking -- can I have a 2005
14 calendar?

15 I believe a good day to start it would be
16 January 27th. That would be the first day of the 17 new docket for me. In my experience, that's a
18 good time to get jurors. Their vacations are
19 done; they're not in that spring vacation mode
20 yet. I just want to double-check that that is a
21 Monday. January 27th is a Monday. I don't
22 know if it's a holiday.

16div-004608

23 MR. BEMIS: It's President's Day.
24 THE COURT: Well, no, I think it might be
25 Martin Luther King's Birthday. It's a holiday.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. BEMIS: It's one of those days.
2 President's Day is February.
3 THE COURT: That may be Martin Luther King
4 Day. If it is, we'll be starting on a Tuesday.
5 But assuming we take that as a trial date to
6 start, let's work backwards from there.
7 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion on that would be
8 to adopt Mr. Scarola's offer, and that is, that
9 we meet on that and not ask you to take the time
10 today to beat out 30 days, because there are a
11 lot of days --
12 MR. SCAROLA: I agree, Your Honor. That's
13 not likely to create a problem between us.
14 We'll be able to come to an agreement with regard
15 to the dates that fall working backwards from
16 that trial date.
17 THE COURT: That's fine. The only other two
18 things I would like to do then, if we're going to
19 sort of take that as a trial date, is take, I
20 would imagine, at least a day -- you all are

16div-004609

21 going to have to tell me if it needs to be longer
22 than that -- maybe a week or two weeks before the
23 trial date to do all the motions in limine and to
24 do any objections to deposition testimony, and,
25 we need to talk about the procedure for

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 designating both deposition testimony and
2 objections to it. But the only thing that
3 upsets me, particularly if there's a long trial
4 like that, is if we inconvenience the jurors and
5 ask them to wait and waste their time to do
6 things that we, frankly, didn't do ahead of
7 time.

8 MR. BEMIS: I think the proposed schedule
9 that we had put before Your Honor does deal with
10 all those issues. And we'll make sure that it
11 conforms to your suggestion.

12 THE COURT: What I would want to do now,
13 quite honestly, is pick out the time at a minimum
14 for subsequent case management conference
15 hearings and that hearing time we know we're
16 going to need a week or two before the trial gets
17 started. You all then can back into whatever
18 scheduling you want as long as it's before me in

16div-004610

19 a timely manner. But I want the hearing time
20 carved out so we know we have it.
21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I anticipate that
22 as a consequence of the nature of the litigation
23 and the geographic diversity of the witnesses
24 involved, there will be substantial testimony
25 presented by way of videotape. That will require

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 considerable judicial labor, in terms of page and
2 line designations, and rulings on objections far
3 enough in advance of trial to be able to complete
4 the editing process.

5 THE COURT: Right.

6 MR. SCAROLA: So even the idea that that
7 might be done in a day I think is probably --

8 THE COURT: How long do you think we need?

9 MR. SCAROLA: I'm strictly -- I'm
10 guesstimating based on prior experience in
11 dealing with that kind of situation before. And
12 I would think that we're probably looking at
13 three or four days.

14 THE COURT: That's fine. I'm just
15 looking.

16 MR. SCAROLA: I might suggest that that

16div-004611

17 might be an appropriate task for a special
18 master. That's not something I've discussed with
19 my client or cocounsel yet, but it may be.

20 THE COURT: I don't mind doing that. My
21 only concern would be that requires you to
22 designate the depositions far enough ahead of
23 time so the master can listen to it, issue a
24 report, give time for objections, and then give
25 me time to do whatever I need to do after the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 objections.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I understand. And, again, I
3 haven't thought about the logistics of that, but
4 it's a suggestion that I think both sides needs
5 to consider. That may help to expedite things
6 ultimately.

7 THE COURT: The only thing I'm wondering,
8 and you all can tell me, my personal experience
9 is that nothing much happens right before or
10 after Christmas. And I'm looking, December 24th
11 is a Friday, whether we want to try to set aside
12 that Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, so now
13 we know we have that time. It's sitting there
14 and if we can use it. . .

16div-004612

15 MR. SCAROLA: That works for us, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: We can do all the motions in
17 limine and any other objections I'm going to have
18 to rule on we have it ready then.

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, if you do that, I'm
20 going to be stuck here for Christmas.

21 THE COURT: You can't get out the 23rd?
22 You're going the wrong way. Where are you
23 going?

24 MR. BEMIS: I'm going back to the west
25 coast. You said the 24th --

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: That'll be the 20th, the 21st
2 and the 22nd.

3 THE COURT: Just those three days.

4 MR. BEMIS: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is
5 fine.

6 THE COURT: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday.
7 That would take us only to the 22nd, those three
8 days.

9 MR. SOLOVY: I can think of worse places to
10 be stuck than Palm Beach, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Most people are coming down
12 here.

16div-004613

13 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. SOLOVY: That's a great time to get this
16 stuff done.

17 THE COURT: That way we have it done going
18 into the New Year, motions in limine and
19 objections to -- in your proposed timetable, you
20 give time frames for you all to do designations
21 of deposition testimony, objections and --

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes. And then we'd have to
23 present that as a package. We need to work out
24 the logistics of that. Mr. Scarola and I have
25 been through it, I'm sure, and can figure out a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 way to do it. It isn't easy and it won't be
2 easy for you no matter how we do it.

3 THE COURT: That's fine.

4 I know Defendant had a concern about at some
5 point reaching a determination on what
6 substantive law applies. Are we thinking we
7 would do this by summary judgement or by what
8 mechanism?

9 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion to that, and it's
10 in our schedule, that we brief that issue

16div-004614

11 separately.

12 THE COURT: Tell me procedurally how we're
13 doing it.

14 MR. BEMIS: It's called a motion. We file
15 an undifferentiated motion for choice of law
16 based on the claims. There are four claims in 17 the case. And those four claims state the 18 substantive law -- will determine the substantive
19 law that apply.

20 THE COURT: I hate to do this -- and it's
21 just the way I think. I apologize -- what kind
22 of motion is this? Is it declaratory
23 judgement? Is it summary? What are we calling
24 it?

25 MR. BEMIS: It's just a motion, Your Honor.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Just under Florida Rules you can have an
2 undifferentiated motion for anything that
3 requires an order in the case. And Your Honor
4 has to decide the issue at some point. We can't
5 do jury instructions.

6 THE COURT: I agree we need to decide it.
7 Is this something that would require evidence be
8 considered?

16div-004615

9 MR. BEMIS: You can take evidence on it.
10 In fact, we cited some cases in the motion to 11 dismiss. I didn't argue that, but I read the 12 briefs. And it is possible, and not only is it
13 possible, but it should be done that way for your 14 benefit, as well as the parties. Because when we
15 get to the point of summary judgement, the jury
16 instructions, we need to know this issue. And
17 we've put a date in our order to brief the issue.

18 THE COURT: Does Plaintiff agree that this
19 should be done by a motion?

20 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. As a matter
21 of fact, you may recall that this same suggestion
22 has been made repeatedly by the Defense in
23 earlier hearings and Your Honor's reaction was 24 exactly the same as the reaction you're now
25 having.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 The choice of law issue needs to be
2 determined in a factual context. And you
3 expressly stated that it seems to you that the
4 correct procedural presentation of that issue was
5 by way of motion for summary judgement.

6 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Do we

16div-004616

7 agree that this is a decision that needs to be --
8 we certainly don't want to be making it in the
9 middle of trial.

10 MR. SCAROLA: We absolutely agree that it
11 needs to be made in advance of trial. And I
12 agree with the suggestion that Your Honor has
13 made repeatedly in the past, the way to address
14 it is by way of summary judgement.

15 THE COURT: Well, why can't I do this: What
16 if there's disputed issues of fact on a summary
17 judgement so we can't reach it on summary
18 judgement. Then what happens?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Well, in the presentation of
20 the summary judgment motion we still need to make
21 a determination, based upon the facts presented
22 to the court, as to the standard that is going to
23 be applied. So the facts can be presented to the 24 court in the context of a summary judgement
25 motion and you'll then be able to determine which

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 law applies. Even if you ultimately determine,
2 that because there are disputed issues of fact,
3 under the law that applies, no summary judgement
4 can be granted. But I really think that Your

16div-004617

5 Honor needs to have a factual context in which to
6 make that determination. It cannot be done in
7 the abstract.

8 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, the issue of the
9 substantive law that is applicable to the case
10 does not turn on contested issues of who said
11 what to whom. They turn on the gravity of the 12 claims in the sense of the restatement. Those 13 issues can be resolved, you may take evidence on
14 those issues, and you're not going to decide any
15 liability or damages.

16 THE COURT: I understand that.

17 MR. BEMIS: And that should be determined
18 before we go into the process of briefing summary
19 judgment, because it will complicate the matter
20 immeasurably for us to try to prepare for this
21 case for trial with 80 some depositions if we
22 don't know what the controlling law is.

23 When Your Honor first considered this -- and
24 I've read the transcript. I understand you had
25 some difficulties with it. I think the reason

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 for it was -- and I'm not putting my words into
2 your head, but as I read it, it was the

3 combination of the venue issue and trying to deal
4 with what you do with that and the facts related
5 to that and how that would interplay with the
6 summary judgement, as well as a feeling that
7 perhaps you need to have the summary judgement of
8 who said what to whom framed when you were
9 deciding choice of law. And I think
10 fundamentally that's not right. And this one
11 I've heard -- and you'll tell me if you disagree
12 -- I think the process should be, look at the 13 gravity of the claims. Those gravity issues are
14 not dispositive of summary judgement. And we can
15 decide. Who said what to whom will be on summary
16 judgement. What law applies to who said what to
17 whom and when they did it, those are summary
18 judgement issues. The rest is a substantive
19 legal issue that you need to decide as a
20 precursor for deciding summary judgement, if
21 those motions are filed. And that should be
22 decided as promptly as possible, given your
23 schedule.

24 THE COURT: Tell you what, neither one of
25 you is going to convince me today that one

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 approach is correct or incorrect. But I'm just
2 telling you, I still have the same concerns I've 3 had all along, which is something to suggest we
4 do an evidentiary hearing on this kind of point.

5 MR. BEMIS: I don't think it's an
6 evidentiary hearing. I think gravity of claims
7 is like personal jurisdiction, for the most
8 part. You know, those are not dispositive to the 9 case. It's, where did it happen.

10 THE COURT: That's still evidentiary.

11 MR. BEMIS: This is a case about who said
12 what to whom. We need to know what law applies
13 to those representations.

14 THE COURT: Nobody's suggesting it's not an
15 important issue. All we're suggesting is, how do
16 we want to do this.

17 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion is, Your Honor,
18 let's brief the issue. We're the ones doing the 19 work, other than you reading the brief. If you
20 conclude, I can't decide it, I think it's
21 improper without an evidentiary hearing or I'm
22 not going to have an evidentiary hearing, so be
23 it. Then we'll proceed to the next step. But we 24 ought to be given an opportunity to put the issue
25 --

1 THE COURT: So what you are suggesting --

2 MR. SCAROLA: Is an advisory opinion from
3 the Court.

4 MR. BEMIS: No.

5 THE COURT: Well, I'm still trying to figure
6 out how we want to do this. I understand the
7 point you're making, but I also -- let me ask you
8 this: Are you all in agreement on the timetable
9 when this needs to be determined?

10 MR. SCAROLA: It is our belief that it only
11 needs to be determined in the context of whatever
12 summary judgment motions are filed. If the
13 choice of law issue is not dispositive of a
14 claim, then how could it affect the presentation
15 of evidence at trial?

16 THE COURT: No. I understand that you all
17 don't want to be briefing the substantive motion
18 for summary judgement and have to brief it under
19 both law because I haven't made a decision on
20 which one's going to apply.

21 MR. SCAROLA: On the contrary, I believe
22 that's exactly what we should be doing. I think
23 that we should be briefing the summary judgment
24 motions in the context of conflicting laws
25 because the decision doesn't need to be made,

1 except as the laws in fact conflict with regard
2 to a particular set of facts. If there's no
3 difference in the law under Set of Facts A and
4 Set of Facts B, then Your Honor doesn't need to
5 determine which law applies.

6 THE COURT: Yes. But on the other hand,
7 then I'm going through the mental exercise of
8 looking at two different state's laws and
9 deciding whether they're the same or not; and
10 then if they're different, having to go the step
11 to decide -- and I'm doing that on every point of 12 law I'm having to consider, while making the
13 fundamental decision of are we going to apply New
14 York or Florida substantive law. Then we're only
15 looking at one law from then on.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Except that the authorities
17 suggest that this needs to be an issue-by-issue
18 determination.

19 MR. BEMIS: It is an issue-by-issue by
20 claim. There are four claims in the case.
21 Whether they're our claims or their claims or our
22 claims against Arthur Anderson, there are four
23 claims. They're all "who said what to who"

24 claims. You need to decide the gravity of the 25 law that applies to those claims before we get

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

30

1 into trying to briefing whether the "who said
2 what to who" gives rise to a liability.

3 THE COURT: I understand what you're saying
4 and I will tend to agree, although I'm still hung
5 up on procedurally how we're going to get to
6 where we need to go.

7 MR. BEMIS: Just brief it and make a
8 decision whether we're right or wrong and one way
9 or the other we live with it and we go on with
10 the case.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor, if
12 we're briefing something, don't we have to brief
13 it in the context of some kind of motion? And if
14 it's not a summary judgment motion, what is it?

15 MR. BEMIS: There is no rule in Florida that
16 motions have to be summary judgement or anything
17 else. Any request for an order is a motion.

18 THE COURT: I would agree that there are
19 certain requests to the court that simply aren't
20 appropriate. And if I could only have labels on 21 the motions that are appropriate, we know they're

16div-004623

22 appropriate, and there's procedures in place for
23 considering them.

24 MR. BEMIS: Well, that's true, because they
25 have a certain set we review all of the time.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 But every case has peculiar issues and we don't
2 have choice of law in most cases so we have to
3 have an order telling us. How do you do that?
4 You do it by motion. And any request in Florida
5 for an order by the court is done by motion.
6 Some we have labels for and we have specific
7 standards for. The case law on choice of law,
8 there's a law for that, isn't in the rules, it's
9 in the cases. And there are cases talking about
10 what you consider to determine choice of law,
11 which, again, is not a question of who said what 12 to who, but where's the gravity of the law and
13 how we apply it.

14 THE COURT: Here's what I think we need to
15 do: I think we need to set a deadline for you
16 all to file whatever motions you're going to be
17 filing seeking for determination on choice of
18 law. And if we decide it should be done on 19 summary judgement, you're doing your summary

16div-004624

20 judgement. If somehow I can do a hearing that's
21 not a summary judgment, you file an appropriate
22 motion. If you think it's evidentiary, you put
23 that in a motion.

24 MR. BEMIS: We have a date for that in our
25 proposed order. It's June 21st. But we're going

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 to have to move it in light of your change of the
2 date. But we do have a date for that, which
3 would allow us to get the issue teed up.

4 THE COURT: I think what we need to do now
5 then is to set aside the hearing time for hearing
6 these motions so we know where we're going.

7 MR. BEMIS: We had set the week of June 21st
8 for the hearing. We had a little bit earlier
9 date for this, but we can --

10 MR. SCAROLA: The order anticipates, Your
11 Honor, that there will be a deadline for filing
12 motions and then a period of time shortly
13 following that when those motions --

14 THE COURT: What I'm suggesting, though, is
15 this is a motion that needs to be sped up. This
16 will not be sort of a generic motion for summary
17 judgement.

16div-004625

18 MR. BEMIS: No. What we had contemplated in
19 our order -- and again, we may have to advance
20 this in light of the trial date -- but we had
21 suggested May 28th as the briefing date,
22 responses on June 18th, and a hearing on the week
23 of June 21st. We're perfectly willing to live
24 with that schedule, or we can advance it if we
25 have to. We're far enough in advance of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 trial preparation and summary judgement to get
2 that done.

3 So the week of June 21st was our hearing.
4 We were going to suggest that week. We didn't
5 know what your calendar held.

6 THE COURT: Frankly, I'm busy on that day.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We were hoping it was August.

8 THE COURT: And it's sort of hard because
9 right now we don't know how long it would take.

10 MR. BEMIS: I would suggest that we're
11 talking probably an hour, an hour hearing, 30
12 minutes. I mean, if the United States Supreme
13 Court can -- Bush versus Gore was argued 20
14 minutes per side.

15 THE COURT: Sure. But I assume that we're

16div-004626

16 assuming then that we're not taking any

17 evidence.

18 MR. BEMIS: If we do, we'd have to come
19 back. We're far enough in advance we can tell
20 you, Your Honor, the next time we meet with you
21 we're suggesting, I think, at your suggestion, a
22 monthly conference. This is an issue we could
23 address --

24 THE COURT: If you're suggesting we not
25 carve out the time now, that's fine.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

34

1 MR. BEMIS: Give us a date during the week
2 of June 21st. We'll live with that and work
3 against it.

4 THE COURT: The week of June 21st we
5 actually have a judges conference. I'm looking
6 at Monday, June 28th, nine-thirty.

7 MR. BEMIS: That's fine. I'm not that busy
8 yet.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Obviously, Your Honor, we need
10 to see what the motion is in order to make a
11 determination as to whether it is an appropriate
12 way in which to present these issues to the 13 Court. And we can't judge that until we see the

16div-004627

14 motion.

15 MR. BEMIS: We do have a provision for reply
16 in responses to the motion.

17 THE COURT: That is all motions seeking a
18 determination of choice of law.

19 MR. BEMIS: And we'll have those on file by
20 -- I think the 18th would be a completion date,
21 which would give Your Honor 10 days in advance.
22 You'd have all the materials, which I would hope
23 would be adequate for consideration.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, just so that I'm

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

35

1 sure I understand what you have just said. If
2 it is the Plaintiff's position that choice of law
3 issues need to be resolved in the context of
4 summary judgment motions --

5 THE COURT: What I'm saying is, no, that
6 we're not going to be doing -- to the extent --
7 if at some point you're going to be seeking a
8 determination from me prior to trial of the 9 appropriate substantive law to apply, those
10 motions are going to be heard that day.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Well, our position is that

16div-004628

12 Florida Law applies.

13 THE COURT: Then you wouldn't be seeking any
14 other determination other than Florida Law.

15 MR. SCAROLA: But what I'm trying to
16 determine is, if it is our position that Florida
17 Law applies and consequently we are not filing a
18 choice of law motion, but rather only planning on 19 presenting our summary judgment motions pursuant
20 to Florida Law, is there any --

21 THE COURT: Assuming you won't be arguing in
22 those same motions that Florida Law is the law
23 that gets applied.

24 MR. SCAROLA: Well, clearly whenever we file
25 a summary judgement motion we're arguing that

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Florida Law applies.

2 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor --

3 THE COURT: You're arguing Florida Law
4 applies, but there is not -- please understand,
5 that what I don't want is motions for summary
6 judgement filed by the Plaintiff in October which
7 both argue Florida Law and argue that Florida Law
8 is the applicable law. The point of this is to 9 determine, for the purposes of this case, the

16div-004629

10 substantive law that will apply. And after this,
11 we won't be arguing which substantive law applies
12 for various claims because we will already, my
13 hope is, have determined that.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And so that the Court
15 understands what our position is, it is our
16 position that the choice of law determination
17 cannot be made in the abstract, but only in the 18 context of specific issues presented in either a
19 summary judgment motion or some other motion that
20 is fact specific.

21 THE COURT: But we already have your claims,
22 correct?

23 MR. SCAROLA: You do have our claims,
24 absolutely. Yes, they're stated in our
25 complaint.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

37

1 THE COURT: Right. And so presumably
2 they're going to be determined by substantive law
3 of New York or Florida.

4 MR. SCAROLA: We presume they're going to be
5 determined by Florida Law.

6 MR. BEMIS: And we presume New York, and
7 that's what we're going to thrash out. Who said

16div-004630

8 what to who will be determined in summary
9 judgement, but the gravity of law will be
10 determined by you as a matter of law, which is
11 your responsibility --

12 THE COURT: But please understand, so you
13 know what I'm trying to say, if we get into
14 October and you file something seeking summary
15 judgment on Florida Law, you can argue Florida
16 Law to me, but you won't be able to argue the
17 applicability of the Florida Law.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Because you will have already
19 made that determination --

20 THE COURT: Because that's the point -- on
21 this point, I agree with Defendant. This is a
22 threshold issue we need to reach, both for the 23 economy of your client and for the economy of the 24 court. It's simply not an efficient way to run a
25 case, not to know which substantive law applies.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

38

1 MR. SCAROLA: I think I understand what the
2 Court's intention is. I'm just having a little
3 bit of difficulty understanding, as a practical
4 matter, how that motion is going to be -- the
5 procedural manner in which that motion is going

16div-004631

6 to be presented to the Court, other than by way
7 of summary judgment.

8 THE COURT: Obviously I share that concern
9 and I'm sure we're going to get educated.

10 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

12 MR. BEMIS: Are there any other critical
13 dates of the pretrial schedule that Your Honor
14 would like to address?

15 THE COURT: Hold on. I just want to finish
16 my notes.

17 And we agree this is a 15-day trial?

18 MR. BEMIS: Fifteen trial days, Your Honor,
19 yes.

20 THE COURT: Is that including jury
21 selection?

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes. I mean, that's our best
23 guess. I mean, at this point it's tough to tell,
24 but that's our best guess. And apparently Mr.
25 Scarola agrees that 15 days appears to be what

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 we're going to need.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I believe so, Your Honor.

3 Your Honor, I'm sorry to go back one more

16div-004632

4 time, but I do want to be certain that I

5 understand.

6 If it is our position that Florida Law does
7 apply in this case, is it necessary for us to be
8 filing something affirmatively?

9 THE COURT: Only if -- please understand --
10 I can't think of how to say it more clearly. Let
11 me think if I can -- that you would be precluded
12 then from arguing later on in your motions for
13 summary judgement the applicability of Florida
14 Law; this would simply be an assumption that it
15 did apply. But if there were disputed issues
16 about whether it did, we wouldn't be arguing it
17 then.

18 MR. SCAROLA: I only need to understand
19 where the burden lies. If nobody does anything
20 between now and the time of filing of motions for
21 summary judgement, I would assume that the law
22 that would have to be applied, based upon what
23 Your Honor just said, is the Law of Florida.

24 THE COURT: No. I would not have a law to
25 apply. And if you go back, that meant that you

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 management conference.

3 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we're going to file
4 a motion that it's New York Law.

5 THE COURT: Right, and that becomes moot,
6 because you're going to force the issue.

7 MR. SCAROLA: If there's a clear
8 understanding that they're forcing the issue,
9 then that's fine. I know that they're going to
10 file a motion to which we're going to respond.

11 But it seems to me, that in the absence of 12 their assuming the burden of demonstrating that
13 New York Law applies, the law that ordinarily
14 applies to Florida cases is Florida Law. So I
15 just need to make sure that we're counting on 16 them filing a motion. And if they don't file a
17 motion --

18 MR. BEMIS: We will. And it will say that
19 New York Law applies and they will respond that
20 Florida Law applies and Your Honor will make a
21 judicial ruling and we'll follow up.

22 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine. The record is
23 clear as to how that's going to happen then.

24 THE COURT: All right. It strikes me, we
25 need to stop abusing 8:45's and carve up some

1 reasonable hearing time.

2 MR. BEMIS: We have, Your Honor, what I call
3 a modest proposal to reduce frequent flyer miles
4 from our standpoint, and that is, that we take
5 you up on your suggestion of setting aside an
6 hour or if you believe more -- I don't know the
7 appropriate frequency, whether it should be once
8 a month or whether every three weeks, depends on
9 your calendar and what's pending, and then have
10 everything scheduled at one time. I would
11 suggest a seven-and-two rule, where seven days in
12 advance all motions are filed, two days before
13 that responses are filed and Mr. Scarola and I
14 can take alternating responsibility for providing
15 Your Honor with the materials several days in
16 advance. Then we just go through them seriatim.

17 THE COURT: It strikes me that every three
18 weeks may be about right. I'm afraid every month
19 may not be often enough.

20 MR. BEMIS: Three weeks is fine with us.

21 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just one moment?

22 THE COURT: Sure.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Is it Your Honor's intent that 24 there will be no uniform motion calendars during 25 --

1 THE COURT: Well, that's something we can
2 talk about. We've had a number of hearings on
3 the uniform motion calendar that probably
4 shouldn't have been set there. In all honesty,
5 you guys are sophisticated enough attorneys, I
6 would be shocked if you had a motion that clearly
7 was probably not a UMC. It strikes me, you guys
8 will work it out. On the other hand, if there is
9 one, I certainly don't mind hearing it.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I only asked that question
11 because it'll make a difference in terms of what
12 we think appropriate frequency to be.

13 THE COURT: Sure. We're talking about
14 frequency and length of the hearing, whether we
15 think it should be an hour, an hour and a half or 16 two hours, and that depends on how frequently
17 we're going to do it.

18 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, my proposal is three
19 weeks, two hours. We'll know in advance. I love
20 your suggestion, so that's fine with us.

21 THE COURT: Why don't we just cross out all
22 our time for this case.

23 MR. BEMIS: Actually, Your Honor, your
24 suggestion yesterday is really, in my experience

25 here, it is really the most expeditious way, and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the state courts, big cases, just carve it out --

2 THE COURT: I agree with that. Two hours
3 every three weeks is fairly aggressive, but if
4 that's what it needs. I don't want to put all
5 the things in place to have a specially set trial
6 and discover that we didn't have to, a sufficient
7 hearing would have been fine.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Our past experience, our track
9 record thus far is, that we would not consume two
10 hours of Your Honor's time every three weeks. I
11 would also anticipate, however, that as discovery
12 heats up in this case, that we might consume that
13 much time. My suggestion would be that we might
14 want to start out at an hour and then increase
15 the time as we get farther on down the road,
16 because we'll probably need additional time
17 later.

18 MR. BEMIS: That's fine with me, Your Honor.

19 MR. SCAROLA: And we can let you know at one
20 of those one-hour hearings the point in time in 21 which we anticipate we're going to now need two
22 hours.

16div-004637

23 THE COURT: Frankly, by that time it's too
24 late to give you the two hours. I'm going to set
25 the time up right now.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Well then that's great. Then
2 we'll take the two hours now.

3 THE COURT: So first of all, we want mid
4 March. Is that what we're talking about first?

5 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

6 THE COURT: I can give you an hour at
7 three-thirty on March 19th. I don't have
8 anything in the morning. Do you want that one?

9 MR. BEMIS: Three-thirty is fine with us.

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

11 THE COURT: 3/19/04, three-thirty, one
12 hour.

13 The next one is going to be early April. I
14 can do four o'clock on April 16th.

15 MR. BEMIS: April 16th, 4 p.m.

16 THE COURT: Then we got May.

17 We could do it May 7th. Would you prefer
18 morning or afternoon, if given a choice?

19 MR. BEMIS: Frankly, we'd prefer the
20 mornings, so we can come in the night before.

16div-004638

21 THE COURT: I could do eight o'clock on May

22 7th?

23 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

24 THE COURT: All right. And after that we'll

25 start the two-hour ones. So we're looking the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

45

1 beginning of June. That's May 28th. We prefer

2 8 a.m. again?

3 MR. BEMIS: That's fine, Your Honor. What

4 day of the week is May 28th?

5 THE COURT: These are all Fridays, because

6 those are all the special set.

7 MR. BEMIS: May 28th, is that the Friday

8 before Memorial Day?

9 THE COURT: It is the Friday before Memorial

10 Day.

11 MR. BEMIS: Either come up or go back from

12 the 28th, because Memorial Day is very difficult

13 to get in and out.

14 THE COURT: June 4th, 8 a.m., still two

15 hours.

16 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

17 THE COURT: You probably don't want July

18 2nd?

16div-004639

19 MR. BEMIS: July 2nd is okay. That will be

20 okay with us.

21 THE COURT: You sure?

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes.

23 THE COURT: That's a little more than --

24 that's four weeks instead of three.

25 MR. BEMIS: I think by summer we're going to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 be so deep in depositions that --

2 THE COURT: 8 a.m., two hours.

3 Late July. July 23rd?

4 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

5 THE COURT: That would be 9 a.m.

6 We're in mid August.

7 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, July 23rd was 9

8 a.m.?

9 THE COURT: Yes.

10 Do you want August 13th or August 20th?

11 MR. SCAROLA: 13th, please.

12 MR. BEMIS: 13th is fine.

13 THE COURT: August 13th, '04, 8 a.m.

14 Early September. September 3rd. That would

15 be one-thirty for two hours.

16 MR. BEMIS: Where is that in relation to

16div-004640

17 Labor Day?

18 THE COURT: You want to avoid that?

19 MR. BEMIS: It's so hard to travel on those
20 holidays.

21 THE COURT: I know. I generally go away for
22 a long weekend right after that.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Last week in August.

24 THE COURT: We already have August 13th.

25 MR. BEMIS: If we could just move it to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

47

1 another week in September if you have it, because
2 that's a vacation period for a lot of people and
3 a holiday weekend.

4 THE COURT: But then we're up to September
5 --

6 MR. SCAROLA: 10th.

7 THE COURT: No. That's the weekend I
8 usually go away. September 17th or go back in
9 late August.

10 MR. BEMIS: The 17th is fine with us.

11 THE COURT: Isn't the 16th Rosh Hashanah.

12 MR. SOLOVY: Yes it is, and the 17th. So
13 why don't we go the end of August, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: That's fine. We can go back to

16div-004641

15 August 27th.

16 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

17 THE COURT: And that we can do 8 a.m.

18 again.

19 And then we're in late September.

20 September 25 -- oh, Yom Kipper.

21 MR. SOLOVY: And that's a Saturday anyway,

22 Your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Oh, that's right. Could you do

24 the 24th? You can't do it first thing in the

25 morning?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

48

1 MR. SOLOVY: No, that will be too hard for
2 me. The only way, if we could intrude upon your
3 Thursday the 23rd, that would work. Anything
4 earlier that week.

5 THE COURT: I could do it the afternoon of
6 the 23rd. I couldn't do it the morning.

7 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

8 MR. SOLOVY: That would work.

9 THE COURT: 3 p.m.

10 October 15th.

11 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

12 THE COURT: 8 a.m.

16div-004642

13 November 5th, 8 a.m.

14 And then I think our last one would be early

15 December. December 3rd.

16 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

17 MR. SOLOVY: Fine.

18 THE COURT: 8 a.m. Okay. We'll get all

19 those done.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

21 Your Honor, we do have by agreement one

22 discovery dispute set on the uniform motion

23 calendar for next Thursday I believe, which we

24 would want to be able to --

25 THE COURT: We'll do it then.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

49

1 MR. BEMIS: I think there are actually two

2 set, one on each side.

3 Our suggestion is, let's move them over to

4 the first conference.

5 MR. SCAROLA: We do not want to delay ours.

6 THE COURT: Let me see next week's

7 calendar.

8 Tell you what, I think I could do it

9 nine-thirty on Thursday. Do you want to do that,

10 and then I could give you more time?

16div-004643

11 MR. SCAROLA: I am in trial in front of 12 Judge Miller and we generally begin at
13 nine-thirty.

14 MR. BEMIS: Could I have one second, Your
15 Honor?

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 I don't mind if you come and we try to do
18 them. I really haven't looked at them so I don't
19 know what they are.

20 MR. BEMIS: First of all, I can't come next
21 week, but I can come on the 19th on this one.
22 It's my anniversary and I'm going to be on
23 vacation.

24 THE COURT: March 19th?

25 MR. BEMIS: I can't be here, but I'm going

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

50

1 to have somebody here. We'll have it covered by
2 one of the firms. That's an impossible -- it's
3 my 35th wedding anniversary.

4 THE COURT: I understand. That's fine.

5 MR. BEMIS: With regard to Mr. Scarola's
6 motion, I have been looking at this -- I haven't
7 had as much time in the case unfortunately -- I
8 am going to make a concerted effort to see if I

16div-004644

9 can resolve that motion.

10 THE COURT: The one that's set next
11 Thursday?

12 MR. BEMIS: The one he wants to hear on the 13 19th.

14 THE COURT: When you said the 19th, you
15 confused me.

16 MR. BEMIS: I misspoke. The 26th.

17 I thought I could clearly have it resolved
18 by then. I'm almost certain I cannot resolve it
19 by next Thursday with the client to deal with 20 what he wants and to see what we can do. That
21 is why I would like to see it moved. I represent
22 to the Court we already started the process of 23 trying to get through the issues clearly with the 24 client to see if we can get it resolved in a
25 fashion that's acceptable or better than what we

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

51

1 are currently doing with them so you don't have
2 to intervene.

3 THE COURT: So are you telling me you don't
4 think you can resolve it with the client by next
5 Thursday --

6 MR. BEMIS: Yes, I cannot.

16div-004645

7 THE COURT: -- but we recognize Mr. Scarola
8 doesn't want to wait until March 19th to have it
9 heard.

10 MR. BEMIS: Even if you give us just a
11 couple more -- rather than one week, give us two 12 weeks, even if it has to be on the uniform
13 calendar.

14 THE COURT: I could do it Wednesday, March
15 3rd at eight-thirty.

16 MR. BEMIS: That would be much better for
17 us. We might resolve it by then.

18 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine, Your Honor.
19 We're willing to make that concession. This is
20 an outstanding discovery --

21 THE COURT: Was this noticed for next
22 Thursday?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Actually, it was noticed for
24 earlier. They requested that we push it back.
25 We've pushed it back. And we will agree to push

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 it back again, but this is a discovery matter
2 that has been pending for a long time.

3 THE COURT: So it's already noticed for
4 Thursday?

16div-004646

5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Resetting the hearing -- and
7 Thursday is, what, the 26th -- 2/26/04 at eight
8 forty-five to 3/3/04 at eight-thirty.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Is Your Honor planning on
10 sending out a notice with respect to that
11 hearing?

12 THE COURT: Yes. We'll just include it in
13 this.

14 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, clarification:
15 There are two motions that are pending. There is 16 one filed by the Plaintiff and one filed by the
17 Defendant.

18 THE COURT: That's why I wanted to make sure
19 there was a notice of hearing, so my order
20 wouldn't be referencing something else.

21 MR. SCAROLA: That works. Thank you, Your
22 Honor.

23 Your Honor, one additional matter that I
24 think we need to address in light of the comments
25 about an amendment of the pleadings to add a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 party. Obviously, if that were to occur, then
2 this matter would not be at issue at that time.

16div-004647

3 And certainly if such an amendment is going to
4 take place or if there's going to be an attempt
5 made to amend, because we fully anticipate
6 resisting such an amendment, that's something
7 that should be done within the very immediate
8 future.

9 THE COURT: Well, I would hope when you guys
10 talk about time frames, you come up with a time
11 frame for filing any motion to amend.

12 MR. BEMIS: We did. April 16th is the day
13 we suggested.

14 Our problem is, we're conflicted out and we
15 need to find counsel and get them -- this is a
16 massive case to get them into quickly and there's
17 limits as to what I can do as counsel for Morgan
18 Stanley with a conflict. They're going to have 19 to get in -- but they will only be joining on the
20 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding side and they will
21 be asserting one claim. There are going to be
22 multiple claims, but they will only be against
23 Arthur Anderson. They will in large measure, I
24 believe, mirror Coleman's claims against Arthur
25 Anderson, claiming that, hey, just like Coleman

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 claims they got defrauded or they were
2 misrepresented too, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding
3 was misrepresented too when it lent $680 million
4 in this transaction and lost it.

5 MR. SOLOVY: Judge, the reason for the push
6 is -- we also think there's a lot of skulduggery
7 involved in this motion. And being a little old
8 and inept, when he didn't want to keep one
9 number, that sort of baffled me for a moment,
10 until I heard the terms of Arthur Anderson being
11 brought in. It isn't that Kirkland & Ellis, this
12 little small, thousand-person firm is undermanned
13 and this came as a lightning bolt to them. So
14 we think that this is improper adding of a party
15 too late, for many reasons, and we're not wanting
16 them to tarry anymore.

17 THE COURT: All I can say is, we're arguing
18 about something that's not in front of me now.
19 And I can tell you I have a habit of tuning it
20 out because it's things I don't need to know.
21 If the motion's made, we'll consider it on the 22 merits then. And I'm sure you guys are going to
23 argue we're too far down the road to allow him
24 in.

25 MR. SOLOVY: I just wanted to give this

1 Court a note ahead of time, Your Honor, so by my
2 silence you didn't think I was thinking this was
3 a happy development.

4 MR. SCAROLA: I would only mention, in the
5 context of what is relevant to the issues before
6 Your Honor, that there is a distinction between a
7 motion to amend to add a new party and the motion
8 to amend with regard to the punitive damage
9 claim, which we likely would not be prepared to
10 make by an April date.

11 MR. BEMIS: We don't have any objection to 12 that. We have the same issue. We'll work that 13 out.

14 THE COURT: Let's assume, and I'm acutely
15 aware when attorneys attempt to give me
16 information that I don't need until the issue's
17 in front of me, and I have to assume they're 18 doing it for other things that may not be
19 appropriate.

20 MR. BEMIS: Understood.

21 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
23 Honor.

24 (At 4:29 p.m., the deposition was 25 concluded.)

2 - - -

3 THE COURT: Good afternoon. Have a seat.

4 This is Coleman and Morgan Stanley. Where do we
5 want to start?

6 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, Jack Scarola on
7 behalf of Coleman Parent. With me is Mr. Jerry
8 Solovy, Mr. Ron Marmer, and this is Steve Fasman,
9 our corporate representative.

10 And I think that we are probably in
11 agreement that the first issue to be dealt with,
12 which can be dealt with rather easily, is a
13 determination as to the consolidation of the two
14 related pending cases. And I think that both
15 parties are in agreement that it is appropriate,
16 both for purposes of discovery and trial, to
17 consolidate these related matters.

18 THE COURT: Is that accurate?

19 MR. BEMIS: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
20 Lawrence Bemis with Kirkland & Ellis on behalf of
21 Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior

16div-004655

22 Funding.

23 The answer is, yes, I think we all agree to
24 that.

25 THE COURT: I'm just trying to think,

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 mechanically, how do we want to do that?

2 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, there is no separate
3 order on that. We did submit a proposed order
4 which was based on what we understood was a
5 sample pretrial compliance order for case
6 management conference Your Honor had entered, but
7 the consolidation issue, for reasons which escape
8 me, was not put in there, so we will need a
9 separate order ordering consolidation.

10 THE COURT: Right. But I'm just trying to
11 figure out mechanically what we want the clerk to 12 do with the files and how we would like to
13 proceed with the pleadings.

14 MR. BEMIS: I think the way it's done is we 15 put both case captions on each and file them
16 accordingly.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Either that or Your Honor's
18 order can simply direct us to file all pleadings
19 under the lower case number and we'll just style

20 everything under the lower case number. I think
21 what otherwise happens is that the clerk requires
22 us to file duplicates.

23 THE COURT: We don't want to do that. I
24 want to have one place where we look for
25 everything.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. BEMIS: What I would like, Your Honor,
2 is not to have the single number on the cases,
3 but that both numbers appear, for reasons I'm
4 going to explain. There may be additional
5 counsel in this case who will be only in one of
6 the cases and not the other.

7 THE COURT: So are we agreeing we're
8 consolidating for all purposes?

9 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor, both
10 discovery and trial.

11 MR. BEMIS: Yes, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: For discovery and trial. Okay.
13 So we will use a joint caption, but with the 14 lower number listed first, and you'll direct the 15 clerk to place everything from now on in the
16 lower-numbered case?

17 MR. SCAROLA: I think that works.

18 MR. BEMIS: That's fine, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Okay. Is there a written motion
20 to consolidate? If so, who filed it?

21 MR. BEMIS: It is not, Your Honor. But it
22 would normally be something that under Rule 1.200
23 we would take up at this time.

24 THE COURT: No, no. I'm just trying to
25 think. I'm writing my notes so I can do the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 order and whether I had to say it was a joint or
2 was it written or oral --

3 MR. SCAROLA: Pursuant to oral stipulation
4 of the parties.

5 THE COURT: So we agree it is a joint ore
6 tenus motion to consolidate?

7 MR. BEMIS: Actually, it's in our joint
8 written statement to the Court, as you ordered,
9 that we agreed to it, so it's actually pursuant
10 to a written statement.

11 THE COURT: Okay. What next?

12 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I think that the
13 next matter appropriately addressed is the issue
14 of the trial date. I think that once Your Honor
15 has made a determination as to when this case

16 will be tried, then the parties are going to be
17 able to come to an agreement with regard to 18 establishing other related deadlines based upon
19 that trial date.

20 And Your Honor may recall from a review of
21 our submissions, that not surprisingly on this
22 side of the courtroom we have requested an August
23 trial date and on that side of the courtroom they
24 have suggested a February 2005 trial date.

25 I will tell Your Honor, that from the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Plaintiff's perspective, we are prepared to split
2 the difference with the defense and choose a date
3 between the August and February date, taking into
4 account these considerations; the Jewish Holidays
5 are in September and it would be difficult for us
6 to select a date that was either during or very
7 close to the September Jewish Holidays, and,
8 obviously I think that all parties would be
9 concerned in terms of our ability to select a
10 jury if we start bumping up against Thanksgiving,
11 Christmas and the New Year. What that means,
12 since we anticipate 15 trial days, three weeks of
13 trial, is that a date approximately the middle of

14 October would be far enough away from the
15 September holidays and also far enough away from
16 Thanksgiving that we would be able to comfortably
17 complete the trial in that period. So our
18 suggestion, in light of the requests that have
19 been made on both sides, if it fits in with Your
20 Honor's calendar, we are suggesting that a date
21 be selected in the beginning, approximately mid
22 October.

23 THE COURT: I guess a more fundamental
24 preliminary question, are we at issue yet?

25 MR. BEMIS: We are in --

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: We are currently at issue.

2 THE COURT: Although you still plan to file
3 a motion to amend punitive damages?

4 MR. SCAROLA: That is correct, we are
5 anticipating filing a motion to amend to add
6 punitive damages.

7 I will tell Your Honor that it is our
8 position that that motion does not, because it
9 only goes to the relief sought, place the case in
10 a position where this matter is not at issue and
11 could not be set for trial.

12 THE COURT: Your suggestion is this be set
13 for trial in mid October?

14 MR. SCAROLA: That's correct.

15 THE COURT: That strikes me, quit honestly,
16 as pretty ambitious for a case this size.

17 MR. SCAROLA: Well, Your Honor, we have been
18 proceeding very quickly with regard to the
19 discovery in this matter. As Your Honor is well
20 aware, this is not the first litigation that
21 arises out of these related circumstances, so
22 discovery has been expedited by virtue of the
23 fact that we have been able to exchange documents
24 previously compiled in relation to other
25 litigation and rely upon prior deposition

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 testimony taken in connection with other
2 litigation. And while this certainly is a
3 matter of substantial magnitude, we feel very
4 comfortable about our ability to be ready for
5 trial in early August and certainly anticipate no
6 problem whatsoever in being ready to go to trial
7 in October. So I don't think it is as ambitious
8 as might appear at first blush.

9 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, may I use the

10 podium?

11 THE COURT: However you're more comfortable
12 is fine.

13 MR. BEMIS: I'm used to a podium.

14 Your Honor, as you're aware, there are two
15 calendars. And I won't go in the intermediate
16 base because I do agree with Mr. Scarola, that
17 once we have a trial date, we can work
18 backwards. And whatever date you select, we'll
19 deal with that offline and not take the Court's
20 time.

21 I didn't know until just now that they're in
22 agreement that it's a three-week trial. So it's
23 a jury trial.

24 THE COURT: Well, the only thing I will
25 point out is we're not in trial on Fridays. So

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 if we're talking about 15 trial days, it's really
2 a four-week trial.

3 MR. BEMIS: So it's a four-week trial, Your
4 Honor.

5 Based on the original schedule, we proposed
6 a date approximately 12 months forward. And I
7 thought that was a very aggressive schedule, for

8 reasons I'm going to tell you, and I question
9 whether we can meet it. And the reason is,
10 overall, while they say this has been done
11 before, it is true that they have done it before,
12 as I'm going to explain, but Morgan Stanley and
13 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding haven't been a
14 party to any of the other litigation and we
15 haven't gone through all of this before, so they
16 had a huge head start in terms of their
17 preparation for the case.

18 Even an October schedule, Your Honor, I
19 think is extraordinarily unrealistic for a number
20 of reasons. First of all, it is a huge case and
21 it's not old. I mean, these cases were filed in 22 May of 2003. It was on the very eve of the 23 running of the statute of limitations, which had
24 already been extended by --

25 THE COURT: That's not relevant to what

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.

11

1 we're looking at, but go ahead, sir.

2 MR. BEMIS: But the point of it is that
3 there are no equities in this case that require
4 us to go on a crazy track of double tracking
5 depositions and creating all kinds of logistical

6 difficulties when a pace of one year to get this
7 case finished is not unreasonable, given its
8 size. We have $2 billion of damages asserted on
9 one side; $680 million on our side. You have
10 five sets of parties to this case: You have the
11 parties to the acquisition, we have the
12 accountants, we have the law firm, investment
13 bankers, financial advisors. There are three
14 sets of either litigation or proposed litigation
15 that were massive that preceded this. There was
16 the Coleman claims against Sunbeam, which did not
17 result in litigation, but there was a lot of
18 paperwork generated there. Coleman sued Arthur
19 Anderson. There was a big settlement there.
20 You're familiar with that because we had an issue
21 over the production of the settlement agreement.
22 There was a shareholder suit for Sunbeam. SEC
23 investigation. We received in August 400 boxes
24 of documents in the case. There have been 210
25 witnesses who have given testimony in these cases

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 over 400 plus days. And we have had eight
2 months at this point to try to work ourself
3 through that.

16div-004664

4 Now the parties have been moving quickly.
5 I've been on the case only three or four weeks.
6 And I was brought in because it has been moving
7 quickly and because I've also -- I practiced in
8 Florida for 18 years. This case -- in nine
9 months we have accomplished an extraordinary
10 amount of written discovery. I could go through
11 it, but I think you're aware of it. We have many 12 document requests, hundreds of requests for
13 admissions, interrogatories. And that's on both
14 cases. We've been doing both cases
15 simultaneously. We've had 18 depositions taken
16 already. There are 28 deposition notices or
17 commissions pending today. Twenty-eight. Now
18 in terms of motion practice, you're well familiar
19 with that. And on top of what we've
20 accomplished, we have the pending appeal on the 21 venue issue. Now Your Honor's ruled on that
22 issue on December 15th. The first appellant
23 brief, Your Honor, is due February 25th. And if
24 we assume the 40/40 -- or excuse me -- 20/20 plus
25 extensions, if any are requested, we still have

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 requesting. I frankly -- my experience in the
3 Fourth DCA is that we probably won't have a
4 decision by either August or October. Now I
5 could be wrong on that. But the last case I had,
6 which the decision came down in October of last
7 year, it took 18 months from oral argument to get
8 an opinion and it's now on rehearing. So I
9 think we're kidding ourselves that we're going to
10 get that issue resolved. Now why is that
11 important? Two reasons. One is, you can't enter
12 a final judgement in the case, even if you triad
13 (ph) the verdict, for either party. You'd have
14 to stay entry of the judgement. If the court of
15 appeals were to disagree with Your Honor -- and
16 respectfully that is a possibility --

17 THE COURT: Sure.

18 MR. BEMIS: -- the entire trial is a nullity,
19 under the Supreme Court's decision in Leroy
20 versus Great Western United at 443 U.S. 173. It
21 was a case under the Williams Act. I don't
22 believe there's any Florida case directly on
23 point, but I know that's Federal law and I
24 believe that would be the law in Florida.

25 Also, Your Honor, there's going to be an

1 additional party requested to be added. Morgan
2 Stanley Senior Funding intends to add Arthur
3 Anderson as a defendant to the case in the Morgan
4 Stanley Senior Funding case. The claims there
5 will be essentially duplicative, in the sense
6 that they will mirror the claims that Coleman
7 filed against Arthur Anderson and resulted in the
8 settlement agreement that you reviewed. We have
9 proposed a date of April 16th to get that
10 resolved.

11 One of the reasons why we need additional
12 time is that Kirkland & Ellis cannot represent
13 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in that action.
14 We have a conflict. And so Morgan Stanley Senior
15 Funding is reviewing counsel now and they're
16 going to have to handle that matter. The
17 significance of this I think Your Honor would be
18 aware of, having reviewed the settlement
19 agreement, which is subject to a protective order
20 so I don't want to go into the terms of it
21 because it would, I think, violate the terms of
22 it, unless we did an in camera in chambers, but I
23 think Your Honor would know the reason we would
24 bring them in now that we have the settlement
25 agreement, which we didn't get, by the way, until

1 December, so it's a fairly recent development in
2 the case.

3 Another reason, Your Honor, about what is
4 going to happen in terms of scheduling, is just
5 the sheer number of depositions in this case. I
6 did say there have been 18 taken to date. There
7 are now requested, and that means notices are out
8 or commissions have been requested, so we're
9 manipulating dates and witness availability --
10 and, by the way, these have been set without
11 witnesses being asked whether they're available,
12 28 of them in 10 states. We intend to request a
13 total of 42 more depositions and they're located
14 all over the United States. In summary, we've
15 got 28 pending, most of which are by the
16 Plaintiffs. There are some that we have
17 commissions for and we're going to request a
18 total of 42. That's 70 depositions. It's not
19 possible to take 70 depositions in the time that
20 was originally proposed, August 2nd, for trial.
21 That would be one deposition a day, because
22 there's only 70 days left until their proposed
23 discovery cutoff. It's not going to happen. And
24 even extending the discovery cutoff on fact

25 discovery, it is a maniacal schedule that is not

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 conducive to justice in the case. It just isn't
2 necessary when there are no equities to
3 advancement.

4 There are issues you're going to have to
5 resolve, whether it be by summary judgement,
6 which is likely on somebody's part on some of the
7 claims, and we are going to respectfully renew
8 our request that the choice of law issue be
9 resolved prior --

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you all this: I
11 mean, in all honesty, I think October is two 12 ambitious of a date realistically. What I would
13 like to do is, I'm looking -- can I have a 2005
14 calendar?

15 I believe a good day to start it would be
16 January 27th. That would be the first day of the 17 new docket for me. In my experience, that's a
18 good time to get jurors. Their vacations are
19 done; they're not in that spring vacation mode
20 yet. I just want to double-check that that is a
21 Monday. January 27th is a Monday. I don't
22 know if it's a holiday.

16div-004669

23 MR. BEMIS: It's President's Day.

24 THE COURT: Well, no, I think it might be

25 Martin Luther King's Birthday. It's a holiday.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. BEMIS: It's one of those days.

2 President's Day is February.

3 THE COURT: That may be Martin Luther King

4 Day. If it is, we'll be starting on a Tuesday.

5 But assuming we take that as a trial date to

6 start, let's work backwards from there.

7 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion on that would be

8 to adopt Mr. Scarola's offer, and that is, that

9 we meet on that and not ask you to take the time

10 today to beat out 30 days, because there are a

11 lot of days --

12 MR. SCAROLA: I agree, Your Honor. That's

13 not likely to create a problem between us.

14 We'll be able to come to an agreement with regard

15 to the dates that fall working backwards from

16 that trial date.

17 THE COURT: That's fine. The only other two

18 things I would like to do then, if we're going to

19 sort of take that as a trial date, is take, I

20 would imagine, at least a day -- you all are

21 going to have to tell me if it needs to be longer
22 than that -- maybe a week or two weeks before the
23 trial date to do all the motions in limine and to
24 do any objections to deposition testimony, and,
25 we need to talk about the procedure for

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 designating both deposition testimony and
2 objections to it. But the only thing that
3 upsets me, particularly if there's a long trial
4 like that, is if we inconvenience the jurors and
5 ask them to wait and waste their time to do
6 things that we, frankly, didn't do ahead of
7 time.

8 MR. BEMIS: I think the proposed schedule
9 that we had put before Your Honor does deal with
10 all those issues. And we'll make sure that it
11 conforms to your suggestion.

12 THE COURT: What I would want to do now,
13 quite honestly, is pick out the time at a minimum
14 for subsequent case management conference
15 hearings and that hearing time we know we're
16 going to need a week or two before the trial gets
17 started. You all then can back into whatever
18 scheduling you want as long as it's before me in

19 a timely manner. But I want the hearing time
20 carved out so we know we have it.
21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, I anticipate that
22 as a consequence of the nature of the litigation
23 and the geographic diversity of the witnesses
24 involved, there will be substantial testimony
25 presented by way of videotape. That will require

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 considerable judicial labor, in terms of page and
2 line designations, and rulings on objections far
3 enough in advance of trial to be able to complete
4 the editing process.

5 THE COURT: Right.

6 MR. SCAROLA: So even the idea that that
7 might be done in a day I think is probably --

8 THE COURT: How long do you think we need?

9 MR. SCAROLA: I'm strictly -- I'm
10 guesstimating based on prior experience in
11 dealing with that kind of situation before. And
12 I would think that we're probably looking at
13 three or four days.

14 THE COURT: That's fine. I'm just
15 looking.

16 MR. SCAROLA: I might suggest that that

17 might be an appropriate task for a special
18 master. That's not something I've discussed with
19 my client or cocounsel yet, but it may be.

20 THE COURT: I don't mind doing that. My
21 only concern would be that requires you to
22 designate the depositions far enough ahead of
23 time so the master can listen to it, issue a
24 report, give time for objections, and then give
25 me time to do whatever I need to do after the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 objections.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I understand. And, again, I
3 haven't thought about the logistics of that, but
4 it's a suggestion that I think both sides needs
5 to consider. That may help to expedite things
6 ultimately.

7 THE COURT: The only thing I'm wondering,
8 and you all can tell me, my personal experience
9 is that nothing much happens right before or
10 after Christmas. And I'm looking, December 24th
11 is a Friday, whether we want to try to set aside
12 that Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, so now
13 we know we have that time. It's sitting there
14 and if we can use it. . .

15 MR. SCAROLA: That works for us, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: We can do all the motions in
17 limine and any other objections I'm going to have
18 to rule on we have it ready then.

19 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, if you do that, I'm
20 going to be stuck here for Christmas.

21 THE COURT: You can't get out the 23rd?
22 You're going the wrong way. Where are you
23 going?

24 MR. BEMIS: I'm going back to the west
25 coast. You said the 24th --

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: That'll be the 20th, the 21st
2 and the 22nd.

3 THE COURT: Just those three days.

4 MR. BEMIS: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is
5 fine.

6 THE COURT: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday.
7 That would take us only to the 22nd, those three
8 days.

9 MR. SOLOVY: I can think of worse places to
10 be stuck than Palm Beach, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Most people are coming down
12 here.

13 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. SOLOVY: That's a great time to get this
16 stuff done.

17 THE COURT: That way we have it done going
18 into the New Year, motions in limine and
19 objections to -- in your proposed timetable, you
20 give time frames for you all to do designations
21 of deposition testimony, objections and --

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes. And then we'd have to
23 present that as a package. We need to work out
24 the logistics of that. Mr. Scarola and I have
25 been through it, I'm sure, and can figure out a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 way to do it. It isn't easy and it won't be
2 easy for you no matter how we do it.

3 THE COURT: That's fine.

4 I know Defendant had a concern about at some
5 point reaching a determination on what
6 substantive law applies. Are we thinking we
7 would do this by summary judgement or by what
8 mechanism?

9 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion to that, and it's
10 in our schedule, that we brief that issue

11 separately.

12 THE COURT: Tell me procedurally how we're
13 doing it.

14 MR. BEMIS: It's called a motion. We file
15 an undifferentiated motion for choice of law
16 based on the claims. There are four claims in 17 the case. And those four claims state the
18 substantive law -- will determine the substantive
19 law that apply.

20 THE COURT: I hate to do this -- and it's
21 just the way I think. I apologize -- what kind
22 of motion is this? Is it declaratory
23 judgement? Is it summary? What are we calling
24 it?

25 MR. BEMIS: It's just a motion, Your Honor.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Just under Florida Rules you can have an
2 undifferentiated motion for anything that
3 requires an order in the case. And Your Honor
4 has to decide the issue at some point. We can't
5 do jury instructions.

6 THE COURT: I agree we need to decide it.
7 Is this something that would require evidence be
8 considered?

9 MR. BEMIS: You can take evidence on it.
10 In fact, we cited some cases in the motion to 11 dismiss. I didn't argue that, but I read the 12 briefs. And it is possible, and not only is it
13 possible, but it should be done that way for your
14 benefit, as well as the parties. Because when we
15 get to the point of summary judgement, the jury
16 instructions, we need to know this issue. And
17 we've put a date in our order to brief the issue.

18 THE COURT: Does Plaintiff agree that this
19 should be done by a motion?

20 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. As a matter
21 of fact, you may recall that this same suggestion
22 has been made repeatedly by the Defense in
23 earlier hearings and Your Honor's reaction was
24 exactly the same as the reaction you're now
25 having.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 The choice of law issue needs to be
2 determined in a factual context. And you
3 expressly stated that it seems to you that the
4 correct procedural presentation of that issue was
5 by way of motion for summary judgement.

6 THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Do we

7 agree that this is a decision that needs to be --
8 we certainly don't want to be making it in the
9 middle of trial.

10 MR. SCAROLA: We absolutely agree that it
11 needs to be made in advance of trial. And I
12 agree with the suggestion that Your Honor has
13 made repeatedly in the past, the way to address
14 it is by way of summary judgement.

15 THE COURT: Well, why can't I do this: What
16 if there's disputed issues of fact on a summary
17 judgement so we can't reach it on summary
18 judgement. Then what happens?

19 MR. SCAROLA: Well, in the presentation of
20 the summary judgment motion we still need to make
21 a determination, based upon the facts presented
22 to the court, as to the standard that is going to
23 be applied. So the facts can be presented to the 24 court in the context of a summary judgement
25 motion and you'll then be able to determine which

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 law applies. Even if you ultimately determine,
2 that because there are disputed issues of fact,
3 under the law that applies, no summary judgement
4 can be granted. But I really think that Your

16div-004678

5 Honor needs to have a factual context in which to
6 make that determination. It cannot be done in
7 the abstract.

8 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, the issue of the
9 substantive law that is applicable to the case
10 does not turn on contested issues of who said
11 what to whom. They turn on the gravity of the 12 claims in the sense of the restatement. Those
13 issues can be resolved, you may take evidence on
14 those issues, and you're not going to decide any
15 liability or damages.

16 THE COURT: I understand that.

17 MR. BEMIS: And that should be determined
18 before we go into the process of briefing summary
19 judgment, because it will complicate the matter
20 immeasurably for us to try to prepare for this
21 case for trial with 80 some depositions if we
22 don't know what the controlling law is.

23 When Your Honor first considered this -- and
24 I've read the transcript. I understand you had
25 some difficulties with it. I think the reason

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 for it was -- and I'm not putting my words into
2 your head, but as I read it, it was the

3 combination of the venue issue and trying to deal
4 with what you do with that and the facts related
5 to that and how that would interplay with the
6 summary judgement, as well as a feeling that
7 perhaps you need to have the summary judgement of
8 who said what to whom framed when you were
9 deciding choice of law. And I think
10 fundamentally that's not right. And this one
11 I've heard -- and you'll tell me if you disagree
12 -- I think the process should be, look at the 13 gravity of the claims. Those gravity issues are
14 not dispositive of summary judgement. And we can
15 decide. Who said what to whom will be on summary
16 judgement. What law applies to who said what to
17 whom and when they did it, those are summary
18 judgement issues. The rest is a substantive
19 legal issue that you need to decide as a
20 precursor for deciding summary judgement, if
21 those motions are filed. And that should be
22 decided as promptly as possible, given your
23 schedule.

24 THE COURT: Tell you what, neither one of
25 you is going to convince me today that one

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 approach is correct or incorrect. But I'm just
2 telling you, I still have the same concerns I've
3 had all along, which is something to suggest we
4 do an evidentiary hearing on this kind of point.

5 MR. BEMIS: I don't think it's an
6 evidentiary hearing. I think gravity of claims
7 is like personal jurisdiction, for the most
8 part. You know, those are not dispositive to the 9 case. It's, where did it happen.

10 THE COURT: That's still evidentiary.

11 MR. BEMIS: This is a case about who said
12 what to whom. We need to know what law applies
13 to those representations.

14 THE COURT: Nobody's suggesting it's not an
15 important issue. All we're suggesting is, how do
16 we want to do this.

17 MR. BEMIS: My suggestion is, Your Honor,
18 let's brief the issue. We're the ones doing the
19 work, other than you reading the brief. If you
20 conclude, I can't decide it, I think it's
21 improper without an evidentiary hearing or I'm
22 not going to have an evidentiary hearing, so be
23 it. Then we'll proceed to the next step. But we 24 ought to be given an opportunity to put the issue
25 --

1 THE COURT: So what you are suggesting --

2 MR. SCAROLA: Is an advisory opinion from
3 the Court.

4 MR. BEMIS: No.

5 THE COURT: Well, I'm still trying to figure
6 out how we want to do this. I understand the
7 point you're making, but I also -- let me ask you
8 this: Are you all in agreement on the timetable
9 when this needs to be determined?

10 MR. SCAROLA: It is our belief that it only
11 needs to be determined in the context of whatever
12 summary judgment motions are filed. If the
13 choice of law issue is not dispositive of a
14 claim, then how could it affect the presentation
15 of evidence at trial?

16 THE COURT: No. I understand that you all
17 don't want to be briefing the substantive motion
18 for summary judgement and have to brief it under
19 both law because I haven't made a decision on
20 which one's going to apply.

21 MR. SCAROLA: On the contrary, I believe
22 that's exactly what we should be doing. I think
23 that we should be briefing the summary judgment
24 motions in the context of conflicting laws
25 because the decision doesn't need to be made,

1 except as the laws in fact conflict with regard
2 to a particular set of facts. If there's no
3 difference in the law under Set of Facts A and
4 Set of Facts B, then Your Honor doesn't need to
5 determine which law applies.

6 THE COURT: Yes. But on the other hand,
7 then I'm going through the mental exercise of
8 looking at two different state's laws and
9 deciding whether they're the same or not; and
10 then if they're different, having to go the step
11 to decide -- and I'm doing that on every point of
12 law I'm having to consider, while making the
13 fundamental decision of are we going to apply New
14 York or Florida substantive law. Then we're only
15 looking at one law from then on.

16 MR. SCAROLA: Except that the authorities
17 suggest that this needs to be an issue-by-issue
18 determination.

19 MR. BEMIS: It is an issue-by-issue by
20 claim. There are four claims in the case.
21 Whether they're our claims or their claims or our
22 claims against Arthur Anderson, there are four
23 claims. They're all "who said what to who"

24 claims. You need to decide the gravity of the 25 law that applies to those claims before we get

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

30

1 into trying to briefing whether the "who said
2 what to who" gives rise to a liability.

3 THE COURT: I understand what you're saying
4 and I will tend to agree, although I'm still hung
5 up on procedurally how we're going to get to
6 where we need to go.

7 MR. BEMIS: Just brief it and make a
8 decision whether we're right or wrong and one way
9 or the other we live with it and we go on with
10 the case.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Respectfully, Your Honor, if
12 we're briefing something, don't we have to brief
13 it in the context of some kind of motion? And if
14 it's not a summary judgment motion, what is it?

15 MR. BEMIS: There is no rule in Florida that
16 motions have to be summary judgement or anything
17 else. Any request for an order is a motion.

18 THE COURT: I would agree that there are
19 certain requests to the court that simply aren't
20 appropriate. And if I could only have labels on 21 the motions that are appropriate, we know they're

22 appropriate, and there's procedures in place for
23 considering them.

24 MR. BEMIS: Well, that's true, because they
25 have a certain set we review all of the time.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 But every case has peculiar issues and we don't
2 have choice of law in most cases so we have to
3 have an order telling us. How do you do that?
4 You do it by motion. And any request in Florida
5 for an order by the court is done by motion.
6 Some we have labels for and we have specific
7 standards for. The case law on choice of law,
8 there's a law for that, isn't in the rules, it's
9 in the cases. And there are cases talking about
10 what you consider to determine choice of law,
11 which, again, is not a question of who said what
12 to who, but where's the gravity of the law and
13 how we apply it.

14 THE COURT: Here's what I think we need to
15 do: I think we need to set a deadline for you
16 all to file whatever motions you're going to be
17 filing seeking for determination on choice of
18 law. And if we decide it should be done on
19 summary judgement, you're doing your summary

20 judgement. If somehow I can do a hearing that's
21 not a summary judgment, you file an appropriate
22 motion. If you think it's evidentiary, you put
23 that in a motion.

24 MR. BEMIS: We have a date for that in our
25 proposed order. It's June 21st. But we're going

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 to have to move it in light of your change of the
2 date. But we do have a date for that, which
3 would allow us to get the issue teed up.

4 THE COURT: I think what we need to do now
5 then is to set aside the hearing time for hearing
6 these motions so we know where we're going.

7 MR. BEMIS: We had set the week of June 21st
8 for the hearing. We had a little bit earlier
9 date for this, but we can --

10 MR. SCAROLA: The order anticipates, Your
11 Honor, that there will be a deadline for filing
12 motions and then a period of time shortly
13 following that when those motions --

14 THE COURT: What I'm suggesting, though, is
15 this is a motion that needs to be sped up. This
16 will not be sort of a generic motion for summary
17 judgement.

18 MR. BEMIS: No. What we had contemplated in
19 our order -- and again, we may have to advance
20 this in light of the trial date -- but we had
21 suggested May 28th as the briefing date,
22 responses on June 18th, and a hearing on the week
23 of June 21st. We're perfectly willing to live
24 with that schedule, or we can advance it if we
25 have to. We're far enough in advance of the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 trial preparation and summary judgement to get
2 that done.

3 So the week of June 21st was our hearing.
4 We were going to suggest that week. We didn't
5 know what your calendar held.

6 THE COURT: Frankly, I'm busy on that day.

7 MR. SCAROLA: We were hoping it was August.

8 THE COURT: And it's sort of hard because
9 right now we don't know how long it would take.

10 MR. BEMIS: I would suggest that we're
11 talking probably an hour, an hour hearing, 30
12 minutes. I mean, if the United States Supreme
13 Court can -- Bush versus Gore was argued 20
14 minutes per side.

15 THE COURT: Sure. But I assume that we're

16 assuming then that we're not taking any

17 evidence.

18 MR. BEMIS: If we do, we'd have to come
19 back. We're far enough in advance we can tell
20 you, Your Honor, the next time we meet with you
21 we're suggesting, I think, at your suggestion, a
22 monthly conference. This is an issue we could
23 address --

24 THE COURT: If you're suggesting we not
25 carve out the time now, that's fine.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

34

1 MR. BEMIS: Give us a date during the week
2 of June 21st. We'll live with that and work
3 against it.

4 THE COURT: The week of June 21st we
5 actually have a judges conference. I'm looking
6 at Monday, June 28th, nine-thirty.

7 MR. BEMIS: That's fine. I'm not that busy
8 yet.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Obviously, Your Honor, we need
10 to see what the motion is in order to make a
11 determination as to whether it is an appropriate
12 way in which to present these issues to the 13 Court. And we can't judge that until we see the

14 motion.

15 MR. BEMIS: We do have a provision for reply
16 in responses to the motion.

17 THE COURT: That is all motions seeking a
18 determination of choice of law.

19 MR. BEMIS: And we'll have those on file by
20 -- I think the 18th would be a completion date,
21 which would give Your Honor 10 days in advance.
22 You'd have all the materials, which I would hope
23 would be adequate for consideration.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, just so that I'm

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

35

1 sure I understand what you have just said. If
2 it is the Plaintiff's position that choice of law
3 issues need to be resolved in the context of
4 summary judgment motions --

5 THE COURT: What I'm saying is, no, that
6 we're not going to be doing -- to the extent --
7 if at some point you're going to be seeking a
8 determination from me prior to trial of the
9 appropriate substantive law to apply, those
10 motions are going to be heard that day.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Well, our position is that

12 Florida Law applies.

13 THE COURT: Then you wouldn't be seeking any
14 other determination other than Florida Law.

15 MR. SCAROLA: But what I'm trying to
16 determine is, if it is our position that Florida
17 Law applies and consequently we are not filing a
18 choice of law motion, but rather only planning on
19 presenting our summary judgment motions pursuant
20 to Florida Law, is there any --

21 THE COURT: Assuming you won't be arguing in
22 those same motions that Florida Law is the law
23 that gets applied.

24 MR. SCAROLA: Well, clearly whenever we file
25 a summary judgement motion we're arguing that

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 Florida Law applies.

2 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor --

3 THE COURT: You're arguing Florida Law
4 applies, but there is not -- please understand,
5 that what I don't want is motions for summary
6 judgement filed by the Plaintiff in October which
7 both argue Florida Law and argue that Florida Law
8 is the applicable law. The point of this is to 9 determine, for the purposes of this case, the

10 substantive law that will apply. And after this,
11 we won't be arguing which substantive law applies
12 for various claims because we will already, my
13 hope is, have determined that.

14 MR. SCAROLA: And so that the Court
15 understands what our position is, it is our
16 position that the choice of law determination
17 cannot be made in the abstract, but only in the
18 context of specific issues presented in either a
19 summary judgment motion or some other motion that
20 is fact specific.

21 THE COURT: But we already have your claims,
22 correct?

23 MR. SCAROLA: You do have our claims,
24 absolutely. Yes, they're stated in our
25 complaint.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

37

1 THE COURT: Right. And so presumably
2 they're going to be determined by substantive law
3 of New York or Florida.

4 MR. SCAROLA: We presume they're going to be
5 determined by Florida Law.

6 MR. BEMIS: And we presume New York, and
7 that's what we're going to thrash out. Who said

8 what to who will be determined in summary
9 judgement, but the gravity of law will be
10 determined by you as a matter of law, which is
11 your responsibility --

12 THE COURT: But please understand, so you
13 know what I'm trying to say, if we get into
14 October and you file something seeking summary
15 judgment on Florida Law, you can argue Florida
16 Law to me, but you won't be able to argue the
17 applicability of the Florida Law.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Because you will have already
19 made that determination --

20 THE COURT: Because that's the point -- on
21 this point, I agree with Defendant. This is a
22 threshold issue we need to reach, both for the
23 economy of your client and for the economy of the 24 court. It's simply not an efficient way to run a
25 case, not to know which substantive law applies.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

38

1 MR. SCAROLA: I think I understand what the
2 Court's intention is. I'm just having a little
3 bit of difficulty understanding, as a practical
4 matter, how that motion is going to be -- the
5 procedural manner in which that motion is going

16div-004692

6 to be presented to the Court, other than by way
7 of summary judgment.

8 THE COURT: Obviously I share that concern
9 and I'm sure we're going to get educated.

10 MR. BEMIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

12 MR. BEMIS: Are there any other critical
13 dates of the pretrial schedule that Your Honor
14 would like to address?

15 THE COURT: Hold on. I just want to finish
16 my notes.

17 And we agree this is a 15-day trial?

18 MR. BEMIS: Fifteen trial days, Your Honor,
19 yes.

20 THE COURT: Is that including jury
21 selection?

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes. I mean, that's our best
23 guess. I mean, at this point it's tough to tell,
24 but that's our best guess. And apparently Mr.
25 Scarola agrees that 15 days appears to be what

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 we're going to need.

2 MR. SCAROLA: I believe so, Your Honor.

3 Your Honor, I'm sorry to go back one more

4 time, but I do want to be certain that I

5 understand.

6 If it is our position that Florida Law does
7 apply in this case, is it necessary for us to be
8 filing something affirmatively?

9 THE COURT: Only if -- please understand --
10 I can't think of how to say it more clearly. Let
11 me think if I can -- that you would be precluded
12 then from arguing later on in your motions for
13 summary judgement the applicability of Florida
14 Law; this would simply be an assumption that it
15 did apply. But if there were disputed issues
16 about whether it did, we wouldn't be arguing it
17 then.

18 MR. SCAROLA: I only need to understand
19 where the burden lies. If nobody does anything
20 between now and the time of filing of motions for
21 summary judgement, I would assume that the law
22 that would have to be applied, based upon what
23 Your Honor just said, is the Law of Florida.

24 THE COURT: No. I would not have a law to
25 apply. And if you go back, that meant that you

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

2 management conference.

3 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, we're going to file
4 a motion that it's New York Law.

5 THE COURT: Right, and that becomes moot,
6 because you're going to force the issue.

7 MR. SCAROLA: If there's a clear
8 understanding that they're forcing the issue,
9 then that's fine. I know that they're going to
10 file a motion to which we're going to respond.

11 But it seems to me, that in the absence of 12 their assuming the burden of demonstrating that
13 New York Law applies, the law that ordinarily
14 applies to Florida cases is Florida Law. So I
15 just need to make sure that we're counting on 16 them filing a motion. And if they don't file a
17 motion --

18 MR. BEMIS: We will. And it will say that
19 New York Law applies and they will respond that
20 Florida Law applies and Your Honor will make a
21 judicial ruling and we'll follow up.

22 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine. The record is
23 clear as to how that's going to happen then.

24 THE COURT: All right. It strikes me, we
25 need to stop abusing 8:45's and carve up some

1 reasonable hearing time.

2 MR. BEMIS: We have, Your Honor, what I call
3 a modest proposal to reduce frequent flyer miles
4 from our standpoint, and that is, that we take
5 you up on your suggestion of setting aside an
6 hour or if you believe more -- I don't know the
7 appropriate frequency, whether it should be once
8 a month or whether every three weeks, depends on
9 your calendar and what's pending, and then have
10 everything scheduled at one time. I would
11 suggest a seven-and-two rule, where seven days in
12 advance all motions are filed, two days before
13 that responses are filed and Mr. Scarola and I
14 can take alternating responsibility for providing
15 Your Honor with the materials several days in
16 advance. Then we just go through them seriatim.

17 THE COURT: It strikes me that every three
18 weeks may be about right. I'm afraid every month
19 may not be often enough.

20 MR. BEMIS: Three weeks is fine with us.

21 MR. SCAROLA: May I have just one moment?

22 THE COURT: Sure.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Is it Your Honor's intent that 24 there will be no uniform motion calendars during 25 --

1 THE COURT: Well, that's something we can
2 talk about. We've had a number of hearings on
3 the uniform motion calendar that probably
4 shouldn't have been set there. In all honesty,
5 you guys are sophisticated enough attorneys, I
6 would be shocked if you had a motion that clearly
7 was probably not a UMC. It strikes me, you guys
8 will work it out. On the other hand, if there is
9 one, I certainly don't mind hearing it.

10 MR. SCAROLA: I only asked that question
11 because it'll make a difference in terms of what
12 we think appropriate frequency to be.

13 THE COURT: Sure. We're talking about
14 frequency and length of the hearing, whether we
15 think it should be an hour, an hour and a half or
16 two hours, and that depends on how frequently
17 we're going to do it.

18 MR. BEMIS: Your Honor, my proposal is three
19 weeks, two hours. We'll know in advance. I love
20 your suggestion, so that's fine with us.

21 THE COURT: Why don't we just cross out all
22 our time for this case.

23 MR. BEMIS: Actually, Your Honor, your
24 suggestion yesterday is really, in my experience

25 here, it is really the most expeditious way, and

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 the state courts, big cases, just carve it out --

2 THE COURT: I agree with that. Two hours
3 every three weeks is fairly aggressive, but if
4 that's what it needs. I don't want to put all
5 the things in place to have a specially set trial
6 and discover that we didn't have to, a sufficient
7 hearing would have been fine.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Our past experience, our track
9 record thus far is, that we would not consume two
10 hours of Your Honor's time every three weeks. I
11 would also anticipate, however, that as discovery
12 heats up in this case, that we might consume that
13 much time. My suggestion would be that we might
14 want to start out at an hour and then increase
15 the time as we get farther on down the road,
16 because we'll probably need additional time
17 later.

18 MR. BEMIS: That's fine with me, Your Honor.

19 MR. SCAROLA: And we can let you know at one
20 of those one-hour hearings the point in time in 21 which we anticipate we're going to now need two
22 hours.

23 THE COURT: Frankly, by that time it's too
24 late to give you the two hours. I'm going to set
25 the time up right now.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 MR. SCAROLA: Well then that's great. Then
2 we'll take the two hours now.

3 THE COURT: So first of all, we want mid
4 March. Is that what we're talking about first?

5 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

6 THE COURT: I can give you an hour at
7 three-thirty on March 19th. I don't have
8 anything in the morning. Do you want that one?

9 MR. BEMIS: Three-thirty is fine with us.

10 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine.

11 THE COURT: 3/19/04, three-thirty, one
12 hour.

13 The next one is going to be early April. I
14 can do four o'clock on April 16th.

15 MR. BEMIS: April 16th, 4 p.m.

16 THE COURT: Then we got May.

17 We could do it May 7th. Would you prefer
18 morning or afternoon, if given a choice?

19 MR. BEMIS: Frankly, we'd prefer the
20 mornings, so we can come in the night before.

21 THE COURT: I could do eight o'clock on May

22 7th?

23 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

24 THE COURT: All right. And after that we'll

25 start the two-hour ones. So we're looking the

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

45

1 beginning of June. That's May 28th. We prefer

2 8 a.m. again?

3 MR. BEMIS: That's fine, Your Honor. What

4 day of the week is May 28th?

5 THE COURT: These are all Fridays, because

6 those are all the special set.

7 MR. BEMIS: May 28th, is that the Friday

8 before Memorial Day?

9 THE COURT: It is the Friday before Memorial

10 Day.

11 MR. BEMIS: Either come up or go back from

12 the 28th, because Memorial Day is very difficult

13 to get in and out.

14 THE COURT: June 4th, 8 a.m., still two

15 hours.

16 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

17 THE COURT: You probably don't want July

18 2nd?

19 MR. BEMIS: July 2nd is okay. That will be

20 okay with us.

21 THE COURT: You sure?

22 MR. BEMIS: Yes.

23 THE COURT: That's a little more than --

24 that's four weeks instead of three.

25 MR. BEMIS: I think by summer we're going to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 be so deep in depositions that --

2 THE COURT: 8 a.m., two hours.

3 Late July. July 23rd?

4 MR. BEMIS: Fine.

5 THE COURT: That would be 9 a.m.

6 We're in mid August.

7 MR. IANNO: Your Honor, July 23rd was 9

8 a.m.?

9 THE COURT: Yes.

10 Do you want August 13th or August 20th?

11 MR. SCAROLA: 13th, please.

12 MR. BEMIS: 13th is fine.

13 THE COURT: August 13th, '04, 8 a.m.

14 Early September. September 3rd. That would

15 be one-thirty for two hours.

16 MR. BEMIS: Where is that in relation to

17 Labor Day?

18 THE COURT: You want to avoid that?

19 MR. BEMIS: It's so hard to travel on those
20 holidays.

21 THE COURT: I know. I generally go away for
22 a long weekend right after that.

23 MR. SCAROLA: Last week in August.

24 THE COURT: We already have August 13th.

25 MR. BEMIS: If we could just move it to

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

47

1 another week in September if you have it, because
2 that's a vacation period for a lot of people and
3 a holiday weekend.

4 THE COURT: But then we're up to September
5 --

6 MR. SCAROLA: 10th.

7 THE COURT: No. That's the weekend I
8 usually go away. September 17th or go back in
9 late August.

10 MR. BEMIS: The 17th is fine with us.

11 THE COURT: Isn't the 16th Rosh Hashanah.

12 MR. SOLOVY: Yes it is, and the 17th. So
13 why don't we go the end of August, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: That's fine. We can go back to

15 August 27th.

16 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

17 THE COURT: And that we can do 8 a.m.

18 again.

19 And then we're in late September.

20 September 25 -- oh, Yom Kipper.

21 MR. SOLOVY: And that's a Saturday anyway,

22 Your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Oh, that's right. Could you do

24 the 24th? You can't do it first thing in the

25 morning?

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

48

1 MR. SOLOVY: No, that will be too hard for
2 me. The only way, if we could intrude upon your
3 Thursday the 23rd, that would work. Anything
4 earlier that week.

5 THE COURT: I could do it the afternoon of
6 the 23rd. I couldn't do it the morning.

7 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

8 MR. SOLOVY: That would work.

9 THE COURT: 3 p.m.

10 October 15th.

11 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

12 THE COURT: 8 a.m.

13 November 5th, 8 a.m.

14 And then I think our last one would be early

15 December. December 3rd.

16 MR. BEMIS: That's fine.

17 MR. SOLOVY: Fine.

18 THE COURT: 8 a.m. Okay. We'll get all
19 those done.

20 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

21 Your Honor, we do have by agreement one
22 discovery dispute set on the uniform motion
23 calendar for next Thursday I believe, which we
24 would want to be able to --

25 THE COURT: We'll do it then.

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

49

1 MR. BEMIS: I think there are actually two
2 set, one on each side.

3 Our suggestion is, let's move them over to
4 the first conference.

5 MR. SCAROLA: We do not want to delay ours.

6 THE COURT: Let me see next week's
7 calendar.

8 Tell you what, I think I could do it
9 nine-thirty on Thursday. Do you want to do that,
10 and then I could give you more time?

11 MR. SCAROLA: I am in trial in front of
12 Judge Miller and we generally begin at
13 nine-thirty.

14 MR. BEMIS: Could I have one second, Your
15 Honor?

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 I don't mind if you come and we try to do
18 them. I really haven't looked at them so I don't
19 know what they are.

20 MR. BEMIS: First of all, I can't come next
21 week, but I can come on the 19th on this one.
22 It's my anniversary and I'm going to be on
23 vacation.

24 THE COURT: March 19th?

25 MR. BEMIS: I can't be here, but I'm going

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

50

1 to have somebody here. We'll have it covered by
2 one of the firms. That's an impossible -- it's
3 my 35th wedding anniversary.

4 THE COURT: I understand. That's fine.

5 MR. BEMIS: With regard to Mr. Scarola's
6 motion, I have been looking at this -- I haven't
7 had as much time in the case unfortunately -- I
8 am going to make a concerted effort to see if I

9 can resolve that motion.

10 THE COURT: The one that's set next
11 Thursday?

12 MR. BEMIS: The one he wants to hear on the 13 19th.

14 THE COURT: When you said the 19th, you
15 confused me.

16 MR. BEMIS: I misspoke. The 26th.

17 I thought I could clearly have it resolved
18 by then. I'm almost certain I cannot resolve it
19 by next Thursday with the client to deal with 20 what he wants and to see what we can do. That
21 is why I would like to see it moved. I represent
22 to the Court we already started the process of
23 trying to get through the issues clearly with the
24 client to see if we can get it resolved in a
25 fashion that's acceptable or better than what we

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

51

1 are currently doing with them so you don't have
2 to intervene.

3 THE COURT: So are you telling me you don't
4 think you can resolve it with the client by next
5 Thursday --

6 MR. BEMIS: Yes, I cannot.

16div-004706

7 THE COURT: -- but we recognize Mr. Scarola
8 doesn't want to wait until March 19th to have it
9 heard.

10 MR. BEMIS: Even if you give us just a
11 couple more -- rather than one week, give us two
12 weeks, even if it has to be on the uniform
13 calendar.

14 THE COURT: I could do it Wednesday, March
15 3rd at eight-thirty.

16 MR. BEMIS: That would be much better for
17 us. We might resolve it by then.

18 MR. SCAROLA: That's fine, Your Honor.
19 We're willing to make that concession. This is
20 an outstanding discovery --

21 THE COURT: Was this noticed for next
22 Thursday?

23 MR. SCAROLA: Actually, it was noticed for
24 earlier. They requested that we push it back.
25 We've pushed it back. And we will agree to push

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

52

1 it back again, but this is a discovery matter
2 that has been pending for a long time.

3 THE COURT: So it's already noticed for
4 Thursday?

16div-004707

5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Resetting the hearing -- and
7 Thursday is, what, the 26th -- 2/26/04 at eight
8 forty-five to 3/3/04 at eight-thirty.

9 MR. SCAROLA: Is Your Honor planning on
10 sending out a notice with respect to that
11 hearing?

12 THE COURT: Yes. We'll just include it in
13 this.

14 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, clarification:
15 There are two motions that are pending. There is 16 one filed by the Plaintiff and one filed by the
17 Defendant.

18 THE COURT: That's why I wanted to make sure
19 there was a notice of hearing, so my order
20 wouldn't be referencing something else.

21 MR. SCAROLA: That works. Thank you, Your
22 Honor.

23 Your Honor, one additional matter that I
24 think we need to address in light of the comments
25 about an amendment of the pleadings to add a

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 party. Obviously, if that were to occur, then
2 this matter would not be at issue at that time.

3 And certainly if such an amendment is going to
4 take place or if there's going to be an attempt
5 made to amend, because we fully anticipate
6 resisting such an amendment, that's something
7 that should be done within the very immediate
8 future.

9 THE COURT: Well, I would hope when you guys
10 talk about time frames, you come up with a time
11 frame for filing any motion to amend.

12 MR. BEMIS: We did. April 16th is the day
13 we suggested.

14 Our problem is, we're conflicted out and we
15 need to find counsel and get them -- this is a
16 massive case to get them into quickly and there's
17 limits as to what I can do as counsel for Morgan
18 Stanley with a conflict. They're going to have
19 to get in -- but they will only be joining on the
20 Morgan Stanley Senior Funding side and they will
21 be asserting one claim. There are going to be
22 multiple claims, but they will only be against
23 Arthur Anderson. They will in large measure, I
24 believe, mirror Coleman's claims against Arthur
25 Anderson, claiming that, hey, just like Coleman

PINNACLE REPORTING, INC.
(561) 820-9066

1 claims they got defrauded or they were
2 misrepresented too, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding
3 was misrepresented too when it lent $680 million
4 in this transaction and lost it.

5 MR. SOLOVY: Judge, the reason for the push
6 is -- we also think there's a lot of skulduggery
7 involved in this motion. And being a little old
8 and inept, when he didn't want to keep one
9 number, that sort of baffled me for a moment,
10 until I heard the terms of Arthur Anderson being
11 brought in. It isn't that Kirkland & Ellis, this
12 little small, thousand-person firm is undermanned
13 and this came as a lightning bolt to them. So
14 we think that this is improper adding of a party
15 too late, for many reasons, and we're not wanting
16 them to tarry anymore.

17 THE COURT: All I can say is, we're arguing
18 about something that's not in front of me now.
19 And I can tell you I have a habit of tuning it
20 out because it's things I don't need to know.
21 If the motion's made, we'll consider it on the
22 merits then. And I'm sure you guys are going to
23 argue we're too far down the road to allow him
24 in.

25 MR. SOLOVY: I just wanted to give this

1 Court a note ahead of time, Your Honor, so by my
2 silence you didn't think I was thinking this was
3 a happy development.

4 MR. SCAROLA: I would only mention, in the
5 context of what is relevant to the issues before
6 Your Honor, that there is a distinction between a
7 motion to amend to add a new party and the motion
8 to amend with regard to the punitive damage
9 claim, which we likely would not be prepared to
10 make by an April date.

11 MR. BEMIS: We don't have any objection to 12 that. We have the same issue. We'll work that 13 out.

14 THE COURT: Let's assume, and I'm acutely
15 aware when attorneys attempt to give me
16 information that I don't need until the issue's
17 in front of me, and I have to assume they're 18 doing it for other things that may not be
19 appropriate.

20 MR. BEMIS: Understood.

21 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

22 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your
23 Honor.

24 (At 4:29 p.m., the deposition was 25 concluded.)

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS RELATING TO EMPLOYEE PERFORMANCE

THIS CAUSE came before the Court February 19, 2004 on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Production of Documents Relating To Employee Performance, and the Court having reviewed the pleadings on file, heard argument of counsel and otherwise being fully advised in the premises, it is hereby

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. The Motion is Granted In Part, and Denied, In Part.
2. Defendant shall produce, within thirty (30) days of this Order, copies of documents responsive to Plaintiff's May 9, 2003 Request to Produce number 44 for the Morgan Stanley employees who worked on the 1997-98 Sunbeam-related engagements. Specifically, Morgan Stanley shall produce, for those employees and for the time period from 1992 through and including 1998:

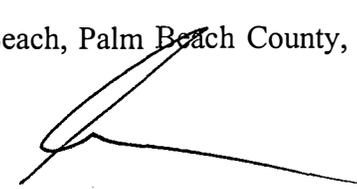

- (a) All references (positive or negative) to work performed by the employee on Sunbeam-related engagements and/or to the general quality of work performed in 1997 and/or 1998.
- (b) All references (positive or negative) to the employee's performance in fee generation.
- (c) All references (positive or negative) to the employee's performance of due diligence activities, regardless of whether designated specifically as such.
- (d) All references (positive or negative) to the employee's truthfulness, veracity, or moral turpitude.

Privileged information only may be redacted.

3. Defendant shall produce, within thirty (30) days of this Order, additional documents (if any) responsive to Plaintiff's May 9, 2003 Request to Produce numbers 45 and 46.

4. This ruling is without prejudice to Plaintiff's ability to request additional employee performance-related discovery based upon the content of the production requested pursuant to this Order.

DONE AND ORDERED in West Palm Beach, Palm Beach County, Florida this 3 day of March, 2004.

1 The Hearing before the HON. ELIZABETH T.
2 MAASS was taken before me, PATTY McCOY, Shorthand
3 Reporter, Notary Public, State of Florida at
4 Large, at the Palm Beach County Courthouse, 205
5 North Dixie Highway, Courtroom 11A, West Palm
6 Beach, Florida, beginning at the hour of 8:32
7 a.m., on Wednesday, March 3, 2004, pursuant to
8 the Notice filed herein, in the above-entitled
9 cause pending before the above-named Court.

10 P R O C E E D I N G S

11 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a
12 seat.

13 MR. IANNO: Good morning, Your Honor.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your
15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: And this is Coleman and
17 Morgan Stanley. It's defendant's motion to 18 compel. What did you want to say in support
19 of it?

20 MR. IANNO: Actually, Your Honor, we
21 had called your office yesterday. The
22 parties are continuing to negotiate the
23 motions to compel and it asked that we move
24 them over to the next scheduled case
25 management conference.

00004

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: So we're only here today,
3 I believe, in agreement on a motion for an
4 entry of an order from last week's 8:45.

5 THE COURT: Oh, I apologize. What
6 order and what did we neglect to do?

7 MR. IANNO: This is on the performance
8 of evaluation --

9 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor didn't
10 neglect to do anything. It's our neglect,
11 not yours.

16div-004732

12 THE COURT: Well, I doubt that but go
13 ahead.

14 MR. IANNO: This is the disagreement
15 we have, it's Mr. Scarola's motion for entry
16 of an order related to the February 19th
17 8:45. It's his motion.

18 THE COURT: Yeah, okay. Shoot. I
19 know what day it was. I mean how could you
20 not be doing the motion to compel?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, this is the
22 order that was initially drafted with
23 respect to the hearing that was held before
24 Your Honor I guess a week and a half ago
25 now.

00005

1 THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

2 MR. SCAROLA: The only point in
3 contention is with regard to sub-paragraph
4 "C" in that order.

5 THE COURT: I just want to back up a
6 minute. I did not generate an order on
7 this?

8 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. You
9 left it to us to draft and we thought we had
10 an agreement, and we have what I think is a
11 minor disagreement in terms of how this
12 needs to be worded.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: You may recall that
15 there was a dispute with regard to the scope
16 of the production of documents relating to
17 the critique of Morgan Stanley employees.

18 Your Honor announced a ruling from the
19 bench in that regard and I believe that the
20 order that you have before Your Honor, we
21 share the belief that that order accurately
22 reflects what the Court's intent was with
23 only a single dispute relating to sub
24 paragraph "C" requiring the production of
25 documents which reflect performance positive

00006

1 or negative of due diligence activities.

2 THE COURT: Excuse me one second.
3 I apologize.

4 Pete, could you just give this to
5 Nancy and make sure we didn't do an order on
6 it?

7 I apologize. I mean it's just
8 sticking in my head so much. I just want to
9 make sure we didn't do an order that

10 THE BAILIFF: You don't know if we did
11 an order?

12 THE COURT: That is a proposed order.
13 I need to know whether we did our own from

16div-004733

14 the hearing that day.

15 I apologize.

16 MR. IANNO: I have the transcript,
17 Your Honor, and you left it to us to go
18 right out and that's what we, I thought we
19 had done in the back of the courtroom.

20 THE COURT: Okay, I'm sure you're
21 right. I just want to clear up that so I
22 don't -- go ahead. Continue your argument.
23 We're talking about "C."

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, we're talking about
25 "C." "C" would require the production of 00007

1 positive or negative comments with regard to
2 the performance of due diligence activities.

3 The concern that I have is that Morgan
4 Stanley may decline to produce comments
5 relating to the performance of due diligence
6 activities unless the comment is
7 specifically designated as relating to due
8 diligence activities. That is the criteria
9 that they may apply in complying with that
10 proposed order as drafted is if it doesn't
11 say due diligence, it doesn't get produced.

12 THE COURT: So you're saying if it was
13 done -- okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: What I would like the
15 order to say, and this is the only point of 16 disagreement, is that the language should
17 include, "which is related or may reasonably
18 be related to the performance of due
19 diligence responsibilities regardless of
20 whether specifically designated as such."

21 So if the comment is a general comment
22 that may encompass due diligence activities,
23 which are obviously the focus of our
24 concerns, although not specifically
25 designated due diligence, it ought to be

00008

1 produced.

2 THE COURT: But are you suggesting if
3 there's comment that just says, you know,
4 John Doe does a good job and one of this job
5 duties is due diligence, you want that
6 produced?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. Or if it says John
8 Doe during this period of time did a bad
9 job, you know, it's just a general criticism
10 saying he neglected his duties and one of
11 his duties was due diligence, then that is a
12 comment that may reflect upon his
13 performance of due diligence and ought to be
14 provided to us even though it doesn't
15 specifically say due diligence.

16div-004734

16 THE COURT: What's your client's
17 position?

18 MR. IANNO: Well, first of all, Your
19 Honor, we're renegotiating the Court's
20 ruling and that's my first problem with
21 this. If I may, I can give the Court a copy
22 of the transcript in our opposition that was
23 filed.

24 THE COURT: Sure. And is there a
25 written motion we're here on today, just so
00009

1 I'm clear?

2 MR. IANNO: Motion for entry of order.

3 THE COURT: Okay, but there is a
4 motion called that?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. This
6 is a copy of the motion, Your Honor. I
7 don't know that it's going to be of any help
8 to you but that's what it says.

9 THE COURT: Thank You.

10 MR. IANNO: When we went over this,
11 Your Honor, and as the Court will see this
12 very position that Mr. Scarola is raising
13 just opens everything up and all the
14 limitations the Court placed on this
15 discovery are now out the window because if
16 this employee has very bad telephone
17 manners, all of a sudden maybe that's
18 related to due diligence activities. He's
19 talking to somebody of due diligence, he's
20 rude to them. That could be reasonably
21 related.

22 The way we had worded this, and the
23 Court said on page 13 paragraph 4, what we
24 need to do is limit this to the three
25 categories that were listed in our 00010

1 opposition on page 2, I believe, of the
2 opposition.

3 The order that we went back and wrote
4 up in the courtroom was exactly
5 word-for-word those three categories with
6 the addition of what Mr. Scarola wanted were
7 any criticisms of moral turpitude,
8 dishonesty and the like, which became the
9 fourth subcategory.

10 The next day Mr. Scarola comes, when
11 we have the case management conference on
12 February 20th, and adds language to the 13 first category that says, "and any
14 references to the employee's performance."

15 And that can encompass virtually
16 everything an employee does; they're a bad
17 dresser, whatever. And that's the argument

18 we made at the hearing in the transcript, if
19 it's related to their due diligence
20 activity, that's covered by "C."

21 But what Mr. Scarola wants if this
22 employee has just said, You're just not
23 doing a very good job because you're not
24 here timely, it opens up the whole
25 employee's personnel file, and we're talking

00011

1 50, 60 employees here.

2 And that's why the Court had entered
3 an order, as it said on Page 13, is these
4 three categories plus the addition of this
5 extra category, and that's what the order
6 accurately reflects.

7 We shouldn't be able to go back and
8 renegotiate additional things. And the
9 order as drafted, it says, without prejudice
10 for Mr. Scarola to come back.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor?

12 THE COURT: What's the response?

13 MR. SCAROLA: If the criticism says
14 that he has bad telephone manners or he
15 dresses sloppily, that is not related nor
16 reasonably related to the performance of his
17 due diligence responsibilities.

18 I just want to make it clear that even
19 if this is a general comment without
20 limitation saying you're doing a bad job
21 answering the telephone, if it's a general
22 comment you're doing a bad job, even though
23 it doesn't specifically say "in the
24 performance of your due diligence
25 activities," that may reasonably be

00012

1 interpreted as encompassing due diligence
2 activities and we ought to be able to get
3 that.

4 So the language I'm proposing simply
5 says that. It says, "which is related or
6 reasonably may be related to the performance
7 of due diligence responsibilities regardless
8 of whether specifically designated as such."

9 If it is specifically designated, and
10 it's not due diligence, you don't need to
11 give it to me; but if reasonably it could be 12 interpreted as relating to due diligence, we
13 ought to get it.

14 THE COURT: I'm sorry, what was the
15 second argue -- regarding -- oh, regardless
16 of designation?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, regardless of
18 whether it's specifically designated as
19 such. You'll excuse my --

16div-004736

20 THE COURT: That's okay.
21 MR. SCAROLA: So it is, "which is
22 related or reasonably may be related to the
23 performance of due diligence
24 responsibilities regardless of whether
25 specifically designated as such."

00013

1 THE COURT: I mean the part I would, I
2 mean the first part quite frankly I think is
3 implicit in there. The second part I am
4 willing to add the language "regardless of
5 whether it's specifically designated as due
6 diligence performance." I mean that.

7 MR. IANNO: Right.

8 THE COURT: They're not using magic
9 words. You guys still know you have to
10 produce it.

11 MR. IANNO: Exactly, Your Honor. I
12 thought the way it was worded with "due
13 diligence activities" sufficiently
14 encompassed Mr. Scarola's concerns.

15 THE COURT: I think you're probably
16 right. I don't know whether this is adding
17 anything but just so there's no
18 misunderstanding, it doesn't matter if they
19 call it due diligence, if it is due
20 diligence, it gets produced.

21 And it's the 3rd of March.

22 Either side have envelopes?

23 MR. SCAROLA: I think they're attached
24 to the package that I gave Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: I probably lost them.

00014

1 Hold on.

2 MR. IANNO: If not I have a set.

3 THE COURT: I don't want to

4 MR. IANNO: I have a set, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Well, you don't need --
6 oh, we do have one. Okay. Thank you very
7 much.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Bye-bye.

11

12 (Thereupon, at 8:45 a.m. the hearing
13 was concluded.)

1 The Hearing before the HON. ELIZABETH T.
2 MAASS was taken before me, PATTY McCOY, Shorthand
3 Reporter, Notary Public, State of Florida at
4 Large, at the Palm Beach County Courthouse, 205
5 North Dixie Highway, Courtroom 11A, West Palm
6 Beach, Florida, beginning at the hour of 8:32
7 a.m., on Wednesday, March 3, 2004, pursuant to
8 the Notice filed herein, in the above-entitled
9 cause pending before the above-named Court.

10 P R O C E E D I N G S

11 THE COURT: Good morning. Have a
12 seat.

13 MR. IANNO: Good morning, Your Honor.

14 MR. SCAROLA: Good morning, Your
15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: And this is Coleman and
17 Morgan Stanley. It's defendant's motion to
18 compel. What did you want to say in support
19 of it?

20 MR. IANNO: Actually, Your Honor, we
21 had called your office yesterday. The
22 parties are continuing to negotiate the
23 motions to compel and it asked that we move
24 them over to the next scheduled case
25 management conference.

00004

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MR. IANNO: So we're only here today,
3 I believe, in agreement on a motion for an
4 entry of an order from last week's 8:45.

5 THE COURT: Oh, I apologize. What
6 order and what did we neglect to do?

7 MR. IANNO: This is on the performance
8 of evaluation --

9 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor didn't
10 neglect to do anything. It's our neglect,
11 not yours.

12 THE COURT: Well, I doubt that but go
13 ahead.

14 MR. IANNO: This is the disagreement
15 we have, it's Mr. Scarola's motion for entry
16 of an order related to the February 19th
17 8:45. It's his motion.

18 THE COURT: Yeah, okay. Shoot. I
19 know what day it was. I mean how could you
20 not be doing the motion to compel?

21 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, this is the
22 order that was initially drafted with
23 respect to the hearing that was held before
24 Your Honor I guess a week and a half ago
25 now.

00005

1 THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

2 MR. SCAROLA: The only point in
3 contention is with regard to sub-paragraph
4 "C" in that order.

5 THE COURT: I just want to back up a
6 minute. I did not generate an order on
7 this?

8 MR. SCAROLA: No, Your Honor. You
9 left it to us to draft and we thought we had
10 an agreement, and we have what I think is a
11 minor disagreement in terms of how this
12 needs to be worded.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: You may recall that
15 there was a dispute with regard to the scope
16 of the production of documents relating to
17 the critique of Morgan Stanley employees.

18 Your Honor announced a ruling from the
19 bench in that regard and I believe that the
20 order that you have before Your Honor, we
21 share the belief that that order accurately
22 reflects what the Court's intent was with
23 only a single dispute relating to sub
24 paragraph "C" requiring the production of
25 documents which reflect performance positive

00006

1 or negative of due diligence activities.

2 THE COURT: Excuse me one second.
3 I apologize.

4 Pete, could you just give this to
5 Nancy and make sure we didn't do an order on
6 it?

7 I apologize. I mean it's just
8 sticking in my head so much. I just want to
9 make sure we didn't do an order that

10 THE BAILIFF: You don't know if we did
11 an order?

12 THE COURT: That is a proposed order.
13 I need to know whether we did our own from

14 the hearing that day.

15 I apologize.

16 MR. IANNO: I have the transcript,
17 Your Honor, and you left it to us to go
18 right out and that's what we, I thought we
19 had done in the back of the courtroom.

20 THE COURT: Okay, I'm sure you're
21 right. I just want to clear up that so I
22 don't -- go ahead. Continue your argument.
23 We're talking about "C."

24 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, we're talking about
25 "C." "C" would require the production of 00007

1 positive or negative comments with regard to
2 the performance of due diligence activities.

3 The concern that I have is that Morgan
4 Stanley may decline to produce comments
5 relating to the performance of due diligence
6 activities unless the comment is
7 specifically designated as relating to due
8 diligence activities. That is the criteria
9 that they may apply in complying with that
10 proposed order as drafted is if it doesn't
11 say due diligence, it doesn't get produced.

12 THE COURT: So you're saying if it was
13 done -- okay.

14 MR. SCAROLA: What I would like the
15 order to say, and this is the only point of
16 disagreement, is that the language should
17 include, "which is related or may reasonably
18 be related to the performance of due
19 diligence responsibilities regardless of
20 whether specifically designated as such."

21 So if the comment is a general comment
22 that may encompass due diligence activities,
23 which are obviously the focus of our
24 concerns, although not specifically
25 designated due diligence, it ought to be

00008

1 produced.

2 THE COURT: But are you suggesting if
3 there's comment that just says, you know,
4 John Doe does a good job and one of this job
5 duties is due diligence, you want that
6 produced?

7 MR. SCAROLA: Yes. Or if it says John
8 Doe during this period of time did a bad
9 job, you know, it's just a general criticism
10 saying he neglected his duties and one of
11 his duties was due diligence, then that is a
12 comment that may reflect upon his
13 performance of due diligence and ought to be
14 provided to us even though it doesn't
15 specifically say due diligence.

16 THE COURT: What's your client's
17 position?

18 MR. IANNO: Well, first of all, Your
19 Honor, we're renegotiating the Court's
20 ruling and that's my first problem with
21 this. If I may, I can give the Court a copy
22 of the transcript in our opposition that was
23 filed.

24 THE COURT: Sure. And is there a
25 written motion we're here on today, just so
00009

1 I'm clear?

2 MR. IANNO: Motion for entry of order.

3 THE COURT: Okay, but there is a
4 motion called that?

5 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, Your Honor. This
6 is a copy of the motion, Your Honor. I
7 don't know that it's going to be of any help
8 to you but that's what it says.

9 THE COURT: Thank You.

10 MR. IANNO: When we went over this,
11 Your Honor, and as the Court will see this
12 very position that Mr. Scarola is raising
13 just opens everything up and all the
14 limitations the Court placed on this
15 discovery are now out the window because if
16 this employee has very bad telephone
17 manners, all of a sudden maybe that's
18 related to due diligence activities. He's
19 talking to somebody of due diligence, he's
20 rude to them. That could be reasonably
21 related.

22 The way we had worded this, and the
23 Court said on page 13 paragraph 4, what we
24 need to do is limit this to the three
25 categories that were listed in our 00010

1 opposition on page 2, I believe, of the
2 opposition.

3 The order that we went back and wrote
4 up in the courtroom was exactly
5 word-for-word those three categories with
6 the addition of what Mr. Scarola wanted were
7 any criticisms of moral turpitude,
8 dishonesty and the like, which became the
9 fourth subcategory.

10 The next day Mr. Scarola comes, when
11 we have the case management conference on
12 February 20th, and adds language to the
13 first category that says, "and any
14 references to the employee's performance."

15 And that can encompass virtually
16 everything an employee does; they're a bad
17 dresser, whatever. And that's the argument

18 we made at the hearing in the transcript, if
19 it's related to their due diligence
20 activity, that's covered by "C."

21 But what Mr. Scarola wants if this
22 employee has just said, You're just not
23 doing a very good job because you're not
24 here timely, it opens up the whole
25 employee's personnel file, and we're talking

00011

1 50, 60 employees here.

2 And that's why the Court had entered
3 an order, as it said on Page 13, is these
4 three categories plus the addition of this
5 extra category, and that's what the order
6 accurately reflects.

7 We shouldn't be able to go back and
8 renegotiate additional things. And the
9 order as drafted, it says, without prejudice
10 for Mr. Scarola to come back.

11 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor?

12 THE COURT: What's the response?

13 MR. SCAROLA: If the criticism says
14 that he has bad telephone manners or he
15 dresses sloppily, that is not related nor
16 reasonably related to the performance of his
17 due diligence responsibilities.

18 I just want to make it clear that even
19 if this is a general comment without
20 limitation saying you're doing a bad job
21 answering the telephone, if it's a general
22 comment you're doing a bad job, even though
23 it doesn't specifically say "in the
24 performance of your due diligence
25 activities," that may reasonably be

00012

1 interpreted as encompassing due diligence
2 activities and we ought to be able to get
3 that.

4 So the language I'm proposing simply
5 says that. It says, "which is related or
6 reasonably may be related to the performance
7 of due diligence responsibilities regardless
8 of whether specifically designated as such."

9 If it is specifically designated, and
10 it's not due diligence, you don't need to
11 give it to me; but if reasonably it could be 12 interpreted as relating to due diligence, we
13 ought to get it.

14 THE COURT: I'm sorry, what was the
15 second argue -- regarding -- oh, regardless
16 of designation?

17 MR. SCAROLA: Yes, regardless of
18 whether it's specifically designated as
19 such. You'll excuse my --

20 THE COURT: That's okay.

21 MR. SCAROLA: So it is, "which is
22 related or reasonably may be related to the
23 performance of due diligence
24 responsibilities regardless of whether
25 specifically designated as such."

00013

1 THE COURT: I mean the part I would, I
2 mean the first part quite frankly I think is
3 implicit in there. The second part I am
4 willing to add the language "regardless of
5 whether it's specifically designated as due
6 diligence performance." I mean that.

7 MR. IANNO: Right.

8 THE COURT: They're not using magic
9 words. You guys still know you have to
10 produce it.

11 MR. IANNO: Exactly, Your Honor. I
12 thought the way it was worded with "due
13 diligence activities" sufficiently
14 encompassed Mr. Scarola's concerns.

15 THE COURT: I think you're probably
16 right. I don't know whether this is adding
17 anything but just so there's no
18 misunderstanding, it doesn't matter if they
19 call it due diligence, if it is due
20 diligence, it gets produced.

21 And it's the 3rd of March.

22 Either side have envelopes?

23 MR. SCAROLA: I think they're attached
24 to the package that I gave Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: I probably lost them.

00014

1 Hold on.

2 MR. IANNO: If not I have a set.

3 THE COURT: I don't want to

4 MR. IANNO: I have a set, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Well, you don't need --
6 oh, we do have one. Okay. Thank you very
7 much.

8 MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 MR. IANNO: Thank you, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Bye-bye.

11

12 (Thereupon, at 8:45 a.m. the hearing
13 was concluded.)

DEFINITIONS

1. "Concerning" means concerning, reflecting, relating to, referring to, describing, evidencing, or constituting.

2. "Documents" shall be given the broad meaning provided in Rule 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure and refers to any form or means, whether physical, visual, or electronic, in or by which words, numbers, or ideas are recorded or preserved, whether fixed in tangible medium or electronically stored, including any and all drafts of any final document. The word "documents" shall include, by way of example and not by way of limitation, all of the following: papers, correspondence, trade letters, envelopes, memoranda, telegrams, cables, notes, messages, reports, studies, press releases, comparisons, books, accounts, checks, audio and video recordings and transcriptions thereof, pleadings, testimony, articles, bulletins, pamphlets, brochures, magazines, questionnaires, surveys, charts, newspapers, calendars, desk calendars, pocket calendars, lists, logs, publications, notices, diagrams, instructions, diaries, minutes for meetings, corporate minutes, orders, resolutions, agendas, memorials or notes of oral communications, whether by telephone or face-to-face, contracts, agreements, drafts of or proposed contracts or agreements, memoranda of understanding, letters of intent, computer tapes, computer drives or memories, computer diskettes or disks, e-mail, CD-ROMs, or any other tangible thing on which any handwriting, typing, printing, photostatic, electronic, or other form of communication or information is recorded or reproduced, together with all notations on any of the foregoing, all originals, file copies, or other unique copies of the foregoing, and all versions or drafts thereof, whether used or not.

3. "Morgan Stanley" means Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. and any of its predecessors, successors, affiliates, subsidiaries, and present and former officers, directors, partners, employees, representatives, and agents.

4. "MSSF" means Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. and any of its predecessors, successors, affiliates, subsidiaries, and present and former officers, directors, partners, employees, representatives, and agents.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order. Documents stored in an electronic format should be produced in a readable electronic format accessible by a standard database program such as concordance.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1997 through the date of this subpoena, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- A. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- B. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and
- C. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION FOR PERMISSION TO HAVE THIRD PARTY RETRIEVE MORGAN STANLEY E-MAIL AND OTHER RESPONSIVE DOCUMENTS

Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH") respectfully requests that this Court direct Defendant Morgan Stanley and Company, Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") to provide Kroll Ontrack, Inc. ("Kroll"), a third party computer specialist, access to its computer backup tapes (or other storage media) so that Kroll can retrieve e-mail and other responsive documents at Morgan Stanley's expense. In support of this motion, CPH states as follows:

1. As this Court is aware, Morgan Stanley has disclosed that it failed to retain the e-mail that its personnel generated prior to January 1, 2000 — despite having a legal obligation to do so. Based on the depositions taken to date, however, CPH has learned that it is possible that many of these e-mails and other responsive documents could be retrieved from Morgan Stanley's computer backup files. Morgan Stanley, however, has refused to attempt to retrieve those documents on the ground that the retrieval process would be burdensome.

2. To accommodate CPH's need for discovery, as well as Morgan Stanley's concerns over burden, CPH has proposed that a third party conduct the search for e-mail and other responsive documents in Morgan Stanley's backup files. CPH has proposed that the search be conducted by Kroll, an independent firm with the expertise to conduct such a search. Specifically, CPH has proposed the following procedure: (a) Kroll first would agree in writing to be bound by the terms of the protective order entered in this case; (b) Kroll then would conduct a search of Morgan Stanley's backup files for e-mail and other responsive documents at Morgan Stanley's expense; (c) the e-mails retrieved by Kroll would be delivered to Morgan Stanley for review; (d) Morgan Stanley then would review the retrieved e-mails for privilege and responsiveness to CPH's prior document requests; (e) Morgan Stanley would produce all responsive and nonprivileged documents to CPH; and (f) Morgan Stanley would provide a supplemental log of the retrieved documents withheld on privilege grounds.

3. CPH's proposal addresses Morgan Stanley's concerns over burden while it accommodates CPH's need to discover e-mails and other documents that are responsive to CPH's document requests. The proposal also is fair and equitable because CPH has agreed to make it reciprocal. As shown in CPH's response to Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of electronic documents in electronic form, CPH has proposed the same procedure for the materials sought by that motion: Kroll would be allowed access to CPH's files and would search them at CPH's expense for electronic documents in electronic form.

4. Despite the fairness of CPH's proposal and the obvious benefits of involving a third party -- having a reputable third party conduct the search would prevent the disputes that inevitably would erupt about thoroughness, timeliness, and costs if the parties were to conduct their own searches and bill the other side -- Morgan Stanley has rejected CPH's proposal for third-party participation. Instead, Morgan Stanley has responded that it would conduct limited searches for email from the files of five individuals -- conditioned upon CPH agreeing to a number of undertakings -- and would search in additional files only if CPH pays for the process. That is not sufficient. The initial search proposed by Morgan Stanley is far from adequate, given the involvement of dozens of Morgan Stanley employees in the underlying events. Moreover, having

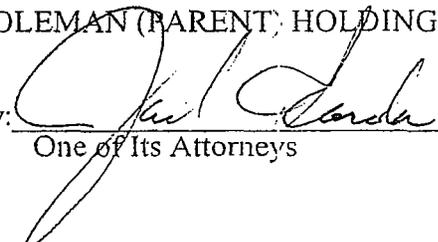

Morgan Stanley instead of a third party conduct the searches would lead to inevitable disputes that could be avoided easily if an independent computer professional were involved. Because CPH's reciprocal proposal constitutes a reasonable accommodation of CPH's need for discovery, and Morgan Stanley's concerns over undue burden, the proposal should be adopted by the Court.

For the foregoing reasons, CPH respectfully requests that this Court direct Morgan Stanley to provide Kroll Ontrack, Inc. access to Morgan Stanley's computer backup files in accordance with the terms discussed above, for the purpose of searching for e-mail and other documents generated prior to January 1, 2000 that are responsive to CPH's prior document requests.

Dear Judge Maass:

Enclosed please find the parties' proposed Modified Order Granting in Part and Denying in Part Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Production of Documents Relating to Employee Performance. The order Your Honor entered on March 3, 2004 was erroneously provided by Plaintiff in open court. Attorney Jack Scarola has reviewed the proposed order and has no objection to its form. For Your Honor's convenience, we have also enclosed a copy of the March 3, 2004 order. If the proposed order meets with Your Honor's approval, kindly execute same and provide conformed copies to counsel of record. For the convenience of Your Honor's judicial assistant, enclosed please find additional copies and self-addressed stamped envelopes.

Respectfully,

Joseph Ianno, Jr.

MOTION TO COMPEL CPH'S RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY & CO.'S
FOURTH SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Company Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, respectfully submits this Motion to Compel Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings ("CPH") provided an adequate response to Morgan Stanley's Fourth Set of Interrogatories. In support of its Motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. CPH has identified, in its response to a prior interrogatory, approximately thirty-five alleged "misrepresentations" that it intends to rely upon at trial. (See Sept. 2, 2003 CPH's Resp. to Morgan Stanley's First Set of Interrogs., Interrog. 3.) In its Fourth Set of Interrogatories, Morgan Stanley requested that, for each of the alleged misrepresentations it intends to rely on at trial, CPH state:

- the date and time CPH contends Morgan Stanley knew or learned that the alleged representation was false or misleading;

- the events, documents, or circumstances under which CPH contends Morgan Stanley obtained that knowledge; and
- the identity of the persons CPH contends provided or obtained that that knowledge.

(See Feb. 20, 2004 CPH's Resp. & Objs. to Morgan Stanley's 4th Set of Interrogs.)

2. CPH's response to the interrogatory is wholly inadequate. Out of the thirty-five "misrepresentations" CPH intends to rely on at trial, CPH has provided only partial information for only two. For the remaining thirty-three representations it previously identified, CPH either did not respond at all — or simply provided non-responsive conclusions and legal theories regurgitated from its Complaint. (See Id.)

3. Morgan Stanley is entitled to full discovery into how CPH intends to prove the "knowledge" element of its fraud claim. Morgan Stanley is entitled to know — for each of the misrepresentations that CPH intends to rely upon at trial — exactly when CPH contends that Morgan Stanley knew the misrepresentation to be false, and exactly how CPH contends that Morgan Stanley obtained that knowledge. In order to state a fraud claim against Morgan Stanley, CPH must allege and prove "(1) a false statement concerning a specific material fact; (2) the maker's knowledge that the representation is false; (3) an intention that the representation induces another's reliance; and (4) consequent injury by the other party acting in reliance on the representation." Cohen v. Kravit Estate Buyers, Inc., 843 So. 2d 989, 991 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (emphasis added; internal quotations & citation omitted); see also Fla. Std. Jury Instr. (Civ.) 8(a). CPH will bear the burden of proof on all of these elements at trial, and Morgan Stanley is entitled to discover what evidence CPH intends to present on each of these points.

4. CPH has informed Morgan Stanley of its belief that it is premature to require CPH to provide this information at this stage of the proceeding because the requested information relates to matter peculiarly within Morgan Stanley's knowledge and discovery is still underway.

In light of these objections, Morgan Stanley has asked CPH to commit to updating its response periodically during the court of discovery – but CPH has refused.

5. For these reasons, Morgan Stanley requests the Court to enter an order directing CPH to provide a complete response to Interrogatory No. 1 (Fourth Request) for each of the misrepresentations it intends to rely on at trial, and to update its response every thirty (30) days through the end of fact discovery. Alternatively, Morgan Stanley requests the Court enter an order precluding CPH from relying on any of the alleged misrepresentations as to which its response is deficient.

CASE NO. CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,
Defendant(s).

CASE NO. CA 03-5165 AI

MORGAN STANLEY SENIOR FUNDING, INC.,
Plaintiff(s),

vs.

MACANDREWS & FORBES HOLDINGS, INC.,
Defendant(s).

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
RESPONSE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO COMPEL
PURSUANT TO ALLEGED WRITTEN AGREEMENT

Morgan Stanley asks the Court to require CPH to search backup tapes from an old computer system for the purpose of locating electronic versions of documents that CPH already has produced to Morgan Stanley in paper form. Morgan Stanley contends that the electronic versions of those documents must be produced so that Morgan Stanley can inspect them for metadata. If it were simply a matter of performing a routine search to locate those documents in electronic form, CPH would have no objection to providing them to Morgan Stanley, even though Morgan Stanley already has all of the documents in paper form. But, as explained below, CPH would have to go to considerable burden and expense to do so. Nonetheless, CPH has offered to comply with Morgan Stanley's request, if that agreement is reciprocal. That is, CPH wants Morgan Stanley to confirm that it will conduct searches of its files for e-mail and other responsive documents that Morgan Stanley has claimed would be too burdensome.

Specifically, CPH has proposed that both CPH and Morgan Stanley retain a third-party computer specialist — Kroll Ontrack, Inc. (“Kroll”) — to search their respective backup tapes to locate the requested documents. Morgan Stanley has refused. Incredibly, Morgan Stanley insists that CPH should be required to go to the time and expense to search its backup tapes for electronic versions of documents that Morgan Stanley already has in paper form, but Morgan Stanley will not itself undertake the burden of searching its own backup tapes to locate e-mails and other responsive documents that have not been produced to CPH at all — not in paper or electronic form.

As shown below, CPH's proposal is fair to everyone and assures that the parties receive the information they believe necessary.

1. Contrary To Morgan Stanley's Assertions, CPH Should Not Be Required To Search Its Backup Tapes For Electronic Versions Of Documents Morgan Stanley Already Has In Paper Form.
 - A. To comply with Morgan Stanley's request, CPH would have to undertake a burdensome search of its backup tapes.

The burden involved. This discovery dispute arose after Morgan Stanley, having received about 320 pages of documents printed from backup tapes for CPH's computer system, demanded that CPH go back and reproduce those documents in electronic form. Although the number of documents seems rather modest, the task of finding the electronic versions for those documents would be burdensome and expensive. See Affidavit of Steven L. Fasman (Exhibit A hereto).

To understand the burden involved, it is important to understand the effort that CPH engaged in when it produced the documents in the first place. The documents were produced from backup tapes from an old computer system. It is difficult to conduct any meaningful document search of the backup tapes, because the system accepts only one-phrase searches and there is no ability to narrow them with additional or modifying terms. Thus, if the term “Coleman” is entered, the search will yield every document containing the word Coleman — including documents reflecting that someone's last name is “Coleman.” To locate the 320 pages of responsive documents from the backup tapes, Mr. Fasman instructed that certain word searches be performed and that the documents containing "hits" be hard-copied for his personal review. Because the search could not be refined, it produced massively overbroad responses.

To find the 320 pages of documents in electronic form would involve an even more arduous process. The only way to find each document is to select the most uncommon word in the document, search for that word, and review at a monitor attached to the server all of the documents containing that word. For example, if we are trying to find the electronic version of a letter, we would have to review each electronic document containing the word specified in the search. That process must be repeated for each document — one by one.

Morgan Stanley has rejected our attempts at compromise. In an effort to accommodate Morgan Stanley's discovery requests, and avoid the full extent of the burden just described, CPH has offered to search for electronic documents in electronic form if Morgan Stanley would identify the specific documents to be searched. In recent correspondence concerning this dispute, Morgan Stanley identified certain discrete categories of documents, including documents with unique codes, and CPH has undertaken to search for them in their electronic form. CPH has advised Morgan Stanley that it will endeavor to produce the electronic versions of those documents, to the extent they exist, as soon as the search is complete. But many of the documents at issue in this motion have no such unique codes or terms, and in order to find those documents, the search process just described is very time consuming. As to those documents, CPH has renewed its invitation that Morgan Stanley identify any further documents that it wants searched. Morgan Stanley, however, has rejected all of CPH's efforts to compromise this dispute.

B. CPH did not agree to produce electronic documents in electronic form.

Because of the burden just described, not surprisingly, CPH did not agree to produce all electronic documents in electronic form. Morgan Stanley bases its contention that CPH did so on an August 19, 2003 letter from CPH's counsel, but as that letter confirms, CPH made no blanket promise to produce electronic documents in electronic form. The section of the letter cited by Morgan Stanley states as follows (MS Mot. Exh. C, p. 2, bold face added):

3. Electronic documents.

The parties have produced and will produce to each other various documents that exist in electronic form. Before using any of these electronic documents in this litigation, other than for purposes that are purely internal to the parties, the parties agree that they will assign production numbers to the electronic document consisting of the number assigned to the electronic medium followed by the file name of the documents as found on the electronic medium.

According to Morgan Stanley, the bold-faced topic sentence memorializes CPH's agreement to produce electronic documents in electronic form, but that reading is indeed a stretch. The sentence is merely a statement of fact — electronic documents have been produced in electronic form and more will be in the future. The sentence is not a blanket promise concerning the production of electronic documents.

C. Morgan Stanley never acted as if there were such an agreement and has not produced all electronic documents in electronic form.

From the time the August 19, 2003 letter was sent until very recently, Morgan Stanley never behaved as if there were an agreement to produce electronic documents only in electronic form. Notably, Morgan Stanley has failed to produce all of its electronic documents in electronic form. From the face of some of the documents Morgan Stanley has produced, we know that they have an electronic source but nonetheless have been produced only in paper form. Examples include time records produced on February 18, 2004, more time records produced on September 5, 2003, and a document entitled "Client Revenue Detail by Job" that was attached to Morgan Stanley's October 6, 2003 response to CPH's first set of interrogatories. CPH has not challenged such productions because there was no agreement to produce electronic documents only in electronic form. Morgan Stanley cites (at 2) one instance in which CPH requested that Morgan Stanley produce electronic documents in electronic form. CPH made that request — on August 1, 2003, a month before the so-called agreement on which Morgan Stanley's motion is based — with respect to two boxes of documents. CPH made that request not out of some knee-jerk desire to have electronic documents in electronic form, but because many of the paper documents were illegible or had formatting problems. See MS Mot. Exh. B, p. 3.

Significantly, Morgan Stanley makes no such complaint here. The paper documents that CPH has produced are legible. Instead, Morgan Stanley insists on obtaining both paper and electronic versions in the hope of finding metadata. CPH is willing to undertake that burden, but only if Morgan Stanley agrees to search its backup tapes for documents that CPH has requested.

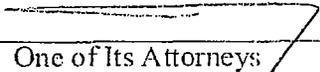

2. CPH's Compromise Proposal Should Be Adopted Because It Constitutes A Reasonable Accommodation Of Morgan Stanley's Discovery Needs And CPH's Legitimate Concerns About Undue Burden.

CPH, as observed above, has sought to resolve this discovery dispute by proposing that a third party computer specialist review CPH's backup tapes, at CPH's expense, and attempt to retrieve the electronic documents in electronic form that Morgan Stanley is demanding. Specifically, CPH has proposed that this task be undertaken by Kroll, an independent and highly reputable company that serves law firms and other companies nationwide. CPH's proposal is contingent upon a similar arrangement being adopted in connection with CPH's attempt to retrieve Morgan Stanley's pre-January 2000 e-mail and other responsive documents: Kroll should be allowed to attempt to retrieve those documents at Morgan Stanley's expense. This compromise accommodates both parties' discovery needs and concerns over burden. The concept of having a reputable third party conduct the search is desirable, because it would prevent the disputes that otherwise would arise concerning the thoroughness of the search, the timely completion of the search, and the cost associated with it, if the parties were left to search their own files. Despite the reasonableness of CPH's reciprocal proposal, however, Morgan Stanley has rejected it. That objection is unreasonable. If this Court is inclined to require CPH to reopen its files to look for electronic documents in electronic form, that process should be undertaken pursuant to the reciprocal proposal just described, with both parties' files to be searched by Kroll.

AFFIDAVIT OF STEVEN L. FASMAN

Steven L. Fasman, having been duly sworn under oath, hereby deposes and states as follows:

1. I am Senior Vice President-Law of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and have primary responsibility for responding to Morgan Stanley's discovery requests in the above captioned litigation. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein.

2. My understanding is that this discovery dispute arose after Morgan Stanley, having received about 320 pages of documents printed from backup tapes for CPH's computer system, demanded that CPH go back and reproduce those documents in electronic form. Below is a description of the effort involved in producing those documents, and in addition, the burden involved in finding the electronic versions for the documents.

Because the search could not be refined, it produced massively overbroad responses. In order to insure that all responsive documents were culled out of this massive collection of documents, I personally reviewed every printed page. This effort took dozens of hours spread over several weeks as my duties permitted.

VERIFIED MOTION TO ADMIT
JAMES M. WEBSTER III, PRO HAC VICE

Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated (MS & Co.) and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding (MSSF), pursuant to Fla. R. Jud. Adm. 2.061, request this Court to admit attorney James M. Webster III, pro hac vice, and in support of this Motion, state the following:

1. MS & Co. and MSSF request that this Court permit James M. Webster III an attorney with the law firm of Webster, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, whose address is 1615 M Street, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20036, to appear pro hac vice and participate fully in this action as additional counsel on behalf of MS & Co. and MSSF.

2. Mr. Webster is a member in good standing of the Bar of the District of Columbia, where he was admitted on April 1, 1996, and the Bar of the State of Maryland, where he was admitted on December 15, 1994. He is also admitted to practice in the U.S. District Courts for the District of Columbia and Maryland, and the U.S. Courts of Appeals for the District of Columbia and Fourth Circuits. Mr. Webster has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Webster has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Mr. Webster has not, in the past five years, sought pro hac vice admission in any other matter before this or any other Florida state court.

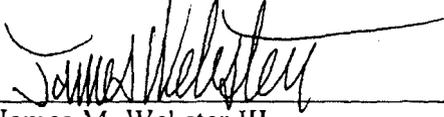

7. Mr. Webster will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes, Inc. have been consulted regarding this motion and object to this motion.

WHEREFORE, MS & Co. and MSSF respectfully request that this Court enter an order admitting James M. Webster III, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing MS & Co. and MSSF as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that he has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

Columbia, Massachusetts, Maryland, Illinois, the U.S. Courts of Appeals for the District of Columbia, First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh, and Federal Circuits, and the Maryland Court of Appeals. Mr. Hansen has not been disciplined in any jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Hansen has read all the applicable provisions of The Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating The Florida Bar.

4. This verified motion complies with the Rules of Judicial Administration.

5. The undersigned will remain associated with this matter at all stages as required by local rules.

6. Mr. Hansen has not, in the past five years, sought pro hac vice admission in any other matter before this or any other Florida state court.

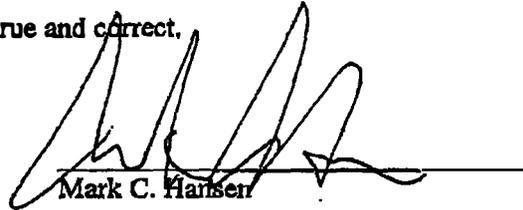

7. Mr. Hansen will be associated with Joseph Ianno, Jr. for purposes of this representation. Mr. Ianno is a member in good standing of the Florida Bar.

8. A proposed order granting this Motion is attached hereto.

9. Counsel for Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. and MacAndrews & Forbes, Inc. have been consulted regarding this motion and object to this motion.

WHEREFORE, MS & Co. and MSSF respectfully request that this Court enter an order admitting Mark C. Hansen, pro hac vice for the purpose of representing MS & Co. and MSSF as counsel in connection with this action pending before this Court together with such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

The undersigned verifies that he has knowledge of the facts stated herein, and that the statements in the foregoing motion are true and correct.

DECLARATION OF JAMES F. DOYLE, ESQ.

I, James F. Doyle, Esq., declare:

1. I submit this declaration in support of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. All facts set forth in this declaration are based upon my personal knowledge. If called as a witness, I could and would competently testify to all facts stated in this declaration.

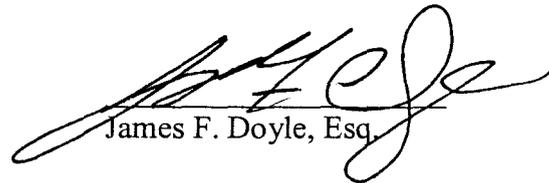

2. I am a Vice President & Counsel in Morgan Stanley's Law Division. I have day-to-day responsibility for the above-captioned actions.

3. Neither I nor anyone else from Morgan Stanley to my knowledge provided the Settlement Agreement between CPH and Arthur Andersen (or any other "Confidential" materials or information) to Wachovia Bank N.A., either before or after Morgan Stanley and Wachovia filed their lawsuits against Arthur Andersen. Neither I nor anyone else from Morgan

Stanley to my knowledge discussed the Settlement Agreement (or any other “Confidential” materials or information) with Wachovia, either before or after Morgan Stanley and Wachovia filed their lawsuits against Arthur Andersen.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF THOMAS A. CLARE, ESQ.

I, Thomas A. Clare, Esq., declare:

1. I submit this declaration in support of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to Coleman (Parent) Holding, Inc.'s ("CPH") Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. All facts set forth in this declaration are based upon my personal knowledge. If called as a witness, I could and would competently testify to all facts stated in this declaration.

2. I am a partner in the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis LLP. Kirkland & Ellis LLP is counsel to Morgan Stanley in the above-captioned matters. I have been an attorney at Kirkland & Ellis LLP since 1996.

3. On March 10, March 11, and March 12, 2004, I conducted a series of telephone conferences with attorneys at Jenner & Block, counsel for CPH, to discuss pretrial scheduling and discovery matters. In the course of those telephone conferences, I spoke with three different attorneys representing CPH. CPH's attorneys never informed me that CPH intended to file a Motion for a Rule To Show Cause on March 12, nor did they make any effort to discuss or resolve any of the issues raised in that Motion.

4. On March 12, 2004, during one of those telephone conferences, I specifically asked one of CPH's attorneys whether there were any motions that CPH intended to file for consideration at the March 19, 2004 case management conference other than the discovery motions we had already discussed. CPH's attorney stated that, while "other motions" were under consideration," he "did not want to talk about them." CPH filed its Motion for a Rule To Show Cause within hours of that conversation.

5. I took affirmative steps to ensure that no one had access to "Confidential" information or materials who is not authorized under the Confidentiality Order to do so. I did not provide anyone from Kellogg Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHHTE") access to any "Confidential" information or materials until after KHHTE had been retained as counsel to Morgan Stanley. In addition, out of an abundance of caution, I requested the KHHTE attorneys to sign the Court-approved "Declaration Of Acknowledgment And Agreement To Be Bound By Protective Order," which is part of the Confidentiality Order in the above-referenced actions.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF REBECCA A. BEYNON, ESQ.

I, Rebecca A. Beynon, Esq. declare:

1. I submit this declaration in support of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion For A Rule To Show Cause. All facts set forth in this declaration are based upon my personal knowledge. If called as a witness, I could and would competently testify to all facts stated in this declaration.

2. I am an associate at the law firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans P.L.L.C. ("KHTE"). I have been an associate at KHTE since July 2003. Prior to July 2003, I was a Special Assistant to the President in the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives from 2002 to 2003.

3. KHTE was retained in late February 2004 to represent Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. (collectively, "Morgan Stanley") in those aspects of the above-captioned case that involve Arthur Andersen and in the prosecution of Morgan Stanley's claims against Arthur Andersen.

4. I affirm that KHTE did not have access to Confidential information under the July 31, 2003 Stipulated Confidentiality Agreement or the December 4, 2003 Order until after Morgan Stanley retained KHTE as co-counsel in the above-captioned litigation and as counsel in Morgan Stanley's action against Arthur Andersen.

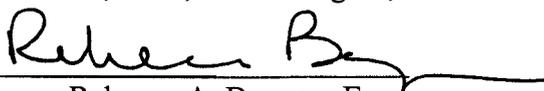

5. I further attest that Morgan Stanley required KHTE attorneys to sign a "Declaration Of Acknowledgment And Agreement To Be Bound By Protective Order," a part of the Court's Confidentiality Order.

6. In accordance with our obligations under the July 31, 2003 Stipulated Confidentiality Order, neither I nor any other lawyer at KHTE have ever provided any Confidential Material to Wachovia.

7. In a March 2, 2004 letter I wrote to Wachovia's counsel on behalf of Morgan Stanley, I expressly declined to provide Wachovia "any information" regarding "the likelihood of recovery against Arthur Andersen, and in particular whether Arthur Andersen has available insurance coverage or other means with which to satisfy a judgment."

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT IN

CASE NO: CA 03-5045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.,

Plaintiff,

vs.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

_____ /

MORGAN STANLEY'S MOTION TO DISCHARGE JURY PANELS

Pursuant to Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.431, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") respectfully requests that the Court enter an order discharging the two panels of prospective jurors who have participated in voir dire examination on March 11, 16, 17, and 22, 2005. On March 23, 2005, this case changed fundamentally as a result of the withdrawal by Kirkland & Ellis LLP ("K&E") from its representation of Morgan Stanley and the Court's ruling partially granting Plaintiff's renewed motion for default judgment against Morgan Stanley.

The assembled panels of prospective jurors have been examined for hours regarding a case that is now fundamentally different, and their examination was conducted by lead trial counsel whose representation of Morgan Stanley has now terminated under disquieting circumstances. Even a sugar-coated explanation of the events that have transpired is certain to bias these prospective jurors against Morgan Stanley — thereby depriving Morgan Stanley of its constitutional right to trial by a fair and impartial jury. This bias is not curable. Accordingly, the Court should discharge these panels and permit the parties to begin voir dire examination afresh with new panels.

ARGUMENT

1. “The primary purpose of voir dire is to determine whether the juror is qualified and will be fair and impartial, free from all bias, prejudice or interest in the cause being tried.” Ritter v. Jimenez, 343 So. 2d 659, 661 (3d DCA 1977) (quoting Barker v. Randolph, 239 So. 2d 110 (Fla. 1st DCA 1970)).

2. Although the “decision whether to dismiss any or all jurors lies in the sound discretion of the trial judge,” Bauta v. State, 698 So. 2d 860, 861 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997), courts have recognized that “the impartiality of the finders of fact is an absolute prerequisite to our system of justice.” Mitchell v. State, 862 So. 2d 908, 911 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) (quoting Williams v. State, 638 So. 2d 976, 978 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994)); see also Carratelli v. State, 832 So. 2d 850, 854 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003). As the Florida Supreme Court has repeatedly held, “[t]he test for determining juror competency is whether the juror can lay aside any bias or prejudice and render a verdict solely on the evidence presented and the instructions on the law given by the court.” Busby v. State, No. SC02-1364, 2004 WL 2471387, at *4 (Fla. Nov. 4, 2004) (granting new trial to defendant prejudiced by trial court’s improper denial of for-cause challenge against juror); see also Weinstein Design Group, Inc. v. Fielder, 884 So. 2d 990, 994 (Fla. 2004) (same); Singer v. State, 109 So. 2d 7, 24 (Fla. 1959) (same).

3. Applying this rule, “[c]lose cases [involving challenges to the impartiality of potential jurors] should be resolved in favor of excusing the juror rather than leaving a doubt as to his or her impartiality.” Weinstein Design Group, Inc. v. Fielder, 884 So. 2d 990, 994 (Fla. 2004) (quoting Bryant v. State, 765 So. 2d 68, 71 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000)); see also Carratelli, 832 So. 2d at 854.

4. In the many hours that panel members have spent in voir dire examination, they have received detailed descriptions and explanations regarding the case. The information that these panels have thus far received from the parties' lawyers and the Court is now, for the most part, wholly invalid. Obviously, these prospective jurors cannot be kept in the dark about what has occurred. But it will be impossible to explain to these prospective jurors the highly unusual events that have occurred in a way that does not grossly prejudice Morgan Stanley.

5. As an initial matter, Morgan Stanley's voir dire examination has so far been conducted solely by lead trial counsel from K&E. Morgan Stanley's credibility with the prospective jurors turned wholly on their perception of and trust in that lawyer. Now, however, that attorney has withdrawn from the representation of Morgan Stanley and will no longer play any role before the jury in this matter. This lawyer's disappearance from the case will cause prospective jurors to speculate as to why he suddenly vanished from his representation of Morgan Stanley. Moreover, when they are instructed at trial, the jurors will be forced to conclude that, during voir dire, Morgan Stanley deliberately misled them by permitting this lawyer to appear before them. Their trust in Morgan Stanley will be fatally and irreparably undermined, to a degree far different than any new juror would feel if he or she learned merely that previous counsel had been terminated.

6. In addition, potential jurors have been instructed that Morgan Stanley's liability to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") is something that, if selected as jurors, they will be called upon to decide. For example, Prospective Juror No. 65 (a member of the first panel) pointedly asked: "[H]as this case been proven, and have people been proven at fault and we're deciding compensation?" 3/16/05 Vol. 39 Hrg. Tr. at 4098:18-20. In response, the panel was informed that jurors would be deciding liability issues: “No one’s guilt has been proven with regard to anything yet. You haven’t heard the first piece of evidence.” Id. at 4099:15-17.

7. Along these same lines, on March 17, 2005, plaintiff’s counsel informed the second panel that “before we ever start talking about damages,” it would be necessary to prove “Morgan Stanley did something wrong.” 3/17/05 Vol. 40 Hrg. Tr. at 4314:20-22. Prospective Juror No. 92 noted that “first you’d have to decide if there was anything wrong first before you would do the amount, right?” Id. at 4315:1-3. Plaintiff’s counsel assured her that, if the party with burden of proof “proved nothing,” then the jury’s “verdict would be, Morgan Stanley, you didn’t do anything wrong because it hasn’t been proven.” Id. at 4315:15-17. “No liability, zero verdict.” Id. at 4315:21-22.

8. Now, as a result of the Court’s default ruling, these same jurors will be told that — completely to the contrary of what they were told previously — liability will now not be an issue for them to consider. Such an instruction cannot be accomplished without irreparable prejudice to Morgan Stanley. The jurors will undoubtedly speculate, to Morgan Stanley’s great detriment, as to why this unusual decision was reached and why they previously received different instructions on the issue. Jurors will infer that at least some of this conduct occurred during voir dire examination, leading to the inevitable conclusion that Morgan Stanley deliberately deceived them during voir dire examination.

9. These circumstances alone would warrant the discharge of the jury panel. However, they are compounded by the many objectionable statements that have been made during the voir dire process. Plaintiff’s counsel has improperly suggested criminal or administrative proceedings were brought, leading to the Court reading a curative instruction. See, e.g., 3/16/05 Vol. 38 Hrg. Tr. at 4036:23-4037:6 (“So whether there have been criminal proceedings, the nature of the criminal proceedings, who was subject to criminal proceedings, whether some administrative agency took action with regard to these issues, that's not a concern of the jury. You will be instructed at the conclusion of the case that you must focus your concern solely on the civil issues." Plaintiff's attorneys have made inappropriate comments regarding their religious affiliation that the Court found were designed to curry favor with the jurors. See, e.g., 3/17/05 Vol. 41 Hrg. Tr. at 4376:2-13 ("You know, in my own studies I've learned about the Old Testament God as being a God — a stern God of vengeance, and the New Testament God of God being forgiveness, of love. The primary message of the Old Testament being, follow the rules, keep the Ten Commandments. And the primary message of the New Testament being one of love and forgiveness. But there is a rule-following aspect to the New Testament as well, because Christ comes into the temple and throws out the money. He gets angered. He's had enough."). They have improperly remarked upon the wealth of Morgan Stanley's counsel. See, e.g., 3/17/05 Vol. 41 Hrg. Tr. at 4355:6-11 ("It was because I saw Mr. Ianno driving his fancy car, and I have a grudge against him because he's the lawyer on the other side of this case and so I have intentionally run into him with his automobile, purposely used my car as a weapon.").

10. The panels of prospective jurors will be irreversibly tainted by these events. As Morgan Stanley is prepared to show through expert testimony, any explanation these panel members are given regarding the highly unusual events that have occurred will be inadequate to cure the prejudice to Morgan Stanley. In these circumstances, selecting jurors from these tainted panels would be violative of Morgan Stanley's constitutional due process right to have this matter heard by a fair and impartial jury.

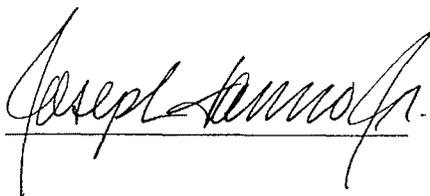

WHEREFORE Morgan Stanley respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order discharging the two panels of prospective jurors that participated in voir dire examinations conducted on March 11, 16, 17, and 22, 2005.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S VERIFIED
MOTION TO PERMIT FOREIGN ATTORNEY TO APPEAR

MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO") and Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("CPH"), joined by their Florida counsel, Jack Scarola, move this Court pursuant to Rule 2.061(b) of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration, for an Order permitting Suzanne J. Prysak to appear pro hac vice in this action on their behalf. In support of the motion, MAFCO and CPH state:

1. MAFCO and CPH have retained attorney Jack Scarola and the firm of Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley, P.A., 2139 Palm Beach Lakes Boulevard, West Palm Beach, Florida, as Florida counsel to assist in this matter.

2. MAFCO and CPH and their Florida counsel seek the assistance of Suzanne J. Prysak of Jenner & Block, LLC, One IBM Plaza, Chicago, Illinois, in this matter. MAFCO and CPH have previously retained the above-named law firm to provide legal representation in connection with this matter in 2001.

3. Suzanne J. Prysak is a member in good standing of the following bars: U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit; U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois; U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois; and the Illinois Supreme Court. Outside of this case, Ms. Prysak has not filed an application in any Florida state court to appear as counsel under Florida Rule of Judicial Administration 2.061 in the last five years. Ms. Prysak has never been disciplined, suspended, or disbarred by any court.

4. Ms. Prysak has read all applicable provisions of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration and the Rules Regulating the Florida Bar, and this motion complies with those rules.

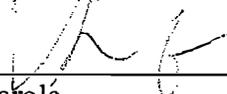

5. Jack Scarola has been a member of the Florida Bar since 1973, Florida Bar No. 169440, and consents to act as co-counsel with the foreign attorney in this action.

WHEREFORE, MAFCO and CPH move this Court for an Order permitting Suzanne J. Prysak to appear on their behalf in this action.

Under penalty of perjury, I declare that I have read the foregoing motion and with respect to my credentials the facts stated in it are true.

MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS RESPONSIVE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S FOURTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION

Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("Morgan Stanley") moves this Court to enter an order compelling Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings ("CPH") to produce documents responsive Request No. 1 of Morgan Stanley's Fourth Request for Production. In support of its Motion, Morgan Stanley states as follows:

1. Request No. 1 of Morgan Stanley's Fourth Request for Production seeks the following categories of documents:

All documents concerning any debt issued by Coleman or any parent or affiliate company where such debt was secured by the assets or stock of Coleman and/or any direct or indirect parent of Coleman, including but not limited to documents concerning the satisfaction, projected satisfaction, income required to satisfy or accounting treatment of such debt.

(Jan. 23, 2004 MS 4th Req. for Prod. of Docs to Plf., Req. 1 (Ex. A.))

2. CPH objected to Request No. 1 and has significantly limited the scope and timeframe of Morgan Stanley's request. Specifically, CPH stated that it would only produce "documents, if any, relating to any debt issued by CPH or Mafco and pending during the period 1997-98 that was secured by stock in The Coleman Company, Inc., Coleman Worldwide Corporation or CLN Holdings Inc." (March 1, 2004 CPH's Resp. to MS 4th Req. for Prod. of Docs, Resp. 1 (Ex. B).) By limiting Morgan Stanley's request in this manner, CPH has unilaterally and improperly excluded scores of documents relevant to this lawsuit, including documents relating to:

- (a) debt obligations incurred by The Coleman Company itself – the very subject of the acquisition transaction that is at issue in this litigation;
- (b) debt obligations incurred by many other Coleman-related "holding companies" such as New Coleman Holdings, which MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. ("MAFCO") established to structure its indirect ownership in Coleman;
- (c) debt obligations incurred by other MAFCO affiliates but secured by shares of Coleman or the Coleman-related "holding companies"; and
- (d) debt that may not have been "pending" in 1997 – but which is nevertheless relevant to understanding CPH's then-existing debt structure because the debt had been refinanced, restructured, or delayed in a manner that would impact later financial periods.

3. The limitations imposed by CPH are improper – and will unreasonably frustrate Morgan Stanley's efforts to obtain full and fair discovery of issues relevant to this lawsuit. When Sunbeam agreed to acquire CPH's interest in Coleman, it agreed to pay approximately $1.6 billion in cash, to provide CPH with approximately 14 million shares of Sunbeam stock, and to assume more than one billion dollars in operating and holding company debt. A complete understanding of the debt obligations that were issued or secured by Coleman and all of its related "holding companies" is critical to developing a complete and accurate financial picture of Coleman, understanding the facts that motivated CPH and MAFCO to sell the Coleman

Company in the manner and at the time that they did, and understanding the substantial benefits that MAFCO and CPH derived from the acquisition transaction.

4. MAFCO, CPH, and Coleman have an extremely complex and intertwined financial structure. Discovery in this case has shown that CPH, MAFCO, and Coleman “routinely” used shares of Coleman and Coleman-related “holding companies” to secure obligations incurred by MAFCO and its affiliates, including “affiliates” unrelated to Coleman. Indeed, a draft disclosure statement prepared by MAFCO’s legal advisors for submission to the Securities Exchange Commission describes CPH’s ownership of Coleman stock as follows:

Substantially all of the shares owned are pledged to secure obligations of Coleman Worldwide Corporation and CLN Holdings Inc., and shares of intermediate holding companies are or from time to time may be pledged to secure obligations of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. or its affiliates.

(MS Dep. Ex. 73 at 19 n.1 (Ex. C).) As written, CPH’s objections and limitations to discovery would prevent Morgan Stanley from discovering information about both of the categories of obligations described in this draft disclosure statement.

5. CPH’s attempt to limit its response to debt that was “pending” in 1997 and 1998 is similarly improper. Limiting the timeframe to 1997 and 1998 will prevent Morgan Stanley from analyzing the impact of 1994 - 1996 acquisitions and transactions on its financial position in 1997 and 1998. Coleman was undergoing a significant restructuring when it was purchased by Sunbeam. Between 1994 and 1996, Coleman bought six companies. Morgan Stanley seeks to understand the impact that the debt associated with these and other transactions may have had on CPH’s motivation for selling Coleman at the time that it did, and for the particular mix of cash, stock, and assumption of debt the parties ultimately agreed to in the February 27, 1998 merger agreements.

6. For these reasons, Morgan Stanley requests the Court to enter an order directing CPH to produce documents responsive to Request No. 1 of Morgan Stanley's Fourth Request for Production in its entirety.

Exhibit A

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S FOURTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS TO PLAINTIFF

Pursuant to Rules 1.280 and 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") requests that plaintiff produce the documents and things referred to in the following specific requests. The specific requests are preceded by Instructions and Definitions which shall govern the specific requests. Documents and things responsive to these requests should be produced to counsel for Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated at the law firm of Carlton Fields, P.A., 222 Lakeview Avenue, Suite 1200, West Palm Beach, FL 33401, within the time required by Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.350(b) or as otherwise agreed to by the parties or specified by the Court.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.

2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

3. Documents requested and to be produced include all Documents in the possession, custody or control of the plaintiff including, but not limited to, any agents, employees, contractors, attorneys, and consultants or experts working for or in favor of the plaintiff or its attorneys.

4. If, in responding to this Request for Production, you encounter any ambiguities when construing a request or definition, the response shall set forth the matter deemed ambiguous and the construction used in responding.

5. Whenever in this Request you are asked to identify or produce a document which is deemed by you to be properly withheld from production for inspection or copying under claim of privilege (including, but not limited to, the work product doctrine), provide a privilege log that includes: the type of document, the general subject matter of the document, the date of the document, and such other information as is sufficient to identify the document, including, where appropriate, the author, addressee, custodian, and any other recipient of the document, and where not apparent, the relationship of the author, the addressee, custodian, and any other recipient to each other, in a manner that, without revealing the information claimed to be protected, will enable this party to assess the applicability of the privilege protection claimed by you. The privilege log shall be provided within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order.

6. If production of any requested document(s) is objected to on the grounds that production is unduly burdensome, describe the burden or expense of the proposed discovery.

7. When a document contains both privileged and non-privileged material, the non-privileged material must be disclosed to the fullest extent possible without disclosing the privileged material. If a privilege is asserted with regard to part of the material contained in a document, the party claiming the privilege must clearly indicate the portions as to which the privilege is claimed. When a document has been redacted or altered in any fashion, identify as to each document the reason for the redaction or alteration. Any redaction must be clearly visible on the redacted document.

8. If a responsive document exists but is no longer in your possession, custody, or control, state: its date, author(s), recipient(s), subject matter, what disposition was made of the document, and the person or entity, if any, now in possession, custody, or control of the document. If a responsive document has been destroyed, identify the date of destruction, the person who destroyed the document and the person who directed that the document be destroyed and state the reason for its destruction.

9. Produce all of the documents responsive to the numbered requests below either as they are kept in the usual course of business or by custodian.

10. If any of these documents cannot be produced in full, you are requested to produce them to the fullest extent possible, specifying clearly the reasons for your inability to produce the remainder and stating any information, knowledge, or belief you have concerning the unproduced portion.

11. If the requested documents are maintained in a file, the file folder is included in the request for production of those documents.

12. The terms “any,” “all” and “each” shall be construed to mean “any,” “all,” or “each”.

13. The term “including” shall be construed to mean “including but not limited to.”

14. The present tense shall be construed to include the past and future tenses.

15. The specificity of any request herein shall not be construed to limit the generality or reach of any other request herein.

16. Unless otherwise specified, this Request calls for the production of documents created, delivered, distributed, sent, received, accessed, or modified up to the date of your response to this Request.

DEFINITIONS

1. The term “concerning” means relating to, referring to, describing, evidencing, or constituting.

2. “Coleman” means Coleman Company, Inc.

3. The “Coleman Transaction” means Sunbeam’s acquisition of Coleman Company, Inc. from CPH and all related communications, agreements, and transactions, including the February 27, 1998 Agreements and the March 30, 1998 closing.

4. “CPH” means Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

5. “CSFB” means Credit Suisse First Boston LLC and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

6. “Document” means any recording in any tangible form of any information, whether handwritten, typed, printed, stored on computer disks, tapes, or databases, or otherwise reproduced. “Document” or “documents” also includes electronic documents whether stored on servers or hard drives, e-mail, backup tapes, voicemail and video and audio recordings. A draft or non-identical copy is a separate document within the meaning of this term.

7. "MAFCO" means MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

8. "MS & Co." means Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.

9. The term "person" is defined as any natural person or any business, legal or governmental entity or association.

10. The terms "plaintiff" and "defendant" as well as a party's full or abbreviated name or pronoun referring to a party mean the party and, where applicable, its officers, directors, employees, partners, corporate parent, subsidiaries or affiliates. This definition is not intended to impose a discovery obligation on any person who is not a party to the litigation.

11. The term "relating to" means concerning, evidencing, referring to, or constituting.

12. "Sunbeam" means Sunbeam Corporation or any of its subsidiaries, divisions, predecessors, successors, present and former employees, representatives, and agents.

DOCUMENTS TO BE PRODUCED

1. All documents concerning any debt issued by Coleman or any parent or affiliate company where such debt was secured by the assets or stock of Coleman and/or any direct or indirect parent of Coleman, including but not limited to documents concerning the satisfaction, projected satisfaction, income required to satisfy or accounting treatment of such debt.

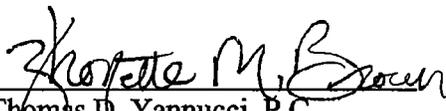

2. All resumes and documents concerning biographical information, including but not limited to educational and professional background and experience, of the individuals identified under the MAFCO and Coleman headings in CPH's Response to MS & Co.'s First Set of Interrogatories, Interrogatory No. 1.

3. All documents concerning any threatened or filed lawsuit against or by MAFCO, CPH or affiliate related or referring to Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman.

4. All documents concerning payments of any kind made by MAFCO, CPH or any affiliate to CSFB in 1996, 1997, and 1998.

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
RESPONSE TO MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION
OF DOCUMENTS RESPONSIVE TO MORGAN STANLEY'S
FOURTH REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION

MS&Co. improperly has refused to withdraw this motion to compel even though CPH already has provided most of the documents in question and has agreed to provide any remaining documents that have not been produced within 21 days. The purported production deficiencies are set forth in Paragraphs 2(a)-(d) and Paragraph 5 of MS&Co.'s motion. On April 12, 2004, the next business day after receiving MS&Co.'s motion, CPH advised MS&Co. that the documents set forth in Paragraphs 2(b)-(d) already have been produced or do not exist. As for the documents identified in Paragraphs 2(a) and Paragraph 5, although CPH does not believe that they would lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, CPH agreed to provide any such documents that it has within 21 days if MS&Co. would withdraw its motion. See Exh. A. Thus,

CPH already has produced all of the documents called for in the motion of MS&Co., or has agreed to do so in short order.

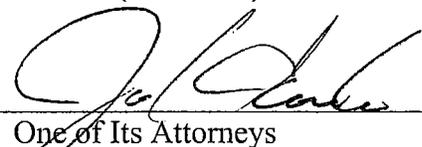

Inexplicably, however, MS&Co. has refused to withdraw its motion. On April 13, 2004, MS&Co. responded to CPH's April 12 letter, stating that the purported deficiencies identified in the motion were not intended to be "exhaustive" and that MS&Co. also wanted additional unspecified documents. See Exh. B. MS&Co.'s position is improper and overreaching: CPH has agreed to cure the purported document production deficiencies identified in MS&Co.'s motion to compel. As for any other documents that MS&Co. might want, no such documents are addressed in the motion before this Court.

For the foregoing reasons, because CPH already has agreed to cure any existing document production deficiencies that are identified in Paragraphs 2(a)-(d) and Paragraph 5 of MS&Co.'s motion to compel, the motion should be denied.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

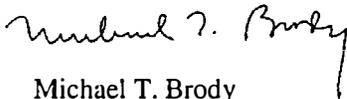

Dear Tom:

This letter relates to your motion to compel production of documents responsive to Morgan Stanley's fourth request for production. At the threshold, we are puzzled by the purported deficiencies in our production you identified in your motion, given that our most recent letter to you on the subject of these requests invited you to explain your position concerning this discovery, and you did not respond.

In any event, as we understand it, the supposed deficiencies identified in your motion are set forth in Paragraphs 2(a)-(d) and in Paragraph 5. Concerning the documents identified in Paragraphs 2(a)-(d), documents responsive to subparagraphs (b) through (d) already have been produced or do not exist. As for subparagraph (a), we objected to producing documents concerning borrowings by Coleman secured by the assets of Coleman. While we still do not understand how documents about Coleman's asset-based borrowing could be relevant to this case, we are willing to produce the documents, if any exist. To the extent we have any responsive documents that have not been produced yet, subject to your agreement to withdraw your motion, we will produce those documents within 21 days. Concerning the documents identified in Paragraph 5, subject to your agreement to withdraw your motion, we likewise will produce any documents that have not yet been produced within 21 days.

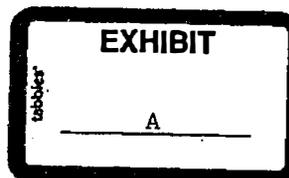

Please confirm whether our proposal is acceptable to you by 12:00 p.m. on Tuesday, April 13. If it is, please prepare an agreed order for our review.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your April 12, 2004 letter regarding Morgan Stanley's motion to compel production of documents responsive to its Fourth Request for Production, Request No. 1. We appreciate CPH's reconsideration of its position with regard to that request. Please note, however, that the enumerated paragraphs in Morgan Stanley's motion that you cite to in your letter were not meant to be exhaustive, and Morgan Stanley does not agree to your proposal to the extent that it excludes categories of otherwise responsive documents. In addition, as indicated in its motion, Morgan Stanley seeks all documents responsive to Request No. 1 from 1994 through 1998.

Unless I hear from you today I will assume that we are in agreement and will proceed with preparing an order for your review.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Clare

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S
RESPONSE TO MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER
REGARDING THE USE OF PERSONNEL EVALUATIONS

MS&Co. and MSSF have moved for a protective order seeking to limit severely CPH's ability to question present and former Morgan Stanley employees about admittedly relevant evaluation materials that pertain to those employees. According to the motion of MS&Co. and MSSF, CPH should be precluded from showing so-called "raw" evaluation comments to the employees to whom the comments pertain, or to anyone other than the individual who made the comments, because that limitation supposedly is necessary to preserve "employees' working relationships with one another" and "the confidentiality and proper functioning of Morgan Stanley's 360-degree evaluation process" and to prevent the "embarrass[ment] and harass[ment] [of] Morgan Stanley's employees" (Mot. ¶¶ 6-7). The motion of MS&Co. and MSSF — which amounts to an inappropriate motion to reconsider this Court's ruling on CPH's motion to compel production of personnel records — is without merit for several reasons.

First, the motion is improper because it seeks to impose significant and unfounded limitations on CPH's ability to examine the very witnesses who are the subjects of the evaluations in question. MS&Co. and MSSF previously asked this Court to limit the production of evaluation materials only to summary documents, but this Court refused, recognizing that the underlying evaluations and comments also were relevant. Clearly, the most logical individuals to ask about those comments are both those who made the comments and the individuals who are the subjects of those comments. The effort of MS&Co. and MSSF to cut off fully half of the inquiry constitutes an improper attempt to greatly reduce the probative value of the materials that this Court ordered MS&Co. and MSSF to produce.

Second, the concerns voiced by MS&Co. and MSSF in support of the discovery limitations that they seek are too vague and too general to overcome CPH's legitimate interest in questioning appropriate witnesses about the evaluation materials. MS&Co. and MSSF have not identified a single criticism or evaluation in their recent document production to substantiate their assertion that the integrity of their evaluation process depends upon the discovery limitations that they request. MS&Co. and MSSF therefore have failed to establish the "good cause" that is necessary for this Court to impose those limitations. See Fla. R. Civ. P. ¶ 1.280(c).

In this regard, far from supporting the limitations on discovery sought by MS&Co. and MSSF, the solitary case authority cited in their motion illustrates just how far short they have fallen of the showing that is necessary for the issuance of a protective order. In that case, South Florida Blood Service, Inc. v. Rasmussen, 467 So. 2d 798 (Fla. 3d DCA 1985), the issue was whether a blood bank should be compelled to provide the names and addresses of 51 volunteer blood donors to an individual who allegedly contracted the AIDS virus from blood transfusions. In a 2-1 decision, after carefully considering the privacy interests at stake, the Court majority concluded that "[t]he complete denial of discovery is necessary to ensure the protection of both the donors' privacy interests and society's interest in a strong and healthy volunteer blood donation program." Id. at 804. Here, in contrast to the blood bank in South Florida Blood Service, MS&Co. and MSSF have not begun to demonstrate that important privacy or societal interests require the relief they seek. Instead, MS&Co. and MSSF are requesting severe limitations on CPH's right to take discovery, based solely on their inchoate apprehension about the toll that discovery supposedly would take on their internal evaluation system and on employee relations. Such vague and unsubstantiated assertions are a far cry from the compelling circumstances that prompted the limitation on discovery in South Florida Blood Service.

Third, the concerns advanced by MS&Co. and MSSF about the purported integrity of their evaluation process, and the effect on working relationships that disclosures of evaluation materials might have, ignore that virtually all of the evaluation materials pertain to former employees. MS&Co. and MSSF have produced evaluation materials for 24 individuals, and of those individuals, only six are known to be employed by MS&Co. and MSSF at the present time (15 individuals are known to be former employees, one individual is deceased, and the employment status of the remaining two individuals has not been disclosed by MS&Co. and MSSF).

Even as to the six individuals who remain employed by MS&Co. and MSSF, the evaluations in question all date from 1997 and 1998 — more than six years ago. Moreover, there has been no showing as to how many, if any, of the critical evaluators of those six individuals remain employed by MS&Co. and MSSF. Consequently, the concerns cited by MS&Co. and MSSF are grossly exaggerated, if they exist at all.

For the foregoing reasons, the motion of MS&Co. and MSSF for a protective order regarding the use of confidential personnel evaluations should be denied.

DECLARATION OF R. BRAM SMITH

I, R. Bram Smith, declare:

1. I submit this declaration in support of Morgan Stanley's Opposition to CPH's Motion To Compel Answers To Deposition Questions And For Other Relief. All facts set forth in this declaration are based upon my personal knowledge. If called as a witness, I could and would competently testify to all facts stated in this declaration.

2. I am currently employed as a Senior Managing Director at Bear Stearns & Co., Inc. Before joining Bear Stearns, I was a Managing Director in the Loan Products Group at Morgan Stanley.

3. In March 1998, I was President of Morgan Stanley Senior Funding ("MSSF") — and a member of the Morgan Stanley team that negotiated and entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam. Pursuant to the credit agreement, Sunbeam borrowed $680 million from MSSF, with the borrowings used by Sunbeam to fund certain costs relating to the acquisitions.

4. On February 24, 2004, I provided a deposition in the above-referenced matters at the request of Coleman (Parent) Holdings (“CPH”). The deposition took one full day to complete. The deposition itself — and the half-day of preparation with counsel that preceded the deposition — took me away from my duties at Bear Stearns, my current employer. Accordingly, as the deposition wore on, I became increasingly frustrated with the length of the deposition, the amount of time spent on matters unrelated to my principal responsibilities involving the origination of the Sunbeam credit agreement, and the repetitive nature of much of the questioning.

5. At one point during the deposition, I was asked — repeatedly and in several different variations — to express an opinion whether a certain press release issued by Sunbeam on March 19, 1998 “adequately disclosed” certain information regarding Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 performance. I grew exasperated with this line of questioning, since I had previously testified (at some length) that I had not been involved in the discussions that lead to Sunbeam’s issuance of the March 19, 1998 press release, had not been involved in the due diligence conducted by Morgan Stanley regarding Sunbeam’s first quarter 1998 performance, and had not played any role in the preparation of the March 19, 1998 press release.

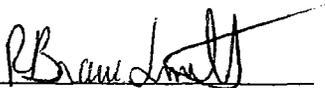

6. As a result of this repeated questioning, I lost my composure and concentration. I requested a break — but the questioner refused to allow one. I needed to take a break to compose myself before answering again, and so excused myself from the deposition. Tom Clare, counsel for Morgan Stanley and the attorney representing me during the deposition, followed me out into the hallway outside the deposition room.

7. During the short break, I did not discuss the substance of my testimony with Mr. Clare — and we did not discuss how I should respond to the pending question. Mr. Clare only instructed me to regain my composure, to return to the deposition room when I was ready, and to answer the pending question to the best of my ability. I followed Mr. Clare's instructions and returned to the deposition room several minutes later. When the deposition resumed, I truthfully stated —as I had previously stated on several occasions — that I do not have an opinion regarding the adequacy of Sunbeam's press release. As noted above, I was not directly involved in the events leading to the issuance of the Sunbeam press release.

8. I understand that counsel for CPH has argued that my leaving the deposition is somehow "evidence" that Morgan Stanley engaged in wrongdoing in connection the work that it performed for Sunbeam in 1997 and 1998. That suggestion is false — and a mischaracterization of the events that occurred during my deposition. The fact that I left the deposition had nothing to do with my view of the merits of CPH's contentions or the substance of any of the questions that were asked — but rather with the manner in which the deposition was being conducted.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

MORGAN STANLEY'S OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDING INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL ANSWERS TO INTERROGATORIES

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley") responses to CPH's interrogatories fully complied with Florida Rules. CPH's motion to compel should be denied because: (1) Morgan Stanley already answered the requests in conformance with its discovery obligations; (2) CPH's motion is nothing more than an impermissible attempt to force Morgan Stanley to update its discovery responses – a burden that the Florida rules do not require and CPH itself has consistently rejected; and (3) CPH's motion improperly seeks to have the Court reform CPH's vague discovery requests.

1. Morgan Stanley's Responses Are Complete And Fully Satisfied Morgan Stanley's Obligations Under The Florida Rules.

Consistent with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, Morgan Stanley responded to CPH's interrogatories in good faith and to the best of its ability. Before providing the responses to the interrogatories, Morgan Stanley conducted an inquiry of the facts known to it. That inquiry was hampered, however, by the fact that more than five years have elapsed since the events at issue transpired, by the fact that a significant number of people involved in the underlying transaction are no longer with Morgan Stanley,¹ and by the fact that the discovery process for this case was in its initial stages.² Additionally, Morgan Stanley was hampered by the broad and vague nature of the interrogatories requesting, for instance, the names of persons “knowledgeable about” or “involved in” certain activities such as due diligence.

Nonetheless, Morgan Stanley was able to identify a number of current and former Morgan Stanley employees it believed were, to some extent, “knowledgeable about” or “involved in” the subject matter of the interrogatories. The good faith effort made by Morgan Stanley is evidenced by the fact that, in response to each request for a list of employees associated with a particular topic, Morgan Stanley identified no more than 17 employees for each question, the employees identified in each response are not identical, and Morgan Stanley did not respond by simply providing a players list or similar documents.

Morgan Stanley directly responded to the requests propounded by CPH. CPH’s objections to Morgan Stanley’s use of the phrases “believe” and “may have” in structuring its interrogatory responses are without merit. Indeed, CPH itself has responded to similar interrogatory requests in related litigation in Florida state court by identifying persons who “may have” knowledge on particular topics and thus cannot be heard to complain here. See Oct. 15, 2001 Plf’s Resps. & Objs. to Arthur Andersen LLP’s & Phillip E. Harlow’s 1st Set of Interrog.

to Plf., Resps. 2 and 3, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Arthur Andersen LLP, No. CA-01-06062AN (Fla. 15th Jud. Dist.) (Ex. A). Morgan Stanley conducted a good faith investigation of the facts and could not offer a more definitive list in response to each question. Short of omniscience, it is impossible to determine what third parties (former employees) are “knowledgeable” about any particular topic. Indeed, CPH itself has not offered and cannot ask for more. (See, e.g., Sept. 12, 2003 Letter from M. Brody to K. DeBord at 1 (stating that CPH “ha[s] made every effort” to comply with the Florida Rules and that CPH will not comply with “additional demands” that seek to “impose additional burdens or requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the Florida Rules.”) (Ex. B).)

2. CPH’s Motion Is An Attempt To Circumvent Florida Rules.

CPH’s motion is a deliberate attempt to circumvent the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure. The General Provision Governing Discovery specifically states that, “A party who has responded to a request for discovery with a response that was complete when made is under no duty to supplement the response to include information thereafter acquired.” Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(e). The Florida Rules require only that parties respond to interrogatory requests to the best of their knowledge at the time the responses are served. See Anthony v. Schmitt, 557 So. 2d 656, 660 (Fla. 2d DCA 1990) (Noting that “[u]nlike the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure never require a party to update answers to interrogatories . . .”).

Morgan Stanley’s interrogatory responses satisfied its obligation to respond to the best of its knowledge. And because CPH itself has responded to discovery in a manner that it now complains is improper, CPH’s motion should be seen for what it is: a request that Morgan

² Indeed, when Morgan Stanley served its interrogatory responses, the parties had completed only one half of one deposition addressing the events underlying the instant lawsuits.

Stanley supplement its interrogatory responses six months after they were served. On October 16, 2003, ten days after Morgan Stanley served its interrogatory answers, CPH took issue with the phrasing of the interrogatory responses that are the subject of the instant motion. The parties exchanged a series of letters in which Morgan Stanley pointed out that CPH had used the same phrasing in its own discovery responses in a related case. Ultimately, on November 13, 2003, in the spirit of compromise, Morgan Stanley provided CPH with additional information in an effort to resolve a potential dispute. On November 20, 2003, CPH “acknowledge[d] the additional information [Morgan Stanley] provided” and never again, until the filing of the instant motion, complained of the phraseology used in Morgan Stanley’s interrogatory responses. (Nov. 20, 2003 Letter from M. Brody to K. DeBord at 1 (Ex. C).) CPH’s acknowledgement and failure to raise the issue again demonstrates that while CPH was satisfied with Morgan Stanley’s responses in November 2003, CPH seeks to have Morgan Stanley update its interrogatory responses at the end of April, 2004, after five months of additional discovery has been completed.

CPH’s improper intent can also be seen in the relief that CPH requests. CPH premises its motion on what it claims are “improper[] qualifi[cations]” on which particular employees were involved in or knowledgeable about certain topics. (Apr. 9, 2004 CPH’s Mot. to Compel Answers to Interrogs. at 2.) Specifically CPH takes exception to the use of the terms “believes” and “may have” been. (Id. at 3.) In its primary request for relief, however, CPH seeks to have Morgan Stanley start from scratch and respond again to the complete interrogatories. CPH should not be permitted to manufacture a discovery dispute by identifying a picayune qualm with Morgan Stanley’s response, a response identical to that provided by CPH on another occasion, and thereby circumvent the purpose and intent of Florida Rule 1.280(e).

CPH's motion is part of an ongoing discovery dispute in which CPH has unilaterally sought discovery updates from Morgan Stanley while refusing to update its own requests. As one example, Morgan Stanley sought the following interrogatory response from CPH:

Identify all persons involved in developing, preparing, reviewing, or verifying the information reflected on the Schedule of Synergies and state, with respect to each, the[] nature of their involvement.

(July 22, 2003 Morgan Stanley's 1st Set of Interrogs. to Plf. CPH, Interrog. 4 (Ex. D).)

CPH responded by listing only the individuals involved in preparing the document, and provided no additional information. When Morgan Stanley requested that CPH amend its response to identify the persons involved in developing, reviewing, or verifying the information reflected on the Schedule of Synergies and to state the nature of their involvement, as requested, CPH countered that it "provided all responsive information it had in its possession as of September 2, 2003," and refused to provide Morgan Stanley any additional information. (See Oct. 8, 2003 Letter from D. Connell to DeBord (Ex. E).)

In an attempt to resolve the type of dispute that is now before this Court, Morgan Stanley suggested to CPH in October that the parties arrange "a mutually agreed-upon method for updating discovery responses once new, responsive information becomes available." (See Oct. 23, 2003 Letter from K. DeBord to M. Brody at 3 (Ex. F).) CPH rejected Morgan Stanley's offer. (See Nov. 20, 2003 Letter from M. Brody to K. DeBord (Ex. G).)

CPH cannot have it both ways: it cannot unilaterally impose upon Morgan Stanley an obligation to update its discovery responses in contravention of the Florida Rules while, at the same time, use the Rules to shield itself from a reciprocal obligation.

3. CPH's Motion Seeks To Have The Court Rewrite Its Interrogatories.

Not only is CPH seeking to circumvent the Florida Rules, CPH also is attempting to use this motion to re-write its interrogatory requests. CPH is seeking the Court's assistance now because its interrogatory requests were poorly worded and CPH has already served interrogatories in excess of the limit established by the Florida Rules. CPH's own motion demonstrates the inadequacies with the interrogatories as propounded by CPH. For example, CPH states in its argument that it wants to know who was "involved in key events." (Mot. at 4 (emphasis added).) Yet when it makes its request for relief, CPH claims to want to know who has or may have "knowledge of the subject matter of the Interrogatory." (Id. at 5 (emphasis added).) CPH's original interrogatory asked for both who was involved and who has knowledge. Neither through its requests nor through its definitions did CPH seek to have Morgan Stanley distinguish between those with "knowledge" and those "involved" or classify its answer in terms of Morgan Stanley's degree of certainty as it now seeks. Morgan Stanley answered the requests as they were propounded and CPH cannot use a motion to compel to reform its requests.

For the foregoing reasons, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court deny CPH's Motion to Compel Interrogatory Responses in its entirety.

Re: *Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Kathryn:

I write in response to your letter of August 27, 2003 concerning CPH's objections and responses to Morgan Stanley's first requests for production of documents and CPH's and Mafco's objections and responses to MSSF's first requests for production of documents.

Objections and Responses to Morgan Stanley's Requests For Production

Initial Objection 1. CPH and Mafco produced to Morgan Stanley and MSSF over a million pages of documents within 30 days of receiving your documents requests. We have made every effort to provide complete and accurate responses in accordance with the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure. To the extent Morgan Stanley seeks to impose additional burdens or requirements that exceed or are inconsistent with the Florida Rules, we advised you that CPH and Mafco will not comply with your additional demands. Morgan Stanley has lodged many of the same objections to our document requests, including its General Objections Nos. 3, 5, 8, and 10.

You have inquired whether we intend to withhold documents based upon our objections to your instructions and definitions. To the extent your requests call for the production of documents protected by the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine, we intend to withhold documents that otherwise would be responsive, as we state in our Initial Objection 2. We will comply with the stipulation entered by the court regarding the production of privilege logs. We stand on our objection that Instructions 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 16, and Definitions 9 and 15 (Morgan Stanley) and 11 and 17 (MSSF) go beyond the requirements of applicable law. We will address these in turn.

Instructions No. 3 and 8: CPH and Mafco will produce all documents in their possession, custody, or control as required by the Florida Rules. We have produced documents originally in the possession of CPH's prior counsel. We note that Morgan Stanley is willing to produce documents in the possession of certain of its counsel, but not others. You have been unwilling to explain your inconsistent position with respect to documents in the possession of third parties.

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.
September 12, 2003

JENNER & BLOCK

See Brody to Clare letter, August 20, 2003. CPH and Mafco will not withhold documents on the basis of these objections.

Instruction No. 4: In response to specific document requests, we have identified ambiguities in your requests and have provided the construction we used in our responses to those ambiguous requests. Unless noted in response to a specific request, CPH and Mafco will not withhold documents on the basis of this initial objection.

Instruction No. 5: We will produce a privilege log in accordance with the Florida Rules and in the manner stipulated to by the parties, as entered by the Court on September 4, 2003.

Instruction 6: We object to the production of documents where production would be unduly burdensome. We have not interposed this objection in response to any of your specific requests and therefore will not withhold any documents on the basis of this objection.

Instruction 7: We will produce documents in redacted form when necessary to prevent the production of privileged communications, work product, or non-responsive information in accordance with the Florida Rules. CPH and Mafco will not otherwise withhold documents on the basis of this objection.

Instructions 9 and 10: CPH and Mafco have not withheld documents on the basis of these objections.

Instruction 11: This instruction seeks the production of documents protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. CPH and Mafco will not produce file folders that were created by Jenner & Block, and which therefore constitute work product.

Instruction 16: This instruction is exceptionally broad, and seeks documents over a longer time frame than is encompassed by Morgan Stanley's or MSSF's responses. We invite you to propose a reasonable time frame for your requests.

Morgan Stanley Definition 9 / MSSF Definition 11: CPH and Mafco stand on their objection to the definition of "documents" to the extent the definition is inconsistent with their obligations under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure. CPH and Mafco will not withhold any documents based on these objections.

Morgan Stanley Definition 15 / MSSF Definition 17: We objected to your definition of "identify," and your August 27 letter does not offer any explanation of the term. We note, however, that this term, although defined, is not used in your document requests.

Initial Objection 3. We remain unwilling to accept Morgan Stanley's definition of "Coleman Transaction." You have defined that term to mean "Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman Company, Inc. from CPH," which did not occur, and further to include other "related agreements and transactions," which we do not understand. In our objection, we explained that we would

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.
September 12, 2003

JENNER & BLOCK

produce documents concerning the transaction that actually took place. What more are you interested in receiving?

Morgan Stanley Request No. 1. We objected to the use of the term "implementation." We explained that we would construe that term to mean the closing of the transaction. We further explained that if you meant the term to mean the actual integration of the companies, those documents were encompassed by your Request 26, which seeks "all documents concerning potential or actual integration of Coleman, First Alert, and/or Signature Brands with Sunbeam . . ." Your attempt to clarify your Request by defining "implementation" to mean "to put into effect" is unhelpful and does not allow us to further respond to this Request. Based on our construction of Requests 1 and 26, we believe we have fully responded to your requests.

Morgan Stanley Request No. 8. CPH stands on its objection and response to this Request. CPH will not withhold documents based on this objection.

Morgan Stanley Request No. 9. We are investigating our production regarding this request, and we will respond under separate cover.

Morgan Stanley Request No. 15. This Request sought information concerning due diligence, which we agreed to provide. It continues to state: "including without limitation" documents reflecting all "Financial Information" CPH ever obtained about Sunbeam. As we understand your definition, the request for "Financial Information" is broader than the request for due diligence information, in which it is supposedly encompassed. We have not withheld any documents responsive to what we understand this request to seek – due diligence. The further request, for all Financial Information, is overbroad.

Morgan Stanley Request No. 16. In this request, you sought various due diligence materials. We agreed to provide exactly what you have agreed to provide: documents relating to due diligence for this transaction, and general due diligence materials. We are not providing (nor are you) due diligence materials from other transactions. Why are you entitled to receive documents you are not willing to produce to us? Do you intend to modify your prior response to our Request No. 43?

Morgan Stanley Request No. 28. In response to this request, we offered to produce more documents than you requested. Morgan Stanley's definition of "your" was limited to "CPH." CPH does not have an organizational chart or a chart of reporting relationships, and therefore there are no documents responsive to this Request. Nonetheless, we responded by voluntarily producing documents sufficient to show the relationship of CPH with its corporate parent at the time of the February 27, 1998 Agreements. We specifically refer Morgan Stanley to the 10-Ks filed by the Coleman Co., Inc. in 1997 and 1998, which we produced, which explain the relationship between CPH and its parent and subsidiaries at all relevant times. We have also provided a written response describing corporate structure. CPH stands on its objections and response to this Request.

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.
September 12, 2003

JENNER & BLOCK

Morgan Stanley Request No. 31. CPH produced redacted calendars responsive to this Request that include relevant entries. You apparently want calendar entries that have nothing to do with Coleman or Sunbeam. We invite you to explain what other information from these calendars you believe you are entitled to receive, and why.

Morgan Stanley Request Nos. 32-35. In response to these requests, we outlined precisely what we were producing. We are not producing documents that reflect attorney-client communications or work product from other litigation arising from the Sunbeam transaction. We invite you to explain what other documents you believe you are entitled to receive that we are not providing in our responses.

Morgan Stanley Request No. 40. As we explained in our response, CPH would be in violation of the terms of the settlement agreement between CPH and Arthur Andersen if CPH disclosed any of the terms of the settlement agreement. We therefore are unable to agree to your request to produce a portion of the agreement. We invite you to explain why you believe you are entitled to any portion of the settlement agreement and the legitimate purpose that would be served by disclosure of the terms of the settlement agreement.

Objections and Responses to MSSF's First Request for Production

Certain of the issues you raise relating to the MSSF requests are duplicative of the same issues you raise with regard to the Morgan Stanley requests. I will not repeat the discussion below of items I have already addressed.

Initial Objection No. 6. We objected to MSSF's definition of "MAFCO," because it is incorrect. CPH and Mafco will construe the definition to refer to MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives, and agents. We are not withholding any documents based upon this definition, as corrected.

MSSF Request No. 6. Our response to Request No. 6 contained a typographical error. The response should read: "Defendants object to the multiple false premises contained in the request. Subject to and without waiving these objections and the foregoing Initial Objections, including without limitation defendants' objection to the term 'Schedule of Synergies,' CPH and Mafco will produce documents referring or relating to the December 1997 meeting."

MSSF Request No. 9. See our discussion of Morgan Stanley Request No. 15 above.

MSSF Request No. 15. We stand by our objection to this request. There was never any "decision" to make any such "representation," and therefore there are no documents responsive to this Request.

MSSF Request No. 22. We are investigating our production regarding this request, and we will respond under separate cover.

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.
September 12, 2003

JENNER & BLOCK

MSSF Request No. 30. We have fully responded to this request. We have produced documents, as you request, sufficient to show the corporate relationships between the relevant entities at the relevant time. CPH and MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. do not have any organization charts of internal reporting relationships. Please advise me if you believe you are entitled to additional documents.

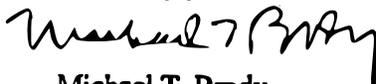

MSSF Request Nos. 37-42. In response to these requests, we outlined precisely what we were producing. We are not producing documents that reflect attorney-client communications or work product from other litigation arising from the Sunbeam transaction. We invite you to explain what other documents you believe you are entitled to receive that we are not providing in our responses.

* * *

Finally, you complain that we have not produced enough documents from CPH or Mafco. CPH and Mafco produced an extraordinary number of documents and other discovery materials to Morgan Stanley and MSSF. As we have advised you on several occasions, a majority of the documents in our production are documents we received from third parties arising from Sunbeam's fraudulent practices and related litigation. We have produced documents from our clients' files relating to the relevant topics. In stark contrast, Morgan Stanley and MSSF, two global financial and investment institutions, have produced a small number of documents and Morgan Stanley has been afforded almost four months to respond to our requests.

Please contact me if you would like to discuss any of these issues.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
*Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Kathryn:

I received your November 13 letter concerning your clients' interrogatory answers, and I acknowledge the additional information you provided. Nevertheless, as detailed below, many of your answers, although in some instances lengthy, do not answer the specific questions we posed.

MSSF Damages. In its complaint, MSSF alleged that it suffered damages. It must have had a basis for that allegation. Nevertheless, you have not provided any information concerning the nature, much less the amount, of those damages. You cite a decision in a federal employment class action to support your refusal to provide an answer. That decision is not the norm—indeed, under the current federal rules, a computation of damages, and information bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered is required as an initial disclosure. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C). Courts overwhelmingly reject objections of prematurity and order plaintiffs to provide information concerning damages. See, e.g., Doe v. Mercy Health Corp., 1993 WL 377064 (E.D. Pa.) (compelling interrogatory answers and stating that at outset of case “plaintiff must be in a position to know what damages he has suffered, as well as what method of calculation he plans to use”); Geer v. Cox, 2003 WL 21254731 (D. Kan.) (rejecting prematurity objection and stating that “it is no answer for a plaintiff to assert that he will need discovery or to consult with an expert to determine his losses”). Again, putting aside whether you will be able to provide a more detailed answer at a later date, we demand that you provide an answer as to the information in your possession now.

Morgan Stanley Corporate Affiliates. You have limited your responses to the named Morgan Stanley parties and refuse to provide information from other Morgan Stanley entities. Your clients are in a position to know which Morgan Stanley entities may have responsive information and are under a duty to provide that information. We are not required to guess which of Morgan Stanley's corporate affiliates were involved in Sunbeam-related transactions, nor should we be put to the burden of serving subpoenas on other Morgan Stanley entities. In any event, we know that entities in addition to Morgan Stanley and MSSF were involved in the Sunbeam transaction. For instance, entities doing business under the trade name “Morgan Stanley Dean Witter” obviously had substantial involvement. We assume that the trade name would encompass activities of numerous

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.
November 20, 2003

entities, including Morgan Stanley Dean Witter International, Inc., Morgan Stanley DW, Inc., Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Wealth Management, Inc., Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Asset Capital Inc., and various of the "MSDW" companies. Please provide us information from those entities, and any entities doing business under that trade name, as well as from entities Morgan Stanley and MSSF have reason to believe possess responsive information.

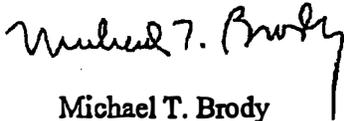

Communications Concerning Sunbeam EPS/Sales. You ask how Morgan Stanley's Answer to Interrogatory No. 3 is deficient, noting that the answer is comprised of eight paragraphs. The interrogatory asks about, inter alia, communications involving Morgan Stanley relating to Sunbeam's EPS. The answer identifies several conversations relating to Sunbeam's sales, but none relating to EPS. Is this an oversight or are we to assume that Morgan Stanley had no communications with anyone relating to Sunbeam's EPS? In addition, the answer does not indicate (a) which "member of Sunbeam's management" told Ruth Porat that sales were "soft"; (b) which "Sunbeam officials" insisted that sales expectations would be met; (c) other than Mr. Tyree, who was present at Global Financial Press; or (d) who participated in "bring-down" due diligence.

The "Truth" Concerning Synergies. My November 6 letter noted that MSSF had not explained how the alleged representations made to it were false. Your letter refers to Interrogatory No. 2 to MSSF, when in fact Interrogatory No. 3 (and not, No. 4, as I initially indicated) addresses this issue. Putting aside confusion over interrogatory numbering, MSSF has not stated what is false about the representations MSSF supposedly received. MSSF must have had some inkling as to what it believes is the truth in order for it to file its claims. Please provide that information now.

As to each of these areas, please let me know by November 25 if you intend to provide additional information, or whether the Court's assistance will be necessary.

Finally, as to your proposal to agree to supplementation of interrogatory answers, we intend to follow the requirements of the Florida rules in this regard.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

Exhibit D

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE
FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
IN AND FOR PALM BEACH
COUNTY, FLORIDA

CASE NO: 03 CA-005045 AI

COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC.,

Defendant.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES TO PLAINTIFF COLEMAN (PARENT) HOLDINGS, INC.

Pursuant to the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.280 and 1.340, Defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") hereby requests that Plaintiff Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") answer the following interrogatories and otherwise specify objections, if any, in accordance with the definitions and instructions contained herein.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery request all responses that might otherwise be construed to be outside of its scope.
2. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.
3. Each interrogatory should be answered separately and fully, unless it is objected to, in which event the reasons for the objections should be stated with specificity. The answers are to be signed by plaintiffs and the objections, if any, are to be signed by the attorney(s)

making them. Where a complete answer to a particular interrogatory is not possible, the interrogatory should be answered to the extent possible and a statement should be made indicating why only a partial answer is given, the efforts made by you to obtain the information and the source from which all responsive information may be obtained, to the best of your knowledge or belief.

4. If it is claimed that information responsive to any interrogatory is privileged, work product, or otherwise protected from disclosure, state the nature and basis for any such claim of privilege, work product, or other ground for nondisclosure and identify: (a) the subject matter of any such information; (b) if the information is embodied in a document, the author of the document and each person to whom the original or a copy of the document was sent; (c) if the information was communicated orally, the person making the communication and all persons present at or participating in the communication; (d) the date of the document or oral communication; and (e) the general subject matter of the document or oral communication, within the time set forth in the agreed-upon order. Any part of an answer to which you do not claim privilege or work product should be given in full.

5. The term "identify" (with respect to documents) means to give, to the extent known, the (i) type of document; (ii) general subject matter; (iii) date of the document; and (iv) author(s), addressee(s) and recipient(s).

6. The term "identify" (with respect to persons) means to give, to the extent known, the person's full name, present or last known address, and when referring to a natural person, additionally, the present or last known place of employment. Once a person has been identified in accordance with this subparagraph, only the name of that person need be listed in response to subsequent discovery requesting the identification of that person.

7. When used in reference to a person other than a natural person, "identify" means: (a) to state its name; (b) to describe its nature (e.g., corporation, partnership, etc.); (c) to state the location of its principal place of business; and (d) to identify the person or persons employed by such entity whose actions on behalf of the entity are responsive to the interrogatory.

8. When used with respect to the identification of facts, acts, events, occurrences, meetings, telephone conferences or communications, "identify" means to describe with specificity the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference, or communication in question, including, but not limited to: (a) identifying all participants in the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication; (b) stating the date(s) on which the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication took place; (c) stating the location(s) at which the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication took place; and (d) providing a description of the substance of the fact, act, event, occurrence, meeting, telephone conference or communication.

9. The terms "any," "all" and "each" shall be construed to mean "any," "all," or "each."

10. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "including but not limited to."

11. The present tense shall be construed to include the past and future tenses.

12. Unless otherwise indicated, these interrogatories request information for the period beginning January 1, 1997.

DEFINITIONS

13. "Advisors" means financial advisors, legal advisors, accountants, consultants and any other third-party advising or assisting CPH and/or MAFCO in any way in connection with the Coleman Transaction, including but not limited to individuals at Credit Suisse First Boston and Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz.

14. "Coleman" means Coleman Company, Inc.
15. The "Coleman Transaction" means Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman Company, Inc. from CPH.
16. "CPH" means Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.
17. "MAFCO" means MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.
18. "MS & Co." means Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. and any of its officers, directors, former or present employees, representatives and agents.
19. The term "person" is defined as any natural person or any business, legal or governmental entity or association.

INTERROGATORIES

1. Identify all individuals who may have discoverable information relating to the allegations in your Complaint and state, with respect to each, the subjects of the information the possess.
2. Identify all Advisors and state, with respect to each, the nature of the services they performed in connection with the Coleman Transaction.
3. Identify with particularity all misrepresentations by MS & Co. that CPH intends to rely upon at trial and state, with respect to each such statement, the date and time the representation was made; the document, setting or circumstances in which the representation was made; the person(s) who made the representation; the exact wording of the misrepresentation; and all reasons why CPH believes the misrepresentation was false when it was made.
4. Identify all persons involved in developing, preparing, reviewing, or verifying the information reflected on the Schedule of Synergies and state, with respect to each, their nature of their involvement.
5. Identify all transactions since 1993 in which CPH or MAFCO, or any company owned, controlled, or affiliated with CPH or MAFCO, has received stock as any portion of the consideration for the transaction.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.

Dear Kathryn:

I write in response to your October 8, 2003 letter concerning CPH's September 2, 2003 response to Morgan Stanley's first set of interrogatories. With respect to Interrogatory No. 4, CPH provided all responsive information it had in its possession as of September 2, 2003.

The remainder of your letter appears to be an effort to rebut certain of CPH's objections that Interrogatory No. 3 was premature given Morgan Stanley's discovery non-performance as of September 2, 2003, the date on which the interrogatory responses were served. For example, you complain that the interrogatory response notes that Morgan Stanley had not yet produced a single witness for deposition. As of September 2, that was true. Moreover, although Mr. Tyree's deposition began on September 15, 2003, Morgan Stanley has refused to provide additional dates for the continuation of Mr. Tyree's deposition and has forced us to seek the Court's assistance in completing that deposition. Morgan Stanley also has filed a motion designed to stay or prevent any further substantive depositions from occurring. You also complain that the interrogatory response observes that Morgan Stanley's document production was not complete as of September 2. That observation was clearly correct; indeed, Morgan Stanley produced nearly one-half of its documents after September 2, 2003 and produced documents as recently as October 1, 2003. In short, CPH fails to see how its September 2 interrogatory answers misrepresented anything about Morgan Stanley's discovery compliance.

Very truly yours,

Deirdre E. Connell

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.
MSSF v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. et al.

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your October 16, 2003 letter regarding MS & Co. and MSSF's Interrogatory Responses.

With respect to your request that MS & Co. and MSSF's answers include all information "regardless of the Morgan Stanley entity involved," we stand on our objection that your request is unduly burdensome. MS & Co. and MSSF were the only Morgan Stanley entities involved in the transactions that form the basis for the actions, and are the only entities with information reasonably likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. MS & Co. and MSSF have over 150 sister companies in the United States and around the world. These companies are not parties to this lawsuit and have nothing to do with this action.

The majority of your remaining concerns serve to highlight CPH and MAFCO's massive effort to create discovery disputes where there ought not be any throughout the course of discovery in this case, and, even more importantly, CPH and MAFCO's systematic failure to live up to very same demands it purports to place on MS & Co. and MSSF. The following are but a few examples:

First, an overwhelming portion of your letter complains about interrogatory responses in which MS & Co. or MSSF's answer uses the phrase "may have." Your objection to our use of this phrase is frivolous, particularly because CPH and MAFCO used the exact same phrase in its responses to MS & Co. in this action and in its responses to Arthur Andersen in the Andersen action. See, e.g., October 15, 2001 Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. Resp. and Obj. to Arthur Andersen LLP's, et. al. 1st Set of Interrogatories to Plf. At Reqs. 2 and 3 (stating that Plaintiff believes the following people "may have" knowledge of the facts alleged in the Complaint and

KIRKLAND & ELLIS LLP

Michael Brody, Esq.
October 23, 2003

"may have" knowledge pertaining to the due diligence conducted by or on behalf of Sunbeam Corporation of the Coleman Company, Inc.).

Second, your letter complains about MS & Co.'s objection on relevance and overbreadth grounds to Interrogatory No. 8, which requests "all claims that have been threatened, communicated, or otherwise asserted against Morgan Stanley involving allegations that Morgan Stanley failed to conduct due diligence properly in a public or private offering." Despite MS & Co.'s objections, it provided CPH with a list of all claims brought by non-purchasers against MS & Co. alleging faulty due diligence. MS & Co.'s reasonable limitation on your request stands in sharp contrast with MAFCO and CPH's flat refusal to respond to a comparable interrogatory served by MSSF. MSSF Interrogatory No. 1 asked you to identify "all claims that have been threatened, communicated, or otherwise asserted against MAFCO involving fraud, theft...or any violation of the securities laws and regulations, including allegations of 'channel stuffing'..." You objected to this request as overbroad to the extent that it "requires MAFCO and CPH to identify claims that have been "alleged, threatened, communicated or otherwise asserted" against MAFCO (even though this is the exact same language employed by your own request, see above), and you further stated that accusations of accounting improprieties and channel stuffing relates to MAFCO and CPH's "routine business disputes" and are irrelevant to this action. You ultimately limited your response to the "transaction at issue in this case," and responded that "no claims have been alleged, threatened, communicated or otherwise asserted against MAFCO involving fraud, theft, bribery, and/or any violation of the securities laws and regulations...in connection with the Transaction at issue in this suit" (had you forgotten about the action against MAFCO brought by MSSF?). Your utter deficiency in answering this and other interrogatories have been addressed under separate cover, but for now your response serves to highlight the absurdity of your "outrage" over MS & Co. and MSSF's responses to your interrogatory requests.

Third, you objected that MSSF failed to provide, in response to Interrogatory No. 4, a description of the role of each person who was involved in developing and reviewing the synergy figures. MSSF did not provide that information because that information was not available to it at the time, but that is beside the point. MS & Co.'s own Interrogatory Request No. 1 (first request) asked CPH to identify individuals with discoverable information relating to the allegations made in your Complaint and, with respect to each the subjects of the information they possess. CPH provided a list of individuals but failed to provide "the subjects of the information they possess" as requested. Likewise, MS & Co.'s Interrogatory No. 4 asked CPH for all persons involved in developing, preparing, reviewing, or verifying the information reflected on the Schedule of Synergies and, with respect to each, the nature of their involvement. Once again CPH provided the names of three people that CPH "believes" were involved in preparing the synergies, but failed to provide those individuals involved in "developing, reviewing, or verifying" the synergies and failed to provide "the nature of their involvement." When asked for an explanation, Deirdre Connell glibly responded that "CPH provided all

Michael Brody, Esq.
October 23, 2003

responsive information it had in its possession as of September 2, 2003" with no further explanation and no offer to provide additional information when it became available. (See Connell letter to DeBord dated October 8, 2003). Quite simply, if CPH and MAFCO are asserting that MS & Co. and MSSF did not meet its discovery obligations in answering this response, CPH and MAFCO likewise failed to meet their own obligations.

As a fourth and final example, your letter objects to MSSF's answer to Interrogatory No. 2, which asks MSSF to identify with particularity all misrepresentations MSSF intends to rely upon at trial. MSSF responded by stating those facts, known by MSSF as of October 6, 2003, that form the basis of MSSF's allegations that MAFCO and CPH committed fraud. MSSF's response is qualitatively no different from CPH's own response to MS & Co.'s Interrogatory No. 3 (first request), which asks for the same information. To the extent that you seek more information, we note that discovery is in very early stages, and we are entitled to develop the facts that we will use against you at trial through the discovery process.

* * * * *

CPH and MAFCO's efforts to employ double standards aside, MS & Co. and MSSF responded to CPH and MAFCO's interrogatory requests in good faith, and provided the information known by MS & Co. and MSSF at the time the responses were served. MS & Co. and MSSF have honored their discovery obligations. As you have pointed out, this case is still at an early stage, and MS & Co. and MSSF's investigation is ongoing. Moreover, I note that a number of the questions in your October 16, 2003 letter are better suited to other forms of discovery and/or appear designed to circumvent the limitation upon the number of interrogatories that a party may propound.

One option for all parties is a mutually agreed-upon method for updating discovery responses once new, responsive information becomes available. Please let me know if CPH and MAFCO are amenable to such an arrangement.

Sincerely,

Kathryn R. DeBord

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Kathryn:

I received your November 13 letter concerning your clients' interrogatory answers, and I acknowledge the additional information you provided. Nevertheless, as detailed below, many of your answers, although in some instances lengthy, do not answer the specific questions we posed.

MSSF Damages. In its complaint, MSSF alleged that it suffered damages. It must have had a basis for that allegation. Nevertheless, you have not provided any information concerning the nature, much less the amount, of those damages. You cite a decision in a federal employment class action to support your refusal to provide an answer. That decision is not the norm—indeed, under the current federal rules, a computation of damages, and information bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered is required as an initial disclosure. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C). Courts overwhelmingly reject objections of prematurity and order plaintiffs to provide information concerning damages. See, e.g., Doe v. Mercy Health Corp., 1993 WL 377064 (E.D. Pa.) (compelling interrogatory answers and stating that at outset of case “plaintiff must be in a position to know what damages he has suffered, as well as what method of calculation he plans to use”); Geer v. Cox, 2003 WL 21254731 (D. Kan.) (rejecting prematurity objection and stating that “it is no answer for a plaintiff to assert that he will need discovery or to consult with an expert to determine his losses”). Again, putting aside whether you will be able to provide a more detailed answer at a later date, we demand that you provide an answer as to the information in your possession now.

Morgan Stanley Corporate Affiliates. You have limited your responses to the named Morgan Stanley parties and refuse to provide information from other Morgan Stanley entities. Your clients are in a position to know which Morgan Stanley entities may have responsive information and are under a duty to provide that information. We are not required to guess which of Morgan Stanley's corporate affiliates were involved in Sunbeam-related transactions, nor should we be put to the burden of serving subpoenas on other Morgan Stanley entities. In any event, we know that entities in addition to Morgan Stanley and MSSF were involved in the Sunbeam transaction. For instance, entities doing business under the trade name “Morgan Stanley Dean Witter” obviously had substantial involvement. We assume that the trade name would encompass activities of numerous entities, including Morgan Stanley Dean Witter International, Inc., Morgan Stanley DW, Inc., Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Wealth Management, Inc., Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Asset Capital Inc., and various of the "MSDW" companies. Please provide us information from those entities, and any entities doing business under that trade name, as well as from entities Morgan Stanley and MSSF have reason to believe possess responsive information.

Kathryn R. DeBord, Esq.

Communications Concerning Sunbeam EPS/Sales. You ask how Morgan Stanley's Answer to Interrogatory No. 3 is deficient, noting that the answer is comprised of eight paragraphs. The interrogatory asks about, inter alia, communications involving Morgan Stanley relating to Sunbeam's EPS. The answer identifies several conversations relating to Sunbeam's sales, but none relating to EPS. Is this an oversight or are we to assume that Morgan Stanley had no communications with anyone relating to Sunbeam's EPS? In addition, the answer does not indicate (a) which "member of Sunbeam's management" told Ruth Porat that sales were "soft"; (b) which "Sunbeam officials" insisted that sales expectations would be met; (c) other than Mr. Tyree, who was present at Global Financial Press; or (d) who participated in "bring-down" due diligence.

The "Truth" Concerning Synergies. My November 6 letter noted that MSSF had not explained how the alleged representations made to it were false. Your letter refers to Interrogatory No. 2 to MSSF, when in fact Interrogatory No. 3 (and not, No. 4, as I initially indicated) addresses this issue. Putting aside confusion over interrogatory numbering, MSSF has not stated what is false about the representations MSSF supposedly received. MSSF must have had some inkling as to what it believes is the truth in order for it to file its claims. Please provide that information now.

As to each of these areas, please let me know by November 25 if you intend to provide additional information, or whether the Court's assistance will be necessary.

Finally, as to your proposal to agree to supplementation of interrogatory answers, we intend to follow the requirements of the Florida rules in this regard.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

CASE NO: CA 03-5165 AI

MORGAN STANLEY'S OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN (PARENT)
HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL CONSENT TO THIRD PARTY PRODUCTION OF RESPONSIVE E-MAILS

The Court should not compel Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("Morgan Stanley") to consent to an improper and overbroad subpoena issued by Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. ("CPH") to a third party, Bloomberg Inc. ("Bloomberg"). The subpoena requests:

All documents concerning emails or electronic messages of [36]
Morgan Stanley or MSSF employees.

(Mar. 4, 2004 Subpoena Duces Tecum, Req. 1 (Ex. A.)) CPH's remarkable request for the production of every single e-mail message sent or received by thirty-six Morgan Stanley employees over a seven-year period and regardless of subject matter is overbroad, unduly burdensome, and contravenes the Florida Rules governing discovery. Morgan Stanley's refusal to consent to the production was completely justified.

1. CPH's Subpoena Fails To Comply With The Florida Rules.

Bloomberg's subpoena, on its face, would require Bloomberg to produce potentially hundreds of thousands of totally irrelevant e-mail messages, which are completely unrelated to the issues in this litigation and contain confidential information about Morgan Stanley's other clients and unrelated financial transactions. Morgan Stanley should not be required to consent to the production of totally irrelevant documents – or to undertake the enormous burden of conforming CPH's subpoena to the Florida Rules. Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.280(b)(1) limits the scope of discovery to “any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter of the pending action” Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(1) (emphasis added). CPH's subpoena to Bloomberg does not contain any subject matter limitation, and is therefore impermissibly overbroad.

CPH's subpoena requests all Bloomberg e-mail messages, regardless of subject matter, sent or received by those Morgan Stanley employees who were identified in interrogatories as having worked on the Sunbeam Transaction. The suggestion in CPH's Motion – that this “employee” limitation may also double as a subject matter limitation¹ – is false. The fact that an employee worked on the Sunbeam Transaction does not mean that every single e-mail sent or received by that employee over a seven-year period is related to Sunbeam, nor does it serve to justify the production of e-mails wholly unrelated in subject matter to Sunbeam. See, e.g., Theofel v. Farey-Jones, 359 F.3d 1066, 1071-72 (9th Cir. 2004) (noting that defendant's third-party subpoena seeking “[a]ll copies of e-mails sent or received by anyone’ at [plaintiff company], with no limitation as to time or scope” was, “on its face, . . .massively overbroad.”).

¹CPH's motion glosses over the unlimited scope of the subpoena by only referring to e-mails related to the Sunbeam Transaction. (See Mot. to Compel Morgan Stanley's Consent to 3d Party Prod. of Resp. E-mails at 1 (“Bloomberg has in its possession e-mails sent or received by various Morgan Stanley employees who worked on the Sunbeam transaction and who used Bloomberg e-mail accounts.”); id. at 3 (“E-mails...that refer to issues in this case, or which summarize or describe events concerning Sunbeam...are plainly responsive”).)

CPH’s failure to comply with the Florida Rules is fatal – and fully justifies Morgan Stanley’s refusal to consent to production pursuant to the subpoena, in accordance with its rights under the federal Electronic Communications Privacy Act. See Calderbank v. Cazares, 435 So. 2d 377, 379 (Fla. 5th DCA 1983) (“A reasonably ‘calculated’ causal connection between the information sought and the possible evidence relevant to the issues in the pending action must ‘appear’ from the nature of both or it must be demonstrated by the person seeking the discovery.”).

Despite the facially overbroad subpoena, Morgan Stanley has offered to allow the production of “those Bloomberg documents that are responsive to CPH’s outstanding document requests to Morgan Stanley,” subject only to the parties’ outstanding objections and the prior rulings of the Court. (Apr. 7, 2004 Letter from T. Clare to M. Brody at 2 (Ex. B).) That limitation is not only necessary to conform CPH’s overbroad request to the Florida Rules – but also provides the information CPH purports to seek. See Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.280(b)(1); May 9, 2003 Plf’s 1st Req. for Prod. of Docs., Reqs. 30, 35, 36 (covering such broad categories as “[a]ll documents concerning the Coleman Transaction” and “[a]ll documents concerning the Subordinated Debenture Offering”) (Ex. C).) Without such subject matter limitations, CPH’s subpoena is simply a fishing expedition, a tactic for harassment, or both.

2. Morgan Stanley Has Consented To The Production Of Bloomberg E-mails From A Relevant Time Period.

The financial transactions at issue in this litigation took place in 1998 – yet CPH’s subpoena to Bloomberg seeks all e-mails (regardless of subject matter) from January 1, 1997 through the present. CPH's failure to limit its subpoena to a relevant time period is fatal to its subpoena to Bloomberg – and fully justifies Morgan Stanley's refusal to consent.

Morgan Stanley has proposed to limit the relevant period in the Bloomberg subpoena to January 1, 1997 through January 1, 2000. The theoretical possibility finding relevant and responsive e-mails from after January 2000 is minuscule, and does not justify the enormous burden and cost of reviewing and producing e-mails from this time period, which (even at its earliest point) is more than a year-and-a-half after the financial transactions closed.

CPH's explanation for its overly expansive time period – that Morgan Stanley employees may have sent or received e-mails that “summarize or describe events concerning Sunbeam” that took place over a year-and-a-half earlier – is too remote to justify the associated burden. See Calderbank, 435 So. 2d at 379 (“The mere fact that an inquiry that appears to be irrelevant ‘might’ lead to evidence that is relevant and admissible to the issues in the pending suit is not sufficient [to permit discovery].”)

CPH's only other argument for obtaining post-2000 e-mails from Bloomberg – an agreement by Morgan Stanley to produce other categories of documents from after 2000 – is misguided. In the previous instance, the documents CPH requested were limited in subject matter, relatively few in number, and would be found in a handful of readily identifiable sources within Morgan Stanley. This stands in sharp contrast to CPH's current request, which lacks any specificity of subject matter, potentially involves hundreds of thousands of e-mails, and would impose an enormous burden on Bloomberg and Morgan Stanley to implement.

Finally, CPH seeks to compel Morgan Stanley's consent for Bloomberg to produce e-mails and electronic messages regarding Morgan Stanley employees who CPH acknowledges did not have an e-mail account with Bloomberg at any time. (See Apr. 2, 2004 Letter from M.

Brody to T. Clare (“Based on my consultation with counsel for Bloomberg, it appears that Bloomberg does not have emails or other responsive information pertaining to these individuals.”) (Ex. D.) This blind insistence on production, which CPH essentially admits will be futile, creates the unnecessary potential for inadvertent disclosure of sensitive information that is unrelated and unresponsive to CPH’s subpoena, and merely increases the burden on Bloomberg and Morgan Stanley.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, CPH’s Motion to Compel Morgan Stanley’s Consent to Third Party Production of Responsive E-Mails should be denied.

DEFINITIONS

1. "Concerning" means concerning, reflecting, relating to, referring to, describing, evidencing, or constituting.

2. "Documents" shall be given the broad meaning provided in Rule 1.350 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure and refers to any form or means, whether physical, visual, or electronic, in or by which words, numbers, or ideas are recorded or preserved, whether fixed in tangible medium or electronically stored, including any and all drafts of any final document. The word "documents" shall include, by way of example and not by way of limitation, all of the following: papers, correspondence, trade letters, envelopes, memoranda, telegrams, cables, notes, messages, reports, studies, press releases, comparisons, books, accounts, checks, audio and video recordings and transcriptions thereof, pleadings, testimony, articles, bulletins, pamphlets, brochures, magazines, questionnaires, surveys, charts, newspapers, calendars, desk calendars, pocket calendars, lists, logs, publications, notices, diagrams, instructions, diaries, minutes for meetings, corporate minutes, orders, resolutions, agendas, memorials or notes of oral communications, whether by telephone or face-to-face, contracts, agreements, drafts of or proposed contracts or agreements, memoranda of understanding, letters of intent, computer tapes, computer drives or memories, computer diskettes or disks, e-mail, CD-ROMs, or any other tangible thing on which any handwriting, typing, printing, photostatic, electronic, or other form of communication or information is recorded or reproduced, together with all notations on any of the foregoing, all originals, file copies, or other unique copies of the foregoing, and all versions or drafts thereof, whether used or not.

3. "Morgan Stanley" means Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. and any of its predecessors, successors, affiliates, subsidiaries, and present and former officers, directors, partners, employees, representatives, and agents.

4. "MSSF" means Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. and any of its predecessors, successors, affiliates, subsidiaries, and present and former officers, directors, partners, employees, representatives, and agents.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Documents shall be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or organized and labeled to correspond to the categories in this Request. Documents attached to each other should not be separated. Documents consisting of items previously produced in the Litigations with Bates numbering shall be produced in Bates number order. Documents stored in an electronic format should be produced in a readable electronic format accessible by a standard database program such as concordance.

2. All documents shall be produced in the file folder, envelope or other container in which the documents are kept or maintained by you. If, for any reason, the container cannot be produced, produce copies of all labels or other identifying marks.

3. The relevant period, unless otherwise indicated, shall be from January 1, 1997 through the date of this subpoena, and shall include all documents and information which relate in whole or in part to such period, or to events or circumstances during such period, even though dated, prepared, generated or received prior or subsequent to that period. Please supplement or correct your responses to these requests if, at any time, you become aware that your responses are incomplete or incorrect in any respect.

4. If you claim the attorney-client privilege, or any other privilege or work-product protection for all or any portion of a document, you shall provide a privilege log that describes the withheld material sufficiently to allow CPH to test the privilege or protection asserted.

5. The following rules of construction apply:

- A. The connectives "and" and "or" shall be construed either disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of the discovery requests all responses that might otherwise be outside of their scope;
- B. The term "including" shall be construed to mean "without limitation"; and
- C. The use of the singular form of any word includes the plural and vice versa.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding v. MacAndrews & Forbes et al.

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your April 2, 2004 letter regarding CPH's subpoena to Bloomberg. I will address each of the issues raised in your letter in turn:

First, we both agree that Bloomberg does not have any e-mails or other responsive information pertaining to the 17 individuals who did not have Bloomberg e-mail accounts during the time period defined by the subpoena. Morgan Stanley's consent (or refusal to consent) is therefore irrelevant.

Second, with regard to e-mails after January 1, 2000, we have explained repeatedly why it is wasteful and burdensome to require Morgan Stanley to undertake a costly review of e-mails from a time period that does not even begin until more than a year-and-a-half after the financial transactions at issue in these cases. I refer you to my March 11, 2004 letter for a detailed explanation of our position in this regard. The instances identified in your letter where Morgan Stanley has agreed to produce certain categories of documents after January 1, 2004 present a different situation. The documents in those categories are expected to be relatively few in number -- and can be obtained from a small number of sources within Morgan Stanley. Those limited categories of documents stand in sharp contrast to CPH's extremely broad subpoena to Bloomberg, which -- on its face -- asks for every e-mail (without limitation and regardless of subject matter) from more than thirty-five individuals over a seven year period. There simply is no reason to believe that CPH's "all-or-nothing" approach to the production of e-mails from after January 1, 2000 is reasonably likely to yield relevant and responsive e-mails -- or that the theoretical possibility of finding relevant and responsive e-mails from several years after the fact would justify the enormous burden and cost of reviewing and producing e-mails from this time period.

KIRKLAND & ELLIS LLP

Michael Brody, Esq.

Third, you asked about the criteria that we intend to apply during our responsiveness review. As noted above, CPH's subpoena to Bloomberg does not contain any subject-matter limitation. CPH is not entitled to e-mails that have nothing to do with the transactions and issues in this case. Accordingly, we intend to produce to CPH only those Bloomberg documents that are responsive to CPH's outstanding document requests to Morgan Stanley -- subject to Morgan Stanley's outstanding objections to those requests and the Court's prior rulings on discovery issues.

Fourth, the omission of Joshua Webber from my letter was inadvertent. Mr. Webber should have been included in the list of individuals who did not have a Bloomberg account at any time during the time period defined by the subpoena.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Clare

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.
Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., et al.

Dear Tom:

I write concerning your letter of April 1, 2004, in which you attempt to redefine the scope of the subpoena we served upon Bloomberg for the production of emails.

You have attempted to limit discovery in two ways. First, you have refused to consent to the production of any emails or information regarding 17 individuals whom you state did not have Bloomberg email accounts at any time during the relevant time period defined in the subpoena. (As you know, the relevant time period in the subpoena is from January 1, 1997 to the date of the subpoena.) Based on my consultation with counsel for Bloomberg, it appears that Bloomberg does not have emails or other responsive information pertaining to these individuals. Thus, to avoid an issue where there is none, I request that you consent to the production sought in the subpoena, and Bloomberg will produce no responsive documents as to those 17 individuals. If, notwithstanding the fact that these individuals did not themselves have Bloomberg email accounts, Bloomberg has responsive documents, your refusal to consent is unjustified.

Second, you have unilaterally imposed a date restriction and have refused to consent to the production of any emails after January 1, 2000. Your restriction has no basis, as the subpoena defines as relevant the entire time period between January 1, 1997 and the date of the subpoena. Nor is your restriction appropriate on the facts of this case. Information contained in emails after January 1, 2000 may be critically relevant. For example, emails sent in 2000 that describe Morgan Stanley's earlier work on the Sunbeam transaction would be responsive and should be produced. Your limitation also is inconsistent with Morgan Stanley's own document production in this case. Morgan Stanley has produced documents generated in or after 2000. In response to our recent motion to compel, you agreed to produce documents created after the Sunbeam bankruptcy in 2001. Thus, your refusal to consent to the production of emails after January 1, 2000 is wholly unjustified.

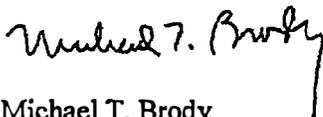

Thomas A. Clare, Esq.
April 2, 2004

By copy of this letter, I am requesting Bloomberg to produce to you all documents responsive to our subpoena. This production would include emails from or concerning individuals who themselves did not have Bloomberg email accounts, emails from or concerning individuals who did not have Bloomberg accounts until after January 1, 2000, and emails created or sent after January 1, 2000 for those individuals who had Bloomberg accounts prior to January 1, 2000, as well as the limited quantity of documents referenced in your letter. I acknowledge that Bloomberg has expressed the concern that it may not produce these documents to CPH without consent. I have requested Bloomberg to produce the documents to you. In the event that you persist in your position and refuse to produce documents to us other than as set forth in your letter of April 1, 2004, we can raise the matter before Judge Maass.

Finally, your letter presents two other issues. In discussing the limited universe of documents that you agree Bloomberg may provide, you state that Morgan Stanley's attorneys will review the documents for responsiveness and privilege. What standards does Morgan Stanley intend to apply? Certainly, all of the documents Bloomberg will provide to you are responsive to our subpoena. Also, your letter omits any mention of Joshua Webber, who is listed in the subpoena. Was this omission intentional?

Please respond to this letter on or before April 5, 2004, or the parties will be at an impasse as to this issue.

Very truly yours,

Michael T. Brody

MORGAN STANLEY'S RESPONSE AND OPPOSITION TO COLEMAN
(PARENT) HOLDINGS INC.'S MOTION TO COMPEL SUPPLEMENTATION
OF PRIVILEGE LOG AND OTHER RELIEF

Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc.'s ("CPH") motion to compel the supplementation of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated's and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc.'s ("Morgan Stanley") privilege log is without merit. As CPH is well aware, the vast majority of the privilege log entries relate to two types of documents: (1) documents created by consultants hired by Morgan Stanley counsel to assist counsel and Morgan Stanley with the preparation for and the conduct of litigation; and (2) documents from the files of Morgan Stanley in-house counsel in their capacity as legal counsel – some with handwritten notes of counsel – that bear no indication that they were circulated beyond Morgan Stanley. These documents are clearly shielded from production by the work product doctrine and/or the attorney-client privilege. CPH's motion should be denied.

1. Documents Produced By Outside Consultants At The Direction Of Counsel And In Anticipation Of Litigation Are Privileged.

CPH argues that select log entries – specifically, entries concerning documents created by consulting firms hired by Morgan Stanley’s attorneys in the bankruptcy proceedings – are not “sufficient to test the propriety of the claims of privilege” merely because recipients are not listed on Morgan Stanley’s privilege log. (Apr. 9, 2004 CPH’s Mot. to Compel Supp. of Priv. Log & Other Relief at 2.) In furtherance of their assertion, CPH relies on the Florida case TIG Insurance Corp. of America v. Johnson, which states that:

The following information shall be provided in the objection, unless divulgence of such information would cause disclosure of the allegedly privileged information: (A) For documents: (1) the type of document; (2) general subject matter of the document; (3) the date of the document; (4) such other information as is sufficient to identify the document for a subpoena duces tecum, including, where appropriate, the author of the document, the addressee of the document, and, where not apparent, the relationship of the author and addressee to each other.

799 So. 2d 339, 341 (Fla. 4th DCA 2001) (internal quotations & citation omitted; emphasis added). However, CPH is erroneous in its assertions on two fronts. First of all, in relying on the TIG opinion, CPH fails to acknowledge two key words employed by the Court: “where appropriate.” Certainly, if a document does not identify the recipient, then it is “not appropriate” to list one.

The lack of an identifiable attorney as the author or recipient on the face of the privileged document does not exempt it from the privileges accorded attorney-client or work product materials. The “relevant inquiry” is “whether these materials were prepared for litigation, not whether they were produced by or sent to an attorney.” Johnson Matthey, Inc. v. Research

Corp., No. 01 CIV 8115, 2002 WL 31235717, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 3, 2002.)¹ “The fact that the privilege log does not list an attorney as an author or recipient of any of these documents does not mean that work product [or attorney client] protection is unavailable.” Id.; see U.S. Info. Sys., Inc. v. International Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local Union 3, No. 00CIV4763RMBJCF, 2002 WL 31093619, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2002) (denying relief as to the form of the privilege log, because although “some documents are not identified by date, and for others, the author is identified simply as [the corporation],” the log “generally conforms to [local rule 26.2(a)]’s requirements,” and the company “has represented that for such documents the date or the identity of the specific individual who authored the document could not be ascertained”).

Secondly, CPH has failed to acknowledge that there are many other entries on Morgan Stanley’s privilege log which were authored by either Houlihan Lokey Howard & Zurkin or Policano & Manzo, the two consulting firms hired by Morgan Stanley. Each document being contested by CPH is either a sub- or super-set of these other documents which also have been withheld on privilege grounds, but which, because of their completeness, identify their recipients, and thus are uncontested. It is clear that the log entries at issue were not sent to different recipients outside of Morgan Stanley, but merely separated from their respective documents or cover sheets.

Morgan Stanley’s privilege log conforms to the Florida Rules. Absent evidence that the documents targeted by CPH were disseminated beyond Morgan Stanley, they should be afforded their rightful work product privilege protection.

¹ Given that both CPH and the TIG Court relied on and cited to New York caselaw as persuasive authority to assist in the development of Florida’s body of law pertaining to privilege logs, Morgan Stanley turns there as well.

2. Internal Documents From the Files Of Morgan Stanley's In-House Counsel Are Privileged.

The vast majority of the remaining log entries challenged by CPH are from the files of Morgan Stanley's in-house counsel; files that were maintained in their capacity as counsel and used to assist with the preparation and conduct of litigation. The four other entries that do not fit this description clearly indicate that they are documents exchanged between Morgan Stanley counsel and Morgan Stanley. As an initial matter, CPH has asserted that absent the specific identification of the name of a member of Morgan Stanley's in-house or retained legal counsel, a document cannot be afforded privileged status. This is patently absurd, and as such, courts refuse to adopt such positions. In Rockwell Automation, Inc. v. GGS Liquidation, Inc., the court maintained that privilege log entries which lack specific identification of the author or addressee are not per se denied the aegis of the attorney client or work product privileges. Rockwell Automation, Inc. v. GGS Liquidation, Inc., No. 00 Civ.8763, 2003 WL 22227968, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 25, 2003.) (“[I]t may not be clear which specific [corporate] lawyers and/or employees were involved, but a lawyer obviously was involved, and the communication with the client reflected in the documents is privileged.”) (internal quotations & citation omitted). To the contrary, the Rockwell Court found that the plaintiff had in fact “adequately identified the authors and addressees.” Id. All of the entries, while not specifically naming an attorney, per se, attribute authorship to MS Counsel, Legal Department, or Outside Counsel, an identification sufficient according to the Rockwell decision.

Entries numbered 274, 284, 285, 299 represent Legal Department Holders Inquiry Reports. While the privileged nature of such documents is not immediately obvious, Morgan Stanley has on multiple occasions described it to CPH: “The ‘holder’s inquiry report’ is a report which is generated by the Legal Department (specifically the Law Compliance Department), containing proprietary account information and material, and sought and arranged in such a manner as to constitute both attorney-client information and work product, and therefore protected from production.” (Oct. 22, 2003 Letter from L. Paule-Carrel to M. Brody at 4 (Ex. A).) The data contained in such reports “is sought and arranged by attorneys in such a manner as to constitute both attorney-client information and work product, and therefore protected from production. The specific searches and compilations manifested in these reports represent attorney thought and work product.” (Jan. 16, 2004 Letter from L. Paule-Carres to M. Brody at 3 (Ex. B) (emphasis in original).) Furthermore, “[t]he data contained in these reports is sought by Morgan Stanley attorneys with regard to the company’s ongoing cases. Morgan Stanley counsel use this data not for business purposes, but specifically for the purpose of aiding the company and its outside counsel in litigation preparation.” (Mar. 1, 2004 Letter from L. Paule-Carres to M. Brody at 3 (Ex. C).) Clearly they fall under the protection of the attorney client and work product privileges.

Another example can be gleaned from entries numbered 303, 305, and 307 whose descriptions reveal the source of the privilege claim. Each of these documents are subsets or duplicates, some with handwritten attorney notes, of entry 273, and reflect a document drafted and arranged by counsel. A review of entry number 303 – “‘Sunbeam Overview’ with Monroe Sonnenborn’s handwritten notes” – clarifies that the privileged nature of this document is Morgan Stanley’s attorney, Mr. Sonnenborn’s, handwritten notes. Again, this was pointed out to CPH on more than one occasion. (See Oct. 22, 2003 Letter at 4 (identifying M. Sonnenborn as a Morgan Stanley attorney) (Ex. A); Jan. 16, 2004 Letter at 3 (highlighting M. Sonnenborn’s involvement in the document relating to entry number 303) (Ex. B).) And the description or entry number 305 reads “Legal Memo entitled ‘Possible Bid for [illegible] Corp.’ – again, clearly a document protected by the attorney client and work product privileges.

Absent revealing the actual documents, which is not a viable option, there seem to be no explanations or discussions which satisfy CPH. Thus, for the foregoing reasons, Morgan Stanley requests that the Court deny CPH’s Motion to Compel Supplementation Of Privilege Log And Other Relief in its entirety. At a minimum, Morgan Stanley should be permitted – once Wachtell Lipton make these documents available – to review and make supplementation if necessary. Alternatively, Morgan Stanley requests that it be permitted to provide an in camera submission with the documents available to Morgan Stanley and a more detailed explanation of the relationships of the concerned parties before the Court rules.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Mike:

I write in response to your October 16, 2003 letter.

As an initial matter, we dispute the statements in your letter characterizing the privilege logs submitted by Morgan Stanley as inadequate. Morgan Stanley has complied with all of its obligations under the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, as well as under the agreed-upon order entered by the Court regarding privilege logs. In fact, Morgan Stanley actually surpassed the requirements of the agreed-upon order by providing privilege logs for all production installments predating the log, including those production installments that were made fewer than thirty days earlier.

As for the specific issues raised in your letter:

1. Your blanket assertion that Morgan Stanley's three privilege logs fail to "constitute the universe of documents withheld to date by Morgan Stanley" is as incorrect as it is non-specific. As noted above, Morgan Stanley has provided a privilege log for all documents produced to date. Your accusations are particularly misplaced given the multiple deficiencies of CPH's own privilege log. In a quick search of CPH's hard copy paper production, it is evident that at least 55 documents had been removed from the production on claims of privilege, yet not included on the privilege log you provided. A listing of these omissions is attached to this letter in Attachment A. Morgan Stanley awaits clarification from CPH as to the listing of documents omitted from its privilege log.
2. Your comment regarding the log notation that the Morgan Stanley/Sunbeam Privilege Log "exclud[ed] as non-responsive any Legal Department files concerning the various Sunbeam litigations and the Chapter 11 proceeding" ignores the context of the notation. That note was added to a log that was produced in a prior legal proceeding, as expressly permitted by the agreed-upon order. In responding to the current set of document requests served by CPH, Morgan Stanley reviewed all relevant documents from its Legal Department and did not exclude from its production or log such documents.

London

3. CPH suggests that certain privilege log entries appear to be lumped multiple documents. Entry number 243 has been reviewed and broken out into individual redactions (all stemming from one document). These changes are reflected in the revised Morgan Stanley privilege log provided in Attachment B. Regarding CPH's inquiry into log entry number 307, that is an entry from a prior log created for a prior case in response to prior document requests. See September 4th Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement Of Time To Prepare Privilege Log. To the extent documents were previously withheld on the basis of privilege, those documents are in the possession of third parties whom CPH have already subpoenaed. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley is unable to make any changes to this former log.
4. CPH suggests that Morgan Stanley and MSSF have failed to "provide sufficient information concerning attachments to the documents listed in its logs." Our review of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure and the September 4th Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement Of Time To Prepare Privilege Log reveals no requirements regarding the inclusion or treatment of attachments in privilege logs.
5. CPH notes that Morgan Stanley neglected to provide Bates numbers to the documents which had been redacted, thereby "mak[ing] it impossible to match redactions to their corresponding privilege log entry." Again, this criticism seems strange given the fact that in its privilege log, CPH provided improper Bates numbers to the redacted documents, i.e., it used a prior Bates numbering system different from that which was implemented in this current production (recall that the parties, in producing prior productions, were to re-number such prior productions without obscuring prior Bates numbers). Nevertheless, Morgan Stanley is attaching a revised privilege log with the identification of Bates numbers of the documents which were redacted. See, Attachment B.
6. CPH claims that Morgan Stanley's description reading "[r]edacted documents, reflecting internal client matter information," for entries numbered 71, 73-74, 76, 79, 83-85, 90-105, 108-118, 121-130, 132, and 134-137 are insufficient. Each document cited contains irrelevant and non-substantive client matter and billing information, which was redacted on privilege and relevance grounds.

KIRKLAND & ELLIS LLP

Michael Brody
October 22, 2003

7. CPH claims that various descriptions lack the requisite specificity via the use of terms such as "in-house counsel," "outside counsel," "MS counsel," "Legal Department," "expert," or "client." CPH's log contains many similar entries. Nevertheless, where additional information was available, those instances have been modified, as reflected in the attached revised version of the Morgan Stanley privilege log. See, Attachment B

Other entries identified by CPH reflect documents and draft documents which came from Morgan Stanley's Legal Department files in general. As such, it is clear that they were either a) created by a member of the Legal Department, and thus covered by the attorney-client and attorney work product privileges, or b) provided to the Legal Department for review and comment and seeking legal advice, thereby affording such documents the protective privileges.

Documents created by experts at the request of counsel, and in anticipation of litigation are further protected as work product, and therefore, will not be divulged. See infra, item number 13 for further discussion regarding experts.

Finally, CPH has listed a series of entries which stem from prior privilege logs. These logs were provided to CPH pursuant to the September 4th Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement Of Time To Prepare Privilege Log, which stated that "[t]o the extent privilege logs were created in connection with other proceedings, the parties may use those privilege logs in this action." To the extent documents were previously withheld on the basis of privilege, those documents are in the possession of third parties whom CPH have already subpoenaed. Moreover, it is clear from a review of the custodian, author, addressee, and description fields that those entries that CPH has noted are in fact privileged -- either having been drafted by an attorney, sent to an attorney for review and comment, or reflect discussions between and advice of attorneys. No further description is necessary for those entries.

Included with this letter as Attachment C is a chart delineating Morgan Stanley's responses to each specific entry that CPH questioned in this section.

8. CPH requests further information as to the persons affiliated with "Bank Group SSD Credit." In fact, Bank Group, SSD and Credit are three separate internal Morgan Stanley divisions. Each is comprised of certain Morgan Stanley personnel, for instance, Bram Smith, Michael Hart, and Simon Rankin, among others, are/were affiliated with the Bank Group (Investment Banking Division); Mitch Petrick and Ted Doster, among others, are/were affiliated with the SSD,

KIRKLAND & ELLIS LLP

“Special Situations” Debt (note that it is possible that that was a typo meant to be SSG, meaning “Special Situations Group,”) at Morgan Stanley Senior Funding; and Richard Felix, Leslie Bradford, and Morgan Edwards, among others, are/were affiliated with the Credit Group.

9. CPH requests titles and affiliations for certain persons. They are as follows: Kenneth S. Zimman, Member, Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, LLP; James C. Buresh, Member, Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, LLP; Michael S. Zuckert, former attorney in Morgan Stanley’s Law Department; Matt Edmonds, former Executive Director of Banking for Morgan Stanley; Christine Edwards, former Morgan Stanley General Counsel; Helen Meates, Morgan Stanley Executive Director in Investment Banking; Denis Villon, Morgan Stanley Senior Manager for Finance & Business Unit Controller; Robert F. Wise, Jr., Partner, Davis, Polk & Wardwell; Allen Dean, Partner, Davis, Polk & Wardwell; Jeffrey Small, Partner, Davis, Polk & Wardwell; and Monroe Sonnenborn, former head of Morgan Stanley’s Litigation Department.
10. CPH seeks clarification of Privilege Log entries 145, 177, and 215. As to entry number 145, this document came from an archived file for which we are still trying to obtain more specific information so as to respond to your request. Upon review of entry number 177, it appears as if the description is in fact erroneous, and should read “[f]axed memorandum from outside counsel to client and experts regarding proposed term sheet materials and information and forwarding such marked up materials.” Finally, regarding entry number 215, it appears as if the description section contains a typographical error, and should read “[m]emo from client to outside counsel providing information and seeking legal advice regarding credit agreement.” Such changes are reflected in Morgan Stanley’s revised privilege log at Attachment B.
11. CPH requests clarification regarding the identification of the “holder’s inquiry report,” described in entry 284. The “holder’s inquiry report” is a report which is generated by the Legal Department (specifically the Law Compliance Department), containing proprietary account information and material, and sought and arranged in such a manner as to constitute both attorney-client information and work product, and therefore protected from production.
12. CPH seeks clarification as to the basis of Morgan Stanley’s assertion of the work product privilege with regard to certain communications with Sunbeam Corp. As to entry number 201, this was as draft letter created at the request of counsel, in preparation for litigation, which was to be sent to Sunbeam in its final form. Clearly the draft was not communicated with Sunbeam, and as such, remains

KIRKLAND & ELLIS LLP

Michael Brody
October 22, 2003

covered by the work product privilege. The recipient section of entry 201 has been modified to reflect this. Regarding entry number 221, the memo reflecting the author and recipients listed do not correspond to actual description of the document. The memorandum and its attachment are clearly not privileged, and Morgan Stanley is therefore removing it from its Privilege Log. This document will be a part of Morgan Stanley's next production. However, the document to which it was inadvertently attached, and which corresponds to the description, is in fact privileged, and will remain as revised entry number 221. Regarding CPH's inquiry into log entry number 283, that is an entry from a prior log created for a prior case in response to prior document requests. To the extent documents were previously withheld on the basis of privilege, those documents are in the possession of third parties whom CPH have already subpoenaed. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley is unable to make any changes to this former log.

13. CPH seeks information regarding the nature of Houlihan Lokey Howard & Zurkin Financial Advisors, Inc.'s and Policano & Manzo's representation of Morgan Stanley. Specifically, CPH seeks the dates on which such representation began, the entities which retained the companies, the purpose of the retention and the litigation (of any) for which they were retained. Houlihan Lokey and Policano & Manzo were hired by Simpson Thatcher & Bartlett in order to assist it in the representation of First Union Bank, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. and Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association (the "Senior Lenders") in association with and in anticipation of the Sunbeam Bankruptcy proceeding. As such they are protected by the attorney work product privilege. Requests for any further information or documentation sought by CPH should be directed to Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett.

As you note in your October 16, 2003 letter, Morgan Stanley has produced three privilege logs -- one from the recent document production made in association with the current cases, and two relating to prior productions made in prior litigations. These other privilege logs were produced in accordance with the September 4th Agreed Order Regarding Enlargement Of Time To Prepare Privilege Log, which stated that "[t]o the extent privilege logs were created in connection with other proceedings, the parties may use those privilege logs in this action, supplementing those logs as necessary to identify each individual document withheld on the basis of privilege." Contrarily, CPH filed only one privilege log. Please confirm that CPH in fact reviewed all of its documents, hard copy and electronic, whether produced in past litigations or only in the instant one, and included them on this single privilege log (essentially re-creating prior privilege logs specifically for this case). In the event that such prior privilege logs were not incorporated into the current log received on October 6, 2003, please remit such privilege logs immediately.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Mike:

I am writing in response to the issues and questions pertaining to Morgan Stanley's privilege logs raised by your November 25, 2003 letter.

First, in paragraph number 3, you request clarification as to the origin of certain entries on Morgan Stanley's revised privilege log -- specifically numbers 243.1-243.15. These entries replace that which was previously numbered 243.

In response to CPH's request for additional identifying information regarding the listed persons, Morgan Stanley provides the following information: Florence Davis is a former attorney in the Law Division at Morgan Stanley, Ivan Freeman is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities Equity Division, John Crompton is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities Equity Division, Richard Rosenthal is an attorney in the Morgan Stanley Law Department; Dennis Jonelit is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities Equity Division, Peter Vogelsang is an attorney in the Morgan Stanley Law Department; Rose-Anne Richter is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Law Division, Paul Loomis is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Law Division, Deborah DeCotis is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Strategy & Administration Division, Patrick de Saint-Aignon is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Finance Division, David Farrand (note that this was misspelled on the privilege log entry 243.09 as "Ferrand") is a former Managing Director in Morgan Stanley's Fixed Income Division, Mario Francescotti is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities Management Division, Clinton Gartin is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Investment Banking Division, Craig Goldberg is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets - Joint Venture Division, Kenneth Janney is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Fixed Income Division, William Kneisel is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets - Joint Venture Division; Robert Matschullat is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Investment Banking Division; W. Carter McClelland is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's

Law Division; Mark Seigel is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets-Joint Venture Division; Robert Scott is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities Management Division; Kenneth Wolfe is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets-Joint Venture Division; Richard Castellano is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Institutional Securities-Equity Division; Michael Janson is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets-Joint Venture Division; Candice Koederitz is an employee of Morgan Stanley's Investment Banking Division; Kimball Mayer is a former employee of Morgan Stanley's Global Capital Markets-Joint Venture Division.

You also seek further review and consideration of Morgan Stanley's privilege assertion with regard to entry number 243.13. Upon review, further discussion of this documents is unwarranted, as it is dated May 4, 1990, which pre-dates the time frame contained in CPH's document requests. Morgan Stanley will remove this document from its privilege log, but will not be producing it, given its non-responsiveness.

Second, in paragraph 5 of your letter, you seek additional information regarding certain entries on Morgan Stanley's privilege log. You state that entries 138 and 141 are inadequate in that, among other things, they do not identify a recipient. Based on the information in the slide, it is impossible to ascertain by whom this slide was received, if anyone at all. It is not inconceivable that the slide was never distributed, but was merely used for a presentation. It appears as if this is a presentation slide taken out of context -- removed from the remainder of the presentation or report, and as such it is difficult to respond to your questions. However, what is clear is that it contains information specifically referencing the legal advice and comments (relating to the Sunbeam transaction) of Peter Levin, an attorney at Davis, Polk & Wardwell representing Morgan Stanley. As such, this document is privileged and will not be produced.

You assert that entries 139, 140, 142 and 143 are inadequate in that they do not identify a recipient. In each instance, Morgan Stanley has identified that the document was created by attorneys at Morgan Stanley -- Soo-Mi Lee and Michael Zuckert -- and provided to the client. In this instance, the "client" is Morgan Stanley. The documents in question do not indicate a specific person to whom they were provided (perhaps it was to the Morgan Stanley Sunbeam file), but each document does reflect that it is a "Privileged And Confidential Communication Of Counsel." Similarly, none of these documents suggest that they were provided to anyone outside of Morgan Stanley. As such, these documents are privileged and will not be produced.

Third, in paragraph number 6, citing to paragraph 7 of Morgan Stanley's October 23rd letter, you dispute Morgan Stanley's position that documents originating from Morgan Stanley's Legal Department are privileged. In its revised privilege log provided to CPH on October 23rd, Morgan Stanley provided additional specific information for entries 138-143, 160-162, 167, 196, 198, 199, 208, 212 and 243.

Regarding CPH's further inquiry into various of Morgan Stanley's entries between numbers 266 and 307, we reiterate that those entries are contained in prior Morgan Stanley privilege logs and that the documents underlying those entries are not in Morgan Stanley's possession or otherwise available for review. That being said, an inspection of the entries enumerated by CPH reveals certain information which should remove any doubt as to Morgan Stanley's assertion of privilege:

Numbers 278, 303 and 305 specifically identify the following attorneys' involvement respectively: Michael Zuckert's, Monroe Sonnenborn's, and Bruce Fiodorek's. Numbers 266, 274, 281, 282, 284, 285, 294, 296-300, 304 and 307 came from the Legal Department or MS Counsel. It continues to be Morgan Stanley's position that documents created generally by the companies legal department, or located in its files were either created or sent to it for the purpose of the provision of legal advice, and as such are privileged. Further, many of these aforementioned entries (274, 285, 294, 299 and 307) which were located in an attorney's files, have handwritten notes on them which in and of themselves would be privileged, given the presumption that the handwritten notes are those of the custodian. And finally, several of the aforementioned entries (284, 285, 294 and 299) are referring to "Holder's Inquiry Reports" which, as discussed in the October 23rd letter and again below, are covered by the attorney client and work product privileges.

Fourth, in paragraph number 7 you seek the job affiliations of Joel Hoffman and David Chapnick. Mr. Hoffman is retired from and Mr. Chapnick is of counsel at Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, LLP.

Fifth, in paragraph number 8, you seek further information regarding entry number 145. It appears as if that particular entry was incorrect. While it was supposed to represent a binder which was created by Morgan Stanley in house and outside attorneys, the entry as written did not reflect that. This has been corrected in the revised privilege log, which is included as Attachment A.

Sixth, in paragraph number 9, you again seek information regarding the Holder's Inquiry Report. While you question the privileged nature of reports containing "proprietary account information and material," claiming that to be merely confidential and covered by the Protective Order, you fail to acknowledge the fact that the data is sought and arranged by attorneys in such a manner as to constitute both attorney-client information and work product, and therefore protected from production. The specific searches and compilations manifested in these reports represent attorney thought and work product. These documents will not be produced, as they clearly fall within the parameters of attorney client and work product privileges.

Seventh, in paragraph number 10 you enumerate various issues pertaining to the Bates numbering of Morgan Stanley's redactions. I address your concerns seriatim in the chart

Michael Brody
January 16, 2004

included as Attachment B. Additionally, Morgan Stanley has modified its Revised Privilege Log to reflect these changes. Regarding your inquiry into entry number 220, in paragraph 10(c), entry number 220 is one document, which happens to contain multiple redactions. Each redaction is explained by the same privilege description, i.e., that it is a letter from an expert to the client regarding invoices made in preparation for litigation. Given the fact that all of the redactions pertain to the same subject matter, and the fact that they all stemmed from the same single document, it is our position that such redactions were appropriately represented on Morgan Stanley's privilege log.

Eighth, in paragraph number 11, you seek additional information regarding various privilege log entries. Each is addressed below:

- Entries numbered 157, 170-182, 184-189 state in their privilege descriptions that they pertain to an "analysis of Sunbeam." In fact only entries numbered 157, 179-182, 184-189 (i.e., not 170-178) contain such language. Through inspection of those listed entries, it is clear that they represent documents created at the request of counsel, which pertain to Sunbeam's financials, liquidity and various litigations and settlements, and as such are privileged. Further explanation is unnecessary.
- Entries numbered 146, 148-50, 153, 191, 193-94, 201-02, 209-12, 214, 221-22 state in their privilege descriptions that they pertain to a settlement. These documents were all created by or at the request of counsel with regard to the loans issued by the bank group, which included Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, and the courses of action that MSSF had available to it having learned of Sunbeam's accounting issues and financial condition.
- Entry number 81 refers to the redacted faxed memoranda from Morgan Stanley's outside counsel to its in house attorney. The entry mentions a "tolling agreement" which refers to Morgan Stanley's tolling of potential claims which could be asserted in prior litigations relating to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction.
- Entries numbers 219 and 224 refer to "recently executed documents," such as the Credit Agreements, which related to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction.
- Entry number 226 is self-explanatory in that it is a redacted letter "from outside counsel to client [Morgan Stanley] providing legal advice regarding credit agreement," as related to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction.
- The document captured by entry number 169 was written at the request of counsel to the Bank Group -- the entities, including Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, which were responsible for loaning moneys to Sunbeam with regard to the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction.

Re: Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co.

Dear Mike:

I am writing in response to the issues and questions pertaining to Morgan Stanley's privilege logs raised by your February 6, 2004 letter.

First, in response to your request for information regarding the recipients of the redacted documents logged in entries 243.05, 243.10, 243.11 and 243.12 -- these documents were intended to be included in the discussion of entry number 243.13 contained in Morgan Stanley's January 16, 2004 letter to you. Review of these documents also reveals that further discussion or analysis is unwarranted, as they are dated July 1993, March 18, 1993, April 1990, and February 1992 respectively. Each of these documents pre-dates the time frame contained in CPH's document requests, therefore Morgan Stanley will remove the documents from its privilege log, but will not be producing them, given their non-responsiveness.

Furthermore, your February 6th letter misconstrued a comment made in my October 22nd letter -- in writing that all of the entries "stemmed from one document," I meant that 243-243.15 were all initially lumped into entry number 243. The various documents reflected in those log entries were not comprised in one single document (thus our willingness to break them out in the privilege log), and therefore, the removal from the log of those which documents which are date-non-responsive is appropriate. Additionally, as to your inquiry into entry 243, as distinguished from 243.01-243.15: entry number 243 remains on the log as it did in Morgan Stanley's initial privilege log, and entries 243.1-243.15 comprise the universe of documents that were originally contained in entry number 243. Those documents were in fact all one entry initially, but have been subsequently parsed out. For ease of understanding, Morgan Stanley will remove entry number 243 from its log.

Second, you accuse Morgan Stanley of failure "to provide basis for an assertion of privilege" for a series of entries which state in the privilege description "redacted documents,

Chicago

London

Los Angeles

New York

San Francisco

16div-005039

Michael Brody

reflecting internal client matter information." I have repeatedly assured you that these documents contain "non-substantive client matter and billing information" -- there is nothing tricky or subversive here -- the redacted material is simply attorney billing matter numbers which are exempt from production as work product data. However, during the February 19th hearing, Mr. Scarola commented on the inappropriateness of documents redacted as non-responsive. Morgan Stanley immediately sent a letter regarding seeking an unredacted production of CPH's documents which were previously redacted as "irrelevant" or "nonresponsive," yet have not received CPH's response to date. Provided that you are willing to "unredact" those documents, Morgan Stanley will agree to produce unredacted versions of the documents logged as entries numbered 71, 73-74, 76, 79, 83-85, 90-105, 108-118, 121-130, 132, and 134-137.

Third, Morgan Stanley will re-review its privilege log and reassess any attachments that may have been logged with its parent document. A revised log reflecting the results of this analysis of any attachments will follow shortly under separate cover.

Fourth, you again seek information regarding the documents covered by Morgan Stanley's two prior privilege logs. And again, I respond that Kirkland & Ellis does not have any of the documents underlying those privilege logs. Other law firms have been involved in the representation of Morgan Stanley since the inception of the related litigations, and it is those firms which created the logs and possess the relevant documents. I never suggested the possibility that such documents have been destroyed. I simply do not have the documents to review or produce (were a production necessary). I suggested several months ago that you seek further information from other firms which represented Morgan Stanley; I renew that suggestion now.

Fifth, you assert that documents logged as entries 138-143 should be produced simply because they do not reveal the identity of recipients, and because the legend of "privileged & confidential" is simply insufficient to sustain the attorney-client and/or attorney work product privilege. We disagree. As I mentioned in prior communications, it is clear that the documents contain information and legal advice stemming from Morgan Stanley counsel. There is no indication that such information was disseminated beyond the client/company, and therefore such materials are privileged, and will not be produced.

Sixth, in response to your inquiry regarding documents authored by Houlihan Lokey Howard & Zurkin, or Policano & Manzo, Morgan Stanley again states that these were consultants hired by Morgan Stanley's counsel, Simpson Thatcher & Bartlett, for the purpose of aiding counsel with issues relevant to anticipated litigation. As such, these documents are in fact protected by the work product privilege. While most of the documents do not specifically identify their recipients, it is clear that both consultants were operating pursuant to instructions from Morgan Stanley's counsel, and that both consultants were providing their work product to Morgan Stanley's counsel.

Michael Brody
March 1, 2004

Seventh, as I explained above, Kirkland and Ellis LLP does not have access to the documents underlying the privilege logs which contain the entries recorded as numbers 266, 274, 281-82, 284-85, 296-300, 304, and 307, and are therefore unable to provide any additional insight into these documents. Again, I suggested that you seek further information from the other firms which represented Morgan Stanley. However, Morgan Stanley once again asserts that documents numbered 266, 274, 281, 282, 284, 285, 294, 296-300, 304 and 307 came from the Legal Department or MS Counsel, and therefore were either created or sent to it for the purpose of the provision of legal advice, and as such are privileged. Additionally, as mentioned in our January 16th letter, many of these aforementioned entries (274, 285, 294, 299 and 307) which were located in an attorney's files contain handwritten notes on them which in and of themselves would be privileged, or reference "Holder's Inquiry Reports" which, as discussed below, are covered by the attorney client and work product privileges (see entries 284, 285, 294 and 299).

Eighth, in response to your inquiry as to the authors and recipients of the binder of draft offering memoranda and bank documents, Morgan Stanley has decided to produce to CPH a redacted version of the binder. The newly redacted documents will appear on the forthcoming privilege log as entries 145.01, et seq.

Ninth, you again seek information regarding the Holder's Inquiry Report. The data contained in these reports is sought by Morgan Stanley attorneys with regard to the company's ongoing cases. Morgan Stanley counsel use this data not for business purposes, but specifically for the purpose of aiding the company and its outside counsel in litigation preparation. As stated in prior communications, the information is sought and arranged by attorneys in such a manner as to constitute both attorney-client information and work product, and therefore protected from production. These documents will not be produced.

Tenth, Morgan Stanley will modify its log to reflect a more specific subject matter of the identified documents logged as entries 219 and 224.

Eleventh, you assert that Morgan Stanley has waived its right to assert the "common interest" privilege with regard to all documents shared among the bank group. As an initial matter, there is no "common interest privilege." There is, however, an attorney-work-product privilege, which was legitimately asserted by Morgan Stanley with regard to the subject documents. A review of past correspondence reveals that upon CPH's inquiry into the assertion of that privilege, Morgan Stanley explained that it had withheld such documents on the basis that they were created by or at the request of the counsel to the entity known as the Bank Group -- an entity comprised of First Union, Bank of America, and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding. The "common interest" principle does not in and of itself serve to protect the documents from production -- it merely allows for the various parties with the common interest to each make the attorney-work-product assertion. This is exactly what Morgan Stanley has done. I believed that this was made clear in response to your prior inquiries; however, Morgan Stanley will modify its log by adding the "common interest principle" to relevant entries in order to delineate those attorney-work-product claims that are subject to the principle.

Michael Brody

As I mentioned above, Morgan Stanley will endeavor to re-review any documents which may be deemed attachments in an effort to either log the document separately, or enhance the current privilege description to reflect information regarding the attachment. This document will be provided to CPH under separate cover.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Larissa Paule-Carres", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

1 BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing
2 proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH
3 MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, Courtroom
4 11A, West Palm Beach, Florida, on April 22, 2004,
5 starting at 8:51 a.m., with appearances as hereinabove
6 noted, to wit:

7 - - - -

8 THE COURT: Hi. This is Judge Maass. Who do
9 I have on the phone?

10 MR. CLARE: Good morning, Your Honor. It's 11 Tom Clare from the law firm of Kirkland and Ellis
12 in Washington, D.C. on behalf of Morgan Stanley.

13 THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Clare, I have you on 14 speakerphone in the courtroom in Coleman vs.
15 Morgan Stanley. This is defendant's motion for 16 protective order regarding confidential personnel
17 evaluations.

18 MR. CLARE: That's correct.

19 THE COURT: You-all might want to pull those 20 podiums forward just a little bit more.

21 Did you-all work out anything or not?

22 MR. CLARE: Your Honor, we haven't made much
23 progress. On Monday morning I wrote a letter to 24 counsel for Coleman (Parent) and said that we were 25 interested in exploring the proposal that

00004

1 Mr. Scarola had made last Friday during the case
2 management conference but wanted some additional
3 information about how it would work in the real
4 world, the nuts and bolts of it, and did not get a
5 response until last night when I heard back that 6 they would not be submitting a proposed order at 7 this morning's hearing.

8 So I'm afraid that I still don't know what 9 their position is and whether they're still 10 planning to live with the proposal that they 11 proposed last Friday afternoon.

16div-005058

12 THE COURT: Is there a proposal on the table
13 or not?

14 MR. SCAROLA: There isn't, Your Honor, and I
15 would like to explain why.

16 Let me first of all --

17 THE COURT: Well, we don't have to know why.

18 MR. SCAROLA: Okay.

19 THE COURT: The question is, do we think
20 there will be a proposal, or do we need to argue
21 again the merits of the motion?

22 MR. SCAROLA: We need to address the merits
23 of the motion.

24 THE COURT: All right. What did you want to 25 say in support of the motion?

00005

1 MR. CLARE: Well, Your Honor, we went through
2 last Friday my concerns and our client's
3 substantial concern about the damage to the 4 evaluation process that would be incurred if 5 employees were shown documents in their 6 depositions that they had never seen before in the 7 course of their evaluations. We talked about the 8 360 degree review process that Morgan Stanley uses
9 and how the anonymity and confidentiality of the 10 people doing the evaluations is critical to 11 maintaining the integrity of the process and also 12 to prevent undue embarrassment and harassment and 13 invasion of privacy of these witnesses.

14 We do not believe there is any legitimate
15 discovery purpose that can be obtained by showing
16 these documents to these witnesses --

17 THE COURT: Let me ask --

18 MR. CLARE: -- when in fact they have never 19 seen the documents before, they did not write
20 them, they have not even heard these comments
21 before, but at a minimum, there can be no
22 discovery purpose in disclosing the identities of 23 the anonymous reviewers who provided that
24 information.

25 We have never stated and do not contend that

00006

1 they cannot question these witnesses about the
2 information that is contained in these raw
3 evaluation materials and we are not asking the 4 Court to limit in any way the scope of questioning
5 at the depositions. Our concern is really the 6 vehicle with which they choose to do it and the 7 harm that would accrue if they show these 8 documents to witnesses where they would not have 9 seen the documents before.

10 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Is the 11 concern really just showing the physical document
12 to the deponent?

13 MR. CLARE: Yes, it is.

16div-005059

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. CLARE: In a form that is not redacted to 16 redact the identity of the reviewer. And on these 17 forms, there are dozens and dozens and dozens of 18 entries that have absolutely nothing to do with 19 Sunbeam, and so at a minimum, the non-Sunbeam
20 entries ought to be redacted, and even for the 21 Sunbeam entries, the identities of the authors
22 ought to be redacted to prevent this harm.
23 There's been no identification of a legitimate
24 discovery purpose that could be served from not
25 doing that, at a minimum.

00007

1 THE COURT: What's the response?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, let me present the
3 Court with a hypothetical which I think will 4 illustrate the concerns that we have.

5 Let's assume that an individual employee who
6 worked on the Sunbeam transaction is expressly
7 criticized either by someone beneath him, a
8 lateral employee, or someone above him for having 9 done a bad job in the due diligence that Morgan
10 Stanley was obliged to do in connection with this 11 transaction or having done a bad job in 12 communicating appropriate information or gathering
13 appropriate information regarding this
14 transaction. Clearly, that kind of information
15 within the internal documents of Morgan Stanley,
16 who is accused of having intentionally or 17 negligently failed to appropriately gather and 18 communicate information to us in this transaction,
19 would be highly probative.

20 I understand the concerns that Morgan Stanley
21 has about preserving the integrity of their
22 internal evaluative process. It's a legitimate
23 business concern, but it is not a legitimate
24 business concern that is recognized by a legal 25 privilege, nor is it a legitimate business concern

00008

1 that overrides the concern that we have.

2 THE COURT: But this is what I'm trying to
3 figure out. Why would you have to show the 4 deponent the document as opposed to simply asking
5 the deponent isn't it true that your supervisor
6 criticized you for the quality of your work on 7 this job?

8 MR. SCAROLA: Well, clearly, clearly, there
9 is a value in front of the jury in being able to 10 substantiate the fact that the question that we 11 are asking has a factual basis and that indeed the 12 criticism was made. And when I initially made the 13 proposal before Your Honor, I was focussing in 14 terms of the discovery process and not
15 anticipating what's going to happen at trial.

16div-005060

16 Clearly, at trial, it is going to be both
17 appropriate and necessary to disclose the 18 documents themselves to demonstrate that those 19 criticisms were indeed made.

20 And so that Your Honor knows that we're not
21 talking about this in a vacuum and hypothetically,
22 I want to hand you a copy of an example.

23 THE COURT: Right. I remember seeing them,
24 but I still am trying to -- First of all, are 25 these discovery depositions? We're not talking

00009

1 about trial testimony, correct?

2 MR. SCAROLA: Well, Your Honor, we are
3 talking about trial testimony, because we are
4 talking about videotape depositions being taken
5 for purposes of presentation at trial of witnesses
6 who are out of state and whose attendance cannot 7 be compelled.

8 THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

9 Even if we were in trial, if they have never 10 seen this item before, why would we be showing it
11 to the witness?

12 MR. CLARE: And --

13 THE COURT: I don't understand how we get 14 there.

15 MR. CLARE: I don't mean to interrupt --

16 THE COURT: Yes, you do.

17 MR. CLARE: -- but the purpose for which 18 Mr. Scarola has identified wanting to use the 19 documents at trial, these documents, and the point
20 that he's trying to make that they exist and that 21 these points were written can be proven
22 independently.

23 THE COURT: Sure. I understand that. That's 24 why I'm wondering how -- At trial, if the 25 witnesses testify that they've never seen these

00010

1 documents, why would we be showing them at trial
2 to the witnesses?

3 MR. SCAROLA: Well, my point is not that
4 they're going to be shown to the witness at trial.
5 My point is that if the concern on the part of 6 Morgan Stanley which justifies a restriction on 7 the use of the documents is that we don't want
8 these criticisms to be made public because it's 9 going to impair our evaluative process if the 10 criticisms are made public, they eventually are 11 going to be made public in any circumstance.

12 THE COURT: Sure. But isn't it much less
13 likely that the individual employee who was 14 criticized is going to marry up what the criticism
15 was or who it came from if it comes out in trial
16 1,500 miles from where the employee is than if 17 they're sitting in a deposition and you're giving

16div-005061

18 them a copy of the evaluation?
19 MR. SCAROLA: It's my understanding that 20 Morgan Stanley's concern is not with regard to 21 this individual, but rather to preserve the 22 integrity of the system that they have of 23 360 degree evaluation, because in fact, most of 24 these individuals, more than half of them, are no
25 longer employed by Morgan Stanley.

00011

1 THE COURT: I have to cut you off, because
2 we're about out of time.

3 What's the response, and what is your
4 concern; is it for the individual employees or 5 simply the integrity of the process as a whole?

6 MR. CLARE: It is absolutely for the concern
7 of the individuals, that they will be confronted
8 with comments that they have never seen before in 9 a litigation environment by their coworkers, their 10 colleagues, their superiors, even their former 11 coworkers. So we're concerned about both.

12 And I just want to respond briefly to one
13 point Mr. Scarola made.

14 Our concern is not that this information
15 never be made public in a trial setting. We have
